20. For as all the promiſes of God propoſed by him are undoubtedly true, ſo accordingly in this particular, he gave us power to confirm by miracles, what we taught from him, and this I hope hath and will tend to the glory of God, by our miniſtrey.

21. Now he which ſtabliſheth us with you * in Chriſt, and hath anointed us, is God.]

21. Now he that confirms both you & us in the truth acknowledged by us, and which hath given us ſuch teſtimony for the proof and confirmation of the Goſpel (ſee note on Act. 10. b.) is God.

22. Who hath as it were ſet his ſeal, or ſignature upon us, marked and ſecured us, ſealed us up for his own, and already given an aſſurance of his future dealing with us, by giving us his Spirit, a pledge of the full promiſe which ſhall after be performed (ſee note on Epheſ. 4. b.)

23. * Moreover I call God for a record upon my ſoul, that to ſpare you I came not as yet unto Corinth.]

* But δὲ

23. As for that of my not performing my firſt reſolution of coming to you in my way to Macedonia v.17. and according to my promiſe 1 Cor. 16. 5. I ſhall tell you the clear reaſon of it, I had heard of ſuch enormities among you, that if I had then come, I muſt have been forced to uſe a great deal of ſeverity among you, in caſe my former Epiſtle were not obeyed, of which I had not particular knowledge till I met with Titus, c.2.13. which was at my coming to Macedonia, And that was then the only reaſon of my forbearing, that I might not be forced to exerciſe that Apoſtolical ſharpneſſe againſt you, (as for the other, the reaſon of the change of his reſolution is plain, Act. 20.3)

24. Not * for that we have dominion over your faith, but are helpers of your joy; for by faith ye † ſtand.]

† that we exerciſe dominion. ἵνα κυριεύσωμεν * have ſtood ἑστήκατε

24. That ſeverity of diſcipline I mean, that muſt not be looke on as an act of dominion, of deſigning any advantage to our ſelves by you (ſee Mat. 20.25. & note on 1 Pet. 5.2.) but that which Chriſt hath commanded, and preſcribed us, by that means to reform and amend, to work faith, and hope, and rejoicing, and all good things in you. For by faith, i. e. the doctrine of Chriſt, it is that you were firſt brought in to the ſervice of the true God, and wherein you continue ever ſince, and we deſire you ſhould doe ſo ſtill, not relying on any doctrine of ours, as it differs from that.

Notes on Chap. I:

a. Πρόσωπον

The Greek πρόσωπον is ordinarily parallel and proportionable to the Hebrew פָּנִים facies, which coming from פָּנָה reſpexit, ſignifies oftentimes reſpectus, and ſo לִפְנֵי de facie, ſignifies [for] or [in reſpect of] and agreeably thereto, [ἐκ προσώπων πολλῶν, of, or from many faces] here ſignifies in reſpect of many, in relation to many, for the ſakes of many, or in any of thoſe formes of ſpeech, by which לִפְנֵי would be rendred.

b. Ναὶ ναί

The meaning of yea, and nay, or of yea, yea, and nay, nay, is diſtinctly this, when we doe not agree, or are inconſtant to our ſelves, Now, yea, and anon nay, in our words, or actions, Whence is that old word nancus for a light, or frivolous perſon, from ναὶ ἰχί, as 'tis deduced by Feſtus; The difference of this from the ἤτω ὑμῶν τὸ ναὶ ναί, καὶ τὸ οὒ, οὔ, Jam. 5.12. is cleared by the conſtruction, Let your yea be yea, and your nay be nay, i. e. let your words and actions accord, ſo that the ſecond yea, and the ſecond nay, is not joyned with the firſt, as here, but as the predicate affirmed of it, whereas here the two yeas being all one (and ſo indeed expreſt by a ſingle yea v.18.) are the ſubject of the ſpeech, and the two nayes, being all one again, the predicate; [1 12.p.1173.]

To

To this agrees that proverb of the Jewes, The juſt mans yea is yea, and his nay, nay. A third expreſſion there is, that of *Mat.*5. which is in ſound very near this, and yet diſtant from it, Let your communication be yea yea, and nay nay, i. e. let there be no other language but this, or the like, uſed by you, in oppoſition to the more licentious forms of oaths there mentioned.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. II.

1. And now that in ſtead of coming I write again, I was reſolved to deferre it ſo long, till I ſhould hear of ſome reformation among you, that ſo this might not be, as formerly my letters were, to puniſh, to afflict, to cenſure you, ſee note on 1 Cor. 5. c.

1. BUT I determined this with my ſelf, that I would not come again to you in heavineſſe.]

2. For when you are checkt or cenſured by me, this is ſo farre from being pleaſant to me, that it is indeed at the ſame time matter of ſuch grief, that I cannot be comforted by any thing, but by the ſame you, by ſeeing that the Cenſures have wrought ſome good on you, cauſed the reformation of that in you, for which I had meant them to you.

2. For if I make you ſorry, who is it then that maketh me glad, but he that is made ſorry by me?]

3. And this ſeverity of proceeding v.1. which now I ſpeak of I did rather chooſe to ſend you in a letter, 1 Cor. 5. then to deferre it till my coming, in hope to find your faults amended, to have all the ſorrowfull matter, that of cenſure, paſt, before that time, that ſo I might have nothing to doe then, but to abſolve, and receive penitents, and ſo to rejoice among you, (not to inflict cenſures upon you) and that I was confident would alſo be moſt acceptable to you all.

3. And * I wrote this ſame unto you, leſt when I came, I ſhould have ſorrow from them of whom I ought to rejoice, having confidence in you all, that my joy is the joy of you all.]

* this very thing did I write, ἐγραψα τοῦτο αὐτὸ

4. For that which I wrote with ſome ſharpneſſe & was matter of grief to you, was ſo much more to me at the very writing of it, was a moſt heavy preſſure upon my heart, and fetcht abundance of teares from me, by which you may know that what I did was not out of any pleaſure that I take to cenſure or afflict you, but as an effect of the greateſt love to you all, which could be imagin'd.

4. For out of much affliction and anguiſh of heart I wrote unto you with many teares, not that ye ſhould be † grieved, but that ye might know the love which I have more abundantly unto you.]

5. But for this grief which hath been cauſed to me from you, that that may not be matter of new trouble to you, I muſt profeſſe, it hath not been cauſed by all, but only by ſome one, or more particular perſons among you, (ſee note on 1 Cor. 5. c.) which I profeſſe that the whole Church may not be afflicted, as if they had all grieved me, or incurred this cenſure.

5. But if any have cauſed grief, he hath not grieved me, but in part; that I may not * overcharge you all.]

*lay weight upon, βαρῶ

6. And for thoſe particular perſons that thus fell under the cenſures, it is now ſufficient, which they have ſuffered, by their delivering up to Satan, 1 Cor. 5. and the conſequents thereof.

6. Sufficient to ſuch a man, is this [a] puniſhment, which was † inflicted of many.]

† before the many

7. And it is now more then time, that he or they be abſolv'd by the Church, and forgiven the offence committed againſt it, and by abſolution be cheer'd up again, leſt the continuance of ſuch ſharp puniſhments ſhould not have a benigne, but noxious influence upon them.

7. So that contrariwiſe, ye ought rather to forgive him, and comfort him, leſt perhaps ſuch a one ſhould be ſwallowed up with overmuch ſorrow.]

8. And therefore my preſent counſel is, that by prayers for his releaſe you expreſſe your reconciliation to him, and ſo abſolve him from the Cenſures.

8. Wherefore I * beſeech you, that you would confirm your love towards him.]

9. And this I now write that I may ſee whether ye be obedient in all things.] whether you are as ready upon my appointment to reſtore penitents, as to inflict puniſhments upon offenders, which is another branch of your Chriſtian charity.

9. For to this end alſo † did I write, that I might know the proof of you,

† have I written, ἔγραψα

10. Whom you are willing to have reſtor'd from excommunication (as being ſatisfied with his penance and expreſſion of repentance) I appoint or give leave to doe it; (For if I have abſolv'd any man, I have done it by the authority I have from Chriſt, but yet in reſpect unto you, or with conſideration of what may be beſt for you, i.e. for your whole Church.)

10. To whom ye forgive any thing, I forgive alſo: for if I † forgave any thing, to whom I forgave it, for your ſakes forgave I it, in the perſon of Chriſt.]

11. That the too long continuance of his deviſes.] the puniſhments upon the penitent offender may not be made uſe of by Satan to the hurt, and ruine of the Church, either by ſwallowing him up by deſperation, v.7. or by heightning your zeal againſt ſin into an unreconcileableneſſe with the ſinner, v.9. for Satan hath many hidden ſecret arts to miſchief ſouls, which we think not of.

11. * Leſt Satan ſhould get an advantage of us, for we are not ignorant of * that wee be not overreacht by Satan ἵνα μὴ πλεονεκτηθῶμεν ὑπὸ τοῦ Σατανᾶ.

12. when Act. 20. 1. (ſee note on the title of this Epiſtle) I came to Troas to preach the Goſpel of Chriſt, and my preaching had a very happy reception there, and brought many to the faith.

12. † Furthermore, [when I came to Troas, * to preach Chriſts Goſpel, and a dore was opened to me † of the Lord,]

13. I was much troubled in mind that I could hear no tidings of Titus, by him to be advertiſed of the ſucceſſe of my Epiſtle among you, and in purſuit of him, I left that city, and went into Macedonia, in hope that I might find him there.

13. I had no reſt in my ſpirit, becauſe I found not Titus my brother, but taking my leave of them, I went * from thence into Macedonia.]

14. Now

14. Now thanks be unto God, which alwaies cauſeth us to triumph in Chriſt, and maketh manifeſt the ſavour of * his knowledge by us in every place.] 14 And having met with him, he hath given me the good newes of the happy ſucceſſe of my Epiſtle among you, and that obligeth me to bleſſe that God, who hath hitherto proſpered us exceedingly (ſee Mark 14. f.) in the propagating of the Goſpel, and by us hath made piety and Chriſtianity famous, and well reputed of in every place.

* the knowledge of him τῆς γνώσεως αὐτοῦ

15. For we are unto God a ſweet ſavour of Chriſt, † in them that are ſaved, and in them that periſh.] 15. For by our preaching the Goſpel, we performe a very acceptable ſervice to God, and bring in glory to his name, offer up a ſweet ſmelling ſacrifice unto him, among all ſort of people, both among the penitent beleivers, which receive the faith, and live according to it, and the impenitent unbeleivers, that receive it not.

16. To the one we are the ſavour * of death unto death, and to the other the ſavour of life unto life, and who is ſufficient for theſe things?] 16 For though this ſweet perfume to the obſtinate in penitent hath been the moſt perfect poyſon (as high perfumes ſometimes are) they have grown the worſe for the Goſpels coming among them, yet to all that have forſaken their old courſes of ſin, and obeyed this call to a new life, it hath been the moſt comfortable vitall ſavour that ever came to them. This is a weighty imployment, and unleſſe God did particularly enable us, we could never be fit for it.

* or, from death to death; ſee the King's MS. reads ἐκ θανάτου, as after ἐκ ζωῆς

17. For we are not as many, which corrupt the word of God; but as of ſincerity, but as of God, in the ſight of God, ſpeak we in Chriſt.] 17. This we are ſure that we have preached the pure ſimple word of God without any of thoſe daſhings and mixtures which are uſed by many others, all that we ſay we profeſſe to bring from God, and we ſay it before him with confidence, that he knows the truth of it.

Notes on Chap. II.

2. Ἔπιτιμία ἡ ὑπὸ τῶν πολλῶν

What is here meant by ἐπιτιμία ἡ ὑπὸ τῶν πολλῶν, the puniſhment which was inflicted under the many, will appear by 1 Cor. 5. 4. where concerning the inceſtuous perſon, and ſuch as he, order is diſtinctly given, that he ſhall be delivered up to Satan for the deſtruction of the fleſh, or bringing corporall inflictions upon him, which is certainly the ἐπιτιμία puniſhment here mentioned, and that συναχθέντων ὑμῶν you being gathered together, i. e. in the preſence of the whole congregation, to adde the greater ſolemnity to it, And that is all one with the ὑπὸ πολλῶν here, under, or in the preſence of the many, Mean while as there the ſentence was S. Paul's, κέκρικα v. 3. I have judged as preſent, and v. 4. when ye are gathered together and my ſpirit, with the power of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt (beſtow'd on the Apoſtle, and rulers of the Church) ſo here it muſt be ſuppoſed to be, though the ſolemnity was tranſacted with the company, and in the preſence of the whole congregation.

CHAP. III. Paraphraſe.

1. DOE we begin again to commend our ſelves? or need we as ſome others, [a] epiſtles of commendation to you? or letters of commendation from you?] 1. Why ſhould I again be forced to mention the uprightneſſe of my dealing toward you, the orthodoxneſſe and purity of my doctrine after the manner that is uſual in the Church, in commending from one Church to another thoſe that are ſtrangers to them? have I any need of commendations to you, or from you to other men? 2.

2. Ye are our epiſtle written in our hearts, known and read of all men.] 2. The works of converſion that we have wrought among you, of which our own conſcience gives us teſtimony, will ſerve us abundantly in ſtead of letters commendatory from you to all others, who cannot but have heard the fame of it.

* being manifeſted that ye are, φανερούμενοι ὅτι ἐστὲ

3. * For as much, as ye are manifeſtly declared to be the epiſtle of Chriſt miniſtred by us, written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God, not in tables of ſtone, but in fleſhy tables of the heart.] 3. And you (i. e. your faith) are moſt conſpicuouſly an epiſtle of Chriſt; of the writing of which we have only been the inſtruments, the Spirit of God ſupplying the place of ink, and your hearts of the writing table [illegible] by this epiſtle, this teſtimony, Chriſt that great Biſhop of our ſouls doth recommend us to all men.

4. And ſuch † truſt have we through Chriſt to God-ward.] 4. Thus confident am I by the ſtrength of Chriſt to ſpeak boldly, and in a manner to boaſt of my behaviour, and happy ſucceſſe in my Apoſtleſhip c. 2. 14. &c.

5. Not that we are ſufficient of our ſelves to think any thing as of our ſelves; but our ſufficiency is of God.] 5. Not that we are able to doe, or ſo much as to think, or enter upon any thing of this nature, in order to the converſion of men, of our ſelves, as by our own ſtrength, but what ever we are able to doe, it is of God, whoſe title that is Iſa. 13. 6. to be Shaddai, almighty or ſufficient.

6. Who alſo hath * made us able miniſters of the new † Teſtament, not of the * letter, but of the ſpirit: for the letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life.] 6. And that ſufficiency of his he hath expreſt in the powers and methods, with which he hath furniſht, and to which directed us the preachers and diſpenſers of the new Covenant (ſee note on the title of theſe books) i. e. not of the law (ſee note on Mat. 5 g.) written & brought down in Tables by Moſes, but of the Goſpel called by this title of the Spirit, 1. becauſe it comes near to the ſoul, and requires purity there, 2. becauſe the holy Ghoſt came down both on Chriſt, and on the Diſciples to confirm this new way, 3. becauſe Grace is a gift of the Spirit, and now is joyned to the Goſpel, but was not to the Law, which adminiſtration of the Spirit, and annexation of it to the word under the Goſpel gives men means to attain eternal life, when the law is the occaſion, and by accident the cauſe of death to them, in denouncing judgment againſt ſinners, and yet not giving ſtrength to obey.

7. But if the miniſtration of death † written and ingraven in ſtones was * glorious, ſo that the children of Iſrael could not ſtedfaſtly behold the face of Moſes, for the glory of his countenance, † which glory was to be done away:] 7. And if the delivery of the law which brought nothing but death with it, when it was written in tables of ſtone (ſee note on Mat. 5. g.) was with the appearance of Angels, and a bright ſhining, which caſt ſuch a ſplendor on Moſes's face, that it would dazle any mans eyes to look on it, and yet now that glory, and that law ſo gloriouſly delivered, is done away.

8. How much rather ſhall the preaching of the Goſpel be matter of reverence to all? (ſee Mat. 5. g.)

8. How ſhall not the miniſtration of the Spirit be rather * glorious?] * in glory

9. For if the delivery of the law, which could help men to condemnation, but could not abſolve any man, were in ſo much glory, God by his Angels appearing ſo dreadfull in the mount, then much more the Goſpel, which brings with it juſtification and pardon of ſin, is to be counted exceeding glorious, to be lookt on and received by us with all reverence.

9. For if the † miniſtration of condemnation * be glory, much more doth the miniſtration of righteouſneſſe exceed in glory.] † adminiſtration διακονία * were

10. For the Law though otherwiſe glorious, yet being compared with the Goſpel, hath no glory at all in it (as the moon compared with the ſun is ſo utterly outſhined by it, that it appears not in the preſence thereof.)

10. For even that which was glorious † had no glory in this reſpect, by reaſon of the glory that excelleth.] † was not ſo much as glorious, οὐδὲ δεδόξασται

11. For if that which was it ſelf to be aboliſht, being but the cover that contain'd the true jewel under it, were yet deliver'd dreadfully and by a glorious appearance, then much more ſhall that, which endureth for ever, that jewel it ſelf, the Goſpel or ſubſtance, contain'd under thoſe coverings or ſhadows, and ſo which is never like to be aboliſhed, and hath a durable fruit belonging to it (Grace which the other had not) deſerve to be eſteemed glorious.

11. For if that which is done away was * glorious, much more that which remaineth is † glorious.] * by glory διὰ δόξης † in glory ἐν δόξῃ

12. Upon theſe grounds I ſay (mentioned from v. 5. to this verſe) I cannot but ſpeak boldly and confidently to you, in vindication of my Apoſtleſhip, ver. 4.

12. Seeing then that we have ſuch hope, we uſe great plainneſſe of ſpeech,]

13. Having no need to imitate Moſes who vailed his face, which was a type of the dark, not clear propoſing of the Goſpel (which is the end or principall part of the Law, and the jewel contain'd under that covering) to them of old.

13. And not as Moſes, * which put a vaile over † his face, * that the children of Iſrael † could not ſtedfaſtly look to the * [b] end of that which is aboliſhed.] * put ἐπέθηκεν † his own ἑαυτοῦ * ſo that πρὸς τὸ † looked not μὴ ἀτενίσαι * or, face for the King's MS. reads τὸ πρόσωπον

14. And accordingly ſo it continues remarkable to this preſent, the Jewes ſee not Chriſt in the reading of the old Teſtament, and ſo the cover ſtill remains upon Moſes face, as it were, (but by the Chriſtian clear doctrine, or by faith is removed.)

14. But their minds were blinded: for untill this day remaineth the ſame vaile untaken away, in the reading of the old Teſtament: which vaile is done away in Chriſt.]

15. And ſo though they have heard it over and over many times, yet ſtill they doe not underſtand the true ſenſe of the Law.

15. But even unto this day, when Moſes is read, the vaile is upon their heart.]

16. But when Iſrael v. 13. or their heart v. 15. ſhall accept of the Goſpel of Chriſt, then they ſhall ſee and underſtand plainly, what now is ſo obſcure to them.

16. Nevertheleſſe, when it ſhall turn to the Lord, the vaile ſhall be taken away.]

17. Now Chriſt is beſides his humane nature, indued with a divine Spirit, and the Goſpel of Chriſt is called the Spirit v. 6. and where the Spirit of Chriſt, or the Goſpel is, there is freedome, and conſequently the vaile (a token of ſubjection alſo 1 Cor. 11. 10.) is taken away.

17. Now the Lord is that Spirit, and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.]

18. And ſo all we that beleive in Chriſt, have that vail done away, and doe clearly, though not yet ſo perfectly behold Chriſt, and by beholding him are changed to be like him, the doctrine of the Goſpel received into our hearts changeth us into other men, to ſuch a viſion of Chriſt here, in imitating his purity &c. as ſhall be attended with eternal glory hereafter, the ſame Spirit of Chriſt, which worketh the one in us, being certain to produce the other alſo.

18. And we all with open face beholding as in a glaſſe the glory of the Lord, are changed into the ſame image, from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord.]

3. Συςατικαὶ ἐπιστολαὶ

Συςατικαὶ ἐπιστολαὶ, and γεγραμμένα in this place are an intimation of an antient cuſtome in the Apoſtolical primitive Church, which ordinarily gave their teſtimonies to all Chriſtians, that travailed from one place to another, and recommended them to an hoſpitable reception. The original of this cuſtome ſeems to have been taken from the heathens, who had their teſſeras hoſpitalitatis, which from one friend to another, helpt them that brought them, to kind entertainment, and Tertullian continues the phraſe conteſſeratio hoſpitalitatis; Many mentions of this cuſtome we find amongſt antient writers, In Syneſius τῷ φιλίῳ τῷ Σῷ τὸν Θαυμάσιον Συνίστημι, I commend Thaumaſius to your friendſhip &c. And in Phavorinus, Συνίστημι τῇ φιλίᾳ σου τῇ ἀγαθότητι τὸν Σὸν τὸν Λαυρέντιον, ὃν πολλῶν μοι μαθητὴν ὄντα, I commend to your friendſhip and kindneſſe Laurentius, who of a long time hath been my ſcholar, And again, Συνίστησι τὸς πολλοὶ, μαρτυρῶν αὐτῷ χρηστὰ, one commends a man to another, when he gives a good teſtimony of him, This was done among Chriſtians, by teſtifying the piety, and orthodoxalneſſe of any, and the agreement with them, from whom they come, in the ſame faith, And therefore when Fortunius a Biſhop of the Donatiſts affirmed and boaſted that their Church was the Catholick Church, S. Auſtin Ep: 163. ad Eleuſium, convinceth him by asking him, whether a Donatiſt could by his Litera formatæ, or communicatoriæ, gain a man entertainment, or reception in any Church, that he would name to him, being confident he could not doe it. 3. But if our Gospel be hid, it is hid * to them that are lost,]

3. Which we have done so plainly, that if the Gospel of Christ preached by us be yet obscure, it is so only among obdurate obstinate unbeleivers, v.4. see c.2.15.

† among ἐν

* so that the illumination of the Gospel of the glory of Christ hath not shin'd to them, τὸν μὴ αὐγάσαι ὑμᾶς τὸν φωτισμὸν τοῦ εὐαγγελίου τῆς δόξης τοῦ Χριστοῦ

4. † In whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds of them which beleive not, * lest the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them.]

4. Such as have their eyes so blinded by Satan, or their own worldly advantages, that the Gospel of Christ most powerfully and plainly revealed by him, and shining forth in our preaching, since his departure from the earth, (and this most certainly the revelation of the immutable will of God, whom Christ represents to us, not as an ordinary picture doth the body, but as a reall substantial image of him) is not permitted to have any impression, or influence on their hearts, they will not see, be it never so illustriously visible.

5. For we preach not our selves, but Christ Jesus the Lord, and our selves your servants for Jesus sake.]

5. Certainly nothing but this can obstruct mens minds against the Gospel, as it is delivered by us, being preacht so, as not to designe any thing of honour to our selves, but only unto Christ, and for our selves, only to offer men our service, to doe them all the humblest offices of Christian charity imaginable.

6. For God who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the [a] face of Jesus Christ.]

6. For it is not any worldly consideration, that hath put us upon this imployment, but that God that by his word created the light, when there was nothing but darkness in the world, hath in a like wonderfull manner, imparted this light to us, in sending down his own Son to shine in our hearts, to reveal his will unto us, and this on purpose that we might reveal it to others, instruct them in the knowledge of those glorious mysteries, (see note on 2 Pet.1. c.) so illustrious in themselves and advantageous to us, which God hath revealed to us by Christ. a.

7. But we have this treasure in [b] earthen † vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us.]

7. But we that are intrusted with this great b.

great treaſure of the Goſpel, are not ſo fine and pretious our ſelves, we carry bodies about us ſubject to all manner of oppoſition, and preſſures, and afflictions, and this on purpoſe deſigned by God alſo, that all good ſucceſſe we have in our Apoſtleſhip, may be imputed to Chriſt, and not to us, as it would be, if we came with any ſecular power, or grandeur to plant the Goſpel.

c. 8,9. The way which God rather ſaw fit to chuſe, was to permit us to wreſtle with all difficulties, and then to ſuſtain us by his own inviſible aſſiſtance, not by any ſecular humane means, and carry us through all, and give good ſucceſſe to our preaching by theſe very means:

8. We are * ‹ troubled on every ſide, yet not † diſtreſſed; we are perplexed, but not in deſpair;

9. * Perſecuted, but not forſaken; caſt down, but not deſtroyed:]

* purſued, but not left behind

10. Carrying about us the croſſe and ſufferings of Chriſt, daily ſuffering after him, that ſo the ſaving effects of his reſurrection, in turning men from their evil waies (converting Infidels by our preaching) might through our ſuffering in this imployment be more conſpicuous.

10. Alwaies bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jeſus, that the life alſo of Jeſus might be made manifeſt in our body.]

11. For we which live, are alway delivered unto death for Jeſus ſake, that the life alſo of Jeſus might be made manifeſt in our mortal fleſh.]

11. For we Apoſtles, that are looked on by ſome with envy, are continually ready to be put to death for the Goſpel, that the vital power of Chriſt in raiſing up ſinners to a new life may through the dangers by us undergone in preaching the Goſpel, be ſhewed forth among our auditors, that receive the faith from us.

12. And ſo truly we are not any extraordinary gainers by our employment, as to the eye of the world, the death of Chriſt v. 10. is wrought, perfected in us, we fill up his ſufferings, Col. 1. 24. by ſuffering after him, but the reſurrection and vitall efficacy of Chriſt, v. 10, & 11. is ſhewed forth, and as it were perfected in you, by our preaching and begetting faith, and confirming it in you by our afflictions, and by the example of our conſtancy, and of Gods deliverance afforded us, ch. 12.9.

12. So † then death worketh in us, but life in you.]

† that the death is wrought in us, but the life in you, ὥστε ὁ θάνατος ἐν ἡμῖν ἐνεργεῖται, ἡ δὲ ζωὴ ἐν ὑμῖν

14. Beleiving ſtedfaſtly that he that raiſed Chriſt out of the loweſt condition, even from death it ſelf, will make our afflictions a means of raiſing us, and preſenting us glorious in his ſight, together with you, if you doe ſo too.

15. For 'tis for your good that we preach and ſuffer all this, that your faith may be more confirmed, and that ſo the mercy of God extending to more perſons, may by their bleſſing God for it, abound, and tend more to the glory of God, ch. 1. 11.

Notes on Chap. IV.

a. Πρόσωπον Ἰησοῦ

This phraſe προσωπον Ἰησοῦ the face of Jeſus, and this whole verſe referres to the ſtory of Moſes, deſiring to ſee the glory of God, Exod. 33. For there God in his own glorious nature could not be ſeen v. 20. the luſtre was ſo great, But with that ſight, that was afforded him, though but of an Angel, ſuſtaining the perſon of God, Moſes's face was enlightned, and ſhone, and became glorious, (to which the Apoſtle had before referred, c. 3. 7.) And ſo here the glory of God, i.e. the revelation of his moſt divine counſels for the ſaving of men under the Goſpel, is by God communicated to Chriſt, and by that means he, as he is the Son of man, and executes this prophetick office upon earth, is much more ſhining and glorious, then Moſes's face was, and then we to whom the Goſpel is now preached, look upon this face of his, though the Iſraelites could not on Moſes, and are illuminated thereby, receive the knowledge of theſe counſels of God, whenſoever we look on him.

b. Σκεῦος ἐστιν

Σκεῦος ſignifies any of the utenſils about an houſe, Mat. 12. 29. Mar. 11. 6. (ſee note on Mat. 21. b.) a diſh, a cup &c. Of theſe ſome are teſtacea, made of ſhells of fiſhes, and they are here ὀστράκινα, as 2 Tim. 2. 20. (the only other place where the word is uſed in the New Teſtament) and this agrees very well with the matter in hand, it being ordinary to lay up thoſe things we value in ſhells, or boxes, or cabinets made of ſuch, And thoſe in reſpect of the brittleneſſe, and of the nature of them, (as the ſhels are the outſides of fiſhes) very fit to reſemble our bodies, wherein our ſouls doe inhabit, And accordingly the Platoniſts making two bodies of a man, one that which carries the ſoule in it, ὄχημα ψυχῆς, the chariot of the ſoule, the other that which we touch, and ſee, the groſſer carnal part, part, call that second ἐφάπαξ, that which is the ſame to us, which the ſhell is to the fiſh, which hath another finer body within it.

c. Theſe two verſes in every word referre to the antient heathen cuſtomes in the agones, of which ſomewhat hath been ſaid, note on 1 Cor. 9. 24. S. Chryſoſtome explains them ſo in common (ἀλγῶμεν γὰρ ἀπηνυσχαίνομεν, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἔστι, ὅσα ἐκπονεῖν τὸν σπουδαῖον, εἰς γυμνασίαν, οὐκ εἰς ἥδονὰς, We are cold &c. as Horace of the racer, ſudavit & alſit, he ſweats and friezes,) but he applies them not ſeverally to the particular exerciſes; This I ſuppoſe may fitly be done, by accommodating three of the paires to the cuſtomes of wreſtling, one to that of running in the race. Θλίβειν belongs clearly to πάλη, wreſtling, ſo ſaith Ariſtotle Rhet: l. 1. c. 5. (ſee the anonymous Scholiaſt on that place) ὁ μὲ δυνάμενος θλίβειν καὶ κρατεῖν, παλαιστικὸς, He that can gripe his adverſary, and take him up, is good at wreſtling, there being two dexterities in that exerciſe, comprimere antagoniſtam, & ſubſternere, to gripe and throw down, which Heſychius alſo calls θλῖψιν, and κρατεῖν, the firſt of theſe is here mentioned, and expreſt by θλίβεσθαι preſſure, to which is here oppoſed, as in a higher degree, στενοχωρεῖσθαι, ad anguſtias redigi, to be brought to diſtreſſe, as when we can neither get out of his hands, nor make any reſiſtance againſt him, ſo Iſa. 28. 20. στενοχωρεῖσθαι ὑπὸ δυνάμεως μάχης, being brought to ſuch extremities we can fight no longer. So again ἀπορεῖσθαι perplexity, is fit for the wreſtler, who being ſhrewdly put to it, knows not what to doe, ſo ſaith Theophylact, though we fall εἰς ἀμηχανίας to ſuch a condition that we know not what to doe, So in Heſychius ἀπορῦντες ἀμηχανῦντες, they that are not able to doe, or attempt any thing, yet are not ἐξαπορούμενοι, miſcarry not finally, ὀρθοὶ ἱστάμενοι, ſtand after all upright, οὐκ ἀπογινώσκοντες, καὶ ἡττώμενοι, deſpair not, nor are they overcome, but find an happy iſſue out of all, νικῶντες, conquerors at laſt, ſaith Theophylact. Then for διωκόμενοι purſued, that is peculiar to δρόμῳ racing, as hath been formerly ſaid (note on 1 Cor. 9. 25.) when one being formoſt in the race, others purſue, and get up cloſe after him, being ready to outſtrip, or get before him, but doe not ſo, and that is the meaning of οὐκ ἐγκαταλειπόμενοι, not outſtript or caſt behind, the word ἐγκαταλείπειν ſignifying to be out-gone, relinqui literally, in Horace's notion, ——mihi turpe relinqui eſt; So in Plutarch τοὺς ἀπολειφθέντας ὑ σταδίων, they doe not crown them that are lag, or left behind, & 1 Cor. 9. all run, but one receives the prize; So Euſtathius on Homer: Il: ψ'. Τὸν δὲ ἀπλῶς νικηθέντα λελεῖφθαι φαμὲν, He that is overcome we ſay is left, and in Heſychius, λείπεσθαι ἆθλα ἀπηνυσχάνειν, corruptly for λείπειν (i. e. ἀλείπειν) ἄθλα ἀπηνυσχάνειν to be left, is to miſſe the reward; and therefore Jam. 1. 4. thoſe that are perfect, and conſummate, crowned, or fit to receive the crown, are ſaid to be ἐν μηδενὶ λειπόμενοι, left behind in nothing, victorious ſtill. Then for καταβαλλόμενοι] that belongs again to πάλη, wreſtling, where he that throws the other firſt, is conqueror, whereupon Heſychius καταβαλεῖν, νικῆσαι, βῆξαι, to caſt down, is to overcome, to throw; The ſame is expreſt by ὑποσκελίζειν, περονίζειν, ſupplanting, tripping up the heels, whence is that ſcholion of Theophylact, καταβαλλόμενοι ὑφ' ἑαυτῶν τῶν ἀντιπαλαιόντων, thrown by them that wreſtle with us, and then the οὐκ ἀπολλύμενοι, not deſtroyed, may either ſignifie literally ſo, not killed, i. e. lying upon the ground, but not like carcaſſes there, or elſe riſing up again after the fall, and not as the Elephant, irrecoverably down. All which belongs to the afflictions that befell the Apoſtles, their hardſhip in theſe ἀγῶνες and combats of theirs.

d. The Hebrew כבד ſignifies primarily two things, weight, and plenty, and from thence two things more, either glory or riches. From hence it comes, that βαρὺ is in the Greek of the Old Teſtament taken for multitude, or greatneſſe, that is applied to a train, or hoſt, 1 Kin. 10. 2. and 2 Kin. 6. 14. and 18. 17. and 2 Chron. 9. 1. Δύναμις βαρεῖα, a great numerous troop of attendants, or army, and 1 Mac. 1. 17. ὄχλῳ βαρὺς a very great multitude, and 3 Mac. συμπόσιον βαρὺ, a great magnificent feaſt. Accordingly βάρος δόξης] here, will be, riches, plenty, and abundance of glory, the word βάρος being the rather here uſed in oppoſition to the lightneſſe of the afflictions precedent, but not to denote the heavineſſe, but abundance, or riches of this, as Gen. 13. 2. Abraham is ſaid to be כבד heavy, i. e. plentifull in cattell, &c. the LXXII. reads πλούσιος rich, and ſo c. 1. כבוד ſignifies riches.

CHAP. V.

Paraphraſe.

1. FOR we know, that if our earthly houſe of this tabernacle were diſſolved, we have a building of God, an houſe not made with hands, eternall in the heavens.]

1. For of this we are confident, that if our bodies wherein we dwell as in a moveable tent, or tabernacle, be deſtroyed by the preſent preſſures that lie upon us, if our dangers ſhould end in death it ſelf, this were a matter of no terror to us, having ſo much a better abiding place provided for us by God, ſo much an happier condition, then any this world is capable of, and out of reach of all ſublunary dangers, ſure to be continued to us for ever.

2. For in this we groan earneſtly, deſiring to be clothed upon with our houſe, which is from heaven.]

2. For while we are in this inferiour ſtate of bodies, we are for ever unſatisfied, and impatient, deſiring to have thoſe ſpiritual bodies, 1 Cor. 15. 44. that purer ſtate of bliſſe and immortality, as an upper garment to adorn and hide the blemiſhes and imperfections, and keep off the cold and preſſures that this body of ours is ſubject to.

3. If ſo be † that being clothed we ſhall not be found naked.]

3. This I ſay upon ſuppoſition, that we ſhould never die, that we were in the number of thoſe mentioned 1 Cor. 15. 53. and 1 Theſſ. 4. 15, 17. that are found alive at the laſt trump, at the day of doom, as ſome ſhall certainly be, and yet even thoſe very heartily glad to be after changed to have theſe natural bodies ſpiritualized.

4. For we that are in this tabernacle doe groan, being burdened, not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that * mortality might be ſwallowed up of life.]

4. For while we are in theſe bodies of clay, we are ſubject to weights and preſſures, and and those give us a great impatience and wearinesse, and this hath a very observable meaning in it, For 'tis certain we doe not desire to put off these bodies, to part with them finally, how weary soever we are, This therefore is the signification of it, that there is another sort of bodies, and another sort of life, infinitely more desirable then these, which we now enjoy, an eternal, immutable life of these our bodies, in stead of that mortall (subject to afflictions, and death it self) which we now live, and that we are naturally a desiring, a panting, a groaning after.

5. And the same God that hath created and framed us after this manner, with bodies subject to such pressures, that we perpetually desire to change them for impassible, hath by Christ promised us, that he will make this provision for us, raise us to immortal lives, and as a pledge and pawn to assure us, that he will perform this promise, he hath by the preaching of the Gospel, sent to cleanse and purifie us here in some measure, which is a kind of spiritualizing of our bodies, and a pawn and earnest of our future immortality, to which that Spirit shall raise us, which raised Christ from the dead.

5. Now he that hath * wrought us for † the self-same thing, is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit.]

† this very thing

6. By these considerations therefore, being enabled to look cheerfully on death, as that which only brings us home to God, from which these earthy bodies keeps us strangers,

6. Therefore we are alwaies confident, knowing that whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord.]

7. (And which gives us that really to be injoyed, which we have here in this life, only by faith.)

7. (For we walk by faith, not by sight.)]

8. We make choice rather, and are infinitely better pleased, to leave this body behind us, here, to goe out, to die, that by this means, we may come to our home, our blisse in heaven; and so the fear or expectation of death is farre from being painfull to us.

8. We are confident I say, and willing rather to * be absent from the body, and to be † present with the Lord.]

† at home

9. All our ambition and designe being but this, that whether we continue in this earthy body of ours, or go out of it, whether living or dying, we may be acceptable to God.

9. Wherefore * we labour, that whether † present or absent, we may be accepted of him.]

† we be at home or abroad

a. 10. For there will certainly come a day, when every person that ever lived shall be judged by God, set as it were in an eminent conspicuous place, as men that are impleaded are wont to be, and every action of his life taken into consideration, that accordingly every man may be punisht, or rewarded, according to his actions, of what sort soever they be, whether good or bad.

10. For we must all * appear before the Judgment seat of Christ, that every one may [a] receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or evil.]

11. Considering therefore the dreadfulnesse of this appearance of God, as on one side we labour to perswade men to embrace the truth, and live, as those that are thus to be judged, so we desire to approve our selves to God, as our Judge also, who I am confident doth approve of our sincerity herein, and I hope you are as well satisfied also of our uprightnesse toward you.

11. Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we perswade men; but we are manifest unto God, and I trust also, are made manifest in your consciences.]

12. What I say, is not as if I wanted again commending to you, but that I may arm you against those false Apostles, that come among you, and glory much of outward things, but know in their consciences, that they have little cause to doe so, against whom you may fortifie your selves, and make answer to them, by glorying of my patience, and perseverance, and performances in the Gospel, and to this end only it is, that I say this unto you.

12. For we commend not our selves again unto you, but give you occasion to glory on our behalf, that you may have somewhat to answer them, which glory in appearance, and not in heart.]

13. And what we doe herein, is meant for good, my speaking thus largely of my self is for the glory of God, whose grace it is that enables me to doe any thing, and any more moderate language, or actions are designed by me to your advantage also, Or both together, whether one or other, they are meant to the glory of God, and your good.

13. For whether we be * besides our selves, it is to God: or whether we be sober, it is for your cause.]

14,15. For our love to Christ founded on this to us, hath us in its power to make us doe whatsoever it will have us, making this argument from this certain acknowledged truth, of Christs having died for all men, that then certainly all men are sinners lapst in a lost estate, and so hopelesse, unlesse they use some means to get out of that estate; which that he might help us to doe, was the designe of Christs dying for all, that we might (having received by his death grace to live a new life) live no longer after our own lusts and desires, but in obedience to his commands that died and rose again to that end, (to blesse us in turning every man, &c. Act. 3. 26.)

14. For the love of Christ constraineth us, * because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead:

15. And † that he died for all, that they which live, should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him, which died for them, and rose again.]

† he died

16. Wherefore now we esteem or value no man according to the outes advantages of this world, wisdome, riches, learning, &c. which are wont to set men out in the eyes of the world, and although it were true that we had familiarly converst with Christ here, as some among you say they have (they that say I am of Christ 1 Cor. 1. 12.) and preferre themselves before others for that, and expect their doctrine should be received before the doctrine of others, yet now we know that he is gone from this earth, and no man can now pretend to know Christs will (otherwise then as it was revealed at his being here) above, or any more then another, upon this bare score, because he once converst familiarly with Christ here; All that now we have to doe with Christ is to look on him, not under any such notion, as a Christ talking familiarly with us on earth, but as an heavenly King, offering and designing us a spiritual kingdome upon our obedience and fidelity, not any temporal advantage, or matter of boasting, upon our acquaintance with him here.

16. Wherefore henceforth know we no man after the flesh, yea though we * have known Christ after the flesh: yet now † henceforth know we him no more.]

* had known
* we know him so no longer as

17. If any man professe to have any peculiar

17. Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; old things are past away, behold all things are become new.]

culiar claim to Chriſt, this muſt be the way of judging of the ſincerity of his pretenſions, if he think himſelf obliged to live a new life; The ſtate of the Goſpel is a change of every thing from what it was before, more grace, promiſe of pardon on repentance and ſincerity for the future, more explicite promiſes of heaven, and precepts of greater perfection, and what is all this, but an obligation, in all reaſon, to a new and a Chriſtian life?

* But all theſe things τὰ δὲ πάντα † adminiſtration διακονίαν

18. * And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himſelf by Jeſus Chriſt, and hath given to us the † miniſtery of reconciliation,] 18. Now all theſe things depend on God, as the author of them, who hath uſed this means of making up that breach between him and us, and hath given us power, and commiſſion, to give men reconciliation, peace, or pardon, or abſolution, upon renewing of their lives.

19. To wit, that God was in Chriſt, reconciling the world unto himſelf, not imputing their treſpaſſes unto them, and hath † committed to us the word of reconciliation.] 19 And the tenure of our commiſſion runs thus, That God hath uſed Chriſt as a means to make peace between him, and the greater and worſer part of the world, the Gentiles at this time, as well as the Jews, (not by pardoning of their ſins, while they remain in them, but by admitting them to repentance, by not ſhutting up waies of mercy, and moreover calling them, uſing admirable methods of mercy in revealing himſelf to them) and hath put in our hands the word of reconciliation, the preaching of this Goſpel, and making known the means of grace, and adviſing and perſwading all men to make uſe of it.

20. Now then we [b] are Ambaſſadors for Chriſt, as though God did beſeech you by us; we pray you in Chriſts ſtead, be ye reconciled to God.] 20. This therefore is the nature of our preſent imployment, to be (as our title of Apoſtles imports) proxies and negotiators for Chriſt, we ſupplying the place of Chriſt on earth, and ſo treating with men, after the manner that Chriſt did, when he was here, calling ſinners to repentance, and that with all the affectionate importunity imaginable, as ſent from God on purpoſe to entreat men to it, And accordingly now we doe, in Chriſts ſtead, we beſeech you to reform your lives, and make your ſelves capable of the return of Gods favour to you, (ſee note on Mar. 5. k) b. c.

21. For he hath made him to be [c] ſin for us, who knew no ſin, that we might be made the righteouſneſſe of God in him.] 21. For Chriſt an innocent, pure, ſinleſſe perſon, hath God ſent to be a ſacrifice for our ſins, that we might imitate his purity, and thereby be, through the benefits of his death, accepted and juſtified by God.

b. Πρεσβεύομεν

c. What is meant here by the word [ἁμαρτία ſin] will beſt appear by the notion of it in the Old Teſtament ſometimes, and by the oppoſition to δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſſe here. In the Old Teſtament 'tis taken for a ſacrifice for ſin, Lev. 4. 3, 29. and 5. 6. and Pſal. 40. 7. and ſo piaculum in Latine is both a ſin and a ſacrifice of expiation, or the perſon that is ſo ſanctified. And there is nothing more ordinary in the Septuagint, then for ἁμαρτία to ſignifie a ſacrifice for ſinne, and ſo in the Chaldee paraphraſe alſo, Exod. 29. 14. where the Hebrew reads ſin, they read, a ſacrifice for ſin, for indeed the Hebrew חטאת ſignifies primarily two things, ſin and legal uncleanneſſe, and ſecondarily two things more, a ſacrifice of propitiation for ſin and of purification for uncleanneſſe, and conſequently being rendred ſometimes, ἁμαρτία, both in the notion of ſin, and alſo of uncleanneſſe, Lev. 12. 6. Num. 6. 2. ſometimes ἱλασμὸς, and ἐξιλασμὸς propitiation, Ezek. 44. 27. 45. 19. and ſometimes ἁγνισμὸς purifying, Num. 19. 19. ἁγνισμὸς purification, Num. 8. 7. from hence comes, that this one Greek word ἁμαρτία, as if it were of the ſame latitude with the Hebrew חטאת, is made uſe of to ſignifie all theſe ſeverals. For that of ſin I need not inſtance, for that of legal uncleanneſſe, ſee Num. 6. 2. ἥμαρτε ἐπὶ ψυχῇ, he was unclean by the touch of a dead body. For that of ſacrifice of expiation, among many others, ſee Lev. 4. 25. the blood of the ἁμαρτία ſin, i.e. ſin-offering, and in the laſt for purification, either of a leaper, or a woman after childbirth, or after the touching of a dead body, the word generally uſed is περὶ ἁμαρτίας, for ſin, So in the New Teſtament Rom. 8. 3. περὶ ἁμαρτίας, for ſin, is the ſacrifice of propitiation, and ſo Heb. 10. 6. and 13. 11. and ſo here ἁμαρτία ſin, without περὶ, moſt diſtinctly. Then for the oppoſition, wherein ἁμαρτία ſin] is here ſet to δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſſe, Chriſt made ἁμαρτία ſin, that we might be made δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſſe, that is an argument, that as our being δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſſe, ſignifies our being ſanctified firſt, and then accepted by God, juſtified, ſo his being ἁμαρτία] ſignifies his being condemned, i.e. conſecrated as a ſacrifice is wont to be devoted for the ſins of the people.

Notes on Chap. VI.

What σωτηρία ſignifies, hath been often ſaid, (ſee Rom. 13. c.) Gods reſcuing his faithfull, perſevering ſervants out of their diſtreſſes, thus it clearly ſignifies here, proportionably to what it had done in the prophecie here cited, Iſa. 49.8. In an acceptable time have I heard thee, i.e. in a time that God choſe, and ſaw fit for the turn, In the day of ſalvation have I helpt thee, and I will preſerve thee and give thee for a Covenant to this people (a kind of rainbow to the drown'd world, a ſign of a covenant that God will drown them no more in ſuch afflictions) to eſtabliſh, or raiſe up the earth, to cauſe to inherit the deſolate heritages. And therefore when he ſaith, now is the accepted time, the ſeaſon that God hath pitch't on, now is the day of ſalvation, the meaning will be, that now the time is approaching, that the true pure Chriſtian profeſſion, thus long perſecuted by the Jews, and Gnoſticks ſo ſharply, (by which means it comes to paſſe, that many daily fall off to ſave themſelves) ſhall ſuddainly have reſpite by the deſtruction of the enemies every where. And ſo this is a ſeaſonable conſideration, to back the exhortation ver. 1. which the Apoſtle in all his Epiſtles did at that time ſo earneſtly preſſe, that they that had received the Goſpel, and gone on ſo long, ſhould not at laſt by falling off, loſe all in the laſt act, (ſee *Heb.*10.36,37,38.) i.e. receive it in vain, loſe all the benefit that attended it. To which purpoſe the Apoſtle proceeds v. 3. &c. to mention himſelf, and his fellow-labourers, as examples to them of thoſe things, which were moſt directly contrary to the Gnoſticks; 1. Inoffenſive living; 2. Conſtancy and perſeverance under perſecutions; Firſt, blameleſneſſe of converſation v. 3. (For this falling off of the Chriſtians to the Gnoſticks was the greateſt offence, and ſcandal imaginable to Chriſtianity, having ſo much impurity &c. among them,) Then v. 4, 5. patience and conſtancy in all kind of preſſures, upon which again he ſubjoins, v. 6. ἁγνότης, pureneſſe, and γνῶσις, knowledge, μακροθυμία, long-ſuffering, patience, and perſeverance, in oppoſition to the compliances and apoſtaſies of the Gnoſticks, pureneſſe in oppoſition to their luſts and uncleanneſſe, knowledge, in oppoſition to their pretended knowledge of the ſecret meanings of ſcripture, (juſt as 2 *Pet.*1.5. we find virtue, (or courage) knowledge, ἐγκράτεια continence, and patience put together) and at length πνεῦμα ἅγιον the holy Spirit, in oppoſition to their pretences of being the ſpiritual, 1 *Cor.*12.1. And after many verſes ſpent on that ſubject, he looks on thoſe apoſtate hereticks as ἄπιστοι unfaithfull deſertors v.14. and conjures them μὴ ἑτεροζυγεῖν, not to encline to them, being an heatheniſh diabolicall ſort of people, v.15. with whom being intangled, they muſt abſolutely forſake, and come out of them as from Sodom v.17. which is again noted by the filthineſſe of the fleſh and ſpirit, foul luſts and factions &c. c.7.1.

b. Ἑτεροζυγεῖν

The word ἑτεροζυγεῖν] the vulgar renders jugum ducere, which ſeems to have given occaſion to Budæus, and H. Stephanus out of him, to affirm that ἑτεροζυγεῖν here in this Apoſtle is uſed for ἑωζυγεῖν to be in the yoak with another. But this is a miſtake without any grounds, ſave only the equivocalneſs of the word ζυγὸς, which ſignifies a yoak to draw in, as well as a ballance to weigh in. The word ἑτεροζυγεῖν is doubtleſſe to be rendred here as in Greek authors it ſignifies, among whom a pair of ſcales or ballance whoſe beam inclines or propends toward one part, is call'd ῥοπὴν ἑτεροζυγῆ, (in oppoſition to ἰσόζυγον, equally inclined both waies, or whoſe beam ſtands even) trutina alterijugis, ἑτεροῤῥοπὴς, non ἰσορρόπης, a ſcale that weighs down one way, ſtands not in the equilibration. So in Phocylides, Σταθμὸν μὴ χρόνιον ἑτεροζυγον ἀλλ' ἴσον ἴσχειν, Let the ballance ſtand even, not inclined more to one ſide. And ſo the ſenſe of the place will be, Be not more propenſe, and inclined toward the propoſals of theſe Apoſtatizing Gnoſticks, that hereſie, to which your preſent leaders would ſeduce you, then you are to us the Apoſtles of Chriſt, who love you ſo paſſionately; Which is the argument almoſt of the whole Chapter. Thus in Clements Epiſtle to theſe ſame Corinthians, we find a phraſe directly parallel to this, ἑτεροκλινεῖς ἀπάρχοντες ἀφ' ἡμῶν, inclining the other way from us, i.e diſaffected to us.

CHAP. VII.

Paraphraſe.

1. HAving therefore theſe promiſes (dearly beloved) let us cleanſe our ſelves from all * filthineſſe of the fleſh and ſpirit, perfecting holineſſe in the fear of God.]

* defilement μολυσμοῦ

1. Wherefore having ſo rich promiſes made you by God, promiſes of being received by Chriſt, as children into his family, but thoſe promiſes conditional promiſes, made upon condition that you forſake all impurity &c. c.6.17,18. my earneſt exhortation to you is, that you purifie your ſelves from the ſins (of all kinds) that are now crept in among you, particularly from the pollutions of the fleſh that your idol-feaſts are apt to betray you to, and of the ſpirit, as pride, faction, ſchiſme &c. preferring falſe teachers before us, which planted Chriſt among you; practiſing to the end all manner of piety with all diligence (ſee note on Phil. 2. c.)

2. The falſe teachers that you receive ſo willingly, injure you, defile you, and either defraud or perhaps ſeduce you into abominable ſins. See Epheſ. 4. 22. and 2 Pet. 1. b. But we have been far from doing any of theſe, and therefore are fitter to be embraced by you. 6. 6. 14. See Rom. 1. note. h.

3. I ſpeak not this to condemne you, for I have ſaid before, that you are in our hearts to dye and live with you.]

3. I ſpeak not this to bring any evill report upon you, for I love you moſt paſſionately, as I ſaid before.

4. My freedom (ſee note on Jo. 7. a) in mentioning your faults is great indeed, but withall I am as free in boaſting of your obedience, and though I have had much grief and fear v. 5. through the ſins that were among you, yet the joy which I take in your repentance is extreamly more abundant then the ſorrow was.

4. Great is my || boldneſſe of ſpeech toward you, great is my glorying of you, I am filled with comfort, I † am exceeding joyfull in all our tribulation.]

† have a ſuperabundance of joy over-

5. For the truth is all our journey long from Epheſus to Macedonia, Act. 20. 1. we had a ſad time of it, For as we met with many oppoſitions from others, ſo the many fears we had concerning you, were very troubleſom to us.

5. For * when we were come into Macedonia, our fleſh had no reſt, but we were † troubled on every ſide, without were fightings, within were fears.]

* as we went

† griped

6. But through the mercy of God, who releives thoſe, that are in greateſt want of relief, Titu's coming freed us from all.

6. Nevertheleſſe, God that comforteth * thoſe that are caſt down, comforted us by the coming of Titus.

* the lowly

7. And it was not the bare preſence of Titus that was ſuch ſolace to me, but the news that he brought me, and with which he himſelf was ſo much comforted, to wit, the news of your panting after me, lamenting moſt ſadly the ſins that I had in my former Epiſtle laid to your charge, and your earneſtneſſe for me againſt thoſe that traduced me.

7. And not by his coming only, but by the conſolation wherewith he was comforted † in you,* when he told us your earneſt deſire, your † mourning, your * fervent minde towards me, ſo that I rejoyced the more.]

8. So that now though thoſe directions of mine in my firſt Epiſtle brought the cenſures of the Church upon ſome of you, (for ſo I find they did, though but for a time, with place for ſpeedy remiſſion, upon reformation) I have no reaſon to be ſorry for what I did, though the truth is I was a while ſorry for it, and wiſht I had not been ſo ſevere.

8. † For though I made you ſorry with a Letter, I doe not repent, though I did repent, for I perceive that * the ſame Epiſtle hath made you ſorry, though it were but [a] for a ſeaſon.]

† wherefore though I grieved you by that Epiſtle, ὅτι ει

* that Epiſtle, though for a ſhort time, hath grieved you,

9. But now that I hear what ſucceſſe it hath found among you, what reformation hath been wrought by it, I profeſſe my ſelf to rejoyce not that you had the cenſures inflicted on you, but that thoſe cenſures produced that effectuall reformation and change, for you were dealt with according to the cuſtome of Evangelicall Diſcipline; And ſo 'tis clear enough that you have not been damnified by me in this matter, but much advantaged thereby.

9. Now, I rejoyce, not that ye were † made ſorry; but that ye * ſorrowed to repentance: for ye were made ſorry after a godly manner, that ye might receive damage by us in nothing.]

* were grieved, ſorrowed, bewailed

10. For that Diſcipline which Chriſt hath now ordained in his Church (ſee 1 Cor. 5. note c.) is very proper to work ſuch change of minde as ſhall advance to a conſtant, perſevering durable forſaking all known ſinnes, (ſee note on Ro. 10. a.) whereas the puniſhments which are uſuall in the world ordinarily end in the taking away of mens lives, or ſomewhat analogicall to them in a lower degree.

10. For † godly ſorrow worketh repentance to ſalvation, * not to be repented of, but the ſorrow of the world worketh death.]

† grief according to God

* not repented of,

11. And an evidence thereof I have in you, whoſe having the cenſures of the Church inflicted on ſome of you, hath wrought a vehement care to make all right again, a clearing of the guiltleſſe, a diſpleaſure and diſdain againſt the guilty, fear of my diſpleaſure, deſire to give me ſatisfaction, earneſtneſſe to reform, yea, to deny your ſelves lawfull liberties by way of penance for the former inordinacies. And ſo you have done all that is poſſible toward the acquitting your ſelves in this buſineſſe.

11. For behold, this ſelf ſame thing † that ye ſorrowed after a godly ſort, * what carefulneſs it wrought in you yea, † what clearing of your ſelves, yea, what indignation, yea, what fear, yea, what vehement deſire yea what * zeal, yea, what revenge: in all things you have approved your ſelves to be clear in this matter.]

† your being grieved according to God

† how great apologizing

12. When therefore I wrote ſo ſharply to you, the interpretation which you are to make of it is this, that it was not out of any diſpoſition of ſeverity againſt them that had committed thoſe crimes, the fornicators and inceſtuous perſon, 1 Cor. 5. 1. the man that ſued his brother c. 6. 1. nor out of any partiality of kindneſſe to them, that had been ſufferers by thoſe crimes, him that was defrauded, 1 Cor. 6. 8. or diſturbed with law-ſuits before the heathen judicatures v. 1. but onely to expreſſe my care of you, that by my writing to you in that manner you might diſcern how diligent I am to doe you any good.

12. Wherefore though I wrote unto you, I did it not for his cauſe that had done the wrong, nor for his cauſe that had ſuffered wrong, but that our † care for you in the ſight of God might appear unto you.]

* diligence for, or toward you, might be made manifeſt before, or in the preſence of God

13. And by this means I have received much matter of joy, hearing what good effects the cenſures had wrought upon you, and this joy was very much increaſed, to ſee how Titus was joyed, and inwardly inlivened by you.

13. * Therefore we were comforted in your comfort; yea, and exceedingly the more joyed we, for the joy of Titus, becauſe his ſpirit was refreſhed by you all.]

† For this cauſe we have been comforted

14. For what ever good I told him of you, what ever I have boaſted of your kindneſſe to me, you have made it all good, and as I never ſaid any falſe thing to you, ſo whatſoever I ſaid to Titus about you, he hath by experience found to be perfectly true alſo.

15. And he hath huge kindneſſe toward you, conſidering what readineſſe of obedience you expreſt to my directions, and what chearfull reception you gave him, that was thus ſent from me unto you (ſee note on Phil.2. c.)

† in every thing I have a confidence among you ἐν παντὶ θαῤῥῶ ἐν ὑμῖν

16. I rejoice therefore that † I have confidence in you in all things.]

16. This therefore is matter of all joy to me, that I can thus confidently promiſe my ſelf of your obedience &c. and never fear to find my ſelf deceived in my confidence.

The word ὥρα ſignifies a ſeaſon, and any part of time indefinitely, but yet both in Greek and Latine is oft uſed for a ſmall, or ſhort ſpace, ſo Philem: 15. πρὸς ὥραν, for a ſhort ſpace, and 1 Theſſ. 2. 17. πρὸς καιρὸν ὥρας for the ſpace of an houre, i.e. for a ſhort ſpace. And ſo here εἰ καὶ πρὸς ὥραν, though but for an hour,] i. e. for a ſhort ſpace, which being joyned with [ἐλύπησεν ὑμᾶς, hath grieved you] in the notion of that phraſe for inflicting the cenſures (ſee note on 1 *Cor.*5. c.) it denotes the infliction of ſome penance, a ſentence of abſtention for a while, for a ſhort ſpace, (for the bringing forth fruits of repentance) after which it is to be remitted again. This the Nicene fathers expreſſe by this ſtyle, ἐφ' ὧν καὶ χρόνος ὥρισται καὶ καιρὸς τέτακται, for whoſe cenſures the time is determined, and ſeaſon ſet, Zonoras by καιροὶ ὡρισμένοι τῇ μετανοίᾳ τῶν πεπτωκότων, the times ſet for the penance of the lapſed. And this is anſwerable to the Nidui among the Jewes, a remotion for thirty daies. Another ſort of cenſures there was, ſine præfinito tempore, without determining of the time, irrevocabile anathema, in Alcimus, perennis excommunicatio, a laſting, irrevocable excommunication, Concil: Turon: 2. c.20. and Concil: Pariſ: 3.can: 5. but this not abſolutely ſo, but uſque ad reformationem, for ever if they reform not. Hereby it appears that 'twas not only the inceſtuous perſon 1 Cor. 5. 1. which is here referred to, for he was delivered up to Satan for the deſtruction of the fleſh, and that is parallel to the perennis excommunicatio, the durable excommunication, or that which was to continue untill reformation; but others, it ſeems, which had been found fault with in that Epiſtle, (as he that went to law c.6. and the like) fell under the cenſures, though only πρὸς ὥραν, for a definite time, that they might bring forth fruits of repentance. 4. In ſtead of being intreated by me, earneſtly beſeeching me to receive their charity and collection (ſee note on Act. 2. c.) and convey it from them for the relief of the poor Chriſtians in Judæa.

* And not as we hoped, οὐ καθὼς ἠλπίσαμεν

5. * And this they did, not as we hoped, but firſt gave their own ſelves to the Lord, and unto us, by the will of God,]

5. And not only this, but as they had firſt given themſelves up to the ſervice of God, ſo they offered me their ſervice alſo, (God ſo moving them) i. e. not only their bounty, but their pains, not only to ſend, or give their goods, but to goe themſelves, ſome of their company, to Corinth,

* among you this charity ἐν ὑμῖν ταύτην τὴν χάριν

7. || Therefore (as ye abound in every thing, in faith, and * utterance, and knowledge, and in all diligence, and in your love to us) † ſee that ye abound in this grace alſo.]

7. And that, as ye have been richly furniſhed with faith in beleiving your ſelves, all that hath been revealed to you, with ability of inſtructing others, with knowledge of myſteries (ſee note on 1 Cor.1.b.c.) with all care and induſtry to doe what ever you could to bring forth fruits of faith, and with extreme kindneſſe towards me, ſo ye would exceed in this liberality and contribution toward the poor Chriſtians alſo.

|| Or, And that, ἵνα καὶ

† ye abound περισσεύητε

8. * I ſpeak not by commandement, but by occaſion of the forwardneſſe of others, and to prove the ſincerity of your love.]

8. This I ſay not by way of precept, or command, laying any obligation,

* I ſpeak not by way of injunction, but by the forwardneſſe of others making triall of the ſincerity of your love alſo, Οὐ κατ' ἐπιταγὴν λέγω, ἀλλὰ διὰ τῆς ἑτέρων σπουδῆς, καὶ τὸ τῆς ὑμετέρας ἀγάπης γνήσιον δοκιμάζων obligation upon you, ſee v. 10. but only by mentioning how forward others have been, the Macedonians by name, when they were themſelves in diſtreſſe, v. 2. to tell you that this will be a tryall of your charity, how ſincere it is by comparing it with others, who were not ſo rich as you, and therefore if yours be as hearty as theirs, twill probably expreſſe it ſelf on ſuch an opportunity as this.

9. For to ſuch performances as theſe ye can want no motives, when ye conſider the example of Chriſt in his dealings toward us, his Liberality and bounty, in exhauſting himſelf for us, ſubmitting himſelf to ſo mean a condition, and even to death it ſelf, that thereby ye, and all that will make uſe of his bounty, may be ſpiritually enriched.

9. For ye know the † Grace of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that * though he was rich, yet for your ſakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich.

† charity
* being rich

10. And herein though for the degree of your liberality no præcept doth oblige you, Chriſts command of relieving the poor, leaving to you the liberty to determine the proportion, yet I ſhall give you my opinion, that as you have formerly expreſt ſome forwardneſſe, not onely to doe ſomewhat for that preſent, but to reſolve to doe more, if you had been, or when you ſhould be able, ſo 'twill not now be for your credit, or the reputation of your bounty, to fall ſhort of that purpoſe.

10. And herein I give my advice, for this is expedient for you † who have begun before, not only to doe, but alſo to [a] be forward a year ago.]

† as many of you as formerly began from a year agoe, not onely to doe, but alſo to reſolve, ὑμῶν τὸ θέλειν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ πρᾶξαι πρόκεισθε ἀπὸ πέρυσι.

11. And therefore now you may do well to perfect what ye then began, that as then at a diſtance ye were forward to make the reſolution, ſo you may now perform according to your preſent ability.

11. * Now therefore perform the doing of it, that as there was a † readineſſe to will, ſo there may be a performance alſo out of that which ye have.]

* And now conſummate the work, or doing alſo, Νυνὶ δὲ καὶ τὸ ποιῆσαι ἐπιτελέσατε † forwardneſſe to reſolve προθυμίαν τοῦ θέλειν

12. For ſuppoſing a man chearfully to do what he is able, that reſolution of his if it be perform'd, i. e. if he do according to his ability, ſhall be well accepted and rewarded by God, and that which he is not able to doe, ſhall never be expected of him.

12. For if * there be firſt a willing minde, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not.]

* the forwardneſſe precede ἡ προθυμία πρόκειται

13, 14. And this collection that I ſpeak of is not ſo deſign'd, that other men ſhould be releaſed of their burthen by having it laid on your ſhoulders, that they ſhould be made up by your liberality, and you diſtreſt by giving them. but that there may be an equality, you relieving them, now in this time of famine in Jury, out of your plenty, and when you want (ſee Mar. 12. 6.) as they now doe, they, when the famine is over, ſhould relieve you again out of their plenty:

13 † For I mean not that other men be eaſed, and you burdened.
14. But by an equality, * that now at this time your abundance may be a ſupply for their want, that their abundance alſo may be a ſupply for your want, that there may be equality:]

† Not that other men might have releaſe, but you preſſure, Οὐ γὰρ ἵνα ἄλλοις ἄνεσις,
* at this ſeaſon your abundance to their want, ὁ νῦν καιρὸς ὑμῶν περίσσευμα εἰς τὸ ἐκείνων ὑστέρημα

15. That as it was in the gathering of Manna, no man had the more or the leſſe for gathering more or leſſe, ſo it might be among fellow Chriſtians, they that had for the preſent leſſe poſſeſſions ſhould yet by ſupply from others have ſufficient, and they that had greater poſſeſſions, by relieving others, have no more left to them, then they had need of.

15. As it is written, † He that had gathered much, had nothing over, and he that had gathered little, had no lack.

† he that had much
* nay being more diligent he went out to you of his own accord, αὐθαίρετος δὲ ἐπῆλθε

16. And what I write to you for your advantage by way of care of (and adviſe to) you, it ſeems Titus hath had in his minde already, out of the ſame care of you, God be thanked who put it into his heart.

16. But thankes be to God, which put the ſame earneſt care into the heart of Titus for you.]

17. For he was very willing at the firſt word, nay, prevented my exhortation, and before he was ſpoken to, of his own free choice he went to you about it.

17. For indeed he accepted the exhortation, * but being more forward of his own accord he went unto you.]

18. And with him we ſent Luke (ſee note on Rom. 16. 6.) whoſe diligence in preaching the Goſpell thorough all Churches is ſo much commended,

18. And we have ſent with him the brother, † whoſe praiſe is in the Goſpell throughout all the Churches.

† he is praiſed for the Goſpell, οὗ ὁ ἔπαινος ἐν τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ

19. And whom the Biſhops in Synod ordain'd to goe along with me this journey, and was not by my ſelf choſen to it, (ſee 1 Cor. 16. 3.) to carry this collection (wherein I had done nothing, but as a ſervant and Officer made uſe of by the Macedonians) to the honour of God (whoſe ſervants they were that were thus reliev'd, and whoſe grace it was, that the Macedonians were ſo liberall) and to the ſtirring up your alacrity and forwardneſſe by their example.

19. And not that only, but who was alſo * choſen of the Churches to travell with us, with this † grace, which is adminiſtred by us to the glory of the * ſame Lord, and declaration of your ready minde,]

22. And with Titus and Luke, I have by conſent of the Churches v. 19. ſent a third, of whoſe induſtry and diligence we have often had experience, but in this buſineſſe found him much more willing to be induſtrious, upon the ſpeciall confidence he hath of your goodneſſe, and expected liberality.

And therefore it will concern you by your behaviour in this matter to demonſtrate your own Chriſtian charity, and to let them ſee, that what I have boaſted of you, hath not been without reaſon.

Notes on Chap. VIII.

a. Θέλειν

What θέλειν to will] ſignifies in this place will appear, by the ποιῆσαι to doe] precedent. For when [to will] goes before doing, as Phil. 2. 13. it doth, then it muſt be conceived to denote the reſolving of that which is after done, but when it is ſubſequent to doing, as here, then it cannot belong to that, but to ſome farther action ſtill future, either of the ſame kind with that formerly done, or of any other, which is ſpecified; That here it referres to ſome farther degree of liberality to be ſuperadded to what they had already done, appears by the enſuing exhortation to conſummate the work, v. 11. and by the mention of the προθυμία τοῦ θέλειν, the forwardneſſe to will, i.e. to reſolve to doe more, as they ſhould be able, In which reſpect it is, that c. 9. 2. Paul ſaith he hath boaſted of them, that they had (ἀπὸ πέρυσι, as here, from a year agoe) made a preparation for this new ſupply, for ſo [παρεσκεύασται Πεπροσκεύασται hath been prepared] ſignifies, as paſſives are oft uſed for reciprocalls. As for the τοῦτο ὑμῖν συμφέρει Συμφέρει this is profitable for you] in the former part of this verſe, though it may fitly be applied to ſeverall waies of profit, that their liberality would probably bring in unto them, yet it ſeems by what follows ch. 9. 3, 4. to referre peculiarly to the reputation of their liberality, that Paul had ſo proclaimed, which would render it a reproachfull thing to them, if they ſhould not make it good, according to their purpoſe and his boaſting of them.

CHAP. IX.

Paraphraſe.

* Now concerning the contribution περὶ μὲν γὰρ τῆς διακονίας

1.* FOR as touching the miniſtery to the ſaints, it is ſuperfluous for me to write to you.] 1. Now concerning this contribution to the poor Chriſtians of Judæa, I ſuppoſe it utterly ſuperfluous for me to uſe any arguments to exhort you to it.

† hath been prepared from a year agoe, παρεσκεύασται ἀπὸ πέρυσι

* the emulation which came from you ὁ ἐξ ὑμῶν ζῆλος

† But, or Now, δὲ

2. For I know the forwardneſſe of your mind, for which I boaſt of you to them of Macedonia, that Achaia † was ready a year agoe: and * your zeale hath provoked very many.] 2. For of your forwardneſſe therein I am ſo farre from doubting, that I have made boaſt of it to others, that the Chriſtians of all Achaia (of which Corinth was the chief city) have for a twelve month made a preparation to ſend a new ſupply, beyond that which they then did (ſee ch. 8. 10. and note a.) and the emulation to your example, or the opinion of your forwardneſſe hath ſtirred up, hath wrought much in Macedonia, made them very liberall.

† But, or Now, δὲ

3. † Yet I have ſent the brethren, leſt our boaſting of you ſhould be in vain in this behalf, that as I ſaid, ye may be ready,] 3. And that what I have thus boaſted of your preparation, may be found true, and that you may be indeed preapred before hand, and not ſurprized at my coming, I have ſent theſe bearers to you to give you warning,

4. Leſt happily if they of Macedonia come with me, and find you unprepared, we (that we ſay not, you) ſhould be * aſhamed in this ſame confident boaſting.] 4. Leſt if the Macedonians to whom I have boaſted of your forwardneſſe v. 2. come along with me to you, and find that you have not your ſupplies ready, it be matter of great ſhame to me, as it muſt be alſo to you (ſee c. 8. 10. note a.) that I have had the confidence (ſee note on Heb. 11. 2.) and vanity to boaſt thus of you without cauſe.

5. Therefore I thought it neceſſary to exhort the brethren, that they would goe before unto you, and make up before hand your bounty, † whereof ye had notice before, that the ſame might be ready, as a matter of bounty, not of covetouſneſſe.] 5. This is the reaſon for which theſe come now to you by my direction, that they may prepare and get together, and ſo complete and perfect that collection of yours which I have talkt of, that it may be ready as an act of beneficence, and liberality in you, before I come, and not as a collection gratingly extorted from you at my coming.

6. But this I ſay, He which ſoweth ſparingly, ſhall reap ſparingly; and he which ſoweth bountifully, ſhall reap bountifully.] 6. And for your encouragement, this ye muſt know, that the more liberality ye ſhew herein, the greater the advantages will be to you from God, that rewardeth ſuch charities, and that in proportion to the ſeverall degrees of it.

7. Every man according as he purpoſeth in his heart, ſo let him give, not grudgingly, or of neceſſity; for God loveth a chearfull giver.] 7. Whatſoever then ye have determined to give, let it be given chearfully, not with any trouble to part with it, not as if it were extorted from you, for if it be not done chearfully, 'twill never be accepted, much leſſe rewarded by God.

8. And God is able to † make all * grace abound towards you, that ye alwaies having all ſufficiency in all things, may † abound to every good work:] 8. And to this and I ſhall adde one argument more, which will ſatisfie your only fear (that ſuch liberality may bring your ſelves to ſtraits, or want) by telling you that God is the fountain of all plenty, and only diſpenſer of it, and is therefore able (and having oft promiſed it, is ſure to make it good) to make you the richer, not the poorer by your liberality, to make every almes you give, like the oyle in the cruiſe, to multiply (ſee v. 10.) as you poure it out, and ſo to give you continually a ſufficient portion of wealth, that you ſtill be able out of your abundance to ſupply others, and have enough for every object of charity that can be offered to you. 2.

9. (According to that which the Pſalmiſt ſaith Pſal. 112. where there are ſignall promiſes of wealth and riches in the houſe of a good man or righteous (i. e. of the liberall almeſ-giver) v. 3, & 9. and of bleſſing or abundance to his poſterity, v. 2. and of exaltation and honour unto him, v. 9. ſo that all wicked and covetous men ſhall look on him with envy and gnaſhing of teeth v. 10. (which Pſalme being made up not only of affirmations what God is able to doe, but of promiſes what he will certainly perform, and being here by the Apoſtle applied to this matter of encouraging men to liberal almeſ-giving, is in effect the aſſuring of the truth of that Old Teſtament-promiſe [of plenty to the Almeſ-giver] to belong alſo unto, and ſtand firm under the New Teſtament, and ſo conſequently, that all manner of temporal felicities are the portion of this righteous man, now ſtill under the Goſpel, which conſequently is the ſumme of the Apoſtles prayer ver. 10.)

9. (As it is written, He hath diſperſed abroad, he hath given to the poor, his righteouſneſſe remaineth forever.]

10. Now he that miniſtreth ſeed to the ſower, both miniſter bread for your food, and multiply your ſeed ſown, and increaſe the fruits of your righteouſneſſe)]

10. Now that God that furniſheth the liberal man (which giveth away that which he hath) with ſo much more, provide all neceſſaries for you, and make you the richer for your liberality, and encreaſe unto you thoſe fruits which are naturally the iſſue of liberality, a greater plenty for the future: (ſee note a.)

11. Being enriched in every thing to all bountifulneſſe, which cauſeth through us thankſgiving to God.]

11. Having enough to be very liberal at all times, which is a moſt deſirable condition, and that which brings in thankſgiving and glory to God.

12. For the * adminiſtration of this ſervice not only ſupplieth the want of the ſaints, but is abundant alſo by many thankſgivings unto God,]

12. This charitable and ſerviceable miniſtring to, and ſupplying of other mens wants, being not only a means to relieve thoſe Chriſtians that are in neceſſity (ſee note on Mar. 12. b.) and ſo a charity to our brethren, but alſo an invitation, and obligation of many mens gratitude unto God, and ſo an occaſion, if not a ſpeciall act, of piety alſo,

* diſtribution of this oblation, (ſee note on Lu. 1. b.)

13. While by the experiment of this miniſtration, they glorifie God for † your profeſſed ſubjection unto the Goſpel of Chriſt, and for your * liberall diſtribution unto them, and unto all men,]

13. Whilſt men that ſee and obſerve this charity, and diſtribution of yours to the diſtreſſed Chriſtians in Judæa, bleſſe and magnifie the name of God firſt, that ye are ſo ready to beleive and obey the Goſpel of Chriſt, to confeſſe Chriſt by doing what he commands, and ſecondly that by your liberality theſe poor ſaints, and all others in their ſympathy with them, doe receive ſo much benefit from you.

14. And by their prayer for you, which long after you, for the exceeding grace of God † in you.]

14. And laſtly they are hereby raiſed up to pray for you, out of that paſſionate love and affection toward you, which the ſight of the abundant virtues, and graces of God in you doe work in them.

† toward you

15. Thanks be unto God for his unſpeakable gift.]

15. For all this goodneſſe of God to you, and by you to others, his name be ever praiſed.

Notes on Chap. IX.

a. Περισσεύσαι χάριν

There is no way of rendring Θεὸς δυνατὸς ἐστι πάσαν χάριν περισσεῦσαι] but by putting περισσεύσαι in an active ſenſe to make abound, and that hath been formerly noted to be ordinary in the New Teſtament, (ſee note on Mar. 14. f.) The Greek wanting the Hebrew conjugation Hiphil, which denotes making to doe a thing, and having no way to ſupply it, but by uſing the active voice in that ſenſe, ſo as περισσεύειν ſhall not only ſignifie neutrally to abound, but alſo to make any man or thing to abound. Of which kind there be innumerable examples. And ſo the making their charity to abound toward them] here, i. e. Gods bleſſing their liberality, ſo that it ſhall enrich, in ſtead of impoveriſhing them, will be all one, with the encreaſing the fruits of their righteouſneſſe v. 10. their righteouſneſſe there ſignifying their charity, (as hath been oft ſhewn) and the plenty conſequent to their exerciſes of that virtue, being proportionable to the fruit that comes by ſowing (the hundredfold encreaſe which Chriſt promiſes even in this life to thoſe that forſake, or part with any thing for his ſake) and accordingly 'tis there joyn'd with multiplying their ſeed, where their acts of charity are figuratively call'd their ſeed, and the bleſſings conſequent thereto, the fruits of it.

Paraphraſe. CHAP. X.

1. NOw I * Paul my ſelf † beſeech you by the meekneſſe and ª gentleneſſe of Chriſt, who * in preſence am baſe among you, but being abſent, † am bold toward you:]

1. Now I, that Paul, that am ſo calumniated by ſome among you, and ſaid by way of reproach to be mild and contemptible, when I am perſonally preſent with you, but, when I am abſent, ſevere and confident toward you, I exhort you by the meekneſſe and gentleneſſe of Chriſt, which was ſo remarkable in him, and which I ſhall not be aſhamed to imitate, be I never ſo vilified for it, And as I exhort you, ſo

2. I beſeech God (or you) that at my coming, I may not have occaſion to exerciſe that ſeverity, which I think my ſelf obliged to exerciſe againſt ſome who accuſe me for a weak behaviour in my Apoſtleſhip, as either fearing or flattering of men, too mild, on one of thoſe grounds.

3. For though we walk in the fleſh, we doe not warre after the fleſh.]

For when the whole Church lies in diſobedience, thoſe acts of ſeverity are not ſo fit to be uſed, but when the reformation of the greater part is ſo conſpicuous, that it may be prudent to proceed againſt the refractary, then I ſhall not fail in my duty, but inflict theſe cenſures as ſhall be fit.

15. Not boaſting of things without our meaſure, that is of other mens labours, but having hope, when your faith is increaſed, that we ſhall be inlarged by you, * according to our rule abundantly,]

15. I doe not pretend any title to thoſe whom others have brought up in the Goſpel, but yet entertain my ſelf with an hope, that as your Church encreaſeth in the faith, ſo my province will become the larger in length or extent, I ſhall have more proſelytes to Chriſt by your merchandizing and traffick with other countreys,

* in reſpect of our line κατὰ τὸν κανόνα ἡμῶν

16. And ſo preach the Goſpel farre beyond Achaia, without invading any other mans poſſeſſion or province, without entring upon thoſe parts, where the Goſpel had been formerly preacht by others. e.

17. But he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.]

17. For it is a moſt ridiculous thing for any man to rejoice or glory in any thing but in having done that which is acceptable to God, in diſcharge of his duty.

18. For, not he that commendeth himſelf is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth.]

18. For 'tis not our own good opinion of our ſelves, which qualifies us for reward, or acceptation, but the ſincerity of our actions before God, which may render us acceptable in his ſight.

a. Ἐπιείκια is the ordinary word of the philoſopher, taken from him by the Lawyers to ſignifie mitigation of exact or ſtrict juſtice, when that is not ſo agreeable to rules of charity, and ſo it notes in generall the fit, proper temper, which is to be obſerved in all things; Ἐπιεικὲς, ſaith Heſychius, καθῆκον, φέρον, σεμνὸν, ἰσχυρὸν, that which is fit, decent, due, &c. And according to the diverſity of matter about which it is converſant, ſo it hath ſeverall notions in the New Teſtament. In this place being ſpoken of Chriſt, and joyn'd with that meekneſſe, which was ſo imitable in him, Mat. 11. 29. it ſignifies gentleneſſe, or clemency, as that is oppoſed to ſeverity in puniſhing, which is here expreſt by θαῤῥῆσαι, and τολμῆσαι, and πεποίθησις, daring, boldneſſe, and confidence. But Phil. 4. 5. τὸ ἐπιεικὲς ſeems to belong to another ſort of gentleneſſe, that of the lambe, which before or under the ſhearer is dumb, and opens not the mouth, viz: a chearfull endurance of all the perſecutions that were upon the Chriſtians at that time; To this the context there inclines, which uſhered it in, with a repeated exhortation to rejoice in the Lord alwaies, in adverſity, as well as proſperity (and ſo 1 Theſſ. 5. 16.) which being contrary to the joy of the world, moſt fitly denotes that χαρὰ καὶ ἀγαλλίασις Mat. 5. 12. (rejoicing and being exceeding glad, rejoicing and leaping for joy, and thinking it all joy, Jam. 1. 2.) which is upon their being perſecuted for Chriſt, and ſo likewiſe enforced with a reaſon agreeable to this matter, for the Lord is at hand, the time of your redemption from your preſſures drawes neer, Heb. 10. 37. And accordingly 'tis attended, (as Chriſts inſtructions to the Apoſtles are in this caſe, Mat. 10. 19.) with μὴ μεριμνᾶτε, a prohibition of all ſollicitous thoughts, referring the whole matter to prayer, and ſupplication to God, ver. 6. This word is again uſed Jam. 3. 17. the wiſdome from above is ἐπιεικὴς gentle, which following peaceable, and being attended with other words of that nature, muſt be rendred in order to that, ſo as to ſignifie a receding from his own ſtrict right, in order to peace, as εὐπειθὴς that follows immediately, notes an eaſineſſe to be perſwaded of that which belongs to the excuſe of another, or mitigating of his fault, as 'tis ſaid of charity, that it beleives all things, 1 Cor. 13. 7. and accordingly theſe qualities of the wiſdome from above are ſhut up ver. 18. under the title of peace to them that love or make peace. So 1 Tim. 3. 3. and Tit. 3. 2. ἐπιεικεῖς are joyn'd with ἄμαχοι in both places, and ſo note the contrary to μάχαι, all kind of contentions, and are attended in the latter place with ſhewing all meekneſſe to all men.

b. That the ὅπλα τῆς στρατείας ἡμῶν, weapons of our warfare] which are here ſaid not to be weake, but mighty to God, ſignifie the cenſures of the Church, may thus appear probable, 1. by the context, where the Apoſtle ſpeaks of proceeding againſt offenders, which he calls θαῤῥῆσαι εἰς ὑμᾶς, being bold toward them, v. 1. 2. and ἐκδικῆσαι πᾶσαν ἀκοὴν to avenge diſobedience, v. 6. and this according to the ἐξουσία or authority, which the Lord had given for edification (building them up farther in the faith and all Chriſtian virtue) and not for deſtruction, and then he adds a caution to remove a calumny or prejudice, that ſome had againſt him, that his Letters were ſevere, and ſo he, when abſent, but farre from all ſeverity, when he came among them, κατ' ὄψιν ταπεινὸς ἐν ὑμῖν, vile, or tame, or unconſiderable, when he was among them, i.e. that in his abſence he threatned cenſures, but when he came, would not inflict them, which he calls ἐκφοβεῖν δι' ἐπιστολῶν, terrifying by Letters, ver. 9. and ἐπιστολαὶ βαρεῖαι καὶ ἰσχυραί, weighty and powerfull letters, ver. 10. i.e. ſevere, and terrifying, which yet he threatens ſhall be equall'd by his actions, when he comes among them ver. 11. And ſo all along, the buſineſſe is of the cenſures of the Church, and ſo in all reaſon in this verſe alſo; Secondly, this will appear by the words themſelves, for as στρατεία ἡμῶν] ſignifies confeſtly the Apoſtles miniſtery (ſee note on 1 Tim. 1. c.) according to the importance of the Hebrew צָבָא, which is ſometimes rendred στρατεία warfare, ſometimes λειτουργία miniſtery, So ὅπλα τῆς στρατείας, weapons of warfare] are the means to diſcharge their duty in the miniſtry. Of which nature, though there be more, Prayer, Preaching, Catechizing, adminiſtration of Sacraments, Confirmation, &c. yet the antecedents and conſequents here, belonging to the buſineſſe of cenſures, muſt needs incline it to that notion peculiarly. Then that theſe are not σαρκικὰ carnall,] ſignifies that they are not weake, for ſo σὰρξ fleſh frequently ſignifies, as here v. 3. though we walk in the fleſh, i.e. are weak, as men, and have no power over you, yet as Officers of Chriſt we are not, our miniſtrey is with power, and therefore follows ἀλλὰ δυνατὰ τῷ Θεῷ, but mighty, or powerfull through, or to God, or perhaps exceeding powerfull, and that εἰς καθαίρεσιν ὀχυρωμάτων to the pulling down of ſtrong holds, i.e. either the pulling down all fortreſſes, that maintain or ſecure a man in ſin, or more critically, as καθαίρεσις ſignifies excommunication it ſelf, v. 8. and c. 13. 10. and generally in the Canons of the Councels; and then ὀχυρώματα ſtrong holds will ſignifie all impenitent, obdurate, impregnable ſinners called v. 15. every high thing that exalts it ſelf againſt the knowledge of God, i. e. againſt piety and Chriſtianity. And ſo the plain meaning of the verſe will be, that the Apoſtles cenſures were exceeding powerfull, and that power exerciſed in excommunicating, and delivering up to Satan, ἵνα παιδευθῶσι, that they may be diſciplin'd, 1 Tim. 1. 20. and thereby ſubduing contumacious offenders. According to that of the writer of the Anſwers ad Orthodoxos, Ὅτι διὰ τὴν μακροθυμίαν τῶν ὑβριζομένων ὁ γένηται διόρθωσις, τότε ἡ ἀποτομία τῆς μακροθυμίας τοῖς ἀδιορθώτοις ἴσως χρησιμωτέρα, when by clemency offenders are not reformed, then exciſion to the incorrigible is more uſefull then clemency. Agreeable to which is that of Pletho in his ſcholia on Zoroaſter, Αἱ ποιναὶ ὅτι αἱ κολάσεις διόρθωσις, ἀγαθόν τῶν ἀνθρώπων εἰσι, ὅτι ζωπυρεῖσι τὸν ἀπόντα τῆς ἀρετῆς αὐτὸν, τῇ δειλίᾳ ἐγκαθεύδοντα, The revengefull furies, or devils, or puniſhments doe gripe men to bring them off from ſin, and ſet them on virtue.

c. Of the agones among the Grecians, particularly among the Corinthians, and of δρόμος racing, one of them we have formerly ſpoken (notes on 1 Cor. 9. c. d. e.) and ſo again diſtinctly of κανὼν (note f.) the white line, which bounded or markt out the path, or race; To this the Apoſtle here referres, making his Apoſtleſhip or preaching of the Goſpel, to be his ſpirituall exerciſe, or running as it were in a race, his ὁ κανὼν τοῦτο, and then the province or dioceſe, to which he is by God deſign'd, and ſent to preach, is his μέτρον τοῦ κανόνος ὃ ἐμέτρησεν ἡμῖν ὁ Θεὸς, the compaſſe, or ſtage of ground, which by that white line in the race, as 'twere, God hath markt out to him, to run in, and contend, and obtain his prize. Beyond or out of which line he that runs, or pretends to have to doe, he doth καυχᾶσθαι εἰς τὰ ἄμετρα, boaſt without his meaſure, and ὑπερεκτείνειν ἑαυτὸν overextend himſelf, v. 14.

d. Φθάνειν

That the word φθάνειν] is agoniſticall alſo, ſee note on Rom. 9. k. and ſo conſtantly it ſignifies coming foremoſt to the goale, or being foremoſt in the running toward it, and ſo it ſignifies here, preaching the Goſpel among the Corinthians, before any body elſe had been there, for as it is ſaid, 1 Cor. 3. 6. Paul planted, i.e. firſt brought the Goſpel among them.

e. Ἀλλότριος κανὼν

The ἀλλότριος κανὼν] is that province which ſome body elſe hath undertaken; The κανὼν] as before, denoting the line, by which his race was terminated, and the ἀλλότριος] referring to the cuſtome in the ſtadia forementioned, that each of the racers had his path, where he was to run, chalkt out to him, and if one did ſtep over into the others path, he did ὑπερεκτείνεσθαι, extend himſelf (or run) over his line. In reference to this the Apoſtle here ſaith, that he had ſome hope that he might μεγαλυνθῆναι εἰς περισσείαν, enlarge his courſe in length, as it were, by running farther then the goale, that was firſt ſet him, i.e. goe farther in preaching the Goſpel, and yet not goe over his line, i.e. not run over into the other mans path, or race, but κατὰ κανόνα ἡμῶν, keep within his own white or line, which divided his province from other mens on the other ſide of him.

CHAP. XI.

Paraphraſe.

* I would you would pardon me a little piece of folly, Ὀφελον ἀνείχεσθέ μου μικρόν τι τῆς ἀφροσύνης

1. *WOuld to God you could bear with me a little in my folly, and indeed bear with me:] 1. The fear that I have that you ſhould be ſeduced, tempts me to doe that, which you will be apt to count boaſting, and think me to be a fool for doing ſo, viz: to praiſe my ſelf, and magnifie the pains that I have taken among you, This piece of folly you may doe well to pardon in me:

2. For I am jealous over you with godly jealouſie; for I have †[a] eſpouſed you to one husband, that I may preſent you as a chaſt virgin to Chriſt.] 2. For 'tis cauſed by nothing but my kindneſſe to you, my zeal to your good, and jealouſie that other men may get away your love, and eſteem from me; which is a jealouſie not ſo much for my ſelf, as for God, that he ſhould loſe a Church beloved by him. For I have been to you as that officer among the Grecians was to their virgins, I have taken upon me the educating and forming of you, the cultivating and fitting of you, the taking care and watching over you, that ſo I might preſent you a fit and a pure ſpouſe to Chriſt.

3. But I fear leſt by any means, as the ſerpent beguiled Eve through his ſubtilty, ſo your minds ſhould be corrupted from the ſimplicity that is * in Chriſt.] 3. But there being ſuch deceivers entred into the Church, Simon Magus and his followers, uſing ſorcery to beguile, and infuſe his falſities, I have reaſon to fear that you may be corrupted from that purity and integrity which ought to be in Chriſtians.

4. For if he that cometh preacheth another Jeſus, whom we have not preached, or if ye receive another ſpirit, which ye have not received, or another Goſpel which ye have not accepted, ye might † well bear with him.] 4. For if ſome other teachers that are come among you, preach another Chriſt, ſhake the whole foundation of your religion, promiſe you more extraordinary miraculous, ſpirituall gifts, then thoſe which from us you have received, and in ſumme preach another Goſpel to you, then you may give me leave (it being more then time) to magnifie my ſelf, and expoſtulate with you, whether they come to you, (or any one of them) with ſuch authority, as I come, or whether there be any appearance or ſhew of reaſon why you ſhould preferre them before me.

* that I have no way come ſhort of thoſe which are the moſt eminent Apoſtles, οὐδὲν ὑστέρησα τῶν ὑπὲρ λίαν Ἀποστόλων

5. For I ſuppoſe, * I was not a whit behind the very chiefeſt Apoſtles.] 5. For not to compare my ſelf with the deceivers, I may juſtly compare with the moſt eminent of the true Apoſtles.

† but in every thing we are made manifeſt among all men toward you, ἐν παντὶ φανερωθέντες ἐν πᾶσιν εἰς ὑμᾶς

6. But though I be rude in ſpeech, yet not in knowledge; † but we have been throughly made manifeſt among you in all things.] 6. And if it be objected to me, and perhaps truly, that my language hath nothing extraordinary in it, yet ſure nothing can be objected againſt my skill, my explaining the myſteries of the Goſpel (ſee note on 1 Cor. 2. c.) but in our preaching and behaviour toward you, we are acknowledged by all men not to come ſhort of any other Apoſtle, in any piece of knowledge or revelation uſefull for you.

7. Have I committed an offence in abaſing my ſelf that you might be exalted, becauſe I have preached to you the Goſpel of God freely?] 7. Sure it ought not to be eſteemed a fault in me (and yet I have been guilty of no other that might make me vile in your eyes) that I have ſo much tendred your advantages, and ſo little mine own, that all my preaching among you hath put you to no kind of charge.

8. I robbed other Churches, taking wages of them to doe you ſervice: 9. And when I was preſent with you, and wanted, I was chargeable to no man: for that which was lacking to me, the brethren which came from Macedonia ſupplied: and in all things I have kept my ſelf from being burdenſome to you, and ſo will keep my ſelf.] 8, 9. Nay I have been beholden to other Churches, receiving proviſion from them, that I might preach freely to you, And when I fell ſhort at my being with you, and had not wherewithall to ſupply my wants, yet I troubled none of you to make it up, but as ſometimes I laboured with my hands, and earned my living, 1 Cor. 4. 12. & 9. 6. ſo at other times I received ſupply from the Philippians, Phil 4. 15, 16, 18 they came from Macedonia, and ſo have neither yet put you to any charge, nor mean I ever to doe ſo.

10. As the truth of Chriſt is in me, no man ſhall ſtop me of this boaſting in the regions of Achaia.] 10. As I am an Apoſtle of Chriſt, and as there is any ſincerity in me, I will not be deprived of this matter of boaſting through all Achaia, I will receive nothing for my pains or relief in all thoſe regions.

11. And doe not think 'tis any want of love, that I make this reſolution, 'God knows that is not the reaſon.

11. Wherefore? becauſe I love you not? God knoweth.]

12. But the only cauſe of my reſolution, which I will keep ſtedfaſtly, is this, that they that would fain find ſome fault with me, and magnifie themſelves before me, may not find any ground of doing ſo, but rather find me before them, and have ſomewhat to imitate in me, in that very particular, wherein they think they exceed me.

12. But what I doe, that I will doe, that I may cut off * occaſion from them which deſire occaſion, that wherein they glory, they may be found even as we.] * advantage ἀφορμὰς

13. For the truth is, theſe men that come to infuſe falſe doctrines into you, behave themſelves as cunningly, as they can, and doe labour to imitate, and ſeem to doe thoſe very things, that we true Apoſtles doe.

13. † For ſuch are falſe Apoſtles, deceitfull workers, transforming themſelves into the Apoſtles of Chriſt.] † For ſuch falſe Apoſtles are deceitfull workmen, Οἱ γὰρ τοιοῦτοι ψευδαπόστολοι ἐργάται δόλιοι

14. And 'tis no unuſuall matter for deceivers and ſeducers to doe ſo, for Satan himſelf pretends to doe thoſe things that the good Angels doe, makes as if he meant you all kindneſſe, when he comes to deſtroy you.

14. And no marvell, for Satan himſelf is transformed into an Angel of light.]

15. And therefore 'tis not any thing ſtrange, if ſeducing hereticks imployed by him, doe imitate the actions of the Apoſtles of Chriſt; but according to the hypocriſie of their actions ſo ſhall their ends be.

15. Therefore it is no great thing, if his miniſters alſo be transformed as the miniſters of righteouſneſſe, whoſe end ſhall be according to their works.]

16. There will be no great reaſon that this my glorying ſhould make you count me imprudent, or if it doe, 'tis no great matter, I will venture that rather then ſuffer ſycophants to ſeduce and corrupt you.

16. I ſay again, let no man think me a fool, * if otherwiſe, yet as a fool receive me, that I may boaſt my ſelf a little.] * or if ei ἐι

17. Yet what I ſay in this matter, I deliver not as a piece of Goſpel, but as an external incidental diſcourſe in this matter, of which the falſe Apoſtles boaſt, and I have much more reaſon then they, (ſee note on Heb. 11. 2.)

17. That which I ſpeak, I ſpeak it not after the Lord, but as it were fooliſhly, in this confidence of boaſting.]

18. And ſeeing others think fit to glory, or boaſt of ſuch extrinſick things, as theſe, I may have leave to doe the like.

18. Seeing that many glory after the fleſh, I will glory alſo.]

19. For wiſe men are not wont to be angry, but are many times pleaſed, to ſee others play the fools, and ſo doe you in many other things.

19. For ye † ſuffer fools gladly, ſeeing ye your ſelves are wiſe.] † doe with pleaſure bear with fools ἡδέως ἀνέχεσθε τῶν ἀφρόνων

20. I am ſure you can bear with greater matters, you can give men leave to take you captive to their doctrines, how falſe ſoever, to deprive you of all you have, to inſult over you, to uſe you as contumeliouſly as is poſſible.

20. For ye ſuffer if a man bring you into bondage, if a man devour you, if a man take of you, if a man * exalt himſelf, if a man ſmite you on the face.] * inſult ἐπαίρεται

21. Which I tell you, to put you in mind, how reproachfully you have been uſed by them. As indeed I have alſo been ſet at nought, and vilified by them. For which there hath been little reaſon. For whatſoever reaſon any of them hath to think well of himſelf, I have ſure as much cauſe as he (though to ſay ſo, may goe for folly in me, as being a kind of boaſting.)

21. I ſpeak as concerning reproach, †as though we had been weak: howbeit, whereinſoever any is bold, I ſpeak fooliſhly, I am bold alſo.] † as we alſo have ὡς ἡμεῖς

22,23. Theſe ſeducers boaſt they are Hebrews, and Iſraelites, and of Abrahams ſtock, and then that they are Apoſtles of Chriſt. And ſure I am every one of theſe, and for the laſt, I cannot but ſay it, though it will be deemed boaſting and folly in me, that I am more then an ordinary Apoſtle, one that have taken more pains, ſuffered more of ſcourgings and impriſonments, and dangers of imminent death, then any of the very twelve Apoſtles.

22. Are they Hebrewes? ſo am I: are they Iſraelites? ſo am I: are they the ſeed of Abraham? ſo am I:

23. Are they miniſters of Chriſt? I ſpeak as a fool, I am more: in * labours more abundant, in ſtripes above meaſure, in priſons more frequent, in deaths oft:] * toyles κόποις

b. 24. Five times was I ſcourged of the Jewes without any mitigation, with the greateſt ſeverity that the law would permit.

24. Of the Jewes five times received I [b] forty ſtripes ſave one:]

c. 25, 26, 27. Thrice was I beaten with wands, probably by the Roman officers, (ſee note b.) once by a tumult of a ſeditious multitude of Zealots, I was without any judiciall proceſſe ſtoned, and left for dead, Act. 14. 19. and ſtill from time to time I have been exerciſed in all kinds and degrees of diſtreſſes:

25. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I ſtoned, thrice I ſuffered ſhipwrack, a night and a day I have been in the deep.

26. In journeying often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils by my own countrey-men, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderneſſe, in perils in the ſea, in perils among falſe brethren:

27. In wearineſſe and painfulneſſe, in watchings often, in hunger and thirſt, in faſtings often, in cold and nakedneſſe.]

28. And, not to name all, the many daily emergent imployments, that lie upon me, in reſpect of the ſollicitude I have for all things that concern any Church, eſpecially of my plantation, are a ſufficient evidence of what I ſhould ſay, if I did think fit to boaſt.

28. Beſides † thoſe things that are without, * that which cometh upon me daily, the care of all the Churches] † other things that I omit τῶν παρεκτὸς * the concurrence of buſineſſe that comes daily upon me, the ſollicitude for all- ἡ ἐπισύ-

29. If any man be ſick or ill-affected in ſpirit, I am in ſympathy with him, in care how to relieve, and get him up again, If any be fallen into ſin, or fallen back from Diſciplelhip, I am conſtantly inflamed with a holy zeal, to get him out of it.

29. Who is weak, and I am not weak? who is † offended, and I * burn not?] † ſcandalized σκανδαλίζεται * am not on fire πυροῦμαι

30. If I muſt needs glory, I will glory of the things, which concern mine infirmities.]

30. And theſe my ſufferings, are the only things which I ſhall think fit to boaſt of, now I am by my calumniators conſtrain'd to doe ſo.

31. The God and father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which is bleſſed for evermore, knoweth that I lie not.

Notes on Chap. XI.

a. Ἡρμοσάμην ὑμᾶς ἑνὶ ἀνδρὶ

The vulgar ſeems to have read theſe words ἡρμοσάμην ὑμᾶς ἑνὶ ἀνδρὶ, with a comma after them, and accordingly render them deſponſi vos uni viro, I have eſpouſed you to one husband, according to that of * Julius Pollux, ὁ δὲ πόσις & ἐγγυᾶ, ἁρμόζῃ, ἐὰν τινὲς & πολλῶν ἁρμοσῶν & μνησθεὶς ἐγγυᾷ, making ἐγγυᾶν eſpouſe all one with ἁρμόζειν. But the more probable punctation is by reading it without any comma, till after ἁγνὴν παρθένον, and then the notion of the word ἁρμόζειν muſt be taken from that uſe of the word which is agreeable to the office of the ἁρμοσταὶ, or ἁρμόνιοι, among the Lacedemonians. Among the magiſtrates of that city thoſe were two prime names, and between them ſome ſleight difference. The ἁρμοσταὶ were a kind of provincial Rulers (placed by * Nic: Cragius among the μέγιστα ἀρχαὶ, the prime magiſtrates of that city) ſent to govern the provinces, or confederate cities, and preſerve them in their fidelity, and were ſaith † Vlpian ſo called διὰ τὸ ἁρμόζειν τὸν βίον & πολιτῶν τοῖς & Λακεδαιμονίων, becauſe they conformed the manners of the citizens to thoſe of the Lacedemonians, for ſo ἁρμόζειν ſignifies to adapt or conform. So ſaith Phavorinus out of Eratoſthenes, ἁρμοσταὶ οἱ ὑπὸ Λακεδαιμονίων εἰς τὰς ὑπηκόους πόλεις ἀρχοντες ἐπιτιμητάρχοι, the governours that are ſent by the Lacedemonians to the cities under them. Theſe are by Heſychius call'd ἁρμοστῆρες, by * Plutarch ἐπιστάται and φύλακες, Overſeers and Guardians. From whence it is that † Theophraſtus obſerves that the Lacedemonians ſending magiſtrates to the provinces, ſtyle them much more commodiouſly ἁρμοστὰς, then the Athenians doe ἐπιτρόπους & φύλακας. From whence alſo it is that in the Chriſtian Church the antient author that goes under the name of Dionyſius Areopagita, calls biſhops ἁρμοστὰς. But then the Ἁρμόσται (which ſeem more peculiarly to belong to the uſe of the word in this place) were a peculiar ſort of governours, which had to doe with the education of women, eſpecially for the forming of their lives and manners, and breeding of them, (as among the Athenians γυναικονόμοι.) from the verb ἁρμόζω, becauſe they were ſet over them to fit and order their manners, and make them regular and harmonicall, a kind of Cenſors of manners among them. So ſaith Heſychius and Phavorinus in the ſame words, Ἁρμόστρια ἀρχή τις ἐν Λακεδαίμονι ὑπὲρ τῆς ἀνατροφῆς τῶν γυναικῶν, 'twas an office in Lacedemon to bring up and breed women, And this is the notion of ἁρμοσάμην] here, I am your ἁρμόστρια (ſee Tit. 2. a.) ſet over your congregation, as he over a ſingle virgin to breed and fit you, that I may preſent you to Chriſt, a pure virgin. &c.

b. Τετυφλῶσθαι ἀπὸ μιᾶς

Of this puniſhment of S. Pauls theſe four things are to be obſerved, 1. that S. Paul, as a Roman, was not to be whipt, Ex Lege Portiâ, and therefore Act. 22. 24. when the Tribune had commanded him to be beaten thus, underſtanding he was a Roman, he diſmiſt him, and was afraid, ſaith S. Luke, becauſe he had bound him; 2dly, that he was yet ſubject, as a Jew, to the lawes of the Jewes, which were yet in force, and ſo was ſubjected to this Jewiſh puniſhment, as a Jew; 3dly, that he was dealt with as a robuſtious offender, in ſuffering ſo oft the utmoſt extremity of the Jewiſh law, when they that were weake, or which upon any other ſcore, had any mitigation, were not uſed ſo ſeverely; according to that of Maimonides Hil: Sanhedrim c. 17. They inflict, ſaith he, no more then forty ſtripes, though he be as ſtrong as Samſon, but if he be weak they abate of that number; 4thly, that that ſumme of thirty nine was the ſolemne proportion in the Jewiſh puniſhments, when they were moſt ſeverely inflicted. So in Joſephus, of one that had accuſed his wife falſly of the loſſe of her virginity before marriage, ἐκέλευσε πληγὰς τριακοντα μιᾶς λείπους λαμβάνειν, let him extend himſelf and receive 39 ſtripes. For when the number, which might not be exceeded, was by the law defined to be forty, Deut. 25. 3. and when the cuſtome was taken up of executing this puniſhment with a rod of three branches, and ſo of giving three ſtrokes at one blow (or, as it is in Maccoth c. 3. §. 12. with one twiſted cord, unto which two more were faſtened) every ſtroke conſequently going for three, (as Maimonides affirms in Sanhedr: c. 17. §. 2.) It was conſequently impoſſible to inflict more ſtripes, then thirty nine, unleſſe they exceeded to two and forty, and ſo that of thirty nine was the laſt among thoſe that were lawfull, See Talmud Babyl: in Maccoth, c. 3. As for the beating with rods which follows, ver. 25. that differs from this of the ſcourging, the ῥάβδοι rods being wands or cudgels, a bundle of which was carried before the Roman Conſul, and he that carried them call'd ῥαβδοῦχος, which makes it probable, that this was a Roman ſort of puniſhment, and ſo here differenced from the ſcourging with twiſted cords, which was ὑπὸ Ἰουδαίων inflicted by the Jewes (ſee note on Lu. 23. b.) howſoever ſo much diſtinguiſht from the other, as rods and ſcourges differ. ῥαβδίζεσθαι

To what paſſage of S. Paul's ſtory this of his being a day and a night ἐν τῷ βυθῷ in the deep] doth belong, cannot be ſhewed out of ſcripture. Tis not altogether improbable what Beda l. quæſt: qu: 3. tit. 8. ſaith out of Theodorus Tarſenſis, that in Cyzicum (which is in the Propontis, a famous city) there is a priſon, which for the depth of it under ground is called βυθὸς, or the bottome of the ſea, a moſt noyſome filthy priſon, as in Athens there was one called βάραθρον hell, at Syracuſe Λατομία the mineral, and many the like in other places, places, see Suidas in the word Βάραθρον. In this as a most infamous prison S. Paul might well be cast, passing from Troas to that city, though S. Luke, who reports not things particularly, save when he himself was present, make no mention of it. And indeed whatsoever else may be meant by the word ῥυδὸν, S. Luke seems not to have made mention of this passage, there being no reason to apply that of Act. 27. to it, the Epistle being written before that time, in the compasse of the Macedonian progresse, Act. 20. 1. and if it might be conceived to be written after it, that would more reasonably be defined to be one of his three shipwracks foregoing here.

The Gassanii reigned in Syria some say 400, others 600 years, many of them were called Harethi, or Areta, which is the name of the King here. See M^r Pocockes notes on Gregorius Abul Faraiius his story of the Arabians p. 77, 78. d. Ἀρέτας

Paraphrase.

CHAP. XII.

1. But I shall give over these things, for if I should goe on in it, I should then come to mention the visions and revelations, which I have had from God.

1.* IT is not expedient for me doubtlesse, to glory, † I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord.] * But it δὴ † for I shall come ἐλεύσομαι γὰρ

2. I know one that was transported in a vision by the Spirit of Christ, i. e. I my self about fourteen years past was in an extasie, Act. 22. 18. such an one that I am not able to say whether I were bodily removed, and carried to the third heaven, the place of Gods glorious residence, or whether only in a vision such representations were made to me remaining upon the earth.

2. 2. * I knew [a] a man in Christ above fourteen years agoe, whether in the body I cannot tell, or whether out of the body, I cannot tell; God knoweth: such a one † caught up to the third heaven.] * I know οἶδα † snatcht as farre as ἁρπαγέντα ἕως

3. I say I know not which of these it was, God only knows.

3. And I knew such a man (whether in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell, God knoweth)]

4. But whether bodily or in vision, me thought I was in the highest heaven ver. 2. here called paradise in respect of the joyes that dwell there, and had such revelations made to me by an Angel from God, as were wonderfull to consider, but which I was forbidden to declare to others.

4. How that he was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which is not lawfull for a man to utter.]

5. And though I have this abundant matter of glorying, yet shall I not make use of it, any farther, or more plainly, but boast only of my sufferings for Christ.

5. Of such a one will I glory, yet of my self I will not glory, but in mine infirmities.]

6. For if I would speak of this, I justly might, for it is most certainly true, but I will say no more of this subject, for I desire not to put men into any other opinion of me, then what they have from those more visible evidences, my ordinary constant actions, or words.

6. For though I would desire to glory, I shall not be a fool; for I will say the truth. But now I forbear, lest any man should think of me above * that which he seeth me to be, or that he heareth of me,] * what he sees me, or hears any thing from me, ὃ βλέπει με ἢ ἀκούει τι ἐξ ἐμοῦ

7. And indeed after I had these high transcendent revelations, that I might not be elevated with them, a sharp affliction was sent me in mercy by God, but inflicted on me by Satan, and some instruments of his, who dealt very roughly with me, and this was by God designed to keep me humble.

b. 7. And lest I should be exalted above measure through the † abundance of revelations, there was given to me a thorn * in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure.] † height ὑπεραίρωμαι * to-σκόλοψ

8. And I earnestly prayed to God to be delivered from it.

8. For this thing I besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me.]

9. And the onely answer I received was this, It is enough for thee that what I doe is for thy good; afflictions are the means to doe the Christian most good, the greater the pressures are, the more visible is the perfection of the divine assistance, nay afflictions therefore are the things I rejoice in (see Heb. 3. a.) more then any thing, even then revelations themselves, as the means by which the power of Christ, and his presence may appear more visibly upon me, (see note on Rom. 9. b.) then by any other means it could, even in as glorious a manner, as that wherein God exhibited himself in the Ark.

9. And he said unto me My † grace is sufficient for thee; for my strength is made perfect in weaknesse. Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may * rest upon me.] † favour χάρις * inhabit ἐπισκηνώσῃ

10. This therefore of diseases, and afflictions, & reproaches, and persecutions for Christ, is a thing, with which I am perfectly pleased, I have nothing of exception against them, for in time of afflictions, the strength of Christ is more eminently visible in me, the heavier the pressures are, the greater supports I have from him.

10. Therefore I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christs sake: for when I am weak, then am I strong.]

11. You see how vain I am in boasting, yet your calumnies have made it necessary for me to doe so, For sure I have done, and suffered as much as any the most valued Apostle, though indeed I have no reason to have any opinion of my self for all this.

11. I am become a fool in glorying, ye have compelled me: for I ought to have been commended of you: for in nothing am I behind the very chiefest Apostles, though I be nothing.]

12. If patience of whatsoever sufferings for the Gospels sake, if working of miracles of all kinds be able to testifie a man to be sent and authorized by Christ, (as beyond all other things that is most proper to doe it) then sure doth it appear that I am an Apostle, in despite of my calumniators.

12. Truly the signes of an Apostle were wrought among you in all patience, in signes, and wonders, and mighty deeds.]

13. For

* wherein you have received diminution more then the rest of the Churches ἐν τίσιν ἐλαττώθητε

13. For what is it * wherein ye were inferior to other Churches, except it be that I my self was not burdensome to you? forgive me this wrong.] 13. For there is no Church that hath had more pains taken among them, more gifts bestowed for the building them up, more of any thing that is needfull, then ye have had from me, the onely thing wherein ye differ from others is, that all hath been done without any charge of yours, and if this be a wrong, you will easily, I suppose, forgive it me.

14. Behold the third time I am ready to come to you, and I will not be burdensome to you, for I seek not yours, but you; for the children ought not to lay up for the parents, but the parents for the children.] 14. I have now made a third resolution (see c. 1. 16.) to come shortly among you, and I will doe it without putting you to any charge, for I covet not your possessions but your salvation, and as a parent I desire to doe all manner of good to you, and to receive none from you.

15. And I will very gladly spend and be spent for you, though the more abundantly I love you, the lesse I be loved.] 15. And I will offer up my self most cheerfully for the good of your soules, exhaust all the small goods I have, and venture even my life for you, and never be discouraged, though as my love and the effects thereof encrease toward you, so yours lessen toward me.

16. But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless being crafty, I caught you with guile.] 16. But it is by some among you suggested against me; that although I never received any pay from you for the preaching the Gospell, yet I have cunningly and under hand gotten a great deal from you.

17. Did I make a gain of you by any of them whom I sent unto you?] 17. If this have any truth in it, let it appear, have I done this by any of those whom I have sent to you?

† I perswaded or besought Παρεκάλεσα * the brother τὸν ἀδελφὸν † any of * Doe you again think Πάλαι δοκεῖτε † make apologies ἀπολογούμεθα

18. † I desired Titus, and with him I sent * a brother: did Titus make † a gain of you? walked we not in the same spirit? walked we not in the same steps.] 18. I perswaded Titus to come to you (see c. 9. 5.) and sent Luke along with him, did Titus or the other make any kinde of gain of you? did he defraud you of ought? did not he behave himself just after the same manner, as I had done before?

19 * Again, think you that we † excuse our selves unto you? we speak before God in Christ: but we doe all things, dearly beloved, for your edifying.] 19. Do not think as formerly ye have done, that what I thus say is spoken largely, as to take off the objections, which you have against me, by some fair specious colours and excuses? No, in the sight of God I speak the very perfect truth, and would not say it for my own sake, were it not in probability, to tend to your good, to take you off (by my giving this account of my self) from the factious courses, which through admiration of others mens persons, ye are engaged in.

* emulations ζῆλοι

20. For I fear, lest when I come, I shall not finde you such as I would, and that I shall be found unto you such as ye would not, lest there be debates, * envyings, wraths, strifes, back-bitings, whisperings, swellings, tumults;] 20. For I would fain prevent what I see too probable, that when I come to you, we shall neither of us be much pleased at the meeting, not I with you, seeing you seduced and corrupted, nor you with me, when I shall be forced to inflict censures upon you, I mean, lest those sparks of faction and division that are among you, break out into flames.

21. And lest when I come again, my God will humble me among you, and that I shall bewaile many that have sinned already, and have not repented of the uncleanesse, and fornication, and lasciviousnesse, which they have committed.] 21. And I be forced to exercise severity among you, to inflict censures on many of those who had formerly offended, and been warn'd, (if not punish) by my former Epistle, and have not yet reformed and forsaken those base unnaturall sins to which the heathen idol feasts had betray'd them. See note on 1 Cor. 5. c. and 2 Cor. 2. 2. and c. 13. 2.

Annotations on Chap. XII.

2. Ἄνθρωπον ἐν Χριστῷ. ἐν ἑαυτῷ ἐν Πνεύματι

What ἄνθρωπον ἐν Χριστῷ, a man in Christ] here signifies, may possibly be guest, by other phrases of the same making, such is that of Saint Luke, Act. 12. 11. where 'tis said of Peter, γενόμενος ἐν ἑαυτῷ, being in himself, i. e. having been formerly in a trance, and now return'd out of it; and that is call'd [being in himself.] Such that Revel. 1. 10. ἐγενόμην ἐν πνεύματι, I was in the spirit, i. e. I was in a trance or ecstasie, and there received a vision, or revelation from God, such Mar. 1. 23. ἄνθρωπος ἐν πνεύματι ἀκαθάρτῳ, and the same again c. 5. 2. A man in an unclean spirit, i. e. one agitated with a diabolicall spirit, rapt and carried to doe things, which of himself he would never doe. And accordingly here a man in Christ, may be one that by the spirit of Christ was thus transported, received Revelations from Christ, and therefore v. 1. there is mention of visions and revelations, of which this is here an instance, and so v. 7. And all the circumstances of the context incline to this interpretation. And this is the importance of the Ἔκστασις ecstasie (see note on Mark. 3. c.) being out of himself, transported either by a good, or evill spirit, when by a good, it signifies a prophetick vision, when by a bad, a kinde of madnesse, as in the Demoniacks, (though the word is no where in the New Testament used of them) and both contrary to the being ἐν ἑαυτῷ, in himself, mov'd onely by that human principle of reason, &c. which he hath within him, neither θεοφορούμενος, nor δαιμονιοφορούμενος, carried by God, nor the divell.

b. Σκόλοψ τῇ σαρκί.

What this σκόλοψ τῇ σαρκὶ thorn to the flesh] here signifies will be best guest from Ezech. 28. 24. where the pricking bryer, and grieving thorn] is set to signifie a sore affliction, to wound and torment, from the despicers, as it there follows, or persecuters of Israel. And so it will here signifie no more but a sad, and sharp affliction, inflicted on Saint Paul (saith Irenæus l. 4. the last ch: and Theodoret, and Theophylact on the Place) by some followers of Simon Magus, i. e. the Gnosticks.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XIII.

1. I am now this third time about to come among you, (ſee c. 12. 14.) and this is my ſolemn ſecond admonition by Epiſtle, which if it be not obeyed, will certainly bring cenſures upon you at my coming.

1. THis is the third time I am coming to you, in the mouth of two or three witneſſes ſhall every word be eſtabliſhed.]

a. 2. I gave you a ſolemn warning in my former Epiſtle, which was of the ſame force, as if I had been perſonally with you, and behold now I doe ſo again, and though I am ſtill abſent, yet this Epiſtle is to ſupply the place of my perſonall preſence, and therefore I doe now ſolemnly write, and denounce, both to thoſe that had then ſinn'd, and have not wrought any full reformation, and to all others, that have ſince been drawn into ſuch irregular courſes, that with all ſuch I will proceed ſeverely at my coming among you.

2. I told you before, and * foretell you as if I were preſent the ſecond time, and being abſent now I write to them which heretofore have ſinned, and to all other, that if I come again, I will not ſpare:]

* foretell you the ſecond time, as if I were preſent, προλέγω καὶ προλέγω ὡς παρὼν τὸ δεύτερον

3. And this I ſhall doe, the rather, becauſe you are ſo high, as to call my commiſſion for Apoſtleſhip into queſtion, and to require me to prove that what I ſpeak or doe, is from Chriſt; when by that which hath been done already, by miracles and other evidences, it is moſt manifeſt, that Chriſt hath expreſt himſelf to ſpeak to you by me, and ſo to own the doctrine I teach, and the authority I pretend to among you.

3. Since ye ſeek a proof of Chriſt, ſpeaking in me, which to you-ward is not weak, but is mighty † in you.]

4. For as Chriſt appeared to be a weak and frail man in being crucified, but was evidenced to be omnipotent God by his reſurrection, So I alſo may appear weak and a meer ordinary man, fit to be deſpiſed and contemned by you, (as you look upon me in my ſelf, and in reſpect of the afflictions which have been, and are upon me) but yet I ſhall ſhew that I am an Apoſtle of Chriſt, armed with commiſſion and power from God, which I have already both by preaching and miracles, and ſhall farther by cenſures upon the contumacious, evidence unto and among you.

4. For though he was crucified through weakneſſe, yet he liveth by the power of God: for we alſo are weak * in him, but we ſhall live with him by the power of God toward you.]

* or with him, for the Kings MS. reads σὺν

b. 5. Make triall by what you pleaſe, whether I am not an Apoſtle of Chriſt, and have planted Chriſt among you, taught you the true faith, Have there not been ſuch evidences of my Apoſtleſhip c. 12. 12. ſuch aſſurances of Chriſts giving me authority of his preſence among you in my miniſtery, that you your ſelves cannot chooſe but acknowledge it? yes certainly there are, if you are not the moſt ſenſleſſe wretchleſſe perſons in the world, the moſt unfit for God to approve, or wink at.

5. Examine your ſelves, whether ye be in the faith, prove your own ſelves: † know ye not your own ſelves, how that [b] Jeſus Chriſt is * in you, † except ye be reprobates?]

* among us
† truly if in ſome meaſure ye doe not, ye are reprobates, εἰ μή τι ἄρα ἀδόκιμοί ἐστε

6. But whatever you are your ſelves, or whatever ye think of me, you ſhall find I doubt not, that I am not diſapproved by Chriſt, but abundantly owned by him.

6. But I truſt that ye ſhall know that we are not reprobates.]

7. Now I pray God to preſerve you from every evil way, from all corruption, or ſeduction, not that I may be valued or eſteemed by you, (I doe not ſo much conſider that) but that you may live like Chriſtians, whatſoever opinion you have of me.

7. Now I pray to God, that ye doe no evil, not that we ſhould appear approved, but that ye ſhould doe that which is honeſt, though we be as reprobates.]

8. For though we have no ability to doe any thing, in caſe we ſhould ſet our ſelves againſt Chriſt and his Goſpel, yet in defence of it we are able to doe ſomewhat by his aſſiſtance and bleſſing.

8. For we can doe nothing againſt the truth, but for the truth.]

9. And be we never ſo weak, whether afflicted by others, or by you vilified, and thought meanly of, yet if you be ſtrong and able, it is matter of joy to us, and there is nothing that we more deſire, then that you be made up into ſuch a form or frame, which ſhall be acceptable in Gods ſight, or that ye live together in communion unbroken off, undivided, ſee note c.

9. For we are glad when we are weak, and ye are ſtrong: and this alſo we wiſh, your perfection.]

10. And that is the reaſon of my giving you theſe wholſome warnings, before I come, that when I come I may not proceed to exciſion (according to the authority given me by Chriſt) but deal with you according to that milder way of inſtruction, not of excommunication, which is to take place among contumacious offenders, ſuch as I deſire not to find you at my coming.

10. Therefore I write theſe things being abſent, leſt being preſent I ſhould uſe ſharpneſſe, according to the power which the Lord hath given me to edification, and not to deſtruction.]

c. 11. And now I take my leave of you, beſeeching Gods bleſſing upon you, and I pray, be ye carefull to keep together in the united profeſſion, of the ſame faith, and if there fall out any thing croſſe among you, ſupport it cheerfully, be all mutually kind and peaceable without any diviſions, or ſchiſmes among you, And that is the way to have that God, which ſo much values, and ſo ſtrictly commands love, and peace among all, to be forever among you by his grace.

11. Finally, brethren, farewell: * [c] be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace, and the God of love and peace ſhall be with you.]

* be knit together

12. Greet one another from me with all kindneſſe, ſee Rom. 16. c.

12. Greet one another with an holy kiſſe.]

13. All the Chriſtians here ſend you greeting.

13. All the ſaints ſalute you.]

d. 14. bounty or liberal effuſion of the graces of Gods ſanctifying Spirit.

14. The grace of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the love of God, and the [d] [* communion of the holy Ghoſt,] be with you all. Amen.

† communication

The ſecond to the Corinthians was written from Philippi a city of Macedonia, by Titus and Luke.

In

a. In the method prescribed by Christ to prepare for the censures of the Church, *Mat.*18. 15. there is a threefold admonition, the first by one man alone, the injured person (if it be a matter of that nature) going and reproving him, And if that doe not succeed, then take with thee (ἔτι further or over and above) one or two, that in the mouth of one or two witnesses every word may be established. i. e. that the thing which thou layest to his charge, be so confirmed (according to that of Job. 8. 17. The testimony of two men is true, i. e. (כּוֹן, ἀληθὴς, true] in the sense of πιστὸς) fit to be credited, of sufficient authority in law to be heeded, and proceeded upon) that by the testimony of these, as of witnesses, he may be convinced, and no longer able to deny the fact, as Heb. 6. 16. an oath is said to be εἰς βεβαίωσιν, for establishing or confirmation, as being ἀντιλογίας πέρας, an end of contradicting, i. e. of affirming and denying; The thing so established (βεβαιοῦσθαι or πιστοῦσθαι) by oath, cannot longer be denied, or the parties denial will not stand him in any stead; Or secondly, that the offender may by authority of these be induced (as the judge is on the accused person, *Deut.*19.15. *Heb.*10.28.) to give sentence on himself, and so think fit to reform what he is admonisht of. Now that this place distinctly referres to this part of discipline, this second admonition, appears most probable by his reciting of the very words in the institution, In the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established, and proportionable to that, προεῖρηκα καὶ προλέγω, I foretold and foretell, which notes the first and second admonition. And though there præcede a τρίτον ἔρχομαι, I come to you this third time, yet that referres evidently to this his third resolution personally to appear among them, c.12. v.14. having resolved it twice already, and before that time comes, this second Epistle is to supply the place of a second admonition, as his first had been a first. And so the words will be rendred thus, Προεῖρηκα καὶ προλέγω ὡς παρὼν τὸ δεύτερον, I have foretold or admonished you once in my first Epistle, and doe now so again the second time, and both those ὡς παρὼν, as present, These Epistolarie warnings being to have the same force with them, as if he were present among them: and if this method answerable to the first and second admonition instituted by Christ, doe not prevail with you, then that which remains is, that he proceed to censures, and that he is resolved to doe, οὐ φείσομαι, I will not spare; Where the Apostolical power which he had over them, maketh it improper for him to proceed to any third admonition, that of telling it to the Church, in S. Matthew; So Bishop Titus is appointed to deal with an heretick, After the first and second admonition reject him, Tit. 3. 10. without any third degree intervening, immediately to proceed to censures.

b. That, Christ's being among them, signifies the presence and power of the Gospel among the Corinthians, or in their Church through S. Pauls Apostleship, may appear, not only by the context, which wholly looks that way, but by that place Exod. 17.7. to which these words seem to referre; Where the tempting contumacious Israelites, after all the signes and miracles shewed among them, doe still remain infidel, and ask in these very words, εἰ ἔστιν ὁ Θεὸς ἐν ἡμῖν; is the Lord among us? or no? So that the meaning of the Apostles question here is, Many miracles of Christ and his Spirit have been wrought among you by me, so that if you doe not yet beleive that I am an Apostle of Christ, and so that Christ is among you, you are sure of the number of those Israelites, who after so many miracles, still required more signes, or of the Pharisees, who did the same, Mar. 8. 11. which being put in form of a question, Discern you not that Christ Jesus is among you?) the answer is in the next words εἰ μή τι ἄδοκιμοί ἐστε, which cannot be more distinctly and literally rendred, then thus, Εἰ μή τι (referring to the ἐπιγινώσκετε precedent) if ye doe not, i. e. if ye doe not discern it, in some degree, ἄδοκιμοί ἐστε, doubtlesse ye are reprobates, senslesse, obdurate persons, most impious, and uncapable of faith, or any thing that is good. What the notion of ἀδόκιμος] is, hath been formerly mentioned, see note on *Rom.*1. 9.

c. The proper original notion of the word καταρτίζω is to compact or knit together, either members in a body, or parts in a building, Thus it is applied to a building, Exod. 15. 17. καταρτίσειεν ὁ καταρτίων the place which thou hast made for thee to dwell in, and to walls, Ezra 4. 13, 16. to a body Psal. 39.9. σῶμα κατηρτίσω μοι a body thou hast framed or compacted for me. From hence it doth more largely signifie to prepare, or make ready, in the same kind as builders doe fit one part to another, and make it ready for use; And so again to corroborate and strengthen, as that which is well compacted and knit together is made strong by that means; And lastly, to perfect, as the building of an house is the perfecting of it. especially in the passive voice, because that which is compacted and built is perfected, and completed by that means. Answerable to these severall notions is the Glossarie of Hesychius, Καταρτίσαι (not, as it is corruptly read, καταρτώσαι) κατασκευάσαι, πλέξαι, στρῶσαι, the word signifies to prepare, to perfect, to strengthen or corroborate. In the New Testament the word is variously used, but so, as will by the circumstances of the context be appliable to one or more of these three notions, *Mat.*4.21. & *Mar.*1.19. it is applied to the mending of the fishers nets, knitting them together, and so either strengthning, or preparing them for use; Mat. 21. 16. κατηρτίσω αἶνον (in reference to the childrens Hosannahs or testimonies of Christ) Thou hast out of their mouths compacted or made up, or made ready a song of praise, or confession, or testimony, *Lu.*6 40. Every servant shall be κατηρτισμένος made up, perfected, fitted for his crown, after the same manner as his master Christ is, So 1 Thess. 3. 10. καταρτίσαι τὰ ὑστερήματα, to make up, or perfect, or repair defects, and Heb. 13. 21. καταρτίσαι ὑμᾶς, perfect you, build you up, and so perhaps v. 9. of this chap: τὴν ὑμῶν κατάρτισιν, I pray for your being perfect in all goodness, as v. 7. I beseech God that you doe no evil, So Rom. 9. 22. vessels of wrath κατηρτισμένα εἰς ἀπώλειαν; It signifies formed, or framed, or made fit, So Heb. 10.5. out of the Septuagint of the Psalme, σῶμα κατηρτίσω μοι, a body thou hast framed me, and Heb. 11.3. by faith we conceive κατηρτίσθαι τοὺς αἰῶνας, that the ages of the world were framed, i. e. the world created. But besides all these places, one sort more there there is, wherein, by reaſon of the affinity between the Church of Chriſt, and a building, or body, the word hath a peculiar ſignification to compact Chriſtian people (the ſtones in the building, or the members in the body of the Church) together into a ſociety, where they may live and publickly ſerve God together, and that either 1. by firſt forming thoſe ſocieties, uniting men in the profeſſion of the ſame truths, and performance of the ſame ſervices; or 2^dly, by reſtoring any that hath been broken off from the Church, and caſt out by cenſures for any fault, or 3^dly, by reducing him that hath voluntarily broken himſelf off by ſchiſme &c. or 4^thly, by God's reſtoring peace and tranquillity to the Church, that they may thus freely meet together. In the firſt ſenſe we have it Epheſ. 4. 12. where he ſpeaks of the ſeverall offices ordained in the Church, and the firſt end which he aſſignes of ſo doing, is, πρὸς τὸν καταρτισμὸν τῶν ἁγίων, for the compacting of the ſaints, i. e. for the holding the body of the Church together to frequent publick aſſemblies, &c. In the ſecond ſenſe 'tis clearly uſed Gal. 6. 1. where the ſpiritual, or Governours of the Church are adviſed to indulgence and tenderneſſe, not too much ſharpneſſe, or ſeverity toward offenders, or lapſt perſons, and accordingly are appointed καταρτίζειν, to reſtore ſuch an one in the ſpirit of meekneſſe, i. e. to take off the cenſures of the Church from him, Which there appears not only by the evidence of the words themſelves, but by the ſubſequent precept of bearing one anothers burthens, ver. 2. as that may be explained by a parallel place in Ignatius's Epiſtle to Polycarpus, where he bids him as a biſhop, τὴν ἑνότητα φυλάττειν, καὶ πάντων ἀνέχεσθαι ὡς ὁ ἀγάπη, take care of the unity (i. e. the καταρτισμὸς here, the keeping whole Chriſt's body the Church) bear all, and ſuffer or bear with all in love. And ſo perhaps in this chapter καταρτισις ver. 9. may be the reſtoring of the lapſt offenders, upon their ſincerity of reformation, or the continuing in the communion of the Church, without need of having the cenſures inflicted upon them; for ſo it there followes, as the conſequent of his praying for their καταρτισιν] for which cauſe I write theſe things being abſent, that being preſent I may not ἀποτόμως χρῆσθαι, deal ſharply, or uſe exciſion, where καταρτισις, making up, reſtoring, or keeping whole, may very fitly be rendred, as oppoſite to ἀποτομία, exciſion, the word ſet to denote the cenſures. In the third ſenſe 'tis uſed 1 Cor. 1. 10. where ἦτε κατηρτισμένοι, their being knit, or compacted together, in the ſame mind, or opinion, is ſet oppoſite to having ſchiſmes among them, and contentions, v. 11. and ſo here καταρτίζεσθε, be ye knit together,] is preparative to their being of the ſame mind, and having peace among them. In the fourth, or laſt ſenſe it ſeems to be taken 1 Pet. 5. 10. where he prayes to God for the diſperſed Jew-Chriſtians, that after that ſhort time of ſufferings, God will ἀυτὸς καταρτίσει ὑμᾶς, himſelf, by his ſpecial providence, take care for them, and reſtore them halcyonian daies of peace, to ſerve him in the publick aſſemblies, Thus S. Ignatius (in his Epiſtle to the Smyrneans, making a motion to them to ſend a congratulation into Syria, διὰ τὸ καλὸν θεὸν ἐν ὑμῖν γνώμην ἐσχηκέναι that they had a fair ſunſhine in reſpect of the ſervice of God) doth thus expreſſe it, ὅτι εἰρηνεύουσι ἐκ ἀπολαύουσι τὸ ἴδιον μέγεθος, καὶ ἀπολαμβάνουσι ἀυτοῖς τὸ ἴδιον σῶμα, or σωματεῖον, becauſe they have peace, and have received their own magnitude, and their own body is reſtored to them, where the ἴδιον μέγεθος, and the σῶμα, are the body of the Church meeting together in aſſemblies, which is there ſaid ἀποκαθίστασθαι to be reſtored, as here καταρτίζεσθε to be repaired or made up, i. e. reſtored to them. See Jude note c.

What is the notion of κοινωνία] for charity, or liberality, hath been formerly obſerved, note on Act. 2. d. & 2 Cor. 8. 4. And agreeably, though in a ſpiritual ſenſe, is κοινωνία πνεύματος, the communication of the Spirit here, the liberality of the holy Ghoſt in the plentifull effuſion of his gifts, ſo as it will be all one with δωρεὰ τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος, the gift of the holy Spirit, Act. 2. 38. and ſo as will be moſt fit to joyn with χάρις Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, the grace, or charity, or liberality of Chriſt, and the love of God (as in Cicero de Nat: Deor: l. 3. Dei gratia & charitas, God's grace or favour, and charity or love, are put together) For thus is χάρις Χριστοῦ, the grace of Chriſt uſed 2 Cor. 8. 9. and thus κοινωνία πνεύματος, the communication of the Spirit, Phil. 2. 1. being joyned with σπλάγχνα, and οἰκτιρμοί, bowels, and mercies, i. e. the evidences of the higheſt liberality.

THE EPISTLE OF PAVL THE APOSTLE TO THE [a]GALATIANS. a

THE time of the Apoſtles writing this Epiſtle to the Galatians is generally conceived to be neer the time of that to the Romans An.Chr. 55. above 20 years after his converſion; Chryſoſtome and Theophylact ſet it before that. And then there can be no poſſibility of beleiving the ſubſcription of the Epiſtle, which affirms it to be written from Rome, where we know the Apoſtle had not been. when he wrote his Epiſtle to the Romans. But although of the time of writing this Epiſtle we have no ſure evidence, yet two things we diſcern of it, 1. That the chief deſigne of it was to vindicate the liberty of the Goſpel from the Judaical yoke, which by being by them impoſed upon all Gentiles, which ſhould receive the faith, was likely to prove a great hindrance to the progreſſe of the Goſpel among the heathens, or uncircumciſion, of whom S. Paul profeſt to be the Apoſtle. 2dly, That they which in this Church preſt this yoke moſt eagerly, were thoſe which did not themſelves obſerve it, heretical Chriſtians, the Gnoſticks, which were not themſelves circumciſed, as being many of them, neither native Jewes, nor Proſelytes of their Covenant, yet, to avoid perſecution from the Jewes, did thus farre comply with them, in preſſing circumciſion upon the converted Gentiles; To which end they vehemently oppoſed S. Pauls doctrine, and practiſe, affirming that what he had, he had received from the other Apoſtles, and conſequently was to be rectified by them, S. Peter &c. and indeed that he varied from himſelf, From which calumnies he ſeverally vindicates himſelf in this Epiſtle, ſhewing that he received his doctrine from none but Chriſt himſelf, that thoſe other Apoſtles profeſt the ſame doctrine that he did, and that though he himſelf uſed a greater liberty at ſome times then at other, in reſpect of the advantages of the Church, yet his doctrine was alwaies the ſame, the truth of which he therefore confirms by many arguments. That theſe hereticks were, ſoon after the planting the Faith here, crept in among them, appears by his words c.1.6. he marvels, they were ſo ſoon removed &c. The Goſpel having, ſome three years before, been there if not planted, yet confirmed by his preaching, Act. 18. 23. about the time of Apollos being at Corinth (i.e. about An.Chr. 51, or 52.) as it is affirmed Act. 19. 1. Galatia, and Phrygia being in the number of thoſe upper coaſts (of Aſia, or Natolia) which there he is ſaid to have paſt through. By which it appears how cloſe at the heels of the Apoſtles, that ſowed the good corn, the Gnoſticks, the officers of the envious man, follow'd, to ſow their darnel, as in Samaria firſt, ſo in the other cities and regions, where the Faith was planted by the Apoſtles, and oppoſed by the Jewes, and perſecuted.

CHAP. I.

Paraphraſe.

* from dia 1. PAVL an Apoſtle not * of men, neither by man, but by Jeſus Chriſt, and God the Father, who raiſed him from the dead,] 1. Paul an Apoſtle, (that had not my commiſſion from any meer man (as ſome others, the ſecundary Apoſtles, had) but from God in heaven, and was not called by any other Apoſtle of Chriſt, or aſſiſted by any, but firſt called to the faith by the immediate voice of Jeſus Chriſt, ſpeaking to me out of heaven, then by revelation from him Act. 9. 15. authorized to preach among the Gentiles, and after, Act. 13. 2. by ſpecial direction of the holy Ghoſt ſeparated to the Apoſtleſhip, who alſo received all my inſtructions from him by viſion to Ananias, and ſo in effect from God the Father, which by his power raiſed him from the dead, and gave all power unto him,)

2. And all the [a] brethren which are with me, unto the Churches of Galatia.] 2. And all thoſe that are conſtantly with me (ſee Phil. 4. 22.) my fellow-labourers in the Goſpel, ſend greeting to all the ſeveral Churches in the cities, and regions of Galatia. 2.

3. Grace be to you, and peace from God the Father, and from our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. 3. See Rom. 1. 7.

approaching, or, inſtant wicked age, ton aiona ton enesta ponron * our God & father, tu theu ke patros emon

4. Who gave himſelf for our ſins, that he might deliver us from this † preſent evil world, according to the will of * God, and our Father.] 4. Whoſe dying for us was purpoſely deſigned to work a reformation, and mortification of ſin in us, and to take us off from the corrupt practiſes of the men of this age both idolatrous Gentiles, and corrupt hypocritical Jewes, which, with a zeal to circumciſion, and the like Moſaical rites, live in all the impurity and impiety in the world; And wherein Chriſt hath done nothing, but what is exactly according to the will and appointment of the eternal God, and father of us all, the God of Iſrael, whom the Jewes acknowledge, and profeſſe to worſhip.

5. To whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

6. Having ſo lately preached the Goſpel of Chriſt among you, Act. 18.23. and thereby either confirmed, or firſt converted you to the faith, I wonder you ſhould ſo ſuddenly forſake thoſe infuſions you received from me, and remove quite from the truth of the Goſpel to a new ſtrange doctrine.

6. I marvel that you are ſo ſoon removed from him that called you * into the grace of Chriſt, unto another Goſpel.] * through ὑ

7. Which indeed is farre from being another Goſpel, or doctrine of Chriſt, fit to come in competition with what I preached to you, farre from being taught, as is pretended, by other Apoſtles; Onely there are ſome Gentiles that had lived in Judæa, of the ſect of the Gnoſticks, ſuch as were at Philippi ch.3.3 teaching the Gentile converts, that they muſt be circumciſed, not out of any principle of piety, or true zeal to the Moſaical law, but that they might curry favour with the Jewes, and avoid the preſſures that lay upon the Chriſtians, whoſe perſecutions were generally cauſed by them, and theſe doe quite pervert and change that doctrine that I delivered you from Chriſt.

7. Which is not another, but there be ſome that trouble you, and would pervert the Goſpel of Chriſt.]

8. And if any attempt to doe that, though it were I my ſelf, or even an Angel from heaven, I proclaim unto you mine opinion, and Apoſtolical ſentence, that you are to diſclaim and renounce all communion with him, to look on him as on an excommunicated perſon, under the ſecond degree of excommunication, that none is to have any commerce with in ſacred matters.

8. But † though we, or an Angel from heaven, * preach any other Goſpel unto you, then that which we have preached unto you, let him be † accurſed.] † if even ὡ εἰὰν * ſhall preach, for the King's MS. reads εὐαγγελίσηται † anathema ἀνάθεμα, ſee Rom. 9.3. * anathema v. 8.

9. And that ye may take more heed to what I ſay, I repeat it again, Whoſoever teaches you any new doctine contrary to what I at firſt preacht to you, let him be caſt out of the Church by you.

9. As we ſaid before, ſo ſay I now again, If any man preach any other Goſpel unto you, than that ye have received, let him be * accurſed.]

b. 10. By this you may gueſſe whoſe doctrine is moſt to be heeded; theirs ſure that deſire not to get the favour of men, to avert the diſpleaſure of men, but to ſecure the favour of God, to approve themſelves to him; and, I hope 'tis clear, that is my onely deſigne, and not theirs, who labour to propitiate the perſecuting Jewes, as by their new infuſions 'tis manifeſt your Gnoſtick teachers doe; This if I did, I muſt profeſſe, I ſhould not faithfully diſcharge the truſt repoſed in me by Chriſt, or, If I had had a mind to this, I had never turned Chriſtian, loſing thereby all my intereſts among the Jewes.

10. For doe I [b] now perſwade men, or God? or doe I ſeek to pleaſe men? for if I yet pleaſed men, I † ſhould not be the ſervant of Chriſt.] † would not have been, οὐκ ἂν ἦμην

11. And whereas it is objected to me, that being none of Chriſts immediate retinue, I have received the Goſpel from men, and not from Chriſt, and therefore may be thought to have made ſome change in it, I now declare to you, that the Goſpel preacht unto you by me, hath a more then humane authority, and ſo is not to receive prejudice by the lateneſſe of my vocation.

11. But I certifie you, brethren, that the Goſpel which was preached of me, is not * after man.] * according to κατὰ

12. For as it is not pretended to be any tradition of the Jewes, nor taught me by my inſtructers in the Jewiſh religion v. 13. (which if it were, there were reaſon that now their verdict ſhould be taken in it) ſo it is evident, that I had it not from thoſe that were Chriſtians, and Apoſtles before me, but by call from heaven, and by immediate revelation from Chriſt, in oppoſition to that way that had been taught me among the Jewes.

12. For I neither received it of men, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jeſus Chriſt.]

13,14. For ye cannot but have been told what I did, how I employed my ſelf when I was a Jew, that I was the moſt zealous perſecutor of Chriſtianity, and maintainer of the Jewiſh cuſtomes (and traditions, ſuperadded to the law) of any man.

13. For ye have heard of my converſation in time paſs'd in the Jewes religion, how that beyond meaſure I perſecuted the Church of God, and waſted it.

14. And profited in the Jewes religion above † many my equals in mine own nation, being more exceedingly zealous of the tradition of my fathers.] † many of my kindred which were of the ſame age with me συνηλικιώτας μου ἐν τῷ γένει μου

c. 15, 16. But when God, who had from an infant determined to make uſe of me, and to ſet me apart for his ſervice, had in his good time, Act. 9. actually called me, and that when I deſerved no ſuch dignity or favour from him, (nay when I was bloodily ſet on perſecuting Chriſtianity) and ſoon after that expreſſed his pleaſure by Ananias that I ſhould preach the Goſpel to the Gentiles, and gave me authority to doe ſo, Act.9.15. Immediately I ſet about my work, not thinking it needfull for me, who had it from heaven, to receive my miſſion from any mortall man (ſee note on Mat. 16. c.)

15. But when it pleaſed God, who [c] ſeparated me from my mothers womb, and called me by his grace,

16. To reveale his Son * in me, that I might preach him among the heathen, immediately I † conferred not with fleſh and blood.] * by ἐν † applied not my ſelf οὐ προσανεθέμην

17. Or to goe up to Jeruſalem to Peter, James &c. as to thoſe that were inſtated to that office before me, and conſequently might inſtruct me in the Chriſtian doctrine, but without applying my ſelf to any, after my miſſion from Chriſt, I went preſently from Damaſcus into Arabia, and after, returned again to Damaſcus, Act.9.19. and there preacht Chriſt in their ſynagogues, v.20.

17. Neither went I up to Jeruſalem, to them which were Apoſtles before me, but I * went into Arabia, and returned again to Damaſcus.] * departed ἀνῆλθον

18. Then being in danger of treachery from the Jewes, I eſcaped their hands, Act.9.25. and I came to Jeruſalem v.26. and was by Barnabas brought to Peter v.27. and ſtaid with him, and in Jeruſalem fifteen daies v. 28. and this ſome three years after my converſion.

18. Then after three years I went up to Jeruſalem to ſee Peter, and abode with him fifteen daies.]

19. But beſide him I ſaw not any Apoſtle of the firſt rank, i.e. of the twelve, no nor any of the other rank, ſave onely James the kinſman of Chriſt, who was Biſhop of Jeruſalem at that time, and ſo an Apoſtle of a ſecond rank (ſee note on Rom.16. b.) though not one of the twelve, ſee note on ch.1.a.

19. But other of the Apoſtles ſaw I none, ſave James the Lord's brother.]

20. Of the truth of all this that I ſay, I call God to witneſſe, (as in a matter of greateſt weight, on the beleif of which the profitable diſcharge of my office, and reception of my labours very much dependeth)

20. Now the things which I write unto you, behold, before God I lie not.]

21. Afterwards

21. Afterwards I came into the regions of Syria and Cilicia.] 21. After this I went (by admonition from God, Act. 22. 17, 18.) to Cæſarea which is in Syria, (ſee note on Mat. 16. c.) and thence to Tarſus (my native city in Cilicia Act. 22.3.) Act. 9. 30.

22. And was unknown by face unto the Churches of Judæa which were in Chriſt.] 22. And all this while I was not ſo much as known to the Churches of Judæa, that had received the faith, i. e. to thoſe other, beſide that of Jeruſalem mentioned v.18. (All which I have ſaid to ſhew (what was undertaken v,11.) how farre I was from receiving inſtructions from any other, but Chriſt himſelf, v. 16.)

23. But they had heard onely, that he which perſecuted us in times paſt, now preacheth the faith, which once he deſtroyed.] 23. All that they knew of me was, that they had heard of my preaching the Chriſtian doctrine, which I had perſecuted.

24. And they glorified God in me.] 24. And they magnified the name of God for this mercy of his wrought in my converſion.

Notes on Chap. I.

a. Ἀδελφοὶ πάντες ἅγιοι

The word ἀδελφοὶ] brethren, doth oft ſignifie no more then beleivers, Chriſtians, but here being joyned with Paul in the writing of the Epiſtle [οἱ σὺν ἐμοὶ πάντες ἀδελφοὶ, all the brethren with me] it ſeems to denote thoſe that accompanied S. Paul in his travails, and aſſiſted him in the preaching of the Goſpel, ſuch as Timothy and *Clemens Phil.*4.3. and the reſt, who are there called his fellow-labourers. Thus Phil. 4. 21. The brethren that are with me] ſeem to ſignifie, being diſtinguiſht from πάντες ἅγιοι all the Saints, v. 22. And thus in the Epiſtles to the Philippians and Coloſſians, Timothy is joyned with him in the inſcription, and Silvanus and Timotheus, both in the Epiſtles to the Theſſalonians (and ſo the ſame probably here, or the like, though they be not named) And ſo ὁ ἀδελφὸς the brother 2 *Cor.*8.18. & c.12.18. is thought to be either Silvanus, or S. Luke, the conſtant companion of S. Paul for ſome time, And ſo [our brethren] 2 Cor. 8. 23.

b. Πείθειν

What πείθειν ἀνθρώπους, and Θεὸν, to perſwade men, and God] ſignifies, muſt be taken from the like phraſe in the Old Teſtament, 1 Sam. 24. 7. where the Greek hath theſe words, Ἔπεισεν Δαβὶδ τοὺς ἄνδρας αὐτοῦ ἐν λόγοις, David perſwaded his men with words, where we read, David ſtaid his ſervants with theſe words. The men that were with David were very eager to have him take the advantage againſt Saul, and kill him, v.4. and were ready to riſe up againſt him to kill him, v. 7. and David's ſpeech to them, took them off from this bloody purpoſe, and that is expreſt by [ἔπεισεν perſwading them] appeaſing, pacifying them. Thus is it the office of a Rhetor, or advocate πείθειν to perſwade, i. e. to appeaſe the judge to the client, whoſe cauſe is pleaded, to propitiate him. So *Mat.*28. 14. If the Governour hear of it, i. e. of the ſouldiers being ſo negligent, as to let Chriſt be ſtolne out of the grave which they were ſet to watch, πείσομεν αὐτὸν, we will perſwade him, i.e. appeaſe him, obtain his pardon for you, and, as it followes, ὑμᾶς ἀμερίμνους ποιήσομεν, we will free you from all ſollicitude of ſecuring your ſelves from that heavy puniſhment, that by the Roman Lawes Martiall was due to the watch-man that fell aſleep. By which it is clear, that πείθειν is to propitiate, or gain ones favour, to appeaſe wrath, or puniſhment, to avert diſpleaſure, and ſo it is here, To perſwade men] i. e. to ſay, or teach thoſe doctrines, which will avert the diſpleaſure of the perſecuting Jewes, which the Gnoſtick teachers did, and to perſwade God] is to endevour to ſay and preach that, which may avert Gods wrath, be acceptable to him, obtain, and ſecure his favour. And this is in the next words explained by ἀρέσκειν, to pleaſe men, as that is contrary to, and unreconcileable with the ſervice, or approving himſelf to God.

c. Ἀφορίζων

Ἀφορίζων to ſeparate] in this place ſignifies, in the ſame manner, as Act. 13. 2. (ſpoken of this Apoſtle) a conſecration to the Apoſtolical office, onely with this difference, that there it is ſpoken of it as inſtantly to be performed by the miniſtry of men, here onely in the deſignation, or decree of God, which is therefore ſaid to be ἐκ κοιλίας from the womb, to denote the no contribution made by him toward this decree of giving him a commiſſion to be an Apoſtle, or the no merit conſider'd in him by God, when he deſigned him to this office; This farther includes a purpoſe of Gods to call him from heaven, in the midſt of his madneſſe againſt Chriſtians, (which mercy of Gods to him was founded in his doing it ignorantly, 1 Tim. 1. 13.) and his foreſight that he would immediately convert upon that call; which two being firſt ſuppoſed (in Gods eternal purpoſe, and preſcience) it muſt needs follow to be an act of his unmerited free choice from all eternity that God purpoſed to make uſe of him for the converting of others, who had himſelf been wonderfully changed from ſo profeſt an enmity to the faith, to ſo perfect an obedience to it. But this being a deſignation onely to the dignity of the Apoſtolical office, (as Jeremy c.1.4. and John Baptiſt, and others appear to have been deſignd to the prophetick) can with no reaſon be ſo applied as to inferre any irreſpective decree or deſtination of his perſon to heaven, and bliſſe; that being laid up for him, as a crown of righteouſneſſe, a reward of the finiſhing his courſe and perſeverance, 2 Tim. 4. 8.

CHAP. II.

Paraphraſe.

* Afterward † about fourteen years

1. * THen † fourteen years after I went up again to Jeruſalem with Barnabas, and took Titus with me alſo.] 1. After this, ſome fourteen years after my converſion, (mentioned ch. 1. 16.) I went a ſecond time to Jeruſalem, Barnabas and I together, and Titus alſo attended me. 2,

2. And by 'God's appointment, either firſt ſignified, or after confirmed to me by viſion (ſuch as Paul often had about ſeveral matters) I went up to Jeruſalem, and gave the Church there an account of my preaching (and the ſucceſſe of that) among the Gentiles; This I thought fit to doe, and yet firſt to doe it to thoſe that were the principal men among them, James the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, and Peter, and John, v. 9. who were all Apoſtles of the circumciſion, or Jewiſh converts, and my reaſon of doing ſo, was, leſt I ſhould miſcarry on one ſide, or other, loſe either my preſent, or my paſt labour, my preſent among the Jewes, my paſt among the Gentiles, i. e. leſt by the Jewes I ſhould be thought to preach a different doctrine from thoſe who had been called before me, or by the Gentiles, (if I ſhould to their prejudice comply with the Jewes) I ſhould be thought inconſtant, and be deemed not to count it lawfull to converſe with them, which would utterly obſtruct their way to receiving the faith, and ſhut it up from them.

2. And I went up by revelation, and communicated to them that Goſpel, which I preach among the Gentiles, but * privately to † them which were of reputation, leſt by any means I ſhould run, or had run in vain.]

And by what I then did, they did alſo fully conſent to my doctrine (that Gentile Chriſtians were not bound to the Jewiſh obſervances) that, as I would not yeild, ſo they did not force Titus to be circumcited, though he were known to be a Greek, and familiarly converſed with me, and was employed by me.

3. But * neither Titus, who was with me, being a Greek, was [b] compelled to be circumciſed.]

4. This I thus did, becauſe of the ſlie Jewes, that, making as if they were Chriſtians, came to obſerve what liberty I took in omitting the obſervances of the law, that by ſome means or other they might accuſe me, and either by the verdict of the Councell of Jeruſalem, or by ſome other means (by bringing perſecution &c. upon me) inforce me to the obſervation of the Jewiſh ceremonies.

To theſe men (though at other times I was content to comply with the weak) I could not think fit to doe it, never ſo little while, though but for that ſpace of my ſtaying at Jeruſalem, or to yeild by any kind of acknowledgment or condeſcention, that the Gentiles ſhould be obnoxious to that yoke, and this, that we might not betray the Goſpel of Chriſt, but preſerve it entire to you.

(James and Peter and John, I need not give any other character of them, God is not moved in this matter with the perſonal excellencies of any, but can make uſe of any the meaneſt, as well as moſt excellent inſtruments) for theſe, I ſay, though they were perſons of great knowledge, and dignity, and authority, and that moſt juſtly, yet they added to me neither knowledge, nor authority.

7. But contrariwiſe, when they [d] ſaw that the Goſpel of the uncircumciſion was committed unto me, as the Goſpel of the circumciſion was unto Peter,]

8. (For the ſame God that had enabled Peter, and given him gifts and miraculous powers to diſcharge that office of an Apoſtle to the Jewes, gave me alſo the like commiſſion, and abilities to be an Apoſtle to the Gentiles.)

9. Theſe three, I ſay, James the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, and Peter, and John the ſon of Zebedee, two prime Apoſtles, who were looked on as the pillars of the Church, acknowledged us as their companions, joyned with us, and did by conſent make an agreement, that they and we ſhould betake our ſelves ſeverally (into what city ſoever either of us entred) we to the Gentiles, and they to the Jewes of the city, and ſo conſtitute ſeverall congregations in each city, of Jewes and Gentiles, (ſee note on Rev. 11. b.)

10. And all that they inſiſted on to us, was, that we ſhould take into our care the wants of the poor Chriſtians in Judæa, and get collections for them among the Gentiles, which I was as forward to doe, as they to have me.

10. Onely they would that we ſhould remember the poor, the ſame which I alſo was forward to doe.]

c. 11. But when, after this, Peter came and preacht to the Jewes at Antioch, I, who was there alſo at the ſame time preaching to the Gentiles of that city, reſiſted him, becauſe they that had taken notice of his former actions, and the change that was obſervable in him, did look upon him, as a diſſembler, and laid that to his charge, not knowing the true ground of what he did.

11. But when Peter was come to Antioch I withſtood him * to the face, becauſe he [c] was to be blamed]

* face to face, becauſe he had been blamed, κατὰ πρόσωπον, ὅτι κατεγνωσμένος ἦν.

12. For before the time that ſome believing Jewes of Jeruſalem, (James's ſect) who were generally zealous for the Moſaical performances Act. 21. 20. came from thence to Antioch (in like manner as thoſe Act. 15. 1.) he freely converſed with the Gentile Chriſtians, and eat with them; but while they were preſent, out of fear of diſpleaſing and ſcandalizing thoſe Jewiſh Chriſtians, and occaſioning their falling off, or forſaking the faith (ſee Theophylact) he abſtained from uſing that liberty, and did not uſe any converſation with them for a time.

12. For before that certain came from James, he did eat with the Gentiles; but when they were come, he withdrew, and ſeparated himſelf, fearing them which were of the circumciſion.]

13. And the whole number of the Jewiſh converts of Antiochia followed his example, and abſtained from converſing freely with the Gentiles, making as if they were ſuch zealots of the Moſaical law, as that they would not uſe this illegall liberty; and this was ſo univerſally done

13. And the other Jewes diſſembled likewiſe with him, inſomuch that Barnabas alſo was carried away with their diſſimulation.]

*the straight path to the truth, ἰθοποδοῦσι πρὸς τὴν ἀλήθειαν

14. But when I saw that they walked not * uprightly according to the truth of the Gospel, I said unto Peter before them all. If thou, being a Jew, livest after the manner of the Gentiles, and not as doe the Jewes, why compellest thou the Gentiles to live as doe the Jewes?]

14. Whereupon considering the inconvenience that would come on this, and that it would be a way to shut out all the Gentiles from the faith, if by Peter's fear of scandalizing the Jewes, men were brought to believe that the Gentiles might not freely be accompanied with (and consequently could not be preached to by us) and so that this was not the way which was most conducible to the propagating of Christian religion, which was like to consist more of Gentiles then of Jewes, I thus spake publickly to Peter, Thou hast hitherto lived like, (and conversed with) the Gentile Christians, and not observed the Jewish rules, why dost thou now by thy practise bring the Gentiles to think it necessary for them to observe the Jewish law?

15. We who are Jewes by † nature, and not sinners of the Gentiles,]

15. Certainly that which those men learn and think to be implied by this practise of thine, is farre from being true doctrine, For we that indeed were, before our Christianity, Jewes born, and so farre more obliged in any reason to observe the Mosaical law, then the idolatrous ignorant heathens, whom the Jewes themselves never thought obliged to the Mosaical performances, and therefore looked upon them with such contempt, as impure, and not fit to be conversed with,

16. Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ: even we have beleived in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law; for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified.]

16. We, I say, being taught by Christianity, that by the observation of the law (see note on Mat. 5. g.) by performance of the Mosaical rites, justification is not to be expected, but onely by the faith of Jesus Christ, without that, we, I say, doe thus our selves receive the Christian religion, and ought in any reason to teach it others, so as not to depend on the Mosaical performances for justification, but on the faith of Christ, without them, and that upon this grand principle, that neither Jew nor Gentile can be justified by legal obedience, and therefore must seek to Christ for it, who not now requiring of us these outward rites, but the inward purity signified by them, is consequently to be obeyed in what he requires, and the liberty, that he also gives, to be vindicated by us against all contrary pretenders, who indeed will be farre from changing their minds by our yeilding to, or complying with them.

17. But if while we seek to be justified by Christ, we our selves also are found ‡ sinners: is therefore Christ the minister of sin? God forbid.]

17. But then it is objected by those that stand so for the Jewish law, that if, seeking to be justified by faith in Christ, we neglect the Mosaical law, and live like Gentiles, we make by this means, or suppose Christ to be an enemy to the law, and a favourer of Gentilisme, (one that assists that against Judaisme, makes provision for it,) To which we answer, that whatsoever be said of his favouring those that doe not bind themselves to the Judaical law, he is yet sure no favourer of Gentilisme or heathen life. ‡.

18. For if I build again the things which I destroyed, I make my self a transgressour.]

18. But on the other side rather, when a man hath renounced justification by the Mosaical law, and depended onely on Christ for it, if he shall again return to that which he hath renounced, and assert justification by that law, affirm that the observance of Mosaical rites is necessary to justification, what doth he then but apostatize in some measure, depart from his former profession in returning to Judaisme again.

* by the law did die διὰ νόμου ἀπέθανον

19. For I * through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God.]

19. We are all taught by the very old Testament, the Law and Prophets, that we must seek further then the law, viz. to Christ, and so I have done, and learned by the law it self not to value it too much, but to give over hope of justification or life by those legal performances, that so I may find it in God, through Christ, in the New Covenant.

† I have been crucified Συνεσταύρωμαι * but, or, and I live, not any longer I, ζῶ δὲ οὐκέτι ἐγώ † what I now live ὃ νῦν ζῶ

20. † I am crucified with Christ: * nevertheless I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me, and † the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me.]

20. Christ by his death hath abolished the Mosaical law, Ephes. 2.14. i.e: hath taken away the discrimination betwixt Jew and Gentile, brought justification into the world for those that observe not the Mosaical law, and I by being a Christian, have been made partaker of this fruit of Christs death, and so am also dead to the law, v.9. and Rom.7. 4. and now I am no longer the man I was, i.e. a Jew, but a Christian, and am now bound to no other observations, but those which Christ requireth of me, to whom I am obliged by all the bands of love and duty, having given his own life for me to free me from the Mosaical law, among other things.

21. I doe not frustrate the grace of God, for if righteousnesse come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain.]

21. This freedome therefore I make use of, and doe not depend on the law for justification, nor think the Mosaical observances still necessary, for that were to evacuate the Gospel of Christ (see note on Heb. 13. c.) for if still the Mosaical performances are necessary and sufficient to our justification, then Christ needed not to have died, it would be matter of no advantage to us, that he thus came into the world, and laid down his life for us.

2. ἀνεθέμην αὐτοῖς

What διὰ διαγινόμενον ἐστὶν] here signifies, is by learned men made a matter of some question. The time to wch S. Paul refers, must be that of his going (with Barnabas here mentioned) from Antioch to Jerusalem, on the question here discoursed of, about the necessity of the Gentile Christians being circumcised, that so first it may connect (with the spaces mention'd c.1.18,21. (so as the word πάλιν again seems to import) to denote the next time of his going to Jerusalem after that mentioned v. 18. and 2^dly, so as to denote a time wherein Peter may be supposed still to reside at Jerusalem, and wherein Titus may be supposed to be with S. Paul as a neophytus, and a companion, (and so in danger of being pressed to be circumcised) not yet employ'd, or sent out by him on any service in the Churches. Now this is thought so unlikely to be fourteen years after the space last mention'd c.1.21. (his going to Syria and Cilicia *Act.*9.30.) that it hath been thought probable, that (as in numeral let- times it oft happens) fourteen ſhould be here ſet in ſtead of four; For which emendation ſeeing there appears not any ground in the Antient Manuſcripts, it will ſurely be more reaſonable to obſerve, 1. that διὰ doth not diſtinctly ſignifie [after] (as μετὰ c.1. 18. had done) but by, or about, i.e. neer that ſpace, though not preciſely fourteen years. 2dly, that the Ἔπειτα Afterward, or then] referres not to that which was mention'd immediately before, his paſſing through Syria and Cilicia, ſo as to affirm this to have been fourteen years after that, No, nor to the former Epocha's, either his going up to Jeruſalem, v.18. or departing into Arabia, v.17. but to that great Epocha, ſo conſiderable to him, the time of his converſion, which immediately ſucceeding the death of S. Steven may reaſonably be placed (in the firſt year after Chriſt's aſſumption,) *An.Ch.*34. From whence to the time of that Councel, which is ordinarily placed An. Ch. 47. it was about thirteen, or fourteen years; And then there will be no more need of an emendation, then there is authority for the imagining any.

What ὐκ ἠναγκάσθη was not conſtrained,] ſignifies here, is a matter of ſome difficulty, which being explained will make the next verſe perſpicuous, which otherwiſe ſeems not intelligible, That ſome pretended Chriſtians looked very jealouſly on S. Paul, as one averſe from the Moſaical law, is ſufficiently known, Theſe, when Paul came to Jeruſalem, laid it to his charge that he preached to the Gentiles that were not circumciſed, converſed freely with them, and Titus (being a Gracian, and at that time with him) they ſpecified to be one of them, And him they would have conſtrained to be circumciſed, But, ſaith S. Paul, ὐκ ἠναγκάσθη, though he were ſuch as was pretended, and though this were thus preſſed by them, and though I was by this means likely to aliene the Jewes minds from the Goſpel, as it was preacht by me, (this being an act of confeſſion that I was guilty of what was laid to my charge) and ſo matter of ſome ſcandal to the Jewes of Jeruſalem, yet I that was willing to yeild at ſome times (to avoid the ſcandal of the Jewes) to perform ſome ceremonies of the law, Act. 21.26. and ſo circumciſed Timothy, was reſolved not to doe it now, becauſe, if I did, it muſt appear that thoſe falſe brethren, pretended Chriſtians, had overcome me at Jeruſalem, and that the Church there judged on their ſide againſt me, and ſo that Titus had been by order of the Church or Councel of Jeruſalem, forced to be circumciſed, Which thing muſt needs have been matter of ſo much greater ſcandal and diſcouragement to the Gentiles, in aliening their minds from the Chriſtian faith, and that ſcandal have been more conſiderable to the hindrance of the progreſſe of the Goſpel, which was to be hoped for more plentifully among the Gentiles, then the Jewes, that I was very reſolute, and took ſpecial care that Titus ſhould not be circumciſed. And this v.3. διὰ τοὺς παρεισάκτους ψευδαδέλφους, becauſe of the falſe brethren, that came in to watch what I would doe, and to carry it againſt me in the Councel at Jeruſalem, which is expreſſed by καταδουλώσωνται bringing under] in the end of the verſe; By theſe Paul reſolved he would not be worſted, and therefore though at other times he was content to comply ὡς ἔθος for ſome ſhort time, yet now he would not doe ſo, that the truth of the Goſpel might abide toward you, i.e. that the Galatians, i.e. Gentile Chriſtians might not be ſcandalized at this compliance, which is before meant by μή πως εἰς κενὸν τρέχω v 2. leſt I ſhould have run in vain, i.e. leſt I ſhould diſcourage and loſe the Gentiles, which I had brought to the faith, as on the other ſide he went and gave an account at Jeruſalem to the δοκοῦντες eminent perſons there, of his preaching the Goſpel to the uncircumciſed Gentiles, and the reaſons of it, μή πως εἰς κενὸν τρέχω, leſt he ſhould now ſcandalize the Jewes, that were Chriſtians, and aliene them (at Jeruſalem, and elſewhere) from hearkning to him.

What hath often been obſerved of the uſage of Greek words, in theſe ſacred writers, otherwiſe then in the propriety of the Greek language belongs to them, muſt alſo from words be extended to ſyntaxis, which is oft ſuch, as the rules of Grammar, and uſe of authors doth not admit of. And this for the moſt part falls out by the interpoſing of ſome parentheſis of greater, or leſſer length, and then proſecuting what was begun before it, in another form of conſtruction, then that in which it had been begun. Some examples of this in an inferior degree are obſervable *Col.*1.10. where after ἀξίως περιπατῆσαι ὑμᾶς, ſome words interpoſing, the conſtruction is altered, and goes on with [καρποφοροῦντες καὶ αὐξανόμενοι——] and c.3.16. where after ὁ λόγος ἐνοικείτω ἐν ὑμῖν—— Let the word of God inhabit in you, the conſtruction is ſoon alter'd, into διδάσκοντες καὶ νουθετοῦντες ἑαυτοὺς—— So Epheſ. 3.17. where after κατοικῆσαι τὸν Χριστὸν διὰ τῆς πίστεως ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ὑμῶν] followes v.18. ἐρριζωμένοι, καὶ τεθεμελιωμένοι, and ſo chap.4.1. where after ἐγὼ παλαιὸς ἐν κυρίῳ — ἀξίως περιπατῆσαι &c. (after a few words) followes [ἀνεχόμενοι, and σπουδάζοντες] which doth not regularly cohere with it. But this is more eminently obſervable in the beginning of the ſecond, and third Chapters of that Epiſtle, In the ſecond, after Ὑμᾶς ὄντας νεκροὺς τοῖς παραπτώμασιν καὶ τῇ ἀκροβυστίᾳ, there follows a long parentheſis to ver. 4. by which means the verb, that ſhould govern ὑμᾶς, is omitted, And the period again begun, with Ὁ δὲ Θεὸς—— συνεζωοποίησεν ὑμᾶς, καὶ ὄντας ὑμᾶς νεκροὺς τοῖς παραπτώμασιν συνεζωοποίησεν τῷ Χριστῷ, which [συνεζωοποίησεν hath quickned together with Chriſt] was ſure the verb omitted in the firſt verſe. So c.3.1. after [Τούτου χάριν ἐγὼ Παῦλος ὁ δέσμιος——, For this cauſe I Paul a priſoner of Chriſt Jeſus for you Gentiles,] comes in a long parentheſis, εἴγε ἠκούσατε &c. and another involved in that v.3. καθὼς προέγραψα &c. to the end of the fourth verſe, and then the former parentheſis reſumed again either unto the end of ver.7 and then the form of the conſtruction is changed from ἐγὼ] to ἐμοὶ] or perhaps to the end of v. 12th, or poſſibly the 13th, and then the period begins anew, Διὸ αἰτοῦμαι, i.e. For which cauſe I (that Paul, the priſoner of Jeſus Chriſt, v.1.) beſeech you that ye be not diſcouraged at my tribulations) or for this cauſe I bow my knees &c. or yet more probably, it concludes not till the end of that chapter, the fourth chapter beginning, I therefore the priſoner in the Lord beſeech you—— And by this means the [ἐγὼ Παῦλος] hath no verb following it, whereſoever the parentheſis be concluded. Tis true indeed ſome have endevoured to avoid this by acknowledging an ellipsis in that first verſe, and ſupplying it thus, For this cauſe I Paul am the priſoner —— But there be many inconveniences conſequent to that rendring. And the many other examples of the like, ſhew that there is no reaſon to flie to that refuge. And to omit other inſtances, thus it is twice in this place, First v.4. where having begun the period with [Διὰ δὲ τοὺς παρεισάκτους —— ſome words intervening by way of parentheſis to the end of the verſe, the ſenſe begun is not finiſht, but inſtead of it, οἷς οὐδὲ πρὸς ὥραν εἴξαμεν ver. 5. And then in like manner here v.6. the period being begun [Ἀπὸ δὲ τῶν δοκούντων εἶναί τι, but from theſe prime men, or that appeared to be ſomewhat,] (by which it appears that οὐδὲν ἔλαβον I received nothing, or ſomewhat like was deſigned to be joyned to it) after the interpoſing of a parentheſis, ὁποῖοί ποτε ἦσαν &c. Whatſoever they were is maketh no matter to me, &c. the ſenſe is begun again in another form, Ἐμοὶ γὰρ οἱ δοκοῦντες οὐδὲν προσανέθεντο, For theſe prime men added nothing to mee.

d. The three names that lie in the Greek v. 9. will in the conſtruction be beſt placed here v.7. as the nominative caſe to which [ἰδόντες, ſeeing] agrees. Now who theſe three were, that are here called pillars, and who are by S. Paul found at Jeruſalem, may appear by what hath been ſaid (note on 1 *Cor.*15.a.) out of ancient writers, of James the brother of the Lord, Him, ſaith Clemens Ἀλεξανδρ: l.5. Peter, James, and John choſe Biſhop of Jeruſalem (ἐπίσκοπον Ἱεροσολύμων, not Apoſtolorum, biſhop of the Apoſtles, as Ruffinus miſreads, or miſrenders it) and though they were the three by Chriſt preferred, and more honoured then all the reſt of the twelve, yet did they not contend one with another for this dignity, but after our Saviours reſurrection (the next year, ſaith Euſebius in Chronico, or the 19. of Tiberius) unanimouſly conferred it on James the Juſt. So before Clemens, Hegeſippus; James, ſaith he, the brother of the Lord, called by all James the Juſt, received, or undertook the Church of Jeruſalem with, not, as S. Hieromе reads, poſt, after (as if it were μετ' Ἀποστόλους, not Ἀποστόλων) the Apoſtles. So ſaith Athanaſius in Συνοψ: *Epiphan: Har:*78. *Greg: Nyſſ: de Reſurrect: Or:*2. Hieromе in Catal: and in Gal: 1. Now 'tis clear that at this time, of which S. Paul ſpeaks one of theſe three Apoſtles who made him Biſhop, James the ſon of Zebedee (one of the προτετιμημένοις preferred before the other Apoſtles) was dead, and ſo onely Peter and John left, who therefore are the latter two here named, and James the Juſt ſet foremoſt before either of them, as being now Biſhop of Jeruſalem; A dignity, ſaith Clemens, even in reſpect of the Apoſtles themſelves. In reſpect of which dignity placed on him, it is alſo that he is called an Apoſtle c.1.19. and *Act.*15.6. and 22. and by S. Hieromе, Apoſtolus decimus tertius, the thirteenth Apoſtle.

e. The Hebrew יכח which ſignifies to find out, to detect, and is ſometimes rendred ἐλέγχειν, ἐξελέγχειν, δοκιμάζειν, ἐλέγχειν, is alſo rendred κατακρίνειν to condemn, ſo Prov. 28. 11. σοφὸς παρ' αὐτῷ ἀνὴρ πλούσιος, ὃς νόμων πένης κατακρίνει αὐτῶν, The rich man is wiſe in his own conceit, but the poor man that hath underſtanding ſhall detect him, So Eccluſ. 5. 17. κατάγνωσι πονηρὸν ἐπὶ ἀγελάῳ, Detection is very grievous or troubleſome to a man that is double-tongued. Accordingly the word properly belongs to that charge or blame that falls on an hypocrite, when his diſſimulation ſeems to be detected, and that this is the meaning of κατεγνωσμένος here, appears by that which follows, v.13. Συνυπεκρίθησαν &c. the reſt of the Jewes diſſembled with him. As for the prater tenſe, wherein here 'tis ſet, that ordinarily ſignifies in the ſenſe of the preteritum pluſquam perfectum, and ſo Theophylact here interprets it, he had been found faults with, or charged of hypocriſie (viz: that ſpecified v.12.) not by Paul, but ὑπὸ ἄλλων, by others that ſaw the fact, but knew not why he did it, and ſo thought it hypocriſie in him to eat with the Gentiles, when they of Jeruſalem were abſent, and to withdraw from the Gentiles, when they of Jeruſalem were preſent.

What ἁμαρτωλοὶ ſignifies in this place, will beſt be reſolved by the context, which enforceth the ſenſe (which I have given it) of Gentiles, in oppoſition to the Jewes, ſo v. 15. ἐξ ἐθνῶν ἁμαρτωλοὶ ſinners of the Gentiles] oppoſite to φύσει Ἰουδαῖοι Jewes by birth, (ſee note on *Lu.*7. b.) It is known that the Jewes lookt on all Gentiles with an odium, as on thoſe, which were of a contrary religion to them, and ſo they did conſequently on all thoſe that converſt with them, and it was that, (and not ſo much their other ſins) that made the Publicans ſo odious to them in Chriſts time, And as Chriſts eating with ſuch, and not obſerving, (as they thought) the Judaical law, made them look upon him as an ἁμαρτωλὸς, a ſinner, Joh. 9. 24. ſo S. Paul's teaching liberty to lay aſide the Moſaical performances, is here lookt on by them as Gentiliſme, and ſo is objected to him in this phraſe, that he being a Jew born is found ἁμαρτωλὸς a ſinner, i. e. guilty of Gentiliſme under the name of ἁμαρτία ſinne, and that by teaching this to be the Doctrine of Chriſt, he makes Chriſt διάκονον ἁμαρτίας, one that came to aſſiſt and contribute to the ſetting up of Gentiliſme againſt Judaiſme. This S. Paul, that knew what Judaiſme truly ſignified, (the doctrine of good life in the old Teſtament, which was by God thought fit to be fenced in by thoſe ceremonies, not placing Religion in the bare obſervance of the Ceremonies, without heeding the ſubſtance of them) doth with deteſtation deny, μὴ γένοιτο God forbid, taking the words of the objection, as by them that made it, they were meant, that he taught Chriſt to be a favourer of Idolaters, and the worſhip of the heathen falſe-Gods, in oppoſition to the way of worſhipping the true God by himſelf preſcribed to Moſes. This Paul denies, knowing that thoſe Moſaical ceremonies were not the thing, wherein (abſtracted from the inward purity, ſignified, and deſired by God to be ſecured by them) the worſhip of the true God conſiſted, as on the other ſide he neither favoured any part of heathen worſhip, or wicked life, nor by any thing he preacht, taught Chriſt to be a favourer of it, but directly the contrary. Paraphrase.

a. 1. What heretick with his sorceries hath brought you off b. from Christianity to Judaisme again (see c. 4. 10.) you, I say, to whom Christ crucified hath been formerly as convincingly declared, by our preaching, as if he had been set before your eyes, nailed to the crosse among you.

1. O Foolish Galatians, [who hath * bewitched you, that you should not obey the truth * before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth, b crucified among you?]

2. I pray let me dispute it a while with you, and demand this one thing which may reasonably set an end to the whole controversie; The gifts of the Spirit that are in your Church, were they there till the Gospell was preacht to you? (1 Cor. 12. 28.) was the Mosaicall law able to give you any such privileges, to work such miracles among you? undoubtedly it was not.

2. This onely would I learn of you, received ye the spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?]

3. And then is there any reason, that having by the Gospell receiv'd the gifts of the Spirit, and so begun to be a Christian Church, thriven and prospered well in that plain way, you should now think it necessary to take in the law as a suppletory, to make your selves up with the externall, Mosaicall, carnall rites, and ceremonies?

3. Are ye so foolish? having begun in the spirit † are ye now made perfect by the flesh?]

4. You have suffered many persecutions and hardships for Christianity, which, if you would have Judaized, you might have avoided (your persecutions generally proceeding from that fountain) and if this doctrine be true, then what are yee the better for all these sufferings? Nay, twere well if this were all, that you should onely lose the benefits of your sufferings, 'tis to be feared this change will bring worse effects on you the losse of that Evangelical spirit, if you mend not.

4. Have ye suffered so many things in vain? * if it be yet in vain.]

5. God therefore that hath furnish'd your Church with so many extraordinary gifts of the Spirit, and wrought so many miracles among you, did he any such thing under the Mosaicall Law? is there any thing in that fit to draw you back to it again from the profession of the Gospell? v. 2. Is not faith it, that all the great privileges and advantages have still belonged to?

5. He therefore that ministreth to you the spirit, and worketh miracles among you, doth he it by the workes of the law, or by the hearing of faith?]

6. As 'twas beleiving, upon which Abraham was justified.

6. Even as Abraham beleived God, and it was accounted to him for righteousnesse.]

7. From whence it follows, that those which are justified as Abraham was, are not the Mosaicall observers, but beleivers onely, those that receive and obey that doctrine which is taught and required by Christ, the Gentiles as well as Jewes.

7. Know ye therefore, that they which are of faith, the same are the chidren of Abraham.]

8. And the words of the promise made to Abraham which was an Evangelicall not legall promise, did in effect contain this in them, that all nations of the world, and not onely the Jewes should be justified by faith, and so the Gentiles now, and that without legall Mosaicall performances, for thus the words of the promise ran, In thee shall all the nations of the earth be blessed, [All the nations] and so the heathens, and not onely the Jewes, who lived according to the Law, [shall be blessed in thee] i.e. the form of benediction used among the Gentiles, and not onely the Jewes, shall be with mention of Abraham's name, viz: that God will blesse them as he blessed Abraham, justifie them, as he did him, make the whole Gentile world partakers of that promise made personally to Abraham, on condition they beleive and obey as he did, All looking on Abrahams obedience and justification, as the example of all Christians, that all that beleive and obey, as he did, shall be blest as he was. c.

8. And the Scripture foreseeing that God would justifie the heathen through faith preached before the Gospell unto Abraham, saying, * In thee shall all nations be blessed.]

9. From all which 'tis clear that beleivers or Christian livers without Mosaicall performances, have their part of that blessing that was promised to Abraham; and those that sprang from him (from his faith, as well as from his loynes) are blest on the same terms as he was.

9. So then they which be of faith, are blessed with faithfull Abraham.]

10. For all that expect to be justified by the law without the faith of Christ, (which if it be acknowledg'd, takes away the wall of partition betwixt Jew and Gentile, and consequently the law, which in the externall part of it establish'd that partition, and non-communion between them) or without accepting those reformations, and changes of shadow for substance, brought in by Christ, doe set up Moses, not onely absolutely but comparatively, and exclusively to Christ, and they that do thus, are still involved under the curse for every sin they are ever guilty of, and consequently being guilty of some breach or other, can never have any thing but curse by this means, and so are farre from being justified.

10. For as many as are of the workes of the law are under the curse, for it is written, Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to doe them.]

11. But

* to whom before your eyes Iesus Christ hath been set forth among you, having been crucified, or, (leaving our, among you. for the Kings MS. omits ὑμῖν) to whom Iesus Christ, that was crucified, hath been set forth before your eyes.

† doe you now end in the flesh? νῦν σαρκὶ ἐπιτελεῖσθε;

* and I would it were even in vaine, εἰ γε καὶ εἰκῇ

11. But that no man is justified by the law in the sight of God, it is evident; for, * the just shall live by faith.] 11. And the same is proved by that known testimony Hab. 2 4. (see Rom. 1.17. Heb. 10. 38.) They to whom life is promised are the beleivers, or they that are justified after the Evangelical manner.

* the just by faith shall live viz. in the doctrine of the Gospel

12. And the law is not of faith; but the man that doth † them, shall live in them.] 12. Whereas the law makes no account of faith, allows no justification, but on condition of legal obedience, performance of all that requires.

† those things

13. Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us; for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree.] 13. In which case, there being no means in the law to justifie any, but rather to bring curses on all, because all have sinned v. 10. Christ hath been seasonably pleased to interpose, to make satisfaction for sin, to bear that curse which belonged to us (and that he did by being crucified, which being a Roman punishment was yet neer kin to that of hanging on a tree, i. e. a gibbet of wood, Deut. 19. 23. which is said there to be an accursed death.)

14. That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ: that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith.] 14. That the favour bestowed on Abraham, of being justified by faith, and not by ceremonial observances, may be communicated to the Gentiles who believe in God as Abraham, and all those precious consequents thereof, the gifts of the Spirit usefull to the building up of a Church, v. 25. as well as that single promise of justification.

15. Brethren, I speak after the manner of men; Though it be but a man's covenant, yet if it be confirmed, no man disanulleth or addeth thereto.] 15. Brethren, 'tis ordinarily acknowledged among men, that a covenant, though it be but of a man, being once firmly made, cannot be voided.

16. Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made, he saith not, And to seeds, as of many, but as of one, And to thy seed, which is [d] Christ. 16. And much lesse can the promises of God miscarry, which were made to Abraham and to his seed, Not to seeds in the plural, which might make a difference betwixt Jewes and Gentiles, but in the singular, To thy seed, viz: as to Isaac (who was therein a type of Christ) so distinctly to Christ, as he is the head of a family, a spiritual father of children, all beleivers coming from him as a spiritual progeny, and consequently to all Christians without discrimination, Jews or Gentiles, circumcised or uncircumcised. d.

* to Christ, εἰς Χριστὸν; but the King's MS. omits those words

17. And this I say, that the covenant that was confirmed before of God * in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannull, that it should make the promise of none effect.] 17. To the same purpose again it is observable, that the law that was delivered by Moses, above four hundred and thirty years, after the time that that promise was made to Abraham, Gen. 22. 3. cannot in any reason be thought to disannull or frustrate, or invalidate the covenant made by God to Abraham, and in him to all beleivers or Christians, his spiritual, as well as carnal progeny, so as to leave beleivers now under obligation to observe the Mosaical law, or to propose justification to them upon no other terms but those; when in the promise to Abraham, so long before, it was made over to them upon these other cheaper, and better terms of fidelity, and sincerity, and purity of the heart.

18. For if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise, but God gave it to Abraham by promise.] 18. For if the blessing that is promised to Abrahams seed, whether carnal or spiritual, i. e. to beleiving Gentiles, as well as circumcised Jewes, came by the performance of the Mosaical law, then comes it not by the promise made to Abraham, which is directly contrary to the Scripture, which affirms it to come, as to Abraham, so to all others by promise only.

19. † Wherefore then serveth the law? it was added because of transgression, till the seed should come, to whom the promise was made: and it was * ordained by Angels in the hand of a mediator.] 19. You will ask then if the promise made to Abraham be the only thing by which now and ever since justification hath been to be had, to what purpose the law was given? I answer, It was given to restrain men from sin, and to shew them their gilt, and to make them seek out for a remedy, which is to be found only in the doctrine of the Gospel, and in this respect it was usefull for the while, till Christ and his members, disciples and beleivers should come, and that the law might be the more effectual to that end to restrain us from sin, it was given in a glorious formidable manner, by Angels delivering the ten Cõmandements in thunder, so terribly, that the people durst not approach the mountain, and therefore was Moses called up to be a Mediatour, standing betwixt God and the people to shew them the word of the Lord, Deut. 5.5. and by his hand it was delivered to them.

20. Now a mediatour is not a mediatour of one, but God is one.] 20. Here again it may be objected, that if in the delivery of the law Moses were a mediatour, he must then needs be so between God and the Israelites, and then it must be supposed that as in a covenant, so in that giving of the law there must be a contract between God and the people, and then the subject matter of this contract will in all probability be justification upon performance of legal obedience, and then God will by pact be obliged to observe this truth still, and justifie such, and none else.

21. Is the law then against the promises of God: God forbid: for if there had been a law given, which could have given life, verily righteousnesse should have been by the law.] 21. To this I answer, that if this were conclusive, it would then make void those promises made to Abraham, which must be as carefully preserved, as the objecter seems carefull to make good God's pact by the law. And indeed the true way of stating the difficulty must be, by preserving both, as farre as the matter will bear; But there is one thing supposed in this objection which is utterly false, and the cause of all the mistake, viz: that 'tis possible to perform the law (for that must be presupposed before we can talk of justification by that contract betwixt God and man) or that the law furnishes with strength sufficient to doe it, If that indeed were true, there would be no reason to expect the performance of the promises made to Abraham, and consequently of justification but only by the law; but when the law doth no such matter, 'tis clear that that cannot be a valid contract, but void assoon as made, and so that it supersedes not that other of promise to Abraham, or that which is now by me insisted on in Christ, which is purposely to supply the defects and defailances of the law.

22. But the scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that beleive.] 22. But 'tis clear by scripture, that all men of all nations, Jewes and others are guilty of sin Rom 3.19. and so uncapable of justification by the law, which requires perfect obedience, or else cannot justifie, and so still there is no justification to be had upon other terms but those of grace and promise, upon condition of performing sincere Evangelical faithfull obedience. 23. But

28. All that can be ſaid of the law, is, that before Chriſt and the Goſpell came we were by God put under that œconomy, kept under and diſciplin'd by it, as in a ſtate of candidates or expectants, untill the time ſhould come for the revelation of the Goſpell.

23. But before faith came we were kept under the law, ſhut up unto the faith, which ſhould afterward be revealed.]

24. And ſo the law was onely a guardian or inſtitutor of us, in time of minority, as it were, an imperfect rule proportion'd to an imperfect ſtate, not to juſtifie, but onely to keep us in order, and to leave and deliver us up to the Goſpell onely for juſtification.

24. Wherefore the law was our ſchoole-maſter to bring us unto Chriſt, that we might be juſtified by faith.]

25. Now therefore the Goſpell being come, the ſchoole-maſter, or guardian in minority, is quite out dated.

25. But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a ſchoole-maſter.]

26. For all that are true beleivers are adopted by God, and conſequently juſtified without legall obſervances onely by faith.

26. For ye are all the children of God by faith in Chriſt Jeſus.]

27. According to that known rule, that, All of what ſort ſoever that have received the faith, and are accordingly baptized into it, are made members of Chriſt.

27. For as many of you as have been baptized into Chriſt have put on Chriſt.

21. And there is no diſcrimination from any outward accidents of country, relation, ſex, but circumciſed, or uncircumciſed ye are all equally accepted in Chriſt, if ſincere beleivers, or being members of Chriſt v. 27. ye are all accepted by God.

28. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are * all one in Chriſt Jeſus.]

* or, all Jeſus Chriſt's for the Kings MS. reads ἀναστοι γαρ ὑμεις εστε χριστου Ἰησου

29. And if received and accepted by God, as members of Chriſt, then are you that ſpirituall ſeed of Abraham, to whom the promiſes of juſtification made by him doe belong by way of inheritance, without any neceſſity of legall performances, or any other ſuppletory claime or tenure.

29. And if ye be Chriſts, then are ye Abrahams ſeed, and heires according to the promiſe.]

Notes on Chap. III.

3. Ἀνόητοι Galatæ

These two words ἀνόητοι, and ἐβάσκανε, fooliſh and bewitch't] being applyed by the Apoſtle to theſe Galatians ſeeme to referre to the prevailing of the Gnoſticks infuſions upon them, the ſorceries uſed by the Leaders of that ſect, and the follies of thoſe that were ſeduced by them, or elſe 'tis not impoſſible that the former of theſe [ἀνόητοι] ſhould referr to ſome beginnings of the hereſie of the Ebionites, the ſpreading of which not long after this, (in Trajans time) is ſet down by Euſebius at large, l. 3. c. κζ. but ſo as it is uncertain, whether the originall of it were not more antient as early as might be taken notice of by this Apoſtle. Of them it is Euſebius's obſervation that their name was given them from the Hebrew אביונים poor, διὰ τὴν πλουχίαν διανοίας ἀνῶν, becauſe of the poverty of their underſtandings, the men being very ſilly men, and their hereſie accordingly a ſenſeleſſe one, They did πλωχῶς καὶ πανουῶς περὶ Χριστοῦ δοξάζιν, ſaith he, entertain very mean, and poor thoughts, and opinions of Chriſt, and that he was ψιλὸς καὶ κοινὸς ἄνθρ, a meer and common man, κατὰ προκοπὴν ἀρετῆς δεδικαιωμένος, by proficiency in virtue juſtified, but yet no more then a man; In reference to which their doctrine, (and perhaps, by this time, known title,) it is not ſtrange that when the Apoſtle looks upon any ſeeds of this hereſy among the Galatians, he ſhould, to awake and reproach them out of it, in an unaccuſtomed ſtyle of ſome contumely, call them ἀνόητοι Γάλαται fooliſh Galatians.] It being ſuch a ſcandalous piece of folly in them to leave the Apoſtles, to follow ſuch ſilly teachers as theſe: And becauſe Simon Magus, and after him Menander had uſed Magick and ſorcery, done ſome feigned miracles to gain them followers, and diſciples (as appears by Euſebius l. 3. c. κε. and therefore among the ſinnes of the fleſh, which the Gnoſticks a great ſpawn of them had brought into the Church, he puts Φαρμακεῖαι in the ſecond place, ſee note on c. 5. 20.) but theſe poor fooles did not pretend to any ſuch, as Euſebius there ſaith, therefore it may well be, (if the times will permit, that he here addes τίς ἐβάσκανε; who hath bewitcht you not to obey the truth? intimating that they have not had any ſuch excuſe for their being ſeduced, the fathers of this hereſie, which now he is about to ſpeak of, being no ſuch witches, having not ſo much ſubtlety, or cunning, and conſequently not able to ſeduce any, but meer ſots and fooles. Now among the doctrines of theſe Ebionites we find in Euſebius in the places forecited (beſide that ſo much to the diminution of Chriſt) that they taught the obſervation of the Jewiſh law, δεῖν πάντως ἀυτοῖς τῆς νομικῆς θρησκείας, ὡς μὴ διὰ μόνης τῆς εἰς τὸν Χριστὸν πίστεως, καὶ τοῦ κατ' ἀυτὸν βίου σωθησομένους, that they were altogether bound to retain the legal ſervice or Judaical religion, and that the faith in Chriſt, and living according to it would not prove ſufficient to ſave them. And ſpeaking of a ſecond brood of them, differing from the firſt in the point of the conception of Chriſt, yet, ſaith he, they agree'd with them in this, ὁμοίως ἐκείνοις τοῖς σωματικῶς περὶ τὸν νόμον λαμβάνειν διάνοιαν, that they were obliged to obſerve the bodily legal religion, as the former did, and thereupon, ſaith he, they rejected the Epiſtles of Saint Paul, ἀποστάτην ἀυτὸν καλοῦντες τοῦ νόμου, calling him an apoſtate from the law, and uſing the Goſpell, which is called the Goſpell according to the Hebrewes, and no other, obſerving the Sabbath, καὶ τὰ Ἰουδαϊκὰ ἄλλα ἀγωγὰ, and all their other obſervances, and on the Lord's dayes joyning with the Chriſtians in commemorating the reſurrection of Chriſt, and doing παραπλήσια ἡμῖν, like to us Chriſtians. Agreeably to this we here find theſe ſo many things which poſſibly referre to them or ſome ſeeds of them. Firſt, the vindicating of the doctrine of Chriſt crucified, v. 1. (which in other places containes the whole ground of our Chriſtian profeſſion and particularly that of the abolition of the Moſaicall rites, ſee c. 2, 20, and Eph. 2. 14.) by the clear undeniable evidences of it ſet forth, and teſtified among them, before theſe ſilly teachers came among them, ſo that 'tis a prodigie to ſee them ſeduced by ſuch men, againſt ſuch conviction, and evidence to the contrary. Secondly, the phraſe [ἐν σαρκὶ in the fleſh] v. 3. to denote their σωματικὴ λατρεία bodily religion, ſi circumciſion

circumcision &c. aſſerted by them. Thirdly, the whole diſcourſe following, concerning the neceſſity of the Moſaical law, and the ἔτνες ἀνοητοι; are ye ſo fooliſh? (again v. 3.) to introduce it. Mean while it muſt be remembred that at that time, the hereſie of the Gnoſticks being the great peſt of the Church, into which all other leſſer ſects like diſeaſes, were converted, the common ſewer or ſink, into which they were powred, this of the Ebionites if it were now ſprung, was in conjunction with that of the Gnoſticks alſo, and not ſeparated from it.

b. ἐν ὑμῖν Ἐσταυρωμένος

That it ſhould be here ſaid to the Galatians, that Chriſt Jeſus was ἐν ὑμῖν ἐσταυρωμένος crucified among them, is not well to be imagined, neither is there any reaſon to underſtand the words ſo, which are otherwiſe interpretable, either by removing the comma after προεγράφη, or by ſetting it after ὑμῖν, thus, To whom Jeſus Chriſt having been crucified, hath been ſet forth among you, before your eyes, i.e. with evidence and conviction. Another way of conſtruction might alſo be pitch'd on, by joyning οἷς and ἐν ὑμῖν (as 1 Pet. 2. 24. ᾧ τῷ μώλωπι ἰάθητε by whoſe ſtripes of him, i.e. by whoſe ſtripes of him, i.e. by whoſe ſtripes) among whom, i.e. you; But that which removes all difficulty is, that the ‡King's MS. leaves out ἐν ὑμῖν among you, and then the ſenſe will be obvious, and the conſtruction clear, οἷς κατ' ὀφθαλμοὺς Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς προεγράφη to whom before your eyes (i.e. evidently) Chriſt Jeſus hath been ſet forth, or expoſed to publick view, (ſo προγράφειν ſignifies, ſee note on Jude 2.) ἐσταυρωμένος having been crucified, i.e. made known and evidenced in his ſufferings, whereby he took away the partition betwixt Jew & Gentile, aboliſhed the ceremonies of the Moſaical law, and ſo alſo in the power of his reſurrection, the conſequent of theſe ſufferings of his.

c. ἐν σοὶ Ἐυλογηθήσονται

The likelieſt way of interpreting this phraſe [ἐν σοὶ ἐυλογηθήσονται] will be by obſerving firſt, what is meant by [ἐυλογηθῆναι] and then by [ἐν σοὶ] For the firſt, it referres clearly to the form of benedictions among the Jewes, Lev. 9. 23. uſed ſolemnly by the prieſts, who did bleſſe the people in ſet forms, Num. 6. 24. (as well as bleſſe God for them, as Gen. 14. 19. Melchiſedek bleſſed Abraham, and ſaid, Bleſſed be Abraham of the moſt high God, as well as, Bleſſed be the moſt high God, v. 20.) Thus alſo did parents bleſſe their children, Iſaac, Jacob, Gen 28. 3. and Jacob his ſons, Gen. 49. Then for the ἐν σοὶ, that will be interpreted by the uſe of the phraſe, Gen. 48. 20. where Jacob ſpeaking to, and bleſſing Ephraim and Manaſſeh, ſaith, In thee ſhall Iſrael bleſſe, (the very ſame phraſe as here) ſaying, God make thee as Ephraim and as Manaſſeh. By which it may be reaſonable to conclude, that to bleſſe others in this form, God make you as Ephraim &c. to make uſe of his enſample in bleſſing any, is to bleſſe them ἐν Ἐφραὶμ in Ephraim. And ſo proportionably this will be the meaning here of Ἐν σοὶ, In thee ſhall all the nations of the earth be bleſſed] They among all the nations or Gentiles, and not only the Jewes, that bleſſe themſelves or others, ſhall uſe this proverbial form of benedictions, by mentioning the bleſſings, that God beſtowed upon Abraham, God make thee as Abraham, &c. or as the form is ſet down, Gen. 28. 4. God give to thee the bleſſing of Abraham. Thus Rabbi Salomon interprets it on Gen. 12. 3. that men ſhall ſay to their children, Be thou as Abraham, adding that the phraſe is uſed in Scripture alwaies in this ſenſe. And ſo ſure it hath been uſed according to that prediction; Ever ſince, this form hath been retained among the Gentile part of the world, The God of Abraham &c. bleſſe thee. And the full importance of that bleſſing is [illegible] God's mercy to Abraham, his bleſſing him and his ſeed in this world with thoſe bleſſings of proſperity, but eſpecially his looking upon him as on a friend, (upon his faith in God's promiſes, and obedience to his commands) his juſtifying him by faith without the deeds of the law, is and ſhall be recited as an example of God's dealing not onely with the reſt of the Jewes, but alſo with the Gentile world, and the form of the Gentiles bleſſing or praying for themſelves, or of the prieſts for them, ſhall be this, that God will deal with them, as he did with Abraham, which is here uſed by the Apoſtle as a proof that the Gentiles are now to be juſtified by faith, without the Moſaical performances, which was the thing to be proved, v. 7. Thus was the phraſe uſed in the places of Geneſis, to which this here referres, Gen. 12. 3. where v. 2. theſe other phraſes are uſed to the ſame purpoſe, I will make thy name great, or illuſtrious, and thou ſhalt be a bleſſing, i.e. thy name ſhall be proverbially uſed in benedictions. So c. 18. 18. ſo c. 22. 18. the form is a little changed, In thy ſeed ſhall all the nations of the earth be bleſſed, i.e. I will give thee ſo numerous, and potent, and victorious a progeny, and make good the promiſes, made to thee, ſo viſibly to them alſo, to Iſaac and Jacob &c. Eccluſ. 44. 22. juſtifie them as I have juſtified thee (and that the progeny of Eſau, as well as Jacob, thoſe that ſhall obey me of the Gentiles, as well as Jewes) by faith without Judaical obſervances, that all the Gentiles ſhall take notice of them, and when they would bleſſe themſelves or others, or pray for God's acceptation or juſtification, they ſhall uſe the mention of thy progeny, or poſterity, that God would deal with them whom they bleſſe, as he deals with Abraham's ſeed, exceedingly proſper them, and multiply them, bleſs, and accept, and juſtifie them. So Act. 3. 25. where theſe words are cited again of God's telling Abraham [τῷ σπέρματί σου ἐυλογηθήσονται πᾶσαι αἱ πατριαὶ τῆς γῆς, in thy ſeed ſhall all the families of the earth be bleſſed.] the meaning is clearly this, that God hath ſo bleſſed Abraham's ſeed, the Jewes, in giving Chriſt to them, and to them firſt or primarily v. 26. that all the families or nations of the earth, when they ſhall bleſſe themſelves (as the Greek paſſive is oft in the ſenſe of the Hebrew Hithpael) or when they ſhall be bleſſed by their parents, or prieſts, or friends, this ſhall be the form, God bleſſe thee, as he did the Jewes, or Abraham's ſeed. To this matter it may perhaps be farther obſervable, that the phraſe [It was counted unto him for righteouſneſs] ſo often applied to Abraham Rom. 4. may ſeem to ſignifie in this ſame ſenſe alſo, that his faith, and ready obedience in going out of his countrey, &c. were by God looked on, as ſuch heroick acts, in one brought up among examples of idolatry and villany, that it took off that entaile of curſe, that lay upon that nation, and family, and entailed a ſignal bleſſing on him and his ſeed, viz. upon that part of it that imitated him, Iſaac and Jacob, and the obedient Jewes (though the the rebellious were cut off in the wilderneſs, and after by captivities, and at laſt the crucifiers of Chriſt by the Roman Eagles) accordingly as it is ſaid of Phinees upon that heroical fact of his [It was counted to him for righteouſneſs among all poſterities for ever more,] i. e. that act of his zeal to God brought a bleſſing not onely upon his perſon, but upon his poſterity, as it is ſaid, Num. 25. 12. Behold I give unto him my covenant of peace, and he ſhall have it, and his ſeed after him, the covenant of an everlaſting prieſthood. And why may not (in analogie to this uſe of the phraſe in the Pſalmiſt) that of imputing Abraham's faith to him for righteouſneſs, be this bleſſing his ſeed, thoſe of his ſtock, and all others that imitated his obedience, for his ſake, or in the like manner, as God had bleſſed him.

d. Χῳ τῳ The word Χριστὸς ſometimes ſignifies Chriſt, conſidered as head of the Church, together with the body annext to it, i. e. Chriſt, and all beleivers, or Chriſtians. So 1 Cor. 12. 12. As the body is one, and hath many members and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body, ſo alſo is Chriſt. Where anſwerable to the body with many members] in the firſt part, is [ὁ Χριστὸς Chriſt] in the ſecond, which muſt therefore ſignifie the whole ſociety of Chriſtians. So 1 Pet. 1. 11. when he ſpeaks of the Spirit of Chriſt, i. e. of prophecie, foretelling the ſufferings which ſhould befall Chriſt, and the glories after them, it ſignifies not perſonally to Chriſt, but in this greater latitude, the crucifixion of Chriſt, and the perſecuting of Chriſtians, and proportionably the reſurrection of Chriſt, and the deliverance of the perſecuted Chriſtians, by the deſtruction of their enemies. And ſo here the context makes it clear, that by Chriſt all Chriſtians are to be underſtood, circumciſed or not, Jewes or Gentiles, ſo if ver. 17. the words [εἰς Χριστὸν] be to be retained, it muſt be underſtood of the whole body joyned with the head, the Chriſtians or all faithfull people, with Abraham the father of all ſuch, for to them was that covenant eſtabliſhed, and thoſe promiſes made. But thoſe words are left out in the King's MS. and ſo it ſeems moſt probable they ſhould be, and then the ſenſe will be clear, that the covenant was eſtabliſhed by God to Abraham.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. IV.

1, 2. Now as it is of heirs to eſtates among men, when they are in their minority, they are governed by guardians, and their eſtates ordered for receits and expences, by ſtewards, till the time come, after which either their father in his will, or elſe the lawes of the land put them in their own power, and free them from guardians, though all this while they are owners of their whole eſtates.

1. NOW I ſay, that the heir, as long as he is a child, differeth nothing from a ſervant, though he be Lord of all:

2. But is under * tutors and governours, untill the time appointed by the father.]

* guardians & ſtewards Vulgatus & interpres

3. So was it with us children of Abraham and of God, we were obliged to obſerve thoſe firſt rudiments of the worſhip of God in the Jewes religion, (ſee note on Col. 2. b.) with which God would have men brought up, and exerciſed to the more ſublime pure way of ſerving him:

3. Even ſo we, when we were children, were in bondage under the elements of the world:]

4, 5. But when that time was come, v. 2. wherein God ſaw it fit to remove the guardian of the heir, i. e. to lay the Moſaical law aſide, then God ſent his own ſon in humane fleſh, who ſubmitted to, and performed the whole law, to redeem us out of that ſlavery of Moſaical performances, and to receive us into participation of the promiſes made to Abraham, i. e. to juſtification, without thoſe legal obſervances, and he at his parting from the world finally removed all thoſe obligations from the Chriſtians ſhoulders, nailed thoſe ordinances to his croſſe, aboliſhed them by his death, Epheſ. 2. 14. &c.

4. But when the fulneſſe of the time was come, God ſent forth his ſon made of a woman, made under the law,

5. To redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of ſons.]

6. And that you are ſons appears by this, that God hath ſent his Spirit into your hearts, giving you power and authority to call upon God, and make your addreſſes to him, not onely as your God, but your father, the Goſpel aſſuring you that ye are no longer in that ſervile condition, bound to legal obediences, but that God will deal with you according to the promiſes made to Abraham and his ſeed, juſtifie you upon the Goſpel-terms of faith, without the deeds of the law.

6. And † becauſe ye are ſons, God hath ſent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, father.] † that is in

7. So that you are no longer enſlaved to thoſe Moſaical performances, but are put into the ſtate of ſons, and conſeqnently through faith in Chriſt you are ſure of juſtification, according to the promiſes made to Abraham.

7. Wherefore thou art no more a ſervant, but a ſon, and if a ſon, then an heir of God through Chriſt.]

8. In time of your heatheniſme, before your converſion to Chriſtianity, ye ſerved idols, and were farre from thinking your ſelves obliged to the Moſaical law, knowing and conſequently heeding nothing of it:

8. Howbeit, then when ye knew not God, ye did ſervice unto them which by nature are no Gods:]

9. But now that you have converted to Chriſt, or rather are prevented by God, and called to this ſonſhip, when you were not a looking after it, but lay immerſed in idolatry, what reaſon is there, or how comes it to paſſe, that now being Chriſtians and ſo obliged to no part of the Jewiſh law, whoſe proſelytes ye are not, ye ſhould make another change ſo extremely to the worſe for your ſelves, in falling to the Moſaical performances, from which Chriſtian religion hath freed thoſe, which were before obliged to them, i. e. the

9. But now after that ye have known God, or rather are known of God, how turn ye again to the weak and beggerly elements, whereunto ye deſire again to be in bondage?]

i.e. the Jewes themſelves, (and which, now Chriſt is come, the ſubſtance of thoſe ſhadows, have nothing in them for which they ſhould be valued) and reſolving to be ſervants ſtill, in deſpight of that liberty of ſons, that Chriſt hath given you.

10. Ye obſerve daies, and months, and times, and years.] 10. Ye obſerve the Moſaical ceremonies, (ſee note on ch.3. a) ſabbaths, and new moons, and ſolemn feaſts, and anniverſary feaſts, or thoſe that return every ſeventh, and every fiftieth year, ſabbaticall years, or Jubilees, after the ſame manner that the Jewes before Chriſt thought themſelves obliged to obſerve them.

11. I am afraid of you, leſt I have beſtowed upon you labour in vain.] 11. Theſe practiſes of yours make me fear, that the Goſpel by me preached, will ſoon be loſt among you.

* I was alſo as ye, καθὼς ἐγὼ ὡς ὑμεῖς

12. Brethren, I beſeech you, be as I am, for * am as ye are, ye have not injured me at all.] 12. I pray follow my example, for I did once place my truſt in the law for juſtification, And I beſeech you doe not think that 'tis out of any ill affection that I write this, I have not been at all provoked by you, nor conſequently is it imaginable that I ſhould mean you malice, or deſire to bring on you perſecutions to no purpoſe, (the avoiding of which is the only bait which the Gnoſticks make uſe of to ſeduce you.)

13. Ye know how through [a] infirmity of the fleſh, I preached the Goſpel unto you † at the firſt.] 13. Nay why ſhould this fear ſo trouble you now, more then formerly it did? You know, and cannot but remember, that when I formerly preached unto you, I was perſecuted for my doctrine. a.

14. And my temptation which was in my fleſh ye deſpiſed not, nor rejected, but received me as an Angel of God, even as Chriſt Jeſus.] 14. And you then were not at all moved by that diſcouragement to deſpiſe me or my preaching, but received me with all the reſpect, and beleif, and cheerfulneſſe imaginable.

15. * Where is then the bleſſedneſſe that you ſpake of, for I bear you record, that if it had been poſſible you would have plucked out your own eyes, and have given them to me.] 15. And then how happy did you think your ſelves, that you had ſuch an Apoſtle? What would you not have parted with for our ſakes, were it never ſo dear to you? though now you are ſo ſhie and afraid of a little perſecution.

16. Am I therefore become your enemy, becauſe I tell you the truth?] 16. Am I then, who was at firſt ſo pretious to you, now taken for an enemy of yours, for one that means you miſchief, and am likely to bring perſecution and preſſures among you, (of which your new teachers, the Gnoſtick complyers, undertake to rid you) for no other crime, but only telling you my conſcience, and revealing the truth of the Goſpel unto you? This is a little unhappy.

17. They † zealouſly affect you, but not well: yea, they would exclude * you, that you might † affect them.] 17. Their great zeal toward you is out of no ſincere affection, or deſire of your good, but that they may ſupplant me, and get all your affection to themſelves, or that they may ſhut you out of the fold of Chriſt, that ye may follow them as your new paſtors.

18. But it is good to be zealouſly affected alwaies in a good thing, and not only when I am preſent with you.] 18. But in a good cauſe ye ought to be conſtant, and therefore ſo you ought in your affections to me, and to the doctrine then preached to you, and that now when I am abſent, and not only when I am preſent among you: Such a feeble decaying affection as that, is good for nothing.

19. My little children, of whom I travail in birth again, untill Chriſt be formed in you.] 19. My babes, which coſt me the ſame pain now, that you would, if I were now to convert you anew, till I can bear that the doctrine and practiſe of the Goſpel be purely, and perfectly received among you. (Thus great is my kindneſſe to you.)

* reſolved to come to you ere now, ἤθελον παρεῖναι ἄρτι † I am pos'd concerning you, ἀποροῦμαι ἐν ὑμῖν

20. I * deſire to be preſent with you now, and to change my voice, for † I ſtand in doubt of you.] 20. It was no want of care or kindneſſe in me, that I was not with you before this. Many reſolutions I have had to come to you, and to ſpeak with (inſtead of writing to) you, and ſo to apply theſe remedies ſharper or milder, as ſhould appear moſt convenient, being uncertain at this diſtance which is the beſt way of dealing with you.

21. Tell me, ye that deſire to be under the law, doe ye not hear the law?] 21. Certainly ye that ſtand for the neceſſity of legal performances to juſtification, may in the very law it ſelf ſee your ſelves confuted.

22. For it is written that Abraham had two ſons, the one by a bond-maid, the other by a free-woman.] 22. For of the two children that Abraham had, the one of Hagar, which denotes the Law; the other of Sarah, which denotes the Goſpel, without legal performances;

23. But he who was of the bond-woman, was born after the fleſh: but he of the free-woman was by promiſe.] 23. 'Tis apparent that one, viz: Hagar's child, was born after an ordinary manner; but Sarah's child was not by the ordinary courſe of nature, but above it, by the power of God, and by virtue of the promiſe made to Abraham.

* are allegorical, or doe expreſſe one thing by another † the word or name Hagar ſignifies * but is anſwerable συστοιχεῖ † ſhe is in bondage, or ſerves, δουλεύει

24. Which things * are an [b] allegory; for theſe are the two Covenants; the one from the mount Sinai, which gendreth to bondage, which is Agar.] 24. And theſe two mothers are figurative expreſſions, and allegorically denote the firſt and ſecond Covenant (ſee note on the Title of theſe books) the Law and the Goſpel, Hagar denotes the Law given from Sinai, and that brings nothing with it but ſervitude, and ſtrict obſervances, and yet thereby helps no man to the condition of ſons, to juſtification. b.

25. For † this Hagar, is mount Sinai in Arabia, * and [c] anſwereth to Jeruſalem which now is, and † is in bondage with her children.] 25. For the name of Hagar ſignifies the mount where the Law was given, and this is anſwerable to the preſent ſtate of the Jews, theſe Hagarens and all that ſpring from Iſmael being by their own lawes bound to be circumciſed, and obſerve the Moſaical law, like the Jewes, and ſo they, like Hagar their mother, are in a ſervile condition ſtill. c.

26. But Sarah, which denotes the ſtate of the Goſpel, that new city, which Chriſt hath brought from heaven with him, (ſee Rev. 21. b.) of which all we Chriſtians are free-men or citizens, ſhe is a free-woman, and ſignifies that we Chriſtians, Gentiles as well as Jewes, are free from the Moſaical rites &c. and that we may be juſtified without them.

26. But * Jeruſalem which is above, is free, which is the mother of us all.] * the ſupernal Jeruſalem ἡ ἄνω Ἰερουσαλὴμ

27. According to that prophecie, Iſa. 54. 1. Rejoice &c. the meaning of which is, that the Goſpel-covenant, which, when Chriſt was here on earth, had few children, few that were brought forth by it, After his death, upon the preaching of the Goſpel by the Apoſtles to the Gentiles, had many more, then among the Jewes in his life time.

27. For it is written, Rejoice thou barren, that beareſt not, break forth, and cry thou that travaileſt not, for the deſolate hath many more children, than ſhe which hath an husband.]

28. But, my brethren, as Iſaac was born only by ſtrength of God's promiſe, not by any ordinary means, Abraham and Sarah being beyond age, ſo are the children of God received to be ſuch, and juſtified only by the promiſe of God (i. e. through the ſtrength of that promiſe to Abraham, and covenant in Chriſt, that all faithfull, obedient, perſevering beleivers ſhould be juſtified) without any Moſaical performances.

28. Now we, brethren, as Iſaac was, are the children of promiſe.]

29. But as Iſmael then, who was born by the ſtrength of nature, perſecuted him that was born by the ſtrength of God's promiſe only, viz: Iſaac, ſo now it comes to paſſe; they that depend on the law for juſtification, perſecute them that depend onely on God's promiſe, that are perſwaded that through faith, without legal performances, they ſhall be juſtified.

29. But as then he that was born after the fleſh, perſecuted him that was born after the Spirit, even ſo is it now.]

d. 30. To theſe therefore is applyable that which follows in the ſtory, that Iſmael is to be caſt out, and none but Iſaac to inherit, they that depend on the law for juſtification never attain to it, but they that depend on the ſole promiſe of God, and accordingly expect to be juſtified upon performance of ſincere Evangelical obedience, without neceſſity of legal performances, they only ſhall be heires of this mercy.

30. Nevertheleſſe, what ſaith the ſcripture? Caſt out the bondwoman and her ſon; for the ſon of the bond-woman ſhall not [d] be heire with the ſon of the free-woman.]

31. And ſo all this belongs to us, who are Chriſtians, and conſequently are not obliged to the Moſaical performances, but juſtified by the Goſpel-way without them.

31. So then, brethren, we are not children of the bond-woman, but of the free.]

Notes on Chap. IV.

a. Ἀδύνατα

What ἀδύνατα σαρκὸς infirmity of the fleſh here ſignifies, will appear by the ordinary uſe of ἀδύνατα for afflictions, So 2 Cor. 12. εὐδοκῶ ἐν ἀδυνατίαις I take pleaſure in infirmities, i. e. afflictions, of which the ſeveral ſorts follow, contumelies, neceſſities, perſecutions, diſtreſſes for Chriſt. The ſame as before v. 6. I will not rejoice, but in mine infirmities, i. e. afflictions (as elſwhere he reſolves not to rejoice but in the croſſe of Chriſt) and ſo v. 9. when he praies for deliverance from the thorn in the fleſh, i. e. afflictions (ſee note on that place) he ſaith Gods anſwer was, My ſtrength is perfected ἐν ἀδυνατίᾳ in weakneſs, i. e. in the afflictions, that befall my ſervants, the giving them ſtrength to bear thoſe, is an act of the greateſt power, and mercy. So 1 Cor. 11. 30. πολλοὶ ἀδύνατοι many weak, may ſignifie afflicted, as that notes preſſures on their eſtates, becauſe for diſeaſes on the body, they follow in the ἄρρωστοι ſick, though elſwhere 'tis manifeſt that ἀδύνατα is uſed particularly for diſeaſe, as Iam. 6. 14, & 15. (ſee note on Rom. 8. m.) So 1 Cor. 2. 3. I was among you ἐν ἀδυνατίᾳ in weakneſs, i. e. perſecution, as it follows, and in fear and much trembling. So 2 Cor. 11. 29. Τίς ἀσθενεῖ κ ἐγὼ οὐκ ἀσθενῶ, who is weak and I am not weak, i. e. afflicted, for it followes v. 30. If I muſt glory, I will glory of my ἀσθενείας weakneſſes, the afflictions that I ſuffer for Chriſt, as he inſtances thereupon c. 9. And ſo here, as appears by v. 14. where it is expreſt by another phraſe of the ſame importance in the ſcripture-dialect, ὁ πειρασμὸς ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ, temptation in the fleſh, i. e. affliction, as when 'tis ſaid that God will not ſuffer us to be tempted above what we are able, but will with the temptation give us ἔκβασιν, a paſſage out, and ſo πειρασμὸς ἀνθρώπινος temptation, or affliction, that ordinarily this humane ſtate is ſubject to, 1 Cor. 10. 12, 13.

τὸ ἀσθενεῖ

ὁ πειρασμὸς ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ

πειρασμὸς ἀνθρώπινος

b. Ἀλληγορέω

The word ἀλληγορεῖται] ſignifies a figure, expreſſing one thing by another, from ἄλλος and ἀγορεύω enuntio, and here the verb medium muſt be in the active ſenſe, ſo ἅτινά ἐστιν ἀλληγορούμενα will be beſt rendred [which things doe expreſs, enuntiate, one thing δι' ἄλλου by another] for, as it followes, theſe are two Covenants, i. e. ſignifie two Covenants.

c. Συστοιχεῖ

Συστοιχεῖν ſignifies originally to walk along with, and being metaphorically uſed of things compared one to another, it ſignifies to be parallel, anſwerable, or proportionable to another, and accordingly here in the compariſon begun v. 22. Hagar is made parallel to Ieruſalem, the then preſent ſtate of the Iewes; and the parallel conſiſted in two things, 1. that as the people of the Hagarens bound themſelves to circumciſion, and the obſervation of the Moſaical law in many particulars, ſo the preſent Iudaizers did; And 2^dly, that as in this reſpect, theſe Hagarens were juſt as their mother had been, in a ſervile eſtate, ſo theſe Iudaizers kept themſelves and all their diſciples in a meer ſervile condition, oppoſite to the liberty of the Goſpel. Of the Hagarens, or Iſmaelites being circumciſed, Ioſephus gives clear teſtimony, l. 1. c. 12. Ἄραβες ἀκροποδισμοῦ μὲν ἴσασι θησαυρόν. Ἰσμαὴλ δὲ ὁ κλεινὸς ἀπ' αὐτῶν τοῖς Ἕλλησι, Ἀβραάμου ἐκ τῆς παλλακῆς, ἐν τούτῳ ἀκροποδισθεὶς τῷ χρόνῳ, The Arabians are circumciſed at thirteen years old, For Iſmael the founder of that nation, being the ſon of Abraham by the handmaid, was circumciſed at that time. So Origen in φιλοκαλία, ſhewing the ridiculouſneſs of them that aſcribe all to the χρηματισμὸς ἢ τὴν φύσιν, the poſition of the ſtarres at their birth, profeſſes not to imagine how they can aſſigne the circumciſion of all the Iewes (and ſo the wounding, and want of a Phyſitians help) on the eighth day (conſtantly) after they are born, to any ſuch poſition, τί δὴ ἐν Ἰσμαηλίταις τοῖς κατ' Ἀραβίαν τοῦτο δρᾷ, οἷς πάντας ἀκριβῶς πεπαιδευκόσιν, οὐκ ἐν ἡμέρᾳ Ismael) the latter, and on the otherside that the position of the ſtarres at the nativity of all the Iſmaelites in Arabia ſhall be ſuch, as ſhall cauſe them to be circumciſed when they are thirteen years old, for ſo, ſaith he, 'tis ſtoried of them.

d. Rhapsody and the Targum

The explication of this depends on the Jewiſh matrimonial lawes, or the nature of concubinate, viz: when a ſervant, or a Gentile woman was taken in by a Jew to be (his wife ſhe was not to be by law, but) his concubine, upon agreement firſt made concerning her dowry; For ſuch a perſon as this is among them improperly called a wife, though farre from any ill character of a whore, or any unlawfull copulation, any farther then will be affirmed of Polygamie, which yet we know was allowed among the Jewes, and practiſed by the Patriarchs. Now the ſons of theſe concubines were excluded from ſucceſſion to the inheritance, and, in ſtead thereof, the father gave them gifts or portions (and that was agreed upon by pact with the wife at firſt) Gen. 25. 6. Thus was Jephte ejected from the inheritance by his brethren, becauſe his mother was a ſtrange woman, Iud. 11. 2. Agreeable to this is that cuſtome of matrimonium morgengabicum in ſome countries, as Denemarke &c. at this day, where the ſecond wife, and her children that ſhall come from her, are not taken in to a right to the houbands eſtate, ſhe to have any part of it for her joynture, or they for their inheritance, but only ſome gifts or portions aſſigned them by compact, which are called morgengab, or marriage-gift, with which they are to content themſelves without any part of the inheritance.

Paraphraſe.

1. STand faſt therefore in the liberty * wherewith Chriſt hath made us free, and be not intangled again with the yoke of bondage.] 1. From all this the concluſion is of exhortation to you and all Chriſtians, that ye retain the freedome from being obliged to the Moſaical law, which Chriſt hath beſtowed on all, and not return to your former yoak, or weight of obſervances again, which are a ſervility perfectly unprofitable, and nothing elſe.

2. Behold I Paul ſay unto you, that if ye be circumciſed, Chriſt ſhall profit you nothing.] 2. I your known Apoſtle, that have been, and taught the faith among you, pronounce to you poſitively, that if you depend on circumciſion and legal obſervances for juſtification, Chriſt will ſtand you in no ſtead.

3. For I teſtifie again to every man that is circumciſed, that he is a debtor to doe the whole law.] 3. For by laying upon himſelf a neceſſity of circumcihon, and expecting juſtification by that, he abſolutely obliges himſelf to perfect obedience, without which the law cannot juſtifie any, ch. 3. 10.

4. † [a] Chriſt is become of no effect unto you, whoſoever of you are juſtified by the law, ye are fallen from grace.] 4. All that run this way of the Judaizers, 2.
muſt know that Chriſt is become uneffectual to them; If you expect to be juſtified by legal performances, ye have diſclaimed all title to the Goſpel, ſee Heb. 13. 2.

* by the Spirit through faith ἐκ πίστεως πνεῦμα

5. For we * through the Spirit wait for the hope of righteouſneſſe by faith.] 5. For we according to the Goſpel, and the promiſe made to Abraham, expect to be juſtified without legal performances, only by faith or Evangelical obedience.

6. For in Jeſus Chriſt neither circumciſion availeth any thing, nor uncircumciſion, but faith which † [b] worketh by love.] 6. For now under the Goſpel 'tis not material whether a man be circumciſed or no, all that is required to our juſtification is faith, not all that is called by that name, but ſuch as is made perfect by addition of thoſe duties, which we owe to God and our brethren. b.

7. Ye did run well, who did hinder you, that ye ſhould not obey the truth?] 7. Ye began well in receiving the Goſpel, as I preacht it to you, who hath cauſed you not to continue in that courſe?

8. This perſwaſion cometh not of him that * calleth you.] 8. This new doctrine of the neceſſity of Judaical obſervances is not taught you by God, or by him (whether my ſelf, or any others) who bought you to the faith.

9. A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump.] 9. It comes from a few falſe teachers among you, that have infected you with this ſowre falſe doctrine of Judaizing, which will ſpoil all your Chriſtianity, v. 2, 4.

10. I have confidence † in you through the Lord, that you * will be none otherwiſe minded: but he that troubleth you ſhall bear † his judgment, whoſoever he be.] 10. And I hope it will not extend farre, for I am confident of you in reſpect of the faith planted among you, that you will not be carried away with theſe errors; but the teachers of this doctrine, whoſoever they are, or of what quality ſoever, ſhall ſuffer, and be cenſured for it.

11. * And I, brethren, if I yet preach circumciſion, why doe I yet ſuffer perſecution? † then is the offence of the croſſe ceaſed.] 11. Some of your teachers, it ſeems, have told you, that I am for the urging of circumciſion upon Chriſtians, and that I have done ſo in ſome places; But I pray doe you gueſſe of the truth of this ſuggeſtion, by the perſecutions which I ſuffer, which generally fall upon me among the Jewes, for my affirming the Moſaical law to be aboliſhed, and would not fall upon me, if I preſſed the obſervation of the Moſaical law in this particular of ſo great importance: The great exception that the Jewes have againſt my preaching, and others beleiving me, is the abolition of the Moſaical law, and the removing of that one exception would be the appeaſing of the wrath of the Jewes, who probably would oppoſe it no longer; But this, you ſee, is not done, for the Jewes are ſtill as great oppoſers of Chriſtianity (where it is preached by me) and of me for preaching it, and of others that ſo receive it from me, as ever they were.

* unſettle you ἀναστατοῦντες

12. I would they were even [c] cut off which * trouble you.] 12. Thus unreaſonable are their pretenſions that would ſeduce you from your conſtancy, and are content to ſay any thing, though c.

never ſo falſe, and improbable to that purpoſe, All that I have to ſay of them is, I wiſh they were excommunicated, turned out from among you, that thus endevour to pervert you.

13. Chriſt hath freed you beleivers from the rigour of the law, i.e. both from the neceſſity of Moſaical obſervances, and of perfect exact obedience, under the penalty of the curſe: onely doe not you make an uncharitable or a carnal uſe of this liberty, either to contemn and ſcandalize thoſe that dare not uſe this liberty, Rom. 14. 1. or to fall into acts of ſin, and to think your Chriſtian liberty will excuſe you, but by charity behave your ſelves toward all your brethren in this matter of legal ceremonies, as may be moſt for their advantages.

13. For, brethren, ye have been called unto liberty; only uſe not liberty for an occaſion to the fleſh, but by love ſerve one another.]

14. For this is indeed the ſumme of that law, which ye pretend ſo much to vindicate, indevouring the good of all others as much as ye can, or as you would your own, and not permitting your zeal to ſet you on deſignes of malice, and defaming of others.

14. For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelf.]

15. But if you be ſo uncharitable as to calumniate and defame one another, this will break out in a while, as in other places it doth already, to open feuds, perſecuting and miſchieving your fellow-Chriſtians.

15. But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not conſumed one of another.]

16. My adviſe therefore is, that you order your actions according to the Goſpel rule, and doe not thoſe things which are moſt acceptable to the ſenſes, moſt agreeable to your carnal or worldly ends.

16. This I ſay, Walk in the Spirit, and * ye ſhall not fulfill the luſts of the fleſh.] * fulfill not μὴ τελέσητε

17. For this is certain, that he that will ſerve God muſt doe many things contrary to his ſenſual or ſecular ends, For there being two deſires in you, the one proceeding from the carnal, the other from the rational ſpiritual faculty or reaſon inſtructed by the Goſpel, and theſe being ſo oppoſite one to the other, that whatſoever one liketh, the other diſliketh, it follows that whatſoever you doe in compliance with the one, you doe in oppoſition to the other, and ſo that you doe not will or chooſe with both wills rational and ſenſual, whatſoever you will or chooſe, but one of theſe ſtill reſiſteth the other.

17. For the fleſh luſteth againſt the Spirit, and the Spirit againſt the fleſh, and theſe are contrary one to the other: ſo that ye † cannot doe the things ye would.] † doe not μὴ ποιῆτε

18. That then which is your duty, is, to follow the duct of the Spirit, and if ſo, if you follow the Goſpel rule in deſpight of all the temptations of the fleſh, whether luſts of the fleſh, or fear of perſecution for the Goſpel, to the contrary, then you are neither obliged to the Moſaical performances, nor to the perfect exact obedience, without which the law allowes no juſtification.

18. But if ye be led by the Spirit, ye are not under the law.]

19. Whereas on the other ſide, the actions that the fleſh is moſt apt to betray one to, and which you have moſt need to be admoniſhed of, are ſuch as every man knows to be ſuch, and which yet your preſent falſe-teachers doe induſtriouſly infuſe into you, ſuch are breaking the bands of wedlock, nay making marriage abſolutely a work of the devil, that that perſwaſion may bring after it all manner of unlawfull luſts, (ſee note on 1 Cor. 5. a.) which marriage might prevent,

19. Now the works of the fleſh are manifeſt, which are theſe, Adultery, fornication, uncleanneſſe, laſciviouſneſſe,]

d. 20. The ſenſual villanies committed in the idol-worſhips (ſee note on 1 Cor. 5. i.) to which the Gnoſticks would bring you back, and ſo likewiſe ſorceries, and then all the ſorts of uncharitableneſſe, hating or maligning of others &c.

20. Idolatry, [d] witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, ſtrife, ſeditions, hereſies,

21. And at length envying either the quiet, or the innocence of all that will not doe as they doe, and ſo falling into all acts of riotous and bloody malice, againſt them, together with drunkenneſſe and luxury, &c. all which are of a moſt dangerous and deſperate nature, and will certainly deprive, and exclude all that are guilty of them from the kingdome of God.

21. Envyings, murthers, drunkenneſſe, revellings, and ſuch like; of the which I tell you before, as I have alſo told you in time paſt, that they which doe ſuch things, ſhall not inherit the kingdome of God.]

22. On the contrary, the duties that the Goſpel requires of us, are 1. love to our brethren; 2. joy in doing them any good, (ſee note on Rom. 14. c.) 3. ſtudy to preſerve peace among all men (ſee note on Phil. 4. b.) 4. a patient bearing with the provocations and injuries of other men, 5. a kindneſſe in diſpoſition and actions, actual performance of all kindneſſe to others, and 6. fidelity, in oppoſition to betraying others, or inconſtancy to our courſe,

22. But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long ſuffering, * gentleneſs, goodneſs, faith,] * kindneſſe χρηστότης

23. Meekneſſe and quietneſſe of ſpirit in oppoſition to unquietneſſe and ſedition, and laſtly perfect chaſtity either in the ſingle or conjugal ſtate; And be you never ſo ſtrict and zealous obſervers of the law, that can never engage any of you to neglect theſe Chriſtian virtues (as many of you, that pretend to be all for the law, that maintain the neceſſity of the Moſaical performances, are yet found to doe, behaving your ſelves ſo carnally in your religion, and oppoſing all other Chriſtians ſo bitterly, v. 19, 20, 21. as if you thought that the law did as much countenance your filthineſſe, and your perſecuting others, as it doth countenance or oblige, in your opinion, to thoſe ceremonies.)

23. Meekneſſe, † temperance; * againſt ſuch there is no law.] † continence, ἐγκράτεια, * the law is not againſt ſuch, κατὰ τῶν τοιούτων οὐκ ἔστι νόμος

24. And however ye may be deceived in thus judging of the law, yet 'tis certain that Chriſtianity is directly contrary to all this, the true beleivers, or Chriſtians, have in their baptiſmes renounced all the deſires of the fleſh, and accordingly muſt perform.

24. And they that are Chriſts have crucified the fleſh, with the affections and luſts.]

25. And they that are ſpiritual, as the Gnoſticks pretend to be, let them behave themſelves in all their actions Chriſtianly and ſpiritually, in oppoſition to all theſe carnal ſins, or elſe know that they have no right to that title.)

25. If we live † in the Spirit, let us alſo walk * in the Spirit.] † by the Spirit πνεύματι * by

26. And not be puffed up with an opinion of themſelves, and the vanity of appearing to the Jewes to be great zealots, and thereupon inciting the Jewes to the perſecuting of the orthodox, and vehemently maligning of them.

26. Let us not be deſirous of vain-glory, provoking one another, envying one another.]

a. Καταργῆται, ἀποτυφῶσι] saith Phavorinus, the word signifies according to the notion of ἀργὸς, whence 'tis compounded, fruſtration, annullation, evacuation, abolition, and ſo 'tis applied to the law, νόμῳ καταργῆται, the law is annulled. In a ſenſe not farre from thence 'tis uſed *Rom.*7. 2. when 'tis ſaid, that the husband being dead, the wife κατήργηται ἀπὸ νόμου τοῦ ἀνδρὸς, is diſcharged from the law of the husband, i. e. receives no benefit from, nor owes any obedience or obſervance to the matrimonial contract. So here κατηργήθητε ἀπὸ τοῦ Χριστοῦ, ye are diſcharged from Chriſt, as when a ſervant is from the maſter, or as the wife from the husband, diſcharged from the advantages, as well as burthens, ye receive no benefit, or virtue from Chriſt, or the ſecond Covenant (all one with Chriſt) ſhall profit you nothing, ver. 2. and ἐξεπέσατε, in the end of this verſe, ye have fallen from, diſclaimed all right or title to the Goſpel, or ſecond Covenant, that of Grace. Καταργῆται

b. 'Tis not amiſſe in this place to ſet down the particular notion of ἐνεργεῖν in the New Teſtament. And to that purpoſe the firſt thing to be obſerved, will be, that there is no kind of neceſſity or reaſon to render it in an active ſenſe, but rather in a paſſive, throughout theſe books. So Rom. 7. 5. the motions of ſin ἐνηργεῖτο ἐν μέλεσιν, were wrought, or conſummate, or perfected in our members, i. e. the motions and inclinations were brought to act and habite. So 2 Cor. 1. 6. σωτηρίας τῆς ἐνεργουμένης ἐν ὑπομονῇ ſalvation which is perfected, or conſummate by patient enduring. So 2 Cor. 4. 12. θάνατος δὲ ἐν ὑμῖν ἐνεργεῖται &c. death is wrought in you, as it appears by the context, εἰς θάνατον παραδιδόμεθα, we are delivered to death v. 11. So Epheſ. 3. 20. κατὰ τὸ δύναμιν ἐνεργουμένην ἐν ὑμῖν, according to the power which is wrought in, or, among you, parallel to Col. 1. 29. κατὰ τὴν ἐνέργειαν αὐτοῦ ἐνεργουμένην ἐν ἐμοὶ, according to the force, or act, or virtue, which is wrought in me. So 2 Theſſ. 2. 13. of the word of God, ὃς καὶ ἐνεργεῖται ἐν ὑμῖν which is wrought in you, preached unto you, and obtained its end (or perfection) to which it was deſigned, among you beleivers, So 2 Theſſ. 2. 7. the myſterie of iniquity ἤδη ἐνεργεῖται is made or wrought, or (as in the preſent tenſe) is in fieri, agitur, ſaith Caſtellio, agreeably to that of Heſychius ἐνεργεῖ, καλλωπίζεται, is prepared to enter to diſcloſe it ſelf to the world. And ſo here πίστις δι' ἀγάπης ἐνεργουμένη, faith perfected by charity, ſo the Syriack reads it, and ſo Tertullian, Perficitur per charitatem fides, contra Marcion: l. 5. directly parallel to that of S. James ch. 2. 22. ἐξ ἔργων πίστις ἐτελειώθη faith is made perfect by works, as an habite by the effects or fruits. To which purpoſe it is obſervable that in Clemens Alexandrinus Stromat: l. 4. ἀγάπη τελεῖται, and δι' ἀγάπης τελειοῦν and ἐνεργούμενον] are put as phraſes of the ſame importance. There is one only place behind, where this word is uſed, that of Iam. 5. 16. of the righteous mans prayer, δέησις δικαίου ἐνεργουμένη, Of which what is the direct importance will not perhaps be eaſily reſolved, but yet there is little reaſon to doubt but that it is in the paſſive ſignification alſo. To which purpoſe it will be obſervable, that one other notion of the word there is, which is ordinary among Eccleſiaſtical writers for one that hath received affl ation from ſom Spirit, 'evil or good. Thus (among many other examples,) in the Author of the Eccleſiaſtical Hierarchie, when there are repelled from the ſacrament καλλιχούμενοι, ἐνεργούμενοι &c. There ſaith Maximus the ſcholiaſt, ἐνεργούμενοι] τυλίσιν ὑπὸ πνευμάτων ἀκαθάρτων, they that are acted by unclean ſpirits. Why it ſhould not be taken alſo in a good ſenſe, for thoſe that are acted by good ſpirits or the ſpirit of God, there is no reaſon imaginable from the nature of the word, only 'tis true the moſt frequent uſe is of thoſe that are poſſeſſed by the devil (οἱ ἐνεργούμενοι, δηλονότι δαιμονιῶντες, ſaith Pachymerius the Paraphraſt of that Author of the Eccleſiaſtick Hierarchie p. 136.) but yet in the Apoſtle 1 Cor. 12. 6, 10. ἐνεργήματα is uſed of the chariſmata or extraordinary gifts of the Spirit of God (and ſo ſaith Phavorinus, ἐνεργημάτων ἀντὶ τῶν χαρισμάτων] of which the gift of healing, (and doing that onely by praying and anointing,) being one, in thoſe times, 'tis poſſible enough that δέησις ἐνεργουμένη may be that prayer of him that hath that gift of healing, and conſequently that which is thus formed by afflation of the Spirit (for that the word belongs not onely to perſons ſo acted by any ſpirit, but to actions that are ſo produced, appears by the uſe of the word in Juſtine Martyr, in Dial: cum Tryph: p. 87. where ſpeaking of Magicians, he ſaith, they were ὑπὸ πάσης κακίας ἀφύξεως τῆς ἐνεργουμένης ὑπὸ τοῦ δαιμονίου ἐκπλαγέντες, carried captive by the devil to all wicked diabolical actions) which is here accordingly joyned with the gift of healing, and therefore called ἐυχὴ πίστεως v 15. the prayer of faith, viz: of that faith which is mentioned 1 Cor. 12. 9. which enabled them to work cures, σώζειν κάμνοντα to recover the ſick, as there it follows, or which πολὺ ἰσχύει here, availeth much, i. e. miraculouſly, or as much as Elias's prayer for rain, or fair weather did, in the next words. To that which hath been thus looſly ſaid of this word, may be added by way of appendage, the words of Heſychius in his gloſſary, ἡ ἐνεργουμένη, αἱ μὴ ἀργαὶ, ἐπικοινούμεναι πλημμύραι. In which 'tis clear, as in the greateſt part of that book, that there is ſome corruption in the copie, I ſuppoſe from ſome decaies in the MS. from whence 'twas printed. 'Tis poſſible there might be ſome Lacuna in the parchment, which might take away part of the words in the midſt of this, which he that printed it, was fain to repair by conjecture, and therein might miſtake, And then this other form of words I ſhall onely propoſe (inſtead of that which we now read in the printed book) Ἡ ἐνεργουμένη δαιμονιῶν καλλιχουμένη πλημμύρη, or πλημμύρη, ſuppoſing that the word δαιμονιῶν and καλλιχουμένη were ſo either blotted or eaten out, that there remained nothing of them but thus much --αιμ------ουμένη. If this conjecture be not too wide, then this gloſſary will clearly afford the ſeveral notions of this word [ἐνεργουμένη] in the latitude, viz: that it ſignifie two things among ſacred authors, firſt δαιμονιῶν as Pachymerius rendred it. (and καλλιχουμένη, which is all one) a perſon poſſeſſed with the devil, or that had ſome afflation, and 2ᵈʸ, πλημμύρη, or πλημμύρα, wrought, or conſummate. One thing onely more will be obſervable in this verſe here to the Galatians, that by comparing it with other parallel places ch. 6. 15. 1 Cor. 7. 19. it appears, that πίστις ἐνεργουμένη

ἐνεργουμένη δι' ἀγάπης faith conſummate by charity, is all one with καινὴ κτίσις, the new creature, in one place, and τήρησις ἐντολῶν the keeping of the commandments of God, in the other, as indeed charity is the fulfilling the whole law, of all the moral law, together with the ſuperſtructions of Chriſt. Agreeable to which is that of Marcus Eremita p. 283. περὶ νόμ. νόμ. Πᾶσι χάρις δίδοται ἐν βαπτισμῷ, πληροφορεῖται δὲ λοιπὸν κατὰ τὴν ἐργασίαν τῶν ἐντολῶν, Every grace is given in baptiſme, but 'tis perfected (as πληροφορεῖσθαι and πληροῦσθαι is all one) by performing of the commandements.

c. Ἀποκόπτειν here, and in the Canons of the ancient Councels ἀκκόπτειν, καθαιρεῖν, ἀφορίζειν, are all expreſſions of excommunication of the higheſt degree, anſwerable to the ſhamatha among the Jewes (ſee note on 1 Cor. 16. d.) and conſequently here the [ὄφελον καὶ ἀποκόψονται, I would they were cut off] is an expreſſion of a menace or threatning of excommunication, an Apoſtolical denunciation, that they that doe not mend this ſeditious, ſchiſmatical humour, ſhall be cut off, or if the ὄφελον be but a wiſh, it is then, becauſe he diſcerned ſo much of the obſtinacy of the evil humour, that he thought this would not be likely to cure, but exaſperate it, or becauſe he ſaw his authority contemn'd among them. As for that other notion of ἀποκόπτεσθαι] which S. Hierome ſeems to referre to, in relation to the matter of theſe mens diſturbance, viz. that about circumciſion, which they would impoſe upon all Chriſtians, Si putant ſibi hoc prodeſſe, non ſolum circumcidantur, ſed etiam abſcindantur,] 'tis ſomewhat too light to be affixed to the words of the Apoſtle.

Among the practiſes of the Gnoſticks φαρμακίαι ſorceries are here juſtly reckoned (ſee note on c. 3. c. and Rev. 9. 21. and c. 21. 8. and 22. 15.) And the grounds of that are clear, not only by the founder of them Simon, who was a Magician, but alſo by Menander his ſucceſſor, who was ſuch alſo; ſee Euſeb. l. 3. c. 26. CHAP. VI.

1. When any Chriſtian falls into a fault, you that are the governours in the Churches ſhall doe well not to exerciſe too great ſeverity on him, but upon ſight of his contrition reſtore him to the peace of the Church again (ſee note on 2 Cor. 13. b.) conſidering how poſſible it is, that thou alſo thy ſelf mayſt fall into the like ſin in time of temptation. See Jam. 1. 13.

2. Bear ye one anothers burthens, and ſo fulfill the law of Chriſt.]

3. And, becauſe of the aſſuming, haughty Gnoſticks among you, I ſhall adde, that if any man think highly of himſelf above other men, that man 1. is nothing, his opiniating is an argument of it; and beſides 2dly, he brings danger upon his own ſoul by this errour, falls into cenſuring and contemning of others, and into many dangerous ſins by that means.

3. For if a man think himſelf to be ſomething, * when he is nothing, he deceiveth himſelf.]

* being nothing μηδὲν ὤν

4. But let every man to prove, and examine his own actions, as to approve them to his own conſcience, and to God (ſee Rom. 2. note f.) and then he ſhall take comfort in looking on himſelf abſolutely, and not only in compariſon with others, whom he judgeth to be inferiour to him.

4. But let every man prove his own work, and then ſhall he have rejoicing † in himſelf alone, and not in another.]

† toward himſelf only and not toward another, εἰς ἑαυτὸν μόνον, καὶ οὐκ εἰς τὸν ἕτερον

7. And in this, as in all other acts of charity, eſpecially of piety toward thoſe that are employed by God, let a man reſolve, that as he deals with God, ſo ſhall God deal with him, as a man's courſe of life is, ſo ſhall he ſpeed at God's tribunal.

7. Be not deceived, God is not mocked: for whatſoever a man ſoweth, that ſhall he reap.]

8. For as he that makes proviſion, and layes out all his care and wealth for the feeding his own carnal deſires, ſhall thereby bring loſſe and ruine to himſelf; ſo he that liveth according to the Goſpel rule, of liberality and charity to others, ver. 6. and laies himſelf out in works of piety &c. ſhall thereby inherit eternal life.

8. For he that ſoweth to the fleſh, ſhall of the fleſh alſo reap corruption: but he that ſoweth to the ſpirit, ſhall of the ſpirit reap life everlaſting.]

9. And in duties of charity &c. which have promiſes annexed to them, let us not be diſcouraged, though we meet not preſently with our reward; For as if we fall off, we ſhall loſe all our reward, even for that which we have hitherto laboured, ſo if we hold out conſtantly, we ſhall be ſure to have our reward in that ſeaſon which God ſees fitteſt for us, whether in this life or another.

This is ſufficient matter of encouragement to us, to make uſe of thoſe abilities that God hath or ſhall give us, and accordingly to expreſſe our liberality, and beneficence to all men, but eſpecially to thoſe that are of the family of the Goſpel, and take pains continually in the work of the Lord, (in Apoſtleſhip &c.) and whoſe lot is the Lord, who preaching the Goſpel are to live by it in all reaſon, ſee v.6.

13. For neither * they themſelves who are circumciſed keep the law, but deſire to have you circumciſed that they may glory in your fleſh.] 13. This, 'tis clear, is the ground of their practiſe, and not any conſcientious perſwaſion of the obligingneſſe of the law, for they doe not themſelves obſerve the law in other things, perhaps not in that of circumciſion (ſee note on Rev. 2. e.) but that they may make a fair ſhew that way, by being able to ſay that they have made you obſerve the Judaical law, they force you to be circumciſed &c.

14. But God forbid that I ſhould glory, ſave in the croſſe of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world.] 14. Such complyances and ſuch boaſtings as theſe God forbid that I ſhould ever make uſe of, or of any other, but only that one matter of true boaſting and rejoicing in my ſufferings for Chriſt, in my conſtancy to the Chriſtian religion and diſcipleſhip, by which the pleaſures, and honour, and riches of the world are become liveleſſe, and uncempting to me, and I in like manner liveleſſe, mortified to the world, and therefore as I profeſſe not to be wrought on by thoſe motives, with which your Judaizing falſe-teachers are moved, ſo I would not have you cheated by them.

15. For in Chriſt Jeſus neither circumciſion availeth any thing, nor uncircumciſion, but [a new creature.] 15. the renewed regenerate heart, c. 5. b.

16. And as many as walk according to this rule, peace be on them, and mercy, and upon [the Iſrael of God.] 16. all renewed regenerate perſons, which, whether circumciſed or no, are equally the people of God, and acceptable in his ſight.

17. From henceforth let no man trouble me, for I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jeſus.] 17. For the time to come I ſhould be glad, if they that are Chriſtians, or would be eſteemed ſo, would not cauſe trouble or vexation to me, for I am now otherwiſe employed, then to need that trouble, and have greater evidence of my being a ſervant of Chriſt, then to doubt of the ſincerity of the diſcharge of my office, and my acceptance with him, howſoever I am looked on by you, for I have on me thoſe afflictions, wich are marks and notes of a ſervant of Chriſt, and which teſtifie me to belong to him, and that 'tis not long, before he will ſeiſe me as his own peculiar.

18. Brethren, [the grace] of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with your ſpirit. Amen, 18. The favour and loving kindneſſe

a. οἱ Πνευματικοὶ

What is meant by οἱ Πνευματικοὶ the Spiritual] here, may appear by what hath been ſaid of the word Πνεῦμα Spirit Lu. 9. d. which ſignifies not onely the Spirit of God, whereby men are reformed, and the deeds of the fleſh (in the precedent chapter) mortified, but alſo the χαρίσματα, the powers and gifts, which were beſtowed on men in the Church in order to Miniſterial functions, or offices there, And that Πνευματικοὶ Spirituall] are here thus to be underſtood in proportion to, and by analogie with theſe, may be gueſt by the ſeverals which here follow, 1. the Πνεῦμα πραΰτητος, Spirit of meekneſſe, which theſe Spirituall men are to uſe. This clearly belongs to the power of the keyes, veſted in the Governours of the Church, and is therefore ſet oppoſite to ῥάβδῳ the rod 1 Cor. 4. 21. where as coming with the rod, evidently ſignifies proceeding to diſcipline, to Cenſures of excommunication, to coming in the Spirit of meekneſſe, (and ἐν πραΰτητι παιδεύων, diſciplining in meekneſs,] 2 Tim. 2. 24.) is admoniſhing thoſe meekly, that have offended, (and to whom that method of fraternal reprehenſion is firſt neceſſary) and admitting to repentance and abſolution thoſe that have reformed upon the infliction of the Cenſures. And accordingly here this Spirit of meekneſſe is this milder part of the Apoſtolical office, which is to precede the more ſevere, 1. Admonitions, and Reprehenſion, which if they prevail, there is no need of proceeding any farther, and 2. Admiſſion to penitence, (in caſe the Cenſures have paſt upon him) without proceeding to any higher degree of Cenſures, as in caſe of obſtinacy might be ſeaſonable, And to this 2^dly the word καταρτίζειν inclines, which we render Reſtore, but ſignifies properly to put in joynt any member of a body which is diſlocated, and ſo fitly belongs to the reſtoring an excommunicate perſon to the ſociety, and peace of the Church, ſee note on 2 Cor. 13. c. And the doing of this being proper to the Governours of the Church, it follows, that theſe be here meant by the Spiritual.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE [a]EPHESIANS.

a. Ephesus

THat Ephesus was the prime Metropolis of the Lydian or Proconsular Asia, hath been elsewhere shew'd, (see note on *Col.*4.a.) And therefore this Epistle inscrib'd to the Ephesians, must not yet be so confined to them, but that it belong also to the other cities of this Province, even to all Asia. Here S. Paul was, and disputed with the Jewes, *Act.*18.19. (which seems to be about An: Ch: 51.) at which time he stayed not so long among them, as to convert many, but left Aquila and Priscilla there v. 19. And to them Apollos came, v. 24. And by these the Christian faith seems to be planted there *Act.*18. 25, 26. And accordingly at Pauls return thither Act. 19. it is said that he found disciples there, v.2. but those only baptized with the baptisme of John, which seems to conclude them to be of Apollos converting, who when he first preached, knew only the baptisme of John c. 18.25. Soon after Paul returned thither again, according to his promise, Act. 19. 1. There he is opposed by the Jewes, and, by their instigation, by the Gentiles also, yet continues preaching the Gospel among them neer three years, Act. 20. 31. so that all Asia, both Jewes and Gentiles, had it preacht to them, and that with a mighty successe, c. 19. v. 20. & 26. At his departure from thence, going to *Macedonia Act.*20.1. he gave Timothy commission to be Bishop there, 1 *Tim.*1.3. there being already some hereticks, ἑτεροδιδασκαλοῦντες teaching other, i. e. false doctrines, infusing the leaven of the Gnosticks among them, against whose poyson Timothy was to watch, and so also the Elders, or Bishops of the other cities in Asia, ordained by the Apostle at his planting the Gospel there, and all together, at a meeting at Miletus, are solemnly warned to watch over their flocks, and defend them against the grievous wolves, and Gnostick hereticks, which he foresaw would speedily break in among them. And accordingly here in this Epistle (as afterwards in Christs Epistle to them *Rev.*2.) the doctrines, but especially the practises of these men are inveighed against, which if permitted would soon bring them all back to heathenism again, In wch respect it is, that he labours so magnificently to set out the mercies of God in receiving the Gentiles to the faith, and their huge advantages thereby, wch therefore they are not to betray, or lose for all the flattering shewes of either the Jewish ceremonies, or the Gentile philosophy, of which two the Gnosticks divinity was compounded, and their lives filled with all villany. This Epistle was written, and sent to them from Rome, after his carrying thither, about the year 58. some six years after his first preaching at Ephesus. And it was sent them by Tychicus, to which he seems to referre 2 Tim. 4. 12. And Tychicus have I sent to Ephesus.

CHAP. I.

Paraphrase.

1. to the society of Christians which are under the chief Metropolis of Asia, Ephesus, and which doe still adhere faithfull and constant to Christ, in despight of all the temptations to the contrary.

1. PAVL an Apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, [to the saints which are at Ephesus, and to the faithfull in Christ Jesus;]

2. Grace be to you, and peace from God our father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3. who hath called us to Christianity, & thereby afforded us, as many as have received the faith, and live in obedience thereto, all things in great abundance, which may tend to our spiritual and eternal good:

3. Blessed be the God and father of our Lord Jesus Christ, [who hath blessed us with all spiritual * blessings in heavenly places in Christ:]

* benediction in the things that belong to heaven through Christ, ἐυλογίᾳ τῶν ἐπουρανίων ἐν Χριστῷ

a. 4. Agreeably to what before the creation of the world he had determined in his decree of giving of Christ, viz: to call men from vicious living to Christianity, and sanctity, and purity of life, such as he will accept of, coming from the sincere love of him, and of our brethren.

4. According as he hath [a] chosen us in him, before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love.]

5. Having in his eternall purpose of mercy appointed his Son to be preacht unto the world, and that as many as received his message, obeyed his commands, should be received by way of adoption into the number of his children, and live lives of obedience, of holinesse and purity unto him; A mercy attended with very rich advantages, all which have accrued to us, not from any merit or desert of ours, being supposed sinners and enemies unto him, but only from his free goodnesse toward us, which was pleased so to determine it.

5. Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of † his will,]

† his own free

6. And this tends eminently to the ſetting forth the exceeding luſtre of his mercy towards us, or of the Goſpel, revealed to ſuch unworthy wretches, (ſee note on Heb. 13. c.) whom in Chriſt the ſon of his love, he hath received graciouſly, as many as perform obedience unto him :

7. In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveneſſe of ſins according to the riches of his † grace,]

7. Having by that precious ranſome paid for us, the blood of that dear ſon of his, afforded us captives to ſin, a way of freedome, viz: a free pardon for all our paſt ſins, upon our preſent repentance and renovation ; a work of the abundant favour and bounty of almighty God,

9, 10. Having now by the preaching of the Goſpel to the Gentiles alſo, manifeſted to us that ſecret will of his, of which there can be no cauſe or motive rendred, but his own free mercy, and purpoſed reſolution, which till now hath been kept as a myſtery (no man imagining that God ever intended any ſuch thing,) but which he had long ſince propoſed to himſelf, and referred in his wiſe diſpenſation to be performed and delivered out at this ſeaſon ; This, I ſay, which was the juſt time that God had reſolved on for this purpoſe, to gather together his diſperſions, as it were, and to unite all in Chriſt, to bring into the pale of the Church, a whole world of beleivers, the very Gentiles, (ſee note on Col. 1. c.) all diſcrimination being removed by Chriſt through his death and reſurrection :

11. In whom alſo we † have [c] obtained an inheritance, being predeſtinated according to the purpoſe of him who worketh all things according to the counſel of his own will,]

11. Through the ſame Chriſt I ſay by whom we Jewes have had the will of God revealed to us, now above all that we ever had before, the Goſpel being firſt preached unto us, Act. 3. 26. and thoſe of us which have beleived, taken poſſeſſion of, as of a patrimony, or portion aſſigned and ſet apart to God, to ſerve him in holineſſe, in obedience to the ſecret counſel of him, who had long ſince decreed and determined this, of his own free mercy to us,

13. In whom * ye alſo truſted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the Goſpel of your ſalvation : in whom alſo after that ye beleived, ye were ſealed with that holy Spirit of promiſe,]

13. By whom alſo it is that ye Gentiles, though after called, yet now alſo having heard and beleived the Goſpel, by which you are eſcaped out of your idolatrous ſinfull courſe, are in like manner ſecured, and marked out by God for good, by receiving that Spirit, which is promiſed to beleivers, and which is the mark of all thoſe whom God receives (ſee note on c.4. 30. g.)

15. Conſidering therefore this mercy of God, as to others, ſo particularly to you, both knowing my ſelf the good ſucceſſe of my preaching the faith among you, and having received advertiſement of your great proficiency in it, ſince the time I was among you, and of that inſeparable effect and branch of it, your great charity to all Chriſtians, that want your aſſiſtance,

16. Ceaſe not to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my prayers,

17. That the God of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the father of glory, may give unto you the Spirit of wiſdome and revelation, † in the knowledge of him,]

16, 17. I cannot chooſe but (as I pray for you continually, ſo) give thanks for you to God continually alſo, farther beſeeching the ſame God, who is known now to us by a more glorious title, then that of the God of Abraham, even the God of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt whom he hath own'd on earth, and now raiſed and ſet at his right hand in heaven, and who is the author, as of raiſing Chriſt glorioufly from the dead, ſo of all grace, and bliſſe, and glory to all that are obedient to the faith, that he will beſtow on you all things needfull to a Chriſtian Church, the gift of underſtanding the higheſt natural and ſpiritual truths, the skill of veiling the higheſt conceptions, ſpeaking parables, &c. and of underſtanding, and interpreting prophecies, and diſcerning Chriſt, and his doctrine in them. See note on 1 Cor. 1. c.

18. That by this means of illumination ye may be furniſht to all ſpiritual uſes, diſcerning throughly what is the benefit of his calling us to Chriſtianity, and what the glorious bleſſed condition of thoſe graces of his, which are diſtributed among Chriſtians here (as alſo of thoſe endleſſe joyes, which are now inſtated on all penitent obedient faithfull ſervants of his) as an inheritance to the children, infinitely above that Canaan, that was beſtowed on Abraham's poſterity :

19. And what is the exceeding greatneſſe of his power to us-ward who beleive, according to the working of his mighty power,

(An emblem and eſſay of the methods which he hath now uſed toward us, by the preaching of the Goſpel to raiſe us from the grave of ſin, to a new Chriſtian life, and from thence to a glorious eternity.)

a. What is the notion of ἐξελέξατο chooſing] in this, and all other places, will be found ſet down at large, note on 1 Pet. 2. c. All that muſt here fitly be enquired, is, what is meant by ἐν αὐτῷ ἐξελέξατο Gods chooſing in Chriſt. And that will beſt be diſcerned by comparing it with the phraſe [εὐλογήσας ἐν Χριστῷ, bleſſing us in Chriſt] ver. 3. For that the bleſſing, and the electing, belong to the ſame matter, appears by the [καθὼς according as] a term of proportion or ſimilitude in the front of this verſe, which makes the connexion betwixt them thus, that God hath bleſſed us in Chriſt, according as he hath choſen us in Chriſt, i. e. that his actuall, preſent bleſſing them, at that point of time, was correſpondent to what God had decreed before the foundation of the world. Now what the bleſſing there ſpoken of, is, appears in general by the addition of πνευματικῇ, and ἐν τοῖς ἐπουρανίοις, a ſpiritual bleſſing, or bleſſing in things which belong unto heaven, and again by the prædeſtination (in order of nature præcedent to it) which is ſpecified to be εἰς υἱοθεσίαν to adoption; and laſtly, by what is here added, ἵνα ἡμᾶς ἁγίους καὶ ἀμώμους for us to be, or that we ſhould be holy and unblemiſht before him in love, All which ſpecifie the matter of the election here ſpoken of, to be the ſame, as of his bleſſing of us, viz: our holy, blameleſs converſation, ſuch as becomes ſons of God, a ſpiritual, Chriſtian obedience in all manner of piety and charity, ſuch as Chriſt came to plant in the world, and in which reſpect he is ſaid to bleſs us in turning every one from his iniquities, Act. 3. 26. and ſo 'tis here diſtinctly added c. 2. 10. that good works are the things to which God hath before prepared (i. e. elected) us, that we ſhould walk in them.) This then being the general matter of the election here ſpoken of, (not ſalvation, or bliſs in another world, but) holineſs, or piety here, is yet farther determined, or limited by the ἐν αὐτῷ, or ἐν Χριστῷ in him, or in Chriſt, ſpecifying Chriſt to be the means of bringing all, particularly the Gentiles, to this holy life, from all eternity prædetermined by God to doe ſo; as in that place of the Acts God ſent him thus to bleſs us; And this Chriſt hath done by revealing Gods will both in the precepts, which contain this holy, and blameleſs life in them, and by his promiſes, which ſo ſtrongly, and powerfully invite, and oblige, and by his terrors, or threats, which engage us to the performance of his precepts, and ſo again by the miracles &c. which ſignifie him to be ſent by God, but eſpecially by his death, and reſurrection, the firſt to teſtifie the truth of what he preacht, and withall to expiate for our ſins, and ſtrike, and ſeal in his blood a covenant of mercy with all, Gentiles, as well as Jewes, of pardon of foregoing ſins upon condition of reformation, and amendment, and of giving ſtrength and grace to perform what God now under this Covenant requires of us (without which as we ſhould have had no encouragement to amend, ſo we had been utterly unable to have performed that work of reformation) and the ſecond to confirm from heaven that he dyed, an innocent perſon, in the teſtimony of that truth, thus owned by his father, and, by enſtating him in that power and dominion at Gods right hand, to enſtate on him alſo the power of actual giving that grace to Gentiles as well as Jewes, which by his death he purchaſed for all; This then is the plain meaning of Gods electing in Chriſt, &c. Gods free, undeſerved, mercy in decreeing to beſtow Chriſt upon all, as the means (of all other moſt effectual) to engage, and bring men to holineſs, and purity of life, i. e. by what Chriſt hath done and ſuffered for Gentiles as well as Jewes, to call, and bring home ſinners of all ſorts to repentance; And this farther appears v. 9, 10. where the myſtery of his will according to his own good pleaſure (which is all one with his election here) is ſpecified to be the ἀνακεφαλαίωσις the gathering all things, i. e. Jewes and Gentiles, together in Chriſt, i. e. making Chriſt the means of calling, and bringing in the moſt Idolatrous Gentiles, as well as the Jewes, to receive the faith, and obey the commands of God in Chriſt. And this is the ſubject of a great part (ſee ch. 2.) of this enſuing Epiſtle. All which as it makes the vocation of the Gentiles, as well as Jewes to be the matter, wherein Gods election here is terminated, (and is very farre from denoting any irreſpective decree, of beſtowing eternal ſalvation on ſome few, which includes the abſolute rejection, or dereliction of all others) ſo it no way inferres their faith or repentance to be irreſiſtibly wrought in them by this decree of election, or by the means determined therein, but only that God hath in Chriſt pitcht on moſt wiſe, moſt powerfull, moſt efficacious means of calling, and melting even the Gentiles, the worſt of men, which he likewiſe foreſaw would be effectual on many, by the power of his grace, though many many others, through their own obſtinacy would contemn, and not make uſe of it.

b. Ἀνακεφαλαιώσασθαι

Κεφάλαιον in Arithmetick ſignifies a ſumme, Συναρίθμησις the putting many numbers together into one; hence ἀνακεφαλαιοῦν to put many ſeverals together, and when 'tis uſed of ſpeech, then 'tis to ſpeak briefly, and ſummarily, Eccleſ. 32.8. and ſo ſaith Chryſoſtome, ἐκ τούτου τὸ ὅτι μακρὸν λαμβάνει &c. to contract a long diſcourſe into few words. It is uſed in military affairs for the contracting, or putting together ſcattered ſouldiers into one troop. In Rhetorick it is the repeating and gathering the heads of the former diſcourſe or oration. In all, it is the bringing into one thoſe that were ſeveral, and ſo it is here the uniting and joyning together of thoſe that were diſparate and ſevered before; the ſame that in the parallel place Col. 1.20. is ἀποκαταλλάξαι and εἰρηνοποιῆσαι bringing all to an agreement or pacification.

c. Κληρωθέντες

Κληρῶς (if ἐκληρώθημεν be the right reading) ſignifies, [to be taken as a κλῆρος, lot, or patrimony] in the paſſive voice, and ſenſe, Now the κλῆροι among the Hebrews were thoſe portions of land, that fell by lot to any in the diviſion of a land, or eſtate, as in the firſt diviſion of Canaan, Judah had his lot, or portion, or diviſion, Reuben his, and God was Levi's lot, or inheritance, or poſſeſſion, as we call it: So in like manner, when in the diviſion of the world into Jewes and Gentiles, God choſe the Jewes, they were ſaid to be his κλῆρος or portion, Deut. 4 20. and ſo beleivers or Chriſtians are now ſtyled 1 Pet. 5. 3. and in a more peculiar manner they that preached the Goſpel, the Apoſtles, who ſeem to be here noted by the ἡμεῖς (raiſing it ſomewhat higher then thoſe that had the knowledge of his will v.9.) and ſurely are the ἡμᾶς we v.12. and Προηλπικότας the firſt that hoped or beleived in Chriſt. and who, as ſuch, were before others preferred to that dignity. And ſo accordingly have all that have ſerved God in the miniſtery been called God's κλῆρος or clergie, by whom therefore they are here ſaid κληροῦσθαι, to become God's peculiar poſſeſſion, or portion. But the King's MS. hath not this word, but onely ἐκλήθημεν, we were called.

d. Ἀρραβών

The Greek ἀῤῥαβὼν is a Syriack word ערבון from ערב contraxit, mercatus eſt, fidejuſſit, to make any bargain, as it ſignifies Gen. 38.17. a pledge or firſt part of a payment, which is an aſſurance, or ſecurity that the reſt of the whole price ſhall not fail to follow. This is it which in Engliſh is peculiarly called the Earneſt, that which confirms and aſſures the bargain. And ſo the Spirit and gifts thereof, after the Aſcenſion of Chriſt poured out not onely upon Jewes but Gentiles, is the pledge or earneſt paid by God, the firſt part of the price, which he hath agreed to give for the bringing in and redeeming the Gentiles out of the hands of Satan and ſin, to be the ſervants of the living God: Thoſe many other graces and rich treaſures conſequent to that gift, pardon of ſin, increaſe of grace, and at laſt ſalvation it ſelf, being the reſidue of the price, and here called κληρονομία ἡμῶν, our portion, or that which we receive in the bargain, in this great purchaſe of God's, his work of redeeming of ſouls. Hereby may alſo appear what is meant by the ἡμέρα ἀπολυτρώσεως day of redemption c.4.30. that redemption which had here been mentioned, the redeeming them out of their courſe of ſin to the ſervice of God (every one that is redeemed being his goods, poſſeſſion, ſervant, that bought him) and ſo the ſealing them by the Spirit to the day of redemption there, is perfectly agreeable to the ſealing them here, by the ſame Spirit ver.13. to this redemption of God's peculiar people, God's ſending his Spirit and the gifts thereof among the Gentiles (which was done at the firſt preaching the Goſpel to them) being the marking them out as God's purchaſe, ſuch as are to be ſervants of his, and being ſo, ſhall be accompliſh't and crown'd by him. e. Περιποίησιν Ἀπολύτρωσις

The word ἀκούω to hear] is anſwerable to the Hebrew שמע, and that ſignifies to know, as well as to hear, and is ſometimes rendred ἐπίστασθαι and γινώσκειν to know, And ſo it ſeems to be uſed in this Epiſtle, ch. 3. 2. εἴγε ἠκούσατε, If indeed ye have known, not heard, for his Apoſtolick Commiſſion to the Gentiles, which is the thing there ſpoken of, was that which they, to whom he had preacht, muſt needs know immediately, and not by hearſay onely. And ſo here their faith was a thing known by him alſo, and not onely heard, though it is alſo true, that their growth in the faith, ſince he was there, and the evidences of their charity might be brought to him by the advertiſement of others. Thus ch. 4. 21. If ye have heard him, is, if ye have known. f. Ἀκούειν Εἴγε ἠκούσατε

CHAP. II.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND you hath he quickened, who were dead in treſpaſſes and ſins,] 1. And you heathens lying like ſo many carcaſſes, deſperately gone in all kind of ſins (ſee note on Lu.15.b.) hath God quickned and raiſed to new life, v.5. (all between being to be read as in a parentheſis)

2. Wherein

2. You, I say, that for so many years together lived formerly,

2. Wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the Prince of the power of the aire, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience,] and securely went on in the Epidemical sins of the nations, the customes of the Gentile world, following the direction of your Idol false Gods, (who prescribed all villany in their worships) i.e. of Satan, that hath such power here below, and doth still exercise his power among all that have not received the Gospel of Christ,

3. Among whom we of the Gentile Church of Rome,

3. Among whom also we all had our conversation in times past, in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh, and of * the mind, and were by † nature the children of wrath, even as others.]

† birth φυσει

from whence I write, formerly lived, and yeilded our selves to those sensual sins and idol-worships, which our lusts and our phansies were pleased with, and so went on in those heathen customes, which did universally overspread them, and were born, and lived, and continued in a damning condition (see note on 1 Cor. 11. f.) as all other heathens did.

4. But God, who is

4. But God who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us,] infinitely mercifull, beyond what we can ask or think, without any thing in us to invite him to it, meerly out of that kindnesse of his which he bare to us, as we were in that sad desolate condition of sin and misery,

5. Hath by that power, by which he

5. Even when we were dead in sins hath quickned us together with Christ, (by grace ye are * saved.)]

raised Christ from the grave, raised us out of this heathen state of all kind of impieties, a state so farre from meriting any such dealing, that it deserved nothing but utter desertion (and therefore 'tis as wonderfull an act of goodnesse, and mercy in God, that we are thus rescued, and escaped out of that condition by the preaching of the Gospel to us (see Heb. 13. c.) as it was for Lot, when he was by the Angel led out of Sodome, and commanded to escape for his life &c.)

6. And as he hath quickened us out of this spiritual death, so in Christ our head he hath also in assured hope raised us up from the dead, and set us with him in heaven, For he sitting there, which is our head, we are at present not unfitly said to sit there also, and shall infallibly come thither in due time,

7. By which means he hath given an eminent testimony,

7. That † in the ages to come he might shew the exceeding riches of his grace, in his kindnesse toward us, through Christ Jesus.]

† on the ensuing ages εν τοις αιωσι τοις επερχομενοις

how exceedingly gracious he is to those that live under Christianity (which is called, The age to come, see Mat. 11. note a.) by those undeserved mercies shewn unto us, by giving us Christ and his Gospel to be revealed to us.

8. For you are delivered out of that

8. For by grace are ye * saved through faith, and † that not of your selves; it is the gift of God:]

† this is not from you, τουτο ουκ εξ υμων

heathen state by the meer undeserved mercy of God, who might justly have left you in it without ever calling you (who had so sinned against nature) out of it; and the preaching of the Gospel, which hath been the means of rescuing you thus, is a meer free, undeserved gift of God, the matter of the Gospel being no way to be known, but by divine revelation, and God having sent Christ, and Christ his Apostles, to make that known unto you, without which you had never heard, as without hearing you could never have believed such supernatural truths, (see Rom. 10.17. & note on Heb. 13. c.) and all this an act of Gods free will and mercifull pleasure,

9. Not from any

9. Not of works, lest any man should boast.]

merits of yours to move God to it, that so all may be imputed to him, nothing at all unto your selves.

10. For we are formed anew by God,

10. For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, * which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them.]

* to which God hath before prepared us, εις οις προητοιμασεν and as it were out of a state of nothing (the heathen idolatry, in which we were) raised by the preaching of the Gospel to a being, and a life, and so are as so many new creatures of his creating, on purpose that we should bring forth fruit, live Christianly, and that we might doe so, he hath accommodated us with all things which may be any way usefull to that end.

11. And this consideration & remembrance may be usefull

11. Wherefore remember that ye being in time passed Gentiles in the flesh, who are called uncircumcision by that which is called the circumcision in the flesh made by hands,] to you, viz: that by birth or natural generation ye were originally Gentiles, called the uncircumcised by the Jewes, who had that circumcision in their flesh wrought by the hands of men,

12. That being then without Christ, ye lived in a very distant

12. That at that time ye were without Christ, † being aliens from the common-wealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and * without God in the world.]

manner from the Israelites, both in respect of customes and laws, but especially of the worship of God, were justly detested and not permitted to live among them; and for the promises made to Abraham ye were utterly strangers from them, and so in the first respect you had no God, nothing but Idols to worship, and in the latter, no kind of hope of good to entertain your selves with.

13. But now, in stead of that great distance formerly kept, an affinity and league hath been made between you (see Act. 20.39.) Gentiles and Jewes, and Christ's blood hath been the solemn rite, by which that league (after the manner of the Eastern nations, which use that ceremony of blood in making leagues) hath been struck.

13. But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometime were afarre off, are made nigh by the blood of Christ.]

14. For he is our peace-maker, and hath

14. For he is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the [a] middle wall of partition between us:]

joyned those two distant people into one, having, as it were, broke down or removed that little sept or wall in the Temple, that separated the court of the Jewes from that of the Gentiles, and so hath laid all common, brought them both into his Church to live without any discrimination of ceremonies &c.

15. Having

* the enmity by his own fleſh, the law of commandments by doctrines, τὴν ἔχθραν ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ αὐτοῦ, τὸν νόμον τῶν ἐντολῶν ἐν δόγμασιν

15. Having aboliſhed * in his fleſh the enmity, even the law of commandments, contained in ordinances, † for to make in himſelf, of twain, one new man, ſo making peace,]

15. Having by his ſufferings brought the Gentiles to that condition, that the people of God ought not to look upon them as enemies, and by the doctrine of the Goſpel taken away the obligingneſſe of the Moſaical precepts, which made the converſing with the Gentiles, eating their meats &c. unlawfull alſo, that ſo he might form them both together into one new man, making an agreement or peace between them,

† that he might form the two by himſelf (or, together; for the King's MS. reads ἐν αὐτῷ not ἑαυτῷ) into one new man, ἵνα τοὺς δύο κτίσῃ ἐν αὐτῷ εἰς ἕνα καινὸν

16. And that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the croſſe, having ſlain the enmity † thereby.]

16. And having united them one to another, might alſo reconcile them to God, having by his ſufferings taken away all quarrel or falling out, whether betwixt God and them, or (eſpecially here) betwixt Jew and Gentile, having died for both indifferently, and thereby ſealed his covenant of mercies to both.

† he hath come and ἦλθεν εὐηγ-

17. And † came and preached peace to you which were afarre off, and to them that were nigh.]

17. And accordingly it is that he hath by his Apoſtles (ſee note on 1 Pet. 3. c.) preached the Goſpel, and in it all kind of good newes to you Gentiles, as well as to the Jewes.

18. For through him we both have an acceſſe by one Spirit unto the Father.]

18. For by the covenant made in him, we have both admiſſion afforded us, and confidence to approach to God as to our father, having the Spirit of Chriſt to intercede for us, both Jews and Gentiles.

but taken to be fellow-citizens with the Jewes, and members of Gods family, i.e. received into the Church, into the number of beleivers, added to that building, of which Chriſt was the corner-ſtone, and the Apoſtles and Prophets joyned to him, as the foundation built thereon.

* being compacted together, will encreaſe συναρμολογουμένη αὐξει

Notes on Chap. 11:

2. Μαρτύρομαι ἐγὼ πᾶσι

We have oft ſpoken of the Gentile proſelytes, the ſecond ſort of which, thoſe of the gates, which were not circumciſed, were by the Jewes ſo farre accounted unclean according to the law, that they were not permitted to come into that court of the Temple, called holy, where the Jewes were. So it is charged upon them as a fault, Ezek. 44. 7. that they had brought into God's ſanctuary ſtrangers, &c. and Act. 21. 28. on Paul, that he brought Greeks into the Temple. The proſelytes of righteouſneſs indeed, thoſe that had undertaken the whole law, which were circumciſed &c. they were admitted with the Jewes into the inner court: But theſe other onely into the outer court, called the court of the Gentiles, and the unclean, in which reſpect it is, that the Temple is called the houſe of prayer to (or for) all nations, Mar. 11. 17. becauſe in that court the Gentiles were admitted to pray. In the ſecond Temple theſe courts were divided one from the other by a little ſept of ſtone, three cubits high, called, ſaith Joſephus, by the Hebrews γάζαρα, and by the Greeks ϕραγμὸς, by the author of the book of Maccabees (1 Mac. 9. 54.) τὸ τεῖχος τῆς αὐλῆς τῆς ἁγίου ἐνωτέρας, the wall of the inner court of the ſanctuary, which Alcimus there commanded to be taken down. On this wall was written in many places μὴ δεῖν ἀλλόφυλον εἰσέρχεσθαι ἔνδοθεν, that no alien might go within. The firſt mention of this law in Joſephus is Ant. l. 12. c. 3. where he ſets it down as a ſanction of Antiochus, Μηδενὶ ἐξεῖναι ἀλλοφύλων εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν τεῖχος εἰσιέναι τῶν ἰουδαίων, that no alien might enter into that court of the ſanctuary, which was incloſed with the ſept, (ſo περίβολος ſignifies a court incloſed) So again l. 15. c. ult. in the deſcription of the Temple built by Herod, there is mention of ἕρκος a ſept, which incompaſſed the περίβολος or court, whereon there was a prohibition εἰσιέναι ἀλλοεθνῆ, that any of another nation ſhould enter. This is called by him δρύφακτος λίθινος, and ἕρκος λιθίνου δρυφάκτου, a partition of ſtone, or a ſept of a ſtone-partition, the word δρύφακτος from δρῦς (an oake primarily, then any kind of tree) being ὁ ἐκ δρυῶν φραγμὸς a partition (the word that is φραγμὸς here uſed) made of timber, and vulgarly uſed for any kind of partition, though here of ſtone (as a leaden ink-horn, or a ſilver box among us) This doth Gorionides affirm to have been a ſilver wall, betwixt the ſanctuary and the porch, with a golden dore in it, (but this I ſuppoſe not that the maſſe of the wall was ſilver, or of the dore, gold, but that they were ſilver'd, and gilt over) on the upper poſt of which, ſaith he, there was a golden ſword of twelve pounds of gold, on which were written theſe words, הגר הקרב יומת, A ſtranger that comes neer ſhall die. That this is it which is here called moſt expreſly τὸ μεσότοιχον τοῦ φραγμοῦ, the middle-wall of partition, there is no queſtion, and this Chriſt is ſaid to take down, by making the Jewes and Gentiles for the future without any diſcrimination, one ſheepfold under one Chriſt. To this ſept and prohibition of entring, as it ſtood among the Jewes, that of Eccleſiaſticus 19. 29. ſeemeth

to referre, where the man of the houſe is ſaid to turn the ſtranger out of doores, as out of the ſanctuary or inner court, ἔξελθε, πάροικα, ἀπὸ ἁγιάσματος ἐκ δόξης, Goe out, ſtranger, from the preſence of glory, i.e. as ſtrangers were commanded to go out of the Temple, where was the ſchechina or appearing of God, which is ordinarily called δόξα glory.

b. That ἅγιοι ſaints] here ſignifie the Jewes, will appear by the oppoſition to ξένοι ſtrangers before, for in reſpect of the Jewes it was that they were called ſtrangers, they being the only people of God before, and now the Gentiles that were but זרים ſtrangers (vulgarly known by that name) being received in to be συμπολίται fellow-citizens, with whom? why with the ſame, to whom they were ſtrangers, i.e. the Jewes. Thus doth Procopius interpret it in Iſa: p. 683. who accordingly calls the Jewes τὸ ἐκ πάλαι ἅγιον ἔθνος the nation made up of the holy fathers, which ſaying of his gives the reaſon of this phraſe, why the Jewes are called ἅγιοι holy, viz: in reſpect to the Patriarchs, Abrabraham &c. who were truly ἅγιοι ſaints, to whom the promiſes were made, to the participation of which the Gentiles are now called.

1. Hereupon I Paul,

as an Apoſtle, ſo at this time a priſoner alſo of Jeſus Chriſt, who am perſecuted for this one thing, becauſe I preach to the Gentiles, and according to the doctrine of Chriſt vindicate the liberty of the Gentile converts, and the no-neceſſity of circumciſion to them (ſee note on Gal. 2. c.)

if you underſtand (ſee note on c. 1. f.) any thing of my Apoſtleſhip, my commiſſion to preach and conſtitute Churches among you Gentiles:

Which myſtery in the former ages was ſo farre from being revealed to men, that it was generally thought unlawfull to converſe or have any thing to doe with the Gentiles, till now the contrary hath been revealed (as to Peter, Act. 10. ſo) particularly to me v. 3. and generally to the Apoſtles and others (that received viſions to that purpoſe, and extraordinary gifts for the benefit and uſe of the Church, the gift of tongues &c. on purpoſe that they might preach to all nations,)

5. Which in other ages was not made known unto the ſons of men, as it is now revealed unto his holy Apoſtles and Prophets by the Spirit,]

I, I ſay, who am the unworthieſt perſon, and moſt unfit for ſuch an office, have yet had this dignity, this favour, this commiſſion vouchſafed to me, to make known to the Gentiles this bounty of Chriſt's toward them, in receiving them freely into covenant, without thoſe impoſitions of circumciſion &c. which were required of the Jewes, A thing which could not by any clue or ſearch have been found in the Jewiſh law, if Chriſt had not commanded, and I, and other Apoſtles received revelation to doe it.

Notes on Chap. III.

a. Χάρις

The word χάρις here, and χάρισμα in other places 1 Tim. 4. 14. ſignifies ſome ſpecial favour of God's in order to ſome charge or office, that eſpecially of the miniſtery. So when Levi is called God's holy one, Deut. 33. 8. the word there uſed in the Hebrew is חסידך, not thy ἅγιος] ſo properly, (that would be קדוש) as thy [κεχαριτωμένος] חסיד ſignifying χάρις favour here, and ſo the perſon to whom the חסיד belongs, is he that is favoured by God in a ſpecial manner, preferred to ſuch a dignity, (an office) before others, without conſideration of any dignity in the perſon, onely upon the free mercy, and good pleaſure of God.

b. τίνων

The meaning of this verſe will not eaſily be pitch'd on, becauſe it is not certain whether the reading be, [ὑπερβάλλουσῆ τὴν γνῶσιν ἀγάπην τοῦ Χριστοῦ] or, as the King's MS. reads, [ὑπερβάλλουσῆ ἀγάπην τὴν γνῶσιν τοῦ Χριστοῦ] If the firſt be the right reading, it muſt then be rendred [the love of Chriſt which exceedeth knowledge] where the compariſon being laid betwixt the love of Chriſt, and knowledge, and the love of Chriſt being by ver. 18. determined to ſignifie Chriſt's love of us, the knowledge muſt probably ſignifie thoſe things, which the Gnoſticks pretend to know, and boaſt ſo much in that knowledge, and ſo to know the love of Chriſt, which paſſeth knowledge, is to ſtudy, and contemplate that one ſubject, Chriſt's infinite love to us, which is infinitely more worth our ſtudying, then what they boaſt of, and ſo this is no improbable ſenſe of the place, that the Apoſtle having prayed, that they may comprehend the immenſe love of Chriſt toward them, v. 18. ſhould adde alſo, that they may know that love of Chriſts, which excelleth knowledge, i. e. (as the Gnoſticks are very proud of their deep and ſecret knowledge, and place great perfection therein, ſo they on the other ſide ſhould) look upon the huge love of Chriſt toward them, ſuch as being conſidered, will by way of gratitude, incline them to ſuffer any thing for his ſake, in oppoſition to being diſcouraged at tribulations, v. 13. and to poſſeſſe their hearts of that, as that which is farre more worth their thinking of, and ſtudying, then the higheſt knowledge or skill of myſtical interpretations, which the Gnoſticks ſo pretended to. As for the notion of γνῶσις for knowledge ſimply taken, ſo as [to exceed knowledge] ſhould ſignifie unſearchable, unintelligible, that cannot probably be the meaning of it, when at the ſame time he prayes they may know it, and beſides the genitive caſe γνῶσις] being the note of compariſon, ſeems rather to referre to the former notion to compare [love] and [knowledge] together, and preferre the former. But if the other be the right reading, then the rendring will be plain [the exceeding love of the knowledge of Christ] and though that be capable of severall interpretations, whether 1. the love of God in revealing, and of Christ in vouchsafing to be known to us, or 2dly, our love of Christian knowledge, yet the former will be more commodious, because more agreeable to v. 18. where it is Gods love toward us, that they are to comprehend, and this is one speciall branch of that, his revealing his Son unto us; to which also it is consequent, that we should (which is the point in hand v. 13.) adhere constantly to him, endure persecutions, and not suffer our love to be cooled by them, And to this interpretation the words which follow, will well connect, ἵνα πληρωθῆτε &c. that ye may be filled to all the fulness of God, (see note c.) as an effect, in us, of this knowledge, or consideration of Gods infinite love toward us.

c. Πληρόω to fulfill] signifies to fill up vacuities, to perfect, to complete, see note on Mat. 5. h. so here having recommended to them the ὑπερβάλλουσαν ἀγάπην exceeding love or charity of God toward them, viz: rich love, and promises of God in Christ, he adds, that they may be fulfilled, i.e. (as an effect of their consideration of God's love toward them) filled up, and perfected to the highest pitch, that God now in Christ requires of us, and that is properly called πᾶν πλήρωμα Θεοῦ, all the fulness of God, i. e. all that perfection of charity, to which God in Christ hath designed to elevate the Christian, and wherein, in a manner, all Christianity doth consist, and to which wee are engaged by his love to us.

d. The variety of reading, either with, or without [καὶ and] makes it doubtfull how this verse should be rendred. If it be without [καὶ and] then it must first be observed, that the preposition ἐν, signifying sometimes in, as in a place (and so it may possibly be here, in the assembly of Christians forever) signifies also through and by, and so it may most probably signifie here, and be all one with διὰ τῆς ἐκκλησίας by the Church v. 10. that as there the various wisdome of God was demonstrated by the Church, i.e. by God's dealing in it, so here that various wisdome and mercy of his should be acknowledged with thanksgiving. And then, though 'tis possible ἐν Χριστῷ] may adhere to ἐκκλησίᾳ, and so be rendred, the Church in Christ Jesus, i. e. the Christian Church, yet because probably, if that were it, it would be expressed by repeating the article [τῇ] after ἐκκλησίᾳ, as it is 1 Cor. 1. 2. therefore it will be more reasonable to render ἐν Χριστῷ through Christ, as the mediator, through whom, as we pray Rom. 1. 8. so we give thanks, and praise to God also. And so the meaning will be, All honour and glory be unto God through Jesus Christ (by whom these mercies are conveighed to us) for, or, by, or, through the Church, i. e. through those gracious and wise disposals of his, that are now wrought by receiving the Gentiles into the Church, a thing which is likely to have main influence upon all posterities of the world forever. But if the καὶ be taken in, (as in that antient MS. it is) then as that must necessarily connect ἐκκλησίᾳ and Χριστῷ, Church and Christ, whether it be rendred [and] or [even] so the ἐν cannot signifie in, as in a place, because that cannot be applied to ἐν Χριστῷ in Christ, but must necessarily be rendred by, or through, and the Church and Christ must be the two means (though perhaps those two knit into one, by rendring καὶ even) whereby this glory is to come in to God, and so is ascribed to him, thus, All glory be to God the Father, the wise disposer of all, through that which is now done in the Church, and, or even through what hath been done by Christ, in reconciling the Gentiles, and bringing them into the same fold with the Jewes, making up one Church of both.

CHAP. IV.

1. I therefore the Apostle, that am at this time a prisoner for the cause of Christ, ch. 3. 1. (from whence to this place seems to be one long parenthesis, see note on Gal. 2. c.) doe exhort you to behave your selves like persons that have been vouchsafed by God that great mercy of revealing Christ to you in your Gentile state.

Notes on Chap. IV.

a. Αἰχμαλωσίαν It hath been the manner of many nations, in their triumphs after victories, to go up to the city in pomp and ſplendor, to bring in captives bound, all people coming forth to the ſpectacle, and then to give ſolemn gifts or largeſſes to their friends, and countrey-men, or kindred, as part of the ſolemnity; And this is here accommodated to Chriſt in his victory and triumph over hell, accompliſhed by his death and reſurrection; For to increaſe the ſolemnity of that, he went up to the heavenly Jeruſalem, his own city, from which he came forth, carried the Devil, and ſin, and death captives, ſhew'd them openly, ſhackled, and unarmed, the Devil gagg'd and ſilenc'd in his oracles, death's ſting pull'd out, and ſin left unable to hurt any that had truly repented of it; and, for a complement of all, he ſent his largeſſes to his Diſciples and clients, the gifts of the Holy Ghoſt.

h. The reſt of theſe offices of the Church have been explained, in the notes on 1 Cor. 12. a.b.c. And this of Evangeliſt, by the way, note on Mat. 9. 1. and Joh. 20. a. To which ſomewhat may here be added, for the giving the full notion of it. As firſt that the word εὐαγγέλιον, good newes, or meſſage being common to that which is written, and which is delivered by word of mouth, two notions there are of Evangeliſt, one for the writer, another for the preacher of the Goſpel; In the firſt notion we have the four Evangeliſts, of which two were Apoſtles of the twelve, Matthew and John, and yet thoſe as ordinarily called Evangeliſts, as the other two; But this is not the notion, which belongs to this place (where Evangeliſt is a diſtinct office from Apoſtle) but the ſecond, which denotes an office then known in the Church, when any, that was taken notice of for ſome eminent degree of proficiency in the Goſpel, and ſpecial abilities of utterance and diligence &c. was upon recommendation of the Church Εὐαγγελιστής Church (as it is ſaid of Timotheus, Act. 16. 2.) choſen by any of the Apoſtles to aſſiſt them in their work, and ſent out with power of preaching the Goſpel (and of doing miracles, and with gifts of healing, to that purpoſe) and of baptizing thoſe that ſhould receive the Goſpel, and with other powers alſo of ordaining Biſhops, when the Apoſtle thought fit to allow it him. For as the office of Evangeliſt, being to preach to unbelievers, requires not the donation of all the Epiſcopal power, viz: of ruling, nor the power of ordination neceſſarily, becauſe when the Evangeliſt hath planted the faith, the Apoſtle himſelf may come and confirm, and ordain Biſhops, as we ſee in Samaria, Act. 8. 17. (and therefore the Author of the Commentaries on the Epiſtles, under S. Ambroſe's name, ſaith on this place, Quamvis non ſint ſacerdotes, Evangelizare tamen poſſunt ſine cathedrâ, quemadmodum Stephanus & Philippus, Though they be not Prieſts, (i.e. Biſhops) yet they may Evangelize without a chair) ſo the donation of that ſuperior power doth not yet make them ceaſe to be Evangeliſts, And accordingly as Philip, which was but a Deacon (and therefore only preached and baptized the Samaritanes, Act. 8. 12. Peter and John the Apoſtles being ſent to lay hands on them v. 17.) was yet an Evangeliſt, and is ſo ſtyled Act. 21. 8. ſo others that were Evangeliſts had alſo power given them by the Apoſtles that ſent them out, to conſtitute Churches, and ſo to ordain rulers over them, as of Mark it is ſaid that being ſent into Ægypt by S. Peter, he conſtituted Anianus Biſhop of Alexandria, and ſo when Timothy was conſtituted Biſhop of Epheſus, 1 Tim. 1. 3. he is yet commanded by S. Paul to doe the work of an Evangeliſt, 2 Tim. 4. 5. i.e. as he was Biſhop of thoſe that beleived under that Metropolis, and of thoſe alſo that ſhould come in to the faith in all Aſia, ſo he had alſo authority to make known the Goſpel to them that knew it not, to call them to the faith, which is the peculiar notion of εὐαγγελίζειν and κηρύσσειν, to Evangelize, and to preach, and μαθητεύειν, Matth. 28. 29. to gather diſciples, as thoſe words are oppoſed to teaching, Act. 15. 35. and c. 5. 44. and as ὁ λόγος the word differs from doctrine, 1 Tim. 5. 17. Now as he that from a Deacon is made a Biſhop, hath all the powers that belonged to a Deacon ſtill continued to him, and the addition of ſo much more, ſo he that is an Evangeliſt, if he be farther inveſted with power of ordination, may ſtill remain an Evangeliſt, the power of conſtituting Biſhops over them that beleive and are baptized, being reconcileable with the power of preaching to them that beleived not. Only the word Evangeliſt denoting no more then that of being ſent by an Apoſtle to preach, is indifferently uſed, whether he have the power of Deacon onely, as Philip, or more, as of Timothy, and Mark hath been affirmed, and ſo is here ſet after the Apoſtles and Prophets, and diſtinguiſh'd from Paſtors and Doctors, that come after, by which the ruling Elder, or Biſhop is underſtood.

The word κυβεία from κύβος a dye, might poſſibly ſignifie inconſtancy and mutability, becauſe nothing is more variable then that. And ſo in Antoninus l. 1. ἀνεμπαθὴς ἀκύβευτος] is ſet to ſignifie the firmeſt conſtancy of mind. In this ſenſe it might well enough agree with the πεπηρωμένοι] here, being carried about with the wind &c. and ſo Xylander upon that place hath taken confidence to interpret it, that S. Paul adviſes us to avoid κυβείαν ἀνθρώπων, i.e. ſaith he, ne omni vento doctrinæ circumagi nos, & in errores abripi patiamur, that we doe not permit our ſelves to be driven about, and ſnatcht into errors by every wind of doctrine. But the Gloſſe of Phavorinus is more to be heeded, who renders it πανουργία, craft, ſubtilty, dexterity to deceive, and agreeably the very word πανουργία is here ſet with it; in the ſenſe, wherein we proverbially ſay of a cunning cheat, that he ſets the dice upon us. And ſo Euſebius out of Irenæus ſpeaking of Marcus, ſaith he was μαγικῆς κυβείας ἐμπειρότατος, by κυβεία ſignifying deceitfull artifice, ſuch as conjurers uſe, Eccleſ: Hiſt: l. 4. c. 11.

This verſe hath much of difficulty in it, and the d. Κεφαλὴ firſt part of that is, whether, Chriſt being called in the former verſe the head of the Church the influences that here are ſaid to come from him, and are ſet down by analogie with the natural body, are thoſe that come from the head, and not rather from the heart. To this the ſolution may be eaſie; 1. that it is very probable, that in a mans body the growth is from the head, For the animal ſpirits are by the nerves conveyed to the nouriſhing, and encreaſing the ſeveral parts, through the whole body, And thoſe nerves deſcend from the brain by the ſpina dorſi, and are from the vertebræ there, brancht out over the whole body, from whence it comes to paſſe in crooked perſons, where the vertebræ are diſplaced, that the growth is thereby hindered. And then the analogie will hold exactly to the Church, the body of Chriſt, that it receives its ſupply for encreaſe, or growth, from Chriſt the head: 2^dly, that if this be not ſo, but that the heart ſhould be found to be the fountain both of life and growth, yet the analogie here will ſtill hold, it being reaſonable to affirm, that Chriſt ſupplies the place of both theſe parts in the Church, is the head to rule and direct, and the heart alſo to ſupply it with all it wants, with graces for the beginning and increaſe of life. In the next place therefore, it is not eaſie to give an account of that phraſe [συμβιβαζόμενον διὰ πάσης Συμβιβάζω ἁφῆς τῆς ἐπιχορηγίας] Συμβιβάζειν is ſufficiently expounded by Heſychius, εἰς φιλίαν ἄγειν, to bring to friendſhip, and ſo συμβιβαζόμενον] applied to the body, ſignifies a cloſe conjunction, ſomewhat above that agreement of parts, or fitting together, noted by ζωπερμολογούμενον precedent, that ſignifying the Συναρμολ.
fitting one part to another by jointing or putting συν together, but the latter, the faſtning them, when they are ſo jointed, either as by cementing, or by pinning, or by clapping plates of iron upon them, which will keep them from falling (or being pluckt) aſunder, and this is done διὰ τῆς ἁφῆς ἐφ' σωνδέσμων Col. 2. 19. firſt, διὰ ἁφῆς, literally by touAπαι ches, or contiguous, but not continuous parts, i.e. by joints, ſo called from ἅπτω tango, becauſe though the joints, like ſeveral pieces of timber, fitted together, doe touch one another, yet there is not that continuity, as in each part is diſcernible, and ſecondly διὰ ζωνδέσμων, by ligatures, and bands, and here διὰ πάσης ἁφῆς by every touch, i.e. every joint, without mention of the bands. Where there being no matter of doubt but that the ζωνδέσμοι bands Σύνδεσμοι denote the veines and arteries, thoſe ligaments of the body, by which the blood and ſpirits are conveyed veyed to every part, it muſt follow, that the ἁφαὶ joyned with it, muſt ſignifie the joints that are ſo cemented, and kept together with theſe bands, and ſo by both of them there, and by one here, (comprehending alſo the other under it) the body is ἐπιχορηγούμενον and συμβιβαζόμενον, ſupplied by the one, and knit together by the other. And then it being evident that this place and that are parallel, it will follow 1. that πᾶσα ἁφὴ here, every touch or contignity, or joynt will be all one with ἁφαὶ καὶ σύνδεσμοι touches and ligaments in the plural there; and 2^dly, that the genitive τῆς ἐπιχορηγίας, that muſt follow here, muſt be the latter of two ſubſtantives, and denote the office or uſe of the ἁφαὶ, the joints, and veins, and arteries, viz: ἐπιχορηγεῖν, to ſupply or contribute to every part that which it wants, as, in the place to the Coloſſ: the body is ſaid ἐπιχορηγεῖσθαι in the paſſive, to be thus ſupplied and provided for by them. The 3^d difficulty is, what is the importance of κατ' ἐνέργειαν, and that will now be more eaſily ſalved; For the ſupply being made by the veines and arteries (that knit the joints) to all the parts of the body, thoſe parts that receive the ſupply being after mentioned, and ἐν μέτρῳ] noting their proportion of want, the degree or meaſure of their capacity of receiving it, ἐνέργεια muſt needs belong to the agent in this ſupply, the joints, and veins, & arteries, that thus contribute to the wants of each part, and ſo κατ' ἐνέργειαν] will ſignifie, by, or according to their operation, or operative virtue, or efficiency or power ἐν μέτρῳ ἑνὸς ἑκάστου μέρους in the proportion of every member, i. e. in proportion to what every member wants, not only for its preſent ſubſiſtence, to repair what is daily loſt, but for growth alſo, till it attain to the full dimenſions that belong to it. The laſt difficulty is, why when τὸ σῶμα the body is the ſubject of the propoſition, and conſequently [ποιεῖται αὔξησιν cauſes increaſe] is the predicate, that connects with it, here is yet added τοῦ σώματος of the body, thus, the body cauſeth encreaſe of the body. But that is anſwered alſo by the uſe of the word גוף in Hebrew, to which τὸ σῶμα body in Greek is anſwerable, which ſignifies not onely body, but being, eſſence, and being joyned with any thing elſe, ſignifies that to which it is joyned, גופו his body, i. e. himſelf, and ſo here 'tis taken, and ſo ſignifies no more, but that the body by thoſe means ſpecified cauſeth increaſe of it ſelf, i. e. is daily nouriſhed and increaſed, εἰς οἰκοδομὴν ἑαυτοῦ ἐν ἀγάπῃ, to the building up, or improving it ſelf in love, which is, as it were, the reciting of the whole verſe, and applying of it to the buſineſſe in hand, the Church, as it is the body of Chriſt; that as union and kindneſſe, and the ſupply, that is made by one part of the the body to the other, is that, that ſuſtains and gives growth to the body, ſo is amity and joyning together in common aſſemblies, and the rich mens and the maturer and ſtronger Chriſtians contributing their ſupplies to the temporal, but eſpecially to the ſpiritual wants of the poorer and weaker, a means of increaſing and building up the Church of Chriſt, whereſoever it hath been planted. By what hath been here ſaid thus largely, that other parallel place Col. 2.19. is ſufficiently explained alſo.

c. 'Απαγεῖν] is, ſaith Pauſanias, παύεσθαι ἀλγεῖν, to ceaſe to feel cold, as ἀλγεῖν is not πονεῖν, but πάσχειν, not actively to labour, but paſſively to ſuffer pain, So ἀπαγῶντες ὑπὸ τοῦ πολλοῦ ῥίγους, they that through extreme cold are numm'd, and can neither feel, nor doe any thing.

'Αποδυσφορία, τὰ ἀῤῥήτων, καὶ δυσλέκτων ἀῤῥυθμοστάτων, ſaith S. Baſil ad Diodorum, the word is uſed for thoſe abominable ſins not to be named, whether of men, or women. f.

What is here adviſed by the Apoſtle, is parallel to the directions of the antient Philoſophers, known by the Epheſians, to whom he wrote. Ariſtotle diſtinguiſheth in this matter, Eth: l.7.c.6. between ἀκρόχολοι thoſe that are highly enraged, and πικροὶ bitter, or contumelious in their anger, and χαλεποὶ hard to be reconciled, whom elſwhere he calls δυσδιάλυτοι thoſe that hardly are diſſolved, hardly put off their diſpleaſure, Eth: 4.5. Theſe three ſorts are here referred to by the Apoſtle, the firſt (ἀκρόχολοι) is intimated in the [ὀργίζεσθε be angry] whether by that be meant ſuddain anger, and haſtineſſe, or whether diſtemper, and rage, conceived upon any the greateſt provocation, This firſt degree is here ſuppoſed, and the exhortation founded in the preſence of it, which yet concludeth not this whether ſuddenneſſe of paſſion, or inordinacy of rage to be no ſin, for certainly the contrary to the ſlowneſs to anger] is elſwhere commanded βραδὺς εἰς ὀργὴν, Jam. 1. 19. and ſo of the charitable man it is ſaid 1 Cor. 13. 4. μακροθυμεῖ, he is ſlow to anger. The ſecond ſort [πικροὶ] is forbidden in the μὴ ἁμαρτάνετε, ſin not, this being the firſt aggravation of the fault of anger indulged to, that it becomes bitter, which is expreſt by παροξυσμὸς 1 Cor. 13.5. an exaſperation, or paroxyſm of this evil humour, And the third [χαλεποὶ or δυσδιάλυτοι] is here expreſt by the very ſame colour, that the antient philoſophers, the Pythagoreans had thought fit to expreſſe it by. For of them, ſaith Plutarch, de Frat: am: that when they fell into any λοιδορίαν ὑπ' ὀργῆς contumely through anger, πρὶν ἢ τὸν ἥλιον δῦναι--διαλύεσθαι, before the ſun went down, the ſhook hands, and were diſſolved (directly contrary to the δυσδιάλυτοι) or made friends again, and ſo here ὁ ἥλιος μὴ ἐπιδυέτω ἐπὶ τῷ παροργισμῷ ὑμῶν, Let not the ſun go down upon your wrath, where παροργισμὸς being that παροξυσμὸς exaſperation of anger, which breaks out into bitter words, and ſo all one directly with the λοιδορία ὑπ' ὀργῆς, the contumelious behaviour produced by anger, the Apoſtles command is, that he that hath been guilty of it, muſt come to temper, and ſue for reconciliation, (as the ſame Pythagoreans did, τὰς δεξιὰς ἐμβαλλοντες ἀλλήλοις, καὶ ἀπαναπαύοντο, ſhaking hands and embracing one another) before the ſun go down, i. e. either ſpeedily (as Chriſt adviſes, agree with thy adverſary quickly) or elſe before the time of ſolemn praying to God, which was conſtantly at evening, and ſo the exhortation here will bear proportion with that Mat. 5. 23, 24. If thou bringeſt thy gift unto the altar, and there remembreſt that thy brother hath ought againſt thee (as he that hath been reproached by thee in thy wrath hath,) leave there thy gift, and firſt be reconciled to thy brother (i. e. obtain his reconciliation to thee) and then, and not till then, thou mayſt offer thy gift. g.

The reaſon of the conjoyning of the prohibition of ſtealth, and the precept of labour, will be diſcerned by remembring the old verſe in Phocylides, h.

Πᾶς γὰρ ἀεργὸς ἀνὴρ ζωὴν κλοπιμὴν ἀπὸ χειρῶν,

There

There is no way for a ſluggard to live, but by ſtealing, and acts of that kind, And ſo ſaith S. Chryſoſtome, Τὸ γὰρ κλέπτειν ἀργίας ἔργον, ſtealing is an effect of idleneſſe.

ι. ἔκτυπος

The ſpecial uſe of a Seal, and that which in this and other places of the Scripture is moſt commonly referr'd to, is that of a mark or Character ſet upon wares, or commodities, that are brought by any, and becauſe men were as ordinarily bought, as any other commodity, nothing was more ordinary then to ſet a ſeal or mark upon them, either in their forehead or ſome other part, to diſtinguiſh them from all others. Thus Rev. 7. 3. the ſealing is there accommodated to the ſervants of God, who are there ſuppoſed to be bought, and are now farther to be reſcued out of the temporall enſuing danger, and, as a token of that, ſealed in the forehead; as ſervi, ſervants, in reſpect of the originall of the word, a ſervando, is all on with σῴζωσι, who being ſpiritually reſcued and ſaved already from the pollutions of the world, are now to be delivered from the approaching deſtruction, when, without that mark of diſcrimination, the good and ill, might all be involved in the ſame calamity: See note on Rev. 7. c. Thus when Joh. 6. 27. 'tis ſaid that God the father hath ſealed Chriſt, the meaning is clear, that by the miracles which he did, and eſpecially by the Holy Ghoſt's deſcending upon him, with [οὗτός ἐστι, this is he] he had owned him his ſervant, Iſa. 42. 1. (ſee note on Mat. 3. 1.) and demonſtrated it as punctually as if he had mark'd him in the forehead, that this was his anointed ſpecial ſervant, ſent by commiſſion from him diſcriminated from all others, and that, whatſoever he ſaid, was the will and pleaſure of God. In reference to what was there ſaid of God's ſealing Chriſt, is that, which is here ſaid, to be underſtood alſo. For there the ſpirit's coming down upon Chriſt was the ſealing of him, the ſignifying that he was God's ſervant ſent on his meſſage to the world, and here in like manner the Epheſians are ſaid to be ſealed by the Spirit, to the day of redemption, i. e. by the preaching of the Goſpell, and ſettling of a Church among them, which is an effect directly of the Holy Ghoſt's deſcending on the Apoſtles (as before upon Chriſt) and an act of the office of the Holy Ghoſt, by which the Epheſians that were believers, were demonſtratively pointed out to be by God deſigned to his ſervice, to a gracious Chriſtian life, and nothing ſo contrary, ſo grievous to this Holy Spirit, as their neglecting and contradicting theſe deſignes of God, living unchriſtianly, v. 29. By this 'twill be eaſie to underſtand the like phraſe 2 Cor. 1. 22. where alſo, as here, to God's ſealing us is ſtraight added his giving his ſpirit as a pledge, &c. So Eph. 1. 13. ye were ſealed by the holy Spirit of promiſe, i. e. by that holy Spirit promiſed by Chriſt, and in the Goſpell called, the promiſe of the father, Lu. 24. 49. which whereſoever it is given (i. e. where a Church is ſettled and eſtabliſhed) is ἀρραβὼν κληρονομίας, a pledge or firſt part of that inheritance or portion, which ſhall hereafter be beſtowed on thoſe, which by this appear to be received, and acknowledged, as ſervants, and ſonnes of God.

CHAP. V.

Paraphraſe.

* imitators. μιμηταὶ

1. BE ye therefore * followers of God as dear children;]

1. Be ye therefore as diligent to render your ſelves the pictures or reſemblances of God, which hath thus vouchſafed to be your Father, as any children are by nature in the lineaments of the face, or by inſtitution in the qualities of the minde, like to their naturall parents;

2. And walk in love, as Chriſt alſo hath loved us, and given himſelf for us, an * offering and ſacrifice to God for a ſweet ſmelling ſavour.]

2. And continue conſtant to death in the profeſſion of the Chriſtian faith, (ſee note on Rev. 2. b.) thereby imitating the love of Chriſt to us, who, that he might confirm and ſeal the truth of his preaching for which he was ſent by God, offered up his own life, was willingly content to dye; which death of his, as it was for our ſakes, ſo was it moſt acceptable to God, and ſo cannot be better compared, then to a meat offering or drink offering, which being offered for our ſins unto God (and of the former a part burn'd upon the altar, and the reſt for the uſe of the Prieſt. Lev. 2. 3. but the latter wholly conſumed on the altar,) is ſaid to be of a ſweet ſavour unto the Lord. Lev. 2. 3. and Gen. 8. 20. to ſatisfie for us, and work our peace. 2.

3. But fornication, and all uncleanneſſe, or † covetouſneſſe, let it not be once named amongſt you, as becometh Saints:]

3. And for the Gnoſtick noyſome foule practiſes, unlawfull, unnaturall riotous luſts let them never get the leaſt admiſſion among you, but be utterly deteſted by you, according to that obligation that lies on you as Chriſtians, in oppoſition to the heathens:

* And filthyneſſe, and fooliſh ſpeaking, or jeſting, which are things unſeemly, but rather graciouſneſſe.

4. * Neither filthineſſe, nor [b] fooliſh talking, nor jeſting, which are not convenient: but rather giving of [c] thankes.]

4. And ſo all unclean geſtures, and obſcene talking, or unſavoury jeſts to cauſe laughter, which are all unbeſeeming a Chriſtian; but purity, chaſtneſſe, graciouſneſſe of language, oppoſite to the filthineſſe before, or elſe bleſſing and praiſing of God, a fayre fitter ſubject for our rejoycing. b. c.

5. For this ye know, that no whoremonger, nor unclean perſon, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Chriſt, and of God.]

5. For by the Chriſtian doctrine ye are aſſured, that he that is guilty of any unlawfull, eſpecially, unnaturall, inordinate luſt (ſee Ro. 1. note h.) thoſe ſins which were uſed in the myſteries of the heathens, is an abſolute Gentile perſon, hath no portion in the Church of God under Chriſt, nor inheritance in heaven. See note on 1 Cor. 5. 1.

6. Let no man deceive you with vain words: for becauſe of theſe things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of diſobedience.]

6. Let no man flatter you, that theſe are tolerable for a Chriſtian, for they are the very ſins, for which God hath ſo plagued the heathens, as he did Sodome, &c.

7. Be not ye therefore partakers with them.]

7. Doe not ye then joyn in their ſins, that ye may not in their puniſhments.

8. For

8. For though yee were formerly heathens, yet now ye are become Chriſtians, and that layes an obligation on you, and all ſuch as you, to live like Chriſtians,

8. For yee were ſometimes darkneſſe, but now are ye light in the Lord: walk as children of light,]

9. (For that Spirit that God hath ſent among us in the preaching of the Goſpell, being the Spirit of God, muſt bring forth all kindneſſe, juſtice, fidelity, and ſuch like, (Ga 5. 22,)

9. (For the fruit of * the Spirit is in all goodneſſe, and righteouſneſſe, and truth.)]

11. And goe not ye to their heathen myſteries, comply not with their cloſe dark abominable practiſes, but oppoſe and help to bring them to light, that they may leave them, (the ſecrecy being the onely thing that ſecures and continues them in them.)

11. And have no fellowſhip with the unfruitfull workes of darkneſſe, but rather * reprove them.]

* diſcover them ελεγχετε

12. For thoſe ſecret practiſes are ſuch that they dare not appear in the light, and therefore are by the devill, who preſcribes them as parts of his worſhip, appointed to be uſed in cloſe receſſes, which are called their myſteries, as the higheſt, but indeed the vileſt part of their religion, (ſee note on Rev. 14. a.)

12. For it is a ſhame even to ſpeak of thoſe things which are done of them in ſecret.]

13. But Chriſtianity is a means to diſcover and diſplay theſe abominable cheats and villanies, as light is the direct means to diſcover what darkneſſe hath hid, and to make them renounce and forſake it, when they ſee it is ſeen and abhorred by men.

13. But all things † that are approved are made manifeſt by the light; for whatſoever doth make manifeſt, is light.]

† being diſcovered by the light are made manifeſt, ελεγχομενα υπο του φωτος φανερουται

14. According to that ſaying of Iſaiah, c. 60. 1. Ariſe, be enlightned, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is riſen upon thee, i. e. this Chriſtian eſtate is a lightſome condition, and engages every man that expects to have his part in it, to get out of all theſe horrible dark ſecrecies, which are put to ſhame and diſcomfited by the light.

14. Wherefore he ſaith, Awake thou that ſleepeſt, and ariſe from the dead, and Chriſt ſhall * give thee light.]

d. 15. See therefore and conſider how yee may walk moſt exactly and inoffenſively, to which end ye will need great circumſpection, as being placed in the midſt of ſuch temptations and dangers, by one or other ready to be inſnared on every ſide; If your circumſpection be not intenſe enough, ye will be inſnared as fooles in their luſts, and complyances, which bring ſuch carnal temptations along with them, and if ye be over earneſt in admoniſhing them, and vehement unſeaſonably, ye will exaſperate and incurre the danger Mat. 7. 6. of being rent by the ſwine.

16. * Redeeming the time, becauſe the dayes are evill.]

17. And therefore ſee that ye be not corrupted by their inſinuations, but let the knowledge of your Chriſtian duty ſo fortifie you, that ye be not befoold or inſnared by them.

17. Wherefore be ye not unwiſe, but underſtand what the will of the Lord is.]

f. 18. And do not ye, like thoſe heathens in their Bacchanals, inflame your ſelves with wine, to which all manner of inordinate luſt is conſequent, (and then think ye are inſpired, and able to prophecy by that means) but let your hearts be filled with zeal and devotion (ſee note on Lu. 9. d.)

20. Giving thanks alwayes for all things unto God * and the father, in the name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt;]

* even και

21. Yeilding obedience to thoſe, to whom tis due, in ſubordination to God, obeying their lawfull commands upon God's command to honour them, but yet not doing any thing in obedience to them, which is forbidden by that ſuperior law of God.

21. Submitting your ſelves one to another in the fear of † God.]

† or, Chriſt, for the King's MS. reads Χριστου

22. All wives muſt be ſubject to their husbands by virtue of the Chriſtian law, which in this and other things doth no way diſannull, but rather confirm God's firſt inſtitution.

22. Wives ſubmit your ſelves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord.]

23. And the ſame obligation that lies on the Church to obey Chriſt, viz. becauſe he is the head of it, lyes on the wife to obey the husband, who is the head of the wife, 1 Cor. 11. 13. by the law of creation, which is in force among all nations, and as Chriſt did for his Church, ſo it is the office of the husband, as of the head, to take care for, and ſecure, and defend the body which belongs to it, i. e. to doe all that hee can for the good of the wife.

23. For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Chriſt is of the Church, and he is the Saviour of the body.]

24. There-

24. Therefore as the Church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in every thing.] 24. And this subjection of the wife to the husband is not restrained to some sorts of things, but extended unlimitedly to all, where there is not a prohibition of some superiour law (see v. 22.) as the Church is to be regulated by Christ, and those whom he hath placed over it, in all things.

25. Husbands love your wives, even as Christ also loved the Church, and gave himself for it,] 25. And, by the same rule of analogie with Christ, the husbands are obliged to expresse that care of their wives, that love to their good, as Christ had to the good of his Church, which is his wife (for whom he laid down his life)

26. That he might sanctifie * and cleanse it with the washing of water, by the word,] * it, having cleansed it ἁγίσῃ, καθαρίσας 26. That he might purifie it from all sin, and to that end appointed baptisme, therein obliging us to forsake the devil &c. and covenanting to give us grace to doe so, and to that adding his word, the whole doctrine, commands, promises of the Gospel, as a powerfull means to oblige, and enable us to doe so.

27. That he might present it to himself a glorious Church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish.] 27. And all this, that as a wife he may set it out in beauty and comelinesse, as a garment come new out of the fuller's hand, purged from spots, stretched from wrinkles, and so not having any of the base pollutions before mentioned v. 5. but that it may be perfectly clean without ever a blemish in it.)

28. So ought † men to love their wives, as their own bodies: he that loveth his wife loveth himself.] † husbands ἀνδρες 28. And this love of the husband to the wife, must be as to a part of himself (for so Eve was taken out of Adam.)

29. For no man ever yet hated his own flesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the Church.] 29. And not to love a man's self, and every part of that is unnatural, and therefore every sensible man will love his wife as part of himself, and endevour her good, as Christ doth the Churches, with all the zeal imaginable.

30. For we are [h] members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones.] 30. (For he is the head of the Church, and we are members of him.) h.

31. For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall * be joyned unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh.] * cleave ἐχόμενος συνδεθήσεται 31. And this is the reason of that precept in the first creation, that a man shall at marriage put off all other neerest relations, so farre as to preferre this newly contracted relation before them all, of two to make up one common person, Gen. 2. 24.

32. This is a great mysterie; but I speak concerning Christ and the Church:] 32. This place of Genesis is spoken literally of marriage, but it hath also a divine, secret, mystical sense in it, to denote the conjunction or marriage between Christ and his Church, who are literally one flesh, by Christ's assuming our nature upon him, and mystically one body, by the strict union which he hath made, both by infusing his graces, as the head to the members, and obliging us to continue in him, as members in union with, and subjection to the head. And so the Jewes themselves say of the taking Eve out of Adam's side, that it was to signifie the marriage of the most highest, God blessed forever.

33. Nevertheless let every one of you in particular so love his wife even as himself, and the wife see that she † reverence her husband.] † fear φοβηται 33. The short is, that by the law of our creation confirm'd, and not disannulled by Christ, and exemplified to us in his dealings with his spouse the Church, every Christian husband is bound to account of his wife, as of a great part of himself, and accordingly to love and care for her, and she back again, as to the head, behave her self reverently toward the husband.

Notes on Chap. V.

a. Προσφορὰ καὶ θυσία

The difference of προσφορὰ offering, and θυσία sacrifice, is ordinarily observable, see Heb. 10. where in stead of θυσία and προσφορὰ, sacrifice and offering v. 5. is ὁλοκαύτωμα, καὶ περὶ ἁμαρτίας, Burnt offering and sacrifice for sinne, v. 6. where, as θυσία sacrifice is certainly expressed by ὁλοκαύτωμα, the bodies of beasts wholly burnt upon the altar (of which therefore no part came to the Priest, Heb. 13. 11.) so the προσφορὰ oblation is the מנחה, or meat-offering, the flour and oyle Lev. 2. 2. of which part was burnt with fire, and the remnant was Aaron's and his sons, v. 3. and as of the former of these, when it was offered by Noah, Gen. 8. 20. it is said that the Lord smelled a sweet savour, v. 21. and that as a token that his wrath was pacified, as it follows, the Lord said in his heart, I will not again curse the ground any more, &c. so Lev. 2. 2. the other is said to be an offering made by fire, a sweet savour unto the Lord. And accordingly here to the mention of offering and sacrifice, meat-offering, and burnt-offering, is added, εἰς ὀσμὴν εὐωδίας, for a smell of sweet savour, which notes this death of Christ, which is expressed by it, to be a means appointed by God, for the averting his wrath from us, for the appeasing and reconciling him to us, as those sacrifices were wont to doe, and an engagement to us to live such lives as may be acceptable to God, contrary to the noysome lusts, ver. 3.

That μωρολογία signifies foolish speaking, and that εὐτραπελία signifies the same, onely with this addition of designing it as jest, to move laughter (and therefore εὐτράπελος is ordinarily interpreted γελοιοδὴς, and γελωτοποιὸς, a ridiculous person, or one that causeth laughter) there is no question. But that the text may here reasonably be thought to confine them both to obscene and filthy discourse, may also appear, not onely by the company that they are set with, fornication, uncleanesse, inordinate lust, filthinesse, but especially by the reason that is rendred for the abandoning of all these, v 5. For this you know, that every fornicator, or unclean person, or inordinate luster, which is an idolater, hath no inheritance in the kingdome of Christ or of God. Where if these two be not of the same sort with the former, belonging all to uncleanesse, that enumeration in the reason, would not comprehend the severals in the exhortation, which b. Μωρολογία Εὐτραπελία which it muſt be ſuppoſed to doe, To this purpoſe therefore it is 1. obſervable of the word μωρολογία fooliſh-ſpeaking, that it is the ſcripture elegance to expreſſe uncleanneſſe by folly, ſo folly in Iſrael is adultery; and ſo in Eurypides Ἀφροσύνα, matters of venery, are called μωρὰ fooliſh, and in Ariſtophanes ἀνόητα, which is the ſame, and ſo μωρολογία ſpeaking folly may be ſpeaking obſcenely: 2ly, that εὐτραπελία, (which is joyned with it by [ἢ or] and ſo is but an explication of it) as it is by Heſychius rendred κυβίστης levity, and μωρολογία fooliſh-ſpeaking, ſo it is alſo διαχεσλογία filthy, unclean ſpeaking: 3dly, that after all theſe here is added [τὰ οὐκ ἀνήκοντα] which being in the plural, belongs equally to all the foregoing words, and that ſignifying not barely that which is not convenient, but indecent, foul, unbecoming, doth by a kind of propriety belong to that of immodeſt, unclean behaviour: 4thly, by this way of rendring theſe words all manner of uncleanneſſe will be comprehended in this prohibition; that in the members, acted through all the ſorts, will be comprehended in the three words, ver. 3. that of unſeemly behaviour, geſtures &c. under the word αἰσχρότης filthineſſe v. 4. and that of the tongue in the other two words of fooliſh ſpeaking, or jeſting. 5thly, It is ordinarily known how much of the wit and jeſting of wicked profane perſons, conſiſts in this one ſubject of obſcene and ſcurrilous diſcourſe, and ſo how reaſonable it was, in the prohibiting all uncleanneſſe, to name that of obſcene jeſting, which, I ſuppoſe, was meant by the σαπρὸς λόγος putrid, rotten communication, c. 4. 29.

c. Εὐχαριστία

What εὐχαριστία here ſignifies, may be matter of ſome queſtion; It ſignifies ordinarily thanksgiving; and that belonging eſpecially to God (from whom all mercies are received, and to whom all thanks are due) may be meant here by the word, though no mention of God be added to it, and ſo the context may well bear, Let there be no unclean ſcurrilous jeſts uſed among you, but rather giving of thanks, i.e. Let the Chriſtian's way of mirth be farre from that of obſcene wit; the recounting the mercies of God in Chriſt, calling you from darkneſſe to his marvailous light, will farre better become a Chriſtian, and to this purpoſe ſee ver. 20. But yet it may be obſerved what notion there is of χάρις (of which this word is compounded) ſeveral times in the Epiſtles, for piety, Chriſtian virtue in general, Thus c. 4. v. 29. where the corrupt communication is forbidden, and, in ſtead of it, the good commanded, for profitable inſtruction, or edification, this is deſigned ἵνα δῷ χάριν τοῖς ἀκούσι, that it may give grace, i.e. afford ſpiritual advantage, in increaſe of piety in the hearers. So Col. 4. 6. Let your ſpeech be alwaies ἐν χάριτι, with grace, i.e. gracious, pious, ſeaſoned with ſalt, contrary to the putrid, corrupt, mentioned to the Epheſians. So Col. 3. 16. ἐν χάριτι ᾄδοντες, with grace ſinging, i.e. after the manner of pious, gracious perſons, in a Chriſtian manner, and ſo 'tis alſo Eph. 5. 19. in the reading of the King's MS. And agreeably to this notion of χάρις, we have γυνὴ εὐχάρις, a gracious pious woman, Prov. 11. 16. And ſo perhaps εὐχαριστία may ſignifie in this place, gracious, pious, religious diſcourſe in general, being ſet oppoſite to the filthy obſcene diſcourſe preceding, and not to be reſtrained to one ſpecies of it, recounting the mercies of God.

Χάριν

The word πῶς] generally in the New Teſtament is not to be rendred [that] but [how] eſpecially when it follows βλέπετε, ſo Lu. 8. 18. βλέπετε πῶς ἀκούετε, take heed how you hear, and 1 Cor. 3. 10. βλεπέτω πῶς ἐποικοδομεῖ, Let him take heed how he ſuperſtruct. And ſo 'tis here to modify the accurate walking, and accordingly 'tis anſwered with ὡς σοφοί] that they behave themſelves warily between the two dangers of being corrupted on one ſide, and devoured on the other, in the firſt not ὡς ἄφρονες as eaſie, ſeducible people, in the ſecond ὡς σοφοὶ as wiſe, prudent men, that can manage their affairs to the beſt advantage, and not run hazards to no advantage. d. Πῶς

Ἐξαγοραζόμενος τὸν καιρὸν, though it have a ſenſe very unlike the Engliſh words [redeeming the time] yet cannot well be literally rendred otherwiſe, then either ſo, or buying out or gaining the time. Theodotion uſeth it in the active, ἐξαγοραζοντες καιρὸν, Dan. 2. 8. by that rendring the Chaldee זִדְנָא אַנְתּוּן זָבְנִין, and there the vulgar have, redimitis tempus, and we, gaining or buying the ſeaſon, referring particularly to the delaies that they ſought to make, thereby to ſave themſelves from danger, The full meaning of the phraſe in that place is, to uſe caution, and cunning, and dexterity, whether by delaies, or any other means, for the ſaving of themſelves from that danger, that was threatned them, v. 5. And it ſeems to be a proverbial ſpeech, which the uſe had made to ſignifie more, then the very literal of the words imported; and you may find it uſed in authors in the ſame, or like words, One for all, in Nazianzen's στηλίτευτ. α'. p. 14. of Julian, ὁ μὴ ἐξωνούμενος τὸν καιρὸν, ἢ κρύπτων ἐν ὑπονοίαις πολλαῖς τὸ κακοήθες, where buying out of time, is a proverbial expreſſion for carrying himſelf cunningly, dextrouſly concealing (what he had not a mind to diſcover) his ill diſpoſition under a diſguiſe of gentleneſſe. And proportionably 'tis ſo here, to uſe all prudent, artificial deviſes to preſerve them from the evil times then preſent, times of high corruption, and ſo of danger to their ſouls, wherein the carnal heathen ſenſualities (to which they had ſuch temptation, and which were uſed in their myſteries and devotions) were very frequent among them, and againſt which the warning is very particular in the former part of the chapter, v. 6, 7. &c. and to which he returns again, as farre as concerns drunkenneſſe (the expreſſion of the heathens devotion in ſome of their worſhips, the Bacchanalia) ver. 8. And that 'tis this wiſdome and dexterity which is here primarily meant, in reſpect of thoſe ſpiritual dangers, the ſnares that were neer their ſouls, may be conjectured by the verſe immediately following, where διὰ τοῦτο for this cauſe, for this evilneſſe of the daies, they are adviſed not to be ἄφρονες fools (as v. 16. μὴ ὡς ἄφρονες, ἀλλὰ not as fools, and μηκέτι νήπιοι, no longer children or fools, c. 4. 14.) but underſtanding (Συνίετε, noting that prudence, Σύνεσις, that we ſpeak of) what the will of the Lord is, i.e. how contrary Chriſtianity is to thoſe heathen courſes, which now by the cheats of the Gnoſticks are put off, and commended to them, v. 6. as things that are abſolutely indifferent. Beſides this it may be applied alſo to that other prudence for avoiding of perſecutions, as thoſe are expreſſed by evil daies, Gen 47. 9. & Pſal. 49. 5. not to throw our ſelves upon dangers unſeaſonably. e. Ἐξαγοραζόμενος τὸν καιρὸν unſeaſonably, where there is no probable advantage in our proſpect, but to ſpeak and exhort when 'tis likely to proſper, and at other times to refrain; and this may properly be ſtyled gaining the time, watching opportunities, and when interpoſing would prove gainleſſe, then to hold the peace, and expect ſome fitter ſeaſon, ſee Rom. 12. 11.

f. Ἀσωτία The word ἀσωτία ſignifies generally being given up to all wickedneſſe, particularly luxury, meaning by that not onely exceſſe of drinking, or eating, or waſting an eſtate, but eſpecially giving himſelf up to riotous enormous luſts; thus Heſychius renders ἀσώτως by ἀκρατῶς, ἀκαθάρτως, filthineſſe, inſatiableneſſe, and ſo when of the prodigal Lu. 15. it is ſaid that the means of ſpending his patrimony, Ἀσώτως was his living ἀσώτως ver. 13. that is interpreted v. 30. by καταφαγὼν τὸν βίον μετὰ πορνῶν devouring his livelihood with harlots. And then we may diſcern the meaning of this phraſe [ἐν ᾧ ἐστὶν ἀσωτία] ſpeaking of drunkenneſs and filling themſelves with wine, in which, ſaith he, there is (not exceſſe, as that ſignifies immoderate drinking, for that was contained before in drunkenneſs, or being filled with wine, and to ſay that in drunkenneſs or in wine were immoderate drinking, would not be ſo commodious, but) unclean inordinate behaviour, all kind of venery and enormous luſts, and ſo it is true not onely in common obſervation that inflaming themſelves with wine betraies men to all uncleanneſs, but particularly in the heathen Bacchanals (to which he ſeems to referre, by oppoſing to them the being filled with the Spirit, and expreſſing that in Pſalms &c. the Chriſtian way of rejoicing, contrary to their prophecying Wiſd. 14. 28. or their mad howlings in their Orgia) where after their drinking, uncleanneſs was wont to ſucceed, as in the Iſraelites Idol-feaſts, after their ſitting down to eat and drink, 'tis added, they roſe up παίζειν, to ſport, or mock, which that it belongs to this of uncleanneſs, ſee note on 1 Cor. 10. c. And ſo this is a ſeaſonable exhortation to the Chriſtians at Epheſus, living among the heathens, and in danger to be ſeduced by the Gnoſticks to the Idol-feaſts, that in ſtead of the Bacchanals, and unclean conſequents of them, which were their way of worſhip to their idols, or devils, they ſhould entertain themſelves after the Chriſtian manner of ſinging Pſalms, bleſſing and praiſing of God, which is the Chriſtian jollity, to be preferred before thoſe heathen beſtial practiſes. παίζειν

The difference of theſe three [ψαλμοὶ, ὕμνοι, ᾠδαὶ, Pſalmes, hymnes, ſongs,] muſt be fetch'd from the Jewes, who have three ſorts of Canticles, 1. סִפּוּר from זמר amputavit, a conciſe verſe, which is here called ψαλμὸς a Pſalm; 2dly, תְּהִלָּה Praiſe, celebration, depredicating of any thing, which is here ὕμνος hymne; 3dly, שִׁיר Canticum or cantio, whence is שִׁיר הַשִּׁירִים Canticum canticorum, the ſong of ſongs, and to this anſwers here the ᾠδαὶ, and the word πνευματικαῖς added to it, ſpiritual or Chriſtian, is both in oppoſition to the ἐν οἴνῳ βάκχῃ, and the like drunken, ſenſual ſongs, and ovations, in their Bacchanalia, and perhaps in reſpect of the χάρισμα then among them, as of praying, ſo of ſinging alſo, by that extraordinary gift of the Spirit, 1 Cor. 14. 26. ſee note on Jude 1. g. Ψαλμὸς Τρόπος ᾠδῆς Πνευματικαῖς ᾠδαῖς

It is the manner of the ſacred writers to expreſſe a complexe body, by the enumeration of the ſeveral parts of it, as the heaven and the earth for the world, evening and morning, for the natural day, and many the like, ſee note on Col. 1. c. & 2 Pet. 3. b. and ſo here his fleſh, and his bones, ſignifies no more then he, and ſo the whole importance of the verſe is, that we are members of Chriſt, and nothing elſe. CHAP. VI.

* juſt δίκαιον 1. CHildren obey your parents in the Lord: for this is * right.] 1. And ſo likewiſe all children and ſubjects muſt be obedient to their parents and Princes, now under the Goſpel: for this is commanded by the law in the Old Teſtament, which Chriſt came not to evacuate, but to confirm.

2. Honour thy father and mother (which is the firſt commandement with promiſe,)] 2. For ſo are the words of the fifth Commandement of the Decalogue, Honour thy father and mother, not onely thy natural, but civil Parents, and all other placed over thee by God, or the lawes under which God hath placed thee. And this is the firſt commandement of the ſecond table, and that with a promiſe annex't to it, † thou ſhalt have a long time on the land, ἵνα μακροχρόνιος γένῃ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς 3. That it may be well with thee, and † thou mayſt live long on the earth.] 3. viz. of proſperity and long life in the land of Canaan, as it concern'd the Jewes, and to all others of proſperous peaceable living upon earth, (toward which obedience to ſuperiors is ordinarily an eminent means of ſecurity, ſee Mat. 5. 5.) and of eternall bliſſe in heaven by the promiſe of Chriſt.

* diſcipline and nurture, παιδείᾳ καὶ νουθεσίᾳ 4. And ye fathers provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the * nurture and admonition of the Lord.] 4. And parents likewiſe are to behave themſelves lovingly and gently toward their children, and not to tempt them, by tyrannical uſage of their power, to diſobedience, but uſe all care to bring them up in the knowledge of their duty to Chriſt.

5. Servants, be obedient to them that are your maſters according to the fleſh, with fear and trembling, in ſingleneſſe of your heart, as unto Chriſt:] 5. And doe not think that Chriſtianity hath ſet all ſervants at liberty, or given them any privilege of diſobeying thoſe, whoſe ſervants they are according to the courſe of this world, be they heathens &c. But let all ſuch know themſelves to be obliged to perform obedience unto their maſters, with all diligence and ſincerity (ſee note on Phil. 2. c.) as unto Chriſt, who ſees their hearts, and laies this command on them.

† or, from the ſoule with good will doing them ſervice, for the King's MS. joins it thus, ὡς δούλοις Χριστοῦ ποιοῦντες τὸ θέλημα τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἐκ ψυχῆς μετ' εὐνοίας δουλεύοντες. 6. Not with eye-ſervice as men-pleaſers, but as the ſervants of Chriſt, doing the will of God † from the heart;] 6. And this not onely to avoid the diſpleaſures of their maſters, (which will extend no farther then to thoſe things which they can ſee whether they be done, or omitted, and conſequently puniſh in them) but upon ſenſe of obligation to the law of Chriſt, who can ſee the ſecrets of the hearts, and ſo muſt be ſerved accordingly;

viz: with uprightneſſe and cheerfulneſſe, a voluntary obedience, which may approve it ſelf to Chriſt, and not a forced one, which ariſes from fear of man, and ſo extends no farther then the maſter can ſee and puniſh:

7. With good will doing ſervice, as to the Lord, and not to men:]

8. Knowing that as all other performances of duty, ſo his faithfull ſervice to his maſter ſhall be rewarded in him by God.

8. Knowing that whatſoever good thing any man doth, the ſame ſhall be received of the Lord, whether he be bond or free.]

9. And the maſters muſt uſe their ſervants, as fathers were appointed to uſe their children v. 4. not wrathfully and imperiouſly, but calmly and gently, either as knowing that they themſelves have a maſter to obey, who commands them to doe thus, or knowing that you and they are but fellow-ſervants in reſpect of Chriſt, and indeed that if maſters doe not their duty, they ſhall be as puniſhable before God, as any others of the moſt inferiour degree, God favouring or ſparing none upon ſo ſlight conſiderations as theſe, of their being greater men in this world then others.

9. And ye maſters doe the ſame things to them, forbearing threatning: knowing that * your maſter alſo is in heaven, neither is there reſpect of perſons with him.]

* or, the Lord both of them and you, for the King's MS. reads ὑμῶν ἀμφοτέρων ὁ κύριος

10. Finally, brethren, conſider the allſufficience and omnipotence of his might, who is able to ſuſtain you againſt all oppoſition of men or devils, and confirm your ſelves in the faith, and chear up your ſelves with that conſideration.

10. Finally, my brethren, be ſtrong in the Lord, and in the power of his might.]

11. And make uſe of all the defenſatives and weapons that Chriſt hath afforded you, to the repelling of all the temptations and ſtratagems of the devil, that ye may be able to hold out againſt all his aſſaults, both of force and cunning.

11. Put on the † whole armour of God, that ye may be able to ſtand againſt the * wiles of the devil:]

† complete armour, πανοπλίαν
* contrivances, μεθοδείας

12. For the combat for which we are to be fortified, is not againſt any ordinary humane enemies, but againſt the ſeveral ranks of devils, the chieftains and gods of this preſent idolatrous heathen world, and againſt thoſe evil ſpirits that are in the aire, all groſſer carnal, and all more ſpiritual dangerous ſins, of pride, hereſie, and malice &c.

12. For we wreſtle not againſt fleſh and blood, but againſt principalities, againſt powers, againſt † the rulers of the darkneſſe of this world, againſt * ſpiritual wickedneſſe † in a high places.]

† the worldly rulers of this age, κοσμοκράτορας τοῦ σκότους τούτου
* ſpiritual parts, or ſpirits, for the Syriack appears to have read πνεύματα † in heavenly places

13. The variety and greatneſſe of the danger being thus conſidered, makes it reaſonable for you to arm your ſelves in every part, with all that the Chriſtian faith hath provided you with, that in time of temptation ye may be able to hold out againſt the contrary allurements of thoſe hereticks, and in concluſion to be ſo farre victorious, as not to have been entnared on any ſide.

13. Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withſtand in the evil day, and having done all to ſtand.]

14, 15. Let your military preparations againſt theſe aſſaults be theſe, 1. Truth, the doctrine of the Goſpel in oppoſition to heathen errors, and heretical inſinuations, and let that be your military girdle (ſee note on Lu. 12. b.) that keeps on all the other armour, and fits you to make uſe of it, and withall will reſtrain you from all libertiniſme and licentiouſneſs, as a girdle reſtrains and keeps in the body. 2dly, Righteouſneſſe, ſincere faithfull obedidience to Chriſt, to guard the whole man from aſſaults of ſin, as the breaſtplate guards him, Iſa. 59. 17. 3dly, The practiſe of Chriſtian charity and peaceableneſſe, to ſupply the place of ſhooes, that ye may goe on expeditely in the Chriſtian courſe, and not fall or miſcarry by the way, through the traps that hereticks and ſchiſmaticks lay to wound, and gall you, and hinder your progreſſe.

14. Stand therefore, having your loynes girt with truth, and having on the breſt-plate of righteouſneſſe,

15. And your feet b ſhod * with the preparation of the Goſpel of peace;]

b. a.

* in the readineſſe

16. 4dly, Faith, or the beleiving both the promiſes of Chriſt to all reformed penitents, and of the threats to all impenitent ſenſual perſons, which will keep temptations from entring, and be able to allay the pleaſures of thoſe ſenſual baits propoſed to you, either by Satan or any other tempter, which, like poyſoned darts (which are wont to inflame the parts that are wounded with them, and therefore are called fiery darts, as the ſerpents with poyſonous ſtings, are called fiery ſerpents) will wound you to death, if the conſideration of your duty, the promiſes and terrors of Chriſt, received by your faith, doe not help to quench them:

16. † Above all taking the ſhield of faith, wherewith ye ſhall be able to quench all the fiery darts of * the wicked.]

† Unto all ἐπὶ πᾶσιν
* the wicked one, τοῦ πονηροῦ.

17. 5dly, The hope of ſalvation, which may ſerve as an helmet, Iſa. 59. 17. to bear off any blow (at leaſt ſecure you from the hurt of it) that can light upon you. a. Παρὰσις

What ὑπαρξις] signifies here, will be soon discerned, 1. by remembring that the several regions of the aire, and all above the globe of the earth, is in the Hebrew styled שמים, and in the Greek of these books, οὐρανοὶ heavens, and so ὑπαρξις will signifie those places, the several regions of the aire; 2dly, that the Syriack reading for [πνευματικὰ spiritual parts] πνευματα spirits, and the phrase, spirits of wickednesse, readily signifying wicked spirits, and those oft used to denote devils, the [spirits of wickednesse in heavenly places] will be no more then the powers of the air under their ἄρχων or prince, c. 2. 2. i. e. devils under Beelzebub the prince of the devils. These are here distinguisht from the κοσμοκράτορας τοῦ σκότους τούτου, the worldly rulers of the darknesse of this age, Noting several sorts of devils, either in respect of their mansions, ἀερίων καὶ ἐπιγείων πνευμάτων, saith Ignatius ad Ephes: aërial or earthy spirits; or else of the inclinations which they suggest. The earthy devils suggesting grosser carnal appetites, filthinesse of the flesh &c. the aërial, pride, vain-glory, malice, &c. the filthinesse of the spirit: And the Gnostick heretick by power of sorcery seducing men to both sorts of these filthinesses, all fleshy abominable lusts, and all malice and rancour against the orthodox Christians. It is here truly said, that they were to contend with both sorts of evil spirits, terrestrial and aërial, the terrestrial that ruled among the heathen dark parts of the age, and the aërial wicked spirits.

b. Ὑποδησάμενοι

The use of shooes in the celebration of the Passeover hath been formerly observed; For so the Israelites were commanded at their eating of it, that they might be ready for their journey, to have each of them their shooes on their feet, so when the Apostles, Mar. 6. 8. were commanded to be shod with sandals, the meaning is, that they should be ready to take their journey. So in * Plautus, calceati dentes, shod teeth, i. e. ready to devour the feast. So the Ægyptian virgins, were not permitted to wear shooes, i. e. to be ready to goe abroad. All this belongs to the explication of this phrase, as it is joyned with ἐν ἑτοιμασίᾳ in readinesse, denoting the preparation or readinesse for the journey, the whole Christian course, for which the doctrine of peace and charity doth provide and furnish them. But then this is not all, for the shooes are here mention'd among the armour, and so they clearly were, and were ordinarily made of brass. A mention we have of them in the story of Goliah, his greaves of brass, and so among the Grecians they were so ordinary, that they are known in Homer by that title of χαλκοκνήμιδες Ἀχαιοὶ, the brazen-shooed Grecians, οἷς πάντεσσι ἄρ᾽ ἦν χάλκειαι κνῆμαι saith Phavorinus, who had greaves of brass or iron. The use of these was to defend their feet against the gall-traps which were wont to be thrown in the fields, or waies, to stop their marches, sharp stakes sticking up to wound, or gall their feet, and make them that had fallen upon them, unable to goe afterward. This use then of the shooes for marching is here referr'd to, and the Gospel of peace, the obligation to peace and charity, (that lies upon Christians by the Gospel, and which is here set before faith, and hope of salvation) is the furniture or preparation for the feet, supplies the place of those greaves, fits us for our Christian course, which, beyond all things, consists in preserving of peace with all, and especially now in opposition to those *heretick*s, that broke the unity of the Church, and breath'd out nothing but malice and persecution against all the orthodox Christians, and laboured all they could to draw others to partake with them.

THE EPISTLE OF PAVL THE APOSTLE TO THE PHILIPPIANS.

THE conversion of the Macedonians, and among them, first of the Philippians, to the faith by the labours of Paul and Timothy is set down *Act.*16.12. & *Act.*20.3. where having had very good success among them, and after his departure having received many testimonies of their kindness, and constancy, and now being prisoner at Rome, Epaphroditus their Bishop being sent from them to him with a supply of mony, about the year of Christ 59. he returns them this Epistle by Epaphroditus, full of kind acknowledgments, and chearfulnesse, and Timothy who had been with S. Paul at Philippi, being now at this time at Rome with him, he is joyned with Paul in the front of the Epistle. One thing is farther observable in this Epistle, that upon the newes of S. Paul's imprisonment at Rome, (certainly his first imprisonment there, see c.1.25,26. & c.2.23,24. and not that immediatly præceding his martyrdome) the Gnosticks, the known enemies of the cross of Christ, c.3.18. (which are not for confessing a crucified Saviour, or a persecuted faith) were very ready to infuse their discouragements, perswading to Judaize, though they were not Jewes themselves c.3.2. as among the Galatians they had done. And by way of necessary antidote, against these seducers he opposeth the benefit, which Christianity had received by his sufferings, c.1.12. and the no losse, but advantage which should come to him by it, v.19. and then conjures them to unity and perseverance c.2. warns them against the Gnosticks c.3. and again encourages them to constancy, c.4.

CHAP. I.

1. PAVL and Timotheus the servants of Jesus Christ, to all the saints in Christ Jesus which are at [a] Philippi, with the [b] Bishops and [c] Deacons,]

2. Grace be unto you and peace from God our father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.]

1. I Paul the Apostle that preached the Gospel to the several cities of Macedonia, but first to Philippi, Act. 16. 12. and Timothy that accompanied me in that work, Act. 16. 1. to all the Christians that are in Macedonia, of which Philippi is a Metropolis, and therein especially to the several Bishops of the several cities, and the Deacons that attend upon and assist them,

2. Send greeting in the Lord.

3. I thank my God upon every remembrance of you,]

3. I cannot but render thanks to God (the author of all the good which is wrought in any) as often as I think of you,

4. Alwaies in every prayer of mine for you all making request with joy,]

4. And accordingly whensoever I pray for you, I cannot doe it without rejoicing.

5. For your * fellowship in the Gospel from the first day untill now :]

* communication toward

5. To consider your great liberality toward the propagating the Gospel (see note on Act. 2. d.) which hath been observable in you since your first receiving the faith untill this present time.

6. Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work † in you, will * perform it untill the day of Jesus Christ,]

† among you
* perfect

6. And I make no doubt but that God, who hath wrought this, and all other Christian graces in you thus farre, will proceed to consummate it, (upon your persevering to make use of his grace) and to reward it at the great day of doom.

7. Even as it is meet for me to † think this of you all, because I have you in my heart, * in as much as both in my bonds, and in the defence and confirmation of the Gospel, ye all are partakers of my [d] grace.]

† to have this care for
* as those that — are all my copartners of grace,

7. This affection to you it is but justice for me to have, as considering that you both in sufferings, and in the defence (see v. 7.) and maintenance of the Gospel have joyned and participated with me, done and suffered the same things that I have done.

8. For God is my record how greatly I long after you all, in the bowels of Jesus Christ :]

8. And before God I solemnly protest to have it in the highest and most passionate degree of Christian love imaginable :

9. And this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in † knowledge, and in all judgment :]

† acknowledgment & all sense,
charity

9. And I daily pray that your Christian charity (which already expreſſes it ſelf in liberality toward the Goſpel, and ſuffering for it, v. 5, 7.) may yet farther increaſe more and more, ſo that ye may acknowledge and diſcern whatever ye ought to doe, have a quick ſenſe of your duty in every particular:

10. That ye may approve things that are excellent, that ye may be * ſincere and without offence till the day of Chriſt,] 10. That ye may continue conſtant unto the truth, examine firſt, and then approve, and like, and practiſe all Chriſtian virtues in the higheſt degrees (ſee note on Rom. 2. f.) and not be led into evil under the ſhew of good, but remain unblemiſhed and ſpotleſſe unto the day of judgment, and ſo being Chriſtianity into a reputation among men,

11. Being filled with the fruits of righteouſneſſe, which are by Jeſus Chriſt unto the glory and praiſe of God.] 11. Bringing forth all manner of Chriſtian fruits, thoſe works of piety and charity, which are commanded by Chriſt above what was by the law of nature or Moſes, required, which may tend to the honour and praiſe of God.

12. But I would ye ſhould underſtand, brethren, that the things † which happened unto me, have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the Goſpel:] 12. As for my ſelf, and the things that concern me, my ſufferings and impriſonment at Rome, you may pleaſe to take notice, that they have tended to the advancement rather then hindrance of the Goſpel.

13. So that my bonds in Chriſt are manifeſt in all the * * palace, and † in all other places.] 13. For by my ſufferings it is that the Goſpel hath come to be taken notice of, and ſo to be propagated both to all the officers of the Emperour in the Courts, (the Romans that act under him) and alſo to all others. e.

14. And many of the brethren in the Lord waxing confident by my bonds, are much more bold to ſpeak the word without fear.] 14. And withall many that have received Chriſtianity, through the confidence and courage that the example of my ſufferings and patience hath infuſed into them, have with much more zeal and conſtancy then formerly, made confeſſion of the faith.

15. Some indeed preach Chriſt even of envy and ſtrife, and ſome alſo of good will.] 15. Some indeed publiſh and make known the Chriſtian doctrine out of a malitious intent, either to defame it, and me by that means, or elſe to bring perſecutions on me v. 16. who am known to be the Preacher of it, and ſome doe it out of good liking of what I have done in preaching it.

16. The one preach Chriſt of contention, not ſincerely, ſuppoſing to * adde affliction to my bonds:] 16. The former ſort of theſe doe it by way of oppoſition, not that they would have any man beleive that Goſpel of Chriſt, which they thus publiſh, but that they may bring farther ſufferings on me, who being known to be the ſource of that doctrine, all ſpreading of it will be thought to derive from me, and conſequently encreaſe ſeverity towards me:

17. But the other of love, knowing that I am ſet for the defence of the Goſpel.] 17. But others out of a ſincere beleif of the doctrine, and kindneſſe toward me, as knowing that what is befall'n me, is in defence of the Goſpel, or for my defending it, and conſequently but duty in me who have not intruded my ſelf, but am by Chriſt from heaven call'd and ſent with commiſſion for diſcharge of this office.

† by occaſion, or by

18. What then? notwithſtanding every way, whether † in [r] pretenſe, or in truth, Chriſt is preached, and I therein doe rejoice, yea and will rejoice.] 18. And ſo by one means or other, ſome to vex me, others out of reſpect to the words preached by me, doe farther propagate it, and though this is by the former ſort done maliciouſly, and the good that comes from it be only accidental, not intended, but only occaſioned by them, yet 'tis matter of rejoicing to me that the Goſpel of Chriſt is preached, and publiſhed by this means. f.

19. For I know that this ſhall turn * to my ſalvation through your prayer, and the ſupply of the Spirit of Jeſus Chriſt,] 19. For I am confident by the help of your prayers, and by the aſſiſtance of the Spirit of Chriſt, attainable thereby, that what hath thus befallen me, ſhall be a means of advancing the ſalvation of many,

20. According to my earneſt expectation and my hope, that in nothing I ſhall be aſhamed, but that with all boldneſſe, as alwaies, ſo now alſo, Chriſt ſhall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life or by death.] 20. As I verily perſwade my ſelf, and hope that God will ſo aſſiſt me, that I ſhall expreſſe no puſillanimity in any thing, but continue as conſtant as ever, and as bold (Joh. 7. 2.) to confeſſe Chriſt and preach the Goſpel, and ſo, whether by life or death, advance the kingdome of Chriſt, by preaching it, if I live, by ſigning the truth with my blood, if I die.

21. For to me † to live is Chriſt, and to die is gain.] 21. For as for my ſelf, thus it ſtands with me, if I live, my life ſhall be ſpent in Chriſt's ſervice; and if I die, my death tends to mine own unſpeakable advantage and joy, and to the ſervice of Chriſt alſo, whoſe glory may be advanced by my dying his martyr (ſee ver. 20.)

* But if I be living in the fleſh, αλλ' ει το ζην εν σαρκι † to mee worth my labour, and

22. * But if I live in the fleſh, this is ‡ † the fruit of my labour; yet what I ſhall chooſe, I wot not.] 22. On the other ſide my living in the fleſh is matter of ſome advantage alſo, life is in it ſelf, and for the advantages of ſerving God, and encreaſing our crown, a deſireable thing, and ſo the ſcales being in a manner even, I know not what to chooſe. g.

* for this is much rather to be preferred, or better, πολλω μαλλον κρεισσον

23. For I am in a ſtraic betwixt two, having a deſire to [h] depart, and to be with Chriſt, * which is farre better.] 23. But I am in a great difficulty, equally inclined on both ſides, on one ſide having before me the benefit of death, which is the viſion and ſociety of Chriſt, and that very much more deſirable both in reſpect of the glory that will redound to Chriſt by my martyrdome, and of the benefit, that will redound to me; h.

‡ But, δε

24. † Nevertheleſſe to abide in the fleſh is more needfull for you.] 24. And on the other ſide conſidering the advantage, which may accrue to you, which is farre greater by my life, and that which you can very ill ſpare.

i. 25. And on this latter conſideration of the want you have of me, and the benefit ye may reap from my life, I am ſure that this is the thing I deſire and hope, that I ſhall be ſome time permitted to live as a means of growth and proficiency to you, and of giving you comfort in your Chriſtianity,

25. And i * having this confidence, I know that I ſhall abide and continue with you all, for your furtherance and joy of faith,] * this, I know, I hope, that

26. That you may rejoice the more through the goodneſſe of Chriſt, by reaſon of me, i.e. of my coming yet again to be preſent among you.

26. That your rejoicing may be more abundant in Jeſus Chriſt † for me, by my coming to you again.] † through me in ipsa

27. Onely let your courſe of life be ſuch as becomes the citizens of this divine city, the members of the Church of Chriſt, whoſe faith ye have received, that whether preſent or abſent, I may hear ſuch things of you, that I may take comfort in, viz: that you have the ſame affections and common deſignes, all joyntly contending, the beſt you can, to propagate the faith of Chriſt, to gain men to embrace the Goſpel.

27. Onely * let your converſation be as it becometh the Goſpel of Chriſt: that whether I come and ſee you, or elſe be abſent, I may hear of your affairs, that ye ſtand faſt in one ſpirit, with one mind, ſtriving together for the faith of the Goſpel:] * behave your ſelves worthy of ἀξίως πολιτεύεσθε

28. And whatſoever oppoſition ye meet with, let it not diſcourage or affright you, but look on it only as a ſigne or teſtimony that they are wretched obdurate people, but that you are the true penitent beleivers, reſcued out of the ſnares of ſin, and that this teſtimony is given by God himſelf of you,

28. And in nothing terrified by your adverſaries, which is to them an evident token of perdition, but to you of ſalvation, and that of God.]

29. Who hath vouchſafed you this favour, to ſuffer for, as well as to beleive in Chriſt, which is a proof of your ſincerity and conſtancy, and an inſtance of God's goodneſſe and favour to you:

29. For unto you it is given in the behalf of Chriſt, not onely to beleive on him, but alſo to ſuffer for his ſake:]

30. Suffering in the ſame manner as ye ſee, and hear of me that I ſuffer.

30. Having the ſame conflict, which ye ſaw in me, and now hear to be in me.]

Notes on Chap. 1.

a. Φιλιππήσιοι

The Philippians here named muſt (by analogie with the Corinthians, and the reſt to whom the other Epiſtles are addreſt) be interpreted to be of a larger extent, then the inhabitants of that one city, and either to contain all the Chriſtians throughout all Macedonia, or at leaſt all that were under that Metropolis. For that Philippi was ſuch, is the diſtinct affirmation of S. Luke, Act. 16. 12. ἐκεῖθεν εἰς Φιλίππους, ἥτις ἐστὶ πρώτη τῆς μερίδος Μακεδονίας πόλις, Philippi is the prime, or firſt city of the Province of Macedonia, i.e. either of all Macedonia, as one wider Province, or at leaſt of one Province of it. And it is there added that it was then a colony, i.e. inhabited by Romans (from whence it is that v. 21. they ſpeak of themſelves as Romans) and ſuch colony-cities that were ſo inhabited by Romans, were generally (though not onely they) pitched on by the Roman Prators or Preſidents to be the cities, whither the neighbouring regions ſhould come for juſtice, the places of aſſiſes, &c. and ſo became the chief cities. And therefore when Philippi is by the Geographers (and out of them by the author of the argument of this Epiſtle) affirmed to be μικρὰ πόλις ὑπὸ Μητρόπολιν Θεσσαλονίκην πολίχνη, a little city under the Metropolis Theſſalonica, it muſt be remembred that that definition belongs to ſome other time, probably long before that of S. Paul's writing here, or, in the Acts, his preaching to them. For ſo 'tis certain that this city built, and thus named by Philip, King of Macedon, had formerly been called Κρηνῖδες, and then Δάτος (whence was the proverb, Δάτου ἀγαθῶν, becauſe of a golden mine, which Appian ſaith was near it) and was then a ſmall city, which hinders not but that now under the Roman Empire it might be improved and advanced, eſpecially being now a Colony of Romans; For that many cities became Metropoles, which formerly were not, there is no doubt, and is affirmed in the 12. Can: of the Councel of Chalcedon, πόλεις διὰ χαιμάτων βασιλικῶν τῷ τῆς μητροπόλεως ὀνόματι τιμηθεῖσαι, Cities are honoured with the names of Metropoles by the Emperors letters. So alſo Strabo, Geog: l. 17. p. 840. Αἱ ἐπαρχίαι μὲ διαφέρουσι ἄλλοτε μὲ ἄλλας, Provinces have been at ſeveral times variouſly divided, which concludes the Metropoles to be changed alſo, and l. 13. p. 629. giving an account of the confuſion of Provinces by him obſerved, he ſaith it was cauſed διὰ τὸ τοὺς Ῥωμαίους μὴ κατὰ φύλα διαλέγειν αὐτοὺς, ἀλλ' ἔστιν ὅτε τόπον διατάξαι διοικήσεις, ἐν αἷς τὰς ἀγορὰς ποιοῦνται καὶ τὰς δικαιοδοσίας, becauſe the Romans diſtributed them not according to the diviſions of tribes, but another way according to the keeping of courts and aſſiſes. And thus doth * Pliny ſet down for Metropoles of Aſia, Laodicea, Sardis, Smyrna and Epheſus, upon this onely account, that the courts were kept there, to which other cities reſorted. And as in civil, ſo in Eccleſiaſtical diviſions ſuch varietie is obſervable. Thoſe cities were chief and Metropoles, where the Goſpel was firſt planted, and thence communicated to the neighbouring regions. And ſuch was Philippi, as 'tis clear by the ſtory of S. Paul's preaching the Goſpel in Macedonia, Act. 16. 9, 10, &c. and 1 Theſſ. 2. 2. firſt at Philippi, then after at Theſſalonica. In which reſpect, though Theſſalonica were a Metropolis alſo, yet Philippi was not onely a Metropolis too, but the prime or chief Metropolis of Macedonia, as Epheſus of the Proconſular Aſia. Hence it is that the liberality of the brethren of Macedonia (in common) 2 Cor. 11. 9. is imputed to the Philippians peculiarly, Phil. 4. 16. by which it appears that all the Chriſtians of that region are contained under that title. And ſo though there be but one Epiſtle written by S. Paul to theſe Philippians, yet S. Polycarpe mentions Paul's Epiſtles (in the plural) to them, by which learned men underſtand thoſe other inſcribed to the Theſſalonians, that other city of Macedonia, which might might therefore belong to Philippi alſo, And to that the ſevere adjuration of the Apoſtle, 1 Theſſ. 5.27. ſeems to belong, where he adjures them by the living God, that that Epiſtle be read πᾶσι to all the holy brethren indefinitely, i. e. I conceive, to all the Chriſtians in each Church of Macedonia. And ſo it is evident that the Epiſtle inſcribed to the Corinthians belonged to all the Churches of Achaia, 2 Cor. 1. 1. and ſo that inſcribed to the Coloſſians was alſo to be read Col. 4. 6. by the Church of Laodicea, the chief Metropolis of Phrygia, to which Coloſſe is adjoyn'd as a ſecundary, Col. 2. 2. By all this appears how in Philippi there may be more Biſhops then one, indeed as many as were in all Macedonia, at leaſt as in the cities under that Metropolis.

b Ἐπίσκοποι What the word Ἐπίσκοποι and Ἐπισκοπὴ notes in the Old and New Teſtament, hath been ſaid already, note on Act. 1. h. viz: prefecture or ruling power in the Church. But whether this belonged to ſingular perſons, one in each city and region adjoyning, or to a number of ſuch, ruling together as collegues, hath been of late controverted by ſome, and this place, which mentions, in Philippi, Biſhops in the plural, hath been a principal teſtimony to conclude that in one Church there were many Biſhops. This, if it were granted, and conſequently, that Biſhops here denote no other then thoſe whom we now call Presbyters, would be of no force to inferre this concluſion, that Churches in the Apoſtles times were ruled not by ſingle Biſhops, but many Presbyters, becauſe 1. it were poſſible that the Apoſtle himſelf might at this time retain that ſupreme Epiſcopal power in his own hands, and though abſent in body, yet by letters (being preſent in ſpirit) exerciſe that power over them; Or 2^dly, if the Apoſtle had conſtituted a Biſhop over them, yet 'tis poſſible that at the writing this Epiſtle, the Chair might be vacant, or that the Biſhop might be abſent. And indeed Epaphroditus, who is by Theodoret and others affirmed to be Biſhop of Philippi, appears c. 4. 18. to have been with Paul at this time, when he wrote the Epiſtle, and to have carried the Epiſtle to them, which one thing might make it inconvenient to inſcribe the Epiſtle to him. And yet in the body of the Epiſtle c. 4. 3. there is an Apoſtrophe which in all probability belongs to him, under the name of his yoke-fellow, that is to look to the relief of the widows, ſuppoſing him preſent at the opening of the letter. But there is no need of ſuch anſwers as theſe to avoid the force of this argument; That which hath been ſaid note a. will give a clear account of it, that Philippi being a Metropolis, under which were many other Churches, which had each of them a Biſhop, All thoſe Biſhops are here meant by ἐπίσκοποις in the plural, as this Epiſtle was written to all thoſe cities or Churches, and not only to that of Philippi. Of this it is clear in Eccleſiaſtical writings, that there was a Biſhop conſtituted by the Apoſtles, For ſo * Tertullian diſtinctly mentions it for one of thoſe Churches, which derived the pedegree of Biſhops from the Apoſtles as founders: And Ignatius, S. Paul's ſucceſſor at Antioch, in his Epiſtle to them, names Vitalis as their Biſhop, and the Latine old copie of Polycarpe's Epiſtle to them mentions Vitus, which is ſurely the ſame. And though that Epiſtle mentions πρεσβυτέρους καὶ διακόνους Elders and Deacons onely, yet conſidering the notion of πρεσβυτέρου Πρεσβύτερος τέρους, ſet down, note on Act. 11. b. there will be little doubt but that Elders there and Biſhops here are all one, viz: all the Biſhops of the cities under that Metropolis, which may well be contained under the title there prefixed to it, Ἐκκλησίᾳ τοῦ Θεοῦ τῇ οὔσῃ Φιλίπποις, to the Church of God adjoyning or belonging to Philippi. And indeed as the word Πρεσβύτεροι Elders is a note of prefecture, and ſo may fitly belong to the Biſhop in each city (ſee note on Act. 11. b.) in all places of the New Teſtament, ſo there is little reaſon to doubt of the word Ἐπίσκοποι Biſhops; The firſt mention of it is Act. 20. 28. where thoſe that had been called Elders of the Church, v. 17. are ἐπίσκοπους τοῦ ποιμαίνειν, Biſhops of the flock, ſet over it by the Holy Ghoſt, where, if the flock were the Chriſtians of any one city, there might be ſome pretenſe that the Elders or Biſhops in the plural, might be thoſe, which are now called Presbyters, But it is apparent, that the flock is the Chriſtians of all Aſia, of which it is ſaid c. 19. 10. that all that dwelt in Aſia heard the word of the Lord, and almoſt all Aſia were converted, ſaith Demetrius v. 26. which Paul calls the opening of a great dore to him in thoſe parts, 1 Cor. 16. 9. And conſequently the Elders or Biſhops there, are the Biſhops of all Aſia, at leaſt thoſe that belonged to Epheſus as their * Metropolis. To which purpoſe is that of S. Irenaus l. 3. c. 14. In Mileto convocatis Epiſcopis & Presbyteris ab Epheſo & proximis civitatibus, the Biſhops and Elders being aſſembled at Miletus, from Epheſus & the next of the cities. And therefore S. Paul in his oration to them tells them, they had known how he had been with them all the time from the firſt day that he came into Aſia, c. 20. 18. noting thoſe, to whom his ſpeech was addreſt, to be the Biſhops of Aſia, and not of that city only. The next mention of Biſhops (beſide that in this place) is that 1 Tim. 3. 2. He that deſires the office of a Biſhop &c. A Biſhop therefore muſt be blameleſſe, &c. and in the ſame words Tit. 1. 7. In both which places, as it is agreeable to the affirmations of the Antients (ſee note on Act. 11. b.) that there ſhould be conſtituted Biſhops only and Deacons in the ſeverall Churches, (there being no middle order yet in uſe) ſo that Ἐπίσκοποι diſtinctly notes thoſe Biſhops, and not thoſe whom we now call Presbyters, is the joynt affirmation of Chryſoſtome, and Theophylact, and OEcumenius. † Ἐπισκόπων ἤδει † Chryſ. in πολλῶν, καὶ καθ' ἑκάστην πόλιν προχειροτονίαν, there was need of more Biſhops, and of thoſe which preſide in every city. And again, * Κατὰ πόλιν * Theoph. in προεστῶσας] Ἐπισκόπους ἅπερ ἐνταῦθα φησι, ὡς καὶ ἐν Tit. 1. 5. τῇ πρὸς Τιμόθεον, καὶ πόλεις δέ φησι, καὶ γὰρ ἐβούλετο πᾶσιν ἐπιτρέψαι ἑνί, ἀλλ' ἑκάστῃ πόλει ἴδιον ἔχειν ποιμένα, Elders in every city] he there means Biſhops, as alſo in the Epiſtle to Timothy, And when he ſaith in every city, it is becauſe he would not have the whole Iſland intruſted to one, but that every city ſhould have their own Paſtor. And ſo ſaith † Euſebius of Titus, that there being an hundred cities in Crete, converted to the faith by S. Paul, Titus had the biſhoprick of them all, i. e. the Metropolitical power, that he might ordain Biſhops under him, ſaith * Theodoret, that he might exerciſe exercise judicature and ordination, saith Chrysostome and Theophylact. There are no more mentions of this word Ἐπίσκοπος in the New Testament, and in all these it is fairly appliable to the Bishops or single Prefects or Governours of Churches; And so though it be generally resolved that the word Bishop and Elder are equivalent, in the Scripture, yet is not this to be understood so, that either, and both of them signifies indifferently those whom we now call Presbyters, but that they both signifie the Bishops, one setled in each Church by the Apostles, there being no use of that second order in the Church, till the number of beleivers increased.

c. Διάκονος Of the word διακονῶν] we have spoken at large, note on Lu. 8. a. both as that signifies indefinitely to serve, and as to wait at the table, and give every man his dimensum from the ἀρχιδιάκονος, and from thence to distribute to the poor, to all that want; And thus the seven Deacons institution Act. 6. may be thought to confine their name and office in the Church of Christ to that (especially and principally) of διακονεῖν τραπέζαις serving tables, distributing to the poor, v. 2. called the καθημερινὴ διακονία, daily ministration v. 1. But, (beside that those seven were not wholly imployed in those inferiour imployments, but Stephen and Philip made use of for the preaching of the Gospel, c. 7. 8. and Samaria converted and baptized by the latter of them, and he therefore called Philip the Evangelist, Act. 21. 8.) It is every where clear, that the word διάκονος is not to be restrained to that notion, but taken in a more general, for any officer or servant, or minister, without particular notation of the kind, wherein the service or ministerie consists, and being taken in an Ecclesiastical notion, shall signifie any inferiour Church-officer, however imployed by the Bishop or Apostle to whom he belongeth. The original of this word and office is to be taken from the Jewes, among whom the ministers and officers that attended the Judges in every city, Deut. 16. 18. are in the Scriptures called שטרים, by the Rabbines חזנים ministers, and, with the addition of והכנסות, ministers of the Synagogue, or Consistory, and juniores, the younger, saith Maimonides, such as had not attained to the age of Doctor, and these sure are the νεώτεροι, that buried Ananias, Act. 5. 6. These † Epiphanius calls ἀζανίτας (a word lightly varied from the Hebrew חזנים) and saith the Deacons in the Christian Church are directly parallel to them, For as they were the ταμιοφύλακες, keepers of the treasure, so did they also διακονικὰς χρείας ὑπηρετῶν, perform all ministerial offices indifferently. And of them the Jewes have a saying, that About the time of the destruction of Jerusalem the learning of the wise men, i. e. Doctors, was degenerated into that of the Azanitæ, and the learning of the Azanitæ into that which was competible to the Notaries, noting the subordination of the Azanitæ to the Doctors, and of the Notaries to the Azanitæ. From hence appears the notion and office of these Deacons in the Christian Church, those that attended and waited on the Bishop, and did whatsoever he appointed them, preach, baptize, &c. read the Gospel, attend the Bishop in ministring the Sacrament of the Lords supper, receive the oblations from the sub-deacon, and bring them to the Bishop, mind the people in performing the several parts of the divine office, call on them to pray, to sing, to hear, to kneel &c. And as these were first trained up for these ministeries in the family of the Bishop, so were they after, in religious houses, and colleges, or monasteries, (which appear by the antients to have been seminaries of the Church, and not instituted onely for prayer, and devotion) and such, when they have used the office of a Deacon well, καλῶς διακονήσαντες, 1 Tim. 3. 13. purchase to themselves a good degree, i. e. πρόκριτον ἑαυτοῖς τὸ ἀνωτέρω ἐλθεῖν, say the scholiasts, shall soon ascend higher, as Clemens being Peter's Deacon at Rome, succeeded him in the Episcopal chair. Proportionable to which it was, that afterwards the Bishops were chosen out of monasteries, Gregory Nazianzen, Basil, Chrysostome, &c. Thus is the word Deacons to be understood in this place, being joyned to Bishops, as those that attend on them in every Church, and were then next to them, there being not then (as farre as appears) any middle sort of Church-officers instituted betwixt the Bishops, and them. And the same is certainly the notion of it in that other place, 1 Tim. 3. 8, 12. where the rules are given for the qualifying them that are ordained to that office (as before had been given for the Bishops) in stead of which are the πρεσβύτας antient men, Tit. 2. 2. all one with διακόνους Deacons, in this more comprehensive notion, as it contains the διαιρέσεις διακονιῶν diversities of ministrations, 1 Cor. 12. 5. And these are elsewhere called διάκονοι Θεοῦ ministers of God, 1 Thess. 3. 2. the title that was then bestowed on Timothy, as the fellow-labourer of Paul in the Gospel, and ἐν Χριστῷ, in Christ, as of Epaphras 'tis said, Col. 1. 7. our fellow-servant (all one with his fellow-labourer before) who is for you a faithfull minister in Christ, and ἐν Κυρίῳ, in the Lord, as of Tychicus, Ephes. 6. 21. our beloved brother and πιστὸς διάκονος faithfull minister in the Lord. In all which places διάκονος with those adjuncts is applied to those assistants, and attendants on the Apostles, that were, as they pleased, employed by them in the Gospel. Besides these, other places there are, wherein 'tis applied to the Apostles themselves, διάκονοι deacons or ministers, simply, 1 Cor. 3. 5. Θεοῦ of God, 2 Cor. 6. 4. of Christ, 2 Cor. 11. 23. Ephes. 3. 7. 1 Tim. 4. 6. of the Church, Col. 1. 25. of the Gospel v. 23. of the New Testament, 2 Cor. 3. 6. And this still in a more general notion, as it denotes servants, officers, of what kind soever.

That the word χάρις which signifies any favour, or mercy of God, should here peculiarly be used for the sufferings, which had befaln S. Paul in the discharge of his office, will not appeare strange, if 1. it be considered, how often this state of suffering is mention'd by Christ, and by S. Paul, S. Peter, and S. James, as an eminent mercy of God's to them, who are thus honoured by him, and accordingly that it is to be lookt on, as matter of all joy (in their account) whensoever it befalls any, 2^dly, if it be compared with ver. 29. where the Philippians suffering for Christ, as eminently as their beleiving in him, is mention'd as that which ἐχαρίσθη ὑμῖν was granted them, by way of χάρις grace, or mercy, or special favour of God. As for that which is affirmed in both these verses, that this Church of Philippi was thus persecuted for Christianity, ſtianity, and ſo participated with him in his bands, or ſufferings, though it be not mention'd in the ſtory of the Acts, yet it is in it ſelf eaſie to be beleived, (and by theſe teſtimonies put beyond all queſtion) the Jewiſh unbeleivers every where ſtirring up the Roman magiſtrates to perſecute the beleivers in their Provinces.

e. Πραιτωριον ſignifies in the Latine (and ſo in Greek the ſame) the common hall, or court, where judgment uſed to be had, the Prator being a Roman officer in their judicatures, τουτ' ἐστι ὅλον τὸ κριτηριον ὁ λαὸς, the place where the people meet, ſaith Phavorinus, and ſo ſure it ſignifies here, and S. Paul's being impriſoned, and brought before the judges might be a means to make Chriſtianity known to the bench and the whole court; Thus one of his Judges had told him that he had perſwaded him ὀλίγου a little way to be a Chriſtian, which is the thing that here ſeems to be related to, or ſome other of the ſame nature.

f. Προφασει The word προφασις ſignifies not only a pretext or pretenſe (and ſo is oppoſed to ἀληθεια a true cauſe) but alſo an occaſion, as προφασεις ζητει, he ſeeks occaſions, Prov. 18. 1. and ſo it ſeems to be taken here, (and ſo more fitly to connect with παντι τρόπῳ, by all means, then it could doe, if it were rendred in pretenſe,) thus, by all means, εἴτε προφασει, whether by occaſion onely, i.e. accidentally, and not by a deſigned cauſality, εἴτε ἀληθειᾳ, or whether by truth, i.e. by a direct real way of efficiency.

g. Καρπὸς ἔργου] ſeems to be a Latiniſme, opera pretium, and ſo to ſignifie accordingly, worth my labour, worth doing, as we ſay, a deſirable thing.

h. Ἀναλύσειν Of the many acceptions of the word ἀναλύειν, none ſeems more proper to this place, then that which is in its ſelf moſt ſimple and plain, that it ſignifie to depart this world, or remove out of this life, migrare, abire, diſcedere, every of which is uſually taken for an expreſſion of death, and are anſwerable to the Hebrew פטר, which the Syriack here makes uſe of, the ſame which is by the Chaldee uſed of Moſes on Cant: c. 1. when Moſes's time came לסלקא מן עלמא to depart, or, that he ſhould depart out of the world, and ſo 2 Tim. 4. 6. ὁ καιρὸς τῆς ἐμῆς ἀναλύσεως, is ordinarily rendred, the time, or ſeaſon of my departure, or deceaſe. And ſo ordinarily in Chriſtian Authors ἀναλύειν, and ἀνάλυσις ἐκ τοῦ σώματος, and the like. And for the original of this uſe and acception of the word, nothing can be more probable, then that it is a phraſe of the mariners, who are ſaid to looſe from the haven, when they depart from the ſhore, oram ſolvere, and abſolutely ſolvere, to looſe, which is all one with this ἀναλύειν.

Τοῦτο πεποιθὼς οἶδα] is ſomewhat an obſcure phraſe, and may beſt be explicated by two conſiderations, 1. That πεποιθὼς ſignifies hoping with ſome confidence, anſwerable to the Hebrew בטוח which is ordinarily rendred ἐλπὶς hope, but 2 Kin. 18. 20. πεποιθησις perſwaſion, confidence, So v. 6. πεποιθὼς αὐτὸ τοῦτο, hoping confidently this very thing, So 2 Cor. 1. that which is expreſt by ἐλπίζω I hope] v. 13. is τούτῃ τῇ πεποιθήσει in this perſwaſion v. 15. Then for the phraſe πεποιθὼς οἶδα, that is in ordinary conſtruction all one with οἶδά με πεποιθότα, I know that I hope, or, am perſwaded,] or, of this I am ſure, (ſo οἶδα τοῦτο is ordinarily uſed) that I hope, or am perſwaded, And this is very agreeable to the matter in hand, where to comfort them in their ſadneſſe for his afflictions, he minds them, that, in order to their good, he foreſees it very probable that he may be permitted to live, and though he knows not by any certain revelation, whether he ſhall, or no, yet this he knows that he hopes, and conſidering Gods diſpenſations of providence, is verily perſwaded (which alſo includes his deſire) of it. i. Notes on Chap. 11.

2. Μορφὴ] ſignifies not onely an external and accidental form, as Mar. 16. 12. nor at all an image or picture (as μόρφωσις ſeems to doe, Rom. 2. 20. 2 Tim. 3. 5. and is rendred by Heſychius χαμαιτύπου, εἰκών, a perſonation or image) but it is taken alſo in good authors, for an internal eſſential form, or being. Thus in Æſchylus, ſpeaking of θεὸς ἐξ ἀϊδίου γαῖα, they are, ſaith he, πολλῶν ὀνομάτων μορφὴ μία, one form, i.e. thing, under divers names. The words of Phavorinus are moſt obſervable for the explication of this place, Μορφὴ τὸ καθ' ἑαυτὸ ὄν, ἐξ οὐσιωτικῆς ἑτέρου εἰς τὸ εἶναι ἀδιάφορον, the word ſignifies that which hath a being of it ſelf, and needs not the aſſiſtance of another to its being; and again, Μορφὴ κυρίως ἡ οὐσία, it properly ſignifies eſſence, and then cites theſe very words ὃς ἐν μορφῇ Θεοῦ ὑπάρχων, which is, ſaith he, ἐν οὐσίᾳ Θεοῦ γνωσθεὶς, known in the Eſſence of God, being God, and by the raies, and beams of his divinity, (ſhining even in his firſt conception and birth) diſcerned, and known to be ſo. This here appears to be the notion of the word, by μορφὴν δούλου, the form of a ſervant, that follows ver. 7. for that was not onely an external, but alſo a real form, he was really a ſervant of God's, in his humane nature, undertaking an office deſign'd him by God, and moſt ſtrictly obeying him in all things, and ἠλαττώσας αὐτὸν βραχύ τι παρ' ἀγγέλους Heb. 2. 7. he was a little lower, or for a little while (the time that he ſpent here on earth) lower than the Angels, who we know are the ſervants of God; and ſo the words ὁμοίωσις, and σχῆμα ver. 8. (which frequently ſignifie likeneſs, and external habit, and forms) doe here ſignifie that outward appearance, which doth not exclude but include the inward being, and reality, for it is certain, and by all acknowledged, that he was really a man, and not onely in likeneſs, and appearance ſo. This being thus evident of this firſt phraſe [ἐν μορφῇ Θεοῦ ὑπάρχων,] where Chriſt's divinity is aſſerted, and that præcedaneous to his humiliation, and as the terminus à quo, the term of elevation, from which his exinanition, and humiliation takes the riſe, and is much encreaſed thereby, there would now be little gained to the cauſe of the Photinians, or Arrians, in caſe the phraſe that follows [οὐχ ἁρπαγμὸν ἡγήσατο τὸ εἶναι ἴσα τῷ Θεῷ, which we render, thought it no robbery to be equal with God] ſhould appear to be miſtaken. For when it is once acknowledged, that Chriſt was God before his aſſumption of our humane nature, and that being really God, or ὑπάρχων ſubſiſting in the real form of God, he took our humanity upon him, it is by neceſſary conſequence concluded, that he was equal with God, which is all that is pretended by any from this ſecond phraſe. For as to them that affirm Chriſt a Deus factus, a God that had a beginning of being ſo, and from thence deny his equality with the Father, it is evident that they date his divinity from his reſurrection, and exaltation, (which is manifeſtly confuted by his being God before his humiliation) and they that affirm him ὁμοιούσιον, of like, (but not ὁμοούσιον, of the ſame) being with the Father, are ſufficiently confuted by the notion of μορφὴ here ſet down, as it ſignifies the real being of God, wherein he was ὑπάρχων ſubſiſting, for that includes equality, and not likeneſs onely. Now for the phraſe οὐχ ἁρπαγμὸν ἡγήσατο τὸ εἶναι ἴσα τῷ Θεῷ, that it ſhould ſignifie Chriſt's not aſſuming to appear like God, or ſpectari tanquam Deum, to be look't on as God, and ſo belong to his forbidding many times to have his power, and divine greatneſs proclaimed, there is but one argument which to me makes it any thing probable, (and that not taken notice of by them that defend that ſenſe) and that taken from the ἀλλὰ but] which follows v. 7. For in this notion of the phraſe it would moſt commodiouſly agree with that, [he would not aſſume, or own ſo much greatneſſe, but humbled or emptied himſelf, &c.] where that aſſuming, and that humbling are directly oppoſite, and ſo moſt agreeable to the importance of ἀλλὰ but, a note of oppoſition. And indeed this notion of the phraſe would very well connect it to the antecedents, thus, [he being in form &c. i.e. really and eternally God, when he came down on earth, would not thus aſſume, and magnifie this power] but ἐκένωσεν, diminiſht, or leſſend and humbled himſelf, aſked at one time, Why callſt thou me good? none is good ſave God, and at another, commanded that his miracles, which demonſtrated him to be God, ſhould not be divulged. And this notion conſiſts very well with the context, and the aſſertion of Chriſt's divinity, for being God he might yet chooſe to conceal his being ſo; But yet after all this, there is no reaſon to adhere to this interpretation, For 1. ἁρπαγμὸν ἡγεῖσθαι] doth no where appear to ſignifie jactare, or oſtentare or venditare, to aſſume, or take upon one, And though ἁρπαγμὸς may ſignifie prey, or prize in warre, yet ἡγεῖσθαι to eſteem or account] being joyned with it, no way inclines it to this notion, but to that which the ordinary interpretation affixes to it, that he counted it no prey, prize, acquisition, or (which is all one) robbery to be equal with God. And whereas it is pretended that it is a Syriack phraſe, and that proved by a paſſage in the Syriack Liturgie, where upon Chriſt's asking baptiſme of John, John anſwers, לא אלבוך גולחא I will not aſſume rapine, that is no proof of this notion. For 1. that which John thus expreſſed, was, that he would not doe ſo injurious a thing as to pretend to have greater authority then Chriſt, and conſequently to admit him to his baptiſme, and ſo, it ſeems, to aſſume rapine, in Syriack, is to doe an injurious thing; And 2^dly, there is ſome difference between aſſuming, and thinking, and conſequently ἡγεῖσθαι to think, being joyn'd with ἁρπαγμὸν rapine, muſt ſignifie to think, or count it a rapine, or an injury, (which is very diſtant from boaſting of it as a prize, triumphing, or aſſuming) and that is the notion that the ordinary interpretation gives of it.

ἴσα Θεῷ As for the phraſe [לא ישוה לאלהא ἴσα Θεῷ] there is as little reaſon to render that, ſpectari tanquam Deum, to be looked on as God, for neither is לא ישוה to be looked on, but to be, nor ἴσα, tanquam ai] but equal, or as great as another. It is true in the verſe cited out of Homer, Τὸν νῦν ἴσα Θεῷ Ἰδαιήονι ἰσοφάωσι that ἰσοφᾶν ἴσα Θεῷ is to look on him as equal to God, and that proves that ἴσα Θεῷ ſignifies either a God, or one equal to God, but then לא ישוה and ἰσοφᾶν to be, and to be looked on, are not the ſame, and ſo לא ישוה is to be equal, and not onely to be looked on as ſuch. The true notion of ἴσα may be diſcerned by Lu. 6. 34. where they that lend to the rich, are ſaid to doe it, ἵνα ἀπολάβωσι τὰ ἴσα, that they may receive from them loanes or benefits of as great a value, where τὰ ἴσα in the plural, (juſt as here) ſignifies that which is equally valuable, and as there ἀπολαβεῖν τὰ ἴσα] is to receive that which is equal, or equivalent, ſo לא ישוה is to be equal, and ἴσα Θεῷ equal to God, of the ſame value, and real power and divinity with God the Father. And then follows ἀλλὰ ἐκένωσε, either in the notion of ἀλλὰ for yet, [though he were thus great, yet he vilified, ſubmitted himſelf, or as ἀλλὰ ſignifies but, He was God, and without any injury, equal to his father, but for all this, or notwithſtanding this, he vilified himſelf &c. And this is the clear rendring of this whole place.

b. Κενόω ſignifies to leſſen, diminiſh, ſo Phavorinus κενωθῆ· ἐλαττωθῆ· ὑποπέσῃ, to ſuffer or undergo diminution, ſo the Hebrew אזל, which Jer. 14. 4. & 15. 9. is rendred κενόω to empty, is Joel 1. 10, 12. Nehem. 1. 4. ὀλιγόω to diminiſh, and Hoſ. 4. 3. σμικρύνω, to make little.

c. That the phraſe μετὰ φόβου καὶ τρόμου, with fear and trembling] ſignifies μετὰ ταπεινοφροσύνης with humility, is ordinarily ſaid from the Antients, and may here have a very commodious ſenſe, ſo as to be anſwerable to thoſe words in the ſecond part of this ſpeech v. 13. for God worketh in you to will and to doe, of his good pleaſure, which is a foundation of all humility. But the notion of the phraſe in other places of theſe books, ſeems to imply ſomething more, not onely lowlineſs of mind, but diligence, and caution, and ſollicitude, and fear of diſpleaſing, as a qualification of obedience, (and ſo fearing the Lord with all the heart and ſoul, Deut. 10. 12. conſiſts in keeping his commandments &c.) ſuch as will be required to render it acceptable to God. Thus Epheſ. 6. 5. Servants obey your maſters with fear and trembling, i. e. a very great fear of offending, terror, or trembling, leſt they ſhould doe any thing amiſs. So 2 Cor. 7. 15 upon S. Paul's orders of ſeverity, v. 9. either delivered by Titus, or made known to him by S. Paul v. 14. (and ſo he an officer of S. Paul's, ſent to ſee how they behaved themſelves under it) Titus tells him of the Corinthians obedience (ὑπακοὴν again) ὡς μετὰ φόβου καὶ τρόμου ἐδέξασθε αὐτὸν, how with fear and trembling ye received him, i. e. entertained him, and his meſſage from Paul with all readineſs of obedience, all diligence, and fear, and zeal v. 11. to approve your ſelves unto him. Thus ἐν φόβῳ in fear ſignifies, 1 Pet. 1. 17. with all diligence and care to approve themſelves to God, and ſo 2 Cor. 7. 1. in the fear of God] is the qualification of their cleanſing from all filthineſs, and perfecting holineſs, and Heb. 12. 28. as the qualification of ſerving God acceptably, is added μετὰ αἰδοῦς καὶ εὐλαβείας with reverence and fear; and that back'd with the conſideration of [Our God is a conſuming fire.] And accordingly the worſhippers of God, the pious among the Gentiles, are called εὐλαβεῖς & φοβούμενοι men of reverence, and fear, their fear ſignifying their ſollicitude and diligence to pleaſe God, wherein their piety conſiſted. And ſo 1 Pet. 3. 15. ἕτοιμοι ready (as ſervants are to be at every call) to give anſwer to every one that aſks you an account of the hope in you, (i. e. to confeſs Chriſt even in perſecutions and dangers) with meekneſs and fear, as with all meekneſs to men, ſo with all care to approve your ſelves to God. And thus it is here ſet as the qualification of godly obedience, As, ſaith he, you have alwaies obeyed-- ſo &c. work out-- with fear and trembling, χωρὶς γογγυσμῶν καὶ διαλογισμῶν v. 14. without murmurings and diſputings, which are the worſt evidences of an untoward obedience, and ſo moſt contrary to the ſincere diligence and zeale to God's ſervice, meant by the fear and trembling.

The word ὁ ἐνεργῶν that worketh] being joyned with [ἐν ὑμῖν in you] on one ſide, and with [ὑπὲρ τῆς εὐδοκίας of his good pleaſure] on the other ſide, muſt in reaſon ſo be interpreted, as ſhall be moſt directly anſwerable to the exhortation given to them, v. 12. of working out their own ſalvation with fear and trembling, To which it will be conſequent, that as this which is done by God, is done of his own free mercy, without any merit of ours, which may claim it from him, and therefore requires not only our humility, but our diligence, and caution, and ſolicitude, and fear of diſpleaſing ſo gracious a father, who may, if he be provoked by our unworthineſs, withdraw it from us, ſo it is not to be conceived to be wrought by God in ſuch an irreſiſtible manner, as that it ſhall be impoſſible for thoſe, in whom God thus works, to contradict, or reſiſt his working. For if it were ſo, there could be no place for the exhortation to doe that, which could not be otherwiſe, to work out their own ſalvation &c. To work then in us the τὸ θέλειν καὶ τὸ ἐνεργεῖν the willing, and the acting, or operating, is the giving us that ſtrength, working in us thoſe abilities, which are required to our willing, or working, as neceſſary to prepare and aſſiſt us to doe either, So

Gods

(Gods χαρίσματα & ἐνεργήματα, gifts, and operations being all one) δοῦναι λατρεύειν, to give to serve him Lu. 1. 74. signifies his affording that grace, which enables us to serve him, not which forceth, or necessitateth us to doe so. The King's MS. here adds the word δυνάμει by his power] which as it agrees well with this sense, so hath it a farther energie in it, to encourage our diligence, which is wont to be disheartned by the difficulty, and impossibility of the task; Be we never so weak, and insufficient of our selves, God hath all-sufficient strength, and by that strength of his, he worketh in us the willing and the doing, and so if we be not wanting to our selves, but work, and work out our own salvation with all diligence, we shall have no reason to complain of want of strength, we are able to doe what he requires of us, διὰ τοῦ ἐνδυναμοῦντος, through him that strengthneth us.

e. Σπένδομαι

The word σπένδομαι denotes the pouring out of wine upon the sacrifice, ἡ τὸ οἶνον ἐπιχεῖν ἐπὶ τὰ ἱερουργήματα, the effusion of wine on the sacrifices, saith Ammonius of σπονδὴ, and ἡ ἐπιχύσις τοῦ θύματος οἶνος, saith Hesychius, wine poured out on the sacrifice. This wine being thus offered up to God is said to chear the heart of God, Jud. 9. 13. And to this S. Paul here compares the effusion of his own blood, which is most fitly resembled by wine. And the words that follow, make the resemblance complete, For the bringing in of men to the faith of Christ, to the embracing and receiving the Gospel, is elsewhere compared to a sacrifice, Rom. 12. 1. your bodies a living sacrifice, and 15. 16. an offering of the Gentiles acceptable, &c. And a sacrifice being first kill'd, then dress'd and prepared by the Priests and Levites, the former of these is called θυσία, the latter λειτουργία, and both are made use of here, the sacrifice, and the service of their faith, where their faith signifying their receiving of the Gospel, the converting them, is this θυσία τῆς πίστεως, sacrifice of their faith, and the farther labour bestowed upon them (in the confirming and fitting them for this honourable employment of being offered up to God a living sacrifice,) is the λειτουργία the service, and Paul's spending his life, shedding his blood in the employment, is the pouring out the wine on the sacrifice. Thus 2 Tim. 4. 6. speaking of his sufferings, and danger, under Nero, ἤδη σπένδομαι, saith he, I am already poured out.

f. Παραβολευσάμενος

The word παραβολεύομαι is not ordinarily to be met with, unlesse in Hesychius and Phavorinus and other glossaries, which seem, not only to have taken it from hence, but also to have read the word παραβολευσάμενος (though the impressions have it otherwise) for they place it betwixt παραβολὴ and παράβολον which would not be done according to the order of the letters, if it had been παραβλ: It is therefore very probable that the reading here should be [παραβολευσάμενος τῇ ψυχῇ] so περίβολος in Aristophanes is ῥιψοκίνδυνος, he that casts himself into danger (In which sense we have παραβεβλημένος, 2 Mac. 14. 38.) which is the very notion of this word in Hesychius, εἰς θάνατον ἑαυτὸν ἐκδιδούς, one that gives himself up to death, for so saith Phavorinus, the phrases are usual, παραβάλλομαι τῇ ἐμαυτοῦ κεφαλῇ, I venture, or, gage my head, παραβάλλομαι ἀργυρίῳ, I lay any money. Thus in * Plutarch, παραβολώτερον ἀγωνίζεσθαι, to be more venturous in fighting than ordinary, and in Pliny's Epistles, parabola, i. e. periculosa. So doth Chrysostome expound this place, ἐξέδωκεν ἑαυτὸν, ὡς κἂν ἐπῆν δεῖν πάσχειν, he gave himself up to suffer whatsoever should be necessary, and again καταλελοιπὼς θανάτου, contemning death. So Theophylact, πάντας κινδύνου καταφρονῆσαι, despising all danger, and ἐπιῤῥῖψαι ἑαυτὸν τῷ θανάτῳ, he threw himself upon death, and at length ῥιψοκινδύνως, the very expressions that are set by the Glossaries to explain περίβολος. For the explaining of this the learned Isaac Casaubon in Epist. 438 saith that he found in Putean's copie this reading, with this interpretation to it, Parabolanus fuit de animâ suâ, in the same manner as in Justinian's Code they that goe to them that are sick of the plague are called parabolani and paraborarii. As for the word [τῇ τῆς ψυχῆς] that follows, I conceive, that signifies not life, (for that was sufficiently contained in the word παραβολευσάμενος) but rather belongs to the purpose and resolution of mind, that though he did not actually cast himself upon death, yet in preparation of mind he did. To which purpose is that of S. Chrysostome, Τί γὰρ εἰ μὴ ἀπέθανε, θεῷ οὐκονομήσαντι, ἀλλ' ἑαυτὸν παρεβ: &c. What if he died not, God ordaining it so, yet &c. And Theophylact, ἀλλ' ἑαυτὸν γε τῷ προθύμῳ τῆς ψυχῆς, but he shewed his resolution (προθυμίας being set to signifie ψυχῆς) and came to Paul, ὅτε ἐπικίνδυνον ἦν τινα προσελθεῖν αὐτῷ, ὡς τοῦ Καισαρὸς ἀπροσίτου λίαν ὄντος, When 'twas dangerous for any to come to him, the Emperour being angry with him.

CHAP. III.

Paraphrase.

* these very things τὰ αὐτὰ † is not cowardly in me

1. FInally, my brethren, rejoice in the Lord. To write * the same things to you, † to me is not [a] grievous, but for you it is safe.] 1. To conclude, my brethren, I salute you in the Lord, somewhat I have to write to you, which flows not from any cowardise in me, though I have tasted of the sharpnesse of it, but from my great care to preserve you from the great dangers, into which I have fallen my self. 2.

2. Beware of dogs, beware of evil workers, beware of the [b] concision.] 2. There are a sort of men I would have you take especial heed of, very malicious persons, that bark at, and bite every orthodox professor, and that live themselves in all villany, that take upon them to be the circumcision, but are only the concision, those that teare the Church in pieces, the heretical Gnosticks. b.

3. For we are the circumcision, which worship God in the spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh:] 3. For sure we are the true children of Abraham, and the circumcision indeed, who live piously, and confesse Christ crucified, and depend upon God's mercy only through that promise sealed to us in Christ's blood, and so place no confidence in circumcision, nor any such outward performance.

4. Though I might also have confidence in the flesh. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might trust in the flesh, I more:] 4. Though, if you speak of confidence upon privileges and advantages of a Jew, no man hath more reason for it, more right unto it, than I.

5. Thoſe greateſt pretenders have nothing of the Jew in them, neither birth nor circumciſion, nor obſervation of the law, but I was circumciſed at eight daies old, as the law preſcribes, my parents and anteceſſors Iſraelites, of an eminent tribe, the tribe of Benjamin, ſo dearly beloved by Jacob, both my parents of Abraham's, not of a proſelyte's race, and, in reſpect of my zeal to the Moſaical law, of the ſtricteſt ſect among the Jewes.

5. Circumciſed the eighth day, of the ſtock of Iſrael, of the tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews; as touching the law, a Phariſee;]

6. And ſo zealous for the law that I perſecuted the Chriſtians with great rage and fury as thinking them enemies to the law; and for all legal obſervances, I never neglected any, as long as I lived in that courſe.

8. Yea, and whatſoever I ſhould place any confidence in, I ſhould be a great loſer by it, in compariſon to the huge advantages of being a Chriſtian, for which I am content to be ſtript of all, and count them nothing worth, deſpite them all, that I may have the favour of Chriſt, the higheſt of all privileges,

Not as if I had already gotten my crown or reward, but I am, as the racer, in my purſuit, on the way, running as hard as I can, in ſome hope that I may at length poſſibly catch or receive that prize, to which very end it is that Chriſt himſelf hath contended for me as for a prize of his, ſuffered infinite agonies on the croſſe, that he may purchaſe unto himſelf a peculiar pious people, make me and others ſuch, who were farre from being ſo.

As many therefore of us as are ſincere in our Chriſtian courſe, the orthodox, fauhtfull, pure Chriſtians, let us take care of this; And if any body differs in underſtanding any particular thing, there is no reaſon that ſuch a difference ſhould breed any diviſion among you, diſturb or break the peace, which is moſt precious to be preſerved, for though at preſent ye are not, yet hereafter ye may, no doubt, be inſtructed in all that is neceſſary to you.

18. For many there are now adaies abroad in the Church, of a moſt unhappy, unchriſtian temper, that will not ſuffer any thing for Chriſt, or venture that, that may bring any affliction or ſuffering upon them (ſee note on Apoc. 2. b.) and therefore comply with the Jewes to avoid perſecutions from them,

Notes on Chap. III.

a. Ὀκνηρὸν

What ὀκνηρὸς] here ſignifies will be cleare enough out of Phavorinus, Ὀκνῶ, ſaith he, is uſed by Homer for ὀκνηρὸς ἦχεν, and is τὸ μὴ κονεῖν, or ἀεργεῖν, not to work, or doe any thing, thence ἄκνος, ſaith he, ῥᾳθυμία, cowardiſe or idleneſſe, and φυγὴ πόνων, avoiding of labours and φόβῳ μᾶλλον ἐναργείας, fear of approaching action, and again of ὀκνῶν, 'tis ἀλόγῳ καὶ ἀναλγήτῳ ῥᾳθυμίᾳ καὶ ἀχαδίᾳ, ὅθεν καὶ ὀκνηρὸς, to be held or poſſeſs'd with an irrational and cauſleſs ſluggiſhneſs, and from thence the word ὀκνηρὸς comes, which here we ſpeak of. So then it ſignifies avoiding of danger, or labour, fear of action, when 'tis near, an unreaſonable and cauſleſs cowardiſe, and from thence it comes in Homer, ſaith he, generally or for the moſt part (ὃ πολὺν χρῦνον) to ſignifie φόβῳ fear, cowardiſe, and ſo 'tis often uſed in Sophocles. πολὺ γὰρ χρῆν φόβῳ Σοφοκλεῖ, ſaith he, in this ſenſe. And therefore this will be a proper rendring of it, ὀκνηρὸν cowardly, and ſo the context beſt bears alſo; That to write what he is about to write next, viz: thoſe cautions againſt the dogs, the evil workers, the conciſion (βλέπετε, take heed of them, thrice in a verſe) οὐκ ὀκνηρὸν ἡμῖν is not cowardiſe in the Apoſtle (that is the notion of ῥᾳθυμία) but yet ſafe for them, viz: to be ſo warned, and admoniſhed by him.

b. Κατατομὴν

That κατατομὴν ſignifies to cut or rend aſunder, there is no queſtion, but the reaſon why the word κατατομὴ, conciſion or cutting aſunder, is here uſed for a ſort of men called before, dogs, and evil workers, is the onely thing to be conſidered; That the Περιτομὴ Jewes are called περιτομὴ, the circumciſion, meaning by it thoſe that are circumciſed, is clear from many places, Gal. 2. 8, 9. Now the Gnoſticks which were not all of them Jewes, nor themſelves circumciſed, did yet comply with, and take upon them to be very zealous Jewes, and would conſtrain all others to be circumciſed, Gal. 6. 12. Hence it is that Rev. 2. 9. they are expreſſed by λέγοντες ἑαυτοὺς Ἰουδαίους εἶναι, καὶ οὐκ εἰσὶν, they that ſay they are Jewes, but are not, ſee note on Rev. 2. c. And hereupon, becauſe theſe Judaizers that pretend ſuch zeal to the law, and particularly for circumciſion, doe neither perform any part of the law (but are evil workers here, the ſynagogue of Satan, Rev. 2. 9.) nor are circumciſed themſelves (οὐδὲ περιτεμνόμενοι, Gal. 6. 13.) and all that they doe, is, as dogs, to tear and rend all they come near, and cut aſunder the unity of the Church, (which comes no nearer true Judaiſme, than dogs and ſchiſmaticks doe to circumciſion) therefore by an elegance, and ſarcaſme, the Apoſtle calls them κατατομὴ conciſion, or cutting aſunder, they that, in ſtead of circumciſing themſelves, cut aſunder the Church of Chriſt. In oppoſition to whom followes, ἡμεῖς γάρ ἐσμεν ἡ περιτομὴ, for we are the circumciſion, we, that are the true, orthodox beleivers are the true circumciſion, the true children of Abraham, that actually perform that, to which circumciſion was deſigned to engage his poſterity, and they that pretend thus to engage his poſterity, and they that pretend thus to be Jewes and Chriſtians, but are not, are κατατομὴ, more truly than περιτομὴ, the conciſion, than the circumciſion.

What καταδράμω] ſignifies among the agoniſtical c. writers, hath been formerly noted, the receiving Καταδράμω the reward, that is due to the conquerour, ſee note on Rom. 9. d. and 1 Cor. 9. e. and accordingly it is uſed of him that hath finiſhed his race and courſe, conquered and gained the prize, although he have not yet received it, and ſo 'tis here taken οὐχ ὅτι ἤδη ἔλαβον, not that I have finiſhed my courſe, or that my crown is ſo immutably and irreverſibly yet aſſigned me (for that he was not yet in heaven, he needed not have ſaid, 'twas ſufficiently known to all) as that I ſhould ſpeak confidently of it; That which is fitter for me to entertain my ſelf with, is, to uſe all diligence, that I miſcarry not.

The word τετελείωμαι is an agoniſtical word, d. and ſignifies likewiſe the being crowned, or receiving τετελείωμαι the reward. So in Gregory Nyſſen, ſpeaking of the Martyrs, the phraſe uſed is τελείους ἀθλήτας (in the ſame ſenſe that we had καταξίους 2 Cor. 12. 10.) agreeable to the uſe of [τέλεια νικητήρια, perfect prizes] in the agones. For of their prizes there were ſome more valuable than others, the meaner, ſuch as the tripodes and ſhields and cups but the more eſteemed, the crowns, which had nothing of mean profit in them, but only the glory and renown of the victory, the crowns being made but of leaves only, as hath been formerly ſaid. Now the more illuſtrious were called τέλεια νικητήρια the perfect rewards or prizes, and to this, ſaith Peter Faber, referres that of S. James c. 1. 17. where πᾶσα δόσις ἀγαθὴ is every good donative, parallel to thoſe δόσις ἀγαθὴ of the meaner firſt kind of rewards, and πᾶν δώρημα τέλειον, this more illuſtrious of a crown. And δώρημα τέλειον proportionably to this, τελειῦσθαι will be to receive this crown. So Heb. 11. 40. ſpeaking of the ſaints of the old Teſtament, which, ſaith he, were afflicted in this life, and received not perſonally the completion of the promiſes, that were made unto them, but received them by faith then, and we their poſterity now really; And that he there calls τελειωθῆναι, to be perfected, all one with κομίζεσθαι ἐπαγγελίαν, receiving the promiſe, ver. 39. for which Oecumenius puts, στεφανωθῆναι, καὶ τῶν ἀγαθῶν ἀπολαῦσαι, to be crowned, and receive the perfection of good things. So Heb. 2. 10. God was pleaſed τελειῶσαι τὸν ἀρχηγὸν σωτηρίας to crown, or conſummate the captain of our ſalvation (that hath reſcued us out of the ſins and hazards of this life) διὰ παθημάτων, by ſufferings. So Heb. 12. 23.

Δίκαιοι τῶν λαμβάνειν Justi πλεονεμίαν, the just that have received their reward. Thus the Hebrew word עֵקֶב signifies both τέλος an end, and βραβεῖον a reward, in the former ſenſe 'tis *Pſal.*119.33. I will keep it עֵקֶב (underſtanding לְ) in finem, where the Chaldee paraphraſt reads עַד נְצִיחָא even to the conſummation, and v.112. עַד סוֹפָא even to the end. In the ſecond ſenſe it is *Pſal.*19.11. in the keeping of them there is עֵקֶב reward, the Greek reads ἀνταπόδοσις, retribution. This is almoſt

† on Job 23. † S. Chryſoſtome's note, παρ' Ἑβραίοις ὁ τὸ τέλος, καὶ ἡ νίκη διὰ μιᾶς σημαίνεται λέξεως, end and victory are by the Hebrews expreſs'd by the ſame word, and thence it is, ſaith he, that in ſome Pſalms in τέλος ſtead of εἰς τέλος in finem, the inſcription is νικοποιῷ to him that overcomes. Thus Rom. 6.21. τέλος is put for reward, the ſame with ὀψώνια v.23. and ſo 1 Pet. 1.9. τέλος πίστεως, the reward of our faith, and *Heb.*6.8. τέλος εἰς καῦσιν, reward to be burnt. Of another notion of this word ſee *Heb.*5.c.

c. Διώκων is the word that expreſſes the contention διώκειν ἐν δρόμῳ in the race, and it ſignifies to endevour to get before thoſe that are before us, to labour and ſtretch, ἵνα καταλάβῃ that he may get the prize by being foremoſt.

f. The word καταλάβω] here is ſtill in the agoni- καταλάβω ſtical ſenſe, and being now applied to Chriſt, it ſignifies moſt elegantly, that Chriſt doth, as in a race, contend and ſtrive, and that for no other reward that he hath in his eye, but only the faithful diſciple, whom when he converts and brings to repentance, he conceives himſelf to have attained his reward or crown, and ſo we are, as it were, the crown, that is caught and worn by him, as Epheſ.

κληρῶς 1.11. we are ſaid κληρῶς, i. e. to be the κλῆρος or portion, which he hath for his patrimony, as it were, or as he is ſaid to purchaſe λαὸν a people, Tit. 2.14. and as the Church, 1 Pet. 2.9. is ſaid to be λαὸς εἰς περιποίησιν a people purchaſed or acquired by him, *Act.*20.28.

g. This phraſe of ἐπιλανθανόμενος τοῖς ὀπίσω not look- ἐπιλανθάνεσθαι τοῖς ὀπίσω ing at that which is behind or paſt] referres likewiſe to the cuſtome of the racer, who doth not uſe to ſtand ſtill, and look behind him, to ſee either how much of his journey he is paſt, or how farre the reſt are behind him (for this is the ſluggards trick) but ſets bodily to his buſineſs, to overtake and outrun all that are before, and to get through the remainder of his race, and that is ἐπιτείνοντος τῇ ἄμιλλῃ, to ſtretch himſelf as vigorouſly as he can (for ſo ſaith Heſychius ἐπιτείνεται ἡ ὅλῃ πολὺ πάνυ) to get to the goale firſt. This hath Horace expreſſed diſtinctly in his deſcription of a racer in a chariot, Serm: l.1. *Satyr:*1.

Ut cum carceribus miſſos rapit ungula currus,
Inſtat equis auriga ſuos vincentibus, illum
Præteritum temnens, extremos inter euntem.

The ruler of the chariot preſſeth to overtake thoſe horſes that are before his, but contemns and never looks after him that is behind, and outrun by him.

That σκοπὸς ſignifies the goale, hath been ſaid already, note on 1 Cor. 9.f. and that βραβεῖον is the prize, or crown, which either hung over the goale, or was given the conquerour by the judges, and ſo the meaning of κατὰ σκοπὸν εἰς βραβεῖον] is, that the racer takes the goale in the way to the crown, firſt conquers, and then is rewarded, the goal being the concluſion of the race, but the way to the crown. h. κατὰ σκοπὸν εἰς βραβεῖον

That φθάνειν] is an agoniſtical word, and ſignifies to be foremoſt in the race, ſee note on *Rom.*9.d. & 2 *Cor.*10.b. and ſo εἰς ὃ ἐφθάσαμεν will ſignifie, In as much as we are gotten before other men in the race, have attained ſome degree of ſpiritual proficiency. i. φθάνειν

What κενὸν in the ſtadia ſignifies, ſee note on 1 *Cor.*9.f. & 2 *Cor.*10.a. viz: the white line that marked out the path wherein they were to run, and ſo αὐτῷ στοιχεῖν κανόνι] here is, to goe or run by the ſame line, in that path, never ſtepping over, or out of it, leſt they loſe all. And thus are they moſt concerned to doe, that are before other men, and if they have but this one care, are not likely to miſcarry by any thing elſe. That which is moſt contradictory to this in our Chriſtian race, is, dividing into factions and ſides, Peace, unity, and charity being the white, within which they are commanded to walk, and therefore it follows that they ſhould τὸ αὐτὸ φρονεῖν mind the ſame thing, live in unity and amity, run all the ſame way to the ſame end, and be σύμψυχοι v.17. all fellow-followers of the Apoſtle. k. κανὼν κατὰ κανόνα τοῦ σκοποῦ

Πολίτευμα] from πολίτης citizens, is literally citizenſhip, and denotes a municipium, which is the ſtate and condition of thoſe, who dwelling out of the city, have yet the jus civitatis Romanæ, the privileges of the city of Rome belonging to them. Thus ſaith Cicero de Legib: l.2. Omnibus municipibus duas eſſe patrias, unam naturæ, alteram juris, Catonis exemplo, qui Tuſculi natus in populi Romani ſocietatem ſuſceptus eſt, All ſuch have two countreys, one of nature, the other of law, after Cato's example, who being born at Tuſculum, was received into the ſociety of the people of Rome. And Tacitus, ibi municipes fiunt, ubi in civitatem recepti, But this ſo, that theſe ſhall differ from thoſe that had their habitation in the city, who alone might be choſen to offices in it. Thus is πολιτεία Act. 22.28. the privilege of being a free-man of Rome, belonging to one that lived in Judæa, and that bought by the χιλιάρχος there, but by birth belonging to S. Paul. And thus is the Chriſtian here on earth, συμπολίτης τῶν ἁγίων, Epheſ. 2.19. a fellow-citizen of the ſaints, not ξένος or πάροικος, a ſtranger or ſojourner, but a free-man or municeps of heaven, though while he dwells here, he be in an inferiour condition to them who have domicilium in urbe, the ſaints that are in heaven, who alone are capable of reigning with God. See Act. 22.d. l. Πολίτευμα Πολίτευμα συμπολίτης τῶν ἁγίων

3. † And I intreat thee alſo, true yoke-fellow, help thoſe women which * laboured with me in the Goſpel, with Clement alſo, and with other my fellow-labourers, whoſe names are [a] in the book of life.]

3. Yea I earneſtly beſeech thee, Epaphroditus, Biſhop of Philippi, (bearer of this Epiſtle) and ſo my fellow-labourer in the Goſpel, which haſt ſhewed thy ſelf to be ſincerely what thou oughteſt to be, take care of and relieve thoſe women, which for their zeal in the Goſpel have ſuffered perſecutions (ſee note on 1 Theſ. 2. b) with me, or in the ſame manner as I have done, and ſo likewiſe Clemens and all that have undertaken the ſame taſk with me in preaching the Goſpel to the Gentiles, thoſe pious good men, faithfull ſervants of Chriſt. a.

4. Rejoice in the Lord alway, and again I ſay rejoice.]

4. Whatever afflictions befall you in your ſervice of Chriſt, they are matter of continuall rejoicing to you, and not any way of grief.

† gentleneſs το ἐπιεικὲς

5. Let your † moderation be known unto all men: The Lord is at hand.]

5. And therefore let your patient enduring of them (ſee note on 2 Cor. 13. d.) be diſcernible to all; and to this you may receive encouragement, by conſidering that ye are not likely to expect long; The famous coming of Chriſt in judgment viſibly to puniſh his crucifiers, and to ſhorten the power of the perſecutors, and reſcuing all faithfull patient ſufferers out of their hands all the world over, in Greece, as well as Judæa, is now neer approaching, ſee Heb. 10. 37.

6. Be carefull for nothing, but in every thing by prayer and ſupplication with thankſgiving let your requeſts be made known unto God.]

6. And for this your reſcue, it will not at all be uſefull, that ye be ſollicitous, or anxious how to deliver your ſelves, doe but recommend your eſtate to God in prayer ardently and importunately, rendring him your acknowledgments for all the mercies received from him, (even for your preſent afflictions, with Job, ſee v. 4.) and that is all that belongs to you.

7. And the [b] peace of God, which paſſeth all underſtanding, ſhall keep your hearts and * minds through Chriſt Jeſus.]

7. And this Chriſtian unity & peaceable mindedneſs bequeathed to all by Chriſt (and ſo recommended to you c. 3. 1. &c. and c. 3. 15. &c. and here v. 3.) which is to be preferred before all deep (eſpecially pretended) knowledge, ſhall be an excellent armature to keep you from all heretical practiſes and doctrines. b.

8. Finally, brethren, whatſoever things are true, whatſoever things are † honeſt, whatſoever things are juſt, whatſoever things are pure, whatſoever things are lovely, whatſoever things are of good report; If there be any virtue, if there be any praiſe, think on theſe things.]

8. And to conclude, I conjure you, as you have any care of what is virtuous or commendable, that ye ſo farre remember and conſider what I have now ſaid to you, that ye adhere to the truth of doctrine, and in your practiſe doe nothing but what is agreeable to gravity and ſobriety, to exact juſtice, and purity or chaſtity, and farther ſuperadde that care of abounding in all Chriſtian virtue, that whatſoever is moſt deſirable and amiable in the eyes of men, whatſoever moſt venerably thought and ſpoken of, that ye will propoſe to your ſelves, as the pitch to be aſpired unto by you.

9. Thoſe things which ye have both learned and received, and heard and ſeen in me, doe: and the God of peace ſhall be with you.]

9. What both by my doctrine and practiſe hath been inſtilled into you, ſee ye be carefull to perform; meaning by my doctrine, 1. what I taught in the firſt preaching the Goſpel to you, 2. what I have farther revealed in the confirming you, and 3. what in familiar diſcourſes I have let fall to you. And if thus ye doe, that God which is ſuch a lover of peace and amity, will abide with you and direct and proſper you in all things.

* you have reviv'd your care of me, or made your care of me to flouriſh again, † wanted ability.

10. But I rejoyced in the Lord greatly that now at the laſt * your care of me hath [c] flouriſhed again, wherein ye were alſo carefull, but ye † lacked [d] opportunity.]

10. It was matter of great Chriſtian joy to me, and thankſgiving to God, that now after ſome decay ye have revived your liberality toward me, wherein I ſuppoſe formerly ye failed not, but only wanted ability of ſhewing it. c. d.

11. Not that I ſpeak in reſpect of want: for I have learned in what ſtate ſoever I am, therewith to be content.]

11. Which I ſay, not in reſpect of any eminent want that I was in, at the coming of Epaphroditus (ſee note on Mar. 12. b.) for Chriſtianity hath taught me (and I thank God I am able to doe it) to be very well ſatisfied with my condition, whatever it is.

12. I know both how to be abaſed, and I know how to abound, * every where, and in all things I am † inſtructed both to be full, and to be hungry, both to abound, and to ſuffer need.]

12. Nay I can contentedly bear a yet lower condition then that which hitherto I have been in; And yet the abundance which now I have by your liberality, I can make uſe of to the glory of God, It is a ſpecial part of that learning with which Chriſtianity hath imbued me, to be unconcerned in theſe outward things of plenty and want, and that too, whatſoever the circumſtances are, at what time ſoever, and in what ſort of adverſity ſoever I am exerciſed.

13. I can doe all things through Chriſt which ſtrengtheneth me.]

13. 'Tis the great mercy of Chriſt which hath thus enabled me, but thanks be to him, I am able to doe all this (ſee 1 Cor. 13. note i.) without much difficulty.

14. Notwithſtanding ye have well done that ye did communicate with my affliction.]

14. Yet doth not this at all leſſen your kindneſſe or charity in ſending me that ſupply by Epaphroditus, when I was in ſome ſtraights.

communicated in reſpect- συνκοινωνήσαντός μοι λόγον

15. Now ye Philippians know alſo that in the beginning of the Goſpel, when I departed from Macedonia, no Church * communicated with me, as concerning giving and receiving, but ye only.]

15. And indeed this was no new thing in you, for at my firſt preaching the Goſpel among you, when, after I had made an end, I was departing out of your region, you continued ſo mindfull of me, as to ſend me contributions, which no other Church but you had then done.

16. For firſt while I was at Theſſalonica, another eminent Chriſtian city of Macedonia, and ſince I came thence, more than once, you made a collection and ſent it to me.

16. For * even in Theſſalonica ye ſent once and again to my neceſſity.]

* both at Theſſalonica, and once ὅτι ἐν Θεσσαλονίκῃ, καὶ ἅπαξ

17. And that I thus commend you, v. 14.

17. Not †becauſe I * deſire a gift: but I deſire fruit that may abound to your account.]

it is not by that means to draw any more from you, that I may have the more, but to give you occaſion of exerciſing your liberality, the more acts of which there are, the richer ſhall your reward be, which it will bring you in from God.

18. What you ſent by Epaphroditus I received and here ſigne my acquittance for it (ſee note on Mar. 14. d.) and thereby I have all abundance and plenty, having received your almes and charity, which under the Goſpel is the prime kind of offering, which God accepts and receives, as which ſupplies the place both of incenſe and of ſacrifice.

18. But I have all, and abound, I am full, having received of Epaphroditus the things which were ſent from you, * an odour of a ſweet ſmell, a ſacrifice acceptable, well pleaſing to God.]

19. And you will have no reaſon to repent of your liberality, for God, that looks on it, as given to him, is both able, and willing to ſupply this, and all other your wants (through Chriſt Jeſus, by whom he diſpenſes all his gifts to you) to make you the richer by having been ſo charitable, and to pour out all his other graces on you.

19. But my God ſhall ſupply all your need according to his riches in glory, by Chriſt Jeſus.]

20. Now to him, who, as he is our God, ſo is he our father alſo, be all glory aſcribed for ever and ever. Amen.

20. † Now unto God and our father be glory for ever and ever. Amen.]

† Now to our God & father τῷ δὲ Θεῷ καὶ πατρὶ ἡμῶν

21. My love I preſent to every Chriſtian among you, All the believers that are conſtantly with me, Titus, Linus, Clemens &c. ſalute you.

21. Salute every ſaint in Chriſt Jeſus; the brethren which are with me greet you.]

22. Nay all the Chriſtians in Rome, but eſpecially they that belong to the Emperor's family, the ſervants of his court, ſalute you.

22. All the ſaints ſalute you, chiefly they that are of Cæſar's houſhold.]

23. The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with you all. Amen.

It was written to the Philippians from Rome by Epaphroditus.

Notes on Chap. IV.

a. Βίβλος ζωῆς

The Book of life referres to the cuſtome of well-ordered cities, which kept regiſters containing all the names of the citizens, out of which as Apoſtates and fugitives and infamous perſons were raſed (and agreeably there is mention of blotting out of names out of God's book, Rev. 3. 5.) ſo they that did continue obedient, orderly citizens, their names were ſtill continued in. Accordingly life ſignifying ſpiritual life here, (the ſtate of grace and favour of God, the inchoation of that future eternal life) the Book of this life is the regiſter of all ſincere Chriſtians, (as the book of the living in the Pſalmiſt is the number of men that live in this world) from which they are expunged, that ceaſe to continue ſuch. (This is expreſſed in another like phraſe Rev. 3. 12. I will write on him the name of the city of my God, and new Jeruſalem.) And as this was ordinary in cities, ſo was it every where in armies, into which whoſoever entred, he had his name taken, and put into the muſter-rolle; And thus the life of every Chriſtian, but eſpecially of thoſe that labour in the word and doctrine, being a warfare, the phraſe is ordinarily uſed, in all authors, of all Chriſtians. Thus in Cyril's κατηχήσ: p. 1. ſpeaking to thoſe that were baptized, ἀνομαλογήσεια τῶν ὑμῶν γόνων, καὶ φατνίαι κλῆσις, καὶ νυμφαγωγίαι λαμπάδες, καὶ ἀρχὴ στολισμοῦ ἐνδυμία. καὶ σφάγιον ἀγαθὸν, καὶ ἅλμης ἐπιχυθῆναι, Where the writing of their names, and, which is all one, the calling to the militia, are uſed to ſet down the ſtate of a Chriſtian, as alſo thoſe other expreſſions of the lamps, for fetching of the bridegroom, and deſire of the heavenly citizenſhip, the good purpoſe, and the conſequent hope. And as of all Chriſtians, ſo in a more eminent manner of the Apoſtles, and their fellow-labourers here 'tis affirmed, that their names were written in the book of life, either as actual ſouldiers in the Chriſtian camp or Church (as the Apoſtles called themſelves) or as thoſe that had right to that ſuperior heavenly citizenſhip, to which all labourers had title; and conſequently all theſe συνεργοὶ or fellow-labourers of S. Paul. Which at that preſent was perfectly true of them, though afterward Demas, one of them, apoſtatized, Philem. 24. And as of cities and armies, ſo in families the phraſe and cuſtome is uſed, to which that of Ulyſſes in Homer referres, Τύνομα δὲ Διὸς αὐλῇ —— His name was in Jupiter's court, i. e. he was born of a Goddeſſe, ſee note on Rev. 3. b.

b. Εἰρήνη Θεοῦ

That by peace is meant, the ſtudy of preſerving peace, among men, appears Gal. 5. 22. where εἰρήνη peace is ſet among the fruits of the Spirit, where conſequently it muſt not be that good of peace, which is a felicity but no virtue, (no effect or fruit of God's ſanctifying Spirit) but the peaceable-mindedneſs, deſire and purſuit of peace, called in other places διώκειν εἰρήνην, purſuing peace, and εἰρηνεύειν διώκειν εἰρήνην having peace, Rom. 13. 18. Accordingly the peace of God, Col. 3. 15. is (not God's peace or reconciliation toward us, but) that peaceableneſſe which God hath commanded and bequeathed to us. And accordingly there it follows, εἰς ἣν ἐκλήθητε, to which ye are called, which determins it to be a duty of ours. And then 'tis not improbable, but this may be the notion of εἰρήνη τοῦ Θεοῦ, the peace of God, or, as the King's MS. reads, Χριστοῦ of Chriſt, in this place alſo. That the Apoſtle is exhorting them to peace and unity, is apparent ch. 3. where the dogs that rend, the evil workers that deſile, the conciſion, that (under pretenſe of kindneſſe to the Mosaical law) cut and tear all to pieces, and are to be look'd to, and avoided in that Church, are certainly the Gnostick hereticks v. 2. Against these he sets himself in the remainder of that chapter, and concludes v. 15. As many therefore as are perfect, Τοῦτο φρονῶμεν let us be of this mind, and εἴ τι ἑτέρως φρονεῖτε, if in any thing ye be otherwise minded, i.e. if in any particular there be any difference of opinion in any among you, God shall reveale even this unto you, i. e. there is no reason that such a difference should breed any division, destroy that unity and peace, which is to be preserved among you; for, though at present ye doe not, yet upon your prayers to God, and applying your selves to use of this means, no doubt ye shall receive instructions from him by the Apostles &c. in all that is necessary for you: πλὴν εἰς ὃ ἐφθάσαμεν &c. v. 16. But, or, In the mean, as farre as we are advanced, some before other, let not that hinder our unity and peace, let us (all, both those that are foremost, and that are not so forward) walk by the same rule, and mind the same thing, All for peace and unity still, and so on to the end, in advise to adhere to those that continue in the doctrine he had taught them, and avoid all hereticks. And then begins this chapter, Wherefore, my brethren, &c. so stand in the Lord, i. e. according to these former directions. stand, in opposition to apostatizing, or falling off, and so stand, preserve this peace, all this while exhorted to, and v. 2. I beseech, or exhort Evodias and Syntyches τὸ αὐτὸ φρονεῖν to mind the same thing in the Lord, i. e. to preserve this peace of God, to live in the unity of the Gospel, And then the exhortation, v. 4, 5, 6. belonging to that great Christian duty of constancy, and rejoicing in prayer to God, in stead of sollicitude (here, as Mat. 10. 19. seasonably forbidden) in respect of the present pressures, (and all this inforced with the mention of the near approach of Christ's coming to destroy the persecuters, and rescue the faithfull) is directly designed to fortifie them against the Gnostick compliances, and so is not aliene from this matter. After all which follows this of ἡ εἰρήνη τοῦ Θεοῦ, that if they take this course prescribed, this peace of God by Christ commanded, (and to which the Apostle had all this while so sollicitously exhorted them) would guard and fortifie their hearts (the principles of action and practise) and (νοήματα) their understandings, which were the parts subject to errors, in Christ Jesus, preserve them in the right way against all the errors, and temptations of those times. The onely remaining difficulty is, what is meant by this Epithet, added to the peace of God, ὑπερέχουσα πάντα νοῦν, that surpasseth all understanding.] Which will also be intelligible by what hath been præmised. For as they that did τὸ αὐτὸ φρονεῖν, c. 2. 15. i.e. differed somewhat in opinion from others, were obliged v. 16. not to disturb the peace of the Church for that, but to expect, till God should farther reveal, or instruct them, (which concludes, that Peace was more excellent and valuable then that exact knowledge, or understanding of all things, which might be revealed, and much more than the pretended knowledge and understanding of the Gnosticks) so it is most fitly here said, that this love and care of preserving that peace, prescribed by God and Christ, is to be preferred before any understanding, that either some were thought to want, or others to abound in. As for the ordinary notion, which is had of this phrase, for quiet and serenity of mind, as a special mercy of God, though that may be thought agreeable enough to the not caring &c. v. 6. yet 1. it will be hard to find any place, where that is the notion of the peace of God (though of peace and rest it is.) As for that of my peace Joh. 14. 27. see that place; And then 2dly, though the no-sollicitude doe here come as an attendant on the precedent rejoicing in afflictions (and that a seasonable means to keep from breaking the unity of the Church, and joyning with the heretical Gnosticks) yet 'tis not necessary, that this concluding form [The peace of God &c.] should be restrained to this last particular of no-sollicitude, which came in but incidentally, but may rather be applied to the grand matter of the Epistle, that of preserving of peace in the Church.

c. That ἀναθάλλειν which signifies to resflourish, or revive, may be here used actively to make revive, or flourish again, may appear first by analogie with other words of the same nature, so θριαμβεύειν to triumph, is used in the sense of the conjugation Hiphil to make triumph, 2 Cor. 2. 14. So ἀνατεῖλαι to arise, is Mat. 5. 45. to make arise, see more, note on Mar. 14. 5. And thus is this word clearly used Ezech. 17. 24. ἀναθάλλω ξύλον ξηρὸν I make the drie tree to flourish, And so S. Chrysostome seems to understand, and use the word in this place, ὃ γὰρ ἦν μικρὸν τὸ μεγαλύνειν τὰ ἀναθάλλειν, For it is no small thing to make things that are withered grow green, and flourish againe.

d. That ἠκμάζετε here signifies, as we have rendred it, not wanted opportunity, but ability, is the expresse affirmation of S. Chrysostome, οὐκ εἴχετε, saith he, ἐν χερσὶν, οὐδὲ ἐν ἀφθονίᾳ ἦτε. Τοῦτο γάρ ἐστιν ἠκμάζετε ἤ, Ye had not in your hands, or power, neither were you in plenty. For that is the meaning of this word. So Gal. 6. 10. ὡς καιρὸν ἔχωμεν, not as we have opportunity, but as we have ability, (all one with τὰ ὑπάρχοντα δότε ἐλεημοσύνην Lu. 11. 41.) For indeed that is an opportunity, when the wants of others, and our plenty meet together; Of this use of these words we have frequent example among Authors. So for the simple [καιρὸς] Nazianzen περὶ φιλοπτωχείας, Τί γὰρ μὴ βοηθοῦμεν τῇ φύσει καιρὸν ἔχοντες; Why doe we not help our common nature, i. e. other men, having ability? (for if we have not ability, the opportunity of anothers want layes no obligation upon us.) And accordingly it follows there, μὴ μοι γένοιτο πλουτεῖν τότων ἀπορουμένων, God forbid I should have wealth and they want, where πλουτεῖν to have wealth] is all one with καιρὸν ἔχειν præcedent. So Plutarch in the Apophthegmes of Kings, mentions it as a speech of Philip, (on occasion of being told that he could not encamp in such a place, where he desired, because there was no food for the cattel) οἵου ἡμῖν ὁ βίος, εἰ δεῖ τὸν τῶν ὄνων καιρὸν ἐπιλεύειν ζῆν; What a life is ours, if we must live according to the provision of the asses? ad id quod commodum est asinis, saith Is. Casaubon. So in Xenophon, Xenophon, ὑπὲρ ἃ χρὴν πίμπλαδς to be fill'd above plenty, So thoſe that are well provided for, he calls ὀπυιεῖς, So in Polybius l. 10. ſpeaking of the King of Perſia his court at Ecbatana, it demonſtrates, ſaith he, by the coſtlineſſe of it, τὸ μεγάλων τῶν ἐξ ἀρχῆς καλλιτεχνημάτων ὑπυελίαν, the great plenty of them that firſt built it, and li. 1. κατὰ τὰς τῶν βίων ὑπυελίας, according to their ſubſtance, or abilities. And then if ὑπυελία ſignifie ability, or ſufficience, ἀπυελία muſt needs be want of ability, And ſo the Syriack renders here, you were not ſufficient. See Andr: Downes on Saint Chryſoſtome on Gal. 6. p. 760. and on this place, where he confirms this notion of the word by authorities.

There were two altars in the Temple of the Jewes, θυσιαστήριον the altar of incenſe, within the Temple, and θυσιαστήριον, the altar of ſacrifice, without in the court. On theſe two were offered all things that were offered to God; and, under theſe two heads, of incenſe and burnt-offering, are almes-deeds, or works of charity here ſet down, as being the prime things now under the Goſpel, to obtain God's favour and acceptation. c. THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE [a]COLOSSIANS.

COloſſe was a city in Phrygia, not farre from Laodicea and Hierapolis, in the Lybian or Proconſular Aſia. To theſe S. Paul had not perſonally preached the Goſpel, nor ſo much as been among them c. 2. 1. but had ſent Epaphras his diſciple to them, and he had converted them to the Faith, c. 1. 7. This Epaphras was at the writing of this Epiſtle (from Rome, about the year of Chriſt 59.) a fellow-priſoner of S. Paul there, Philem: 23. And by him (as an eye-witneſſe and principal actor in it) S. Paul being advertiſed of the reception of Chriſtianity among them, and the agreeableneſſe of their actions to their faith, ſends them this Epiſtle of conſolation, to ſtrengthen and confirm them, and the tenure and ſubject (and oft-times the expreſſions) of it, is muchwhat the ſame, as that to the Epheſians had been, and we may thence conclude it to have been written neer upon the ſame time with that. 2. CHAP. I.

Paraphraſe.

1. PAVL an Apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, by the will of God, and Timotheus our brother,

2. To the ſaints and faithfull brethren in Chriſt, which are at Coloſſe, grace be unto you, and peace from God our father, and from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

* to the God and father of our Lord &c.

3. We give thanks * to God and the father of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, praying alwaies for you,]

3. We conſtantly render God thanks for you, that by his grace ye have embraced the Goſpel of his ſon Jeſus Chriſt, and in all our offices of devotion we remember you in our prayers.

† Hearing, or, Having heard ἀκούσαντες

4. † Since we heard of your faith in Chriſt Jeſus, and of the love which ye have to all the ſaints;]

4. To which we are the more incited by hearing the news as of your faith, ſo of your charity alſo, and liberality extended to the Chriſtians every where;

* of the Goſpel of truth, τῷ λόγῳ τῆς ἀληθείας

5. For the hope which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof ye heard before in the word * of the truth of the Goſpel:]

5. That being an effect of your Chriſtian hope, which being faſtned on a rich treaſure in heaven; the reward of all your good works, makes you very liberal of your earthy treaſure, and that is fully agreeable to the doctrine of the Goſpel of Chriſt, Mat. 6. 20.

† alſo through all the world, or, through all the world it bears fruit, and increaſes, even ſo

6. Which is come unto you, as † it is in all the world, and bringeth forth fruit, as it doth alſo in you, ſince the day ye heard of it, and * knew the grace of God in truth.]

6. Which Goſpel as it hath been preached, and brings forth this fruit among you, and hath done ſo from the time of the firſt preaching of it, (ſee note on Heb. 13. 2.) ſo all the world over, where it is preached and received into honeſt hearts, it brings forth the ſame fruit, and by doing ſo attracts multitudes to the profeſſion.

the King's MS. reads ἐν παντὶ τῷ κοσμῷ τῷ καρποφορούμενον καὶ αὐξανόμενον, καθὼς

* acknowledged ἐπέγνωτε

7. As ye alſo learned of Epaphras our dear fellow-ſervant, who is for you a faithfull miniſter of Chriſt;]

7. This indeed was according to that doctrine preached to you by Epaphras, whom we ſent to publiſh the Goſpel unto you, and he hath faithfully diſcharged his duty toward you;

8. Who alſo declared unto us your love in the ſpirit.]

8. And hath given me an account of your ready receiving the faith, and the effect of that, your Chriſtian charity.

* prudence σοφίᾳ

9. For this cauſe we alſo, ſince the day we heard it, doe not ceaſe to pray for you, and to deſire that ye might [be filled with the † knowledge of his will, in all wiſdome and ſpiritual * underſtanding:]

9. abound to all perfection of divine knowledge both in underſtanding the myſteries of Chriſtianity, and in ordering and regulating your lives according to the rules thereof.

† to the acknowledgment of God, τῆς ἐπιγνώσεως

10. That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleaſing, being fruitfull in every good work, and increaſing † in the knowledge of God;]

10. That your behaviour may be ſuch as is agreeable to the divine promiſes and precepts of the Goſpel, perfectly ſuch as God will accept of, upon all occaſions bringing forth the fruit of Chriſtian living, and by that means daily increaſing in divine knowledge, which as it is it ſelf the practiſe of all virtue, ſo doth it by daily act on grow into a habit, every day more perfect and complete.

11. Strengthened

11. To which it is consequent, that through the grace and divine power of God ye shall be enabled to continue to the end, and bear whatever afflictions and persecutions ye meet with in your Christian course, not onely patiently, but cheerfully.

12. And even acknowledging it with thanksgiving as a special mercy and favour of Gods, that hath enabled us to bear persecutions and afflictions, and so to have our part in that inheritance, which is allowed Christians under the Gospel, i. e. to be persecuted here, and rewarded eternally.

12. Giving thanks unto the father, which hath * made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light :]

* fitted us for the portion [ικανωσαντι ημας εις την μερίδα]

13. That God, I say, who hath rescued you from a state of ignorance and heathenisme, and made you heires of everlasting glory, to which he will bring you in the same method and manner, as he hath brought his own dearest son (who was first crucified, then glorified.)

13. Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdome of † his dear son :]

† the son of his own love [του υιου της αγαπης αυτου]

14. Through whom we have pardon of sinnes.]

14. In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sin, purchased by his death, and so are redeemed out of the power of Satan, and made capable of a resurrection unto life.

a. 15. In whom God, who is invisible, is to be seen, and his will clearly declared by the Gospel (so that he that seeth him, seeth the father, Joh. 14. 9.) and who being first raised out of the grave, and assumed to heaven, as the first begotten from the dead, v. 18. hath all power given unto him by right of inheritance, as dominion is the birthright of the first-born.

15. Who is the image of the invisible God, the [a] first-born of * every creature.]

* the whole creation of every creature

b. 16. And this very agreeably, He being that eternal Word by whom, saith the Psalmist, were the heavens made, and all the creatures in the world, both those which are to be seen, being corporeal, and those which, being spiritual, as Angels, souls of men, cannot be seen, all these, I say, what degree soever they are of, they were all by him created, and therefore are in reason to serve him, as the Lord of all.

16. For by him were all things created that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible, and invisible, whether they be [b] thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers, all things were created by him, and for him :]

17. And he hath an eternal being, before any thing, which now is created, was, and as all was created by him, v. 16. so doe all owe their continuance and preservation to him.

17. And he is before all things, and by him all things consist.]

18. And another title he hath to us, beside that of Creator, as he hath redeemed us, and purchased us to be a congregation called by his name, a Church of Christians, and as by rising from the dead he hath conquered death, and given us victory over it, that we may after him rise also, and so by all titles he hath right of dominion over all.

18. And he is the head of the body, the Church : who is the beginning, the first-born from the dead, that in all things he might have the præeminence.]

19. For in the man Christ Jesus it was thought fit that the whole divine nature should reside, and inhabit, ch. 2. 9.

19. For † it pleased the father, that in him should all fulness dwell ;]

† it seemed good that in him should [ευδοκησεν εν αυτω]

c. 20. And that having, by his sufferings and satisfaction for our sins, made peace between God, and the world, he should reconcile all mankind unto God, not onely the Jewes, among whom he was born, and who had formerly been his people, and had the promises of Christ made to them, but the very Gentiles also.

20. And (having made peace through the blood of his crosse) by him to reconcile all things unto * himself, by him, I say, [c] whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven.]

* him [αυτον]

d. 21. And you that were strangers from the worship of the true God, and had engaged your selves in idolatry, and all the wicked practises that attend that, he hath now brought back to his service, used means by preaching of the Gospel to reform you, to make you lay down your hostilities against God, the wickednesses of your lives ;

21. And you that were sometime alienated, and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled,]

22. And to that end laid down his very life for you, by that means to present you to his father, as those, which, though sinners, are yet reconciled unto him, and are now acceptable in his sight, free from all charge of sin from the accuser of the brethren.

22. In the [d] body of his flesh, through death, to present you holy and unblameable, and unreprovable in his sight :]

23. Upon this condition onely that having given up your names to him (received the faith) ye continue firm, and constant to the end, and whatever persecutions assault you, hold out by virtue of that hope, which the Gospel hath furnished you with, that Gospel, I mean, which is now made known and preached to all the heathen world, (see note on Rom. 8. d.) and of which I am by Christ constituted an Apostle, and publisher of it.

23. If ye continue in the faith grounded and setled, and be not moved away from the hope of the Gospel, which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature under heaven, whereof I Paul am made † a minister.

24. And though it cost me dear, bring many persecutions upon me, yet is not this matter of any thing but joy unto me, as knowing that what I suffer is but some small proportion, and remnant of those sufferings which Christ began on the crosse for the Church his body, and doth now again, though he be in heaven, indure in the persecuting of me an Apostle of his

24. Who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and * fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh, for his bodies sake, which is the Church,]

* by way of correspondence fill up the remainders [αντανα]πληρω τα υστερηματα

25. And a minister of his Church appointed immediately by God, to bear his word, to preach the Gospel to the Gentiles, and particularly to you (to whom by Epaphras I have done so, ver. 7.) and to leave no place, (whither I ca[n]not come by my self or others,) without preaching the Gospel to them.

26. Even

26. Even the mysterie which hath been hid from ages, and from generations, but now is made manifest to his saints:] 26. That Gospel, I mean, or revelation of the will of God, which was not revealed so clearly in former ages, but kept under shadows and dark prefigurations, but now is freely preached to all that receive the faith of Christ:

27. To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mysterie among the Gentiles, which is Christ * in you, the hope of glory.] 27. God being willing to exhibit to such, (and no longer to keep close) this illustrious mercy of his to the Gentiles, so long concealed, viz: Christ preached, the Gospel revealed to these, and in it hope of pardon, and of blisse afforded them, upon reformation of their former lives, and receiving and practising the commands of Christ.

* among you ἐν ὑμῖν

28. Whom we preach, warning every man, and teaching every man in all wisdome, that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus:] 28. Whose doctrine we now publish to the world, his precepts of divine purity, and his glorious promises, first preaching the fundamental heads of the truth of Christ, and then superstructing all farther knowledge of Christian duties, and this to Gentiles as well as Jewes, that by this means we may bring in servants to God, as many as possibly we can, to serve him in all that holinesse of life, that Christ Jesus himself exemplified, and prescribed.

† is wrought in me in power, ἐνεργουμένην ἐν ἐμοὶ δυνάμει

29. Whereunto I also labour, striving according to his working, which † worketh in me mightily.] 29. Of which number I am one, who endure some travail and toil, and withall some persecutions and afflictions (see 1 Thess. 2. note b.) according to the measure of that grace, which he hath effectually bestowed upon me to that end.

Notes on Chap. 1.

a. Πρωτότοκος The word πρωτότοκος, beside the ordinary notion of first-born (which cannot so well here referre to Christ's eternal generation, because of that which is added to it, the first-born of every creature, which only gives him a precedence, before all other creatures, and doth not attribute eternity to him) is used sometimes for a Lord, or person in power, who hath the privilege of the first-born, dominion over all his brethren, and according to this notion 'tis used κοινῶς in scripture, for a Prince, or principal person. So Psal. 68.27. David is called the first-born of the Kings of the earth, i.e. the most glorious among them, and Job 18.13. we have the first-born of death. And so among the Civilians, Hæres, heir, signifies dominus, Lord, Justinian: Instit: l.2.tit.19. de hæred: qualit: & diffe: §. ult: And thus may it fitly be a title of Christ incarnate, in respect of his power over his Church, the key of the house of David laid upon him. But it is possible it may peculiarly referre to his resurrection, in which he was the first-born from the dead, v.18. the first which from the grave was raised and exalted to heaven, and being so risen, all power was given unto him in heaven and in earth.

b. Θρόνοι Κυριότητες Ἀρχαὶ Ἐξουσίαι These severall titles here rehearsed may possibly be no more, but the expressions of severall degrees of dignity among men; So θρόνοι, thrones may denote Kings, or Monarchs, and Princes; Κυριότητες, dominions (or Lordships) may be the Regnli, the honours (whether of Dukes or Earls) next under Princes; Ἀρχαὶ, the Prefects of Provinces and cities; and Ἐξουσίαι inferior magistrates, and if so, then may they be here set down to denote all sorts, and conditions of men in the Gentile world, by the chief dignities among them here on earth. But because they may also signifie the several degrees of Angels, and because, there follows mention of Ὁρατὰ, καὶ ἀόρατα, visible, and invisible, and the Angels may most probably be contained by the latter of them, as this lower world of men by the former, and because it is the creation that is here referred to, and the creating of the Angels, as well as men &c. belongs truly to Christ, as God, therefore it will be most reasonable in this place to interpret it in the greater extent to comprehend Angels, and men too, the highest, and most eminent of both sorts, thereby to set out the eternal divinity and power of Christ, who is creatour of Ὁρατὰ καὶ ἀόρατα all, and consequently before the most principal Angels, which were created before men, see v.17. Of the great blasphemies of the Gnosticks, and their followers the Valentinians in this matter, of Angels creating the world &c. see Irenæus, and note on 1 Tim. 1.d. And to that Theologie of theirs the Apostle may here referre.

c. Τὰ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, τὰ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς What is here meant by [εἴτε τὰ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, εἴτε τὰ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς, whether the things on earth, or the things in the heavens] will, I conceive, be best discerned, First by comparing this place of the reconciliation wrought by Christ, with the parallel, Ephes. 2. 14 16. where it clearly signifies the compacting the Jewes, and Gentiles into one Church, and so again Ephes. 1. 10. the gathering in one all things, both which are in heaven, and on earth] doth signifie all men of all sorts. Secondly, by remembring two observations, frequent in this Book, 1. that it is the manner of the Hebrew writers to expresse this inferiour world (for want of one word to signifie it) by these two, the heavens and the earth, and indeed any aggregate body or totum, by mentioning, and enumerating its parts, as the natural day, by the evening and the morning, and so to set down so many daies, and so many nights, where the truth of the story will not allow us to interpret it literally of so many nights distinctly, but of so many νυχθήμερα, or natural daies of which any the least part is computed for one. See note on Mat. 12. h. & on Ephes. 5. h. And not to multiply examples, but to confine the discourse to this particular, Thus very frequently the heavens and the earth] are set to signifie the whole lower world, made up of the firmament or the aire, that expansum, which is called heaven (as when we read, the fowls of the heaven) and of the terrestrial globe of earth and water (see note on 2 Pet. 3. b) and then (consequently to this) τὰ πάντα all things here, explained and interpreted by, [εἴτε τὰ ἐπὶ γῆς, εἴτε τὰ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς, whether the things on earth, or the things in heaven,] and in the like phrase v. 16. τὰ πάντα τὰ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς, καὶ τὰ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς all things that are in the heavens and on the earth, shall signifie no more then what is in other places expressed by ὁ κόσμος, the world, (as 2 Cor. 5.19. in the very same matter that here is spoken of, God in Christ reconciling the world to himself) ἡ κτίσις the creation, πᾶσα κτίσις, the whole creation, or all all creatures, the whole world of creation, or the whole world without restriction. Now what is meant by the whole world or the whole creation, will appear by another 2d observation, which is taken notice of, and enlarged on, note on *Rom.*8.d. that κτίσις creation, and κόσμος world simply, and πᾶσα κτίσις the whole creation Rom. 8. 22. and here v.23. signifies all the Gentile world, in opposition to the Jewish enclosure; Not all the creatures absolutely, but all men of all nations, particularly the Gentile Idolaters mentioned here in the next verse, ὑμᾶς ποτὲ ὄντας ἀπηλλοτριωμένους, you that were formerly alienated &c. And then the meaning of the place will be clearly this, that it pleased God by Christ to reconcile to himself (or as it is possible, εἰς ἑαυτὸν, to him, may be read εἰς ἑαυτὸ, into one, or the same, and so be more perfectly parallel to ἀμφοτέρους ἐν ἑνὶ σώματι, both in, or into one body, Eph. 2.16.) all the men of the world, the Gentiles and the Jewes both; the same thing which was meant by καταλλαγὴ κόσμου, *Rom.*11.15. the reconciling of the world (i. e. the Gentiles in opposition to the Jewes, that there in the words immediately precedent are said to be cast off) and 2 Cor. 5.19. by [God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself,] And though the word πάντα all things] be here in the neuter, yet will that be no objection against this, it being ordinary for the neuter to be taken for the masculine, as when Christ is said to have come σῶσαι τὸ ἀπολωλὸς, to save that which was lost, i.e. all the men that were lost, and so Gal. 3. 22. that God hath shut up together πάντα ὑπὸ ἁμαρτίαν, all things, i. e. all men, under sin, and innumerable the like; and therefore that which v.20. is πάντα all] in the neuter, is ὑμᾶς you men, you Gentiles v.21. and that joyned with the ἀποκατήλλαξεν, he hath reconciled] there, as πάντα all] with the ἀποκαταλλάξαι reconciling] here. That I doe not conceive the τὰ ἐν οὐρανοῖς things in heaven to signifie Angels, the reason is clear, because Christ οὐκ ἐπιλαμβάνεται ἀγγέλων, *Heb.*2.16. came not to take hold of, or reduce, or relieve, or consequently to reconcile the Angels, but onely mankind; and indeed the Angels that are ἐν οὐρανοῖς in the heavens, never fell, and so needed no reconciling. And though τὰ ἐν οὐρανοῖς the things in heaven] may possibly signifie the saints departed, which are now in heaven, in respect of their souls, contrary to the Psychopannychists, and were so at the Apostle's writing this, and even at the time of Christ's death, yet the context seems not to have any particular aspect on that matter, but onely to look upon Christ, and to set him up as the one universal redeemer and reconciler of all mankind, of the Gentiles, as well as of the Jewes, and to shew what interest the Gentile world hath in his death and resurrection, and therefore I preferre the interpretation first given, as being directly pertinent to this purpose, and agreeable to the consequents, And that will more appear, if you look on the place forementioned, and parallel to this, Ephes. 1. 10. where this reconciling of all things in heaven and on earth, expressed there by ἀνακεφαλαιῶσαι gathering into one, is called v.9. μυστήριον τοῦ θελήματος αὐτοῦ κατὰ τὴν εὐδοκίαν αὐτοῦ, the mysterie of his will according to his good pleasure, noting it to be some act of free undeserved mercy, imputable to nothing but God's meer grace (and such most notoriously was the calling of the Gentile Idolaters) and that a mysterie, such as no man ever dream'd of, or hoped for before; and what that mysterie was, is in the remainder of that Epistle largely shewn, especially c.2. 14,16,17. and under the name of the mysterie, c.3. 3. 5. viz: the bringing in the Gentiles into the Church, preaching ἐν τοῖς ἔθνεσιν among the Gentiles, (c. 3. 8.) the unsearchable riches of Christ. And thus, I conceive, the phrase is to be understood, *Ephes.*3.15. where of Christ 'tis said, that, ἐξ οὗ πᾶσα πατριὰ ἐν οὐρανοῖς καὶ ἐπὶ γῆς ὀνομάζεται, the whole family in heaven and on earth is named by, or, from him, i.e. surely, all the world, Gentiles as well as Jewes, are now vouchsafed by him to be called by his name, i.e. to be Christians, called and received into his family.

The body of his flesh signifies no more than his flesh, according to the Hebrew notion of בָּשָׂר, which, as it signifies body, so it is oft applied to things which have no body, and signifies essence or being.

Πληρῶσαι τὸν λόγον, to fulfill his word, is a phrase which we meet with, 1 Mac. 2. 55. spoken of Joshuah, that for fulfilling the word he was made a Judge in Israel, where, as the word signifies the will and pleasure of God revealed to him, so πληρῶσαι to fulfill it] is to perform it in a very eminent manner. But in this place ὁ λόγος being by the context confined to another notion, the preaching or publishing the Gospel of Christ peculiarly, πληρῶν τὸν λόγον τοῦ, to fulfill the word of God, will be, to fulfill that preaching, i. e. to proceed as farre in the preaching of it, as by all his diligence and care, by himself and others, he could doe, and so belongs to the preaching it to these Colossians, to whom, being out of his way, he yet had sent Epaphras v.7. Thus we have a like phrase *Rom.*15.19. πεπληρωκέναι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τοῦ Χριστοῦ, to fill up the preaching, or Gospel of Christ, i. e. to preach it from city to city, from Jerusalem as farre as to Illyricum.

CHAP. II.

1. For I am willing ye should be advertised how earnestly I contend for you in desire to come to visit you, and in prayer and zeal and sollicitude for you, and for those of Laodicea, whose conversion wrought by Epaphras, who was sent by me, I look upon with much comfort, though I never saw any of them (as not being able to go to either of those cities either in my first or second passage through Phrygia (of which Laodicea is the Metropolis, and Colossæ another city) Act.16.6. & 18. 23.)

1. FOR I would that ye knew what great conflict I have for you, and for them at Laodicea, and for as many as have not seen my face in the flesh,]

2. That they may receive the joy and true comfort, which the doctrine of Christ truly taught and practised will yeild every one, that being first united together in the Christian charity, they may be filled with all graces in all abundance, and come to know the bottome of this great secret or mysterie of God, viz: of the Gospel, or Christianity, i.e. of the course which hath more obscurely been taken by God

2. That their hearts might be comforted, being knit together in love, * and † unto all riches of the † full assurance of understanding, to the acknowledgment of the mysterie of God, * and of the father, and of Christ.]

4. And this I ſay, leſt any man ſhould beguile you with † enticing words.] 4. And this care of mine and ſolliciude for you, I mention, that it may make you cautious, that no cunning impoſtor ſeduce you, by ſaying things that look like truth, but are not.

5. For though I be abſent in fleſh, yet I am with you in the ſpirit, joying and beholding your order, and the ſtedfaſtneſſe of your faith in Chriſt.] 5. For though I am not perſonally preſent among you, yet by the adverti ſments I received from Epaphras I underſtand how all things goe with you, and ſo am in heart, or ſpirit preſent with you, (as when Eliſha's heart is ſaid to have gone with his ſervant, when he knew what he did, 2 Kin. 5. 26.) and rejoice much to ſee the regularity of Eccleſiaſtical affairs among you, and your conſtancy in the truth, in deſpight of all that have tried to lead you out of the way.

6. As ye have therefore received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, ſo walk in him;] 6. And therefore all that I have to adde is onely this, that as you have received commands from Chriſt for the regulating of your lives, ſo ye be carefull to doe accordingly;

7. Rooted and built up in him, and ſtabliſhed in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thankſgiving.] 7. As having not only received the faith at firſt, but having been farther inſtructed and improved in it, as when walls are ſuperſtructed on a foundation, yea and confirmed in it, and therefore goe on according to theſe beginnings, and abound in all Chriſtian practiſes, and let that be your way of returning thanks to God for his great mercies of revealing the Goſpel to you;

* deſpoil or carry you captive † Elements

8. Beware leſt any man * [a] ſpoil you through Philoſophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the [b] † rudiments of the world, and not after Chriſt.] 8. And take care that no body plunder you, rob you, cheat you of all that you have, your principles of Chriſtian knowledge, by that vain, empty, frothy, pretended knowledge and wiſdome which the Gnoſticks talk of, 1 Tim. 1. 4. & 6. 20. taken out of the heathenish Pythagorean Philoſophy, together with the obſervances of the Moſaical law, and very diſtant, and contrary to Chriſtian divinity. a, b.

9. For in him dwelleth all the fulneſſe of the Godhead [c] bodily.] 9. For the whole will of God is by Chriſt really made known to us, as his divinity really dwels in him, and therefore there is little need of the additions of the Gnoſticks, which they borrow out of the heathen and Jewiſh theologie, to ſupply the defects of the Evangelical doctrine. c.

10. And ye are † compleat in him, which is the head of all principality and power.] 10. And by him you have knowledge ſufficient to ſatisfie and complete you, without ſuch ſupplies as theſe from the doctrines and divinity of the Gnoſticks, about their æones, (ſee 1 Tim. 1. note d.) look'd on by them as divine immortal powers, of which, whatſoever they are (if they be not idol-nothings) be they Angels of a ſuperiour, or ſecond degree, Chriſt is the head, and they which have Chriſt need not trouble themſelves with theſe acceſſions.

11. In whom alſo ye are circumciſed with the circumciſion made without hands, in putting off the body of the ſins of the fleſh, by the circumciſion of Chriſt,] 11. And as you need not take in theſe fragments of heathen theologie into the Chriſtian, ſo is there as little need of the Judaical obſervations, circumciſion &c. which are urged by the Gnoſticks alſo, Chriſt having in his Goſpel helped you to the true gainfull circumciſion, not that outward, the cutting off the fore-skin with a knife, but the inward, ſpiritual, the putting off, throwing away all thoſe carnal ſins, which the Gnoſticks again doe ſo abound in, and this is the true Chriſtian circumciſion.

12. Buried with him in baptiſme, wherein alſo ye are riſen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raiſed him from the dead.] 12. And to all this you are engaged (and have undertaken it) in your baptiſme, whereof one part, referring to the burial of Chriſt, denotes not only your dying to your ſins, forſaking the impurities of your heathen lives, but alſo the abrogation of, and liberty from the Moſaical performances, Epheſ. 2. 15. and your laying all down in the grave, to be buried with Chriſt, never to live or have power in, or over you again; and another part (that of coming out of the water) referring to the reſurrection of Chriſt, denotes your vow and engagement to riſe to all Evangelical performances, and to all purity of life, by the virtue of your faith in that God, whoſe power and ſufficience to make good all his promiſes to you, is demonſtrated, by his raiſing up Jeſus from the dead.

13. And you being dead in your ſins, and the uncircumciſion of the fleſh, hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all treſpaſſes.] 13. And you being heathens and uncircumciſed (and ſo without requiring thoſe legal performances of you) hath he received into covenant, taken you out of your heathen, dark, dead condition, and having pardoned you all your paſt idolatries and provocations, he hath called you into the free eſtate of the Goſpel, requiring none of thoſe legal yokes of you, which the Judaizing Gnoſticks lay upon you,

14. * Blotting out the [d] handwriting of ordinances, that was againſt us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his croſſe:] 4. Having by that proclamation of pardon to all penitent beleivers, Gentiles as well as Jewes, (which is a doctrine of Chriſt's now peculiarly revealed in the Goſpel) blotted out that bill which the Jewes were bound by, having as it were ſigned it with our own hands againſt our ſelves (by profeſſing to expect juſtification by the law) a bill indeed contrary to our peace, deſtructive to us, and having taken it away, cancelled it, and that (as bonds are wont to be cancelled) by ſtriking a nail through it, viz: nailing it to his croſſe, i.e. cancelling it by his death, undergoing a vile death for us, and obtaining pardon of ſins for us by that means. d.

15. And having † ſpoiled principalities and powers, he made a ſhew of them * openly, triumphing over them † in it.] 15. By which means alſo of his death he hath deveſted the evil ſpirits of their power, thrown them out of their temples, ſilenced their oracles, &c. and hath made it publickly diſcernible to all men, carried them as it were in triumph, as thoſe that he had taken captive victoriouſly, (ſee Job 7. 2.) brought them from their idolatrous practiſes, to the true Chriſtian religion.

e. 16,17. Let no man therefore impoſe on you, their doctrines of Moſaical abſtinencies &c. and condemn, or ſentence Chriſtians (ſee note i.) for eating or drinking things prohibited by the Jewiſh law, not obſerving thoſe things, which are ſet down in their ſection of feaſts, or new moons, or ſabbaths, which were all but types of Chriſtianity, and therefore now in the preſence of Chriſtianity it ſelf, are not obligatory.

16. Let no man therefore judge you in meat or in drink, or * in reſpect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the ſabbath daies,

f. g. h. 18. Let no man pleaſe himſelf, and condemn you in point of worſhipping Angels, as mediators to God, as if there were ſome ſpecial humility in ſo doing, undertaking to ſearch into thoſe things which he knows nothing of, having no other ground for his doctrine but his own carnal phantaſie,

18. Let no man † beguile you of your reward, in a * voluntary humility, and worſhipping of Angels, * * intruding into thoſe things which he hath not ſeen, † vainly puft up by his fleſhly mind;]

Notes on Chap. II.

a. Συλᾶν

Συλᾶν is to ſtrip or rob, as the pillagers in warre are wont to doe, ἐκδύειν ὅπλων ἢ κόσμου, to ſtrip one, as he lies, of his armour, ſaith Phavorinus, and agreeably to this ἁρπαγὴν, αἰχμαλωτίζειν, to carry away captive. Hence συλαγωγεῖν is both ἀπογυμνοῦν to deveſt, to ſtrip, and being here applied to the Gnoſticks, it belongs to their divinity, which mixes all the heathen gods (under the title of αἰῶνες, a word corrupted from the Hebrew חיות living creatures, which is ſet to ſignifie Angels, Ezr. 1. 5. ſee note on 1 Tim. 1. d.) with Chriſt, and makes uſe of all the Theologie of Orpheus and Heſiod, and Pythagoras, which is called ἀπείρους γενεαλογίας endleſſe genealogies, 1 Tim. 1. 4. μάταιολογία idle ſpeaking, ver. 6. and here Philoſophy and vain deceit, and ſo by bringing others to them, συλαγωγεῖ, either carries them captive to their own heatheniſh errors, or elſe robs them, deſpoils them of all their Chriſtian ornaments and weapons, leaving them naked, as it were, of all that rich proviſion, which Chriſt had laid in for them, depriving them of all the advantages of the Goſpel; But that of carrying captive ſeems rather to be the notion of it.

b. Στοιχεῖα

Στοιχεῖα ſignifies elements, rudiments, firſt principles, the letters of the Alphabet, among Grammarians, the firſt principles, or elements of which the body is compounded, among the Naturaliſts. And ſo they may fitly ſignifie, all imperfect lower ſorts of doctrines or precepts, in oppoſition to that which is more perfect; Thus when Heb. 5. 12. the higher Chriſtian knowledge is expreſt by στερεὰ τροφὴ ſolid food, and all the inferior ordinary doctrines thereof, but as milk for Children, or babes to feed on, thoſe lower doctrines there (ſet down c. 6. 1. of Repentance, and Faith, &c.) are call'd στοιχεῖα τῆς ἀρχῆς τῶν λογίων τοῦ Θεοῦ, the Elements of the beginning of the Oracles of God; Now as Chriſtian religion is the true manly knowledge and wiſdome, ſo are there two ſorts of Elements, imperfect childiſh beginnings of knowledge, the one among the Jewes, the other among the Gentiles, Among the Jewes, the rites and ceremonies preſcribed them, are fitly call'd Elements, or beginnings, being a παιδαγωγία τοῦ νόμου, a padagogie of the law, a way to bring up, and diſcipline children, by thoſe groſſer means, as they were able to bear it, to initiate them to ſome kind of piety and virtue, And to them that have received the faith, the Apoſtle calls them ἀσθενῆ καὶ πτωχὰ στοιχεῖα, weak and beggerly elements Gal. 4. 9. and ſuch as were fit only for νήπιοι babes to be ſubjected to, v. 3. Among the Gentiles, the Philoſophers and the Magi had ſome waies of wiſdome and of Religion alſo, wherein they exerciſed their diſciples, many abſtinencies, and waies of purgations, ſacrifices, and ceremonies of worſhip to their Damons, eſpecially the Pythagoreans, who who abſtained from wine, and fleſh, and venery, &c. So ſaith Porphyry in his book περὶ ἀποχῆς, and ſo Clemens Alex: Strom: 3. Διὰ φησὶδοι ἔφη τοῖς Μάγοις οἴνου ἐμοῦ καὶ ἐμψύχων καὶ Ἀφροδισίων ἀπέχεσθαι, Their Magi teach them to abſtain from wine, and things that have life in them, and the uſe of venery, and he adds, Λατρεύουσι Ἀγγέλοις καὶ δαίμοσιν, they worſhip Angels and Damons; Now which of theſe are here referred to, is the only queſtion. And that may beſt be reſolved by conſidering the addition of [τῷ κόσμῳ of the world] which is joyned to it. That word doth once ſignifie the ſervice of the Jewiſh Temple Eccleſ. 50. 21. The people beſought the moſt high God ἐν προσευχῇ κόσμῳ Κυρίου καὶ λειτουργίαν αὐτοῦ ἐπιτελέσαι, till the worſhip of the Lord were finiſhed and they had perform'd their office: where κόσμῳ and λειτουργία are uſed in the ſame ſenſe, for the worſhip or ſervice of the Temple. And if this were the notion of τῷ κόσμῳ, it would confine it to the Jewiſh ceremonies, but the ordinary notion of κόσμος for the world, is that which is generally uſed in the New Teſtament, and ſo muſt denote the men of the world, all ſorts both of Jewes and Gentiles, as they are oppoſed to Chriſt, and ſo the Elements of the world will be thoſe imperfect waies of piety and virtue, which either the Jewes or Gentiles adhered to before Chriſt, or before receiving the faith of Chriſt. And ſo it muſt ſignifie here, the Gentile doctrines eſpecially, noted by Philoſophy at the beginning of the verſe, and the worſhipping of Angels ver. 18. but withall the Jewiſh abſtinencies, and obſervations, ver. 14, & 16. For it is certain that the Gnoſticks divinity, which, through this whole chapter, is peculiarly noted, was a compoſition of Judaiſme & heatheniſm both, and thoſe doctrines of theirs, which they laboured to impoſe on Chriſtians, are here expreſt by the elements of the world, and ſo v. 20. (ſee note i.) though Gal. 4. 3, & 9. where the matter confines it to the Moſaical law, it fitly belongs to that only.

c. Σωματικῶς may denote, not corporeity, but eſſence, according to the notion of עצם, often mentioned (ſee c. 1. note d.) for eſſence, as well as body, ſo v. 11. σῶμα ἁμαρτιῶν τῆς σαρκὸς, the body of the ſins of the fleſh, i. e. the ſins of the fleſh. Or elſe it may be taken in oppoſition to ſhadows or dark reſemblances, God's will being in Chriſt (not in ſhadows, as among the Jewes, but) plainly and ſubſtantially revealed, for the practiſe of inward purity, and not for the obſervation of thoſe ſhadows thereof which had been among the Jewes. And thus the 17th verſe ſeems to interpret it, the ſabbaths &c. though they were, as commemorations inſtituted for the Jewes, by ſtrength of that inſtitution, to be obſerved by them, yet had they alſo a farther aſpect, to ſomewhat under the New Teſtament, and as ſuch, are ſaid to be a ſhadow of things to come, the body or reality whereof is of Chriſt; Where the Chriſtian doctrine is affirmed to be that ſubſtantial divinity, of which that which was under the law, was a ſhadow. But this cannot well be otherwiſe applied to the fulneſs of the Godhead dwelling in Chriſt (which is the primary ſenſe, in which that other is contained, of the manifeſtation of divine knowledge in the Goſpel) but as the word ſhadow is a generall word to ſignifie any image, eſpecially a dark or imperfect one: Thus every body naturally caſts its ſhadow, which as it is the dark image of the body, viz: of ſome lineaments of it, ſo is it farre from the ſubſtance of it. Thus the Ghoſts, i. e. the ſpecies or images of men, but not their real bodies, are call'd their umbra, ſhadows; And according to this notion of the word Shadow, I ſuppoſe the word Bodily may here be interpreted in oppoſition to it, that as on the earth here below, the ſun caſts its beams, and ſo dwells here, in, or by its beams, or irradiations, but the body of the ſun is in heaven, and ſo, though here be ſome light below, yet there only the fulneſs of light is, ſo here God was in Moſes and the prophets (and in other wiſe, holy men, to whom he revealed his will) in ſome degree, in ſome raies, beams, images of his perfections, and more then ſo, God is ſaid to dwell in his ſaints (which differs from being in them, only by permanence or continuance) but ſtill he is or dwels in them, onely in thoſe images of him, ſhadows, or raies, not as the ſun doth in the heaven, where the body of it is, in a fulneſs, ſo as he cannot be more in any other; But in Chriſt he dwels in fulneſs, ſo as nothing could be added to it, and ſo in him bodily, i. e. as the ſun dwels in the firmament, where the body of it is, The whole divine nature is not onely in part, but fully, without abſence of any part of it, in Chriſt, and that not by a ſpecies, or ſhadow, or image onely, but really and ſubſtantially, and ſo conſequently (which is the thing which is here deſigned to be proved by it) the will of God muſt be ſuppoſed to be ſo revealed in Chriſt or by Chriſt, that there can be no need of addition from the heathen philoſphy, or from the Jewiſh law, which the Gnoſticks would needs have added to it. And that is the full ſenſe of theſe words.

d. Χειρόγραφον is a bill or writing under a mans hand, whereby he binds himſelf to ſome payment of money or duty, a band or obligation, and which ſtands in force againſt him, to bring any forfeiture, or penalty upon him, upon non-performance of the condition, to which he is bound. Thus is the law of Moſes, as it requires abſtinence from meats, obſervation of daies, &c. v. 16. and ſo laies obligation on a Jew, that others are not bound to, and binds him to forfeiture of all his hopes, and alſo to puniſhment, if he doe not perform them. In which caſe this band, or bill is here ſuppoſed to be brought againſt him, ſigned by himſelf, and ſtands in force againſt him. Now two waies there are to cancell any writing, the one by blotting, or croſſing it with a pen, the other by ſtriking a nail through it. The firſt is done by Chriſt's doctrines, (requiring now the inward purity, in ſtead of thoſe external obſervances) and that is the meaning of δόγμασι doctrines here (as Epheſ. 2. 15. (a place parallel to this,) it will more appear, by looking on the place) and the ſecond is done by Chriſt's death, expreſſed in that to the Epheſians by [ἐν Χριστῷ] but here by προσηλώσας τῷ σταυρῷ, nailing it to his croſſe.

e. The meaning of מקף here, which Joſ: Scaliger, and Iſ: Caſaubon Ep: 24. have pitched on, is, that by it is noted חלק פרק a chapter, or tract of the Talmudiſts upon that ſubject; For the leſſer parts of the Talmud are called פרקים diviſions or parts; Among their writings there is now one called מסכת יום טוב the tract of a good day, i. e. a feaſt, feast, and in it many chapters or פרקים, μέρη or sections. From thence is the mention of Ἀρχισυναγώγους in Justinian: Novel: de Heb: 146. By which it appears that among the Expositors of the Law there were some called φαρισαῖοι, as it were μεστοὶ, that expounded their heads of doctrine severally, and the chief of them Ἀρχισυναγώγους. And so the meaning of the place will be, Let no man passe sentence on you by what you doe in eating or drinking, by that section of the Rabbines about Feasts, New moons, Sabbaths, i. e. by your observing or not observing of those things; which were required indeed by the Jewes, but meerly as shadows, and types of that ὁλόκληρον καὶ ἀδιάλειπτον ἑορτὴν, entire and continual feast, that a Christians life ought to be, now under the New Testament, see Origen: Cont: Celsi: l. 8. 404. That μέρη should be mistaken for ἡμέρᾳ a day, is a conjecture of some, which it is sufficient to have named, having no authority of any MS. to countenance it.

f. Καταβραβεύειν, κατακρίνειν, saith Phavorinus, the word signifies to condemn, βραβεὺς and κριτὴς being all one (onely the former peculiar to the ἀγῶνες or Gracian games, the other common to all judicatures) and proportionably the notion of the χ^ν in composition being the same too: and so the word will have the same significancy here, that κρινέτω v. 16. of judging or condemning.

g. The notion of the word θέλω in the Greek translation of the Old Testament, for taking delight in any thing, hath been mentioned in note on Mat. 22. g. and may be judged of by these examples not recited there, Psal. 1. 2. ἐν τῷ νόμῳ κυρίου θέλημα αὐτοῦ, his delight is in the law of the Lord, πρόθυμός με, Psal. 41. 12. thou favourest, or lovest, or delightest in me. And so being here joyned with ἐν ταπεινοφροσύνῃ in humility, it is most reasonably to be taken and rendred, delighting in humility, or, as S. Hierome explains it, superbum fictâ humilitate, proud of a feigned humility; but yet so, that ἐν ταπεινοφροσύνῃ in humility may be joyned with μηδεὶς καταβραβεύειν, let no man condemn you, ver. 16. so that the construction and full sense will run thus, Let no man please himself, and condemn or judge you, in point of humility and worship of Angels.

h. The word ἐμβατεύοντα is explained by ἐπιβαίνων, τὰ ἔνδον ἐξερευνῶντα ἢ σκοπῶν, to enter into, to search, and spie what is within, and again ἐξετάζειν to enquire, in Phavorinus; by ζητῶν to seek and goe as farre as one can, ἐπιβαθμεύοντα in Hesychius, It signifies to seek, or search, or prie into that which is secret, and hardly to be discovered, and so belonging here to the doctrine concerning Angels, it is fitly applied, because no man hath ever seen them, nor can speak upon knowledge concerning those points, when Angels are present, what they can doe, what they have done, what use hath been continually made of them by God, what hath been wrought by their ministery, &c. Now of the Gnosticks it is known how great a part of their Theologie was made up of conceipts concerning the Angels, of which as they had much from the Theologi Poeta, the fictions of the heathens, so had they therein gratified the Judaizers also, who affirming, that the Law was given by Angels, were very favourable to the worship of them, (see note on 1 Tim. 1. d.) This sort of men are said to have continued long in Pisidia and Phrygia, and therefore to have been forbidden by Canon in the Councel of Laodicea, the chief city of Phrygia; Among them there still are oratories remaining, wherein they were wont to pray to Angels, And the heresie of these Angelita or Angelici, was, under a shew of humility, that God was to be looked on with reverence, as invisible and inaccessible, and to be sued to by the intercession and mediation of Angels, first the lower, then the higher, till at last the request was presented unto God himself.

i. The word ἐθελοθρησκία, voluntary worship, is not elsewhere used in the New Testament, and being not at all to be found among the Greek translators, or Apocryphal writers of the Old, and by other later Writers taken particularly from this one place, it will be worthy our inquiry, how 'tis used here, whether in an ill, or a good sense, and that will be done best, by a full view of the whole place. The occasion of the Apostles discourse here, is, the dogmatizing of some, v. 20. i. e. teaching some things to be forbidden by God, which were not now forbidden by him (nor by any under God, which had authority to command) and so by their ἐντάλματα, commands, or precepts, teaching for doctrines the commandements of men, (their own heretical phansies) Mat. 15. 9. The matter of these dogmata is here set down, Μὴ ἅψῃ, μὴ γεύσῃ, μὴ θίγῃς, touch not, taste not, come not neer. The word ἅπτεσθαι to touch, as it is here distinguish'd from γεύεσθαι to taste, seems to refer to the use of women, so as we have μὴ ἅπτεσθαι γυναικὸς not to touch a woman 1 Cor. 7. 1. contrary to which is the ἕκαστος τὴν ἑαυτοῦ γυναῖκα ἐχέτω, Let every man have his own wife, ver. 2. For this we know, that the Gnosticks, here opposed by S. Paul (as there also among the Corinthians) did forbid marriage, as a detestable, abominable thing, διαβάλλοντες γάμους, συκοφαντίαν, calumniating or accusing marriage, getting of children, &c. saith the author of the Constitutions l. 6. 16. See note on 1 Tim. 4. b. And this they seem to have had from the Pythagoreans, and the Magi, (who taught their disciples ἀπέχεσθαι ἀφροδισίων to abstain from venery, saith Clemens, Strom: l. 3.) but made a worse use of it, then they appear to have done. In the next place, the μὴ γεύσῃ taste not, belongs to abstinencies from meats, of which some there were among the Pythagoreans, ἀπ' ἐμψύχων, from all living creatures, (see Porphyry περὶ ἀποχῆς) and some among the Jewes, from unclean, forbidden meats. And accordingly this is another of the Gnosticks doctrines (annext to the former of forbidding marriage) 1 Tim. 4. 3. ἀπέχεσθαι βρωμάτων, to abstain from meats, according to that of the Author of the Constitutions, lib. 6. 8. πρὸ τῶν βρωμάτων βδελύσσονται, they abominate some sorts of meats, and φαυλίζουσι they speak evil of them, c. 26. As for the μὴ θίγῃς, which is ordinarily rendred [handle not] and may so be applied to some Jewish rites of not touching any thing that was legally unclean, I suppose, it may better be rendred [come not near] Thus the word is used Exod. 19. 12. of the mount, which they were not to goe up to, or touch, i. e. approach near it, and so it is used in the same matter, Heb. 12. 20. κἂν θὴρ θίγῃ τοῦ ὄρους if it approach the mountain it shall be stoned, And in this notion, I conceive it belongs to both the former interdicts, which are backt with this, as with an anathema, or deep censure, making it an abominable thing, to marry, or eat those meats, For therein did their dogmatizing consist, in making marriage, and meats, ἀποβλητα detestable things, bitterly judging all that approacht them, and so by the Canons of the Apostles, it appears the haretickes of the first times did, making marriage the work of the Devil, and the eating forbidden meats, a βδέλυγμα, an abomination. And so here v.17. Let no man judge you in meat, &c. i.e. condemn your liberty, as an abominable, damning thing, placing all religion in such observances. Of these abstinencies thus imposed on Christians by these dogmatizing Gnosticks, the Apostle v.22. makes his observation, Ἅ ἐστι πάντα εἰς φθορὰν τῇ ἀποχρήσει, Which are all &c. These words I conceive are ordinarily misunderstood, For 1. ἀποχρησις signifies not use simply but abuse, then φθορὰ is set in the Epistles to denote abominable, unnatural uncleanness (see Rom. 8. note i. and 2 Pet. 1. 2. & 2. 2.) and so the sense will be, that these doctrines of theirs, borrowed from others, Pythagoreans, and Jewes, are abused, and made worse by them, even to the bringing in all unnatural villany, set down Rom. 1. whilst they detest, and abominate marriage. As for that which follows [κατὰ τὰ ἐντάλματα καὶ διδασκαλίας τῶν ἀνθρώπων, according to the commandments, and doctrines of men] that is surely to be connected with συγκαλύζεσθε ver. 20. thus, why doe ye subject your selves to those ordinances of abstinencies, which are farre from being imposed by God, fetcht out of the Philosophy of the heathen, and rites of the Jewes, abolished by Christ, and yet most severely imposed on you by these haretickes; Having set down these abstinencies, thus imposed, and abused by haretickes, he then concludes with a brief character of the abstinencies themselves, as they were by them pretended to be, in their plea for them. Ἅτινα (or, in two words, Ἅ τινα) ἐστὶ λόγον μὲν ἔχοντα σοφίας ἐν ἐθελοθρησκίᾳ, &c. Which things have in them some notion, or appearance of wisdome, i. e. of extraordinary perfection (from whence they call'd themselves Gnosticks) or piety (which in the Scripture-style is called wisdome) viz: in will-worship, and humility, and severity toward the body, i. e. first in performing some acts of voluntary, uncommanded perfection; Secondly in shewing a greater humility, than others pretend to, in that of worshipping of Angels, v. 18. (see note g.) and thirdly in austerities, and severities toward the body, abstaining from satisfactions, which others use, (so ἀφείδια signifies) καὶ μὴ ἐν τιμῇ τινι πρὸς πλησμονὴν σαρκός, and not in any honour to the satisfying of the flesh.] These words have some difficulty in them, (but such, as hath no influence on the enquiry in hand concerning the notion of Will-worship) That which others have said from S. Jerome may well be admitted, that the honour here is the supplying of wants, as Mat. 15. 5. & 1 Tim. 5. 17. the word is used, and then (as an explication of the austerity precedent) ἐν ἐν τιμῇ] will be [not in the administring of fewel, or supply, ad saturitatē carnis explendā, to the filling the saturity of the flesh;] But 'tis possible, τιμὴ] may here be taken in a peculiar sense, so as marriage is said to be τίμιος honourable in all men Heb. 13. 4. in opposition there to these Gnosticks practises, πορνεία fornication, as it contains all unlawfull, unnatural lusts, which are accordingly called πάθη ἀτιμίας Rom. 1. 26. affections of dishonour, and ἀτιμάζεσθαι τὰ σώματα αὐτῶν, dishonouring their bodies, ver. 24. In this sense I suppose it evidently to be taken 1 Thess. 4. 4. that every one know to possesse his vessel, i. e. his body, ἐν ἁγιασμῷ καὶ τιμῇ, in purification and honour, i. e. in a virginal, or conjugal purity, μὴ ἐν πάθει ἀτιμίας, not in passion of dishonour, or dishonourable passion, so as the Gentiles which know not God, v. 5. Where I suppose conjugal chastity, under the name of τιμὴ honour, to be proposed by the Apostle in opposition to all the Gnostick practises, which there follow, whereas marriage was detested and accused by these, as a work of the Devil; And then in that notion τιμὴ may possibly be taken here, for the lawfull, honourable use of marriage, πρὸς πλησμονὴν σαρκός, for the satisfying the desires of the flesh, i.e. for the avoiding of fornication, or πρὸς ὕστερον, and all villany, in which case the Apostle prescribes marriage, 1 Cor. 7. 2, & 9. And so this last part of the character of these abstinencies, will also be here fitly added, to shew the wickedness of these fair pretences of these Gnosticks; in that they brought them to all dishonourable lusts, by forbidding them the use of lawful marriage, and allowing no honourable means of satisfying those desires, which are implanted by nature in them. The verse being thus rendred, it is already visible that there is no ill, but a good character set on ἐθελοθρησκία, will-worship, For 1. it is here joyned with two things which are confessedly good, 1. humility, 2. severity and austerity to, or mortifying of the body, the first a known moral and Christian virtue, the second an act of self-denyal, which, as such, cannot be unacceptable to Christ, and as a species of revenge 2 Cor. 7. 11. will be numbred among the effects of sorrow according to God. 2dly, These doctrines are said, in respect of will-worship discernible in them, to have λόγον σοφίας, rationem sapientiæ, somewhat of piety in them, which somewhat, if it be real, then will it be the same that is 1 Tim. 4. 8. said of bodily exercise, abstinence, continence &c. that it is εἰς ὀλίγον ὠφέλιμος, a little profitable, or profitable for a little; But if λόγος signifie species, onely a shew of wisdome, or piety, yet still the argument will be of force, For can any thing be said to have so much as a shew of piety in will-worship, if will-worship, which is thus pretended, passe confessedly for foolish, or impious? And accordingly the Greek Fathers that interpret λόγον for a shew onely, render will-worship by piety, onely they adde, that this dogmatizer is not truly so, but pretends to be so. Δοκεῖ εὐλαβὴς τις καὶ μέτριος, καὶ τοῦ σώματος καταφρονεῖν, ἀλλ' οὐ, He appears pious and moderate, and to despise the body, and then all the fault is, that he is not truly what he appears, and OEcumenius, ὑποκρίνεται εὐλάβειαν ἐν τῇ θρησκείᾳ, he pretends piety and devotion in worship, where it appears what they meant by ἐθελοθρησκία viz: εὐλάβεια piety (the thing so commended in Simeon, Lu. 2. 25. and prescribed, Heb. 12. 28.) and religion or worship, which caused the interpreter of Clemens Alexandrinus to render ἐν ἐθελοθρησκίᾳ in religione, in religion. And accordingly Hesychius expounds it by ἐθελοσέβεια voluntary worship, or piety voluntarily performed, the very notion of the עבודה the free-will-offerings among the Jewes, rendred by the Septuagint ἑκούσια voluntary oblations, which were ſo farre from being ill becauſe not commanded, that they were farre the more acceptable for being free. "Α γὰρ ὑπὲρ τὴν ἐντολὴν γίνεται πολὺν ἔχει τὸν μισθὸν κατ' αὐτὸ, ἃ δὴ ἐκ τῆς ἐντολῆς πέφυκε τοῦτο, for thoſe that are done above the command, have a plentifull reward, in this very reſpect, but theſe that are according to command, not ſo great. And ſo ſaith Socrates of Eccleſiaſtical rites, ἐπεὶδὲ οὐδεὶς φέρει τούτου ἔγγραφον ἔχει παράγγελμα, δῆλον ὡς ἐξ ἐλευθέρας προαιρέσεως ἐπήγειραν οἱ Ἀπόστολοι, ἵνα ἕκαστος μὴ φόβῳ, μηδὲ ὡς ἐξ ἀνάγκης τὸ ἀγαθὸν κερδαίνοιτο, ſeeing there is of this no written command, 'tis manifeſt that the Apoſtles left this to mens choice, that every one might doe good, not of fear, or neceſſity. 'Tis true indeed, where the matter of the worſhip is unlawfull, there the will-worſhip muſt needs be ſo, and therefore here ver. 18. when he ſpeaks of worſhipping of Angels, there the ὁ θέλων he that takes pleaſure in this ſort of humility and worſhip, is under an ill character, which notwithſtanding, the voluntary worſhip, where the matter is perfectly lawfull, not forbidden, nay approved by a general (though not commanded by a particular) precept, is farre from having any tincture of ill in it: And therefore when the word ἐθελοθρησκεία, voluntary abundant worſhip, is by Epiphanius uſed of the Phariſees, it is not by him taken in any ill ſenſe, but onely that it was the denotation of their name, which, though they might out of ſome vanity aſſume it to themſelves, yet had no ill in it, but was rather a title of honour, ἀφωρισμένοι τῷ Θεῷ, ſeparate to God, and their ſect by S. Paul ſtyled ἀκριβεστάτη αἵρεσις τῆς θρησκείας, the ſtricteſt ſect of religion: For ſo indeed it appears that the original of theſe Phariſees was the חסידים Aſidæi, ſo call'd for their exceſſe of piety & charity, their voluntary performances, above what the law required, ἑκουσιαζόμενοι τῷ νόμῳ, volunteers to the law, that to the precepts of the law ſuperadded ſome uncommanded acts of piety, 1 Mac. 2. 42. and ſo differed from the Karai, who did only that, which was preſcribed by the law. And conſequently though the Phariſees pride and boaſting be cenſured by Chriſt, and though their forming theſe voluntary acts of devotion into precepts, and entring them into books, and ſeparating themſelves from all that did not perform their ſevere preſcriptions, rendred them Phariſees, divided even from the Haſidæi themſelves, and then this became a fault, and ſo is looked upon in them, Yet the voluntarineſs, and uncommandedneſs of their piety was not amiſſe, and being the ſame in the Aſidæi and in them, (and in the former of theſe, being ſeparated from dogmatizing and cenſoriouſneſs &c.) it is alwaies looked on as commendable, and the more abundant, ſtill the more rewardable. Of this ſort, as the free-will-offerings among the Jewes are a known example (of which it is clear 1. that they were a part of the worſhip and ſervice of God, when they were performed, 2^dly, that they were not under any particular command of God's in the law, but were left to every man's liberty, and ſo were ſpontaneous, not neceſſary, and 3^dly, that there is a law, Lev. 22. whereby he that offers them is forbid to offer them maimed or blemiſht ver. 20. by which it appears that they were voluntary, and yet allowed by God, and accepted) ſo many other there were in the Old Teſtament; Abel's oblation, which was not by precept from God, ſay the fathers generally, And even of ſacrifices in general, 'tis obſervable what the antient Author of the Conſtitutions affirms, l. 6. c. 18. that before the golden calf, and their other idolatries, ſacrifices were not commanded, or impoſed on the Jewes, but onely left to their own choiſe, ἐὰν θέλῃς, if they would doe them, they ſhould be accepted, &c. and upon thoſe provocations of theirs, impoſed, ἵνα τοὺς μοχθηροὺς, καὶ ὡσὰν χαλινῷ ἀγχόμενοι ἀπὸ πολυθεΐας πάσης ἐκκόπτωσιν, that theſe weights might traſh, and keep them from idolatry. Such again was the celebration of Purim, the feaſts of the fourth, and fift, and ſeventh, and tenth month, the feaſt of the dedication of the Altar, inſtituted by the Maccabees, and yet obſerved by Chriſt himſelf; So David's deſigne of building the Temple, which though not commanded by God, yet the Prophet Nathan affirms of it, Thou didſt well that it was in thine heart, 1 Kin. 8. 18. So likewiſe the abſtinences and auſterities of the Rechabites, in Jeremy's time, which are ſo commended by God, and yet were ὑπέρμετρα τοῦ νόμου over and above the proportion, that was required in the law. And ſo in the New, Paul's refuſing to receive hire from the Corinthians for all his labour among them, which matter is ſet down at large by him, 1 Cor. 9. The preaching of the Goſpel was committed to him as a truſt, and was under precept, and therefore that was no free-will-offering of his, That is his meaning when he ſaith, εἰ γὰρ ἑκὼν τοῦτο πράσσω, μισθὸν ἔχω, εἰ δὲ ἄκων, οἰκονομίαν πεπίστευμαι, If I doe this as a volunteer, i. e. * If I did preach the Goſpel without any command (and ſo neceſſity) to doe ſo, if I did it of my ſelf freely, this would be rewardable in me, i. e. the very preaching would, without any other more honourable circumſtance to enhaunſe it, be matter of greater reward to me, then it can now 'tis commanded, but if involuntary, i. e. † if my preaching be an act of obedience to a plain command, and ſo neceſſary, v. 16. (and woe to me if I doe it not) and not voluntary in me, then all that can be ſaid of me is, that being truſted with a ſtewardſhip, I doe diſcharge it; and ſo * there is nothing of excellence in this, nothing of contention toward that which is heroical or high. Upon which it follows, Τί οὖν μοί ἐστιν ὁ μισθός; What reward then ſhall be to me? i. e. what in this whole matter ſhall bring in any extrardinary reward to me? To which he anſwers, ἵνα εὐαγγελιζόμενος ἀδάπανον θήσω τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, that preaching the Goſpel, I doe it freely, without making it chargeable to the auditors, εἰς τὸ μὴ καταχρήσασθαι τῇ ἐξουσίᾳ μου, ſo that I make not uſe of my power or liberty which I have in the Goſpel, i. e. of the power of receiving maintenance from others (ſuch as Phœbe and the like, referred to, v. 5.) without putting my ſelf to bodily labour, v. 6. or by any other ſuch means, perfectly juſtifiable for me to uſe, v. 7. 12. The doing of this thus, was that which would yeild him the extraordinary reward. And although this was not obſerved by Cephas and other Apoſtles ver. 5. yet ſure Cephas is not conceived to have ſinned thereby, but 'tis poſitively ſaid

* Εἰ μὲν οὖν ἑκὼν ἐκήρυττον τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, ἐδόκουν ἂν ἴσως ἔχειν τινὰ μισθόν· εἰ δὲ ἄκων, οἰκονομίαν πεπίστευμαι. Theophylact. in 1 Cor. 9. 17.

† Εἰ ἡ κήρυξις ἐστὶν, ἀναγκαῖον ἐστὶν· οὐκ ἐπ' ἐμοὶ τοῦτο ἐστὶν, ἀλλὰ διακονίαν μοι ἐπέτρεψε τοῦτο. Ibid.

ſaid that 'tis lawfull for all v.7,11,14. for Paul as for Cephas and others, though only Paul would not uſe it, v. 12. and accordingly both there, v.15. and after, 2 Cor. 11. 8, 9, 10. he diſtinctly counts, and calls it matter of boaſting, and freewill-offering of his, and ſo 'twas eſteemed by S. Chryſoſtome, τὸ μὲν ἦν διάταγμα, τὸ δὲ ἑκόντος προαίρεσις καὶ ἐλεύθερον, one was a precept, the other a virtuous action of his choice, ἃ μὲ γὰρ ὑπὲρ τὴν ἐντολὴν γίνεται, πολὺν ἔχει τὸν μισθὸν καὶ τοῦτο, for what is done above the command, hath proportionably a plentifull reward. And again of the word neceſſity, that it referres to a command, ὅταν ἀνελεύθερον ᾖ καὶ ἀπρόθυμον ἐν τῷ λαμβάνειν, in oppoſition to the freedome in receiving (i.e. the power to receive v. 12.) forementioned. So again Theophylact, τὸ εὐαγγελίζεσθαι διάταγμά ἐστι, καὶ χρέος, καὶ ἐὰν πληρῶ τοῦτο, οὐδὲν μέγα ποιῶ, &c. Preaching the Goſpel is a command to me, and ſo a debt, and if I doe it, there is no great matter of virtue in it, Τὸ δὲ ἀδιαβόλως κηρύττειν, ὅταν αὐθαίρετος φιλοτιμία, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο καύχημά ἐστι, But to preach without charging them is the honour of my will, and in that reſpect there is place of rejoicing, or, I may glory or rejoice in it. So again he might have abſtained from going up to Jeruſalem, Act. 21. a Prophet told him that bands expected him there v. 11. in which caſe to flie was juſtifiable by Chriſt's ſaying, Mat. 10. 23. yet Paul would needs go up, v.13. Of ſuch ſort of performances as theſe is that of S. Hierome ad Demetriad: Vende omnia, & da pauperibus; non cogo, non impero, ſed propono palmam, præmia oſtendo, Sell all, and give to the poor; I conſtrain not, I command not, but I propoſe a crown, I ſhew thee a reward. Tuum eſt eligere, ſi volueris in agone coronari, It belongs to thee to chooſe, if thou meaneſt to be crowned. And in Epiſt: ad Pammach: Non tibi imponitur neceſſitas, ut voluntas præmium conſequatur, There is no neceſſity impoſed on thee, that the will may obtain reward. And adverſ: Jovinian: Ideo plus amat virgines Chriſtus, quia ſponte tribuunt, quod ſibi non fuerat imperatum, Chriſt therefore doth more value virgins, becauſe they give that freely, which was not commanded them. And adverſ: Helvid: Virgo majoris eſt meriti dum id contemnit, quod ſi fecerit, non delinquit, The Virgin is more rewardable, becauſe ſhe contemns that, which if ſhe indulged her ſelf ſhe offends not. And ſo S. Chryſoſtome on Rom. 8. Οἱ πνευματικοὶ πάντα ποιοῦσιν ἐπιθυμίᾳ καὶ ἡδονῇ, καὶ τοῦτο δηλοῦσι τῷ καὶ ὑπερβαίνειν τὰ διατάγματα, The ſpiritual doe all with appetite and delight, and demonſtrate it in exceeding, or going farther than is commanded. And Gregory the Great, on Job, l. 26. c. 34. Quidam præcepta legis perfectione virtutum tranſcendunt, Some men doe tranſcend precepts, (particular precepts) of the law by perfection of virtues. And ſo Maimonides the ſober Jewiſh Doctor, Ei datur præmium, qui quid injuſſus facit, More Nev: l. 3. c. 17. The reward (meaning the reward above the promiſed wages) is given to him who doth any thing when he is not commanded to doe it. And Greg: Nazianzen hath an expreſſe ſaying to this purpoſe, παλαιὸς ὁ. In our law, ſaith he, ſome things are commanded, and lay a neceſſity upon us, and the not obſerving them brings danger, Others have no neceſſity, but choice, which bring honour and rewards to thoſe that doe them, but no danger to them who obſerve them not. And ſo 'tis apparent by S. Paul, not only in the matter of cœlibacy, 1 Cor. 7. 15. but alſo in his exhortation to the Corinthians, that they would equal the Macedonians in their liberality to the poor Jewes, where he profeſſes not to give them precept, v. 8. but γνώμην, his adviſe or opinion only. In this matter there is an obſervable miſtake, which the Reader is lyable to in our Anglicane Councels, p. 449. Canonibus ſub Eadgaro, Can: 60. where, among other particulars, we find theſe words pe lapad &c. We teach that all Prieſts ſhall blot out all ſuperſtitions of the Gentiles, and we forbid pilpeopþunga, which word, from the ſound of it (wilweorthunga) is there tranſlated in Latine into fictas ad libitum adorationes, and in the margine a reference is made to ἐθελοθρησκεία will-worſhip, Col. 2. But there is a miſtake in that tranſlation, which will be evident to any, by putting theſe two things together, 1. by comparing with this place an ancient Saxon penitential, which repeats thoſe very Canons, where an ancient hand hath expounded thoſe words, by fontis veneratio, the worſhip of wells, or well-worſhip, (the probability of which interpretation will be the greater, not only by obſerving that the Saxon word pil ſignifies a well or fountain, as frequently as it doth voluntatem, will, but alſo becauſe in this preſent Canon he ſpeaks of heathen worſhips of ſtones and trees, to which the rendring this of wells or fountains will be moſt agreeable) 2^dly, by adding to this another Canon in that Penitential, l. 7. c. 22. where there is a prohibition againſt vowing or bringing almes or offerings to any well, or ſtone, or tree, or to any other creature, but only, in God's name, to God's Church, and when we conſider how ordinary it was in former times to worſhip and bring offerings to wells, and fountains, the reaſonableneſs of ſuch prohibitions will be acknowledged. Of which kind are divers injunctions to be ſeen, particularly in the office of Lincolne, of Oliver Sutton, againſt the worſhipping of S. Edward's well without S. Clements, at Oxford, and S. Laurence's well at Petroburgh. So in a Saxon Homily of Biſhop Lupus, ſpeaking of vicious men, by the aſſault of tribulations, brought to ſome ſenſe of their eſtate, he ſaith that they ſuddainly, by the ſeduction of the devil, vow their almes oðþon to pylla, oðþon to ſtane &c. fol. 6. either to well, or ſtone. And in another De Baptiſmo, fol. 20. he warns them againſt luxury, adultery, witchcraft, &c. and then addes nepeoþdian ge pillar &c. and worſhip not wells nor trees &c. for all theſe are idle phantaſmes of the Devil. But this by the way to prevent miſtakings.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. III.

1. If therefore ye beleive the reſurrection of Chriſt and the advantages which come to you by it (among which is that Chriſtian liberty from thoſe abolished Judaical obſervations, c.2.21.) and if ye be, after the example of Chriſt, truly riſen alſo, become Chriſtians indeed, there are then other cares much more material for you to be concerned in, the ſtudy and practiſe of a divine celeſtial life, ſuch (for kind, though not degree) as Chriſt now lives, being by his reſurrection placed next in glory to his father in heaven.

1. IF ye then be riſen with Chriſt, ſeek thoſe things which are above, where Chriſt ſitteth on the right hand of God.]

2. Let this celeſtial purity be the copie for you to tranſcribe, and not theſe terreſtrial groſſer obſervances.

2. Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth.

3. For ye by your baptiſme have vowed to put off your former life, and the life which now remains for you to live, is that which Chriſt lives in heaven; a life of purity here, and of glory hereafter.

3. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Chriſt in God.

4. And if you live that firſt pure Chriſtian life after your divine pattern, then this ye may be ſure of, that when Chriſt comes to judge the world, all that ſhall be found ſo like unto him, ſhall by him be received into the glory which he himſelf enjoyes.

4. When Chriſt, who is our life, ſhall appear, then ſhall ye alſo appear with him in glory.]

5. This may therefore engage you to ſubdue, and bring down all thoſe vitious affections that are in your members, and that ſavour, and deſire nothing but earthly things, I mean adultery, fornication, and all ſorts of unnatural filthineſs, ſuch as is ſo ordinary among idol-worſhippers, the fouleſt parts of it admitted into their religions, See note on Rom.1.h. and on 1 Cor.5.i.

5. Mortifie therefore your members which are upon the earth, fornication, uncleanneſs, * inordinate affection, evil concupiſcence, and † covetouſneſs, which is idolatry:] * paſſion πάθος Inordinate luſting πάθος † inordinate luſting πλεονεξίαν

6. Thoſe ſins which have alwaies brought God's judgments down upon the heathens.

6. For which things ſake the wrath of God cometh on the children of diſobedience.]

7. Of which ſins ye formerly were guilty, when ye converſed among the heathens, and followed their idol-worſhips.

7. In the which ye alſo walked ſome time, when ye lived * in them.] * among ἐν

8. But now that you are Chriſtians, ye are obliged to put off all, not only theſe forenamed, but of the other ſort of affections, all ſuddain inflammation of anger, all riſing of it to any height, all continuance of it upon you, till it be improved into malice, and for the tongue, let not that be guilty of any unſavoury, unclean, or reproachfull diſcourſe.

8. But now you alſo put off all theſe, anger, wrath, malice, † blaſphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth.] † evil ſpeaking βλασφημίαν

9. Never ſuggeſt or ſay any falſe thing to the injury of another (ſee note on Act.5.b.) for this is a principal part of that heathen courſe, which ye have renounced;

9. Lie not * one to another, ſeeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds;] * ag inſtἀλλήλους

10. Quite contrary to that ſtate of renovation which ye have undertaken, and which conſiſts in the practiſe of all Chriſtian virtues, after the image of God, who is all truth.

a. 10. And have put on the new man, which is renewed † in [a] knowledge, after the image of him, that created him.] † unto knowledge εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν

11. With whom as there is no partiality or difference put between men, but all of all ſorts, even the worſt ſorts, are accepted by Chriſt, ſo ought it be with us, toward all men, of what quality ſoever, we muſt ſhew all manner of fidelity, without any falſineſs, or injuſtice (ver. 9.) toward them.

11. Where there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumciſion, nor uncircumciſion, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free: but Chriſt is all, and in all.]

12. See therefore that ye practiſe (as becomes thoſe who are prized and valued by God, that have the gifts of his Spirit poured out, for the converting and ſanctifying of you, and thereby are obliged to all that is moſt excellent) the higheſt degrees of Chriſtian kindneſs and liberality, that ye think very meanly of your ſelves, be very mild, hard to be provoked with injuries, never thinking of revenge,

12. Put on therefore (as the elect of God, holy and beloved) bowels of * mercy, kindneſs, humbleneſs of mind, meekneſs, long-ſuffering,] * compaſſions, bounty, οἰκτιρμοὶ, χρηστότητα,

13. Shewing that readineſſe to be reconciled to them that have wronged you, that ye have found, and which it extremely concerns you to find in Chriſt toward you.

13. Forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel againſt any: even as Chriſt forgave you, ſo alſo doe ye.]

b. 14. And over all put on that excellent Chriſtian grace of charity, that love of others, founded in Chriſt's love to you, and to all others, even his enemies, which will keep you united one to another in an indiſſoluble bond, much more perfectly than any other obligation can doe, or, which is the obligation to all mercifulneſs, whether in giving, or forgiving.

14. And above all theſe things put on charity, which is the bond of [b] perfectneſs.]

15. And let Chriſtian peace and union (ſee Phil. 4. note b.) be the moderator and guide in all your actions, and doe all that may tend to that end, it being the prime thing to which your Chriſtianity obliges you, and your being fellow-members of Chriſt with all others, To which ye may alſo take in that obligation of gratitude to God, who hath been thus mercifull to you, and ſolemnly expects this return from you, to be to others, as he hath been to you.

15. And let the [c] peace of God † rule in your hearts, to the which alſo ye are called in one body, and be ye thankfull.] † be umpire βραβευέτω

16. Let the doctrine of the Goſpel continue and abide in you, and bring forth abundant fruit, in all actions of ſpiritual wiſdome, i. e. piety, Of this ſort is the adviſing and admoniſhing

16. Let the word of God dwell in you richly in all wiſdome, teaching and admoniſhing one another in pſalms and hymns and ſpiritual ſongs, ſinging with grace in your hearts to the Lord.]

monishing of others, in all things wherein ye can be helpfull to them, and such is singing in a pious Christian manner, (see Ephes. 5. c.) i.e. blessing and praising God (see Mat. 14. c.) heartily and affectionately, in all the severall waies usual to that purpose (see Ephes. 5. 19.)

17. And whatsoever ye doe in word or deed, doe all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the father by him.] 17. And whatsoever ye doe or speak, let it be with acknowledgment of the great mercies of Christ to you, that hath enabled you to doe, whatever it is, and for this mercy reached out in him, let God the father have the honour and thanks.

18. Wives, submit your selves unto your own husbands, as it is fit in the Lord.] 18. Let the wives pay fitting subjection to their husbands, and count it their Christian duty to doe so.

19. Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them. 19. And upon the same account let the husbands be kind to their wives, and not provoke them by unkind behaviour.

20. Children, obey your parents in all things, for this is well pleasing unto the Lord.] 20. So again children are by their Christianity so farre from being set free from their obedience to their parents in any matter, that they are by that very relation obliged to it.

21. Fathers, * provoke not your children to anger, lest they be discouraged.] 21. The parents on the other side are taught their duty toward their children, not to rate or brawle with them, nor to reprove them causlesly, lest that be a discouragement to them. d.

22. Servants, obey in all things your masters according to the flesh: not with eye-service, as men-pleasers, but in singleness of heart, fearing God.] 22. Servants, of what sort soever, must pay obedience to those, which, according to the lawes of men, have the rule over them, and not pretend any liberty from Christ to doe otherwise, and their obedience must be performed sincerely for conscience sake to God, and not only in those things whereto the masters eye can reach.

23. And whatsoever ye doe, doe it heartily, as † to the Lord, and not unto men:] 23. And in all your services doe heartily and willingly what is required of you, without complaining or murmuring, knowing that your obedience to your masters is a duty to God:

24. Knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance, for ye serve the Lord Christ.] 24. From whom consequently you shall receive your reward, that portion which belongs to you, for Christ is a master, that will not suffer any service performed on his command to be unrewarded.

25. But he that doth wrong, shall receive for the wrong that he hath done; and there is no respect of persons.] 25. As on the other side, he that doth any thing amisse, against the law of Christ, whether servant toward master, or master toward servant, shall not escape punishment by being a Christian, God shall deal with him according to the rules of justice, whatsoever he is, and neither favour the servants pretensions against the master, nor the masters against the servants.

Notes on Chap. III.

2. εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν

What εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν] signifies here is somewhat uncertain; If the preposition εἰς be taken, by an Hebraisme, for ἐν in or by, then it denotes the means of working our renovation, the knowledge of the Gospel, in which our pattern is set, according to which we are to form our lives for the future, and this is generally expressed by ἐπίγνωσις ἀληθείας, the acknowledgment of the truth, 1 Tim. 2. 4. Tit. 1. 1. Heb. 10. 26. But it is possible also that εἰς] being taken in the proper notion of it, ἐπίγνωσις may be set in opposition, or by way of superaddition to γνῶσις knowledge, which the Gnosticks boasted of, and from whence they had their name, and with it joyned all vitious corrupt practises; whereupon he requires his Colossians to forsake those sins, and to be renewed to that which the Gnosticks have not attained to, εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν to acknowledgment, or discerning, i. e. the experimental, practical knowledge of God's goodnesse to us in regenerating (which is more then the first creating) us after his own image, to live according to the divine pattern, which he hath set us.

b. Σύνδεσμος τελειότητος

Σύνδεσμος τελειότητος, bond of perfectness, may be by an hypallage, the most perfect bond; But it may be also bond of perfectness in that notion that perfect Mat. 5. 48. is all one with merciful, Lu. 6. 36. for so the Christian charity, that is a transcript of Christ's love to us, is a conspiration or meeting together (so σύνδεσμος may signifie, see note on Act. 8. c.) of all mercifulness, or else an obligation to it.

c. προκεῖται

Βραβεῖον, as it is an agonistical word for the ἀθλητικὸς ἆθλος the reward of the Conqueror, hath been already spoken of, Hence the βραβευταὶ are the διαιτηταὶ ἀγώνος, they that adjudge and give this reward to those to whom it belongs, the rulers or administrators of the combat, and they that decide all controversies about it, Hence is the word used for διαλλακτὴς, saith Phavorinus, an umpire or daies-man, that reconciles doubts or differences between any, and accordingly βραβεύειν, saith he, (referring, as I conceive, to this place) μεσιτεύειν, μεσοῦσθαι, διαιτᾶσθαι, and so here, let the peace of God, that peaceable mindedness that Christ commandeth you, Mat. 5. be the umpire to compose all differences between you and other men.

d. Ἐπαισχύνεται

Ἐπαισχύνεται is ὕβρεις, contumely, saith Phavorinus, and ἐπαισχύνειν, κακολογίαν δηλοῖ παρ' Ὁμήρῳ it signifies evil speaking in Homer, and πᾶς ἐπαισχυσμὸς ἐκ χαλεπῶν μύθων γίνεται δηλοῖ, it consists in hard or bitter words. The word signifies contumelious, harsh language, and that is most likely to be the meaning here, because of the mention of the ἀνδρῶσιν, that is here added, such words in parents being apt to discourage children.

CHAP. IV.

Paraphraſe.

1. You that are maſters deal juſtly and indifferently with your ſervants, require no more than they be able to perform, give them what is fit for them, reward the more diligent with more kindneſs, and the ſame dealing that you deſire to receive from God, doe you ſhew to them.

1. MAſters, * give unto your ſervants, that which is juſt and equal, knowing that ye alſo have a maſter in heaven.]

2. Have your daily, conſtant, frequent houres of prayer, and uſe all diligence to have your hearts intent upon that performance, and with petitions for ſupply of your wants, joyn your thankfull acknowledgments for what ye have received.

3. And let this be one conſtant requeſt in your prayers, that God will give me plentifull opportunities, and liberty publickly to preach the Goſpel, which, contrary to the expectation of the world, is now ſent to the Gentiles (for the preaching to whom I am in bonds at this time,)

3. Withall praying alſo for us, that God would open unto us a dore of utterance, to * ſpeak the myſtery of Chriſt, for which I am alſo in bonds,

5. Behave your ſelves with all Chriſtian circumſpection in reſpect of the heathens among whom ye live, that ye neither be corrupted by their ſenſual baits, nor give them any matter of ſcandal or averſion to the faith, but conſidering the danger of your preſent condition, apply your ſelves to it as circumſpectly, and as prudently as ye can, ſee note on Ephel. 5. c.

5. Walk in wiſdome toward them that are without, redeeming the time.]

6. Let your diſcourſe be alwaies gracious, pure, and Chriſtian, (ſee note on Epheſ. 5. c.) and, as ſavoury on one ſide, ſo alſo diſcreet and ſeaſonable ſeaſoned with prudence that may make it wholſome to the bearers, accommodating it dexterouſly, and skilfully to every mans condition and capacity and wants.

6. Let your ſpeech be alway with grace, ſeaſoned with ſalt, that ye may know how ye ought to anſwer every man.]

7. All things wherein I am concerned ſhall be declared to you by Tychicus, one that is employed by me, as an aſſiſtant, and intruſted (for his approved fidelity) in preaching the Goſpel to thoſe I cannot come to :

12. Epaphras, that preached the Goſpel among you c. 1. 7. and is now elſwhere performing ſervice to Chriſt, wiſhes you all happineſs, and daily praies earneſtly to Chriſt for you, that ye may continue undefiled from the ſeduction of hereticks, and grow to a full maturity of Chriſtian knowledge and practiſe.

18. This foregoing Epiſtle being written by a Scribe or Amanuenſis, I now conclude it with mine own hand, and thereby ſalute you, and commend my love unto you. And particularly I would have you remember, that I am perſecuted, and now impriſoned for preaching to the Gentiles the Goſpel of Chriſt, and doe ye prepare your ſelves that ye may be armed for the like, and be kind to me, who am ſo kind to you Gentiles, as to ſuffer for you.

18. * The ſalutation by the hand of me Paul. Remember my bonds.] Grace be with you. Amen.

* The ſalutation of Paul by my own hand, ὁ ἀσπασμὸς τῇ ἐμῇ χειρὶ Παύλου Written from Rome to the Coloſſians by Tychicus and Oneſimus.

If

a. ἡ ἐκ Λαοδικείας

If the right reading in this place be ἡ ἐκ Λαοδικείας, that from Laodicea, then the meaning of it may be, That Epistle which the Laodiceans have received, doe you, when you send them a copie of this, require a copie of, and when you have received it, read it in your assembly. But if ἡ Λαοδικείας without ἐκ, be the truer reading, then it must be rendred that of Laodicea, noting again some Epistle sent to them, and in their possession, according to that of the civil law, L. si Epistolam. D. de acquir: Rer: domin: Litera ejus sunt cujus tabellario sunt tradita, multò magis ubi sunt reddita, An Epistle is his to whose messenger 'tis delivered, especially when 'tis received by him. And so which way soever it is, it referres to some Epistle sent to the Laodiceans, which Tertullian against Marcion seems to affirm of that Epistle, which is now inscribed to the Ephesians, that a copie of it was written to the Laodiceans, which, if it were done by S. Paul, is yet very reasonable to imagine to be sent from Ephesus to them, For Ephesus being the chief Metropolis of Asia; and Laodicea being a Church within that circuit, as appears Rev. 1. 11. as the Epistle written to the Corinthians belonged to all the Churches of Achaia 2 Cor. 1. 1. and so no doubt was copied out, and communicated to them, And as the letter from the Councel of Jerusalem to the Church of Antioch, did belong also to all Syria and Cilicia, and was by Paul communicated to all the Churches thereof, Act. 16. 4. And as the Epistles to the Thessalonians are said to belong also to Philippi, another Metropolis of Macedonia (And thereupon Polycarpe in his Epistle to the Philippians, mentions ἐπιστολαὶ) Epistles in the plural, which Paul had sent to them, whereas there is but one now known to be inscribed to the Philippians) And lastly as here the Epistle to the Colossians is expresly directed to be communicated to the Laodiceans, and this to be sent from Laodicea to Colosse, So there is no difficulty to conceive that the Epistle to the Ephesians was by them communicated (as by Paul meant) to the Laodiceans also, and so may fitly be called ἡ ἐκ Λαοδικείας, the Epistle of Laodicea, or which the Church of Laodicea had received.

It is the opinion of some that Epaphras was at this time Bishop of Colosse, but imprisoned at Rome with Paul, and that Archippus did now in his absence supply his place. That Epaphras was about this time prisoner at Rome is concluded probably by Philem. 23. where he calls him συναιχμάλωτος his fellow-prisoner, (for that that Epistle to Philemon and this were written from Rome about the same time, will be conjectured by the naming Timothy at the beginning, and all the same persons, (save onely Justus) as Epaphras, Marcus, Aristarchus, Demas, Lucas, at the end of both of them) but that he was then Bishop of Colosse appeareth not, onely he is here said ver. 12. to be ἐξ ὑμῶν, εἷς δοῦλος Χριστοῦ, One of them, or that came from them, a servant of Christ, that heartily prayed for, and had great kindness toward them. But all this may well belong to him, as the person, who, by Commission from Paul, had preached the Gospel to them, and so being their spiritual father might be allowed to love them passionately, and to be very sollicitous of their prospering; And then it will be more probable that Archippus should be their Bishop, Of whom it is here affirmed, that he had received διακονίαν ἐν Κυρίῳ, a Ministry in the Lord; Where it is certain that the διακονία ministry] signifies an office in the Church, which he is to take care that he perform, And it is no way necessary, that it should denote the inferior office of Deacon, (Or if it did, that would not sufficiently qualifie him to supply the Bishops, or Rulers place, whose attendant the Deacon was) but in a greater Latitude the Episcopal function, which being an authority and presidency over the flock, is yet, like that of a Pastor, a laborious one, to attend, and wait on them, as Christ, who being the Lord (Κύριος) of his disciples, was yet as the ὁ διακονῶν he that ministred unto them, washing their feet &c. and so καλὸν ἔργον, a good work 1 Tim. 3. 1. i.e. an office of task and ministry.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAVL THE APOSTLE TO THE THESSALONI'ANS.

2. THat the Epiſtles to the Theſſalonians, though placed laſt of all thoſe which were written to whole Churches, were firſt in order of writing, hath been ſaid note b. on the Inſcription of the Epiſtle to the Romans. And the time, and place of writing this are perhaps diſcoverable, by comparing one paſſage 1 Theſſ. 3. 6. with Act. 18. 5. He had ſent Timothy from Athens to encourage, and confirm them, c. 3. 1, 2. and that with ſome impatience to hear of them v. 5. [And when Timothy now came to us from you, and told us the good newes of your faith, and love v. 6. we were comforted &c.] Now the ſtory of this we have diſtinctly in the Acts; Paul had preached at Theſſalonica Act. 17. 2. and ſome of them, i.e. of the Jewes in the Synagogue there, v. 1. and many others of the Gentile inhabitants v. 4. (referred to 1 Theſſ. 1. 10) were perſwaded, i.e. received the faith, v. 4. But upon a perſecution raiſed by others of the Jewes, and their proſelytes, he, and Silas, (and Timotheus, it ſeems v. 14.) were driven thence, and came to Berœa, and being followed thither by thoſe perſecuters, Paul went to the ſea, and from thence to Athens, v. 14, 15. and Silas, and Timotheus, which are ſaid to be left at Berœa, c. 17. 14. are warned to make all haſte to him, v. 15. And at Athens Paul expects them v. 16. And though it be not mentioned in the ſtory, yet it is to be ſuppoſed, that they came thither to him, and from thence were diſpatcht to Theſſalonica, Paul being content to ſtay at Athens alone, out of his earneſt deſire to confirm them by this diſpatch, and to hear from them, which is the ſumme of ch. 3. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. From Theſſalonica they return to him and find him at Corinth Act. 18. 5. (for that is the meaning of ἀπὸ Μακεδονίας there, from Macedonia, of which Theſſalonica was a Metropolis) and after this return of Timotheus, it is that S. Paul writes this Epiſtle, for elſe he could not mention it, as he doth ch. 3. 6. And conſequently, the place, from whence this, (and ſo alſo the other Epiſtle) was written to them, may moſt probably ſeem to be Corinth, where he is ſaid to have ſtayed a year and ſix months Act. 18. 11. Or if the ſubſcription be authentick, which dates it from Athens, it muſt be at ſome other time of his being at Athens, and not at that, Act. 17. (before his coming to Corinth) Paul being gone from thence before Timotheus came to him. And this gives us an evidence by the way that Silas, and Silvanus are all one, he that under the name of Silas is joyned with Paul, Act. 17. 4. and with Timotheus v. 15. being under the name of Silvanus, joyned with Paul and Timotheus in the inſcription of this Epiſtle, Paul and Silvanus and Timotheus, &c. ch. 1. 1. By this alſo the time of the writing this is concluſible, viz: about his firſt preaching at Corinth, which is placed by Chronologers in the fiftieth year of Chriſt, at the time of the expulſion of the Jewes from Rome by Claudius (Act. 18. 2.) i. e. in the ninth of his reign, as Oroſius concludes out of Joſephus. This being thus farre cleared, we cannot but diſcern the occaſion of writing this Epiſtle, viz: the perſecutions of thoſe that received the faith, and of Paul that preacht it among them, which was brought upon them by the Jewes (and their Proſelytes) that beleived not, in Theſſalonica, and through all Macedonia; He had, it ſeems, at the firſt preaching the Goſpel unto them, told them what they were to expect, very ſharp perſecutions (ch. 3. 4.) from the Jewes, and Judaizers, their Proſelytes, exaſperated by them, but withall, he had adverniſed them, what fate ſhould ſhortly befall theſe obdurate Jewes, and their adherents, viz: that Chriſt ſhould act revenge upon them (in an eminent manner,) from heaven, by that power, by which he roſe from the dead, and then deliver them from the oppreſſions they were under, and all that their enemies malice, or their own fears could repreſent unto them, c. 1. 10. & c. 2. 15, 16. & c. 5. 1. And this was the occaſion of all that he after ſaith, 2 Theſſ. 2. of the coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the day of Chriſt, v. 1, 2. &c. 1. of which ſaith he, v. 5. he had told them, when he was with them, All which was exactly fulfilled in the perſecutions brought on the Chriſtians by the Jewes, and Gnoſticks, and the deſtructions, that ſoon after attended upon them; And this was by him very fitly inſiſted on about this time, Simon Magus having already (ſoon after the beginning of Claudius's reign, as Euſebius ſets it, l. 2. c. 13.) ſet himſelf up at Rome (and a ſtatue erected to him,) as the Supreme God, and ſo being already capable of the titles of θεὸς ὑπάρχων, and ἐπὶ πάντων θεὸς, &c. he that ſets himſelf up above all that is called God; But being by the preaching of Peter (mentioned by * Euſebius, † S. Jerome, and * Oroſius) put to ſhame, and his power extinguiſht there at that time, (ὑπὸ τῆς Πέτρου ἀποστολῆς καὶ δυνάμεως καταλυθεὶς πάμπαν, ſaith Euſebius) it was ſome time, before he got up again, and yet longer before theſe Gnoſticks his followers found it ſeaſonable to break out in profeſt hoſtility againſt the Orthodox Chriſtians, which is called the Revealing of this man of ſin, 2 Theſſ. 2. 3.

What

What is ſaid in theſe Epiſtles, on this ſubject, was fitly deſigned to confirm the beleivers in Macedonia, that the perſecutions, which were thus ſtirred up among them, and the baits of carnality, and worldly advantages offered them, might not delude, or gain in upon them.

CHAP. I.

Paraphraſe.

1. PAVL and Silvanus and Timotheus unto the Church of the Theſſalonians, which is in God the father, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt: Grace be unto you and peace from God our father, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.]

1. Paul the Apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, and thoſe two, Silvanus & Timotheus, which came along with me, as companions and partners of my labours in Macedonia, to that Aſſembly of Chriſtians that reſide in, and appertain to Theſſalonica, that Metropolis of Macedonia, which, by the grace of God, and Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt preached by me, have been called and converted to the faith, we moſt kindly ſalute you, and with all divine mercy and proſperity to you.

2. We give thanks to God alwaies for you all, making mention of you in our prayers,

3. Remembring without ceaſing your work of faith, and labour of love, and patience of hope in our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in the ſight of God and our father:] 3. Bleſſing God for that obedience, which your faith, that induſtry, which your love, that indurance and conſtancy, which your hope in Chriſt hath wrought in you, ſuch as is required of you, and will be acceptable in the ſight of God:

4. Knowing, brethren beloved, your election of God.] 4. Knowing, my beloved brethren, the ſpeciall favour of God in decreeing to beſtow the Goſpel on you, to reveal Chriſt to you, being Gentiles, above that which you had reaſon to expect or hope.

* That 'Ον † fulneſs ἀπογραφὴ ſee Col 2. 2. * became ἐγενήθημεν

5. * For our Goſpel came not unto you in word onely, but alſo in power and in the Holy Ghoſt, and in much † aſſurance, as ye know what manner of men we * were among you for your ſake.] 5. In conſequence to which it was that I was appointed by God in a viſion, Act. 16. 9. to come and preach unto you, and accordingly I did, Act. 17. 1. and that with miracles, and extraordinary gifts, (ſee note on 1 Cor. 2. 4.) and matter of abundant conviction, as you know how we behaved our ſelves toward you, that we might work, and gain you to Chriſt.

6. And ye became † followers of us, and of the Lord, having received the word in much affliction, with joy of the Holy Ghoſt:] 6. And ye very cheerfully and readily received us, being content to ſuffer as the Apoſtles and Chriſt had done before you, embracing the Goſpel, though accompanied with perſecution, with moſt Chriſtian joy.

7. So that ye were enſamples to all that beleive in Macedonia and Achaia.] 7. And this in ſo eminent a manner, that your example had an happy influence, raiſed an emulation in all the Chriſtians of the other cities of Macedonia, and alſo of Greece, as Corinth, and Athens.

* hath gone forth ἐξελήλυθεν

8. For from you ſounded out the word of the Lord, not onely in Macedonia and Achaia, but alſo in every place your faith to Godward * is ſpread abroad, ſo that we need not to ſpeak any thing.] 8. For from the plantation and good ſucceſs of the Goſpel among you, it was, that many others in thoſe places were inclined to receive the faith, and ſo your converſion being ſo eminently taken notice of, I need ſay no more in praiſe or congratulation of it.

9. For they themſelves † ſhew of us, what manner of entring in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from Idols, to ſerve the living and true God,] 9. Every man's mouth being full of it, how readily we were entertained by you, and how really and effectually ye converted from heatheniſme to Chriſtianity,

10. And to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raiſed from the dead, even Jeſus, which delivered us from the wrath to come.] 10. In full beleif in Chriſt, and aſſurance of hope, that Chriſt, that was by God's infinite power raiſed from the dead, will protect and deliver his faithfull ſervants from that vengeance which will finally and eternally involve all others, An eſſay of which vengeance and deliverance, he will ere long ſhew on the perſecutors, and the beleivers, which are now perſecuted by them.

CHAP. II.

Paraphraſe.

1. FOR your ſelves, brethren, know our entrance in unto you, that it was not * [a] in vain.] 1. For ye, brethren, without my affirming it, know ſufficiently that our coming and preaching, was farre from being deceitfull, or to any treacherous aime of advantage or gain upon you. a.

2. But even after that we had ſuffered before, and were ſhamefully intreated, as ye know, at Philippi, we were bold in our God to ſpeak unto you the Goſpel of God with much [b] contention.] 2. But having had diſcouragements ſufficient at Philippi, moſt reproachfully handled there, we yet took courage to proceed (ſee note on Joh. 7. 2.) and came to your city, and preached the Goſpel there, though we were very much oppoſed there alſo. b

3. For our † exhortation was not of [c] deceit, nor of uncleanneſs, nor in guile:] 3. For my preaching the Goſpel unto you was not to ſeduce any, nor to corrupt any, (as the Gnoſticks doe their converts) nor out of any wily worldly end, or deſigne. c.

* have been approv'd by God δεδοκιμάσμεθα ſee 1 Thes. 2. 4.

4. But as we * were allowed of God to be put in truſt with the Goſpel, even ſo we ſpeak, not as pleaſing men, but God, which trieth our hearts.] 4. But as God was pleaſed to chooſe me to be an Apoſtle, to think me meet for ſo great a truſt, ſo have I indevoured to approve my ſelf to God in the diſcharge charge of it, not mentioning thoſe things to you, which you were likely to be moſt pleaſed with (for I knew that the Goſpel, which coſt me ſo many perſecutions, would coſt you ſo too, and that, requiring all purity, it hath nothing in it grateful to fleſh and blood) but thoſe, which are moſt likely to approve us all to God, which approveth nothing but purity and ſincerity.

d. e. 5. For I beleive no man ever accuſed me of flattering you with pleaſing doctrines (as the Gnoſticks doe) or of indulging to you any kind of inordinate luſt or filthineſs v.3. (ſee note on Rom.1. h.) This you know, and God is witneſs that I was farre from being guilty of.

5. For neither at any time * [d] uſed we flattering words, as ye know, † nor a [e] cloak of covetouſneſs, God is witneſſe.]

* were we ſpoken of for flattering. † nor accuſed of inordinate deſire

f. 6. Neither did we deſire to appear before you or others as perſons of any great authority, which yet we had, and might have exerciſed, as Apoſtles of Chriſt.

6. Nor of men ſought we glory, neither of you, nor yet of others, when we might have * been [f] burthenſome as the Apoſtles of Chriſt.]

* uſed ſeverity

7. But I have ſtill dealt with you in all mildneſs and tenderneſs imaginable, the ſame which is diſcernible in a nurſe to a child, of which, by feeding and making much of him, ſhe becomes extremely fond.

7. But we were gentle among you, even as a nurſe cheriſheth † her children:]

† her own

8. In like manner I confeſſe my ſelf to have an huge tenderneſs and fondneſs of love toward you, ſo that now having done you that greateſt good, preached the Goſpel to you, and nouriſht you up in the faith, I have nothing too dear for you, not my life it ſelf, (which is frequently called the ſoul in theſe books, ſee note on ch. 5. f.) if it may ſtand you in any ſtead.

8. So * being affectionately deſirous of you, we † were willing to have imparted unto you, not the Goſpel of God onely, but alſo our own ſouls, becauſe ye were dear unto us.]

* being in love ὁμειρόμενοι † are willing εὐδοκοῦμεν

9. An evidence of which I then gave you, and ye cannot but remember it, how that, beſide the ſufferings which I bare (ſee note b.) I alwaies laboured in my trade extremely hard, that ſo I might preach the Goſpel to you, and yet not put you to charges.

9. For ye remember, brethren, our * labour and travell: for labouring night and day, becauſe we would not be chargeable unto any of you, we preached unto you the Goſpel of God.]

* toil and labour κόπον καὶ μόχθον

10. You, I ſay, know and can witneſs, and I doubt not of God's teſtimony, how I and the reſt of us, Silvanus and Timothy, have behaved our ſelves toward you that have received the faith, in the performance of all duties toward God and man, ſo as we cannot be blamed or charged by any:

10. Ye are witneſſes and God alſo, how holily and juſtly and unblameably we behaved our ſelves among you that beleive:]

11. Dealing with you as a father doth with his own children, every one of you ſingle, as if every one of you were my child, calling upon you to doe your duty, and cheering you up to perſevere againſt all diſcouragements,

11. As you know how we exhorted, and comforted, and charged every one of you (as a father doth his children)]

12. And conjuring you by all the obligations imaginable, that your converſation ſhould be ſome way proportionable to what God hath done for you in calling you to the honour and privilege of being Chriſtians here, and, if you continue conſtant in the faith, glorified ſaints in heaven.

12. That ye would walk worthy of God, who hath called you unto his kingdome and glory.]

13. And herein we have matter of continual joy and thankſgiving to God on your behalf, that when we thus preached the Goſpel to you, ye received it readily, not as any doctrine of ours, but as the Goſpel of Chriſt ſent by God from heaven, and which being thus embraced and beleived by you, hath alſo attained that end, that perfection, that accompliſhment among you, which every where belongs to it, viz: to bring on them that embrace it, the honour of being perſecuted for it, and glorifying God by that means, and withall to give them ſtrength to enable them to bear it Chriſtianly.

13. For this cauſe alſo thank we God without ceaſing, † becauſe when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but (as it is in truth) the word of God, which * is effectually worketh alſo in you that beleive.]

† that is

* is accompliſhed among you

14. For as it fell out with the Churches of Chriſt in Judæa, all that beleived and held faſt to Chriſt have ſtill been perſecuted by the unbeleiving Jewes, ſo hath it fallen out to you, your own countrey-men the unbeleiving Jewes among you, have in like manner perſecuted you, as the Jewiſh unbeleivers have perſecuted the Chriſtian Jewes.

14. For ye, brethren, became followers of the Churches of God, which in Judæa are in Chriſt Jeſus: for ye alſo have ſuffered like things of your own [h] countreymen, even as they have of the Jewes,]

15. And this which I ſay of the Jewes in Judæa was practiſed by them on Chriſt himſelf, and before him on the prophets ſent unto them, Mat. 23.37. and now is accordingly fallen on us, It being reaſonable that they which have caſt off obedience to God ſhould perſecute all men that come to tell them of their duty.

15. Who both killed the Lord Jeſus and their own prophets, and have perſecuted us; and they pleaſe not God, and are contrary to all men:]

16. And this generally is the ground of their quarrel to us, that, in ſpight of their prohibition, we preach to the Gentiles, uſe means that they might repent of their Idolatries &c. by which, and the former things, the Jewes doe ſo fill up the meaſure of their ſins, that the wrath of God to the utter deſtruction of them, is now come out upon them, already denounced, and within a very little while moſt certain to overtake them.

16. Forbidding us to ſpeak to the Gentiles, that they might be ſaved, to fill up their ſins alway: for the wrath † is come upon them to the uttermoſt.]

† hath come haſtily upon them to the end, ἔφθασεν εἰς τέλος

17. And being detained from coming to you perſonally, we are nevertheleſſe very kind to you, and heartily deſire and wiſh for an opportunity of viſiting you.

17. But we, brethren, being taken from you for a ſhort time, * in preſence, not in heart, endevoured the more abundantly to ſee your face with great deſire.]

* in perſon προσώπῳ

18. Wherefore

18. Wherefore we would have come unto you, (even I Paul) once and again, but Satan hindred us.] 18. And accordingly I Paul had once or twice a full resolution to visit you, but by my imprisonment at Rome, I was kept from coming unto you.

19. For what is our hope, our joy, our i crown of rejoicing? are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming?] 19. For what greater matter of hope of a reward from God at the day of doom, and consequently of present rejoicing, can I have? what greater ornament of which I could boast, than the good successe of the Gospel which I have preached among you? i.

20. For ye are our glory and joy.] 20. For you are a prime congregation of Christians (as Philippi another, Phil. 4.1.) wholly converted by me, and observable for very great proficiency in the faith, and endurance of persecutions for it, and therefore I cannot but rejoice, and even boast of you.

Notes on Chap. II.

2. Κενὴ

The word κενὴ empty, idle, vain] is known to be proportionable to the Hebrew שוא, which (in the third Commandment and many other places) being rendred vain, doth yet signifie false, viz. empty or void of truth. And so here being applied to S. Paul's εἴσοδος entrance unto them, i. e. his first preaching the Gospel to them, it doth not signifie the unaffectualness of it, or want of success among them, for that he had spoken of, c. 1. 9. but, as the consequents here manifest, the fallaciousness or treacherousness of his aime in coming, which that it was not imputable to him he here proves v. 2. by remembring them of the entertainment which he found at Philippi very farre from such as would encourage a worldly designer from going any farther, nothing but persecution and tribulations.

b. Ἀγὼν

The word ἀγὼν strife or contention may be taken in an active or in a passive sense, i. e. either for labour, or sufferance, both in an high degree. In the former sense it is, when Christ commands us ἀγωνίζεσθε, to strive to enter in at the straight gate, i. e. to be very diligent & industrious. In the latter it is Heb. 12. 1. being joyned with ὑπομονὴ sufferance, and persevering, and afflictions, mentioned before c. 11. and after v. 2. &c. so Phil. 1. 30. & Col. 1. 29. where ἀγωνιζόμενος, striving, is bearing, suffering afflictions, and so more fit to be joyned with κοπῶ toyling, or suffering hardship there, for so κόπος signifies, the toile or pains in bearing, as μόχθος in doing, ver. 9. So 1 Tim. 4. 10. where we ordinarily read [ὀνειδιζόμεθα suffer reproaches] the King's MS. reads ἀγωνιζόμεθα, we combat, i. e. suffer persecutions, (which is joyned with κοπιῶμεν also) which they that doe, doe it in hope, and trust in the living God, which can, and will reward all their sufferings. And this is agreeable to the nature of the agones, combats, or games among the Grecians, whereof the Poet saith, Multa tulit fecitque, It is made up of doing and suffering both. And so we have ἄθλησιν παθημάτων, combat of sufferings Heb. 10. 32. and of the women Phil. 4. 3. αἵτινες ἐν τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ συνήθλησάν μοι, which combatted or contended, i. e. suffered persecutions together with me in the Gospel. And so here it is to be taken in this latter sense, though that also added to the former, endurance and diligence both, great industry and labour in preaching the Gospel to them, and withall great persecution for so doing. For so it is in the beginning of the verse προπαθόντες, καὶ ὑβρισθέντες sufferings and contumelious, reproachfull usage, such are scourgings &c. and thus Phil. 1. 30. τὸν αὐτὸν ἀγῶνα, the same combat, is the enduring persecution, expressed by συναθλοῦντες τῇ πίστει ver. 27. the word used in the agones. So 2 Tim. 4. 7. the fight or combat seems to referre to that, which he had then lately past through at Rome, before Nero's tribunal, v. 16, 17.

Κόπος Μόχθος

That πλάνη, which signifies deceit, errour, is used not onely passively for being deceived by others, but especially actively for deceiving and seducing others, will appear at large, note on Jude b. And so also that in the Epistles it referres especially to these grand seducers that were then a foot, so rife in the Churches, the Gnosticks, whose heresie being accompanied with so much uncleanness and carnality, wheresoever the πλάνη or seduction is joyned with words that expresse or intimate that, there is great reason thus to interpret it. And accordingly here ἀκαθαρσία uncleanness (and that word signifies all manner of unnatural lusts) being subjoined to πλάνη deceit or seduction, it must be thought to referre to these practises of those seducing hereticks, to whom S. Paul desireth to oppose his own dealing among them, at once vindicating his own simplicity and uprightness, and accusing them for the contrary; He came meerly to convert them from all the villanies that they, while they were Idolaters, had lived in, and doing so, suffered great hardship of persecutions, but they (which took sure care not to be persecuted) infused into them all false heretical doctrines and corrupt practises, uncleanness, and villany. They slily stole in ἐν δόλῳ in cunning, but he παῤῥησιάζόμεθα v. 2. took all boldness and confidence to preach publickly the Gospel unto them. c. Πλάνη

Λόγος signifies talk, discourse of men, and so ἐν λόγῳ εἶναι to be on the tongues of men, and ἐν λόγῳ κολακείας γενέσθαι, to be talked of for flattery, to be accused by men for this fault. d. Λόγος

Πρόφασις signifies not only an occasion and pretense, but also an accusation or charge against any. So saith Phavorinus, πρόφασις, αἰτία, ἔφοδος, 'tis a charge, an occasion against any, and again πρόφασις ἐνδοξότερος λόγος ἐπὶ κατηγορίᾳ τινός, a long specious oration in accusation of any man, and therefore the rendring προφασίζω by λοιδορῶ ἐκκόπτω, may be a false print for ἐγκόπτω accuso, for that will best agree with προφέρομαι, ἐπιλογίζομαι, ὑπονοῶ, words that note accusing & suspecting, that went before. And so again πρόφασις ἢ ἀληθὴς ἢ ψευδὴς αἰτία, it is either a true or false accusation. So מליצות רברים are clancular depravings of men's reputations, raising suspicions of them, so Dan. 6. 4. ἐζήτουν πρόφασιν εὑρεῖν κατὰ τοῦ Δανιὴλ, they sought some occasion, i. e. accusation against Daniel. As for the πλεονεξία that is joyned with it, that signifies sometimes unnatural lusts and filthiness, as hath been formerly shewed, note on Rom. 1. h. and so it seems to signifie here, and to answer ἀκαθαρσία uncleanness v. 3. so notorious among the Gnosticks, which were the pest of Christianity at that time. Πρόφασις

f. Βάρος weight is here taken for the censures of the Church, the exercise of that Apostolical authority and severity. So 2 Cor. 10. 10. βαρεῖαι βαρεῖαι letters, that had a great deale of weight, i. e. severity, threatning of censures, &c. and so ἐν βάρει εἶναι to light heavy upon them, to use severity toward them (which some desired to seem to doe out of vanity and ambition) and is here set opposit to the ἤπιοι ἐγενήθημεν, we became gentle, the tender usage of a nurse v. 7. and the spirit of meekness, 1 Cor. 4. 21.

g. That ἐνεργεῖται is to be rendred in a passive not active sense, and that it signifies πληροῦσθαι to be perfected, or accomplished, hath been largely shewn, note on Gal. 5. b. But to what the accomplishment of the word, or Gospell here referres particularly, must be concluded from v. 14. There the proof is set down of that which is here affirmed, and that with the particle For, ὑμεῖς γὰρ For you, &c. and therefore in all reason that must interpret this, Now that which is there mention'd, is the Thessalonians suffering persecution, after the manner, that other Christians had done before them, which as it is an evidence of their constancy in the Faith, so is that of their proficiency to the highest degree of perfection, which this life is capable of. And besides it being foretold by Christ, that they which will receive the faith, and live according to his prescriptions, shall suffer persecutions, their sufferings are a completion of that word of his.

h. Συμφυλέται men of the same tribe, or race, or countrey, with the Thessalonian Christians, to whom he writes, may not be resolved to be the heathen inhabitants of that city or countrey, but the unconverted Jewes, which were dispersed there, For at the Apostles coming to that city, Act. 17. the first thing we read of there, is a synagogue of the Jewes, v. 1. thither Paul went unto them, i. e. to the Jewes, and preacht Christ unto them, and some of them received the faith, and of devout Greekes, or Gentile Proselytes a great multitude, &c. v. 4. And immediatly the unbelieving Jews, making use of the officers of the courts of the city, raised a tumult against them v. 5. and the Apostle and Silas escaping, they seised upon Jason and other brethren, i. e. Christians, that had received the faith, and haled them to the magistrates of the city, & accused them for doing contrary to Cæsars orders, v. 7. And so the persecution thus early begun at Thessalonica, was evidently by the Jewes, which received not the faith, against the Jewes and Proselytes, which received it, and these Jewes of Thessalonica were so zealous in the matter, that as soon as they heard of the receiving the faith at Berœa, they went thither, and sollicited the multitude there against them v. 13. And so there is no question, but the ἴδιοι συμφυλέται their countrymen, that are here spoken of, are the Jewish inhabitants of Macedonia, and particularly of Thessalonica; and accordingly that they may not thinke it strange, that they should thus be used by those of their own nation, he gives them the example of the unbelieving Jewes in Judæa, that had persecuted the Christians there, as before they had crucified Christ himself &c. v. 15. And their special quarrell to the Apostles was, that they preached to the Gentiles, v. 16. for which and all other their obstinacy he foretels the wrath of God upon them, and their utter destruction approaching, v. 16. That in this persecution at Thessalonica some were dead, and others so evill handled, that there was need of this Epistle to comfort them for those that were fallen, and confirm them, by foretelling them the approach of Christs coming, to relieve the constant sufferers, and to destroy the persecutors, and those that cowardly fell off to them, will appear, c. 4. 13. and 5. 1. &c.

i. A crown was an attire or dressing for the head, and so is mentioned Ezech. 16. 12. together with jewels on the forehead, and ear-rings in the eare, and and so Ezech. 23. 42. bracelets upon their hands, and crowns upon their heads, not that this was an Ensign of Majesty peculiar to Kings, but the name of an ornament worn by others, both men, as the Sabeans, Ezech. 23. 42. and women, as in that description of the Jewish nation by a woman c. 16. So the Misna makes mention of Crowns that bridegroomes and brides were wont to wear, The bridegroomes was of gold, or gilt, or painted, or of Roses, or Myrtle, or Olives, and so the brides also, Gemara Hierosol: ad tit: Sota c. 9. But these interdicted by the Jewes about the time of Vespasian, saith the Misna, tit: Sota. c. 9. Of these there is also frequent mention among the heathens, στέφος γαμήλιον a nuptial crown in Bions Epitaph of Adonis, and in Libanius declam: 8. speaking of nuptial rites ἐν ἐστεφανώμην; was I not crowned? But as of all other ornaments, so of this it must be observed, that they were either of every dayes use (unlesse dayes of fasting and mourning) or for extraordinary or festivall dayes (In like manner as there was an every dayes anointing (unlesse upon dayes of humiliation) Mat: 6. and the oile of gladnesse or festival oile, Psal. 45. 7.) and the latter of these is in those places of Ezechiel called a beautiful crown, and here στέφανος καυχήσεως a crown of boasting, i. e. either of rejoycing or festivity, as rejoycing and boasting is all one, (such, we know, was the nuptiall crown, wherewith his mother is said to have crowned Solomon in the day of the gladnesse of his heart, Cant. 3. 11.) or of boasting, as that sounds literally, such as are the speciall kind of ornament, wherein one is set out most pompously and magnificiently, so as vain-glorious persons adorn themselves.

CHAP. III.

1. And therefore being no longer able to bear the want and desire of seeing or hearing of you, I resolved to deprive my self of Timothies company, and to stay alone at Athens a City in Greece,

1. WHerefore when we could no longer forbear, we thought it good to be left at Athens alone,

2. To settle you in the doctrine of the Gospell, which wee had planted among you, and to comfort you against all the tribulations which were befallen you for the profession of the faith of Christ;

2. And sent Timotheus our brother and minister of God, and our fellow-labourer in the Gospell of Christ, [to establish you, and to comfort you concerning your faith;]

To keep you from being diſcouraged or falling off by reaſon of theſe afflictions, by putting you in mind, of what I am ſure you know already, that this is to be look'd for by all true believers, the Goſpell being the covenant of the Croſſe, and ſo nothing in it ſtrange, that God ſhould determine to permit, and not to reſtrain the malice of wicked men, but leave Chriſtians to be exerciſed by them.

4. For verily when we were with you we told you before, that we ſhould ſuffer tribulation, even as it came to paſſe, and ye know.] 4. For of this at our firſt preaching the Goſpell to you we advertiſed you, that afflictions are the Chriſtians portion, And it hath accordingly come to paſſe, and ſo you have the experimentall knowledge of it.

5. For this cauſe † when I could no longer forbear, I ſent to know your faith, leſt by ſome means the tempter have [a] tempted you, and our labour be in vain.] 5. And therefore the occaſion of our late ſending of Timothy was to ſee whether you continued conſtant, or whether the devill and the world bringing perſecutions upon you for your faith, had wrought upon you by thoſe temptations, and ſo all our labour in planting the faith were caſt away and loſt upon you. a.

6. But now when Timothy came from you unto us, and brought us good tidings of your faith and charity, and that ye have good remembrance of us alwayes, deſiring greatly to ſee us, as we alſo to ſee you:] 6. And now he at his return telling us that joyfull newes of your conſtancy in the faith, and of your love to God caſting out all fear of perſecution, and that your kindneſſe to me continues, and that you are as deſirous to ſee me, as I to viſit you :

This was matter of extreme joy to us in the midſt of our afflictions, or in the midſt of yours, that though the Goſpell had brought perſecution and diſtreſſe upon you, yet you continue faithfull and conſtant in deſpight of all.

8. For now we [b] live, if ye ſtand faſt in the Lord.] 8. For whatſoever befall us, we have matter of exceeding joy, Joh. 14. 19. ſuch as if a man ſhould return to life again, ſee Pſal. 22. v. 26. b.

9. For what thanks can we render to God again for you, for all the joy wherewith we joy for your ſakes before God,

Notes on Chap. III.

a. Παράδῃ

It is ordinary in the ſcripture-dialect for verbs to ſignifie, beſide the action, or paſſion, noted by them, the effect, which is conſequent thereto. Of paſſives it hath been noted at large, note on Mat. 11. b. And of actives there want not examples, eſpecially in this one word πειράζειν which now we ſpeak of. For to tempt doth ordinarily ſignifie no more then to offer temptations, to propoſe, or ſuggeſt thoſe objects, which if the man reſiſt, and reject, are matter of virtue in him, but [having tempted] here, ſignifies evidently, having brought them unto ſinne, i. e. wrought upon them, corrupted them by temptations, for otherwiſe his labour in preaching the Goſpel to them, would not become vain by that means. So when God is ſaid to give men to Chriſt, Joh. 6. 37. the meaning is, that by Gods preventing and preparing grace, they do effectually come to Chriſt, receive, and embrace the Goſpell.

To live, beſide the literal notation of it, ſignifies alſo to be cheerfull or merry, to rejoyce. So Pſal. 22. 26. your heart ſhal live forever, which is a conſequent of eating and being ſatisfied, & praiſing God, So Joh. 14. 19. Becauſe I live ye ſhall live alſo. In the firſt place it is literally taken for Chriſt's reſurrection, but in the ſecond for their rejoycing, ſuch as was cauſed by the recovery of a friend from death to life, (and theſe joyned by the figure ἀντανάκλασις obſerved on Mat. 8. note h.) And this is ordinary in all languages, Hebrew, Greek and Latine. And ſo here it is evidently uſed, we live, if &c. i. e. it is matter of infinite joy to us, and accordingly it followes as an expreſſion of exultancy, For what thanksgiving can we return for all the joy, &c. b. Pſal. 22.

CHAP. IV.

Paraphraſe.

1. FUrthermore then we beſeech you, brethren, and exhort you by the Lord Jeſus, that as ye have received of us how ye ought to walke, and to pleaſe God, † ſo ye would abound more and more.] 1. Now my brethren, by all the kindneſſe which you bear to us, we intreat you, and by all the obligations that the Christian faith layes upon you, and the care of your own eternal welfare, we advise you, in the presence of God, that ye walk exactly by the rule that is set you, and daily improve and grow in that piety which is already in you,

2. According to the strict commands to this purpose, which we gave you in our first preaching to you.

2. For ye know what commandments we gave you, by the Lord Jesus.]

3. For this is punctually required of you by Christ under the Gospell, that ye should preserve your selves in chastity or perfect purity from the sinnes of the flesh, of what kinde soever:

3. For this is the will of God, even your * sanctification, that ye should abstain from fornication:]

* purification, ἁγιασμὸς

a. 4. Every one most strictly to preserve himself in perfect chastity, in a married or single life;

4. That every one of you should know how to possesse his [a] vessell in sanctification and honour;]

5. Not in any vile unnaturall practises, as, for want of knowledge of the true God, the Gentiles doe.

5. Not in the † lust of concupiscence, even as the Gentiles which know not God :]

† passion of lust, πάθει ἐπιθυμίας

b. 6. Not to yeild to irregular inordinate lust, to commit filthynesse with his fellow Christian, in those things that are not to be mentioned plainly, for as these are the sins that on Sodome, on the nations, and in all times on those Gentiles God hath punished severely with utter excision, so is the like still to be expected on all that are guilty of such villanies, as I have formerly assured and warned you.

6. * That no man [b] goe beyond and defraud his brother in any matter, because that the Lord is the avenger of all such, as we also have forewarned you and testified.]

* Not to exceed or be inordinate in a matter with his brother

7. And accordingly you must resolve that Christianity is far from giving liberty for unnatural uncleanesse, it is on the contrary an obligation to all the purity imaginable.

7. For God hath not called us unto uncleanesse, but unto holinesse.]

8. And he that despiseth these commands of ours in this matter, given by me from Christ v. 2. as speciall parts of the Christian faith, and indulgeth to those contrary sins, he despiseth the commands, and provoketh the displeasure, and wrath of God, and sinneth against that sanctifying Spirit, which God giveth to believers.

8. He therefore that despiseth, despiseth not man, but God, who hath also given unto us his holy Spirit.]

c. 9. And as to that of purity from all the impure infusions of the Gnostick heretick, so for charity and peaceableness (out of which they are as likely to seduce you, and infuse malice and bitterness against all orthodox Christians) this I need not inlarge on by Epistle, there being nothing to which the Christian faith more engages you, then this, and your having received the faith makes it superfluous for me to exhort you to it, this is an inseparable effect of that, and that which hath been actually impressed on you.

9. But as touching brotherly love, ye need not that I write unto you : for yee your selves [c] are † taught of God to love one another.]

† the taught of God, to the loving of one another.

10. And accordingly your practise hath been toward all your fellow Christians in Macedonia, there hath been unity and peace in all those Churches, Onely I exhort you to increase every day more and more in this grace,

10. And indeed ye doe it towards all the brethren, which are in all Macedonia, but we beseech you brethren, that ye increase more and more;]

11. And to be as earnest to exceed all others in quietnesse and peaceableness, as the most ambitious are to get the greatest honours, or the most factious to contend and make debate, and not to meddle with other mens matters, but every man to follow diligently the businesse of his calling, as when I was with you, I commanded you,

11. And that ye * study to be quiet, and to doe your own businesse, and to work with your own hands (as we commanded you,)]

* contend φιλοτιμεῖσθαι

12. That by spending your time in honest labour, you may both preserve your reputation entire among the Gentiles, (who will have an ill opinion of Christianity, if it make men idle) and that you may earn so much by your labour, as may supply all your wants and necessities.

12. That ye may walk honestly toward them that are without, and that ye may have lack of nothing.]

d. 13. As for the state of the dead (those especially that have fallen under the persecutions brought upon you by the unbelieving Jewes (see note on c. 2. h.) for your receiving, and maintaining the Faith) wherein by your excesse of sorrow it seemes you want advise, I must exhort you to moderate that passion, and not to behave your selves as they that beleive not any resurrection or reward for their sufferings in an other life.

13. But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them that are asleep, that ye sorrow not even as † others which have no hope.]

† the rest οἱ λοιποὶ

14, 15. For upon our belief of Christ's death and resurrection, depends also the raising of their bodies that dye for the testimony, or by occasion of the faith of Christ, and that so certainly and speedily, that they that doe not dye at all shall at the day of judgement have no advantage of them, whose bodies have lain in the graves so many years, the rising of the one being in the same twinkling of an eye, 1 Cor. 15. 52. with the change of the other who are found alive.

14. For if we believe that Jesus dyed and rose again, even so them also which sleep * in Jesus will God bring with him,

15. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive, and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent them which are asleep.]

* through διὰ

16. For this shall be the method of it, Christ shall come from heaven, and call all the world to appear before him, assembling them as with a shout, or a voice, or a trumpet, every of them used to call assemblies together, and to summon them to appear before tribunals (see Psal. 47. 5. 8. Jer. 4. 5. and 6. 1.) And then first all the bodies of all pious men that ever were in the world shall rise out of their graves;

16. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the Archangel, and with the trump of God : and the dead in Christ shall rise first;]

17. Then

17. Then we which are alive, and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the aire, and so shall we ever be with the Lord.]

17. And, in the very moment that that is done, all that are alive on earth, as we now are, shall be carried by the Angels into the clouds, there to meet Christ, and appear before him, and being adjudged by him to eternall blisse, shall never part from Christ again, but enjoy his presence forever.

18. Wherefore, comfort one another with these words.]

18. This consideration is certainly sufficient to yeild you matter of comfort and support in the death of any that is neareſt to you, and to assure you, that Christ's promise of delivering the persecuted, is no whit lesse performed to them, that die under the persecutions, then to them that live to see their persecutors destroyed, which shall now ere long come to passe. See ch. 2. 16.

Notes on Chap. IV.

a. Σκεῦος ἑαυτοῦ

It is the conceipt of a learned man, that σκεῦος ἑαυτοῦ his own vessel, here signifies his lawful or proper wife: But there is no example nor analogie for this interpretation, unlesse that the wife is elsewhere called the weaker vessel, 1 Pet. 3. 7. But that supposes the man to be a vessel too, and concludes no peculiarity of that title to the woman, but onely that she is the weaker. The wives are indeed by some call'd ἄγρους ὑμῶν your fields in Demetrius Cydonius, by others τοὺς ὑμῶν your dwelling, in Euthymius Zygabenus, but no where σκεύος vessel. And indeed the context doth otherwise incline it to denote the man's own body. For that which is opposed v. 5. to this possessing his own vessel with chastity and honour, is πάθει ἐπιθυμίας, the passion of lust, i.e. inordinate lust, as the Gentiles &c. Now those Gentile impious unnatural practises were not peculiarly opposed to conjugal chastity, but simply to chastity or purity, whether in marriage or out of marriage. And to that best agrees the notion of his own vessel, as it signifies, his own flesh, his owne body. Now the word σκεῦος signifying simply an utensil or instrument of use, (see Mat. 21. note b.) the body being the great utensil or instrument of the mind, is fitly so called: Thus Barnabas in his Epistle calls the body of Christ σκεῦος τοῦ πνεύματος, the vessel, or utensil of the Spirit, and so the Jewes call the body כְּלִים an instrument, and the Greek σκεῦος is very near that, onely the first σ. abundant. This possessing, or (as κτᾶσθαι signifies sometimes in the idiome of these Writers) preserving or keeping (Lu. 21. 19.) the body in purity and honour, is the perfect chastity either in celibacy or the conjugal state, in opposition to all those unnatural lusts which are called πάθη ἀτιμίας, Rom. 1. 26. dishonourable affections, the basest, vilest submissions imaginable, and the same is here called πάθος ἐπιθυμίας, which makes it not improbable, that that should be read ἀτιμίας also, but however it signifies the same thing, inordinate desires or lusts, And to this also agrees that which follows v. 6. see note b.

Πάθος

b. Ὑπερβαίνειν

Ὑπερβαίνειν is a general word to signifie transgressing of the due limits in any thing, ὑπερβαίνειν ὁρισθέντα, to goe beyond the bounds, παραβάσεις ὁρκων, transgressing of oaths and obligations, saith Hesychius, and when the close of Hesiod's ἔργα καὶ ἡμέραι is, ὑπερβασίας ἀλεύειν, that is, saith Proclus, ἐκκλίνειν τὰς παρεκβάσεις τῆς ὀρθῆς καὶ καλῆς σκοπῆς, to avoid all deviations from the right and good mark, and so in Phocylides, μὴ δὲ ὑπερβαίνε, and ὑπερβασίηδ' ἀλεείνειν, mischievous transgressing, This being applied to matters of uncleanness (as appears v. 7. and by the modest, civil, expression of ἐν τῷ πράγματι, in a matter, and by the addition of πλεονεκτεῖν, which hath formerly been explained to belong to inordinacy, or unnatural lusts) will beconcluded most probably to signifie those filthinesses, which exceed the bounds and law of nature. Hence perhaps it is that Hesychius hath rendred ὑπερβάντας, ὕβρει, contumely, in that notion of the word wherein Clemens in his Padagogus l. 2. cites it, ἀδ' ἐπ' ἄρρενα ὕβριν &c. that dishonourable, villanous practise here mentioned v. 5. And thus we find ἀνδρεραστίαι used by Epiphanius of the Gnosticks, πᾶν εἶδος ἀνδροβατῶν, καὶ παγκοίνων ὁμιλιῶν πρὸς γυναῖκας, &c. And to this purpose it may perhaps be farther observable that the Hebrew בא or בוא from whence is the Greek βῶ or βάω (the old word, from whence the rest of the tenses of βαίνω come) doth in the Old Testament signifie the husbands companying with the wife, and is rendred going in unto her, and accordingly βαίνειν and ἐπιβαίνειν are by humane Authors used in that sense, applied to other creatures, Aristot: Hist: Animal: l. 5. c. 14. speaking of an Elephant, Βαίνει πόλλ' ἐτῶν ἓξ ἢ ἑπτὰ ὤν, and —ὡσάντ' ἐπιβήσεσθαι πόδεσσιν in Homer, Odyss: ψ'. and ἀναβαίνουσι δὲ τὰς μάλιστα οἱ ἵπποι, Arist: Histor: Animal: l. 6. c. 12. And to the same sense βαλεῖν, and in Cicero the Latine batuere. Another ordinary notion there is, wherein these two words ὑπερβαίνειν and πλεονεκτεῖν, which are here used together, doe agree, viz: to denote superiority, or being in a more eminent degree, So saith Chrysostome of the Bishops superiority above Presbyters in the point of ordination, Τῇ χειροτονίᾳ μόνῃ ὑπερβαίνουσι, καὶ τούτῳ μόνῳ δοκοῦσι πλεονεκτεῖν, In this they exceed, or have more power. But this notion being by the context rendred unappliable to this place, will onely signifie, that these two words being of the same importance in other things, may probably be so in this matter also, wherein πλεονεξία is so visibly used in these sacred writings for unnatural, unclean excesses. See Ephes. 5. 5.

ἐν τῷ Πράγματι

The word θεοδίδακτοί] is all one with διδακτοὶ ὑπὸ θεοῦ the taught of God] Joh. 6. 45. of which see there note d. Yet some difference there is, There θεὸς is peculiarly God the father, as appears v. 37, 39, 44, 65. and so the taught of God, are the followers, disciples of him, who as being first such, (having that honest heart, which hath alwaies been taught them by God, and by his preventing grace wrought in them, and accepted by him) doe, when Christ is revealed to them, constantly receive and entertain him, But here θεὸς, God, seems rather to signifie Christ, speaking of that which was not in them, till they were Christians, viz: brotherly love, at least was taught them, and required of them most eminently by Christianity. And therefore the [εἰς τὸ ἀγαπᾶν] for the loving of one another, may either be a notation of the end, or onely of the effect, and it is uncertain which, The word [εἰς] will bear either. If it be the end, then the sense is, that to this especially is their Christianity designed, signed, that they love one another, and therefore their being Christians obliges them sufficiently to that, and makes his exhortation to it unnecessary. If it be the effect, then the meaning is, that, by their having been thus formed by the Christian faith, they doe already (see ver. 18.) perform this, and therefore need no exhorting to it.

d. Κεκοιμημένοις That κοιμᾶδς to sleep] signifies to die, to depart out of this world, (according to the Scripture-stile) there is no question. Onely two things are here to be observed, 1 that the word which is in the ordinary reading κεκοιμημένων in the preter tense, those that have fallen asleep, is in the King's MS. κοιμωμένων, they that sleep, in the present, to note simply those that die, not onely those that are already dead, but that die daily; remembring withall, that κοιμᾶδς to sleep] is the word, which is proper to expresse the death of the righteous, whose death is but a repose of their bodies in their graves, or dormitories, and a rest of their souls in Gods hands; 2*dly*, that the men here peculiarly spoken of, are those that die in the cause, or for the faith of Christ. That sure is expresst by κοιμηθέντας διὰ τ̃ Ἰησοῦ, those that sleep through Jesus, i. e. by occasion of him, or for Christianity sake. And so signifies those that have been persecuted, and died either by the hands of the persecutors, or before the time comes of Christ's destroying the persecutors, and releasing the persecuted by that means. And the considering of this will give us the occasion of this discourse and of that concerning the times and seasons following it ch. 5. 1. That the Christians at Thessalonica were sorely persecuted by the unbeleiving Jewes, and haled and dragg'd to the Roman officers, as disturbers of the civil peace, hath been evidenced, note on ch. 2. h. Against these persecutions the Apostle designed to confirm, and comfort them by this Epistle, And the direct way of doing it, was to put them in mind of what he had told them, when he was with them, that Gods judgments should shortly seise upon the unbeleiving Jews, their persecutors, c. 2. 16. and bring the relief by that means. Of this he speaks as of a thing known to them, ch. 5. 1. But yet one objection there was, either expresst by them, or foreseen, and here answered by him, viz: that this deliverance being not yet come, some of the faithfull either were daily put to death by the Roman officers upon the Jewes instigation (for the accusations brought against them were capital Act. 17. 6, 7.) and so were not thus rescued, or else did daily die, before this promised deliverance came, And to this the Apostle gives answer here, that they should not be discouraged, or grieve for those which thus died, especially in the cause of Christ, because their souls being by death brought to their harbour, and their crown the sooner, their bodies which alone were supposed to be the sufferers, were no way losers by it, being sure to be raised by Christ, (whose resurrection converted his death into advantage to him) and that so speedily, at the sound of the dooms-day trumpet, that they which should then be found alive, which have never died, should have no advantage of them, but on the other side, they that were dead for the faith of Christ, should first be raised before they that were remaining alive, should be caught up with Christ. And this was full matter of comfort to them, and answer to the objection. After which he fitly resumes the discourse of the times, and seasons of the vengeance on the Jewes, and deliverance of the faithfull by that means ch. 5. 1. And so this is a perspicuous account of the coming in of this discourse of the resurrection in this place.

CHAP. V.

2. 1. But concerning that notable time or season of Christ's coming in judgment on the Jewes and others, to destroy the obdurate and rescue the beleivers, I shall not need to say much to you;

1. BUT of the [2] times and the seasons, brethren, ye have have no need that I write unto you;]

2. For this hath been oft told you, that, as it is not now farre off, so, when it comes, it shall come on a suddain, Mat. 24. 17, & 42. Lu. 17. 27. (see 2 Pet. 3. 10.) and this not onely in Judæa, but in other places where the obdurate Jewes and Gnosticks shall be (see Mat. 24. 28.) and continue to persecute the Christians.

2. For your selves know perfectly, that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night:]

3. For as in the still and quiet part of the night, when men are fast asleep, the thief comes v. 4. and Joel 2. 9. and by the windows enters into, and rifles the house; so when they are most secure, persecuting the Christians in the bitterest manner, without all fear, then shall this ruine come upon them on the suddain, as pangs and throws of child-birth doe on a woman (for suddainness and for sharpness much like them) and there shall be no more possibility for them to escape, then there is for a woman in that condition to escape those pains.

3. For when they shall say, Peace, and safety; then suddain destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child, and they shall not escape.]

4. But ye, my brethren, are not so ill instructed, nor are your actions and lives such, as that this danger should thus surprize you unawares.

4. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief.]

5. Your profession engages you to such practises, wherein if you live constant, none of these evils can befall you.

5. Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness.]

6. And this is an obligation on you, that ye be not by company, and enticement of others, drawn to any of their evil wales.

6. Therefore let us not sleep, as doe others, but let us watch and be sober.]

7. For it is negligence and voluptuousness that is likely to betray men to this destruction that comes as a thief in the night, these being those deeds of darkness, which are to be thus punished.

7. For they that sleep, sleep in the night, and they that be drunken, are drunken in the night.]

8. But

8. But let us, who are of the day, be ſober, putting on the breaſtplate of faith, and love, and for an helmet the hope of ſalvation.] 8. But we Chriſtians, let us keep out of all theſe, and to ſecure us from the temptations that may invite us to them, let our conſtant adherence to Chriſt, and that love of him that caſts out fear of perſecution, ſupply the place of a breaſt-plate to us, and the ſtedfaſt aſſurance and confidence of our preſent reſcue and deliverance (if we adhere to Chriſt) and eſpecially of our eternal reward from Chriſt, let that ſupply the place of an helmet (to ſecure our heads,) to confirm us in the truth againſt all heretical corruptions, that may ſollicite our judgments.

9. For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain ſalvation by our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.] 9. For of this be ſure that this great judgment which is now a coming, is not deſigned by God againſt the pure conſtant Chriſtians, but upon their enemies and perſecutors, nor for ſuch as we are to be deſtroyed, but to be delivered by that means.

10. Who died for us, that whether we wake, or ſleep, we ſhould [b] live together with him.] 10. For he that died on purpoſe to bring us to good life, to redeem us from all iniquity, will certainly preſerve and ſecure thoſe that are thus redeemed, that live thoſe lives which he requires, and adhere conſtant to his commandements, and therefore for us, without the help of our worldly providences, he will certainly ſecure us, preſerve theſe lives of ours ſo long as he ſees that beſt for us, and that moſt remarkably at this time, in deſtroying the perſecuters, and reſcuing the perſecuted, and in another world preſerving us to eternal life. b.

11. Wherefore comfort your ſelves together, and edifie one another, even as alſo ye doe.] 11. And therefore continue, I pray, to encourage and confirm one another, as already ye doe, in this matter.

12. And we beſeech you, brethren, to know them which labour among you, and [c] are over you in the Lord, and admoniſh you,] 12. One thing it is needfull for me here to interpoſe, that ye pay all due reſpects to the Biſhops of your ſeveral Churches, that belong to this Metropolis, and ſo all others through all Macedonia, and all others that are employed for your ſpiritual good. c.

13. And to eſteem them * very highly in love for their works ſake. And be at peace among your ſelves.] 13. And to pay them as great a reſpect as is poſſible, for the pains that they have taken among you; And then to that I muſt adde this exhortation, that one with another ye live in perfect unity and peace.

14. Now we exhort you, brethren, warn † them that are [d] unruly, comfort the feebleminded, ſupport the weak, be patient toward all men.] 14. And for the preſerving your Churches from the inrodes of ſchiſmaticks and hereticks, the Gnoſticks, of whom you are in greateſt danger, 1. be carefull when you ſee any man forſake his ſtation, grow idle, forſake his work, to proceed with ſuch a man according to Chriſt's rule Mat. 18. 15. and ſo firſt to admoniſh him of his fault, and never leave till ye have reduced him (for this idleneſſe is an ill ſymptome) 2. be as carefull to encourage the fearfull, that may be in danger to be wrought on by the ſharpneſſe of perſecutions, 3. thoſe that are ready to fall, hold up as well as you can, and 4. thoſe that are fallen, deal as gently with them as is poſſible, that ye may reſtore them, Gal. 6. 1. d.

15. See that none render evil for evil unto any man, but ever follow that which is good, both among your ſelves, and to all men.] 15. And be ſure that they that are injured or perſecuted, doe not think of avenging themſelves, Rom. 12. 19. But doe as much good both to your fellow-Chriſtians, and to your enemies, and all without exception, as is poſſible.

16. Rejoice evermore.] 16. Rejoice in time of perſecution, in adverſity as well as proſperity, Phil. 4. 5.

17. Pray without ceaſing.] 17. Not omitting the frequent conſtant times of prayer, as oft as they return, (as continual ſorrow, Rom. 9. 2. is not that which is never diſcontinued in the act, but that which hath conſtant frequent returns to him, though ſometimes intermitted.)

18. In every thing give thanks, for this is the will of God in Chriſt Jeſus * concerning you.] 18. And in adverſity as well as proſperity continue your acknowledgments of God's goodneſſe to you, Job 1. 21. For this is the condition of the Evangelical covenant, which is the covenant of ſufferings, that we ſhould rejoice in them, Mat. 5. 12. and give God thanks for them, 1 Pet. 3. 15. & 4. 16.

19. Quench not the Spirit.] 19. The gifts of tongues, healing, &c. which were given in form of fire, muſt be uſed accordingly, not quenched with neglect, vanity, wicked life, but preſerved by prayer, thankſgiving, and holy life.

20. Deſpiſe not prophecyings.] 20. And for that faculty of interpreting ſcripture, ye ought to ſet a ſpecial value upon it, 1 Cor. 14. 5.

21. Prove all things, Hold faſt that which is good.] 21. Trie all thoſe who pretend to extraordinary gifts, and examine whether they have them or no, by that gift of diſcerning of ſpirits, and make uſe of thoſe who approve themſelves to have what they profeſſe.

And that God which is the author of all good things, and particularly of that peaceableneſſe recommended to you v. 13. and appointed to be ſecured by the following means, work all kind of purity in you, that of the fleſh and ſpirit, And I heartily pray that all and every part of you may be kept immaculate, that whenſoever Chriſt comes, either in his ſignal puniſhments here forementioned, or in that judgment after death, ye may be approved and rewarded by him. f.

Notes on Chap. V.

2. Χρόνοι καὶ Καιροὶ

Ἡμέρα Κυρίου

What χρόνοι and καιροὶ, times and ſeaſons, here ſignifie, appears ſufficiently by v. 2. where in another phraſe the ſame thing is expreſſed by ἡμέρα Χριστοῦ ἔρχεται, the day of Chriſt cometh, which is without queſtion the ſame, which is ſo oft called, the coming of Chriſt, for the deſtroying the enemies of Chriſtianity, (which he ſhould do καιροῖς ἰδίοις in the proper ſeaſons 1 Tim. 6. 15.) and, the day approaching, and day in all languages ſignifies judgement (ſo 1 Cor. 3. 13. the day ſhall declare, i. e. the judgment that ſhall ſit upon them; and ſo diem dicere, is to call a man into any court of judicature, and a ayes-man among us is a judge) and ſo the word καιρὸς ſeaſon is uſed Rom. 13. 11. εἰδότες τὸν καιρὸν, knowing the ſeaſon, and that ſeaſon expreſſed in the end of the verſe, as here, by ἡμέρα ἤγγικεν the approaching of the day. So Matt. 16. 3. σημεῖα καιρῶν the ſignes of the times, were the ſignes of that approaching deſtruction, and accordingly Lu. 12. 56. it is call'd καιρὸς οὗτος this time, or ſeaſon. And to this matter (plainly ſet down before, c. 2. 16. the full vials of Gods wrath, falling on the perſecuting Jewes) the reſt of this diſcourſe to v. 12. doth evidently belong, and the ſuddainneſſe and unexpectedneſſe of it (and the ſurprize of all carnal men, which joyned with the perſecutors, or went on in unchriſtian ſinnes) deſcribed, as it is frequently in the Goſpell, Mat. 24. Lu. 19. and in the Epiſtles, Rom. 13. 2 Pet. 3. and elſewhere. And that it cannot belong to the laſt coming of Chriſt to judgement, or finall doom, appears both from hence, that that was the ſubject of the former diſcourſe, c. 4. 13. &c. and this as a diſtinct matter is entred upon, with a Περὶ δὲ &c. But concerning the times and ſeaſons, and ſecondly by the end, to which this diſcourſe is here deſigned by the Apoſtle, viz. to comfort the Chriſtians that were under perſecution, and give them patience and conſtancy, for which this was a fit conſideration, that this judgement of God would come ſuddenly, and when it was leaſt expected, and ſo would ſurprize them, if they were not watchfull, And this but a tranſcript of Chriſts words on this matter, Mar. 13. 32. (and the very word καιρὸς ſeaſon, there made uſe of v. 33.) And more punctually, under the phraſe of the thief in the night, Mat. 24. 43. all which belonged peculiarly to this doom upon the Jewes, and not to the generall judgment, which, it is to us certain, that thoſe that then lived, were not concern'd in, but only in this other. And if it be here queſtioned how this deſtruction of the Jews ſhould concern the Chriſtians in Macedonia, and ſo be matter of ſuch particular advertiſement to the Theſſalonians, here I anſwer, that the Jewes being at this time diſperſt into ſeveral parts, much farther from Judea then Macedonia, did likewiſe, whereſoever they were, oppoſe the Apoſtles preaching to the Gentiles, and not onely ſo, but perſecuted thoſe that received the faith with all bitterneſſe; and how peculiarly this was obſervable at Theſſalonica, ſee note on c. 2. h. The Jewes were the fountains of perſecutions, ſaith Tertullian, and as they proſecuted the Chriſtians before the heathen powers, ſo all the falſhearted, temporizing, carnal Chriſtians, that were not willing to bear perſecutions, complyed and joyned with them againſt the pure and Orthodox, and all that did ſo, being engaged in the ſame courſe, were involved alſo in the ſame deſtruction, and ſo the Jewes and Gnoſticks, which at this time were the cockle among the wheat in every Chriſtian plantation, and ſo over-ran all the Churches of Aſia &c. as appears by the Apoſtles (& Chriſt's Rev. v. 2. 3.) Epiſtles to them, and infeſted this plantation in the Churches of Macedonia alſo (as oft appeared in the Epiſtle to the Philippians, another Church of Macedonia) It was moſt fit for the Apoſtle to forewarn them of their dangers, which were likely to aſſault their conſtancy; and to fortifie them againſt timidity on one ſide, and the carnal baites on the other (as he doth in the former part of this Epiſtle,) by this aſſurance that God's judgments would ſuddainly ſurprize theſe enemies of his, and nothing but conſtancy and purity be likely to preſerve any from that heavy deſtruction.

To live together with Chriſt] though it comprehend under it, yet muſt not neceſſarily be confined to the future immortall life, but may beloog firſt and literally to preſervation and deliverance here, ſo as σώζεσθαι which is ordinarily rendred, to be ſaved, doth (v. 3. 8, 9. and oft elſewhere) denote deliverance out of calamities, and deſtructions here, which is alſo attended conſtantly (and, when the temporal is not had, ſupplied) with eternal life. Thus doth the matter here in hand incline to interpret it; being the deſcription of that coming of Chriſt for the deſtroying of the enemies of Chriſtianity, which is deſigned as a meanes of preſerving the conſtant Chriſtians, and giving them quiet halcyonian dayes after the ſtormes, wherein they had been toſſed. And ſo to live, is to live proſperouſly and cheerfully in the profeſſion of Chriſtianity here, together with an aſſurance of living and reigning with him eternally. And according to this muſt the phraſe [whether we ſleep or wake] be interpreted, not ſo as ſleeping ſignifies death, and waking being not yet dead, but alive (though that ſenſe will have truth in it alſo applyable to the notion of life for eternal life) but as may beſt agree with the contexture of this Chapter. Here this calamity approaching the Jewes and Gnoſticks is ſaid to come as a thief in the night, v. 2. Upon which he tels the pious Chriſtians that they are in no danger of receiving hurt from this, v. 4. they are not in darkneſſe, that this day or judgment ſhould thus ſurprize them, and ſo again v. 5. on which he builds his exhortation v. 6. wherefore let us not ſleep, but watch and be ſober, in the figurative notion of ſleep for ſin, and watching for carefulneſſe and conſtancy, and v. 7. the ground of that figurative notion of ſleep is ſet down, becauſe as ſleep is a night-work, ſo drunkenneſſe is a night work, and ſo every ſin, and therefore that viſitation that comes as a thief in the night, is likely to ſurprize them, and none elſe. And on the contrary the ſober, pure, conſtant Chriſtian, he is ſure to eſcape; which he farther proves v. 9. by Chriſt's dying to that end, to bring us to that purity, and conſequently being riſen again, and coming to doe vital acts (ſuch is executing vengeance on enemies) he will be ſure to preſerve thoſe which are thus qualified, and that whether they wake or ſleep, That cannot now be in that figurative ſenſe formerly uſed, for piety and ſin, for they that thus ſleep ſhall not thus live, but (as by the figure ἀδιαφθαλλαξία, noted on Mat. 8. k. it is ordinary, in the vulgar ordinary ſenſe of waking and ſleeping, the one noting ſollicitude, the other ſecurity; and ſo the ſenſe will be moſt currant, that without their ſpecial care and ſollicitude (referring all to God, and ſo laying them down to ſleep, and taking their reſt) they ſhall be ſecured by Chriſt, and live, when others, that were more ſollicitous for their ſafety, the Gnoſtickes, were deſtroyed with the Jewes.

Προϊσταμένους ὑμῶν, thoſe that are ſet, or, rule over you, are ſure the Biſhops of ſeverall Churches, called in the firſt times, Προεστῶτες Prefects, and Preſidents in the Latine Church. As for that objection which may ariſe here from the plural number, which argues that they were more then one, the account is to be the ſame, that was given for ἐπίσκοποι more Biſhops then one Phil. 1. 1. becauſe 1. as Philippi was a Metropolis of Macedonia, and contained many Churches and conſequently Biſhops under it, ſo was Theſſalonica here alſo, and all the Churches that were under it were written to alſo in this Epiſtle inſcribed to the Metropolitan Church. 2dly, It hath been before obſerved (note on Phil. 1. a.) that Theſſalonica and Philippi being both Churches of Macedonia, theſe Epiſtles were written to both, and indeed to all the Chriſtian Churches of Macedonia (as the Epiſtle to the Corinthians belonged alſo to the Saints or Chriſtians of all Achaia) And there being many Biſhops conſtituted in that whole country, they are all here contained under theſe phraſes, κοπιῶντας ἐν ὑμῖν, they that labour among you] i. e. labour in the word, and doctrine, 1 Tim. 5. 17. And προϊσταμένους, thoſe that are ſet over you, and νουθετοῦντας, they that exhort you, it being the Biſhops office to doe all theſe.

c. Κοπιῶντας

Ἀτακτοις irregular] is a military word, and ſignifies diſbanded Souldiers, that have left their employment, or ſervice or obedience to their commanders, and ſo may here be ſet to expreſſe thoſe that live not in obedience to the Apoſtles rules, or to the commands of their ſuperiors, the Biſhops in their Churches, who are here firſt admoniſhed, according to Chriſts directions, Mat. 18. 15. and ſo again a ſecond time, 2 Theſ. 3. 12. and if they reform not are then to be cenſured, and excommunicate, 2 Theſ. 3. 6. But the context in that place ſeemes to refer to one particular kind of irregularity (contrary to the expreſſe orders of the Apoſtle there, v. 10.) viz. living idlely, giving over the workes, and duties of their callings, v. 11. which, beſide the diſobedience to his orders, was literally alſo a forſaking their colours, leaving that rank wherein they were placed by God, and ſo there v. 7. Ἀτακτῶν is ſet oppoſite to labouring, v. 8.

d. Ἄτακτος

The word εἶδος] which is ordinarily rendred appearance, is known to ſignifie (as the Latine ſpecies among authors,) kind, or ſort. Thus they that interpret it otherwiſe, acknowledge the Syriack to render it; And ſo the meaning of the place will be, ἀπὸ παντὸς εἴδους πονηροῦ, from all ſort, or the whole kind of evill, from all that is truly ſo, be it never ſo ſmall, according to that of Ribbi in Pirche avoth c. 2. יְהִי זָהִיר בְּמִצְוָה קַלָּה כְּבַחֲמוּרָה be as carefull in the keeping a light, as an heavy commandment. Thus the place ſeemes to be underſtood by Saint Baſil who oppoſes πᾶν εἶδος πονηρὸν every kind of evill to τὸ δόκιμον, which will, upon triall, bear the touch, on the beginning of the Prov. Δόκιμος βαπτίζεται τὸ μὲν δόκιμον κατέχειν, ἀπὸ δὲ παντὸς εἴδους πονηροῦ ἀπέχεσθαι, A good merchant will keep that which is good, unadulterate metall, but will abſtain from all kind of evill or adulterate, not from that which appears ill, if it be not, for to what purpoſe then is his skill or touchſtone? but from that which is ill, what ever it appear.

The ὁλόκληρον ὑμῶν, the all, or whole of you, the intire or complete man is here divided into three parts, ſpirit, ſoul, and body. There ſeemes to be a particular mention of each of theſe in the creation, Gen. 2. 7. Firſt עָפָר מִן הָאֲדָמָה the duſt of the earth, that viſible maſſe, the fleſh, or members, i. e. the body; Then 2dly, נֶפֶשׁ חַיָּה the living ſoul, ψυχὴ, the animal or ſenſitive faculty, common to man with beaſts, and other ſenſitive creatures, and that is Ψυχὴ, the ſoul, which therefore in the New Teſtament ordinarily ſignifies the life, Lu. 12. 20, τὴν Ψυχήν σου ἀπαιτοῦσιν, they require thy ſoul, i. e. thy life from thee. So Matt. 10. 39. and 16. 25. 26. and elſewhere. See c. 2. 8. Thirdly, נְשָׁמַת חַיִּים the breath of life, the rational faculty, capable of divine illumination, and ſo called πνεῦμα the ſpirit, or that which was at firſt breathed into man by God and returns immortal into his hands again. And ſo this may be the full meaning of the words, your ſpirit, ſoul and body, i. e. your rationall, immortall ſpirit, your ſenſitive, mortall ſoul, and your body the place of reſidence of both, which three make up the whole man, the ὁλόκληρον ὑμῶν the whole of us. But there is another notion of the word [ſoul,] which may poſſibly make a change in this matter; For the Hebrew נֶפֶשׁ ſoul, Gen. 23. 8. is by the Chaldee paraphraſe rendred רְעוּתָא the will, and ſo it muſt there ſignifie, for there Abraham communed with them, ſaying, If it be your ſoul (we render it mind) i. e. your pleaſure, your election, or choiſe, (that is an act of the will) that I ſhould bury my dead out of my ſight, hear me &c. So Pſ. 27. 12. the ſoul of my enemies, muſt ſignifie the pleaſure, and is rightly rendred the will of my enemies, ſo as they may deal with me, as they pleaſe; and ſo the ſame phraſe is again uſed Pſ. 41. 2. So Deut. 21. 14. Thou ſhalt let her goe לְנַפְשָׁהּ according to her ſoul, i. e. her will, whither ſhe pleaſe, or chooſe to goe, i. e. freely, the will being that free faculty, which chooſes what it pleaſe, pleaſe, and accordingly the Septuagint read there ἀλλ᾽ ἐπὶ σοὶ ἡ ἀποστροφή σου, free, to go whither ſhe will. That this is the notion of the ψυχὴ ſoul here, is the opinion of the moſt antient writers, Origen, and Irenæus, as ſhall anon appear; And if it be ſo, then the word σῶμα body muſt be taken in a more comprehenſive latitude, ſo as to contain the ſenſes, and ſenſitive appetites, that are ſeated in the body, in the notion that the fleſh and the members are oppoſed to the ſpirit, and the mind Rom. 7. and Gal. 5. And then this will be the diviſion of the man, the fleſh, or body, or ſenſitive, carnall appetites on one ſide, and the ſpirit, or upper ſoul, the rational propoſals on the other ſide, and the will, or choice, that freely inclines to one or the other of theſe, as it pleaſeth. For the firſt of theſe three, the Fathers are wont to ſet τὰ πάθη the paſſions, ἐπιθυμίαν, ſenſual deſire, τὸν δῆμον the common people of the ſoul in Maximus Tyrius, τὸ θῆλυ the woman part in Philo, τὸν παῖδα τὸν ἐν ἡμῖν, the child in us, in Simplicius on Epictet: p. 70. and again p. 296. πρωτίζωον ψυχῆς μέρος, the lower foot part of the ſoul, by which the ſoul communicates with the body, τὰ ἄλογα πάθη, the unreaſonable affections generally among the Stoicks, and ἀλογία, unreaſonablenes, ἵππος, the horſe, in Socrates, θηρίον, the beaſt in Plotinus, or ζωοδὲς τὸ σῶμα, the body enlivened, θηρία καὶ τετράποδα, the beaſts, and fourfooted creatures of the ſoul, which ſtill allure us to beſtial things οὐκ ἀνθρώπια ἢ ἄνθρωπος, not of man as man (ſaith Nemeſius de Nat: Hom: c. 1.) ἀλλὰ ζῶν μὲν πρωτογενέστερον, ἀνθρώπου δὲ ὑστερογενέστερον, ὑποδὰ καὶ ζῶον ὁ ἄνθρωπος, but of the living creature primarily, and conſequently of the man, in that man is a living creature. For the ſpirit they ſet to ἡγεμονικὸν the leading faculty of the ſoul, τὸν νοῦν, and νοερὸν, the intellectuall faculty, ἡνίοχον the rider of that horſe in Socrates, τὸν παιδαγωγὸν ῥυθμίζοντα, καὶ μίξαντα τὰς ἀλόγους ἐν ἡμῖν ὀρέξεις, καὶ σὺν τὸ ὠφελιμὸν ἀποδίδοντα αὐταῖς, the padagogue that modulates the irrational appetite, and ſets it right to that which is profitable, in Simplicius, τὸν ἐν ἡμῖν θεὸν the God in us, in Julian, κυριώτατον ψυχῆς εἶδος καὶ ὡς ἄρχ. αὐτὸν δαίμονα ἑκάστῳ δοθέντα, εἰκότως ἐπ᾽ ἄκρῳ τῷ σώματι, σχεῖς δὲ τὴν ἐν ἀέρι σύγκρισιν ἀπὸ γῆς ἡμᾶς ἀίροντα, Orat. 2. p. 127. the chief part of the ſoul, the demon that is given to every one, dwelling in the top of the body, and raiſing us from the earth to our kindred in heaven, τὸ ἄῤῥεν the maſculine part, in Philo, τὸν ἄνθρωπον, the man in others, the inward man in Saint Paul, and τὸν νοῦν, the mind, διάνοιαν, the underſtanding Mar. 12. 30. and σύνεσιν in the ſame ſenſe v. 33. Betwixt theſe two then as in the middle of them, is placed ψυχὴ as that ſignifies the will, the elective faculty, called by the Ancients ἀντεξούσιον and αὐθαίρετον, the will, or choice. This Philoſophy concerning the parts and diviſion of man we may ſee in Irenæus l. 5. c. 9. together with the notion of [ὁλόκλη ρον ὑμῶν] for the whole of you] which we have given, Sunt, ſaith he, tria, ex quibus perfectus homo conſtat, Caro, anima, ſpiritus. There are three things of which the entire, perfect man conſiſts, fleſh, ſoul, ſpirit. And again, Anima eſt quidem inter hæc duo, aliquando ſubſequens ſpiritum elevatur ab eo, aliquando autem conſentiens carni decidit in terrenas concupiſcentias. The ſoul is betwixt the fleſh and ſpirit, and ſometimes following the ſpirit is elevated by it, ſometimes conſenting to the fleſh falls into earthly concupiſcences. So Origen l. 1. ſup: Epiſt: ad Rom: Triplex hominis portio, Corpus, ſeu caro, infima noſtri pars, cui per genitalem culpam legem inſcripſit peccati ſerpens ille veterator, quâque ad turpia provocamur, ac victi diabolo mancipamur. Spiritus, quo divina Natura ſimilitudinem exprimimus, in qua conditor optimus de ſuæ mentis archetypo, æternam iſtam honeſti legem inſculpſit digito, hoc eſt, ſpiritu ſuo, hoc deo conglutinamur, unúmque cum Deo reddimur; Porrò tertia, & inter ea media, Anima, qua velut in factioſâ republicâ non poteſt non alterutri partium accedere, hinc atque hinc ſollicitatur, liberum habet utrò velit inclinare; ſi carnis renuncians ad ſpiritus partes ſeſe induxerit, fiet & ipſa ſpiritalis, ſin ad carnis cupiditates ſemet abjecerit, degenerabit & ipſa in corpus. There are three parts of a man, the body, or fleſh, the loweſt part of a man, on which the Serpent by original ſin inſcribed the law of ſin, and by which we are tempted to filthy things, and as oft as we are overcome by the temptation are joyned faſt to the devill, The ſpirit, by which we expreſſe the likeneſſe of the divine Nature in which God from the pattern of his own mind engraved the eternal law of honeſt. with his own hand, or ſpirit, By this we are joyned faſt to God, and are made one with him. Then the ſoul which is the middle betwixt theſe two, which, as in a factious commonwealth, cannot but joyn with one or other of the former parties, being ſollicited this way and that, and having liberty to which it will joyn, If it renounce the fleſh and joyn with the ſpirit, it will it ſelf become ſpiritual, but if it caſt it ſelf down to the deſires of the fleſh, it will it ſelf degenerate into the body. All moſt diſtinctly and largely to the ſame purpoſe, when the ſoul or will thus conſents to the body or fleſh, then luſt is ſaid to conceive and bring forth ſin, Jam. 1. 15. Thus, the fleſh or lower ſoul like the harlot, ſollicites the will, the middle faculty of the man, to impure, unlawfull embraces, δελεάζει, invites and attracts it with ſome pleaſant baite, then when it hath obtained its conſent, by this meanes it conceives ſin, which, when by ſome degrees it is grown to perfection, proceeds from conſent to act, from conception to birth, from act to delight, from delight to frequent iteration, thence to habit, from habit to obduration, and at laſt it ſelf is able to bring forth again, it brings forth death, with which agrees that of the Poet. Ἄτης ἄρουρα βλάστην ἐκκομίζουσα, Æſchyl: ἐπὶ τοῖς Θηβ: That which is ſin in the field, is death in the harveſt. And ὕβρις γὰρ ἐξανθοῦσ᾽ ἐκάρπωσε φύλλον Ἄτης, ἴδιον πικρολαγῆ ἐξαμᾶν θέρος, Ib: Πέφυκε, Luſt bloſſomes and fructifies ſin, from whence comes a lamentable harveſt. So again when the Spirit gets the conſent and the embraces, the fruits of the ſpirit follow alſo. To this is referred the ſpirit's luſting againſt the fleſh, and the fleſh againſt the ſpirit, and many the like paſſages of the New Teſtament, and in Julian Or: 4. p. 267. διττὴ μαχομένη φύσις, ἐν ᾗ κεκραμένη ψυχῆς καὶ σώματος, τῆς μὲν θείας, τῆς δὲ σκοτεινῆς καὶ ζοφώδους, the double nature that is at ſtrife, mingled together, viz. ſoul and body, one divine, the other dark and black, from whence, ſaith he, riſes the μάχη καὶ στάσις the ſtrife and diſſenſion in man.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS.

THis second Epistle seems to have been written not many months after the former, about the 51 of Christ, whilst the Apostle yet remained at Corinth, or was removed to Athens perhaps. For having in the former expreſt his intentions, and desire to visit them again in Macedonia, 1 Thess. 3. 10, 11. it no where appears that he did find an opportunity to doe so, and then it is not improbable, that being by the interveniency of affairs, and perhaps of dangers hindred from making good his resolution, he should thus haſten to send this Epistle to supply that defect, to confirm their minds, and to correct an errour, which he saw they were in, concerning that coming of Christ, (mention'd in the former Epistle ch. 2. 16. & 5. 3.) for the acting revenge upon his enemies the Jewes, which they either from the words of his Epistle (see ch. 2. 2. note c.) or by some other means had perswaded themselves, would come more speedily, than in truth it was likely to come; The ill consequence of this mistake the Apostle foresaw, viz: that if they depended on it as instant, ὡς ἐν ἐνεστῶτι, and should find their hopes of immediate deliverance, which was to attend it, frustrated, this would be sure to shake their faith, and their constancy. And therefore discerning their error, he thought it necessary to rectifie it, by mentioning to them some things, which were necessarily to be precedent to it, and reminding them, that this was exactly according to what he had told them, when he was among them. And this is visibly the summe of the two first chapters, the third being enlarged occasionally to some other particulars.

Notes on Chap. I.

a. ἐκκλησία Θεοῦ

That the kingdome of God ſignifies the ſtate of the Goſpel or Chriſtian profeſſion, appears oft in the Goſpels, eſpecially in the parables of Chriſt; when the kingdome of God is likened to a net, to a pearl &c. and to that the addition of ὑπὲρ ὧν πάσχετε for which ye ſuffer, may here ſeem to incline it, But the πάσχειν θλῖψιν that goes before, is not well appliable to that, For that ſignifying to be vouchſafed or thought worthy to have their parts in it, or to have it beſtowed upon them, it muſt referre to ſomewhat yet future, which through the mercy of God ſhould be beſtowed upon them, and then that whatſoever it is being hoped for and depended on by them, it may well be ſaid that they ſuffer for that, i.e. either for the profeſſing that hope of theirs, whereby the malice of others is provoked againſt them, or at leaſt in hope or intuition of it. Two other notions therefore there are of the kingdome of God, 1. that of reigning with Chriſt in endleſs bliſs in another world, and 2^dly, the exerciſe of Chriſt's regal power, which was then ſo oft foretold to be approaching, in deſtroying his enemies, and preſerving his faithful ſubjects, according to that double office of a King, Rom. 13. of avenging of offenders, and rewarding them that doe good. Of this ſee note on Mat. 3. c. And that this is the notion of it in this place appears very probable by that which follows, where it is ſaid, that it is juſt with God to repay tribulation to their perſecutors, and to the perſecuted ἄνεσιν releaſe, refreſhment from the perſecutions, under which they had been: This was it that the Apoſtles had foretold them in their preachings (ſee note a. on the title of the Epiſtle to the Romans) and the benefits and fruits whereof they had been promiſed upon their perſeverance in the faith through all their perſecutions, not excluding their eternal reward (but ſuppoſing that for the future, and in caſe they did not outlive the preſent diſtreſſes 1 Theſ. 4. 13.) but withall giving them into the bargain this aſſurance of an eminent deliverance here, halcyonian daies of reſt to the Church, upon the deſtruction of their perſecutors, according as it fell out in Veſpaſian's daies, after the deſtruction of the Jewes. And this the Apoſtles profeſſed to expect, and ſo did the Orthodox Chriſtians generally, and as S. Stephen was ſtoned for that expectation Act. 6. 14. ſo were the Apoſtles and their followers perſecuted alſo, and ſo it was literally ὑπὲρ ὧν πάσχετε, for this avowed expectation of this kingdome thus underſtood, they ſuffered perſecution.

b. Ἀποκάλυψις Χριστοῦ

Ἀποκάλυψις Χριστοῦ the revelation of Chriſt] as the coming of Chriſt, is a phraſe of a doubtfull ſignification, ſometimes ſignifying the coming to the final doom, but ſometimes alſo that coming that was deſcribed Mat. 24. and was to be within that generation. And ſo ſure it ſignifies in ſeveral places of S. Peter, 1 Pet. 1. 7, 13. and ch. 4. 13. and the ἑτοιμὴ ἐπὶλυ ἀποκαλυφθῆναι ἐν καιρῷ ἐσχάτῳ, the deliverance ready to be revealed in the laſt time, ch. 1. 5. the deſtruction of the Jewes being the time of the deliverance, and eſcaping to the Chriſtians, that were perſecuted by them. (ſee Rom 13. 11.) ſo again 1 Pet. 5. 1. where S. Peter ſaying of himſelf that he was a witneſs of the ſufferings of Chriſt, addeth he was alſo ὁ μέλλουσα ἀποκαλύπτεσθαι δόξης κοινωνός, partaker of the glory that ſhould be revealed, i.e. preſent at the tranſfiguration, where, by Moſes and Elias, were repreſented and declared the glorious conſequents of his crucifixion, i. e. the deſtruction of his crucifiers, and deliverance of his faithfull diſciples, ſee note on Mat. 17. a. Lu. 9. b. & 2 Pet. 1. 16. And ſo here it moſt probably ſignifies, where the vengeance on the oppreſſors, i. e. the crucifiers of Chriſt, and perſecuters of Chriſtians, is deſcribed, and an appendix of that, reſt and releaſe to the oppreſſed, which is that ἄνεσις deliverance ſo oft promiſed to them that perſevere and endure and outlaſt thoſe perſecutions, and that ἐν ἡμέρᾳ ἐκείνῃ v. 10. in that day, which is the notation of that time of vengeance upon the Jewes, ſee Heb. 10. a. As for the mentions 1. of the Angels, 2^dly, of the flame of fire, 3^dly, of the everlaſting deſtruction, which may here ſeem to interpret this Revelation of Chriſt, ſo as to ſignifie the day of the general doom, It is evident 1. that the Angels being miniſters of God in executing his judgments on nations, this remarkable vengeance on the Jewes, may well here, and is elſwhere fitly expreſt by his coming, or revealing himſelf with, or by his Angels, So Mat. 16. 27. and elſwhere often. See note on Jude g. Then 2^dly, for the πῦρ φλογὸς, πῦρ φλογὸς fire of flame, or flaming fire] that is ordinarily the expreſſion of the appearance of Angels (he maketh his miniſters a flaming fire, ſaith the Pſalmiſt) and ſo adds little to the former. And ſecondly Gods judgments, if they be deſtructive, are ordinarily in prophetick phraſe expreſt by flaming fire, see Mat. 3. 12. Thirdly for the ὄλεθρος αἰώνιος, that ſignifies an utter deſtruction, as of Sodom it is ſaid Jude 7. that it endured πυρὸς αἰωνίου δίκην the vengeance of eternal fire, which in all reaſon belonging to the fire, and brimſtone, that deſtroyed Sodom, muſt ſignifie not the eternal burning of that fire, but the utter conſumption of the city, by that fire, or the fires never ceaſing to burn, till it had utterly conſumed the city, and ſo when of the chaffe it is ſaid, Mat. 3. 12. that it ſhall be burnt with unquenchable fire, it referres to the cuſtome of winnowing, where the fire, being ſet to the chaffe, and aſſiſted with the wind, never goes out, till it have burnt up all. Mean while not excluding the eternal torments of hell fire, which expect all impenitent ſinners, that thus fall, but looking particularly on the viſible deſtruction, and vengeance, which ſeiſeth on whole nations, or multitudes at once in this life. And that this is the meaning of the ὄλεθρος αἰώνιος everlaſting deſtruction, here, appears by all that here follows in this chapter, the time aſſign'd for it, ὅταν ἔλθῃ ἐνδοξασθῆναι &c. when Chriſt ſhall come (the ordinary expreſſion of this his vengeance on his crucifiers) to be glorified in his ſaints, and to be admired among all beleivers in that day, which that it belongs to ſomewhat then approaching, and wherein thoſe Theſſalonians were then concerned (not to the general judgment, yet future) is evident by his prayer for them, that they may have their part in that great favour of God, v. 11. and that the name of the Lord Jeſus may be glorified in ὑμῖν among them, to whom he writes, καὶ ὑμεῖς ἐν αὐτῷ and that they may be glorified in, or through him, by this remarkable deliverance, which ſhould ſhortly befall them, which were now perſecuted.

1. NOW we beſeech you, brethren, * [a] by the [b] coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and † by our gathering together unto him,] a. b.

1. But now, Brethren, concerning that famous coming of Chriſt ſo often ſpoken of ch. 1. 5. &c. (and mentioned to you by me 1 Theſſ. 5. 1.) for the deſtroying and cutting off the crucifiers of Chriſt, and perſecutors of Chriſtians (ſee note on Mat. 24. b.) the thing which is juſtly looked on by you as the period of your miſeries and perſecutions, ſo univerſally cauſed by them, and which conſequently will be attended with the plentifull coming in of diſciples to the Chriſtian profeſſion, and with a greater liberty of publick aſſembling for the worſhip of Chriſt, than our perſecutions and diſperſions will now afford us, (ſee note on Rev. 1. d.) concerning this matter, I ſay, I beſeech you,

2. That ye be not removed out of the truth (which ye have already been taught, and beleived from Chriſt, and us) either by the pretended or miſunderſtood revelations, or inſpirations of ſome, or by any thing ſaid to you by me, when I was with you, by word of mouth, or by that which I wrote to you in the former Epiſtle, ch. 5. 2. as if it were our affirmation, that this now were the period of time, wherein the day of the Lord, his coming to judge and deſtroy the Jewes, were inſtantly a coming; I foreſee the danger of this miſtake to you, that if you beleive this, and find your ſelves confuted by the event, it will be matter of great trouble to you, and may poſſibly ſhake your conſtancy, and tempt you to disbeleive our Goſpel, and forſake your profeſſion.

3. And therefore let not this cheat by any artifice be put upon you, being of ſo dangerous importance, if you beleive it to be taught by us; but reſolve on this, that before that come, firſt there muſt be, according to Chriſt's prediction, a great departure, or defection from the faith to the hereſie of the Gnoſticks, (or perhaps this may be the meaning of the departure, That in the order and method of things foretold by Chriſt, one thing muſt ſolemnly precede, the Chriſtians breaking off their compliance with the impenitent Jews, leaving them, as obdurate, and departing avowedly to the Gentiles, Mat. 24. 13.) And 2dly, Simon Magus that wicked Impoſtor, and accurſed perſon owned to ruine, together with his followers the Gnoſticks, ſhall ſhew themſelves in their colours, having for ſome ſpace concealed their malice,

4. Who oppoſeth and exalteth himſelf above all that is called God, or * that is [f] worſhipped; ſo that he as God ſitteth in the Temple of God, ſhewing himſelf that he is God.] f. g.

4. He, I mean, who oppoſes himſelfe againſt Chriſt, ſetting himſelf up (and being acknowledged by the Samaritanes and others) for the chief or firſt God, ſuperior to all other Gods, and accordingly is publickly worſhipt by them, (ſee note on Rev. 14. b.) and aſſumeth to himſelf diſtinctly that he is God.

5. Remember ye not that when I was yet with you, I told you theſe things?] 5. If you remember, this very thing I foretold you, when I was among you, preaching the Goſpel, and therefore in any reaſon I muſt not now be interpreted to any contrary ſenſe, v. 2.

† that he be revealed, ἵνα ἀποκαλυφθῇ

* in his own ſeaſon, ἐν τῷ ἰδίῳ καιρῷ

6. And now ye know what [h] withholdeth, that † he might be revealed * in his time.] h.

6. And now you cannot but diſcerne what 'tis, which makes ſome ſtop in their buſineſſe, Their ſeaſon of ſhewing themſelves and making open profeſſion of all hoſtility, and hatred againſt the Orthodox Chriſtians, is not yet come. The peculiar ſeaſon will be, when the Apoſtles have given over preaching to the Jewes, as hopeleſſe and refractary, and ſo goe to the Gentiles, Mat. 24. 13. and conſequently break off that more tender compliance with the Jewes; For as long as that holds, the Jewes will not be ſo ſharp againſt the Chriſtians, and conſequently 'twill not be yet ſo fit a ſeaſon for the Gnoſticks to diſcover their veneome againſt them.

† is already acted ἤδη ἐνεργεῖται

* only there is that withholdeth as yet, μόνον ὁ κατέχων ἄρτι

7. For the [i] myſterie of iniquity † doth already work, * onely he who now letteth, will let, untill he be taken out of the way:] i.

7. And therefore though this ſort of men be already formed into a ſect, under their ringleaders Simon, and Carpocrates, &c. yet at this time 'tis carried more cloſely, they are not broken out into ſuch open renouncing of, and oppoſition to Chriſt, and Chriſtians, they have no occaſion as yet to ſide with the Jewes againſt the Chriſtians, nor ſhew of quarrel whereupon to exaſperate the Jewes againſt them, becauſe the Chriſtians walk warily, and doe nothing contrary to the Moſaick law, which is the thing which holds them from breaking out, v. 6. But as ſoon as ever that which withholdeth is removed, i. e. as ſoon as the Apoſtles depart v. 3. go profeſſedly to the Gentiles, give over the Jewes, and permit not Chriſtians to Judaize, but call them off from obſerving the law,

k. 8. Then immediately ſhall this ſect of Gnoſticks ſhew it ſelf, joyn with, and ſtirre up the Jewes, and bring heavy perſecutions upon the Chriſtians, and (having this opportunity to calumniate them to the Jewes) behave themſelves as their profeſſed oppoſers. And Simon Magus ſhall ſet himſelf forth in the head of them; Whom, as a profeſt enemy of Chriſt, Chriſt ſhall deſtroy by extraordinary means by the preaching and miracles of S. Peter: and for all the Apoſtatizing Gnoſticks that adhered to him, they ſhall be involved in the deſtruction of the unbeleiving Jewes, with whom they have joyned againſt the Chriſtians.

8. And then ſhall * that k wicked be revealed, whom the Lord ſhall conſume † with the ſpirit of his mouth, and ſhall deſtroy * with the brightneſſe of his coming,]

* the wicked one

† by the breath of his own mouth τὸν ἄνομον ὃν ὁ κύριος Ἰησοῦς ἀναλώσει τῷ πνεύματι τοῦ στόματος αὐτοῦ

* by the appearing of his own preſence τῇ ἐπιφανείᾳ τῆς παρουσίας αὐτοῦ

9. This perſon whom now I ſpeak of, and his followers, are ſuch, as by Magick doe many ſtrange things to deceive men into an admiration of themſelves,

9. Even him whoſe coming is after the working of Satan, with all power and ſignes, and lying wonders,]

10. And by baits of luſt, &c. they work upon the generality of wicked carnal Chriſtians, and this as a puniſhment for their not being brought to ſincere repentance and true faith by the Goſpel, but preferring the ſatisfaction of their own humors, and paſſions, and prejudices, Joh. 8. 45. before the doctrine of Chriſt, when it came with the greateſt conviction, and evidence, and authority among them, Tit. 2. 11.

10. And with all deceivableneſs of unrighteouſneſs, in them that periſh, becauſe they received not the love of the truth, that they might be ſaved.]

11. And this is the cauſe why God ſuffers meer Magicians to deceive them by falſe miracles, and by that means to bring them to beleive all kind of falſeneſſe, falſe gods, falſe waies of worſhip, deceitfull, cheating, falſe miracles to get authority to thoſe, and all manner of heathen, licentious, vicious practiſes, the conſequents of thoſe errors, and the moſt contrary to Evangelical truth:

11. And for this cauſe God ſhall ſend them † ſtrong deluſions, that they ſhould beleive a lie:]

† deceitfull working ἐνέργειαν πλάνης

12. That ſo filling up the meaſure of their obdurations, they may fall under condemnation, or be judged and diſcerned to be, what they are, impenitent infidels, and accordingly remarkeably puniſhed.

12. That they all might be * damned, who beleived not the truth, but had pleaſure in unrighteouſneſs.]

* judged κριθῶσι

13. The more of truth there is in all this, the more are we bound to bleſſe and praiſe God for his goodneſſe to you, brethren, that he hath been ſo favourable to you above others, as to appoint the Goſpel to be preached to you, and you to be called to the faith of Chriſt ſo early (ſo theſe being Jewes at Theſſalonica, are ſaid to have beleived before others Epheſ. 1. 12.) and ſo to be taken out of that wicked generation by the preaching of the Goſpel, and that grace which is annext to it, and by your receiving of the truth (by which means you are ſafe both from the Apoſtaſie v. 3. and the deluſions v. 10. and from the deſtruction that ſhall ſhortly come upon the Jewes and Gnoſticks, v. 1, 8, & 12.

13. But we are bound to give thanks alway to God for you, brethren, beloved of the Lord, † becauſe God hath from the beginning choſen you to ſalvation, through ſanctification of the Spirit, and beleif of the truth,]

† that he in

14. Unto which honour and advantages God hath by our preaching advanced you, that thereby ye might have your parts in all the glorious effects of Chriſt's power in his ſervants, and over his enemies.

14. Whereunto he called you by our Goſpel, to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.]

15. To conclude therefore, Doe you, brethren, take care to retain conſtantly all the doctrine, which I have, (both at my being with you for the preaching of the Goſpel to you, and ſince in mine Epiſtle) delivered to you, all ſuch, I mean, as I have truly told or written to you, not ſuch as are unduly put upon you under that pretence, v. 2.

15. Therefore, brethren, ſtand faſt, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word, or our Epiſtle.]

16. And I beſeech that Lord and Saviour of ours, Jeſus Chriſt, in the notion of a Father, who out of his meer love to us hath thus given us his ſon, and through him afforded us matter of endleſſe comfort, even the hope of eternal joyes to reward our temporary ſufferings, and revealed this to us in the preaching of the Goſpel (ſee note on Heb. 13. c.)

16. Now our Lord Jeſus Chriſt himſelf, and God, even our father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlaſting conſolation and good hope through grace,]

17. That he will now in your tribulations and perſecutions refreſh and cheer you up, and confirm you to perſevere ſtedfaſt and conſtant in the profeſſion of the truth, and in all Chriſtian practiſes.

17. Comfort your hearts, and ſtabliſh you in every good word and work.]

a. ὑπὲρ

The preposition ὑπὲρ is oft taken in the notion of περὶ of, or about, or concerning, or for, as that denotes the matter of the inſuing diſcourſe, as when we ſay in Engliſh, Now, for ſuch a matter, or point, or queſtion, which is the form of entring upon any diſcourſe. And thus it ſeems to be underſtood here, making the coming of Chriſt &c. the things which he proceeds to diſcourſe of, which having been touched upon in the former Epiſtle, c. 5. 1. (and, it ſeems, that which was ſaid in that Epiſtle, miſunderſtood by them, in ſome circumſtances) he proceeds, as in a known matter, to ſpeak of it, and ſo ὑπὲρ] will be beſt rendred, concerning.

b. Παρουσία τ Κυρίυ Παρουσία τ Κυρίυ

Παρουσία τ Κυρίυ &c. the coming of the Lord, hath been at large explained, note on Mat. 24. b. to ſignifie the coming of Chriſt as a Judge to deſtroy the Jewes, (as Pſa. 96. 13. For he cometh, for he cometh to judge the earth, and as Pſal. 97. 5. the hils melted like wax at the preſence of the Lord, the very παρουσία τῦ Κυρίυ here,) and by that meanes to reſcue thoſe that were perſecuted by them, and this is by Saint James c. 5. 7, 8. called by this title, παρουσία τῦ κυρίυ, the coming of the Lord, and that then ἐγγίζουσα, approaching, and farther expreſſed v. 9. by the Judge ſtanding before the dores, and ſo there is little reaſon to doubt but that it ſo ſignifies here; 'Tis true indeed that 1 Theſ. 4. 15. παρουσία τῦ Κυρίυ, the coming of the Lord] is uſed for the final day of doom; but the phraſe here appears not to refer to that place, for after the deſcription of that to the end of that fourth Chapter the Apoſtle c. 5. begins περὶ δὲ τῶν χρόνων καὶ τῶν καιρῶν but concerning the times and ſeaſons, as of ſomewhat which was then approaching, and preſumed to be ſufficiently only known among them, and on that subject he tels them, that they know that the day of the Lord cometh as a thief in the night, Now to this coming of the day of the Lord, it is, that the Apostle here refers, in this second Epistle (that which he had said of it in the first Epistle, and particularly the ἀιφνίδιος ὄλεθρος suddain destruction v. 3. being misinterpreted by some of them, and changed into ἐνέστηκεν ἡ ἡμέρα τοῦ Χριστοῦ the day of Christ is instantly approaching) as may appear by the end of the second verse, where the very phrase is us'd, the day of the Lord; which therefore is to be taken for the interpretation of παρουσία Χριστοῦ the coming of Christ, v. 1. the one, as well as the other, ordinarily denoting this judgement of Christ upon the Jewes (see note on Ro. 13. d.) And then the ἐπισυναγωγὴ ἡμῶν ἐπ᾽ αὐτόν, our assembling to him, must be proportionably explained to signifie that greater liberty of the Christians to assemble to the service of Christ, the freedom of Ecclesiasticall assemblies, which was a consequent of that great judgement on the persecutors in the times of Vespasian and Titus, see note on Rev: 1. b. and c. 3. 10. and c. 7. 15. Thus is the phrase used 2 Mac: 2. 7. where God's gathering his people again together, an effect of his receiving them into mercy, is his giving them the liberty of the Temple, and his service there. And so ἐπισυναγωγὴ ἑαυτῶν the assembling of themselves, Heb: 10. 25. is their meeting together in the publicke service of Christ. And this, as it was an happy consequent of this deliverance, so was it to be used as a solemne meanes of expressing their gratitude to Christ, who had thus delivered them, and so was peculiarly a gathering together εἰς αὐτὸν to him.

Ἐπισυναγωγὴ εἰς αὐτόν

c. Ἐνίστημι

The word ἐνίστημι] here notes the immediate approach of this day, or the instant coming of it. So ἐνεστῶτα, the things just at hand, Ro. 8. 38. and 1 Cor. 3. 22. are set opposite to τὰ μέλλοντα, the things to come, which were future, but after some time, not so immedtately to come to passe. And this being the direct and exact notion of the word, is a key to the whole matter; For that this day was ἐγγίζον drawing neer, had been oft affirmed by the Apostle, and as Lactantius saith (see note on title of the Epistle to the Rom: 2) commonly foretold by Peter and him, in all their preachings, and 1 Thes. 5. 1. he had farther given them warning, that it would come as a thief in the night, i. e. on a suddain, unobservably, or unexpectedly. This it seems was mistaken by them, and the suddainnesse and unobservablenesse of it when it should come, interpreted by some to denote the immediate, instant approach of it, at that time wherein he spake. This error of theirs they founded on three things, first, on the Revelations, which some had received in this matter, and which were understood to this sense; which is the meaning of διὰ πνεύματος by spirit, the spirit of prophesy, either truly such, or pretended to be such; 2*dly* on the discourses, and affirmations of Saint Paul, when he was among them, which is the meaning of διὰ λόγου by the word of mouth; 3*dly* on the words of his former Epistle, where he had said c. 5. 2. that it cometh as a thief in the night, and that when they said peace and safety, τότε ἀιφνίδιος αὐτοῖς ὄλεθρος ἐφίσταται then a speedy destruction invadeth them, which last they interpreted, as if he had said, ἐν ἐνέστηκεν, that it were now instant, or present at hand, and so founded their doctrine upon Saint Paul, which is the meaning of ὡς δι᾽ ἡμῶν, as if we had thus taught, either by word of mouth, or by that Epistle, or by both, that this day of the Lord was now instantly a coming, where, as the mistake was no more, then by interpreting ἐνίστημι by ἐνέστηκα, the approach when they said peace, i. e. when they least looke for it, by the being now immediatly at hand, so it was an error of ill consequence, and directly contrary to what the Apostle had taught them, when he was with them, v. 5. and therefore their embracing it was justly branded by him with the title of σαλευθῆναι being suddainly shaken from the sense, or understanding, or notion of that coming, which he had imparted to them. And besides it was a mistake that, he foresaw, would shrewdly disturb them, when looking for it, according to that belief, they should finde themselves defeated, and so be tempted to call the Apostles truth in question, from whom they took themselves to have it; And as this would be apt to give them doubts of the truth of the whole Gospel, which they had beleived on the same authority, so would the sharpness of the present persecutions be in danger to shake them quite out of their constancy, when they found themselves thus deluded in their expectation of relief; and this is the meaning of θροεῖσθε, being troubled. And accordingly we finde in Saint Peter, 2 Epist: c. 3. 4. that many thinking Christ's promise broken concerning this his coming, went over to the Gnosticks, joyned with them in infidelity and carnality, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming?

Σαλευθῆναι ἀπὸ τοῦ νοὸς

Θροεῖσθαι

d. Ἀποστασία

That ἀποστασία in its natural signification imports no more then abscession or departure, is clear by the verb ἀφίστημι, from which it immediatly comes, So Act. 15. 38. when 'tis said of John, τὸν ἀποστάντα ἀπ᾽ αὐτῶν ἀπὸ Παμφυλίας, sure it signifies no more then that he had departed from them, not from the faith of Christ in our modern notion of Apostasie, and in that place the King's MS. reads ἀποστάντα, whic is a verb made from ἀποστάτης Apostate, and yet there signifies no more, then leaving or forsaking their company, not the faith of Christ at that time. Thus the word is used distinctly in this matter of Moses's law, Act. 21. 21. ἀποστασίαν διδάσκεις ἀπὸ Μωσέως, thou teachest the Jewes in Asia &c. to forsake the Mosaical law. And therefore it is possible that the word ἀποστασία here may signifie either 1. this departing of the Apostles from the Jewes, leaving them and departing to the Gentiles, which was indeed a great provocation to the Jewes to persecute them most bitterly, and so might be made use of by the Gnosticks as the opportunity most fit to exasperate the Jewes against them; Or else 2*dly* the departing of the beleiving Jewes from the Mosaicall observances, circumcision &c. And this also sharpned the persecutors against them. And so Saint Luke uses the word ἀποστάς, Act. 19. 9. of Paul, when the Jewes were hardned and disobedient, and spake evill of that way before the multitude, ἀποστὰς ἀπ᾽ αὐτῶν, ἀφώρισε τοὺς μαθητὰς, he departed from them, and separated the disciples, i. e. he (and the Christian beleivers) forsook and separated from them and betook himself to the Gentiles of Asia, and so at other times he did, Act. 13. 46. and finally, Act. 28. 28. And to this the Apostle seems

Ἀποστασία τῶν Μωσαϊκῶν

ſeemes to exhort the Hebrew believers, Heb. 13. 13. Let us therefore come forth to Chriſt without the camp, make an expreſſe ſeparation from the unbelieving Jewes, bearing Chriſt's reproach, i. e. although we be perſecuted by them for doing ſo. But beſides theſe, there is the ordinary vulgar notion of Apoſtaſie, which may very probably be meant here, a notable diſcernible apoſtatizing of Chriſtians to that abominable impiety of the Gnoſtickes, of which Saint Paul 1 Tim. 4. 1. affirmes ἀποστήσονταί τινες τῆς πίστεως, προσέχοντες πνεύμασι πλάνοις, ſome ſhall apoſtatize from the faith, giving ear to deceitfull ſpirits, and this, ſaith he there, the ſpirit ſaith expreſſely, i. e. Chriſt hath diſtinctly foretold, Mat. 24. 10. And then ſhall many be ſcandalized, i. e. fall off from the faith, and falſe prophets ſhall ariſe and deceive many, v. 11. and the love of many ſhall grow cold v. 12. contrary to the enduring to the end. And this there as the immediate forerunner of that great day, for, as it there followes v. 14. Then ſhall the end come. And againſt this the Apoſtle warns them to take heed Heb. 3. 12. leſt there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God, and they that did ſo, he ſaith they doe ἀποστολῆς οἱ ἀπολλυσιν draw back, or fall off unto perdition, Heb. 10. 22. And (beſides that by theſe warnings and intimations (ſee Heb. 12. 15.) it appears that many did, according to Chriſt's prediction, fall off) it is farther moſt certainly known, that Samaria, which was the firſt-fruits, as it were, unto Chriſt, after his aſcenſion, and embraced the faith univerſally, Act. 8. 12. 14. did alſo, by the ſubtlety of Simon Magus and the Gnoſticks, fall off from their firſt faith to that abominable hereſie. And ſo this may very fitly be here referred to by the Apoſtle, as that which muſt neceſſarily come to paſſe, before the coming of this day.

c. ὁ ἄνθρωπος τῆς ἁμαρτίας the man of ſin, is here the denotation of a very wicked ſort of people, and though it be in the ſingular number, muſt not yet, in any reaſon, be confined to a ſingle perſon, but to ſome one, or more ringleaders, and their followers. Thus we know χριστὸς Chriſt, ſignifies him, as he is the head of his Church, and is ſometimes uſed to ſignifie the whole ſociety of Chriſtians (ſee note on Gal. 3. d.) And ſo ἀντίχριστος Antichriſt, is ſure no ſingle perſon, conſidered alone, but in conjunction with his followers, And in this latitude proper names of perſons are propheticall uſed, to ſignifie people, Jezebel, for this hereſie of Gnoſtickes, the whole ſet of them, (ſee note on Rev. 2. n) and many the like. And accordingly here it cannot be ſtrange, that the ἄνθρωπος ἁμαρτίας the man of ſin, ſhould ſignifie more then one ſingle perſon, viz. Simon and the Gnoſtickes. So likewiſe for all that follow, υἱὸς ἀπωλείας the ſon of perdition (one fit, and ſure to be deſtroyed, as בן מות the ſon of death, one that ſhall ſurely dye, 2 Sam. 12. 5.) ὁ ἀντικείμενος he that oppoſeth himſelf, (a circumlocution of Antichriſt) and ὁ ἄνομος the wicked one, v. 8. All which are here ſet to denote that impious ſect, under him which is known by the antients by the title of πρωτότοκος τοῦ Σατανᾶ, the firſt born of Satan, that accurſed Simon the Magician. That 'twas ſome Magician, is clear by what is ſaid of him v. 9. of the working of Satan evidenced in him, ἐν πάσῃ δυνάμει, καὶ σημείοις, καὶ τέρασι ψεύδους, &c. v. 10. in all power, and ſignes, and lying wonders. (which one, beſide many other circumſtances, ſufficiently prove, that it was not Cuinus, or any other of the Roman Emperors, as ſome have conceived) and that it was particularly Simon Magus, appears by Euſebius l. 2. c. 13. who at the beginning of Claudius's reigne mentions his coming to Rome, and there deſcribes him Διὰ τὴν ἐπιφανῆ δαιμόνων πλῆθος δυνάμει μαγικῇ πεποίηται, (words directly parallel to this ninth verſe) doing ſuch miracles there by the help of the devils, that he was taken for a God, and accordingly had a ſtatue erected betwixt the two bridges built on Tiber, with this inſcription, Simoni Deo Sancto, and, ſaith he, almoſt all the Samaritanes, and ſome of other nations confeſſed him τὸν παρ' αὐτοῖς θεὸν the firſt or principal God, and accordingly worſhipped him δημοσίαν ᾗ θυσίαις ᾗ σπονδαῖς, with all ſorts of ſacrifices, and with him alſo Helena (which went about with him, but had before been a proſtitute ſtrumpet in Tyrus) calling her ἣ ἀπ' αὐτοῦ πρώτην ἔννοιαν, that firſt cogitation that proceeded from him, a kind of Pallas out of Jupiter's head. Of him we may read at large in Irenæus, and by both ſee how truly not only that title belongs to him (given to him by Euſebius) that he was πάσης ἀρχηγὸς αἱρέσεως the ring-leader of all the hereſie that crept into the Church, and ſo of the Apoſtaſie here ſpoken of among the Samaritans, and of all the doctrines and practiſes of the Gnoſticks quickly following in the Church, but alſo how perfectly appliable to him is that which is here added, that he exalted himſelf above all that is called God, or worſhip &c. For before his baptiſme it is ſaid of him Act. 8. that he was by all the Samaritans cried up to be Δύναμις τοῦ θεοῦ μεγάλη (or, as the MSS. read ἡ καλουμένη μεγάλη, the divine power which is called great, i. e. the Divine Majeſty called diverſly by ſeveral nations, but by all acknowledged as the greateſt and ſupreme Deity) and after the feigned reception of the faith and baptiſme, he did not leſſen, but rather increaſe his pretenſions. And accordingly ſaith Irenæus l. 1. c. 20. Simon Magus intendit contendere adverſus Apoſtolos, uti & ipſe glorioſus videretur eſſe, A Claudio Cæſare ſtatuâ honoratus eſſe dicitur propter Magiam. Hic igitur à multis quaſi Deus glorificatus eſt, & docuit ſemetipſum eſſe, qui apud Judæos quaſi filius adparuerit, in Samariâ autem quaſi pater deſcenderit, & in reliquis Gentibus quaſi Spiritus ſanctus adventaverit. Eſſe autem ſe ſublimiſſimam virtutem, hoc eſt, eum qui ſit ſuper omnia pater, & ſuſtinere vocari ſe quodcunque eum vocant homines. Simon Magus ſet himſelf to contend againſt the Apoſtles, that he alſo might appear glorious. He was for his Magick honoured with a ſtatue by Claudius Cæſar. He was glorified by many as a God, and taught that himſelf was he that appeared as the Son among the Jewes, that in Samaria he deſcended as the Father, and in other nations came as the Holy Ghoſt, That he was the moſt ſublime virtue, that is, he which was the father over all, and that he was content to be called by the higheſt titles that any men did call him. And ſo ſaith Tertull: de Animâ; Simon (ſpeaking of Helena his prima ennoia by which he created the Angels, and powers which made the world, and whom he called alſo the loſt ſheep, becauſe of her having been in a brothel-house) ſaith that ad hanc deſcendit pater ſummus, to her deſcended the ſupreme father, (calling himſelf by that title) and having carried her back to his palace; vt deinde ad hominum reſpexit ſalutem, from thenceforth had all care to the ſalvation of men. Again that ſtatue of his was made, ſaith Irenæus, in figuram Jovis, after the figure of Jupiter, and Helena's after the figure of Minerva, and theſe, ſaith he, were worſhipped by them. And at laſt among the doctrines of his followers, Saturnilus and Menander, he ſets down, Judæorum Deum unum ex Angelis eſſe, c. 22. that the God of the Jewes was but of the ſeven Angels that made the world. Ipſum vero Simonem unum Patrem eſſe qui fecit Angelos, Archangelos, Virtutes, Poteſtates, But that Simon himſelf was the onely Father that made the Angels, Archangels, Virtues, and Powers, So clearly making himſelf ſuperior to the God of the Jewes, and indeed creator of him. So ſaith Juſtin Martyr Apol: 2. (ſee note b. on Jude.) Now for the ἀποκάλυψις, this man and theſe Gnoſticks revealing themſelves, that ſignifies their putting off that diſguiſe of Chriſtianity under w^ch they vailed themſelves a while, and ſetting up, he and his followers, profeſſedly againſt Chriſt and his Apoſtles. For Simon himſelf, that at firſt he was baptized and made a ſhew of being a Chriſtian, hath appeared Act. 8. but this without any ſincerity at that time, any γνησία αἵρεσις, genuine purpoſe of change, ſaith Cyril of Jeruſalem, Cat: 1. After this he went on in his way of deceiving the people by his ſorceries, as appears by his deſiring to buy the power of working miracles from the Apoſtles, and being denied that, ſoon after he ſet up, and oppoſed himſelf againſt Chriſt, and accordingly is here called ὁ ἀντικείμενος, the adverſary, or, he that oppoſeth himſelf, and by S. John, ὁ Ἀντίχριστος the Antichriſt, which is the ſame, And about the time of erecting the ſtatue to him at Rome, being by the preaching of the Goſpel driven out of that city, it was ſome ſpace of years, before he appeared there again, in conteſtation with S. Peter, which may paſſe for his revealing of himſelf, that at the writing of this Epiſtle was yet future. As for the Gnoſticks, the followers of him, and other ſuch leaders, thus it was. The Jewes perſecuting the Chriſtians, and thoſe perſecutions ſhaking the faith of many, and the Gnoſticks keeping themſelves ſafe from thoſe perſecutions, by forſwearing of Chriſt in time of danger from the Jewes (as they ſacrificed to Idols, to ſecure them from the Gentiles) and having other carnal baits, all manner of filthineſs to invite carnal, or fearful perſons to their party, did ſoon draw all Samaria from Chriſt, and ſo, wheresoever Chriſtianity was planted in other parts, at Rome, in Aſia &c. corrupted the believers every where, ſo that many were polluted, or infected by their poyſon, Heb. 12. 15. and at length joyned with the Jews in the greateſt bitterneſs of perſecuting the orthodox Chriſtians, firſt ſecretly, ὡς κύνες λαθροδήκται as dogs that bite and bark not, ſaith Ignatius, and then they were the myſterie here, but at laſt openly and avowedly, and that is the meaning of ἡ ἀποκάλυψις] the revealing this myſterie; And this avow'd oppoſing and perſecuting the Chriſtians, was to be a forerunner of that day of the Lord, and till that was come, the day was not yet inſtant, though neer at hand.

Σέβασμα in this place being joyned with θεὸν called God, not to diſtinguiſh it from the former but with an [i. e.] to explicate the former, or to extend it farther then the former might be thought to extend, muſt ſignifie not the worſhip it ſelf, but that which is worſhipped, whatſoever that is; The nations and people of the world, all of them, acknowledged and worſhipped ſomewhat, which they called God, or Numen, but all falſe and Idol nothings, ſave only the one creator of heaven and earth, yet on theſe they beſtowed thoſe magnificent titles of God, and Great power of God, and other the like, and to comprehend all thoſe titles by which all thoſe falſe Gods were known, this word σέβασμα worſhip, or deity, or (by repeating the word λεγόμενον) all that is called worſhip or deity, is here uſed. And ſo the word is uſed by the Author of the Book of Wiſdome, ch. 14. 20. and rightly rendred, a God. So Act. 17. 23. ἀναθεωρῶν τὰ σεβάσματα ὑμῶν I beholding your worſhips, i.e. their Salvians, their idols and Armours, of which their city had and worſhipped ſo many. For ſo v. 16. it is ſaid of him that he did θεωρεῖν, behold, that their city was κατείδωλον, full of Idols or falſe Gods, and v. 22. that he did θεωρεῖν behold again that they were δεισιδαιμονεστέρους worſhippers of more Idols or Damons, than any other city. So in Photius Ep: 162. Τὰ τῶν Ἑλλήνων σεβάσματα ζῶα, θεὸς &c. Not the worſhips, but the Gods that are worſhipt by the Grecians; and again ἀτιμάζων ἐσεβάσμιον σέβασμα he reproached his own God. And ſo 'tis truly here ſaid of Simon Magus, that he did ſet himſelf up above all that is any where worſhipped, true or falſe God, making himſelf the ſupreme father of all, who had created the God of the Jewes, as appeared note e.

What καθίσαι εἰς ναὸν τοῦ θεοῦ εἰς θεὸν to ſit on the Temple of God as God, ſignifies, cannot now be difficult after the conſideration of the former paſſages note e. and f. For being owned by all Samaria as the ſupreme God, and worſhipt, as was ſaid, θυμιάμασι, καὶ θυσίαις, καὶ σπονδαῖς, by incenſe and ſacrifices &c. it cannot be doubted but theſe were performed to him in thoſe places which had been ſet apart to the worſhip of the true God, and ſo that is [to ſit or place himſelf in the Temple of God] ἀποφαίνειν ἑαυτὸν ὅτι θεὸς vaunting or declaring himſelf that he is God, aſſuming thoſe honours to himſelf. Thus ſaith Juſtin Martyr, Apol: 2. of ſome, i. e. of him and Helena his ſtrumpet, that they did λέγειν ἑαυτοὺς εἶναι θεούς, affirm themſelves to be Gods. And ſo Irenæus, Docuit ſemetipſum &c. He taught that he was God, ſee note e. To this purpoſe it is that Juſtin Martyr affirms that Claudius erected him a ſtatue at Rome on Tiber, betwixt the two Bridges, inſcribed Simoni Deo Sancto, To Simon the holy God, Every ſuch ſtatue or image being according to the theologie of the heathens, a kind of vaile or temple or chappel, where the God to whom the ſtatue was conſecrated, was ſaid to dwell. And although Petrus Ciaconius in Opuſc: ſuſpects this to be a miſtake of Juſtin, becauſe about that place in Rome An: Dom: MDLXXIV. a baſis of a marble ſtatue was digg'd up with this inſcription Simoni Sancō Deo Fidio ſacrum &c yet the authority of Juſtin, writing this ſo ſoon after, to the Emperors of Rome, who could and would have diſcerned his falſity, if it had been ſuch, will be abundantly ſufficient to oppoſe to this conjecture jecture, especially when Irenæus insisting on it soon after him, and Tertullian better acquainted with that city and story, then to be thus imposed upon, have added their confirmations of it, and many writers of the Church of Rome after them, continued the tradition unquestioned, till this conjecture set up against it.

h. κατέχον

Κατέχων here signifies to hinder, to restrain him that is here spoken of, i. e. the ὁ ἀντικείμενος, the impious proud adversary, Simon Magus, and his Gnosticks v. 11. from putting off their disguise, and revealing themselves in their colours, i. e. cruell professed enemies to Christ and Christians, and by the addition hereof [ἐν τῷ ἑαυτῶ καιρῷ in his own season] some conjecture may be made what the [τὸ κατέχον that which hinders] signifies. For it being thereby manifest that there was a season most proper for them thus to reveal themselves, the τὸ κατέχον must be the absence, or not approach of that season. Now what the Gnosticks season of shewing or revealing themselves was, appeares by what hath formerly been said, viz. the Christians separating from the Jewes; Till they did this, the Gnosticks wanted a pretence to exasperate the Jewes, but then having that advantage, they shewed themselves in their colours, and so this is their season of revealing themselves. And the point of time when this season came, was, when the Apostles departed professedly from the Jewes (see Paraphrase on Rom. 7. 1.) and not onely gave over tempering, and complying with them, but preaching to them also, as contumacious and hopeless, with a Behold we turn to the Gentiles] For this made the Jewes to become implacable to the Christians, to persecute them bitterly (see Eph. 3. 1. 13.) not onely as contemners of Moses's law, which interdicted that free commerce with the Gentiles, but as those that hated them, and thought them unworthy of the Gospel of Christ, Act. 13. 46. And from thence sprang the Apostasie of many weak Christians to this party, through this necessity of adhering to one side or other, either of persecuting with the Jewes, or being persecuted with the Christians, the Apostle, Heb. 13. 13. calling the Christians to come from among them, to goe out unto Christ without the Campe, bearing his reproach, i. e. to leave off the Jewish ceremonies, which now became obstructions and hindrances to the progresse of the Christian faith, and to doe it, though it brought all persecutions upon them. And accordingly all were now forced to make their choice and avow it, and so they did (to avoid the persecution from the Jewes) many profest themselves Jewes, though they were not so by birth (nor circumcised, many of them, Gal. 6. 12, 13.) and, then having departed from the faith, soon proceeded to the greatest hatreds of them which did not, expres'd the fiercest zeal against the Christians of any, according to Christ's saying, that the Jewish Pharisaical proselytes became doubly more the children of the devil, then themselves (see note on Mat. 23. d.) This then being the season of the Gnosticks breaking out against the Christians, the absence of that season, must consequently be the Apostles and Orthodoxe Christians keeping faire with the Jewes, and being not yet departed to the Gentiles, their observing some ceremonies in complyance with, and in hope of gaining the Jewes. This we know they did for some time, upon a double consideration, 1. On hope of doing good upon the Jewes by that meanes, (so Paul circumcised Timothy, Act. 16. 3. and so he purified himself Act. 21. 26.) and 2dly to avoid the persecutions of the Jewes, which it seemes Saint Peter did, Gal. 2. 12. fearing those of the circumcision. And as yet the Apostles, it seemes, had not given over these compliances, when Saint Paul wrote this. And this, as long as it lasted, kept it from being a fit season for the Gnosticks to shew themselves, and so in all probability is the τὸ κατέχον here, that which hindred, and the ὁ κατέχων, ordinarily rendred, he that hinders v. 7. (which is in all reason the same, the gender making no difference in this matter, and, if it did, yet the ὁ being applyable to the law, ὁ νόμος, and not any necessary denotation of a person, and withall the neuter as fit to interpret the masculine; as the masculine to interpret the neuter) 'Tis true indeed divers of the Ancients expecting still some farther Antichrist continually, did phansie the Roman Empire to be the τὸ κατέχον, or that that hindered, But that was caused by looking for that as future, which was some time past, and now out of their minds, and by the Apostles not mentioning what it was; which omission of his was occasioned by his having told them of it formerly, and supposing that they knew it sufficiently (καὶ νῦν οἴδατε, and now ye know &c.) so that there was no no need of repeating it, and it seems they had been, at his being among them, so fully instructed in it, that he tels them 1 Thes. 5. 1. that he need not write to them of this subject.

ἐξαγχόμεθα ἐξω τὴς παρεμβολῆς

It must here be explained 1. what ἀνομία iniquity, and 2. what μυστήριον mystery, and 3. what ἐνεργεῖται acted] here signifie. For ἀνομία, that may signifie no more then some great enormous sin or conjuncture of sins; and so will very fitly be applyed to this sect of the Gnosticks, who were the vilest sort of people in the world, in respect of their abominable lusts, perjuries, joyning with idols &c. But the notion which seemes to be most proper to this place, is somewhat superadded to all this, viz. their malicious bitter persecuting of the Orthodoxe Christians. This is the notion of ἀνομία iniquity, Mat. 24. 12. upon the increasing of which many should be offended v. 10. and their love of Christ, zeal to Christianity should grow cold. And then 'twill be easie to conjecture what is the mystery of iniquity, viz. this villany in both parts of it, the vile sins of these men, and their bitter hatred to Christians, both somewhat disguised, and kept secret, not profess'd, and avowed (because it was not yet seasonable) but yet acted under hand more warily. And that is the meaning of ἐνεργεῖται agitur, for the word is generally used in a passive sense, (see note on Gal. 5. b.) and so signifies this, which is spoken of, to be already acted. And so in other the Epistles it is affirmed, that there were among them emulations, contentions, strifes, seditions, confusion, and every evill work, all this together, with the unclean abominable sins, ἤδη, already, acted among them, but as yet more secretly and closely, onely waiting their opportunity to break out, and shew themselves at a time of the best advantage, when that compliance of the Christians with the Jewes, the observation of the Mosaicall rites (one of which was, that they that were Jewes should not converse with those of another nation, Joh. 4. 9.) should be laid down, removed out of the way, the Apostles every where leaving the Jewes, and departing to the Gentiles, laying down the use of the Mosaical rites, and calling their disciples to come out from the Jewes, as they doe Act. 19. 9. Heb. 13. 10, 13. Gal. 2. & 3. & 4. and 5.

k. ὁ Ἄνομος

That ὁ ἄνομος the wicked here is the same with ὁ ἀντικείμενος the opposer v. 4. there is no question; and that this was Simon and his followers hath been shewed (note c.) and clearly appears by the character v. 9. that his coming is κατ' ἐνέργειαν τοῦ Σατανᾶ, according to the working of Satan in all power and signes and lying wonders, i. e. that they used sorcery, and did many strange things (such prodigies as the devil could help him to act) by that means, and, as it follows v. 10. succeeded very prosperously among many hypocritical, unsincere, carnal Christians, who were (by their indulgence of lusts, and promise of immunity from persecutions, and by the strangeness of their sorceries, Simon undertaking to flie in the aire &c.) corrupted and seduced by them. And this is farther described in the destruction, that, upon this revelation of themselves, should soon involve him and his. The relations of which are punctual among the antients; Of Simon saith Arnobius adv: Gent: l. 2. Viderant currum Simonis Magi, & quadrigas igneas Petri ore dissilatas, & nominato Christo evanuisse, Viderant pondere precipitatum suo, cruribus jacuisse prafractis: post deinde perlatum Brundam, cruciatibus, & pudore defessum, ex altissimi culminis se rursum precipitasse fastigio. The chariot and fiery horses of Simon, with which this magician undertook to fly in the aire, were blown away by Peters mouth, and vanisht at the name of Christ, And so he fell down, and brake his legs, and after some time was brought to Brunda, and through the torments, and the shame, became weary of his life, and cast himself headlong from the top of an high place, and so perisht. Many other testimonies of this are elswhere mention'd, (see note a. on 2 Tim. 3.) And for the Gnosticks, his followers, 'tis Eusebius's affirmation of them l. 3. c. 28. Λόγου δεῖσθαι οὐ τὸ παράπαν ἀποβήσεται, In a moment they were utterly destroyed, the ἀφνὼ καὶ ὀλεθρον swift destruction, foretold 1 Thess. 5. 2. And two means are here mentioned by which this should be done, 1. by the breath of Christ's mouth, 2dly, by the brightness of his coming; the former noting the power of the Gospel in the mouth of the Apostles Peter and Paul, who contended with him personally at Rome, and brought ruine and shame upon him: and the 2d noting the vengeance that befell the Jewes by the Roman armies, at which time the Gnosticks, that sided with them, were destroyed also (see note on 2 Pet. 2. 9. & Jude 2. & Rev. 14. note b.) And this seems to be so called 1 Tim. 6. 14. where he is charged to continue constant to Christ, whatever combats he meet with, μέχρις τῆς ἐπιφανείας, untill the appearance of our Lord Jesus Christ, which was surely somewhat then approaching, that was likely to fall out in Timothy's life time, and which, as he adds ver. 15. God, as the blessed and onely potentate, expressing his mercy and power together to all that adhere unto him, and as King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, subduing, and bringing down the stoutest persecutors, should shew forth, καιροῖς ἰδίοις in those proper seasons, which he had appointed for it.

CHAP. III.

Paraphrase.

* Furthermore Τὸ λοιπὸν

1. * FInally, brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord † may have free course, and be glorified even as it is * with you;]

1. And as I pray for your comfort and constancy, ch. 2. 17. So it becomes you to be constant in prayer for me and the rest of the Apostles and ministers of the Gospel, that our preaching may be successfull and prosperous, meeting with no such obstacles as may hinder the progresse of it, but may be every where received, and obeyed, and honoured by the good lives of the believers, as it hath among you;

† absurd

2. And that we may be delivered from [a] † unreasonable and wicked men; for all men have not faith.]

2. And that we may be rescued out of the hands of these villanous hereticks the Gnosticks, that deal in all unnatural impieties, and are ready to oppose us, wheresoever we come, and keep many from receiving the faith, and corrupt other hypocritical professors, And such there are in the world, all are not sincere.

2. 8.

* the evil one τοῦ πονηροῦ

3. But the Lord is faithfull, who shall stablish you, and keep you from * evil.]

3. But for you I trust in that God who hath promised to secure and defend you from being overcome with such temptations of these cunning diabolical hereticks.

4. And we have confidence in the Lord touching you, that ye both doe and will doe the things which we command you.]

4. And through the grace of God watching over you, I am confident that ye will still continue to obey our advises to you, as hitherto ye have done.

5. And the Lord direct your hearts into the love of God, and into the † patient waiting for Christ.]

5. To which confidence I shall joyn my prayer to that God, that he will direct you so to love him, as to endure any persecutions rather then deny the faith, to confesse Christ, whatsoever it cost you.

6. Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw your selves from every brother, that walketh disorderly, and not after the tradition which he received of us.]

6. Now I charge you by virtue of that Apostolicall power given me by Christ, that if you observe any man to cast off obedience to those rules which we gave at our being with you, i. e. to forsake his work, the businesses of his calling (see 1 Thess. 5. note d.) then (after a first admonishing of him 1 Thess. 5. 14. and a second here v. 12.) you proceed to the Censures of the Church against him, by that means to keep others from being corrupted by him, or doing as he doth, see v. 14.

7. For your selves know how ye ought to follow us; for we behaved not our selves disorderly among you.]

7. For you cannot but remember, how, beside beſide my admonitions to this purpoſe, I ſet you, by my own example, a pattern in this, by my not ſpending my time idly among you.

8. Being very carefull to put no man to any charges, nor to eat what we did not pay for, but earning our living by hard labour in our occupations.

8. Neither did we eat any mans bread for nought, but wrought with * labour and travell night and day, that we might not be chargeable to any of you.] * wearineſs and toile κόπῳ καὶ μόχθῳ

9. Not becauſe we might not lawfully receive from you if we would, 1 Cor. 9. 4. but on purpoſe to give you a pattern, that you labour as we have done.

9. Not becauſe we have not power, but to make our ſelves an enſample unto you to follow us.]

b. 10. For when we were among you preaching Chriſt, it was our command to all, what the Jewes have thought fit to require of all men proverbially, that they muſt labour themſelves, and not expect to be maintained by others labours, being idle themſelves.

10. For even when we were with you this we commanded you, b that if any would not work, neither ſhould he eat.]

11. Some ſuch idle perſons, wee heare, there are among you, that are diſobedient to our orders, and give over their work, and ſpend their time impertinently in things that they ſhould not meddle with.

11. For we hear that there are ſome which walk among you diſorderly, worſking not at all, but † are buſie-bodies.] † buſie themſelves about that which belongs not to them. περιεργαζομένους

12. And to theſe we again give warning now, (as before we did 1 Theſſ. 5. 14.) that they live and labour quietly, and ſo earn their living, (and if upon this ſecond admonition they reform not, let them be cenſured v. 6.)

12. Now them that are ſuch we command and exhort by our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that with quietneſs they work, and eat thier own bread.]

13. And as for you, brethren, be carefull to doe as much good as you can, and be not idle.

13. But ye, brethren, be not * weary in well-doing.] * ſlugg iſh ἐκκακήσητε

14. And as before ver 6. ſo now I ſay again, if upon this ſecond admonition given by this Epiſtle v. 12. any man ſtill continue refractary in this matter, let him be cenſured and branded by you, and dealt with as an excommunicate perſon, that ſo by ſhaming ye may poſſibly reform him. See note on 1 Cor. 5. g.

14. And if any man obey not our word by this Epiſtle, note that man, and have no company with him, that he may be aſhamed.]

15. Yet mean while apply unto him your friendly Chriſtian admonitions, that thoſe, together with that ſhame, may work effectually upon him, which is your duty to endevour on every ſinner, and not to deal with him, as men deal with their enemies. For how ill ſoever he is, you are to doe him all good imaginable, and therefore I preſcribe you that of withdrawing familiar commerce from him, as a method of all others moſt probable to doe him good, and then that may be a ſeaſon of advantage for your exhortations to work upon him.

15. Yet count him not as an enemy, but admoniſh him as a brother.]

16. Now * the Lord of peace himſelf give you peace alwaies, by all means. The Lord be with you all.

Τιμόθεος ἃ ἐν Ἐφέσῳ παροικίας ἰσχήκοτος θρόνου τὸ πρῶτον ἱστόρηται, Timothy is storied to have been the first Bishop of the province of Ephesus. And the same might be testified by innumerable more. S. Chrysostome may be taken for all, Hom: 15. in 1 Tim. 5. 19. Δῆλον ὅτι ἐκκλησίαν λοιπὸν εἶχεν ἐπιτετραμμένον ὁ Τιμόθεος, ἢ μᾶλλον ὅλον ἔθνος τὸ τῆς Ἀσίας, It is manifest that Timothy was intrusted with a Church, or rather with a whole nation, that of Asia. Now for the time when he was placed in this Bishoprick, as that will be usefull to direct us when this Epistle was written, so will that it self be concluded from this first Epistle, ch. 1. 3. where S. Paul's exhorting him to abide at Ephesus, that he might admonish some not to teach other doctrine &c. is an intimation of his leaving him Bishop resident there, and, that, saith he, he did πορευόμενος εἰς Μακεδονίαν, going, or when he went into Macedonia, i. e. in that part of S. Paul's travaile set down Act. 20. There v. 1. S. Paul went out from Ephesus, πορευθῆναι εἰς Μακεδονίαν, to go into Macedonia, at which time in all probability, (and by analogie with the words 1 Tim. 1. 3.) he left Timothy Bishop there: 'Tis true, that when S. Paul is in Macedonia, Timothy is with him there, 2 Cor. 1. 1. and after he had wintred in Epirus, Tit. 3. 12. and spent three months in Greece, Act. 20. 2, 3. and returned back into Macedonia, then Timothy is with him, Act. 20. 4. and goes straight to Troas v. 5. All which might well be after the leaving him at Ephesus, either on occasion of the business of that Church, about which he might go to consult S. Paul, being so neer, or in obedience to some summons of S. Paul (such as after, we see, he had to a longer journey, even to come to Rome to him, 2 Tim. 4. 9.) After this coming to Troas, Act. 20. 6. (although I suppose he was with him among the rest of the Bishops of Asia, at Miletus v. 17. yet) there is no farther mention of Timothy in the book of the Acts. Supposing then that this of Act. 20. 1. was the point of time to which S. Paul referres, when he speaks of his being left to reside at Ephesus, and supposing again that he could not write to him at any part of the time, when he was with him, and yet the whole contexture of the Epistle rendring it probable, that it was written (by way of directions) soon after his leaving him there, and that, whilst it was yet uncertain to S. Paul, whether he should come to Ephesus again, c. 3. 14, 15. (which also may be the reason, that there are no salutations in the close, because of his coming newly from thence, and his thoughts to be there again speedily) it will be from these premises reasonable to conclude, that either it was written on the way, as he went from Ephesus toward Macedonia Act. 20. 1. at Troas perhaps where he stayed a while (see note a. on title of 2 Cor.) or at his very first coming to Macedonia, or in Epirus, or in Greece; but the former of them, as neerest to his coming from Ephesus, is the most probable; That it was before his coming to Miletus Act. 20. 17. may thus appear, 1 Tim. 3. 14. he tells Timothy, that he hopes shortly to come to him, (to Ephesus that chief Metropolis of Asia) but at his being at Miletus, he tells them, that he knows that they shall see his face no more, Act. 20. 25, 38. and therefore that his being at Miletus must needs be after the writing this Epistle. His meeting them at Miletus, being to supply the place of his coming to Ephesus, which had formerly been designed by him, but now put off, through haste to get to Jerusalem by Pentecost, Act. 20 16. As for the subscription of the Epistle, that it was from Laodicea in Phrygia Pacatiana, 'tis Cujacius's observation, that that could not be antient, there being no distinction between Pacatiana and Salutaris, till the time of Constantine. and it is farther evident by Col. 2. 1. that Paul had not at the writing of that Epistle to the Colossians, been at all at Laodicea, and yet that that was long after the writing of this Epistle, that being set by Chronologers An: Chr: 59. Soon after this, as S. Paul tells the Ephesians and Asiaticks, Act. 20. 29. that after his departure grievous wolves should enter in among them, so he here saith, he left Timothy at Ephesus to fortifie the Church against them.

Besides this suppressing of hereticks, another special use there was of leaving Timothy at Ephesus, that, as Metropolitan of Asia, he might ordain Bishops and Deacons in all the other cities, where they were wanting, as is said of Titus in Crete. And accordingly this Epistle brings him particular directions to that purpose c. 3. CHAP. I.

1. I Paul that (Act. 13. 7.) was sent out & constituted an Apostle of Jesus Christ, according to the designation of him, who being God incarnate is both our Saviour and Lord to rescue us from the power of sin, and to rule and reign in our hearts, even he on whom all our trust and expectation and hope of good is founded and built;

1. PAUL an Apostle of Jesus Christ * by the commandment of God our Saviour, and Lord Jesus Christ, which is our hope,]

2. Unto Timothy, my own son in the faith; Grace, mercy and peace from God our father, and Jesus Christ our Lord.]

* according to the appointment, κατ' ἐπιταγὴν

2. To my dearly beloved Timothy whom I first converted, and so begat to Christianity, I send my heartiest wish of all good from God our carefull and loving father, and Christ Jesus to whom he hath committed all power in his Church unto the worlds end.

3. This Epistle I now send thee for thy directions, in pursuance of that Commission which I gave thee, when I constituted and appointed thee to reside as Bishop at Ephesus, at the time, when I went thence to go to Macedonia Act. 20. 1. that presiding and governing the Church there, thou mightst suppresse the seeds of the Gnostick heresie sowed there, and keep men within the form of sound doctrine, that which in all Churches was delivered by us,

3. † As I besought thee to * abide still at Ephesus when I † went into Macedonia, that thou mightest charge some that they teach no other doctrine.]

† Even as καθὼς
* continue at προσμεῖναι † was going, πορευόμενος

a. 4. And warn thy flock not to heed those fabulous pedegrees of the Gods, which, under the name of Æones, the Gnosticks (see note on Col. 2. 2.) talk so much of, and so bring in many perplext disputes, rather than instruct men in the way of salvation under the Gospel, or of Christian doctrine in matters belonging to God.

4. Neither give heed to fables and endlesse [a] genealogies, which * minister questions, rather than † edifying which is in faith so doe.]

* yeild παρέχειν
† the edification of God which is in faith, οἰκοδομὴν θεοῦ τὴν ἐν πίστει, or the dispensation of God, for the King's MS. and an Antient one in Magdalen College Oxon read οἰκονομίαν

5. The substance and perfection, or else the designe and aime of Christian duty being charity, whose genealogie is this, Faith unfeigned begets a good conscience, i. e. abstaining from all sin, that purity of heart, that love of all men:

5. Now the end of the commandment is charity, out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned:]

6. Which some aiming not at, have gone out of the way to a divinity made up of empty words, for so was the Gnosticks, see v. 4.

6. From which some having swerved have * turned aside unto vain jangling;]

* been turned aside to vain discourses, ἐξεκλίθησαν εἰς ματαιολογίαν

7. Joyning Judaisme to Christianity, and undertaking to expound the law, and to find those mysteries in it, which are the foundations of their impure doctrines, but observe no part of the law, nor at all apply it to the ruling of their lives.

7. † Desiring to be teachers of the law, * understanding neither what they say, nor whereof they affirm.]

† who will be doctors of the law, θέλοντες εἶναι νομοδιδάσκαλοι
* not thinking either μηδὲ νοοῦντες

8. Which is consequently a grievous abuse of the law, whose whole goodnesse consists in this, that a man order his actions so by it, as to abstain from the sins that it forbids, and doe the good, which it requires;

8. But we know that the law is good, if a man use it lawfully;]

9. It being certain that as good men will perform their duty without any law, so the law of Moses, as all other lawes, was given to the sons of those excellent Patriarchs, because it was foreseen they would not always continue so good, and so was on this very designe to keep in order such men as these, to restrain such impure Gnosticks as these from the sins they are guilty of, (and not to stand them in any stead, except they live according to it) Accordingly you know that Moses's law is very severe against the rebellious and contumacious, against blasphemers, and seditious, such as Corah Num. 16. 8. called Sinners there, (and to such are the Gnosticks compared Jude 11.) to the impure, and such as contemn all that is holy, such as Esau, to whom the Gnosticks are compared Heb. 12. 16. against parricides and murtherers,

9. Knowing this, that the law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawlesse and disobedient, for the ungodly and for sinners, for unholy and profane, for murtherers of fathers and murtherers of mothers, for manslayers,]

10. Against fornicators, and those of the foulest sort of those, Lev. 18. 22. against those that steal and sell servants, Exod. 21. 16. Deut. 24. 7. against false and perjurious persons, and generally all those sins and sinners that now the Gospel of Christ makes to be such, and these hereticks are noted for,

10. For whoremongers, for them that defile themselves with mankind, for men-stealers, for lyers, for perjured persons, and if there be any other thing which is contrary to † sound doctrine,]

† wholesome ὑγιαινούσῃ

13. 14. Since which time he hath moſt plentifully poured out on me, the gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, and proportionably to them, a lively faith toward Jeſus Chriſt, and an earneſt zeale for his Goſpel, which hath been wrought in me by his grace.

15. This is a faithfull ſaying, and worthy of all [c] acceptation, that Chriſt Jeſus came into the world to ſave ſinners, of whom I am chief.]

15. O 'tis a truth of an huge price, and fit to be the onely tradition or Cabala among us Chriſtians, in ſtead of all the Jewiſh ſecrets and myſteries that are talked of by theſe hereticks, that Chriſt Jeſus came a Saviour into the world on purpoſe to reſcue out of their evil courſes, and to obtain pardon and ſalvation upon their reformation, for the greateſt ſinners in the world, of which number I have reaſon to look on my ſelf as the principal of all others. c.

16. Howbeit for this cauſe I obtained mercy, that in me firſt Jeſus Chriſt might ſhew forth all long-ſuffering for a pattern to them which ſhould hereafter beleive in him to life everlaſting.]

16. But being ſuch God hath dealt moſt mercifully with me, called me from heaven whilſt I was perſecuting him, that I might be a prime object of his patience and longanimity, and in order of time the firſt that was ſo miraculouſly called, that ſo the wickedeſt of the Gentiles may in me have an example of hope of mercy, if they ſhall come in unto Chriſt.

Notes on Chap. 1.

a. Γενεαλογίαι

Moſt of the divinity of the Gnoſticks (made up out of the Greek Poets, Antiphanes, Heſiod, Philiſtion &c.) conſiſted of ζυζυγίαι and ἀπαλογίαι, conjunctions, and then from them Genealogies, how one thing joyns with another and begets a third (out of Night and Silence comes forth Chaos &c.) and applies all the theologie and genealogies of the Gods in Orpheus &c. to the ἄιωνες, as they called the Angels, (ſee note d.) In reference and oppoſition to which it is, that the Apoſtle here v. 5. ſets down a true Chriſtian genealogie of that excellent grace of Charity, ſo much wanting in thoſe hereticks, accordingly as it is produced in a Chriſtian, and that, ſaith he, is the ſpecial genealogie, with the ſtudy of which we Chriſtians (eſpecially they that call themſelves Gnoſticks) need to trouble our ſelves. See Tit. 3. 9.

b. Δόξη

Δόξη here ſeems to referre to the ſchechina among the Jewes, which we have often ſpoke of, noting the preſence or appearance of God, of Chriſt on the earth among us, ſee note on Mat. 3. k. and 16. n.

c. Ἀποδοχὴ

What is the importance of ἀποδοχὴ here, muſt be learnt from the uſe of קבל among the Jewes, eſpecially in the Chaldee idiome, where it ſignifies to receive any thing for undoubted, and with an honourable reſpect, the ſame that they expreſſe alſo by שמע to hear, i. e. obey, and beleive with the exhibition of honour, ſee Paulus Fagius on the Chaldee Paraphraſe, Gen. 26. 5. Thus when 2 Kin. 14. 11. the Hebrew reads שמע, and the Greek ἤκουσεν heard, the Chaldee Paraphraſe reads קבל received, by which appears, what is the meaning of δέχεσθαι ἄνθρωπον προφήτου, to receive a prophet Mat. 10. 41. (which in like manner Luke expreſſes by ἀκούειν to hear, in oppoſition to ἀθετεῖν to neglect, Lu. 10. 16.) to wit, to beleive and honour him. So 1 Cor. 2. 14. ὁ δὲ ψυχικὸς ἄνθρωπος οὐ δέχεται τὰ τοῦ πνεύματος, receives not the things of the ſpirit. i. e. neither beleives nor values them, but, as it followes, they are fooliſhneſſe unto him. So Joh. 1. 12. λαμβάνειν to receive is explain'd by πιστεύειν to beleive in the end of the verſe, and ſo μεταλαμβάνειν v. 11. where the Syriack hath קבל in both places. Hence are the Cabala of the Jewes, their receivings, i. e. traditions (as to give Eph. 4. 8. is all one with to receive, Pſal. 68. 18. and as in the Greek λῆμμα and δόσεν receipt and gift are all one) which they eſteem ſo undoubted and honourable, For as the office of the Doctor is מסר to deliver, ſo of the diſciple קבל to receive, as in the beginning of Pirche Aboth Moſes קבל received the law from Mount Sinai וּמְסָרָה and delivered it to Joſhuah. And as from the former of theſe words is the Hebrewes קַבָּלָה Cabala, their doctrine received, and had in ſo much reverence, ſo from the ſecond is their מָסוֹרֶת their doctrine delivered by hand from their anteceſſors, and without writing tranſmitted to poſterity, the firſt expreſſed in the New Teſtament often by ἀποδοχὴ, the ſecond by παράδοσις. So that this is the full ſenſe of this place. If there be any undoubted dogma, worthy of belief, any true Cabala, this certainly is it, that Chriſt came into the world to ſave ſinners.

δέχεσθαι ἄνθρωπον προφήτου

δέχεται τὰ τοῦ πνεύματος

ἀναδέχεσθαι

Παράδοσις

d. Αἰώνες

The αἰῶνες here of which God is ſaid to be the King, may poſſibly ſignifie the ſeverall ages of the world, and no more, that being the ordinary notaton of αἰὼν age. But it is alſo known what notion of αἰῶνες there was among the heretickes of thoſe firſt times, ſet down at large by Ireneus in his diſcovery of the Valentinians, where there is a great deal of phantaſtical unintelligible ſtuffe about the æones. And therefore conſidering that the Gnoſtickes hereſie was now abroad in the Church of Epheſus, named diſtinctly in the cloſe of this Epiſtle c. 6. 20. and referr'd to in a great part of this Chapter v. 3. 4 6. 7. 9. 10. and becauſe the Valentinians were but the progeny of theſe, ſaith Ireneus, and took their doctrines from them, and becauſe it hath been already ſhewn (note on Col. 2. a. and h.) that theſe were the titles of the Angels, who were in Ezechiel called חיות living creatures (and from thence theſe αἰῶνες formed by them) It is therefore not improbable that the Apoſtle might referre to this Theologie of theirs here, as he had done before v. 4. by their genealogies. And then this will be the meaning of the βασιλεὺς τῶν αἰώνων, the King, or Ruler, or ſupreme Commander (as of the whole world, ſo particularly) of the Angels, his conſtant ſubjects, and ſervants, and executioners of his will, thoſe to which, under the name of αἰῶνες, The Gnoſticks attribute ſo much to the ſame purpoſe is added [the incorruptible, inviſible, onely wiſe God] (in oppoſition to Simon Magus whom they taught to be the ſupreme God, being but a corruptible, viſible man, that by his ſorcery got the reputation of wiſedom among them) And the giving glory and praiſe to him is an antient form of Confeſſion of faith, which was wont to be done by way of Doxologie, And ſo is here ſet as a ſhort Creed, againſt the Gnoſtickes, ſo as the Doxologie in that form which is now continued in the Church, was framed againſt other heretickes.

Βασιλεὺς τῶν αἰώνων

e. Προφητείαι

That the Apoſtles received frequent revelations, and never more diſtinctly and frequently, than to this matter of deſigning Biſhops and Governours of the Church, may appear by many places; Thus concerning Paul and Barnabas the text is diſtinct, Act. 13. 2. The holy Spirit ſaid, Separate to mee Paul and Barnabas for the work to which I have called them, and ſo here of Timothy, and c. 4. 14. for that by prophecy here is meant ſuch revelation, may appear by comparing 1 Cor. 14. 25. with v. 30. for there what is προφητεύειν to propheſie in the former place, (and v. 31.) is ἀποκαλυφθῆναι ἄλλῳ to receive a revelation in the latter. To this ſenſe Saint Chryſoſtome and Theophylact are clear, Τὸ τῆς διδασκαλίας καὶ ἱερωσύνης ἀξίωμα μέγα ὄν, τῆς τῆ Θεῷ δοκούσης ψήφου, οὐκ ἂν ἄξιον δέξαιτο, διὰ τὸ πολλοὺς ἀπὸ τῆς προφητείας ἐγκρίνειν οἱ ἱερεῖς, τότε ἐκ πνεύματος ἦν, ὅτε ὁ Τιμόθεος ἀρίζεται δεῖ τῷ ἱερατεύειν. The dignity of being a Doctor and a Prieſt, being a great one, wants God's ſuffrage that a worthy perſon may receive it, thereupon the Prieſts were made antiently by propheſie, i. e. by the Holy Ghoſt. Thus Timothy was choſen to the Prieſthood, i. e. his Epiſcopacy; And ſo generally 'tis ſaid of the Biſhops of Aſia, that the Holy Ghoſt had ſet them over the flock, Act. 20. 28. Thus ſaith Clemens Romanus of the Apoſtles, that at their firſt preaching in every region and city, κατίστανον τὰς ἀπαρχὰς αὐτῶν, δοκιμάσαντες τῷ πνεύματι, εἰς ἐπισκόπους καὶ διακόνους. They conſtituted their firſt fruits, making trial and judgment of them by the ſpirit, into Biſhops & Deacons and again, προγνοὺς ἐληλύθεις τελείαν κατέστησαν τοὺς προειρημένους, having received perfect foreknowledge, i. e. revelation or prophecy, they conſtituted the forementioned Biſhops and Deacons, and not onely ſo for the preſent, but for the next courſe or ſucceſſion, for ſo ſaith he, μεταξὺ ἐπινομὴν δεδώκασιν ὅπως ἐὰν κοιμηθῶσι διαδέξωνται λειτουργοὶ δεδοκιμασμένοι ἄνδρες τὴν λειτουργίαν αὐτῶν, Afterward they gave order that if thoſe whom they had conſtituted, ſhould dye, other men that were approved (by the ſpirit alſo) ſhould undertake their Miniſtery or employment. So ſaith Clemens Alexandrinus of Saint John, that in Aſia he conſtituted Biſhops, ſometimes (ὅλας ἐκκλησίας ἀρμόσων) made up whole Churches, ὅπου δὲ κλῆρον ἔνα που κληρώσων τῶν ὑπὸ τοῦ πνεύματος σημαινομένων, ſometimes ordained ſome certain perſons, ſuch as were ſignified to him by the Spirit. (See Act. 8. note e.) That this ſhould thus be done in the Apoſtles time, beſides the will of God, there is this reaſon alſo diſcernible, becauſe in the firſt preaching of the Faith to any City, or Region, performed by the Apoſtles in their journeyes, as it was neceſſary, that the Apoſtle before he went away from them, ſhould leave a Governour among them, ſo it was not poſſible in ſo ſhort a ſtay, as ordinarily was made after the converſion of ſome in a city, to diſcern, by any human meanes, who of thoſe νεόφυτοι new converts would be fit for that imployment, and ſo this rendred it very neceſſary, that the Apoſtles either by the diſcerning ſpirit which they had extraordinarily beſtowed on them, or by particular Revelation, ſhould thus make deſignation of the perſons. But after, when Churches were ſeiled, and men had continued in the faith ſo long, as to give teſtimony of their ſincerity and abilities to qualifie them for that office, there was not that need of Revelation in this matter, humane meanes being in ſome meaſure ſufficient to direct in it; And accordingly by the qualifications, which Saint Paul names to Timothy and Titus in their ordaining Biſhops in every Church, it is evident, that they made Biſhops upon obſervation, and experience of mens behaviour and abilities, and upon the teſtimonials of the brethren, (and therefore were forbid to make a novice Biſhop, i. e. one lately converted, 1 Tim. 3. 6. becauſe of him they could not have this experience, or theſe teſtimonies) and were not afforded divine Revelation in it, or any thing proportionable to that.

f. Στρατιὰν στρατείαν

What is the meaning of the phraſe στρατιὰν στρατείαν] here muſt be fetch'd out of Num. 4. 3. where the Levites are ſaid to goe לָצָבָא into the army or hoſt, which is rendred by the Septuagint λειτουργῆσαι to officiate, and ſo Num. 1. 50. λειτουργήσουσι καὶ παρεμβαλοῦσι, they ſhall miniſter and encamp: ſo generally under the law, the miniſtery of the prieſts is compared to a warfare, the Temple to a camp, the inferior officers to watchmen, and the like, ſo Exod. 38. 8. when the women brought their gifts after child-birth to the tabernacle, they are expreſſed by הַצֹּבְאוֹת אֲשֶׁר צָבְאוּ the warriers that warred in the dore of the tabernacle. And therefore it is that 2 Sam. 6. 2. where there is ſpeech of the bringing back of the Arke, it is called the Arke of the Lord, whoſe name is the Lord of hoſts, who dwelleth between the Cherubims, i. e. the Lord of the Arke or tabernacle (the Temple being not then built) dwelling in it, between the Cherubims, and that perhaps is the reaſon, why in Zacharies propheſie, which concerns the rebuilding of the Temple, he is ſo oft intitled the Lord of hoſts, as the title moſt agreeable to ſtirre them up to that work, ſo when Pſal. 103. the Angels are called his hoſt, 'tis becauſe they miniſter unto him, and, as it followes, doe his will, and ſo the Sun and Moon are called the hoſt of God, as thoſe that miniſter unto him. Thus when Iſa. 40. 2. it is ſaid, Their warfare is accompliſhed (where the Old Latine reads corruptly malitia for militia) it belongs clearly to the ceſſation of the Leviticall Prieſthood, and ſo Dan. 8. 13. the ſanctuary and the hoſt ſhall be trodden down, And ſo Iſa. 24. 21. In that day God will viſit the hoſt of the moſt high, the temple in the like manner, Thus in the New Teſtament the weapons of our warfare 2 Cor. 10. 4. the inſtruments of the exerciſe of our Apoſtleſhip, the Cenſures of the Church &c. and 2 Tim. 2. 3. καλὸς στρατιώτης, a good Souldier of Chriſt, i.e. miniſter, and v. 4. I have fought a good fight, executed the office of my Apoſtleſhip as I ought to doe. And juſt ſo here, στρατιώτης πεμπὼ στρατίαν, to diſcharge the office of Evangeliſt firſt, then Biſhop, as he ought.

CHAP. II.

Paraphraſe.

1. I Exhort therefore, that firſt of all, [a] ſupplications, prayers, interceſſions, and giving of thanks be made for all men,]

1. In the firſt place therefore I adviſe thee, and all the Biſhops under thy Metropolis, that you have conſtant publick offices of devotion, conſiſting 1. of ſupplications for the averting of all hurtfull things, ſins and dangers; 2. of prayers for the obtaining of all good things which you want; 3. of intercеſſions for others; and 4. of thankſgiving for mercies already received; and all theſe not only for your ſelves, but, in a greater diffuſion of your charity, for all mankind,

2. For Kings, and for all that are in authority, that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godlineſſe and * honeſty.]

* gravity. σεμνότητι

2. For the Emperors & rulers of Provinces under them, to whom we owe all our peaceable living in any place, in the exerciſe of religion and virtuous life, and therefore ought in reaſon to pray and give thanks for them.

3. For this is good and acceptable in the ſight of God our Saviour,]

3. For this God under the Goſpel approves of, and requires at our hands,

† Who wills that all men ſhould eſcape, or be ſaved, Or θέλοντας ἀνθρώπους σῴζεσθαι

4. † Who will have all men to be ſaved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth.]

4. In proportion to the example which he hath given us in himſelf, who earneſtly deſires the good of all mankind, and uſeth all powerfull means to bring them to reform their former wicked lives, and now to entertain the Goſpel.

* one alſo Mediator of God and men, εἷς καὶ μεσίτης θεοῦ καὶ ἀνθρώπων

† a teſtimony in the proper ſeaſon, μαρτύριον ἰδίοις καιροῖς

5. For there is one God, * and one Mediator between God and men, the man Chriſt Jeſus.]

5. For it is but one God that is Creator of all, (who conſequently deſignes and wills the good of all) and ſo likewiſe but one Mediator and peace-maker between God and man, even he that hath taken our common nature upon him, and in it died for all thoſe whoſe nature he aſſumed, even Jeſus Chriſt;

6. Who gave himſelf a ranſome for all † to be teſtified in due time.]

6. Who died to redeem all men, and reſcue them out of their evil wales, laying down his life, pouring out his blood in our ſtead, and thereby gave alſo a teſtimony of the truth of his doctrine, thus ſealed with his blood, in the time appointed by God, and foretold by the prophets, as the ſeaſon for the working this great work.

* Or, with which I was intruſted, for the King's MS. reads ὃ πιστεύθην † or, the Spirit, for the King's MS. reads πνεύματι

7. * Whereunto I am ordained a preacher and an Apoſtle (I ſpeak the truth in Chriſt, and lie not) a teacher of the Gentiles in † faith and verity.]

7. Which doctrine of his hath been intruſted to me to divulge and preach unto all men, Gentiles as well as Jewes (Chriſt knows that I ſpeak the truth, whoſe commiſſion it were very unſafe for me to feigne) that I might be the Apoſtle and Biſhop of the Gentiles, to make known and adminiſter the Goſpel of Chriſt among them faithfully and truly, without concealing or adding any thing.

8. I will therefore that men pray every where, lifting up * [b] holy hands, without wrath and † doubting.]

8. Theſe directions then I give to all both men and women, firſt to men, that as the Jewes waſht their hands before they lifted them up at the altar, Ex. 40. 32. Pſal. 26. 6. ſo ſhould all Chriſtians pray, not onely in Jeruſalem, but any where elſe, with innocent hearts, without any anger or malice (ſee note on Mat. 15. c.) quarrels or diſſenſions, preſerving the bond of peace, (the one lip Zeph. 3. 9.) among all.

* modeſty αἰδοῦς

9. In like manner alſo that women adorn themſelves in modeſt apparel, with * ſhamefaſtneſs and ſobriety; not with broidered haire, or gold, or pearls, or coſtly array.]

9. The ſecond direction I give for women, that they come to the aſſemblies, and pray (in like manner, as was ſaid of the men, v. 8.) and that they doe it in ſuch attire, as is decent, accounting modeſty and ſobriety the greateſt ornament, that they are capable of, and not ſetting themſelves out vainly and with oſtemation, in curious dreſſings of hair, in embroidery, or jewels, or other waies of ſumptuous attire.

10. But in ſtead of them to adde to modeſty and ſobriety ver. 9. the richer embroidery and jewels of all good works, charity to others, which becomes Chriſtian profeſſors infinitely better, than thoſe other wales of expenſe upon fine clothes &c.

10. But (which becometh women profeſſing godlineſſe) with good words.]

11. And of the woman I farther command, that ſhe be content to learn, and to exerciſe obedience, and ſubjection to thoſe who are placed over her, both in the Church, and at home.

11. Let the woman learn in * ſilence with all ſubjection.]

* quietneſſe ἡσυχίᾳ

12. And that ſhe neither undertake to teach in the Church, nor at home to have any authority over her husband, but to be obedient and meek, and ſtill in both thoſe capacities.

12. But I ſuffer not a woman to teach, nor to uſurp authority over the † man, but to be in * ſilence.]

† husband ἀνδρὸς
* quietneſſe ἡσυχίᾳ

13. For Adam was firſt formed, then Eve.]

14. And there is little reaſon that this courſe, which was then ſetled, ſhould ſince be changed, Certainly no reaſon to be fetched from Adam's ſin and fall, for the guilt of that lay eſpecially upon the woman, for before Adam was deceived, (or, Adam being not deceived,) the woman being firſt cheated her ſelf by the ſerpent, was the cauſe and beginning of ſin and ruine on all mankind.

14. And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the tranſgreſſion.]

c. d. 15. But by means of the ſeed of the woman, the Meſſias which ſhould be born from her poſterity, ſhe had a promiſe of redemption, and ſo all others of her ſex, upon condition of their perſeverance in the faith, and love, and obedience to Chriſt, and performance of thoſe great Chriſtian duties of chaſtity, and modeſt behaviour, which I now require of them.

15. Notwithſtanding ſhe ſhall be [c] ſaved † in child-bearing, if [d] they continue in faith and charity, and * holineſs with ſobriety.]

a. Of theſe four ſorts of prayer 'tis affirmed by S. Chryſoſtome, that they were in his time all uſed in the Church, ἐν καθημερινῇ λατρείᾳ in the daily ſervice, καὶ τοῦτο, ſaith he, ἴσασιν οἱ μυσταὶ, πῶς καθ' ἑσπέραν ἡμέραν γίνεται καὶ ἐν ἑωθινῇ καὶ ἐν ἀγρυπνίᾳ, and this is ſufficiently known to all the Prieſts, or thoſe that officiate morning and evening. And ſo it appears by the Liturgies. The word δέησις referring to the larger or leſſer Collecta, that in the Letany for deliverance from all the evils there named, and the other after, in which the phraſe Κύριε δεόμεθά σου we humbly beſeech thee O Father, is uſed, which is for the averting of evils. The 2d to the prayers for mercy and other wants. The 3d to the ἀπόδοσις, wherein the word ἀπολαμβάνει, Let us pray for the whole ſtate of Chriſt's Church, for Kings &c. is inſerted. And the 4th to the ſolemn thankſgiving for all men, and to the hymnes ſung to the praiſe of God. And it may be obſerved, that the direction here of praying for Kings &c. is agreeable to that of the Hebrews, R. Chaninah in Pirche Aboth c. 3. §. 2. חוי מתפלל בשלומה של מלכות שאלמלא מוראה אישא רעהו חיים בלעו Pray for the peace of the kingdome, for unleſſe there be fear men will devour one another alive. And ſo when Petronius came to ſet up Caligula's image in the Temple, they that would die rather than that ſhould be done, being asked then whether they would wage warre with the Emperour, anſwered No, but on the other ſide twice a day they offered ſacrifice for the ſafety of the Emperor, ſee Joſephus, and Jer. 29. 7. Accordingly was the Chriſtians practiſe, as long as the Emperors continued heathen, praying in their Liturgies ὑπὲρ βασιλέων for Kings. After, when they were Chriſtian, δεόμεθά σου ὑπὲρ τῶν εὐσεβεστάτων καὶ θεοφυλάκτων βασιλέων, We pray thee for our moſt pious Kings, defenders of God, or of the faith of Chriſt, as it is in S. Chryſoſtome's Liturgie, and that ὑπὲρ κράτους, νίκης, διαμονῆς, εἰρήνης, ὑγείας, σωτηρίας ἀνῶν, for their power, victory, continuance, peace, health, ſafety. The very things which they prayed for for them, when they were yet Gentiles, ſaith Tertull: in Apoll: Sine monitore precamur pro omnibus imperatoribus, vitam illis prolixam, imperium ſecurum, domum tutam, exercitus fortes, ſenatum fidelem, populum probum, orbem quietum. We pray for a long life to our Emperors, a ſecure empire, a ſafe houſe, valiant armies, a faithfull ſenate, a good people, a quiet world. This was after done for Arrian and heretical Kings, as Conſtantius, Παραιτησάμενος τὸν ὑπὲρ τοιούτων τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν εὐχὴν, ὑπὲρ τῆς κοινῆς ἀνωμαλίας, ὑπὲρ βασιλέων, ὑπὲρ στρατιωτῶν, καὶ συμμάχων, ſaith Cyril, Cat: 10. We beſeech God for the common peace of the Churches, for the quiet of the world, for our Kings, their ſouldiers, and auxiliaries.

The ceremony of waſhing was among the Jewes constantly uſed before prayers, and ſo among the Mahometans, So Abul Farais de moribus Arab: Fundamenta legis ſunt 1. Munditiei cura, 2. Oratio. The foundations of the law are 1. Cleanneſſe, 2. Prayer. Others, as Al Gazal, that mention the fundamenta legis, leave out Mundities, Cleanneſs, and comprehend it in Oratio, Prayer, according to that ſaying of Mahomet (in Ebnol Athir) Non accipit Deus preces abſque mundatione, God receives not prayers without cleanſing or waſhing, and Orationis clavis eſt mundities, Cleanneſſe is the key of Prayer, ſaith Al Gazal, and Mahumet again, Fundata eſt Religio in munditie, Religion is founded in cleanneſſe. This ſignificant rite the Apoſtle here applies to the thing ſignified by it, cleanneſſe of the heart and actions, and makes that neceſſary to the offering up any acceptable ſervice unto God. Of this Al Gazal an Arabick writer makes three degrees, 1. the cleanſing the members of the body from unlawfull actions, 2. the cleanſing of the heart from all manners that are worthy of diſpraiſe, all vices worthy of hatred, 3. the cleanſing of the ſecret (i. e. the inward) affections of the heart from every thing beſide God, that they may be at full leiſure to meditate of, or pray to him. See Mr Pococke's Notes on Abul Farais p. 302.

b. Ὅσοι χεῖρας

Some difficulty there is what is here meant by σωθήσεται διὰ τεκνογονίας, ſhe ſhall be ſaved by child-bearing. A firſt notion that may be thought to belong to it, is, that as σώζεσθαι to be ſaved, ſignifies oft to eſcape, noting ſome temporal deliverance

c. Σωθήσεται διὰ τεκνογονίας

(of which see note on Lu. 13. b.) ſo διὰ may note by, i.e. through, not as a means or condition, but as the term, out of, or through which the deliverance is wrought, as σῴζεσθαι διʼ ὕδατος being ſaved through the water 1 Pet. 3. 10. and διὰ πυρὸς through the fire 1 Cor. 3.15. is being delivered out of the water and fire; and then the meaning of it will be, that ſhe ſhall paſſe, though with ſome difficulty, ſafe through child-bearing; and this as a moderation of that curſe inflicted upon womankind upon Eve's ſin, that ſhe ſhould bring forth children in ſorrow, or with ſore travail at their birth. But this doth not ſeem probable to be the meaning of the place, becauſe that which follows if they continue in the faith &c. v.15. is not a condition of that deliverance from the peril of child-birth, that being common to beleivers and pagans, faithful and unfaithful; And indeed the curſe being but this, that in ſorrow ſhe ſhould bring forth, Gen. 3. 16. there hath ſince been no change in that matter, no promiſe upon any condition, that that puniſhment ſhould be moderated. A ſecond interpretation then there is, by obſerving the importance of the word τεκνογονία (which is rendred child-bearing) c.5.14. where of the younger widow 'tis ſaid let her marry, and τεκνογονεῖν, where it is thought to ſignifie, not onely or peculiarly bringing forth, but alſo breeding and bringing up children. And then that may be conceived the meaning of it here, and ſo the phraſe will be, ſhe ſhall be ſaved διὰ τεκνογονίας by bearing, and bringing up, or breeding her children in the fear and nurture of the Lord, to which the next words are applied alſo ἐὰν μείνωσιν, if they, i. e. the children, abide in the faith &c. But againſt this there are two exceptions alſo, 1. that τεκνογονία in that c. 5. doth no way appear to ſignifie any more than bringing forth the children, for that other part of breeding or bringing up may well be contained under ruling the houſhold (which there follows) of which the children are a part, and then there is no example, that the word ſhould ſignifie in that larger ſenſe, and conſequently no reaſon that it ſhould be ſo interpreted here; 2*dly*, there is as little reaſon to apply the following words to the children, if they, i. e. if the children ſhall continue &c. for beſide that there is no other mention of the children precedent, ſave what is in that compound word; and again, if τέκνα children be underſtood, then that plural neuter muſt have a verb ſingular to joyn with it, according to rules of Grammar and uſe of theſe Books, and ſo it would be μείνῃ not μείνωσιν, beſides theſe, I ſay, there will be little reaſon that the children's continuing in the faith ſhould be the condition of the ſalvation of the mother, when ſhe is before preſumed to have done her part in the breeding of them. The difficulties thus diſcernible againſt either of theſe interpretations make it not unreaſonable to pitch upon a third interpretation, ſo as τεκνογονία ſhall ſignifie the womans bearing of the promiſed ſeed, which was the means foretold for the bruiſing the ſerpents head, and ſo for the reſcuing the woman from that eternal puniſhment, which was juſtly deſerved by her ſin. This is no new interpretation, but ſo antient as to be mentioned by Theophylact, though not accepted by him, and this perfectly agrees with every circumſtance in the context. For thus it will connect with what went before, the woman, i. e. Eve, v. 12. being deceived was in the tranſgreſſion, i. e. was firſt guilty of eating the forbidden fruit, but reſcued from the puniſhment by the promiſed ſeed, i. e. by her child-bearing, by the Meſſias, which was to be born of a woman, and ſo to redeem that nature which he aſſumed, but this not abſolutely, but on condition of faith, and charity, and holineſs, and ſobriety, and continuing in all theſe, and this advantage belonging not only to the firſt woman Eve, but to all her poſterity. In reſpect of whom it is, that the number is changed from the ſingular to the plural; She, as the repreſentative of all women had the promiſe made to her, Gen. 3.15. but the condition muſt be performed by all others, as well as her, or elſe the benefit will not redound to them. And this is the moſt literal importance of the διὰ alſo, being ſaved by this, as by a means of all womens and mens redemption, and ſalvation.

The changing of the number here from σωθήσεται ſhe ſhall be ſaved to ἐὰν μείνωσιν if they abide, hath had an account given of it already, note c. to which it may farther be added, that this is but agreeable to the former diſcourſe v. 9, 11. In v.9. it is in the plural, that the women adorn themſelves, but v. 11. in the ſingular, Let the woman learn in ſilence, and v.12. But I ſuffer not a woman &c. where it is certain that the women in one place are all one with the woman in the other places, And ſo it is here alſo.

CHAP. III.

Paraphraſe.

1. THis is a * true ſaying, If a man deſire the office of a Biſhop, he deſireth a ª good work.] 1. Now to proceed to other directions neceſſary for thee, thou art to conſider this great and weighty truth, that the Epiſcopal office, whenſoever any man is a candidate or ſuiter for it, is an honourable (though never ſo dangerous and burthenſome) a function, (ſee Jam. 3. 1.) and conſequently that thou muſt be very carefull in the choiſe of the perſon, whom thou, as Metropolitan of Epheſus, admitteſt to this dignity. a.

2. A Biſhop then muſt be blameleſſe, the [b] husband of one wife, † vigilant, ſober, * of [c] good behaviour, given to hoſpitality, apt to teach;] 2. And therefore theſe enquiries thou muſt make of any whom thou meaneſt to ordain, and receive the teſtimony of the Church concerning him (ſee note on Act.6.b.) And therein let theſe qualifications be obſerved, 1. that he be a perſon not ſcandalous for any ſin, ſince his converſion, 2. that he have not put away his wife (ſo as is ordinary both among Jewes, and heathens, but forbidden by Chriſt, except for fornication) and married another, 3. that he be ſober and intent to his buſineſſe, 4. moderate in all his actions, as that is oppoſed to diſtemper or giddineſſe, 5. of a grave compoſed behaviour, humanity and modeſty together, 6. apt to entertain ſtrangers, 7. one that is able and ready to communicate to others the knowledge which himſelf hath; b. c.

† ſober, temperate ſobrium vultuoſa * comely

3. 2. A temperate perſon in oppoſition to exceſſive drinking, 9. one that uſes no violence, 10. that uſes no ſordid courſe for gain, 11. of a mild and peaceable diſpoſition, (ſee note on 2 Cor. 10. 2.) 12. neither apt to be angry and quarrel, nor 13. inſlaved to the love of wealth;

3. Not given to wine, no ſtriker, not greedy of filthy lucre, but * patient, † not a brawler, not covetous;]

† not quarrelſome

4. 14. That by ruling his own family well, and keeping his children in obedience to diſcipline, and in all probity of manners, ſhews that he is fit to be a Governour;

4. One that ruleth well his own houſe, having his children in ſubjection, with all gravity;]

5. (For ſure he that cannot rule ſo much a leſſe province, will be unfit to be made a Governour of the Church of God.

5. (For if a man know not how to rule his own houſe, how ſhall he take care of the Church of God?)

d. 6. 15. Not one that is but newly planted or inſtructed in the faith, leſt ſo great a dignity ſo ſuddainly beſtowed on him may tempt him to pride and vanity, and ſo bring the ſame ruine upon him, that fell upon the devil, who was temped in like manner by that glorious condition wherein he was created, and for his pride was caſt out of heaven into the torments of hell, 2 Pet. 2. 4.

6. Not a * novice, leſt being lifted up with pride, he fall into the condemnation of the devil.]

7. To theſe qualifications muſt be farther added, 16. that he be a perſon of a good reputation, under no reproach for his former life among unbelievers, For if he be, there will be danger that he be contumeliouſly uſed by them, and be temped to revenge himſelf on them that uſe him ſo, and that will be a ſnare unto him.

7. Moreover he muſt have a good report of them which are without, leſt he fall into reproach and the ſnare of the devil.]

8. And as for the chooſing of the Biſhop all this care muſt be taken, ſo for the Deacons, that muſt every where be conſtituted to attend the Biſhop, they alſo muſt be choſen grave, ſober perſons, not cunning and deceitfull, not given to exceſſe of drinking wine or ſtrong drink, thoſe which uſe not any ſordid courſe for gain,

8. Likewiſe muſt the deacons be grave, not double-tongued, not given to much wine, nor greedy of filthy lucre,]

9. But ſuch as being orthodox in point of faith, live pure and Chriſtian lives, according to the doctrine and directions thereof.

9. Holding the myſterie of the faith in a pure conſcience.]

10. And before any be thus aſſumed into holy Orders, let them be well known, and by teſtimony approved for ſufficiency, piety, and good behaviour, and then being found blameleſſe, perſons of good report among all, let them then be aſſumed into Orders.

10. And let theſe alſo firſt be proved, and then let them uſe the office of a deacon, being found blameleſſe.]

11. So likewiſe the women that have any office in the Church (ſee note on Tit. 2. 2.) muſt be of a grave behaviour, not given to ſlander and calumniate, not given to any exceſſe, truſty in all that is committed to them.

11. * Even ſo muſt their wives be grave, not ſlanderers, ſober, faithfull in all things.]

* The women in like manner,

12. And as of the Biſhops, ſo of the Deacons, let them be thoſe that have not put away former wives upon diſlikes, and married others (ſee note b.) but thoſe which either have not married, or lived conſtantly with their firſt wives, and duly brought up their children, and governed their families.

12. Let the deacons be the husbands of one wife, ruling their children and their own houſes well.]

13. For though the office of a Deacon be an inferior degree, yet it is a ſtep to the higher, and they that behave themſelves well in it, are fit to be aſſumed to an higher imployment, that of rulers or Biſhops, that greater dignity in the Church of God, (ſee note on Job. 7. 2.)

13. For they that have uſed the office of a deacon well, purchaſe to themſelves a good degree, and great † boldneſſe in the faith which is in Chriſt Jeſus.]

† authority

14. Theſe brief directions I now give thee, for the neceſſity of thy preſent employment, hoping to come quickly to thee my ſelf, and furniſh thee with all farther inſtructions.

14. Theſe things write I unto thee, hoping to come unto thee ſhortly.]

15. But if it ſhall fall out that I cannot come, that then by theſe thou maiſt for the main be provided and inſtructed how to diſcharge the office committed to thee, being an office of ſtewardſhip or præfecture in Gods family, the Church, not of idol falſe, but of the one true God, the pillar and baſis which holds up the truth, ſuſtains and keeps it from ſinking.

e. 15. But if I tarry long, that thou maiſt know how thou oughteſt to behave thy ſelf in the * houſe of God, which is the Church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth.]

16. The truth, I mean, of Gods œconomy at this time, which is moſt precious, and valuable; and tends mightily to the begetting of all piety and vertue in our hearts. And it conſiſts of theſe ſo many degrees, 1. That God himſelf took on him our fleſh, and here on earth viſibly appeared among us, in an humane ſhape, and did thereby make known his will unto us, And that this might be done more convincingly, 2^dly, the Spirit deſcended on him at his baptiſme, and gave teſtimony of him, Mat. 3. 17. and by leading him into the wilderneſſe to be tempted by the devill, convinced him that he was the ſon of God, Mat. 4. and by the power of God upon him he wrought many great, and unheard of miracles, (and ſo his Apoſtles after him) which teſtified the truth of all he ſaid, and 3^dly, in theſe, and in the diſcharge of his deſigned office of revealing Gods will unto men, he was beheld, and confeſt and adored by Angels themſelves, good and bad, 4^thly, he was by his Apoſtles preached, and proclaimed not onely to the Jewes, but Gentiles, 5^thly, he was received, and beleived on by many of all nations through the world, and 6^thly, he was viſibly and with a glorious appearance of Angels taken up into heaven, there to reign forever in the glory of God the father, and to exerciſe power in his Church, and by converting of ſome, and deſtroying of others, to propagate his Goſpell over the world.

16. And * without controverſie great is the myſtery of godlineſſe, God was † manifeſt in the fleſh, juſtified * in the ſpirit, ſeen of Angels, preached † unto the Gentiles, beleived on in the world, received up * into glory.]

a. Καλὸν ἔργον] here ſignifies honeſtum opus, a work of ſome virtue and excellence in it ſelf, as being that which is the conſecrating a mans life, at leaſt the greateſt part of it, to the ſervice of God, to which therefore an immarceſſible crown of glory is propoſed by Saint Peter as the reward, 1 Pet. 5. 4. where, as the great reward in heaven, Mat. 5. is an argument that the virtue to which it is aſſigned is a very eminent virtue, very acceptable in the ſight of God, ſo is this an evidence that the good work here, is look'd on as an eminent ſtate of piety, ſo far from being cenſurable in him, that deſires it, as he ought to doe, in order to the glory of God, or the love of our brethren, or the juſt proviſion for their ſpiritual wants, that it is very commendable in him, and the deſire of it, is an act of Chriſtian piety in the more perfect degree, as the deſigning this without putting the flock to any charge, is yet more excellent in Saint Paul, 1 Cor. 9. 18. And this may be farther evident by the fault of thoſe, who forſake this or any other Eccleſiaſtical office, and return to the world, ad ſeculũ, again; ſuch was Demas who had been a fellow-labourer of Saint Paul's, Philem. 24. Col. 4. 14. but after forſook him 2 Tim. 4. 10. ἀγαπήσας τὸν νῦν αἰῶνα, having loved this preſent age or world, not that this crime was that love of the world (which 1 John 2 15. is a crime in any Chriſtian) but that he betook himſelf to his own worldly ſecular affaires again, forſaking the attendance on the ſervice of God in his Church, as he that marries a wife, is ſaid to be ſollicitous for the things of this world, how he may pleaſe his wife, which love of the world, though it be not in it ſelfe a fault (for then marriage could not be faultleſſe) yet if it be the taking one off from Eccleſiaſtical employments which hath devoted himſelfe to them, will be a fault in him; and that was Demas's crime, not, as 'tis thought, forſaking of Chriſtianity. And that was charged on ſome others, though Timothy ſtuck cloſe to him, Phil. 2. 21. All ſeek τὰ ἑαυτῶν &c. betake themſelves to the care of their own ſecular affairs, not to the affairs of Chriſt in attending on the Goſpell, v. 22. And the criminouſneſſe of this ariſing from hence, that he forſakes that which is more excellent for that which is leſſe ſo, though it be not otherwiſe unlawfull, Eccleſiaſtical for ſecular employments, is an evidence that the Eccleſiaſtical employment is καλὸν ἔργον in this notion a good i. e. excellent work, a ſtate (if lived in, as it ought) of ſome perfection.

Ἀγαπήσας τὸν νῦν αἰῶνα.

b. What is the meaning of μιᾶς γυναικὸς ἀνὴρ the husband of one wife] both here and v. 12. and Tit. 1. 6. and of ἑνὸς ἀνδρὸς γυνὴ the wife of one husband c. 5. 9. will not be eaſily reſolved. For if it ſhould be interpreted as an interdict of chooſing to the office of Biſhop or Deacon, any who had lived in Polygamie, i. e. had had more wives at once, though that might have ſome colour of ſenſe in it from the practiſe of the Jewes, as far as concerned the man (who among them was permitted Polygamie) yet this is not appliable to the widow or woman c. 5. 9. for never among Jewes (or even Turkes) was it permitted that the woman ſhould have more then one husband at once, and the reaſon is clear, becauſe the multitude of husbands did not help forward, but rather hinder propagation, for which it was that the multitude of wives was permitted. Onely among the Barbarians there is mention of the πολύανδροι a people ſo called, becauſe the wife among them had many husbands; and among the Medes that dwelt in the Mountaines, 'tis ſaid that a woman was married to five husbands at once. But there is no probability that this ſhould be referred to, or looked upon in this place. Then for the other interpretation, that here the digamiſt, or he that hath had two wives ſucceſſively one after another, ſhould be made uncapable of holy orders, or be under ſome reproach for ſo doing, and his having married but once ſhould be as neceſſary to a Biſhop or Deacon, as ſobriety &c. this is a little ſtrange, it being ordinary for the wife to dye ſoon after marriage, and without children, and in that caſe, the ſecond marriage tending as much to the ends of matrimony (comfort of life, propagation, remedy of luſt) as the former can be ſuppoſed to doe; And beſides, this prohibition being not to be found in the lawes of any nation, and being grounded on no other text but this (of the meaning of which the queſtion now is) väl no farther be concluded hence, then the words of this place doe inforce it. A third ſenſe the phraſe is capable of, which ſeems much fitter for the matter in hand, that he be ſaid here to be, or to have been the husband of more wives then one who married after divorce, i. e. who having put away his wife on any cauſe whatſoever, even for that of fornication, which the law of Chriſt allows, doth marry another. This hee that had done, was by the words of Chriſt, eſpecially as they are ſet down Mar. 10. 11. Lu. 16. 18. and by a ſpeech of Saint Paul's 1 Cor. 7. 39. under ſuch prejudices, that we cannot wonder that here he is not thought fit to be received into holy orders, and ſo the woman alſo. They that marry after divorces, are in the firſt Canon of the Councel of Laodicea expreſſed by οἱ ἀλλ' ὅμως καὶ νομίμως συναπτόμενοι δευτέροις γάμοις, freely & legally coupled in ſecond mariages. And the like mention we finde of them Concil: Neocæſar: can. 52. where ſuch a δίγαμος is ſuppoſed αἰτῶν μετάνοιαν τοῦ ἐντυχεῖν ἀφέσει. And Concil: Ancyr: can: 39. Δεκάμηνον ὅρον, The term of Abſtention, or ſeparation, which belongs to the Digamiſt, (in this notion of it) is mention'd as a known and vulgar thing, And Concil: 1^mi Nicani Can: 8. The Novatians error appears to have been, their refuſing to communicate with theſe digamiſts, upon their repentance, in like manner, as with thoſe that had fallen in time of perſecution, which ſignifies theſe two to be lookt on as crimes of high importance in a Chriſtian, for which the Cenſures of the Church fell heavy on them, though upon Repentance the Catholickes admitted them to communion again. And thus alſo in * Athenagoras, we Chriſtians, ſaith he, are commanded either to remain every man as we are, ἢ εἰς ἅπαξ ἐπὶ γάμῳ, to contents our ſelves with one marriage (which is no where commanded in that other ſenſe of marrying after the death of the firſt, and therefore muſt be underſtood of this other ſort, after divorce.) For the ſecond marriages, ſaith he, are εὐπρεπὴς μοιχεία, a comely kinde of adultery, Adultery, ſaith he, from Chriſt's words, for he that puts away his wife, and marries again, committeth adultery (which proof of his reſtraines his words to thoſe those second marriages, which are after divorces) but that a well favoured, fashionable, comely one, because the Imperial lawes say nothing against such marriages after divorces allowed by them; and again, saith he, 'Tis the law of Christ that no man shall put away her ὃς ἔπνοινε τῷ πρώτῳ whom he hath deflowred, or made no virgin, and marry again. So Plutarch in his Ῥωμαϊκ: making mention of a law prohibiting to marry second marriages on festival dayes, saith that it was brought up, because either widows married, which might doe well to doe it in secret, or those whose husbands were living, and then they ought to be ashamed to think of any other husband. So Valer: Max: l. 2. c. 1. cals the experience of many marriages, legitima cujusdam intemperantiæ signum, a sign of intemperance, but such as the law of heathen men permits. So in * Ærodius, among the Presbyters that were brought as witnesses against Marcellinus, one being found to have married again after divorce, placuit reprobari, he was rejected, saith he, whence it appears that such marriages were not onely allowed by the Imperial lawes, but that they were practised also among Christians, which farther appeares by Marculfus formal: l. 2. c. 30. Dum inter illum & illam non charitas secundum Deum, sed discordia regnat, & ad hoc pariter conversare minimè possunt, placuit utriusque voluntate ut se à consortio separare deberent, quod ita & fecerunt. See ing between him and her Christian charity doth not reign, but discord, and so they cannot converse together, it is agreed by the consent of both parties, that they should separate from one anothers companies, which accordingly they did, This, it seems, was a formula used among Christians, as there was another to the same purpose, Leg: Rom: c. 19. and Novell: Instit: 117. And this being allowed by the secular Imperial lawes, and accordingly practised, the Councel of Carthage thought fit to make a Canon to reform it (Can: Sec: Zonaram 116.) and to reduce it to Christ's and Saint Paul's institution, and therefore appointed that the Emperor should be desired to make an Imperial law against it. He that would see more to this purpose for the confirming of this interpretation, may consult Zonaras's scholia on that Canon, and Rodolphus Fornerius Rerum Quotid: l. 6. c. 23. and Burchard l 9. c. 72. and the Notes on Cod: Can: Eccl: Universa. And that this custome was also among women, who thus divorced themselves from their husbands, will appear by Justinian's Novell: 117. which will therefore be appliable to the prohibition of the widows being chosen, which was not ἑνὸς ἀνδρὸς γυνὴ the wife of one husband also.

d. Νεόφυτος signifies not in respect of age, for Timothy himself was such, but in respect of receiving the faith, by analogie with the use of the word φυτεύω to plant, for to instruct in Christianity, to teach the faith, as when S. Paul saith, that he hath planted, and so saith Theophylact, 'tis all one with νεοβάπτιστος newly baptized, lately received into the Church.

Νεόφυτος

e. What οἶκος Θεοῦ the house of God here signifies, is evident by the context, The whole discourse here is to give Timothy directions for the choosing, and constituting Bishops, and Deacons in his Province, i. e. over all Asia, of which Ephesus, where Timothy was placed by S. Paul, was the chief Metropolis. This then being the Province, wherein he was to ordain, must needs be the οἶκος Θεοῦ house of God, wherein he is here directed how he should behave himself, being by S. Paul set there, as the οἰκονόμος, or steward in an house, who having, under the Master, chief power in the family, to him it belongs to entertain, or remove servants, and officers out of it. But this not so to restrain the phrase to that one province, but that both the universal, and every other particular Church of Christ is capable of that title, as truly, and properly, as that of Ephesus, or Asia at that time, For indeed the phrase is derived from the Temple, which as the special place of Gods presentiating and exhibiting himself, is called Gods house, where he dwells, and delights, and meets the pious votary, receives his addresses, entertains, and treats him, as in his own house, and answers the petitions, which he came to offer there, and where his Angels, which are his attendants, and court, as it were, are peculiarly present 1 Cor. 11. 9. As when the Angels appeared to Jacob at Luz, he presently calls it Beth El, the house of God, saying, surely God is in this place, this is no other than the house of God &c. Proportionably to this the whole family of God, as that comprehends the whole corporation or community of all the Christians alive, is fitly styled οἶκος Θεοῦ, this great house of God, And in like manner, every lesser society of Christians among whom God is pleased to dwell also, and rule by his οἰκονόμος, or steward, And such is every Bishop in every particular Church. Of this house of God, in this sense, two titles are here set down, fitly belonging both to the whole, and to each branch, but especially verified at that time, wherein the words were delivered, that first age of the Apostles preaching, and planting the faith. The first title is, Ἐκκλησία θεοῦ ζῶντος Ἐκκλησία θεοῦ ζῶντος, the Church of the living God, in opposition to the false, dead, liveless Gods, whose pictures were adored in their heathen Temples, Those were ἐκκλησίαι places of meeting, and assembling, but only for the worship of Idols, empty nothings, But the house of God, where Timothy was set the œconomus, or steward at Ephesus, contrary to Diana's Temple there, was the Church of the living God, and so was every such regular assembly of Christians under a Bishop (such as Timothy was) an œconomus set over them by Christ, Such again every larger circuit under the Metropolitan, who, as Timothy again, had χειροτονίαν καὶ χάριν ordination and jurisdiction over the whole Province, And such all the particular Churches of the whole world considered together, under the supreme head, Christ Jesus, dispensing them all by himself, and administring them severally not by any one œconomus, but by the several Bishops, as inferior heads of unity to the several bodies, so constituted by the several Apostles in their plantations, each of them having an αὐτοκρατία, a several distinct commission from Christ immediately, and subordinate to none, but the supreme donour, or Plenipotentiary. The second title is, that it is στῦλος καὶ ἑδραίωμα τῆς ἀληθείας, the pillar Στῦλος καὶ ἑδραίωμα τῆς ἀληθείας of truth, and the basis of that pillar. The houses anciently were built on pillars, Judg. 16. 26. where we find the pillars whereupon the house standeth, and v. 29. the two middle pillars, whereon the house stood, and on which it was born up, and upon the removing of which the house fell, and so when the Psalmist describes the land by this similitude of an house, he supposeth it set on pillars, and the feebleness of those pillars, when they want bearing up, are an evidence of the weakness of the earth, The earth is weake, and the inhabitants thereof, I bear up the pillars of it, Psal. 75. 4. Now of a pillar it is known, that it receives the usefulnesse from the basis, on which it stands, which being so set, that it cannot sinke, the pillar being firmly fastened on that, and standing upright, it is able to bear a vast weight of building laid upon it. And so these two, though severall in themselves, yet joyning together, and consolidated into one, they do, as one, not severally, support what is laid upon them. It is therefore necessary so to render these words, στῦλος καὶ ἑδραίωμα, pillar and ground] that they be not distinct titles of the house of God, a pillar one, and a basis another, but (by the figure of ἓν διὰ δυοῖν, one described by two) a pillar upon its basis, which firmely sustains that, which is built, and erected upon it. And so is the house of God, (the Church, both Universall of Christ's, and, under him, of all the Apostles, and each particular, of each single Apostle's plantation) this pillar erected firmly upon the basis to sustain, to uphold the truth of Christ, which being by Christ, and his Apostles erected, as a roof upon a pillar, is sustained, and upheld by it. If the truth of the Gospell had been scattered abroad by preaching to single men, and those men never compacted together into a society under the Government of Bishops, or Stewards &c. such as Timothy was, to whom was delivered by Saint Paul that παραθήκη 1 Tim. 5. 20. a depositum, or body of sound doctrine, to be kept as a standard in the Church, by which all other doctrines were to be measured, and judged. If I say such a summary of faith had not been deliver'd to all Christians, that came in, in any place, to the Apostles preaching, and if there had not been some Steward to keep it, then had there wanted an eminent means to sustain, and uphold this Truth of the Gospel, thus preacht unto men, But by the gathering of single converted Christians into assemblies, or Churches, and designing Governours in those Churches, and entrusting this depositum or form of wholesome doctrine to their keeping, it comes to passe, that the Christian truth is sustain'd, and held up, and so this house of God is affirmed to be the pillar and basis of truth, or that pillar on a basis, by which truth is supported; According to which it is, that Christ is said to have given not only Apostles, and Prophets, and Evangelists, but also Pastors, and Teachers, i. e. the Bishops in the Church (known indifferently by those two titles) εἰς καταρτισμὸν τῶν ἁγίων, for the compacting of the Saints into a Church, εἰς οἰκοδομὴν, for the building up of the body of Christ, confirming, and continuing them in all truth, Eph. 4. 12. that we should be no longer like children carryed about with every wind of doctrine, &c. v. 14. And so again when heresies come into the Church in the first ages, 'tis every where apparent by Ignatius's Epistles, that the only way of avoyding of error, and danger, was to adhere to the Bishop in communion, and doctrine, and whosoever departed from him, and that form of wholsome words kept by him, ὑγιαίνειν was supposed to be corrupted, and immerst in that sink of corruption, which was then among the Gnosticks, the pests of that age of the Church. To which purpose these sayings of that divine martyr are expresse, Μηδεὶς χωρὶς τοῦ ἐπισκόπου τι πρασσέτω τῶν ἀνηκόντων εἰς τὴν ἐκκλησίαν, Let no man do ought of those things which belong to the Church, without the Bishop, and ὁ λάθρᾳ τοῦτό τι πράσσων, τῷ διαβόλῳ λατρεύει, he that doth any thing without the privity of the Bishop, worships the devill, Epist: ad Smyrn: And this is his meaning of [ἐντὸς θυσιαστηρίου εἶναι being within the altar] preserving communion with, and dependence on the Bishop, who sat in that part of the Church which was called the θυσιαστήριον, or altar, which he that did not, ὑστερεῖται τοῦ ἄρτου τοῦ θεοῦ, fals short of the bread of God, Ep: ad Ephes: from thence concluding, Σπουδάσωμεν οὖν μὴ ἀντιπίπτειν τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ, ἵνα ὦμεν θεῷ ὑποτασσόμενοι, Let us take care not to resist or oppose the Bishop, that we may be subject to God, Πάντα γὰρ ὃν πέμπει ὁ οἰκοδεσπότης εἰς ἰδίαν οἰκονομίαν οὕτως δεῖ ἡμᾶς αὐτὸν δέχεσθαι ὡς αὐτὸν τὸν πέμψαντα, τὸν οὖν ἐπίσκοπον δεῖ ὡς αὐτὸν κύριον προσβλέπειν, For every one whom the Master of the house sends to his own stewardship, him must we receive as him that sent him, we must therefore look to the Bishop, as the Lord himself. And in the Epistle to the Magnesians, Πρέπον οὖν ἐστὶ μὴ μόνον κληΐζεσθαι χριστιανούς, ἀλλὰ καὶ εἶναι, ὥσπερ καί τινες ὀνομάζουσιν μὲν καλῶν, χωρὶς δὲ αὐτοῦ τίποτε πράττουσι, We ought not onely to be called Christians, but also to be such, as some call, or acknowledge the Bishop, but do all without him, And again μηδὲ τοιοῦτόν τι λογίζου τι φαίνεσθαί σοι ἴδιόν ὑμῖν, not to think it reasonable to entertain any private opinions of our own, for, as he addes, they that did so, were sure to be seduced in such times, being once grown wiser than their teachers. So in Ep: ad Philad: Ὅσοι θεοῦ εἰσὶν καὶ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ οὗτοι μετὰ τοῦ Ἐπισκόπου εἰσίν, As many as are of God and of Jesus Christ, these are with the Bishop, ὃν θυσιαστήριον, ὡς εἷς ἱερεύς, ἵνα ὃ ἐὰν πράσσητε κατὰ θεὸν πράσσητε, There is one altar as one Bishop, that whatever ye doe, you may doe according to God. And speaking of seduced heretickes, he mentions their onely way of repentance, ἐὰν μετανοήσωσιν εἰς ἕνωσιν θεοῦ, καὶ συνέδριον τοῦ ἐπισκόπου, if they repent and return to the unity of God, and the councell of the Bishop. And so every where in all those Epistles to the same purpose, to signifie that that form of doctrine, depositum with, and kept by the Bishop in the Church, is the onely sure means to support, and preserve the truth. Which how little it belongs to those Congregations, or Churches which have neither cast out that Apostolical form of sound words, or by degrees received in many corruptions, and falsities, either against the will of their Governours, or by connivence, or assistance of them, doth easily appear, by what hath here been said, because as the good husbandman sowes seed in his field, so the enemy may scatter darnell, and the field bring forth the fruits of one, as well as the other.

The notion of piety] in this place is observable for Christian religion, doctrine of Christ, whether as that, which is it self the tru way of serving & worshipping f. Eusebius ſhipping of God, ſo as will be acceptable unto him (and ſo is ἐυσέβεια piety) or that which preſcribes and delivers the moſt exact and perfect way of ſerving God, and ſo by a metonymie is called piety. That it ſignifies ſo here, appears by the parts of this myſterie, as they are here ſet down; God, i. e. Chriſt incarnate, manifeſted in the fleſh, &c. the ſeveral articles of our faith from the birth to the aſſumption of Chriſt, which, all together, are called μυστήριον ἐυσεβείας, the myſterie of piety, the parts of our religion, into which all Chriſtians are initiated or entred, the foundation on which all our Chriſtian practiſe is built, God being ſo deſirous that men ſhould live according to that law of his, revealed by Chriſt, that to preach it to us, and inforce it on our practiſe, he was himſelf pleaſed to aſſume, and manifeſt himſelf in our fleſh, and to teſtifie the truth of this, the Spirit of God came down viſibly upon Chriſt, and the voice from heaven, This is my beloved ſon, Mat. 3. 17. and ſo in the ſeveral particulars here mentioned, as branches of our initiation into Chriſtian religion, grounds of our beleiving, and practiſing the Chriſtian doctrine. Thus c. 6. 5. where ſpeaking of the wicked hereticks of thoſe times, the Gnoſticks, he mentions it as a piece of their doctrine, that ἐυσέβεια is μισθὸς, piety, (i. e. the Chriſtian religion, the being of that profeſſion,) is gain, matter of ſecular advantage. Thus again c. 6. 3. 'tis called more expreſly ἡ κατ' ἐυσέβειαν διδασκαλία, the doctrine which is according to piety. So Tit. 1. 1. the truth which is according to piety is ſet to denote the Goſpel. Agreeable to which it is that mercifulneſs and ſpotleſſe purity, are called θρησκεία καθαρὰ pure worſhip &c. Jam. 1. 27. i. e. prime ſpecial branches of the true religion. In other places 'tis true that ἐυσέβεια piety is taken in a narrower ſenſe for that virtue particularly of worſhipping God aright, as Tit. 2. 12. in diſtinction from the duties toward others, and our ſelves 1 Tim. 6. 11. 2 Pet. 1. 6. and in one place 1 Tim. 5. 4. for the return of gratitude in children to their parents, which is a kind of piety alſo, as the love of our country, honouring of magiſtrates, that are a ſort of Gods, as well as parents to us, is ordinarily called piety.

CHAP. IV.

1. But there are riſen up ſome among you, wch oppoſe this Chriſtian doctrine, mentioned in the cloſe of the third chapter, deny this form of Evangelical truth, viz: the Gnoſticks that deny Chriſt to be come really in the fleſh, 1 Joh. 7. And there is no wonder in this, for Chriſt expreſly foretold it Mat. 24. 11. that before the time of the Jewes ruine, before that notable coming of Chriſt (ſee notes on Mat. 24. b. c. d. Act. 2. b.) ſome ſhall forſake the faith, and follow erroneous ſeducing teachers (ſee note on Lu. 9. d.) though the doctrines which they teach, are moſt unclean, polluted, deviliſh doctrines. See 2 Pet. 3. note a.

1. NOW the Spirit ſpeaketh expreſly, that in the latter times ſome ſhall depart from the faith, giving heed to ſeducing ſpirits, and doctrines of devils;]

2. Which they ſet off through the faire pretences of greater perfection and depth of knowledge, which theſe lyers make ſhew of among the people, men that have their conſciences ſtigmatized with the marks and brands of their ill works, notorious to all for infamous perſons.

3. Part of the character of theſe men is, to interdict marriages, and ſpeak againſt them as unlawfull, and ſo likewiſe to command abſtinences from ſome ſorts of meats, from which the Jewes abſtain, but by the liberty allowed by Chriſt are perfectly lawfull for all Chriſtians, ſo they be taken with thankſgiving and acknowledgment of the donour.

b. 3. [b] Forbidding to marry, and commanding to abſtain from meats, which God hath created * to be received with thankſgiving of them which beleive and know the truth.]

4. For indeed all the creatures in the world, being created for the uſe of man, may lawfully be uſed and eaten by a Chriſtian, if it be done with faith and acknowledgment of the donour (ſee Mat. 14. c.)

5. For there are but two things neceſſary to make any thing lawfull for our uſe, 1. God's permiſſion or freedome allowed us by him, and that we have in this matter by the expreſſe words of Chriſt that tells us, that which goes in, (i. e. meats &c.) is not that which defiles a man, And 2dly, prayer, which bleſſeth our meat to us, being, beſide the calling for God's bleſſing upon it, an acknowledgment of God from whom it comes, and who hath allowed it for food for us.

c. 5. For it is ſanctified by the * word of God and prayer.]

6. Such admonitions as theſe, which may help ſecure them from the infuſions of theſe men, thou art frequently and timely to give the Chriſtians under thee notice of, and by ſo doing thou ſhalt approve thy ſelf faithfull in the diſcharge of thy office of Biſhop, whoſe duty this is, and make returns for all the good inſtructions thou haſt thy ſelf received and imbraced obediently.

6. If thou * put the brethren in remembrance of theſe things, thou ſhalt be a good miniſter of Jeſus Chriſt, nouriſhed up in the words of faith, and of good doctrine, † whereunto thou haſt attained.]

* ſuggeſt theſe things to the brethren,

† which thou haſt followed

7. But eſpecially be ſure that in ſtead of their doctrines of abſtinences from marriage and from meats, quite contrary to the Goſpel, which ſets an honourable character upon marriage, and takes away difference of meats, and in ſtead of idle ridiculous grounds, upon which they found theſe abſtinences, thou doe by diligent ſearch into the doctrine of the Goſpel, purſue that perfection of Chriſtian knowledge, which though thou art young, may fit thee for the diſcharge of that venerable office.

7. But * refuſe profane and old-wives fables, and exerciſe thy ſelf rather unto godlineſſe.]

* avoid

d. 8. For bodily exerciſe † profiteth [d] little, but godlineſſe is profitable unto all things, having promiſe of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.]

† is profitable for a little

Col.

Col. 2. 22. And indeed considered at the best Col. 2. 23. the profit of them is but little in comparison to that of piety, which is of the greatest value imaginable, will help us to all advantages that we can wish, If we would have a comfortable life here, this is promised to them that seek the kingdome of God and his righteousnesse, Mat. 6. 33. and so for many particular Christian duties they have promise of present beatitude, and whatsoever in any singular case may seem to be wanting to the felicity and prosperity of the pious man here, it is sure to be made up abundantly in another life.

9. This is a faithfull saying, and worthy of all acceptation.

9, 10. And to this purpose it is to be observed as a most certain and considerable truth, that to all truly pious persons there is so great assurance of an eternal reward, that this our hope in God is the onely ground of our suffering patiently any thing that falls upon us, being confident, that this God as he desireth the eternal welfare of all, so hath promised to save all that shall believe and obey him, and so consequently is the most assured Saviour of them that doe so.

10. For therefore we both labour and * suffer reproach, because † we trust in the living God, who is the Saviour of all men, specially of those that believe.]

* or combate, for the King's MS. reads αγωνιζομεθα, see 1 Thess. 2. b.
† we have hoped ἠλπικαμεν

11. These things * command and teach.]

11. These things doe thou put those in mind of, that have received them already, confirm them that they may continue in them (and not be depraved by the Gnostick hereticks which teach the contrary, as in those former particulars ver. 3, 8. so in this last of suffering persecutions for the Gospel) and teach them to those that have not as yet received them.

* exhort παρακάλει

12. Let no man despise thy youth, but be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, † in spirit, in faith, in purity.]

12. And though thou art a young man in years, yet let the gravity of thy life supply the want of the years, that are wont to be required of thy office, and let thy discourse and all thy demeanour and course of actions be exemplary to all the Christians under thy jurisdiction, both in respect of constant love and adherence to God, and of profession of the faith, and of purity, or chastity, three main particulars wherein these heretical Gnosticks doe endevour to corrupt others.

† the words ἐν πνεύματι are not found in the King's MS.

13. Till I come, give attendance to * reading, to exhortation, to doctrine.]

13. Betwixt this & the time of my coming to thee, see thou be diligent in performing thy office in the several parts of it, expounding the Scriptures, confirming believers, and admonishing them of any fault or danger, and instructing the ignorant or unbelievers. e.

14. Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecie, with the laying on of the hands of the Presbytery.]

14. Make use of those gifts which in order to thy function were given thee (according to the revelation from the Spirit concerning thee ch. 1. 18.) at thy ordination (see note on ch. 5. f.) when besides me 2 Tim. 1. 6. some others also of the Apostles, one or more, laid hands on thee (see note on Act. 11. b.)

* Exercise thy self in these things † spend thy time in them, ἐν τούτοις ἴσθι

15. * Meditate upon these things, † give thy self wholly to them, that thy profiting may appear to all. f.

16. Take heed unto thy self, and unto thy doctrine, continue in them, for in doing this thou shalt both save thy self, and them that hear thee.

Notes on Chap. IV.

a. Κεκαυστηριασμένων τὴν συνείδησιν

The meaning of this phrase [κεκαυστηριασμένων τὴν συνείδησιν] is, I conceive, not rightly apprehended, when it is thought to signifie, an insensate conscience, as if the resemblance were here to flesh, when it is seared or cauterized, Hesychius and Phavorinus have both taken notice of the phrase, and rendred it to another sense, κεκαυλιασμένοι (it should be κεκαυληριασμένοι) βεβασανισμένοι, μὴ ἔχοντες τὴν συνείδησιν ὑγιῆ, saith Hesychius, the phrase denotes those that being brought to the test, are found faulty, have not a good conscience. The meaning of this must be collected from the office of the βασανισταὶ, explorers or examiners, or triers, by which he explains it, and of them, saith he, Βασανισταὶ, ὁ διαυλὸς καὶ ὁ ἀνδραποδιστὴς ἢ ἀλάστωρ τινὰ ἀνακρίνοντες, One set to examine slaves to find out the truth. And when any upon such examination is found faulty, he is wont to be branded for a cheat or rascal, and that branding or stigmatizing is here the thing referred to, and so κεκαυληριασμένοι τὴν συνείδησιν are men of a prostituted, branded, stigmatized conscience, infamous villains. And so saith Phavorinus also, κεκαυληριασμένος τὴν συνείδησιν, τουτέστι μὴ ἔχων ὑγιῆ (referring, no doubt, to this place) it signifies having not a sound or whole conscience.

b. Κωλυόντων γαμεῖν

Many hereticks there were in the antient Church, which prohibited marriage, and taught abstinence from meats, as necessary, having much of their doctrine from the Pythagorean Philosophers. Such were the Encratita, Montanists, and Marcionites. But these came after the Apostles times, and are not so probably spoken of here, as those which were present then in the Church. And such, saith Ignatius, there were in the Apostles times, Ep: ad Philad: and such, saith Irenaus, was Saturninus l. 1. c. 22. who with Simon Magus was the father of the Gnosticks. Of him Theodoret saith that he was the first, that among Christians affirmed marriage to be the work of the devil, and commanded to abstain from the flesh of beasts. And indeed that this was generally the doctrine of the Gnosticks appears from Clem: Alex: Strom: l. 3. where speaking of them he saith they doe ὑποκρίσει δ' ἐγκρατείας δοκοῦσιν, εἰς τὸ θεῖον καὶ ἅγιον καὶ δημιουργὸν, διδάσκοντες μὴ δεῖν ἐκγαμίζειν γάμον καὶ παιδοποιΐαν, μηδὲ ἀντιποιεῖσθαι τῷ κόσμῳ δυσχεραίνειν ὕλην, μηδὲ ἐπιχορηγεῖν τῷ δυνάτῳ ἔρωτι, Under a pretense of continence they committed all villany against the creation, and the Creator, teaching that men ought not to receive marriage, nor get children, nor bring into the world such as would be miserable, nor furnish death with food or nourishment, i. e. people the world with men, whom death will consequently feed on. And again, Εἰσὶν οἱ πορείαν ἀνελκύσαι τὸ γάμον λέγουσι, καὶ ὑπὸ διαβόλου ταῦτα ἐκφωνεῖσθαι διδάσκουσι, There are that affirm and teach for doctrine, all marriage to be fornication, i. e. utterly unlawfull, and that it is brought in, and delivered by the devil, p. 446. So Irenæus l. 1. c. 22. Nubere & generare à Satana dicunt esse, The Gnosticks affirm marriage and generating to be from the devil. So the Author of the Constitutions l. 4. 8. τὸν γάμον ἀθετοῦσι they contemn marriage, and set it at nought, γαμεῖν διδάσκουσι, teach not to marry at all, all, l. 6. 10. and for meats, τινὰ τ βρωμάτων βδελύσσονται they abominate some kinds of meats l. 6. 8. & c. 26. βρώματά τινα φαυλίζουσι they affirm some meats to be ill, (see Col. 2. note i.)

c. Λόγου θεοῦ. The word of God in this place, by which meats are said to be sanctified, i.e. rescued and freed from all uncleanesse or pollution, so that they may lawfully be used and enjoyed, is certainly that word of truth now revealed in the Gospell, which frees the Christian from those observances, For this onely can satisfie conscience, that it is lawfull to doe so, and consequently that it may be done with faith or assurance that they doe not sinne; And as this secures us in general that no meat is now unlawful to a Christian under the Gospell, so to make it in the particular, lawfull to each one, the addition of prayer is the onely requisite, meaning by that the prayer of faith coming to God with the assurance it is lawful, and acknowledging it to be received of him, and praying for his blessing upon it.

d. Πρὸς ὀλίγον] is not to be taken in a sense wherein little signifies nothing at all, but as when it is set in comparison, and opposition to some greater matter, as here in opposition to πρὸς πάντα for all things, as in that speech of Plato's Σωκράτους ἐν ὀλίγῳ φροντιστέον, ἀλλὰ περὶ πολλοῦ, Socrates is a little to be considered, but truth much.

e. Ἀναγνωσει Reading, is the rendring of the Nebrew מקרא set opposite to the διδασκαλίας or traditions (which the Rabbines call the oral word) and in the holy Scripture, so called, because none but that was suffered to be read in the Church, but this not simply read, but expounded also. See note on 1 Cor. i. e.

f. Μελέτων The word μελέτα is agonistical, saith Peter Faber, and belongs to the ἀγωνιστὰς and ἀγωνάτας, in which the young men are exercised in Ephebeo, and from thence 'tis applyed to exercises in the Schooles, declamations &c. So Hesychius μελέτῃ ἀσκεῖ, ἐπιμελεῖται, γυμνάζεται, μελέτη γὰρ ἄσκησις, it signifies to exercise, as well as to take care or meditate, and so the relation which here it hath to proficiency doth inferre.

Paraphrase.

CHAP. V.

1. Deale not rigidly with a Bishop of the Church, (see note on Act. 11. b.) have that respect to his office, that when ever there is need of thy exhortation, thou doe it as to a father of the Church, withall humble respect to him, And for any inferior officers in the Church, let thy rebukes and correptions be fraternal, and full of kindnesse and friendlynesse to them.

1. REbuke not an Elder, but * intreat him as a father, and the younger men as brethren;] * Exhort παρακάλει

2. Behave thy self toward women, the antienter sort, or widowes of the Church, with great respect, the younger with modesty and civility, abstaining from any behaviour toward them, that may savour any thing of wantonnesse or turpitude.

2. The elder women as mothers, the younger as sisters, with all purity.]

3. Let those widowes which have neither husbands not children be respected and relieved (see note d) by you, i. e. by the Church, out of their stock which is intrusted to your disposing.

3. Honour [a] widowes that are widowes indeed.]

4. But if any widow which is a Christian be not perfectly destitute, but have children or grandchildren, let them relieve and take care for her, as of a part of their family v. 16. this being due by way of gratitude (see note on c. 3. e.) to the parents, which have done so much for them, and so consequently that, which as God approves of, so he requires at their hands.

4. But if any widow have children or nephewes, let them learn first to shew piety † at home, and to requite their parents; for that is good and acceptable before God.] † toward their own family τὸν ἴδιον οἶκον

5. But the widow that is truly so, and is fit to receive relief from the Church, is she that is wholly destitute, hath none of her children to relieve her, no body but God to hope in or rely on, and so continues hoping and praying at set constant times continually, without any other cares to distract, or businesse to employ her.

5. * Now she that is a widow indeed, and † desolate, trusteth in God, and continueth in supplications and prayers night and day.] * But ἡ † left quite alone μεμονωμένη

6. But she that abstaines from marrying, not in order to piety, but that she may live the more at her own disposal, she is not to be counted a widow or vitall member of the Church, but a kind of carcasse, or piece of noisomnesse in it.

6. But shee that liveth * in pleasure, is dead while she liveth.] * licentiously σπαταλῶσα

7. Give these rules that none but blameless persons may be taken in, and those that have need of it.

7. And these things give in charge that they may be blameless.]

b. 8. But if any man or woman doe not maintain those that belong to them, especially those of their family, (as their parents clearly are, having a right to live in their house, and a propriety to be maintained by them (or that they take care for and relieve them) supposing they are able to doe it) that man or woman doth quite contrary to the commands of Christ, and indeed performs not that duty to parents, that even infidels think themselves obliged to doe.

8. But if any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse then an infidel.]

9. Let none be listed as a widow into the number of those that are to be maintained by the Church (see note on Tit. 2. 2.) under the age of sixty, nor any that have parted with their husbands, and marryed again (see note on c. 3. b.)

9. Let not a widow be taken into the number, under threescore yeares old, having been the wife of one † man,] † husband ἀνδρὸς

10. And let them be such as have by their acts of duty and charity, approved themselves to those among whom they have lived in all things of which their condition hath been capable, such are good carefull education of their children, hospitality, friendlinesse and humility, and submission to the meanest offices for the relief of those that stand in need, care for all that are in any distresse, and in brief seeking occasions for all works of charity, and not onely embracing them when they have been offered.

10. * Well reported of for good works; if shee have brought up children, if she have lodged strangers, if she have washed the Saints feet, if she have relieved the afflicted, if she have diligently followed every good work.] * Which hath had testimony of her good works, ἐν ἔργοις καλοῖς μαρτυρουμένη

*grow weary of

11. But the younger widows refuse, for when they * have begun to wax wanton against Christ they will marry;] 11. But receive not into the Church offices those widows that are under that age, for there will be danger of such, that they will be weary of their employment in the Church, of living in that pious strict condition, ver. 6. and then they will relieve themselves by marrying; c.

†violated allowne

12. Having condemnation, because they have cast † off their first faith.] 12 Which is a great and a punishable crime in them, viz: that of violating their promise made unto the Church (a kind of conjugal tie) that they would attend it alone, and not forsake it, which when they doe, and return again to the world, what is it but a giving the Church a bill of divorce, and marrying another husband?

*being idle they learn to goe about to houses, and being not only idle, but tatlers also and busie-bodies, to speak things that are not fit

13. And withall * they learn to be idle, wandring about from house to house; and not onely idle, but tatlers also, and busie-bodies, speaking things which they ought not.] 13 And such young widows being unfit for such a recesse and vacancy, have nothing to doe with their time, but spend it in going about from house to house, in asking questions; and not onely so, but fall into tatling and loose discourse, into censuring and medling with other folks matters, intertaining themselves and others with unseemly discourse, either calumnizing or talking wantonly.

14. I will therefore that the younger women marry, bear children, guide the house, give no occasion to the adversary to speak reproachfully.] 14. My direction therefore is, that the younger women, widows or others that have not attained to this gravity of mind and command over themselves, doe in that case betake themselves to a married life, and serve God in that, bearing and bringing up children (see note on c. 2. d.) guiding domestick affairs, that so they may not doe any thing which may give advantage to those that are willing to take it, to accuse or find fault, or bring reproach upon such loose professors, and the Church for their sakes.

15. For some are already turned aside after Satan.] 15. For some such you know there are which have forsaken the Christian path, and betaken themselves to the Gnosticks, bitter enemies to Christians, and these would be glad to have somewhat to say against you.

16. If any man or woman that beleiveth have widows, let them relieve them, and let not the Church be charged; that it may relieve them that are widows indeed.] 16. If any Christian hath any helpless widow of his family (see v. 8.) let him undertake the care and charge of them, and not cast them upon the Church to provide for them, lest if they doe, there be not in the stock of the Church sufficient to provide for all that are truly helpless.

†be allowed, enjoy, be rewarded with διπλῆς honour

17. Let the Elders that rule well be † counted worthy of [d] double honour, especially they who * labour in the word and doctrine.] 17. Let the Bishops that have discharged that function well, receive for their reward twice as much as others have, especially those that preach the Gospel to whom it was newes, and also continue to instruct congregations of Christians in setled Churches, see Act. 11. b. d.

18. For the scripture saith, Thou shalt not muzzle the oxe that treadeth out the corn; and, The labourer is worthy of his reward.] 18. For this is agreeable to that significative ceremony of the law, which allows the beast that is used to goe over the corn, and tread out the grain out of the straw, (after the manner that threshing doth,) to feed all the time that he doth the work, and so to have a certain reward in a liberal manner, for all his labour.

19. *Against an Elder receive not an accusation, but † before two or three witnesses.] 19. Admit not any complaint against a Bishop of any Church, under thy Metropolis (see Act. 11. b.) unlesse it be testified by two or three at least. c.

20. Them that sin, rebuke before all, that others also may fear.] 20. All others that have committed any scandalous offence, thou art to admonish first, and rebuke in the presence of the community of the people, and if they reform not, inflict the censures of the Church upon them, that (beside other advantages to the offenders themselves, the reforming them by that means) others that see and hear this may be awed hereby, and kept from falling into the like.

21. I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, and the elect Angels, that thou observe these things * without preferring one before another, doing nothing † by partiality.] 21. And I conjure thee by all that is holy, that with all imparciality and uprightnesse, thou proceed in Ecclesiastical Censures without favour.

22. [Lay hands suddenly on no man, neither be partaker of other mens sins. 22. And when thou hast inflicted the Censures on any, make not too much hast to absolve them again, before they have by good works approved the sincerity of their reformation. And, by the way, take special care, that by knowing other mens enormous acts, thou be not enticed, or inveigled, (1 Cor. 15. 13.) or brought to partake with them, and commit the same. Be sure that thou keep thy self unpolluted from those sins that are now so rife among you. f. g.

Keep thy self pure.]

23. Drink no longer water, but use a little wine for thy stomachs sake, and thine often infirmities.] 23. (Yet say not I this, to prohibite thee drinking wine physically and moderately in respect of thy sicklinesse, to which drinking of water is unwholsome; This may safely be done by thee, without incurring that danger of pollution, v. 22.)

*leading them to censure, προαγουσαι εἰς κρίσιν

24. Some mens sins are [b] open beforehand, * going before to judgment: † and some men they follow after.] 24. Some mens sins are discernible so as to bring them under the censures of the Church, by way of precedent demerit, and then are no more discernible in them, (and these may be the sooner absolved) but in some they follow after that censure also, i.e. are not reformed upon censure, but continued in by repeated acts visibly and discernibly, even when they are under the Censures of the Church, (in which case there must be no absolution.) h.

† but in or to some also they follow, ἀκολουθοῦσιν

25. Likewise also the * good works of some are manifest beforehand, and they that are otherwise cannot be hid.] 25. So in like manner men's good works, almes-deeds &c. in case they doe reform upon censure, are, or must be manifest before absolution, and when they are not so (but on the contrary, their deeds continue evil, or their good works but very few) they cannot be so concealed, but they will be discernible, and by them judgment will be made, who is to be absolved, who not.

a. χήρας There were two ſorts of χήρας or lone perſons, which we render widows, in the antient Church, 1. Thoſe that were taken in to ſerve and officiate there as diaconiſſa (and thoſe were eſpecially, though not onely, choſen of virgins, παρθένοι that alwaies continued ſuch, as by a place of Ignatius may be collected) Theſe were a kind of imitation of thoſe, which in Chriſt's and the Apoſtles times voluntarily had devoted themſelves to the ſervice of God, and to miniſtring to, i.e. providing for the neceſſities of Chriſt, and the Apoſtles, and Saints, out of their own ſubſtance, ἐξ ὑπαρχόντων ἀνητῆς, Lu. 8. 3. But when afterward the faithful had brought their poſſeſſions, and laid them at the Apoſtles feet, and when in ſtead of that greater liberality, yet by the help of the offertory at the ſacrament, wealth came into the hands of the Church, (and thereby, ſaith Juſtin Martyr, Apol: 2. ἐπιτρέπει πᾶσιν ὁ προεστὼς χρείᾳ τῶν δεομένων ἐγκεῖσθαι, the Prefect became the guardian to provide for all that were in want) then this office was inſtituted in the Church, firſt, of men-deacons Act. 6. and after, of women alſo, which were more uſefull for œconomical ſervices, and theſe were called πρεσβύτιδες Tit. 2. 3. elder women, and afterward Diaconiſſæ, deaconeſſes, and might be admitted into the Church at fourty years old, See Can: 5. of the Councel of Chalcedon. The ſecond ſort of widows were thoſe, who being childleſſe and helpleſſe, were to be fed and maintained by the Church, and theſe are particularly ſpoken of in this place, and thoſe, many of them, formerly married, and therefore were not to be received in till ſixty years old, v. 9. for ſo Zonaras on the Councel of Chalcedon gives the reaſon, becauſe, ſaith he, the widow which hath had an husband, is not at the ſame age, ſo likely to continue unmarried, as ſhe that hath lived a virgin to that age, ᾗ γὰρ ἀνανεύσει &c. μᾶλλον ἂν εἰς γάμους τὸ πάθος ὀλισθήσειε. And in caſe ſhe marry, that ſhe is to be removed out of this liſt, ſeems clear, both 1. becauſe in that caſe the husband muſt provide for her, and 2^dly, by what is here ſaid ver. 11. of the care in not admitting ſuch as are young and likely to marry. This relief which is here ſpoken of for widows being deſigned on purpoſe to give them the more leiſure and vacancy for acts and exerciſes of piety, v. 5. waiting on God, continuing in prayer and ſupplication night and day, which is not ſuppoſeable of married women, which have ſo many other affairs belonging to them v. 14. to bring forth and bring up children, to manage the houſhold and the like.

b. Προνοεῖν Προνοεῖν to provide here doth not ſignifie laying up by way of careful, thoughtful providence, before-hand, but onely taking care of for the preſent, as we are able, relieving, maintaining, giving to them that want, So ſaith Heſychius, προνοεῖ, θεραπεύει; προνοεῖται, θεραπεύεται, φροντίζει, to take care for, So children that are expoſed by their parents are ἀπρονόητοι in Harmenopulus, unprovided, deſtitute. So when Alexander Aphrodiſæus ſaith, πᾶν τὸ προνοοῦν πρὸς, ἀγαθόν τι τῷ προνοουμένῳ βέβαιον, ἀπορ: λυσ: βιζλ: α. ζητ: ιδ'. he is ſaid to provide for any, who allowes him any good thing. And Ammonius in his ſcholia on the ὁ φυτὰ, having reſolved that one of God's acts is προνοητικὸν τῶν πάλαι δυσιῶν, providing for thoſe that want, applies that of the Poet to it, Θεοὶ δώτορες &c. God's giving them what they want, making his [providence] and [giving] to be all one, and ſo προνοῦν here is interpreted by ἀπορεῖν, v. 16. which is the ſons duty to the aged, helpleſſe parent, and therefore John being by Chriſt commanded to be a ſon to Mary, preſently takes her home to his houſe, Joh. 19. 27. As among the Samians the mothers of thoſe which were ſlain in the wars were given to the richer citizens, to be maintained by them, and the form of ſpeech was like Chriſt's to John, Σοὶ ταύτην δίδωμι τὴν μητέρα I give thee this mother.

c. Καλαφρονίζειν, as (without the propoſition) φρονίζειν, is ὑβρίζειν, βαρέως φέρειν, and ſo φρονεῖν, φρυᾶν in Phrynichus and ἀπαλλᾶν in Phavorinus, to grow ſtout or proud or diſorderly, not willing to bear ſo much ſtrictneſſe, and ſo to put ones ſelf out of the liſt or number of the votaries, and here the widows that were ἐν κανόνι, as after times called it, in the number of thoſe that were to be maintained by the Church, and there to wait on the ſervice of the Church, when they begin to be weary of that kind of life, then they are ſaid καλαφρονεῖν τοῦ Χριστοῦ, or φρονεῖν κατὰ τοῦ Χριστοῦ, to grow inſolent and weary of Chriſt, i. e. his ſervice in the Church. Thus φρῶν Rev. 18. 3. ſignifies irregular, diſorderly behaviour, and φρονεῖν v. 7, 9. to live diſorderly, enormouſly.

d. The διπλῆ τιμὴ double honour referres to the elder brothers portion פִּי שְׁנַיִם double portion, Deut. 21. 17. and this going along with the power of ruling the family, Gen. 4. 7. (after the death of the father) is fitly accommodated to the office of Biſhop in the Church, and ſo the electing of Barnabas and Paul to the Apoſtleſhip, Act. 13. 2. is expreſſed by ἀφορίσατε ſeparate, the word uſed about the firſt-born Exod. 13. 2. and ſo in Clem: Conſtit: l. 11. 28. διπλῆ διδοῦς ἀφορίζω μοῖραν, Let a double portion be ſeparated for them. Thus the double portion of the ſpirit of Elias reſting on Eliſæus, was the making him his ſucceſſour in the office of Prophet, as the Father above the ordinary ſons of the prophets, to have rule over them. And ſo this verſe is the ſetting down the reaſonableneſs, that the Biſhop that diſchargeth his duty or prefecture well, ſhould be looked upon in all reſpects, as one that hath the primogeniture, of maintenance (to which v. 18. referres) as well as dignity, eſpecially if his pains be extraordinary, as it muſt be, if he both preach the Goſpel where it was not before heard, (which is called λόγος, the word, and εὐαγγελίζειν to preach Rom. 15. 20. and κηρύσσειν to preach) and take pains, in farther inſtructing the beleivers in the Churches, w^ch is διδασκαλία, teaching or doctrine.

For the word τιμὴ, that that ſignifies wages, reward

ward of service, appears (among many others) by the third verse of this chapter, Honour widows, i. e. relieve, maintain them. So Job. 12. 26. where speaking of those that attend on, and minister to Christ, he saith, πμήσει ἀυτὸν ὁ πατὴρ, the father shall honour, i. e. reward him, or pay him his wages, but especially Mat. 15. where the command of God's, of honouring the parents, v. 6. is expreſt v. 5. by giving them that, by which they may be profited, i. e. maintenance, &c. see Col. 2. note i. As for the ἀξιωθῇ] that is joyned to it, although that comes from ἄξιος worthy, yet it signifies, without any reference to that, simply to enjoy, to receive, to have, as might appear by many evidences among authors. One for all, that of Justin Martyr, or the author περὶ τ ἁγ: ᾳ ἱμων: πνευμ: where speaking of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, he saith of them, τ ἀνωτω ᾳ μιᾶς θεότητ ἀξίων), (not, they have been counted worthy, but) they have had, (have been endued with) one and the same divinity.

c. Κατηγορίαν παραδέχεσθαι] What is the meaning of κατηγορίαν ἀναδέχεσθαι to receive an accuſation,] here, muſt be explained by the Judicial proceedings among the Jewes, where before the giving of the ſentence there were three parts, 1. קבלת דין the admiſſion of the cauſe or ſuit, when the Judge doth not reject the complaint, or accuſer, and that is here κατηγορίαν ἀναδέχεσθαι, to admit an accuſation, and is the meaning of Iſa. 1. 23. neither doth the cauſe of the widow come unto them, the character of an unjuſt judge, that he admits not the widows complaint againſt the oppreſſor. After the complaint is admitted, then 2^dly, there is סמיכת דין the confirmation of the ſuit or complaint, when the accuſer confirms his ſuggeſtion by oath; for before that oath, one saying one thing, and the other the contrary (which is called ἀντιλογία contradiction, Heb. 6. 16. and in * Lucian διαίτ and ἀντιλόγων, as parts of judicial proceedings) the judge is uninclined to either ſide, but then comes in the oath, and is πέρας ἀντιλογίας the end of that affirming and denying (in the Author of that Epiſtle) takes away the æquilibrium, that the judge was in before, and by it he is now confirmed to the beleiving the one part againſt the other, whereupon the oath is ſaid to be πρὸς βεβαίωσιν for confirmation, in that place, Heb. 6. 16. as in the Romane law Ὅρκος ὁπωσδήποτε ἀμφισβήτησιν τίθησι, ſaith Pſellus in Συνοψ: νομ: v. 1213. the oath coming in parts the controverſie or doubt, and in Leg: Bajuvar: c. 12. tit: 15. 2. In his verò cauſis ſacramenta præſtentur, in quibus nullam probationem diſcuſſio judicantis inveneri (See Bignon: not: in Marculfi Form: l. 1. c. 38.) then is the uſe of oaths, when the diſcuſſion of the plea by the judge yeilds him no ſatisfactory proof. The 3^d part is חקר דין Job 29. 16. the ſearching out of the cauſe by arguments afterwards produced (cauſa κατακρίσεως) and conſidered of by the judge. The firſt of theſe onely it is that belongs to this place, the admiſſion of the complaint or accuſation, which againſt a πρεσβύτερος or governor of the Church is not allowed under two or three witneſſes in reſpect of the gravity of his perſon and weight of his office or calling, who muſt not be defamed (as the being brought into the court is a kind of defamation) if there be not great cauſe for it.

f. Περὶ τ ἐπιθέσεως] That χειροθεσία laying on hands] is a ceremony of prayer or benediction, is ordinarily known in the Old Teſtament, uſed firſt by the father to the children, in beſtowing the bleſſing upon them, and, with that, ſucceſſion to ſome part of the eſtate; So when Jacob bleſſed the children of Joſeph, Gen. 48. 14. he laid his hands upon their heads, v. 15. And from thence it was among them accommodated to the communicating of power to others as aſſiſtants, or deriving it to them as ſucceſſors: So when Moſes aſſumed the ſeventy to aſſiſt him, Num. 11. 17. this, ſaith Maimonides, was done by his laying hands upon them, Sanhedr: c. 4. And when he left the world, and conſtituted Joſhua his ſucceſſor, God appointed him to take Joſhua, and lay his hands upon him, Num. 27. 18. So Deut. 34. 9. Joſhua was full of the ſpirit of wiſdome, i. e. was his ſucceſſor in the Government, for Moſes had laid his hands upon him. From theſe three uſes of the ceremony, in prayer, in paternal benediction, in creating of officers, Three ſorts of things there are in the New Teſtament to which it is principally accommodated; In prayer it is uſed either in curing diſeaſes, or pardoning ſins; Diſeaſes, the corporal bands, Lu. 13. 16. were cured by impoſition of hands, Act. 19. 17. and 28. 8. and ſo it was foretold Mar. 16. 18. they ſhall lay their hands on the ſick, and they ſhall recover. And ſo ſins, the ſpiritual bands, were done away, or pardoned by the ſame ceremony, laying on of hands, uſed in the abſolution of penitents. Thus Heb. 6. 2. as the baptiſmes are thoſe uſed among the Jewes and Chriſtians for the admiſſion of proſelytes, ſo the impoſition of hands doth probably denote the reſtoring of penitents that were lapſt after baptiſme, (see note on Heb. 5. d.) From that of paternal benediction is that of laying on hands in bleſſing of infants, Mar. 10. 16. by that means ſignifying them to be fit to be received into the Church by baptiſme, as thoſe that have title to this kingdome of heaven, the Church here, and, through the ſame mercy of God in Chriſt, heaven hereafter. This benediction and impoſition of hands I ſuppoſe it is, that Clemens Alexandrinus referres to Pædag: l. 3. c. 11. in theſe words, Τίνι χρὴ πρεσβυτέρῳ ἐπιθεῖναι χεῖρα; πίνα δ᾽ εὐλογήσει; On whom doth the Presbyter lay hands? whom ſhall he bleſſe? meaning moſt probably in that place the ſolemnity with which the Catechiſt diſmiſſed thoſe that were catechized, preparatory to their baptiſme, and ſo ſaith Euſebius of Conſtantine de vit: Conſtant: l. 4. that to prepare for his baptiſme, ὁμολογήσας τ διὰ χειρὸς ἐυχῶν ἀξιῶν, he made profeſſion, (i. e. confeſt his ſins, and profeſt the faith) & then was vouchſafed thoſe prayers that are given by impoſition of hands, to wch purpoſe alſo the Author of the Conſtitutions called Apoſtolical, l. 7. c. 39. where having ſet down the ſeverals, in which the Catechumenus muſt be inſtructed, he adds, But let him that laies on hands adore God &c. 2^dly, That of confirming thoſe of full age, that had formerly been baptized; Such that of the Epheſian diſciples ſeems to be, Act. 19. who being baptized, v. 5. Paul laid his hands on them v. 6. To which in thoſe times many extraordinary gifts were conſequent, ſpeaking with tongues &c. as had formerly fallen out Act. 10. 44. Laſtly, from that in creating ſucceſſors, or aſſiſtants in power, came the uſe of impoſition of hands in Ordination, whether of Biſhops or Deacons, Act.6.6. & 18.17. & 18.3. 1 Tim. 4.15. 2 *Tim.*1.6. To this laſt it is that this exhortation of Paul to Timothy is by many thought to referre, that he ſhould be careful to have thoſe whom he received into Orders, ſufficiently approved to him. But the context ſeems rather to referre it to that which was uſed in abſolution, that he ſhould not make too much haſt in receiving thoſe that were under Cenſures, to abſolution, for that was the thing which would moſt probably make him partaker or guilty of their ſins, which the Cenſures were deſigned to reform in them, but would not doe ſo, if, before they had approved their repentance & reformation, they were received to the peace of the Church again. And thus it connects with the words foregoing v. 20. Thoſe that offend rebuke before all, that the reſt may have fear, and v. 21. I charge thee that thou obſerve theſe things, without prejudging, doing nothing by favour or inclination, or partiality, whereon it follows, Lay hands ſuddainly on no man, and to that alſo belong the following rules, v. 24, 25. (ſee note h.) Thus in Victor, about the Vandalick perſecution, l.2. Qui nobis pœnitentiæ manus collaturi ſunt, & reconciliationis indulgentiam, obſtrictos peccatorum vinculis ſoluturi, They that lay their hands of penance upon us, and conferre the indulgence of reconciliation, and looſe us from the bands of ſins; where it is clearly uſed in this ſenſe. And in Can: 5. of the Councel of Carthage, diſt: 50. Presbyteris & Diaconis ſi quando de gravi aliquâ culpâ convicti, miniſterio remoti fuiſſent, manus non imponerentur ut pœnitentibus, Prieſts and Deacons which had been convict of any grand fault, and ſo removed from their miniſtery, ſhould not have hands laid on them as penitents. And in the third Councel of Carthage (that in S. Auguſtine's time) Can. 32. Cujuſcunque autem pœnitentis publicum & vulgatiſſimum crimen eſt, quod univerſa Eccleſia noverit, ante abſidem manus ei imponatur, When the penitents ſin is known to the whole Church, the Biſhop is to lay his hands on him before the Abſis, i. e. the upper part of the Quire, where the Altar is. And ſo Hincmarus concerning the divorce of Thietberga, Sacri Canones jubent ut pœnitentes tempore quo pœnitentiam petunt, impoſituram manuum, & cilicium ſuper capita à Sacerdote, ſicut ubique vulgatum eſt, ante Abſidem accipiant, The holy Canons cõmand that the penitents when they demand repentance, i. e. admiſſion to penance, and abſolution, ſhall receive from the Biſhop impoſition of hands, and ſackcloth upon their heads, as it is every where known, before the Abſis, where the altar ſtands. So in *Fulgentius Ep:*1. de conjug: Acceptâ manus impoſitione, pœnitentiam, ſecundum morem quem habet Chriſtiana religio, peregit, He performed penance by impoſition of hands, according to the manner obſerved in the Chriſtian religion. So in *Avitus Alcimus Ep:*24. Manus impoſitionem adhibete converſo ab hæreſi, Uſe impoſition of hands to him that is converted from hereſie. And in the Author contra Prædeſtin: l. 3. Non auſi ſunt Eccleſiarum Pontifices manum imponere pœnitenti, niſi confeſſionem voluntariam oſtendenti, The Biſhops of the Churches durſt not lay hands on the penitent, but on his ſhewing his voluntary confeſſion. And in the Chronicle of Jo:Gerundenſis ſpeaking of the Arrians Synod of Toledo, one of the Canons is, De Romanâ religione ad noſtram Catholicam fidem venientes non debere baptizari, ſed tantùmmodo per manus impoſitionem, & Communionis perceptionem ablui, They that come from the Roman religion to our Catholick faith, ought not to be baptized, but onely purged by impoſition of hands and receiving the Communion. And this is the notion which S. Cyprian had of this place, and Pacianus in paranesi ad pœnit:

What is the meaning of Σεαυτὸν ἁγνὸν τήρει, keep thy ſelf pure] will appear by the antient Gloſſary, Σεαυτὸν ἁγνὸν τήρει· Ἁγνὸς caſtus, it ſignifies that kind of purity, which conſiſts in perfect chaſtity, free from all ſhew of impurity. So 2 Cor. 11.2. ἁγνὴν παρθένον a pure chaſt virgin. So Tit. 2.5. the widows or female officers of the Church muſt be ἁγνὰς pure, or chaſt, and Timothy muſt behave himſelf toward the yonger women ἐν πάσῃ ἁγνείᾳ in all purity, or chaſtity, c.3.2. and ſo the Hebrew טהור anſwerable to ἁγνὸς ſignifies. So that this is a precept diſtinct from the former of not laying on hands, abſolving offenders too ſoon, and is rather a branch of that which follows, μηδὲ κοινώνει, neither partake of others ſins, and yet both are added ſeaſonably and pertinently to the former. For when this part of the Epiſcopal office is here conſidered, of dealing with offenders, of which a ſpecial part is examining, and ſo coming to knowledge of their facts, and the ſins, that were, through the Gnoſticks infuſions, become at this time moſt frequent in the Church, being thoſe of uncleanneſſe, It is here added on this occaſion, that he partake not of other mens ſins, but be ſure to keep himſelf chaſt, i. e. that by knowing what is committed by other men, he be not corrupted, or defiled, and drawn into the like, but remain ἁμίαντος (by which Heſychius interprets ἁγνὸς) pure and undefiled. One thing there is which ſeems to incline the words to another notion, and to affix them, as a branch of the former precept of not abſolving ſinners too haſtily, viz: the ordinary interpretation of κοινωνεῖν partaking, for bearing part of the blame of others commiſſions. But this is a miſtake, for κοινωνεῖν and συγκοινωνεῖν ἁμαρτίαις, ſignifies to commit the ſins, (not only to be blameable for others guilts.) So Epheſ. 5.11. Μὴ συγκοινωνεῖτε &c. have no fellowſhip with the unfruitfull works of darkneſſe, i. e. doe not you permit your ſelves to be drawn into their dark villainous myſteries, to commit thoſe heathen ſins which there are committed, but rather diſcover them and bring them to light. So Rev 18.4. Go out of her my people, that you may not συγκοινωνῆσαι communicate with, or partake of her ſins, i. e. be corrupted with, and drawn into the like commiſſions. And ſo here it will be a general caution to the Biſhop Timothy (as elſwhere to avoid youthful luſts 2 Tim. 2.22.) not to be by the knowledge of other mens ſins, intangled in them; and then it follows more particularly, that he be ſure to keep himſelf free from all impurity. That the words are here to be thus interpreted, as diſparate from the former precept of μὴ ταχέως, lay not, &c. appears not only by the μηδὲ neither, which thus disjoyns it, but eſpecially becauſe without this way of ſetting it, it will not be conceivable, how that which immediately follows, ver. 23. ſhould come in, Drink no longer water &c. For that the verſes following

g. Σεαυτὸν ἁγνὸν τήρει

κοινώνει ἁμαρτίαις

συγκοινωνεῖτε

μὴ συγκοινωνεῖτε

(v. 24, 25.)

(v. 24, 25.) belong and return back to the matter of cenſures and abſolution, is evident (ſee note h.) and ſo the 23th verſe muſt needs be read in a parentheſis, being quite of another matter, which yet muſt, after the manner of parentheſes, be introduced by occaſion of ſomewhat ſaid immediately before. And to this purpoſe it will be very agreeable in the notion, which we have here given, and noted in the paraphraſe, thus, Though I adviſe thee to be very wary that by the cognizance of other mens ſinnes whether drunkenneſs or uncleanneſs, thou be not drawn to the committing of them, yet this I ſay not, to interdict thee the medicinall uſe of wine, but rather I adviſe thee to it, which being ſaid on this occaſion incidentally, he returnes again to the former matter, v. 24. But if both theſe [neither partake &c. and keep thy ſelf pure] be interpreted to be an effect, or conſequent of his laying on hands ſuddainly, then there is no ſuch occaſion of introducing that parentheſis, and therefore ſure that is not the meaning of it.

h. Τινῶν ἁμαρτίαι πρόδηλοι

That theſe two laſt verſes of this chapter belong to the buſineſs of Church Cenſures, and abſolution, may appear by the context, v. 20. there is direction for the publick rebuking of offenders, whither by way of correption, or inflicting the Cenſures, and v. 21. there is a conjuration againſt prejudging on one ſide, and partiality, or favour on the other, and v. 22. deliberation, and delay, and obſervation of the penitents behaviour is required, before he be abſolved. Lay hands ſuddainly on no man, i.e. before the ſincerity of his reformation be approved to thee, according as in the Primitive Canons, they muſt exerciſe themſelves for ſome ſpace in good workes, before they are capable of abſolution; and then ſome words coming between, as proper to Biſhop Timothies youth, that he be ſure, that he fall not himſelf into thoſe ſinnes, which he ſees committed by others, and ſo his office of juriſdiction become a ſnare to him, (and on occaſion of that, the 23d verſe being added by way of parentheſis) it followes very pertinently to that former matter, Some mens ſins are πρόδηλοι open before hand &c. i.e. by not abſolving offenders over haſtily, by obſerving, and waiting a while, thou wilt be more able to paſſe a right judgement. For the behaviour of ſome men under the Cenſures is ſo ill, that they deſerve to be farther cenſured, rather than abſolved, and in that reſpect it is not good to be too haſty in abſolving. And the good workes of ſome men doe approve and demonſtrate the ſincerity of their repentance, which yet they cannot doe, if they be abſolved preſently, before they have ſo approved themſelves. And whether one way or other, mens workes will manifeſt, what they are, and though for a time they may be concealed, yet if the Biſhop make not over much haſt to abſolve, they will diſcover themſelves either by their good workes to be ſincere, or by their ill to be unſincere. And ſo ſtill this is the rendring of a reaſon for the point in hand, that the Biſhop make not over much haſt to abſolution.

CHAP. VI.

Paraphraſe.

* as are ſervants under yokes ὅσοι εἰσὶν ὑπὸ ζυγὸν δοῦλοι

† the doctrine be not evill ſpoken of ἡ διδασκαλία βλασφημῆται

1. LEt as many * ſervants as are under the yoke, count their own maſters worthy of all honour, that the name of God and † his doctrine be not blaſphamed.]

1. Thoſe Chriſtians that are bondmen to heathens muſt perform all ſervice and obedience to them, which belongs to them by the law of ſervants among the heathens, that the profeſſion of Chriſtianity, and the doctrine of the Goſpell be not looked upon by the heathens, as that which makes men worſe livers then they were, neglecting their morall duties, for being Chriſtians.

† becauſe they who help to doe good are faithful and beloved, ὅτι οἱ τῆς εὐεργεσίας ἀντιλαμβανόμενοι πιστοί εἰσι καὶ ἀγαπητοί

2. And they that have beleiving maſters, [a] let them not deſpiſe them becauſe they are brethren; but * rather doe them ſervice, † becauſe they are faithful and beloved, [b] partakers of the [c] benefit. Theſe things teach and exhort.]

2. And thoſe Chriſtians that have Chriſtian maſters muſt not withdraw any of that obedience, which is due to them, upon this plea, that they are Chriſtians, and ſo their equals, or brethren; but thinke themſelves the more obliged to ſerve them, becauſe the faith and love that conſtitutes men Chriſtians, conſiſts in helping to doe good, and that is all, wherein their ſervice conſiſts, and conſequently their performing due ſervice to them, is a very Chriſtian thing, and that which Chriſtianity doth not leſſe, but more oblige them to. Theſe are things of ſuch a nature, ſo much required by Chriſtian religion, and the contrary at this time ſo taught by the Gnoſtick heretickes, that it is neceſſary for thee to give theſe admonitions to all, to tell them what is their duty, and exhort them carefully to practiſe it.

a. b. c.

3. If any man teach otherwiſe, and conſent not to wholeſome words, even the words of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and to the doctrine which is according to godlineſſe,]

3. But the Gnoſticks v. 20. that teach libertiniſme in ſtead of the doctrine of Chriſt and the Goſpell (ſee note on c. 3. e.) are to be known by this character,

* puffe up τετύφωται

† ſick νοσῶν

* wicked opinions ὑγιαίνουσι πίστει

† odde kind of diſputings of men that have their underſtanding perverted, παραδιατριβαὶ διεφθαρμένων ἀνθρώπων τὸν νοῦν

4. He is * proud, knowing nothing, but † doting about queſtions and ſtrifes of words, whereof cometh envy, ſtrife, railings, * evill ſurmiſings,]

4. They are ſwell'd with an opinion of knowledge (whence they take their title, Gnoſticks) whereas indeed they know nothing, and ſtudy nothing but diſputings and verbal controverſies which have no matter of ſubſtance in them, Col. 2. 8. and this is a kinde of diſeaſe or diſtemper in them, and all that comes from it, is uncharitableneſſe, ſpeaking evill of their ſuperiors, Jude 8. and maintaining impious opinions contrary to moral life, as that of libertiniſme of all ſorts,

* thinking that pietie is advantage νομίζοντα πορισμὸν εἶναι τὴν εὐσέβειαν

5. † Perverſe diſputings of men of corrupt minds and deſtitute of the truth, * ſuppoſing that gain is godlineſſe: from ſuch withdraw thy ſelf.]

5. Diſputings void of all ſolidity, empty and unprofitable, ſuch as are proportionable to men, whoſe very underſtandings are debauched and corrupted, and void of all truth, men that have taken up an opinion (that cauſed the diſcourſe at this time) that Chriſtian religion (ſee note on c. 3. e.) is an advantagious trade, a meanes of helping one to ſecular immunities and priviledges, (as that a ſervant ſhall be free by that means) ſuch men as theſe are fit for Eccleſiaſtical cenſures or diſcipline to be paſt upon them.

6. But godlineſſe, with † contentment is great gain.]

6. As for that opinion of theirs that Chriſtianity is an advantagious calling, though it be farre from true, nay impious, in that ſenſe whereto they apply it, yet in this other 'tis moſt orthodox, that a Chriſtian life with a competent ſufficient ſubſiſtence is all the wealth in the world, and much better than a greatdeal more wealth.

competency or ſufficiency for this life tis clear tis no way advantagious to us, for as we brought nothing with us into this world, ſo we cannot carry any out, and ſo that which we doe not ſpend or uſe, is loſt to us.

† we ſhal be ſufficiently provided for with theſe.

Notes on Chap. VI.

a. Μὴ καταφρονεῖν πιστοὺς ὄντας ἀδελφούς

It is here somewhat uncertain, to whom these words ὅτι ἀδελφοί εἰσι because they are brethren] and ὅτι πιστοὶ &c.] doe belong, whether to the servants, that pretended themselves at liberty, because they were Christians; or to the Masters, whom the servants would not obey, but despise, because those Masters were ἀδελφοὶ brethren, and so but equals, no better men than they. That the latter is it, is made probable by this, that in the beginning of the verse we read πιστοὺς δεσπότας beleiving Masters, where the πιστοὶ faithfull or beleiving] is directly applyed to the Masters, But there is more reason to adhere to the former, 1. Because the probability for the latter is of no force, concluding only that the Masters here spoken of, are Christians, which is granted also in the former interpretation, and not that the second πιστοὶ &c. is not appliable to the servants, for it is certain that the servants here spoken of, are supposed to be Christians also, for otherwise the Apostles exhortation could not here be given to them, or to Timothy concerning them, neither Paul nor Timothy having jurisdiction over those, that were not Christians. 2dly because the Libertine Christians plea against subjection to their Masters cannot be supposed to have been taken from the Christianity of their Masters, for tis evident by the first verse that they excepted against subjection, and pleaded exemption from obedience to Masters that were not Christians, viz. those which kept them under yoke, (as Christians were not allow'd to doe to Christians) i. e. heathen Masters; But their plea against all subjection both to heathens v. 1. and to πιστοὺς δεσπότας beleiving Masters v. 2. was the same, only this that they were Christians, and therefore too good to serve heathens, and again Christians, whose title] ἀδελφοὶ brethren] was a style of equality, and so an argument that they were freed from serving their fellow-Christians, 3dly, because the direct rendring of the word being that, which we have given in the margent, the ἀντιλαμβανόμενοι τῆς εὐεργεσίας] with the particle εἰς before it, being in all reason the subject, and [πιστοὶ καὶ ἀγαπητοὶ faithfull and beloved] the predicate in the proposition, the sense will be obvious, by applying it to the servants, (but not so by applying it to the Masters) thus, Let not the Christian servants despise their Christian Masters, upon this score, that the servant by Christianity is made a brother, and equall to his Master, but the rather serve them, upon this very score of being Christians, because they that help and assist in doing good, (as Christian servants of Christian masters doe assist their Masters in doing good, whereas it cannot fitly be said of the Masters, though Christians, that they thus help, or aid their servants) are faithfull and beloved, i. e. such as Christians ought to be, exercising fidelity and love to God, and to their Masters for Gods sake, who hath commanded obedience to them. And for these reasons this notion seems the most probable, by applying all these to the servants in the latter part of the verse, but to those, as servants of the πιστοὶ δεσπόται Christian Masters in the former part of it. And if we consider the words in severall, and then all of them together, this will be yet more evident, Πιστοὶ and ἀγαπητοὶ are the ordinary titles of Christians, proportionable to the two prime graces of a Christian, Faith and Love, and so ἀδελφοὶ, brethren, is a title also signifying the same thing, but withall noting an equality, such as is among brethren. The Gnosticks upon this ground taught liberty and manumission of servants from their Masters, by their being Christians, and so fellow-brethren, not servants of their fellow-Christians. To which argument of theirs taken from one title of Christians, the Apostle answers, and makes retortion, by mentioning those other titles of Christians also, which may very well be reconcileable with subjection, as πιστοὶ, faithfull, which is an Epithet that belongs ordinarily to servants, noting fidelity, which is the special thing required in them. And so also ἀγαπητοὶ beloved] will be, which, as it is the title of Christians every where in the New Testament, so 'tis also a title of servants too, in that they assist their masters in doing good, which is but the work of a wife to a husband, of one friend or beloved to another. All this is said most clearly in reference to the Gnosticks, whose doctrine that was, and the seeds of it were visible in Asia (and affirmed to be so in one Church under Timothies care, that of Smyrna) in Polycarp's time, which caused Ignatius's admonition in his Epistle to him, that the men or maid servants should not be puft up, ἀλλ' εἰς δόξαν θεοῦ πλεῖον δουλευέτωσαν, but to the glory of God let them serve the more, as (here) become the better servants for being Christians, and μὴ ἐπαίρεσθαι ἀπὸ τῆς κοινῆς ἐλευθερίας &c. Let them not desire, or pretend to any common liberty upon the score of being Christians.

Πιστοὶ δεσπόται

b. Εὐεργεσία

The word εὐεργεσία is but once more used in the New Testament, Act. 4. 9. and there 'tis taken actively, doing good, not receiving it, beneficentia in the active, not beneficium in the passive sense, which, saith Aristotle, is εὐεργέτημα, as it is in the receiver. And thus εὐεργεσία is doing, not receiving good, with which this holds analogie directly.

c. Ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι

Ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι is to help, either from one notion of ἀντὶ, contra, to take up at the other end, and so to bear part of a burthen, as the wife is the man's helper; or as ἀντὶ signifies vice, or pro, to bear any weight in another's stead, ἀντιλαμβανόμενος βοηθὸς an helper, saith Hesychius, and so here ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι τῆς εὐεργεσίας, to assist doing good (see note on Mat. 6. m.) But when it is joyned with a genitive of the person, it signifies somewhat more, see note on Lu. 10. b.

d. Ἀρκεσθησόμεθα τούτοις

Ἀρκεσθησόμεθα τούτοις] signifies, we shall be satisfied with these, So the Syriacke renders it, wherefore

Wherefore meat and cloathing are ſufficient for us, אכסא (from כסס or כסי) both in ſenſe and ſound, differing little from the Latine, ſufficio, onely in the Latine termination.

e. Βαλόμενοι πλοῦτον — That the βουλόμενοι πλουτεῖν] they that will be rich, is part of the character of the Gnoſticks in this place, and that they were a ſort of Chriſtians, that made no uſe of their religion, but to their ſecular advantages, ver. 5. and whenſoever it was not reconcileable with thriving in the world, (brought perſecution) made no ſcruple of renouncing their Chriſtian profeſſion, hath often been ſaid, and may appear from one eminent place of Clemens Alexandrinus, who (oppoſing ὁ ἀληθὴς γνωστικὸς the true knower of myſteries or ſearcher into profitable Cabala's, the Chriſtian indeed, to the Gnoſtick, or knower of myſteries here falſly ſo called v. 20.) hath theſe words, οἶδεν ἀντὶ τῆς τετάρτης τὰ ἀνίγματα τῇ ἡμερῶν τάξει ὁ πρῶτος, καὶ ὁ ἕβδομος, Ἑρμοκράτης, Ἀντὶ τῆς δὲ καὶ τὸν βίον φιλαργυρίας τε ὕλης καὶ φιληδονίας, ἐξ ὧν αἱ πᾶσαι ἐκφύονται κακίαι, He knows the myſteries of the faſt-daies, the fourth and ſixt day of the week, one is named by the name of Mercury, the other of Venus, and accordingly he faſts or abſtains in his converſation from love of money, and love of pleaſures, from which all evil doth ſpring. Where, as love of pleaſures every where imputed to the Gnoſtick hereticks, is mentioned as one root of all villany, ſo is love of money taken notice of as the other (v. 10.) and both in relation to the Gnoſticks here, to whom the true Chriſtian is oppoſed.

f. Ἀγωνίζῃ ἀγῶνα — This whole verſe alludes to the exerciſes of the Grecians. In which as there were five ſorts, running, wreſtling, &c. formerly mentioned, ſo every of them is commonly ſtyled ἀγὼν a combat or ſtrife, and they which contended in each of them, ſaid, as here, ἀγωνίζεσθαι ἀγῶνα, The rendring of this [fight a good fight] may make it beleived to belong peculiarly to that of cuffing, πυγμὴ, whence our Latine pugna, fight comes. But the word is not here to be ſo reſtrained, but ſet more generally in ſome common word, as ſtrife, or combate, (as ἀγωνίζεσθε εἰσελθεῖν ſtrive to enter in at the ſtraight gate, and ἐπαγωνίζεσθαι Jude 3. to contend earneſtly) and then 'twill by the conſequents be applied to that of racing, where the crown was ſet over the goale, that he that came formoſt, and ſo conquered, might catch it off, and carry it away with him, for ſo [ἐπιλαβοῦ lay hold, or apprehend] that follows here, and ver. 19. is the word that expreſſes the catching of the crown from the top of the goale, and eternal life is that crown, and the [ἐνώπιον πολλῶν μαρτύρων, before many witneſſes] denotes the many ſpectators that were wont to be at thoſe games, called from thence πανηγύρεις, frequentia, and ſolemnities, and ſo πανήγυρις may referre alſo, to the κήρυξ or praco, who proclaimed the laws and the prize or reward of the ἀγῶνες, and called the company together to contend for it.

Πανήγυρις

Εἰς ἀπλανεῖαν, εἰς πυρῶ, ſaith Phavorinus, a cheerful, comfortable condition, (agreeable to the πάντα, all things, and πλουσίως richly, preceding) and thus it is uſed, not onely in an ill, but good ſenſe, ἀπλανῶ πλούτῳ enjoying wealth, ſaith he, for εὐδαιμονῶ, being happy, and ἀπλανῶν τιμῆς enjoying honour, for ἐντυχῶ, that other kind of happineſſe. g. ὦ ἀπλανεστάτη

The word θεμέλιος in this place ſeems to have a peculiar ſignification (different from that other of foundation ſo ordinary in other places) and coming from τίθημι to lay up, as θησαυρὸς doth, it may poſſibly ſignifie no more than a treaſure, ſomewhat laid up, and ſo both ἀποθησαυρίζοντες, laying up, going before, and εἰς τὸ μέλλον for the future, or time to come, following it, would incline to render it. So Tobit 4. 9. in the ſame matter of almeſgiving, θῆμα γὰρ ἀγαθὸν θησαυρίζεις, for thou layeſt up for thy ſelf a good treaſure, a good laying up, againſt the day of neceſſity. Beyond this, it is the obſervation of a late Critick Sam: Petit, that the word θεμέλιος may ſignifie in the ſame latitude that the Hebrew עקר (which is anſwerable to it) doth, i.e. not onely a foundation, but, as the Rabbines uſe the word, a bill of contract, a bond or obligation, that he receives that lends out any thing, upon which he may found a confidence of having it returned to him again, To this perhaps it may be appliable that the Hebrew סיכן, which is rendred θεμέλιος ſometimes, is alſo rendred ζωθήκη, Iſa. 30. 1. a compact, And then it will have this weight here, that the almes-giver by his liberality receives and layes up an obligation from God, that this mercy of his ſhall be rewarded. And to this notion of the word that of Prov. 19. 7. is very agreeable, He that hath pity on the poor lendeth to the Lord, and that which he hath given he will pay him again. In this ſenſe, ſaith he, the word is again found 2 Tim. 2. 19. where God's θεμέλιος is ſaid to have a ſeal affixed to it, which ſeems to referre to a bill or bond, and becauſe thoſe ſeals had their inſcriptions on both ſides, agreeing to the conditions of the two perſons contracting, accordingly it is there added, firſt on God's part, The Lord knoweth them that are his, i.e. God will be faithfull and conſtant in owning thoſe that are his ſervants, Then 2dly, on man's part, Let every one that nameth the name of Chriſt depart from iniquity. So that God's θεμέλιος there may very well ſignifie his χειρόγραφον, bill or band (and ſo here the word may ſignifie alſo) which being left with any man, as a means to ſecure him, a depoſitum, a παραθήκη, a pledge or pawn, may well be ſtyled θεμέλιος, from τίθημι pono, ſomewhat delivered him as his ſecurity. h. θεμέλιος

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAVL THE APOSTLE TO TIMOTHY.

THat this Epiſtle was ſent to Timothy from Rome there is no queſtion, and that whilſt he was in reſtraint, and danger there. But whether this were at that firſt time of his being there, mention'd in the laſt of the Acts, An: Chr: 58. or whether immediately before his martyrdome, which was ten years after, about the thirteenth or fourteenth of Nero, there is this reaſon to demurre, becauſe he tells him c. 4. 6. that he is, (as the ordinary Engliſh reads) now ready to be offered, and that the time of his departure is at hand; Which ſeems, with the ſubſcription of the Epiſtle, to determine it to the latter; On the other ſide, ſome paſſages there are, which incline it to the former; as when he ſaith c. 4. 16. that in his firſt defence though all forſook him, yet the Lord ſtood with him, that the preaching might be fulfilled, and that all the Gentiles might hear, &c. which ſeems to referre it to his firſt being at Rome, after which time he proclaimed the Goſpel to the Gentiles in other regions, So ſaith Clemens in his Epiſtle to the Corinthians, p. 8. that he came εἰς τὸ τέρμα τῆ δύσεως, to ſome remote parts in the weſt. So S. Jerome in Catal: that being diſmiſt by Nero, he preacht the Goſpel of Chriſt in the Weſtern parts. So ſaith Euſebius l. 2. c. 22. Τότε μὲν οὖν ἀπολογησάμενον, αὖθις ὁδὸν ἐπὶ τὸ κηρύγμα & διακονίαν λόγου ἴσχυε τελειοῦν & Ἀπόστολον, Then having made his defence, the report is that he did again betake himſelf to the office, or miniſtery of preaching the word. So when he remembers to Timothy his perſecutions at Antioch, Iconium, and Lyſtra, c. 3. 11. and what Alexander at Epheſus had done to him, Act. 19. 33. it is not ſo probable, that this ſhould be repeated by him 14 years after the fact, and juſt before his death, as at his firſt being at Rome, which was not above four years after the fact. So when he ſaith c. 4. 12. that he had ſent Tychicus to Epheſus, it is probable that that was at the writing of the Epiſtle to the Epheſians, which he ſent from Rome by Tychicus about this time of his firſt being there. And for the one argument on the other ſide, the approaching of his death] to that may be oppoſed, what he adds c. 4. 17, 18. that he was delivered out of the mouth of the lyon, i. e. either from Nero under the title of the Lyon, or from his great danger, adding confidently for the future, that the Lord ſhall deliver him, which was literally true of this firſt, but cannot in the ſenſe of delivering him from his danger, (to which the 17th ver. belongs) be verified of his laſt danger, from which he was not delivered. And for the words v. 6. I ſuppoſe they may thus beſt be rendred, Ἐγὼ γὰρ ἤδη σπένδομαι, for I am already poured out, (ſee note on Phil. 2. d.) i. e. my danger of death is already ſo great (ſo in the eye of man) that I am as it were wine poured out upon the ſacrifice, to prepare it for offering up. To which he may fitly reſemble his being brought out to the barre, to be tried for his life. And when 'tis added, καὶ ὁ καιρὸς τῆς ἐμῆς ἀναλύσεως ἐφέστηκε, and the time of my departure hath been at hand, that may denote no more than an imminent danger of death, mentioned as now paſt, without any foretelling that he ſhould now inſtantly die. And in this ſenſe it will be reconcileable with the Lords having delivered him out of the mouth of the Lyon, v. 17. viz: this imminent, but now paſt, danger. And thus may the ſeventh verſe be interpreted alſo, I have fought a good fight (of afflictions) (ſee 1 Theſſ. 2. note b.) run great hazards, and paſt Chriſtianly through them, I have run my race (ſo τελεῖν ſignifies, not to finiſh, but to perform, ſee note on Act. 21. 2.) I have kept the faith, not ſwerved from it, for all my danger; By δρόμος race, not referring to the whole courſe of life, but to this one combat of afflictions at Rome, now freſh in his memory, and recited in that chapter, v. 16, 17. That Timothy which is here appointed to come to him. c. 4. 9. did accordingly come, is generally acknowledged, and that after his coming, the Epiſtles to the Philippians, Coloſſians, and Philemon, were written, as appears by the place, Rome, from whence they all are dated, and the joyning of Timothy's name in the front of them. Now of all thoſe Epiſtles 'tis clear, that they were written at his firſt being at Rome, and not immediatly before his martyrdome, For Philip. 1. 26. & 2. 23, 24. he expreſſeth his confidence, that he ſhall be delivered, and again come unto them, which is not reconcileable with his perſwaſion of the inſtant approach of his death, at the writing of this, and to Philemon v. 22. he ſends to make proviſion for his lodging at Coloſſe. As for the ſubſcription of the Epiſtle, which referres it to the δευτέρᾳ, the ſecond time of his coming before Nero, that may poſſibly ſtand good, by this interpretation, that he was twice, at his firſt impriſonment, brought out to the barre, before the Emperor, and freed both times, that the firſt, being his greateſt danger, was moſt memorable to him by all mens forſaking him, and the interpoſing of Gods protection, when all other means failed him. And this is more likely to be recited by him him in an Epistle written soon after it, then in one of ten years distance from it. However, we know, that the subscriptions of the Epistles are not to be found in all the antient Copies. What the designe of this Epistle was, is manifest, to stirre him up to caution, diligence, and discharge of his office, on occasion of the creeping heresie of the Gnosticks c. 2. 17. stolne in among them, which had much debauched the Asiaticks c.1.15. and made use of Magick to oppose the truth of the Gospel, c.3.8.

Paraphrase.

CHAP. I.

1. I Paul, who (farre from any merit of mine, meerly by the good pleasure of God and his undeserved grace) have received commission to make known the Gospel or the promise of life, which now is made by Christ to all penitent beleivers,

1. PAVL an Apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, according to the promise of life which is in Christ Jesus,]

2. Send greeting in the Lord to Timothy by me converted to the faith.

2. To Timothy, my dearly beloved son; Grace, mercy, and peace from God the father, and Christ Jesus our Lord.]

3. In my thanksgivings and prayers to God (whom, as my progenitors of the tribe of Benjamin did before me, so have I obeyed sincerely all my time, even when through ignorance I persecuted the Christian faith, doing according to the dictate of my conscience, or as I was perswaded I ought to doe) I mention thee constantly, praying and giving thanks to God for thee,

3. I thank God, whom I serve from my forefathers with pure conscience, that without ceasing I have remembrance of thee in my prayers night and day,]

4. Desiring earnestly to see thee, whom I love so dearly, (and this passionate desire being inflamed by the remembrance of thy tears at our parting) that our meeting again may be as full of joy, as our parting was of sorrow;

4. Greatly desiring to see thee, being mindfull of thy tears, that I may be filled with joy;]

5. Remembring the sincerity of thy obedience to the Gospel of Christ, and being confident that, as thy mother and grandmother, which received the faith before thee, continued in it to the end, so thou also wilt persevere, and never fall off from it.

5. When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice, and I am perswaded that in thee also.]

6. And that it may be so, I now write to thee, as a monitor or remembrancer, that thou consider the honourable calling which was conferred upon thee by my laying hands upon thee, and making thee Bishop (in which some others joyned with me, see note on 1 Tim. 5. f.) and the many extraordinary gifts consequent thereto, which thou art obliged to stirre up and quicken by the diligent exercise of them, and neither by fear nor compliance with any, to let them lie by thee unprofitably.

6. Wherefore I put thee in remembrance, that thou stirre up the gift of God which is in thee, by putting on of my hands.]

7. For sure that God that gave us this commission and gifts, hath not given thee or me so poor a cowardly spirit, as that we should be afraid of the dangers and threats of men against the preaching of the Gospel, but couragious hearts to encounter any difficulty, a love of God which will actuate this valour, and cast out all fear of danger, and withall a tranquillity of mind, and a full contentednesse in whatsoever state.

8. Whatever therefore the danger be of preaching Christ, be not discouraged, or whatever the example of my sufferings, doe thou resolve to doe and suffer the like cheerfully and couragiously, and to be a fellow-sufferer with the Gospel of Christ, to bear whatsoever falls upon that, by that strength which God gives thee,

And now hath revealed it to us, and made us partakers of it, by Christ's coming into the world, and preaching the Gospel to us, who hath thereby voided the power of death over us, and made a clear revelation of that life and immortality, which was not before so certainly revealed, that if we will obey him, we may certainly be made partakers of it.

10. But is now made manifest by the appearing of our Saviour Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light, through the Gospel;]

12. And that (viz: my preaching to the Gentiles) hath exasperated the Jewes, and brought persecutions upon me, but I am not discouraged with them, (see Rom. 5. 5.) because Christ, on whom I have depended, I am sure, will never fail me, And in his hands I can with all cheerfulnesse repose my life, as knowing him able and willing to preserve it to me, till he please to call for me out of this world.

Hold thee constantly to the doctrine of the Gospel, or summary of it, agreed on by the Apostles to be taught in all Churches, and whenever thou art tempted to the contrary, remember that this stands by the direction of the Spirit of God that abides among us, and make use of that Spirit to confirm thy self in it.

Notes on Chap. 1.

2. of the Onesiphorus

What ὁἶκος Ὀνησιφόρου, the house of Onesiphorus,] here signifies, is thought fit to be examined by some in order to the doctrine of praying for the dead. For because the prayer is here for the household, and not for the master of it, Onesiphorus himself, it is by some presently concluded that Onesiphorus was dead at that time, And then that being supposed, it appears ver. 18. that S. Paul praies for him, that he may find mercy in that day; How farre it may be fit to pray for them that are departed this life, needs not to be disputed here, 'Tis certain that some measure of bliss, which shall at the day of judgment be vouchsafed the Saints, when their bodies, and souls shall be reunited, is not, till then, enjoyed by them, and therefore may safely and fitly be prayed for them, (in the same manner as Christ praies to his father to glorifie him with that glory, which he had before the world was.) And this is a very distant thing from that prayer, which is now used in the Romish Church for deliverance from temporal pains, founded in their doctrine of Purgatory, which would no way be concludible from hence, though Onesiphorus, for whom S. Paul here praies for mercy, had been now dead. Nay 'tis evident, that the mercy, for which they, which are conceived to be in purgatory, might be the better, must be bestowed, and consequently prayed for to befall them before the day of doom, at which time all that are there, are supposed by them to be released. But neither is there any evidence of Onesiphorus being then dead, nor probability of it here, For of this Onesiphorus these two things may be observed from hence, 1. that his family was now at Ephesus, and accordingly he salutes it there c. 4. 19. and consequently that there was his ordinary place of abode, and agreeably it is here said of him, that he had relieved Paul, when he was at Ephesus, v. 18. and that is the reason, why in an Epistle to Timothy residing in that city, this mention is made of his family, 2dly, That he was at this time (when Paul wrote this) absent from his home, in all probability at Rome, (for ἦλθεν must be rendred being, not when he was) at least, but lately departed, and so still on his way from Rome, where Paul was a prisoner, and where Onesiphorus had sought, and found him out, v. 17. and without fear visited and relieved him. And this is a fair account, why Paul writing to Timothy, where his family was, mentioned them with so much kindness, but joyns not him in that remembrance, because he was at Rome, from whence, and not at Ephesus, to which he wrote. And so all the force of that argument is vanished.

CHAP. II.

Paraphras.

1. THou therefore my son, be strong in the grace which is in Christ Jesus;]

1. Doe thou therefore my beloved son, take all care to strengthen thy self in the Gospel, see note on Heb. 13. 2.

2. And the things that thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithfull men, who shall be able to teach others also.]

2. And the articles of faith and good life, which I have taught thee from Christ, agreed on and consented in by the testimony of all the other Apostles, doe thou communicate to others, whose ability and fidelity is known to thee, and appoint them as Bishops of the several Churches under thee, to teach others also.

* endure patiently συγκακοπάθησον

3. Thou therefore * endure hardnesse as a good souldier of Jesus Christ.]

3. And arm thy self against all difficulties, as one that hast undertaken Christ's colours to serve under him.

4. And therefore as the ſouldiers, according to the Roman rules of their militia, are forbidden to meddle with the employments of Tutors or Guardians of men's perſons or eſtates, or proctors of their cauſes, to undertake husbandry or merchandiſe &c. becauſe every of theſe is ſo diſtant from, that 'tis incompetible with the waiting on their colours, ſo whatſoever employments of the world are not competible with the diſcharge of thy office, as thou art a miniſter of Chriſt (as while the Empire and ſtate of the world remains heathen, and not Chriſtian, moſt ſecular employments are farre diſtant from the Chriſtian, and thy interpoſing in them will tend to no advantage of the ſociety of the Church) it is not fit for thee to meddle in them, but to apply thy ſelf to ſuch cares as may moſt conduce to the ſervice of thy General, who hath put thee into this calling, and expects it from thee.

8. And to fortifie thee in ſuffering whatever comes, there is nothing fitter, then that thou remember and conſider our Saviour, what befell him, that he was put to death, and then by God raiſed from death, (and ſo was herein like David, of whoſe progeny he was to be, who ſuffered ſuch ſad perſecutions from Saul, when he was deſtined to the kingdome, and accordingly came to it) and all this according to that doctrine, which I have preached every where:

Notes on Chap. II.

2. Ὀρθοτομοῦντα

That ὀρθοτομεῖν, to divide aright, ſhould referre to the cuſtome in ſacrifices, which were to be cut after a certain preſcribed manner, and of them ſome parts given to the Prieſts, &c. may probably be imagined; But another notion of the phraſe here, as it is joyned with [the word of truth] may ſeeme more probable: For in the Old Teſtament the Greek tranſlators uſe of the word, belongs to a way or path to goe in, which was wont to be cut out, that it might be fitter for uſe, thence the Latine phraſe, viam ſecare, to cut a way, i. e. to goe before and direct any in their journey. And with the word ὀρθὸς, right, joyned with it, it is to goe before one, and direct him the ſtraight way to ſuch a place: Thus ὀρθοτομεῖν τὰς τρίβους Prov. 3. 6. and 11. 5. is the rendring of יישר which ſignifies to ſet right, or rectifie, and ſo to cut a way right, is to put one, and keep one in the right way, we render it, direct thy paths and way, in thoſe places of the Proverbs; And then the Goſpell of Chriſt, the word of truth, being moſt fitly reſembled to a way (much better than to a ſacrifice) ὀρθοτομεῖν λόγον ἀληθείας, rightly to cut the word of truth, is to goe uprightly, and according to the truth before others in Chriſtianity. And that was Timothies part, as a Doctor, or Biſhop, to lead them both by his example, and doctrine the right way, that is preſcribed by Chriſt, without falling into any errors, or ill practiſe.

The Hebrew סבב circumdedit ſignifies alſo divertit, turning away, or back, as well as going round, and is by the Septuagint or Greek tranſlator of the Old Teſtament rendred not onely κυκλόω often, to encompaſſe, and περίειμι once, Joſ. 6. 3. but alſo ἐκκλίνω declino, to decline, or avoid, 1 Kin. 18. 11. and twenty times ἀποστρέφω averto to put from us, or fly from. degenerous or cowardly thing to flie from dangers providently, and not to mix with them, where it ſignifies declining and ſo avoiding of dangers. And ſo Heſychius renders εὐλαβεῖσθαι, not onely κύκλῳ σον (it ſhould be κυκλοῦσθαι) εὐλαβεῖσθαι, encompaſſing, but alſo εὐλαβοῦμαι, ἀναχωρῶ, avoid, flie from, and εὐλάβεσθαι look to, which is ſo to look to, to conſider, as to avoid, Rom. 16. 17. if there be danger in it. That theſe are they, may appear 1. by the βέβηλοι κενοφωνίαι profane dotages, or vanities, or empty ſounds, which are imputed to the ψευδωνύμου γνώσεως, Science falſly ſo called, i.e. the Gnoſticks, 1 Tim. 6. 20. Secondly, by the character ſet upon them, that they are a growing, ſpreading hereſie, their words eat, and lay waſt as a gangrene doth, when 'tis gotten into any part of the body, and ſo this hereſie coming with thoſe baits to the fleſh, ſecurity from perſecutions, and indulgence to all carnality, debauched many, whereſoever it came, and accordingly c. 4. 3. the Apoſtle foreſees, that within a while they will ſpread ſo wide, that ſound doctrine from Timothy will not be endured, Thirdly, by the growing of the hereſie in its own dimenſions, every day adding ſome new opinions to it, and thoſe ſtill more impious than the former, which is the meaning of ἐπὶ πλεῖον προκόψουσιν ἀσεβείας, they ſhall proceed, or advance to more of impiety, in the end of this verſe, And an inſtance of this follows in Hymenæus and Philetus, and ſome others, who affirmed the Reſurrection to be paſt already, and ſo denied any future reſurrection, Which very thing is by Tertullian imputed to the Valentinians, (Id de ſe Valentiniani aſſeverant) which though they were not yet riſen, yet when they came, were a ſpawn of theſe Gnoſticks, and took up all the hereſies, which they found among them, and accommodated them εἰς ἴδιον χαρακτῆρα, to their own manner of expreſſion, as Ireneus ſaith.

c. Μήποτε

The notion of μήποτε here, is not rightly expreſt by [if ſo be] without any negation in it, for that is the notion of οὐκοῦν, the direct contrary to this; The beſt underſtanding of it will be by obſerving the force of it, Lu. 3. 15. προσδοκῶντος τοῦ λαοῦ, καὶ διαλογιζομένων πάντων ἐν τοῖς καρδίαις αὐτῶν περὶ τοῦ Ἰωάννου, μήποτε αὐτὸς εἴη ὁ Χριστός, The people being in an expectation, and all diſputing in their hearts of John, not if he were, but, whether he were not the Chriſt. Where, in a matter of expectation or diſpute about a thing, which they looked on as poſſible, but knew it not, the word μήποτε is uſed, not as if it were to them a matter of fear, that it ſhould be ſo, but plainly the contrary, of hope, and joy, that it might, And ſo here the Biſhop is to proceed in the mildeſt, and moſt winning, and not exaſperating way, as conſidering hopefully, whether it be not poſſible, that God may at length be pleaſed to give them repentance, i. e. to bleſſe the Biſhops inſtructions, that they may be a means or inſtrument to work upon them. As for the phraſe [δῷ μετάνοιαν, give repentance] the grounds of explaining that have been elſwhere laid, by obſerving the force of ſome verbs both active, and paſſive in theſe books, to denote the effect, or reception of the virtue in the patient, and not only the operation of the agent, Thus Iſa. 53. 1. Gods arm is ſaid to be revealed, when the revelation of it is aſſented to, and obeyed by men, and ſo 'tis all one with beleiving their report, in the former part of the verſe. And to omit many more, thus is Gods giving them an heart to perceive, and eyes to ſee, Deut. 29. 3. which ſignifieth their receiving this gift of God's, making uſe of the miracles, and ſignes, and wonders, v. 3. being effectually wrought on, having their hearts affected by them, which they that had not there, it is ſaid of them, that God had not given them hearts to perceive, i. e. that thus it was in the event, or effect, they did not really perceive, For that any thing ſhould be required on Gods part towards their perceiving, which had not been performed by him, is unreaſonable to imagine, when the catalogue is ſo punctual, and ſo large v. 2, 3. of what God had done among them. So God's giving men to Chriſt Joh. 6. denotes their receiving, and embracing of him. And ſo here God's giving repentance] is their making uſe of God's grace, and mercy, and long ſuffering (and the Biſhops mildneſs, as an inſtrument of working on them,) their being wrought on by that means, and actually repenting, or reforming their lives, upon it.

d. τὸ θέλημα αὐτοῦ

That τὸ θέλημα, will, referres not to the devil, which is the immediate antecedent, but to God, which is the remote, v. 25. may be conjectured by the word ἐκείνου] joyned with it, for if it belonged to the devil, the [αὐτοῦ, his] immediately precedent would have ſerved the turn, and the addition of this other demonſtrative, not ejus, but illius (though our Engliſh hath no diverſity, or variety of words to expreſſe it,) clearly divides it from αὐτοῦ him. The onely difficulty will be, whether εἰς τὸ θέλημα ἐκείνου] ſhall be thought to denote, the impulſive cauſe, God's will, or pleaſure in giving repentance, (and ſo the words be rendred, according to his will) or the terminus, to which their recovering tendeth; To this latter the context ſeems to incline, by comparing this verſe with ver. 25. for there God's giving repentance ἐπίγνωσιν, to the acknowledgment, makes εἰς, to, a note of the term, to which that repentance tended, to wit, the acknowledgment of the truth, and then by analogie ἀνανήψωσιν εἰς τὸ θέλημα, recover to the will, will make θέλημα (the will of God) the term again, to which (as the ſnare of the devil, was the term, out of which) they recover; and accordingly θέλημα Θεοῦ, the will of God is his will to be obeyed, or practiſed, Epheſ. 6. 6. and ſo our ſanctification is ſaid to be the will of God. As for a third poſſible rendring of it, that they ſhould be ſaid to be taken, and caught by the devil, at, or, according to the will of God, permitting them ſo to be, that is made improbable by the punctation, the comma's before and after, ἐζωγρημένοι ὑπ' αὐτοῦ, taken or caught by him] putting thoſe words as in a parentheſis, and connecting εἰς τὸ ἐκείνου θέλημα, to the will of him] to the verb precedent ἀνανήψωσιν recover] thus, whether they may not recover to his will, i. e. to that ſtate, thoſe practiſes, which God requires. As for the diſtance betwixt αὐτοῦ of him] here, and Θεὸς God] v. 25. which may make this interpretation leſſe probable, It is very ordinarily to be obſerved, and in the very next chapter, ver. 8, 9. we have an example of it, where the [οἱ & ἐκεῖνον as alſo theirs] in the end of the ninth verſe, is as farre diſtant from Jannes and Jambres in the beginning of the eighth verſe, (to which it certainly referres) as ἐκεῖνα is diſtant here from Θεός.

CHAP. III.

Paraphraſe.

ἐνστήσονται hard χαλεποὶ

1. THis know alſo that in the laſt daies * perilous times ſhall come.] 1. But you are to take notice of the prediction of Chriſt, Mat. 24. 9, 12. that in theſe times preceding that famous coming of Chriſt, to puniſh the crucifiers and perſecutors, and relieve the faithfull Chriſtians (ſee 1 Tim. 4. 1. Jam. 5. 3.) there ſhall approach very ſharp perſecutions from the Jewes cauſed by the Gnoſticks, whoſe character is made up of theſe ſo many vices following,

2. For men ſhall be lovers of their own ſelves,] covetous, boaſters, proud, 2. That in ſtead of blaſphemers, diſobedient to parents, unthankfull, † unholy, Chriſtian charity, that takes care for the good of others, they conſider onely, and intend themſelves,

† impure or irreverent ἀνόσιοι

* cruel, not lovers of the good, ἀνήμεροι, ἀφιλάγαθοι

3. Without natural affection, truce-breakers, falſe accuſers, incontinent, [* fierce, deſpiſers of thoſe that are good,] 3. fiercely and bloodily diſpoſed, haters and perſecutors of all good men,

† Petulant, puffe up, Προπετεῖς, τετυφωμένοι

4. Traitors, † heady, high-minded, lovers of pleaſures, more than lovers of God,] 4. Betraying their fellow Chriſtians into the perſecutors hands, Mat. 10. 21. & 24. 9, 10. inſolent perſons (ſee note on 1 Cor. 13. d.) that pretend great depth of knowledge, but preferre their luſts before Chriſt,

* ſhew or image μόρφωσιν

5. Having a * form of godlineſſe, but denying the power thereof: from ſuch turn away.] 5. Pretending Chriſtianity, but doing nothing like Chriſtians, Theſe doe thou avoid, converſe not with them.

7. Ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth.] 7. Who being diſciples of the Gnoſticks (which undertake to know ſo much) pretend to be learning that deep knowledge of them, but certainly never learn any thing that is good or Chriſtian of them.

* Νῦν δὲ † that have their underſtanding perverted, κατεφθαρμένοι τὸν νοῦν

8. * Now as [a] Jannes and Jambres withſtood Moſes, ſo doe theſe alſo reſiſt the truth: men † of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith.] 8. Theſe being given to ſorcery (ſee v. 13. & Rev. 9. c.) and making uſe of it to contend with the Apoſtles, and to draw men from Chriſt, cannot better be compared than to thoſe famous magicians Jannes and Jambres, who undertoook to doe as great miracles as Moſes, Exod. 7. 11. men that are drawn quite from the Goſpel, very farre from being true Chriſtians. 2.

* not proceed much farther, οὐ προκόψουσιν ἐπὶ πλεῖον

† or intention, for the King's MS. reads διάνοια

9. But they ſhall * proceed no farther, for their † folly ſhall be manifeſt unto all men, as theirs alſo was.] 9. But they are almoſt at an end of their work of deceiving, and perſecuting, and oppoſing Chriſtianity, for they ſhall be diſcovered to be impoſtors, as thoſe Magicians were.

* followed παρηκολούθησάς

10. But thou haſt * fully known my doctrine, manner of life, purpoſe, faith, long-ſuffering, charity, patience,] 10. Thou haſt another pattern to follow, quite contrary to theirs, that which by my preaching I have taught, and by the conſtant form of all my actions exemplified to thee, viz: my reſolution of propagating the Goſpel where ever I was able, my fidelity in diſcharge of my office, my induring many neglects, and affronts, before I would give over my endevours to reduce impenitent ſinners, my zeal to the glory of God, and good of ſouls, and my perſeverance in all this, in deſpight of perſecutions,

11. Perſecutions, afflictions, which came unto me [at Antioch, at Iconium, at Lyſtra,] what perſecutions I endured, but out of them all the Lord delivered me. 11. at Piſidia, Act. 13. 45. at Iconium, Act. 14. 2. at Lyſtra, Act. 14. 18.

12. Yea, and all that will live godly in Chriſt Jeſus, ſhall ſuffer perſecution.] 12. Yea, and at ſuch times as theſe, when Chriſtianity is ſo violently oppoſed by the unconverted Jewes, it is to be expected by all that reſolve on a true conſtant Chriſtian courſe, that it ſhall infallibly bring perſecution upon them.

13. But evil men and ſeducers ſhall wax worſe and worſe, deceiving and being deceived.] 13. But ſuch impious godleſſe ſorcerers (ſee v. 7.) and deceivers as theſe ſhall grow every day worſe and worſe, and more pernicious than other, deceiving others, and themſelves at laſt moſt ſadly deceived and miſtaken of any, when all their arts of ſecuring ſhall but deſtroy themſelves, or being delivered up to be deceived themſelves, as a juſt judgment for their deceiving of others.

* with which thou haſt been inſtructed, ἐμπιστεύθης

14. But continue thou in the things which thou haſt learned, and * haſt been aſſured of, knowing of whom thou haſt learned them; 14. But doe thou hold faſt that form of ſound doctrine which was taught thee to teach others, and remembring from whom thou hadſt it, thou wilt have no reaſon to doubt or ſuſpect the truth of it;

15. And that from a child thou haſt known the holy ſcriptures, which are able to make thee wiſe unto ſalvation, through faith which is in Chriſt Jeſus. 15. And having been inſtructed in the underſtanding of the holy Scriptures of the Old Teſtament, ever ſince thou wert a child, thou wilt certainly, by the help of the Chriſtian doctrine which thou haſt received, be able to diſcern and underſtand the truth, and diſtinguiſh it from their falſe doctrines.

16. For all thoſe writings which either by God's ſpirit of propheſie, or by any other affliation or incitation from God, have at any time been written by the prophets, &c. and, as ſuch, received into the Canon of the Jewiſh Church, may by us be profitably made uſe of, to teach us many things, that Chriſt hath taught us, to convince us of the groſneſſe of many ſins which are confidently practiſed among men, to reduce thoſe that fall through error or ignorance, to build up thoſe that have begun, and ſet out in the way of righteouſneſſe:

16. All Scripture * is given by inſpiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for † correction, for inſtruction in righteouſneſſe:]

* being inſpired by God, is alſo profitable θεόπνευστος, καὶ ὠφέλιμος

† reformation ἐπανόρθωσιν

17. That the teacher or preacher of the Goſpell, ſent and authorized by God, may by the ſtudy of the Scripture be furniſhed for all turns, enabled to diſcharge his whole duty toward the ſoules of others.

17. That the man of God may be perfect, throughly furniſhed * unto all good works.]

* for every good work, πρὸς πᾶν

Notes on Chap. III.

3. Ἰαννὴς καὶ Ἰαμβρῆς

These names of Jannes and Jambres are not to be met with in the ſtory of the Old Teſtament, but are here taken out of other records of the Jewes (as divers others things mentioned in the New Teſtament, for example, Moſes's being brought up in the Ægyptian learning Act. 7. 22. and ſo likewiſe his age of forty yeares v. 23. when he went to viſit his brethren, which is not in Exod. 2. but in Midraſh Rabba Bereſchith, and ſo his having beforehand ſome either inſtinct or revelation from God, that he ſhould be a deliverer of his people, which ſeemes to be referred to Act. 7. 25. but is not in the Old Teſtament) They are queſtionleſſe the names of the chief Magitians, who did the miracles before Pharaoh, Exod. 7. Thus in the Babyloniſh Talmud, tr: Menachoth c. 9. it is ſhewed how, Johanne and Mamre reſiſted Moſes, ſaying to him in the words of the proverb, Affers tu ſtramen in Afraim? which is in effect, Doſt thou caſt water into the Sea? i. e. ſhew miracles here in Ægypt, which is ſo full of Magicians? So in the Chaldee Paraphraſe of Jonathan, Exod. 7. 11. Janis and Jambres are named, and Exod. 1. 15. are ſaid to be Princes or chief of the Magicians. In the Talmud they are called Jochanne and Mambre, in the life of Moſes, Jane and Mamre, in Zohar upon Num. 22. 22. Jones and Jambres, In Shalſhelet, John, and Ambroſe, and in Tanchuma Jonos and Jombres. Of theſe, and what is ſaid of them in the Hebrew writers ſee Buxtorf: Lex: Talmud: col: 9. 545. And among the heathens, in Pliny (Nat: Hiſt. l. 30. c. 1.) there is talk of Moſes, Jannes and Cabala (or, as other copies read, Jotape) which he mentions as Jewes that uſed Magick. So in Numenius the Philoſopher, in Euſebius Præp: Evang: l. 9. c. 8. Ἰαννῆς καὶ Ἰαμβρῆς Ἀιγύπτιοι, ἱερογραμματικῆς ἀνδρες, οὐδενὸς ὑπολειπόμενοι μαγικῶνος χρημάτων εἶναι &c. Jannes and Jambres skill'd in the holy things among the Ægyptians, inferiour to none in the art of Magick. So * Artabanus cals them τοὺς ἱερεῖς ὑπὲρ Μέμφιν the Prieſts above Memphis. So Origen contra Celſum l. 4. p. 205. citing out of Celſus τὸν περὶ Μωϋσέως καὶ Ἰάννα καὶ Ἰάμβρα ἱστορίαν, the ſtory of Moſes and Jannes and Jambres, and Palladius in the life of Macarius, that ſpeakes of a κοιμητήριον τῶν Ἰάννα καὶ Ἰάμβρα τῶν μάγων ἐπὶ τῷ Φαραὼ a monument in a garden of Jannes and Jambres magicians in Pharaoh's time, but this cannot well be, if it be true which is ſaid by an old Midraſh, on Exod: 15. 10. that John & Mamre were drowned in the red Sea, And to that a MS. Arabick Catena on the Pentateuch agrees in theſe words, Theſe are the names of the Magicians which ſtood up againſt Moſes, Dejannes, Jambarus, and Sarndat, and God deſtroyed them with Pharaoh and his hoſt in the red ſea. And therefore it is reaſonable to conjecture, that the κοιμητήριον or garden-ſepulchre in Palladius, ſhould be κενοτάφιον, an empty monument, without either of their bodies incloſed in it, to record their ſinne, but not to preſerve their aſhes. To theſe Apuleius ſeemes to referre, Apol: 2. where among the chief Magicians names he reckons Johannes. And to theſe S^t Paul here very fitly compares the Gnoſticks, their chief founder Simon (and Menander and others after him) being a known ſorcerer, (ſee note on Rev. 9. c.) and reſiſting the truth by lying wonders, as thoſe Magicians did, And of him we find that fulfilled in the event, which is here foretold v. 9. that he ſhould meet with the like fate, and diſcovery, that thoſe Magicians met with; Simon came to Rome (a ſecond time about the tenth of Nero) grew into a great eſteem with him by his ſorceries, contended there with Saint Peter as the Magicians with Moſes; and accordingly Suetonius mentions one to fly in the aire, in the eleventh of Nero. But then, as the Magicians were confuted and diſcovered, when Aarons rod ſwallowed up their rods, Ex. 7. 12. and when they acknowledged the miracle of Moſes to be the finger of God, Ex. 8. 19. and the boyle was upon the Magicians, Ex. 9. 11. So was the madneſſe of Simon, and his Sectaries, manifeſted to all men, when he was caſt down by the Prayer of Saint Peter. And of this theſe words of Saint Paul are a direct propheſie in this place. This hiſtory of Simon is thus mention'd by Arnobius l. 2. cent. Gent. ſpeaking of Rome, In quâ cum homines eſſent Numa regis artibus atque antiquis ſuperſtitionibus occupati, non diſtulerunt tamen res patrias linquere, & veritati coaleſcere Chriſtiana. Viderant enim currum Simonis Magi, & quadrigas igneas Petri ore diffiatas & nominato Chriſto evaniſſe. Viderant fidentem diis falſis & ab iisdem metuentibus proditum, pondere precipitatum ſuo cruribus jacniſſe prafractis, poſt deinde perlatum Brundam, cruciatibus & pudore deſeſſum ex altiſſimi culminis ſe rurſum precipitaſſe faſtigio. They that had been uſed to Numa's arts, and antient ſuperſtitions (the heathen Romans) forſook all and followed Chriſt, having ſeen Simon Magus's Chariot and fiery horſes diſpelled with Peters † mouth, and vaniſh at the name of Chriſt, and ſeeing him that relyed on his falſe Gods betray'd by them and fall headlong on the ground breaking his legs with the weight, and after that being brought to Brunda being tormented and aſhamed, he caſt himſelf down again from the top of a high houſe, and ſo periſht: So Saint Cyrill in his ſixt Catechiſm, Ἐπλάνησεν &c. He ſo deceived the city of Rome that Claudius ſet him up a ſtatue, And after his hereſie diffuſing it ſelf, Peter and Paul Governours of that Church, destroyed him setting himself out and being by others esteemed and worshipt as a God, for when Simon undertook to flye, and was carried up in the aire by a chariot of the devils, these servants of God falling on their knees cast against him that dart, which Christ directs to, Mat. 18, 19. that weapon of agreement of two in prayer, and thereby cast him to the ground. So Sulpitius Severus hist. l. 2. Saint Augustin Serm. 3. in Natali S. Petri & Pauli, And Isodore Pelusiote, ἐξ ὕψους κατέπεσε ὁ δαίμων πρὸς τὸν μακαρίου θάνατον, &c. CHAP. IV.

Paraphrase.

1. I Charge thee therefore before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead [at his appearing and his kingdom:]

1. when he appears in his kingdom:

2. Preach the word, [* be instant in season, out of season, reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine.]

* urge them θὶηγὸν

2. Urge them, presse them, call upon them both when they are at leisure to heare thee, when thou hast some special opportunity, or vacancy to fasten any thing upon them, and at other times, when thou hast not such probable opportunities, hoping that at some time or other it will succeed, convince the evill doers of their wicked courses, reduce by reprehension those that are fallen, but not so foully, through error &c. confirm those that have begun well, and let all this be done with lenity and diligent instructing of them.

3. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shal they heap to themselves reachers, having itching eares.]

3. This I prescribe, as the method proper for the present condition of those under thee, that thou mayst gain as many as is possible, as foreseeing that the number of obstinate hereticks will so encrease within a while, that there will be little for thee then to doe, little hope of working on them, when men begin to advance to the higher pitch of heresie, and (to get patrons for their base lusts and vicious practises) betake themselves to false teachers, any that will please or gratifie their humor.

4. And shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables,]

4. And refuse and reject all true doctrine, and betake themselves to the fabulous divinity of the Gnosticks, made up of Gentilisme and Judaisme, an odde mixture of both.

5. But watch thou in all things, † endure afflictions, do the work of an Evangelist, * make full proof of thy ministery.]

5. But doe thou watch over thy flock with all diligence and waryness, be not discouraged with any pressures or dangers, hold out in despight of them all, doe that which belongs to one, that is by the Apostles of Christ intrusted (under them) with the propagating of the Gospell, and maintaining it, where it is taught, which being a task of some weight and largeness, see thou perform all the parts of it.

6. And this the rather, because I have been in great danger, brought out to be tryed for my life, (see title of this Epistle note a. and Phil. 2. note d.) and my death hath been very nigh at hand.

7. [a] I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith.]

8. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousnesse, which the Lord the righteous judge shall give me at that day: and not to me onely, but unto all them also that † love his appearing.]

8. For this I doubt not but God will give me my reward, when he comes to crown his combatants, even that eternall blisse and felicity, which as the judge or rewarder in the Olympick games or combates, he will certainly adjudge to me, as one who have endured much therein. And the same will be adjudge to all others, who shal have so spent their time, and continued in a Christian course, as that Christ's coming to reward the faithfull, and to destroy all opposers and unfaithfull, may be matter of desire and not terror to them, who if they live not to enjoy his deliverances here, will be abundantly recompensed by death.

* Hasten to come to me speedily, σπούδασον ἐλθεῖν πρός με ταχέως

9. * Doe thy diligence to come shortly unto me.]

9. I desire with all possible speed that thou come hither to me.

10. For Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world, and is departed unto Thessalonica. Crescens to Galatia, Titus unto Dalmatia.]

10. There being these motives to hasten thee, First because Demas, that did assist me in preaching the Gospell, Philem: 24. and Col. 4. 14. hath now left me, betaking himself to his wordly affaires (see note on 1 Tim. 3. a.) and is gone to Thessalonica, whether to his home there, or to trade, and get wealth in that place; As for Crescens, though he be gone into Gallia, (or France, saith Epiphanius, Hær: Ἄλλοι:) yet that is not for any such worldly end, but to preach the Gospell there, and so Titus is gone another way to Dalmatia;

11. Onely Luke is with me; Take Mark, and bring him with thee, for he is profitable to me for the ministery.]

11. By which meanes I am almost alone, no body but Luke remaining with me, which makes me stand in need of thy help, and presence, And when thou comest, bring Mark, Barnabas's kinsman, with thee, for I have especiall use of him, for the preaching of the Gospell;

15. The reaſon why at this time I mention him, is that thou mayſt beware of him, avoid him, look upon him as an excommunicate perſon, delivered up to Satan, 1 Tim. 1. 20. for he ſtands out contumacious againſt all our reprehenſions, and admonitions to repent.

16. At my firſt anſwer no man ſtood with me, but all men forſook me; I pray God that it may not be laid to their charge.]

16. At my coming to Rome when I was to plead for my ſelf, all my acquaintance (all that were able to have ſtood me in any ſtead, either by their power at Rome, or by their teſtimonies in my defence) forſook me, for fear of ſuffering (I pray God to pardon them for it)

17. Notwithſtanding the Lord ſtood with me, and ſtrengthened me, that by me the preaching might be * fully known, and that all the Gentiles might hear, and I was delivered out of the mouth of the ‡ Lyon.]

17. Yet God aſſiſted, and vindicated my innocence, that the Goſpel might be preached by my means, and ſo the Romans, the Gentiles might receive it (ſee Phil. 4. 22.) and to that end I was at that time delivered from a moſt conſiderable preſent danger, though not freed from priſon.

a. Ἀγὼν

These two verſes are wholly agoniſtical, Ἀγὼν is any of the four famous games, Olympick &c. (and of that, as it ſignifies ſuffering of afflictions, ſee 1 Theſſ. 2. b.) Ἀγὼν καλὸς is one ſort of combate in either of thoſe four, that of racing; The ἀγὼν is called καλὸς good, either as being in a good cauſe, or as νομιμῶς c. 2. 5. according to the laws of the agones; and ſo his fighting a good fight] is ſuffering Chriſtianly and valiantly, Τελεῖν is to perform, and ſo τελεῖν δρόμον, to run, or perform the race, (ſee note a. on Act. 21.) Then τηρεῖν πίστιν] not referring to his whole life, but this one combat here inſiſted on, his danger at Rome. And then τηρεῖν πίστιν to keep the faith, is to obſerve the Goſpel rules, and ſo not to offend againſt the νόμοι laws of the combat, (ſee note on the title of this Epiſtle.)

Καλὸς ἀγὼν

Τελεῖν

Τηρεῖν πίστιν

Thus in thoſe writings, that go under Triſmegiſtus's name, we have (Κλείδ. l. 4. p. 2.) ἡ ψυχὴ ἡ τὴν εὐσεβείας ἀγῶνα ἠγωνισμένη, the ſoul that hath undertaken and performed this ſtrife or combat of piety. Then the στέφανος crown, that is the βραβεῖον, the reward, and that is here called στέφανος δικαιοσύνης, crown of righteouſneſs, poſſibly in the notion that the Hebrew צדקה (to which δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſs is anſwerable) is taken, Iſa. 48. 18. Nehem. 2. 20. Pſal. 35. 27. that is, for felicity, As Prov. 8. 18. where wealth and righteouſneſs are put together, Abenezra interprets it felicity, or proſperity, and ſo δικαιοσύνη is uſed Rom. 6. 16. and oppoſed to death, by which it there appears to ſignifie eternal life, But it may alſo ſignifie a righteous life, which is thus rewarded and crowned by God. Then δίκαιος κριτὴς the righteous judge is the βραβεύτης, who gives the crown to the conquerour.

Στέφανος δικαιοσύνης

Δικαιοσύνη

Δικαίως κριτὴς

b. Φελόνης

The authority which I have for rendring φελόνην the roll, is from the antient Gloſſaries. Thus Pharvinus φελόνης εἶδος τὸ μέσον βιβλίαριον, which without queſtion ſhould be written thus, τυμάριον μεμβρανίνον, and ſo the explication of φελόνης will be, a little piece of parchment folded up, which perhaps may be all one with the μεμβράναι hereafter mentioned, becauſe they being added, with a [μάλιστα δέ, but eſpecially] ſeem to denote ſomewhat, which had been formerly mentioned, rather than any new thing. See S. Hierome Ep. 125. ad Damaſ: qu. 2.

c. Λέοντος στόμα

Στόμα Λέοντος, the mouth of the Lyon, is commonly thought here to ſignifie Nero, ſo ſtyled Λέοντος στόμα becauſe of his cruelty. But as there is no reaſon to beleive, that Paul was now admitted to Nero's own hearing, but may more probably be thought to have been heard before ſome inferior Judge at Rome, So it is very reaſonable to expound the mouth of the Lyon, as a Proverbial form, to ſignifie ſome preſent, devouring danger, from the gaping of the Lyon after his prey, and the direfulneſs of that.

PAUL THE APOSTLE
a TITUS.

THat Titus a convert of Paul's, after imployed by him, was at length ordained by him the Archbiſhop of the Iſland of Crete, there to ordain Biſhops in every city, is intimated c. 1. 5. and cleared by all antient writers. So Euſebius l. 3. c. 4. affirms him ἐπὶ τῆς Κρήτης βαρβάρων ἐπισκοπὴν ἱεραρχῆσαι to have been Biſhop of the Churches of Crete. So * Chryſoſtome, that Titus was without doubt an approved perſon to whom was committed ὁλόκληρος νῆσος, an entire Iſland, καὶ πάντων ἐπισκόπων χεῖρες, and the juriſdiction of ſo many Biſhops. So † Theodoret that he was by Paul ordained Biſhop ἐν Κρήτῃ μεγίστῃ οὔσῃ, of Crete being very great, καὶ ὅσα ἀυτὸν ἐπισκόπους χειροτονῆσαι, to ordain Biſhops under him. So the Scholiaſt Ἀπέστελλε Τίτον ὅτι τὰ κατὰ τόπους ἐπιτάξαντα ἐπίσκοπον χειροτονῆσαι, The Apoſtle left Titus to ordain Biſhops, having made him Biſhop firſt. And S. Jerome in Catal: Titus Epiſcopus Cretæ in eadem & in circumjacentibus inſulis prædicavit Evangelium Chriſti, Titus was Biſhop of Crete, and in it, and the ambient Ilands he preached the Goſpel of Chriſt; making him Biſhop, in that Iſland, and extending his charge to other Iſlands alſo. The time when Paul thus left him at Crete ſeems to be rightly ſet by Baronius, when Paul went into Greece from Macedonia, Act. 20. 2. which he conceives he did not by land, but by ſea, in wch journey, ſaith he, by the Ægaan ſea he came to Crete. And this was about An: Chr: 54. Soon after this an: 55. when he came into Greece, he is ſaid to have written this Epiſtle to him, to inſtruct, and direct him in the diſcharge of his office; but whether it were at Nicopolis when he wrote it, or whether it were before the beginning of the winter, which he determined to ſpend there, is left uncertain, c. 3. 12.

CHAP. I.

Paraphraſe.

* ſot κατὰ

1. PAUL a ſervant of God and an Apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, [* according to the faith of Gods elect, and the acknowledging of the truth which is after godlineſſe:]

1. to plant that faith by which all Chriſtians become acceptable in the ſight of God, and to confirm them unto the acknowledgment, and practiſe of the Chriſtian religion; ſee note on 1 Tim. 3. f.

2. In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promiſed * † before the world began;]

2. In expectation of that infinite reward, which God long ſince promiſed obſcurely to Abraham, and will certainly perform to all his true children, i.e. to all beleivers;

3. But hath in * due times manifeſted his word through preaching, which is committed unto me, according to the commandment of God our Saviour:]

3. And hath, in that ſeaſon which he thought fit to deſigne for it, moſt clearly now revealed by the preaching of the Goſpel, that which was committed to me as an Apoſtle by Chriſt's immediate appoinment:

4. To Titus mine own ſon after the common faith,] Grace, mercy, and peace from God the father, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt our ſaviour.]

4. To Titus whom I firſt converted to the faith, preaching it according to Chriſt's appointment, to Gentiles (ſuch was he) as well as Jewes.

5. For this cauſe left I thee in Crete, that thou ſhouldſt ſet in order the things that are wanting, and ordain Elders in every city, as I had appointed thee.]

5. In our paſſage through Crete, I conſtituted thee Biſhop there, that thou mightеſt diſpoſe, and ſettle thoſe things there, which I by the ſhortneſſe of my ſtay omitted to ſettle, and to ordain Biſhops in each city of that Iſland (ſee note on Act. 11. b. & 14. a.) according to the directions, which I then mentioned to thee, how they ſhould be qualified.

6. If any be blameleſſe, the husband of one wife, having faithfull children, not accuſed of riot, or unruly,]

6. To wit, that thou ſhouldſt ordain none but ſuch as ſhould be approved by teſtimony of the Church, (ſee note on Act. 6. b.) to be under no ſcandalous ſin, which live not with a ſecond wife after putting away the firſt (ſee note on 1 Tim. 3. b.) whoſe children, if they have any, have all received the faith (for if he bring not up his own children to be Chriſtian, what hope is there that he will be fit to convert others, and to rule in the Church?) and live temperately and regularly.

7. For

7. as becomes one that hath the government of God's family intruſted to him;

7. For a Biſhop muſt be blameleſſe, [as the ſteward of God:] not ſelfwilled, not ſoon angry, not given to wine, no ſtriker, not given to filthy lucre;

8. But a lover of hoſpitality, a lover of good * men, ſober, juſt, holy, temperate,

* or things ἀγαθῶν

9. Holding faſt that doctrine which is agreeable to that which from Chriſt and us you have been taught, and ſeen exemplified, viz: that the truth of God muſt be confeſſed, though with the greateſt hazards, and loſſes, contrary to what is now infuſed by the new Gnoſtick-teachers, that ſo he may be able to inſtruct all in the truth, or to comfort thoſe that for their conſtancy to the faith are under any preſſure, and convince the hereticks of the falſneſſe of their popular, gratefull, carnal doctrine.

9. Holding faſt the faithfull word, † as he hath been taught, that he may be able * by ſound doctrine both to exhort, and to convince the gainſayers.]

† which is according to the doctrine, κατὰ τὴν διδαχὴν

* both to exhort in wholſome doctrine, ἐν παρακλήσει τῇ ὑγιαινούσῃ διδασκαλίᾳ τῇ ὑγιαινούσῃ, or to comfort thoſe that are in any tribulation, for the King's Mſs. reads ἐν παρακλήσει τοῖς ἐν παντὶ θλίψει.

10. For there are already many unruly perſons, that reſiſt our doctrine, and vent idle fanſies of their own, and ſeduce and corrupt others from the truth to their corrupt waies, which will be the ruining of them: And theſe are thoſe eſpecially, that ſtand up as advocates for the obſervation of the Jewiſh law,

10. For there are many unruly and vain talkers, and † deceivers, eſpecially they of the circumciſion:]

† deceivers of ſouls φρεναπάται,

11. And theſe are not to be permitted to vent their deceits, for they ſeduce, where they come, whole families at once, and infuſe abominable doctrines into them, and thereby make advantage to themſelves.

11. Whoſe mouths muſt be ſtopped, who ſubvert whole houſes, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucres ſake.]

12. And theſe are ſuch kind of men as thoſe which Epimenides, a Cretian Poet and learned man (ſee note on Lu. 1. m.) ſaid that Iſland was wont to be full of, lyers, beſtial, luxurious people.

12. One of themſelves, even a prophet of their own, ſaid, The Cretians are alwaies lyers, evil beaſts, * ſlow bellies.]

13. The truth of this his cenſure now appears, and therefore doe thou examine, and inquire narrowly into them, and ſuch as thou ſhalt find to be ſuch, inflict the cenſures of the Church upon them, that thou mayſt reduce and reform them by that means;

13. This witneſſe is true: wherefore rebuke them ſharply, that they may be found in the faith;]

14. That they may no longer hearken to thoſe myſtical Cabaliſtical explications of the Old Teſtament, which the Gnoſticks uſe, and to falſe doctrines of thoſe, which, under pretenſe of Chriſtian liberty, corrupt ſeducible perſons, and pervert them from the Goſpel.

14. Not giving heed to Jewiſh fables, and commandements of men, that turn from the truth.]

b. 15. To a Chriſtian that doth all things with a pure conſcience, all kinds of meats &c. are lawfull, but to impure unchriſtian Gnoſticks, every thing they doe (though it were in it ſelf lawfull) would become a matter of ſin to them, their wicked life hath ſo blinded their judgment, that they cannot judge aright, what is lawfull, what not.

15. [b] Unto the pure all things are pure, but unto them that are defiled, and unbeleiving, is nothing pure, but even their † mind and conſcience is defiled.]

† underſtanding νοῦς

16. They call themſelves Gnoſticks, aſſuming to themſelves eſpecial knowledge of God, but their lives are quite contrary to all piety, and acknowledgment of God, guilty of all deteſtable unnatural ſins, diſobedient to all that are placed over them in the Church, not wrought on by any admonition, and quite contrary to all Chriſtian practiſe.

16. They profeſſe that they know God, but in works they deny him, being abominable and diſobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.]

a. πρὸ χρόνων αἰωνίων

Of the word αἰὼν that it ſignifies an age, or long ſpace of time, ſee note on Lu. 1. o. by analogie with which, αἰώνιος ſignifies antient, or long agoe, but not alwaies eternal; and χρόνοι αἰώνιοι here being ſpoken not of a decree, but of a promiſe of God's, and ſuch as cannot be broken without lying (which muſt therefore ſignifie ſuch a promiſe, which was made to ſomebody, and not onely his ſecret unrevealed purpoſe) cannot well be interpreted of eternity, but of ſome long time agoe, under the times of the Old Teſtament, ſuch as was made to Abraham, Gen. 15. 1. And thus the phraſe πρὸ αἰωνίων χρόνων] is all one with ἀπ' ἡλικιῶν ἀρχαίων, from antient generations, Act. 15. 21. ſpeaking of Moſes's time. And accordingly αἰώνιος is oft uſed in the Old Teſtament, either for that which is likely to laſt long, or whoſe beginning is long agoe, So Prov. 22. 28. αἰώνιος for antient, Eſa. 58. 12. & 61. 4. αἰώνιος old, Ezech. 36. 2. αἰώνια antient. And ſo 2 Tim. 1. 9. though the ſcope of the place will allow it to ſignifie eternity, God's mercy being decreed to us in Chriſt before all time, yet the phraſe of it ſelf ſignifies no more than before antient times, long while agoe.

b. The meaning of this verſe will be diſcern'd by conſidering the doctrine of the Gnoſticks (which here, and through this whole Epiſtle he arms them againſt) that talked much of Chriſtian liberty, and extended it to the partaking of idol feaſts, and to all the filthineſs of the fleſh, calling themſelves the Spiritual and Perfect, to whom all theſe things were lawful and indifferent or free. Theſe are they that pervert the truth, v. 14. teach things which are not lawful v. 11. and are μεμιαμμένοι polluted, in the latter end of this verſe; Now the notion of lawful or indifferent, is here expreſſed by pure, i. e. that hath no impurity or turpitude in it, defileth not the conſcience; Of which ſort of things the Apoſtle here pronounceth that to them that live pure lives, and unſpotted from the pollutions of the fleſh, theſe indifferent things may thus freely be uſed; And this he thus expreſſes, To the pure all things are pure, i. e. they that ſtrictly abſtain from unlawful freedomes, may with a ſafe conſcience

ſcience uſe any lawful liberties, but to them that are defiled and unfaithfull, i. e. to polluted, filthy, Apoſtate Gnoſticks, nothing is pure, there is no place for ſuch pretences as theſe; that what they doe they doe with a good conſcience, their mind and conſcience is defiled, they are far from thoſe faithfull and knowers of the truth, 1 Tim. 4. 4. who have this liberty there allow'd them, their mind is polluted with peſtilent errors, and their conſcience with knowledge and memory of their foul ſins, and ſo Chriſtian liberty belongs nothing to them. That this is the meaning of πᾶσι τοῖς καθαροῖς to the pure, and not onely [to them that count theſe indifferent things lawfull] may appear by the latter part of the verſe, where μεμιαμμένοις the polluted, are ſet oppoſite to the καθαροῖς pure, to whom nothing is pure or lawfull, i. e. the things that are in themſelves moſt indifferent, are by them done in a polluted manner, their eating things offered to idols, is far from being lawfull or indifferent in them, Chriſtian liberty can never excuſe them, or be pretended for them.

9. Exhort ſervants to be obedient unto their own maſters, and to pleaſe them well in all things, * not anſwering again, * non contradicting μὴ ἀντιλέγοντας

It

a. Πρεσβύτας

It is not certain here what is meant by πρεσβύτας, The word may denote the antienter sort of men, and no more: But the context seemes to incline it to Church officers. For this Epistle being written to Titus a Bishop, who was to ordain such, and that which is here said being the enumerating the qualifications of such, it is evident that it referres to some such order, unto which upon choice and approbation of their qualifications, some were to be received, and not others. Whereas of the νεώτεροι or juniors, i. e. the ordinary Christians assumed to no office, the style is altered, no more then this, that he should admonish them to be sober, ver. 6. Thus the Commentaries under S. Hierome's name, Senes ætate & ordine possunt intelligi, Those antient men may be here understood that are such both for age and order. But what order is here noted is uncertain still, The word πρεσβύτης may seem to be that which is turned into the Latine, Presbyter, the σ being ordinarily turned into r, as μαρτὺς, martyr, λιγὺς, ligur, κελὲς, celer, and the like, and so the Commentaries under S. Hierom's name interpret it, Ecclesiæ Seniores, the Elders of the Church: But it is much more likely, that it is the order of Deacon, 1. because the comparing of the instructions which are here given to Titus for his Province, with those to Timothy for his, 1 Tim. 3. 1. doth inferre this. There the qualifications of a Bishop are first set down, that he should be blameless, the husband of one wife, &c. And so here c. 1. 6, 7, 8, 9. almost in the same words; Both after the example of Jethro's direction to Moses for the choosing of rulers over the Israelites, Exod. 18. 21. And proportionably as after the Bishops the Apostle gives Timothy directions for Deacons, the Deacons likewise must be grave, &c. ver. 8. so here the directions are given for πρεσβύτ, that they be sober, grave, &c. By which it may reasonably be concluded, that the πρεσβύτ here, are the Deacons there. And accordingly they that are here called πρεσβύτιδες in the feminine, but to Timothy γυναῖκας women only, are generally in the antient Church called διακονίσσαι deaconesses. 2^dly, It is formerly cleared, note on Phil. 1. a. that at the first in every city the Apostles and Apostolical men instituted none but a Bishop and Deacons, and that there never was any Bishop instituted, but there were Deacons also. to attend upon him. To which it is consequent that here being mention of no other style, which can belong to Deacons, this of πρεσβύτ should denote them. As for the title of πρεσβύτ, Senes, antient men, it is not improper to signifie these, for as πρεσβύτεροι the Elders in the comparative, are the Governors of the Church, and νεώτεροι the younger, the ordinary beleivers under Government, so πρεσβύτ is the middle betwixt those, the positive to πρεσβύτεροι, and so inferior to them, & yet superior to νεώτεροι, as the Deacons are under the Bishop, but over the brethren, or ordinary beleivers.

Νεώτερος

Κατάστημα the noun cometh from the verb καταστῆσαι, which we find used chap. 1. 5. and Act. 6. 3. for ordination or consecration of Church officers, according to that which Grammarians have observed, καταστὰς (I suppose it should be καταστὰς) ἀρχιερεὺς in Suidas, noting office, or function committed to any. And therefore in all reason it must signifie the rank of those, who are thus constituted officers of the Church, in the same manner, as from καλεῖσθαι used for choosing officers of the Church, the Ecclesiastical word κατάλογος the catalogue, and ἱερὸς κατάλογος the sacred catalogue doth frequently signifie the list of Ecclesiastical persons. This is that which in after-times was called κανὼν, when οἱ ἐν κανόνι, they in the rule] is the style of the officers of the Church. Thus it may first appear by the context here, S. Paul giving directions to Titus for the ordaining of Bishops c. 1. 5. passes orderly to the next degree of Church officers c. 2. 2. under the name of πρεσβύτ, And then after those succeeds πρεσβύτιδες, as several sorts of Church-officers under one another. 2^dly, by the qualifications, which are here set down both for the πρεσβύτ, and πρεσβύτιδες (in like manner as for the διάκονοι and γυναῖκες 1 Tim. 3.) which sure cannot be applied to them under the notion of aged men or women, but onely as such, as Titus was to ordain in each city. Whereas the younger women are mentioned in another manner, thus, v. 4. 5. The πρεσβύτιδες must σωφρονίζειν τὰς νέας, discipline the young women, to be sober &c. which is again an intimation of a part of the function of the πρεσβύτιδες, to be as σωφρονισταὶ among the Athenians (of which see note c.) 3^dly, by the word ἱεροπρεπεῖς compounded of ἱερὸς, which is the word peculiar for sacred, whether persons or things, i. e. for those, which are set apart to the service of God (as ἱερομάρτυρες are peculiarly the clergy martyrs, see note on Rev. 3. c.) and so signifies such as having taken a sacred habit upon them, (ἐν τῷ σχήματι ἐξεταζομένους Concil: Nic: c. 19.) behave themselves worthy of it. 4^thly, By the nature of the word, which denotes dignity as well as age, and differs little from the word Presbytera, by which the Deaconesses are expresst by Baronius, out of some of the Antients. Thus doe the Commentaries under S. Ambrose's name understand it, Anus in statu religione digno, reading it in the Greek ἱεροφανεῖ, where religio signifies those that are in some sacred function, And those under S. Jerome's name, on 1 Tim. 3. 11. Similiter eas ut Diaconos eligi jubet, unde intelligitur quòd de his dicat, quas adhuc hodie in Oriente Diaconissas appellant, He commands them to be chosen in like manner as the Deacons, from whence 'tis to be understood that he speaks of those which now in the East they call Deaconesses. And the words are clear in the 11^th Canon of the Councel of Laodicea, Μὴ δεῖν τὰς λεγομένας πρεσβύτιδας ἢ ἤδη προκαθημένας ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ καθίστασθαι, those that are called antient women, to wit, those that preside in the Church, must not be ordained. Where 'tis clear that the πρεσβύτιδες are said to be Præsidentes, a note of some function, over which they were set in the Church, as the addition of ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ in the Church demonstrates (and not onely of age) And although the Canon there appoints μὴ δεῖν καθίστασθαι, that they should not be ordained, yet first that very prohibition is an argument that they were in the Church, and to that Epiphanius agrees Hær. 79. Φυλακτέον δ' ὅτι ἔχει διακονισσῶν τὸ ἐκκλησιαστικὸν ἐπήδιόν πλῆμα· χήρας τε οὐκ ἔμαθεν, ἢ τούτων τὰς ἐν χειροτονίᾳ πρεσβύτιδας, It is to be observed that the Ecclesiastical order (πλῆμα there, and κατάστημα here being all one) wanted Deaconesses, and called called their widowes, and the elder of them πρεσβύτιδες, and 2dly for the prohibition it self, it signifies no more then this, that they should not be ordained by that imposition of hands, which belonged to the other superior orders in the Church. For there is a double χειροθεσία or imposition of hands, saith Tharasius, εὐλογίας and χειροτονίας, or καθιερώσεως, of blessing, and of ordination or consecration, These were received by the first, not second way. To the same purpose is the Concil: Epaunense, can: 21. Viduarum consecrationem, quas Diaconas vocant penitus abrogamus, solum eis pœnitentiæ benedictionem imponendo, that they were not to be ordained, but onely received with a benediction such as is used in the absolution of a penitent. And this was first done against the heresie of the Cataphrygæ, which would have them ordained and teach, or preach in the Church (in favour of Montanus's Prophetesses) as appears by the Commentaries affixt to Saint Ambrose, on 1 Tim. 3. Cataphryges erroris occasionem captantes, propter quod Diaconas mulieres alloquitur, & ipsas mulieres Diaconas ordinari jubere defendunt &c. sed Apostoli verbis contra sensum utuntur Apostoli, ut cum ille mulierem in Ecclesia in silentio esse debere præcipiat, illi è contra etiam authoritatem in Ecclesia vindicent ministerii. The Cataphrygæ taking occasion of their error from Saint Paul's speaking to the Deaconesses, defend that they are to be ordained, but they use his words against his sense, and when he will not permit a woman to speak in the Church, they assert their authority of ministery in the Church. By which it appears what was forbidden by those Canons, the Deaconesses having authority, or power of officiating in the Church, of preaching, in opposition to Saint Paul's precept of their keeping silence; of administring the Sacrament, * saith Epiphanius, (and consequently they received ordination, which belonged to such) not their being constituted officers in the Church, so as to serve in it; Which is all that I suppose here meant by χειροτόνημα. By what hath been said, it will sufficiently appear, how perfectly parallel this place is to 1 Tim. 3. where ἐπίσκοπος, διάκονος, and γυναῖκας, Bishop, Deacons and women v. 11. are just all one with ἐπισκόπους, πρεσβύτας, and πρεσβύτιδας in χειροτονίαν, Bishop, antient men, and antient women in the list, here.

* ἐν ἱερατείῳ ἐδίδου ἐπιχειρεῖν Φαρισαίοις, Hær: 79.

c. Χειροτόνησιν.

There were in Athens some persons to whom the education of youth was intrusted, and these are called σωφρονισταὶ. Ἄρχοντές τινες χειροτόνητοι (saith Phavorinus) δέκα τὸν ἀριθμὸν, ἐπῆσαν φυλῆς, ἐπιμελοῦντο δὲ τῶν τῆς φυλῆς σωφρονιστῶν, chosen magistrates, ten in number of every tribe, whose office it was to take care of the education of the young people, such were the ἁρμόστριαι to the female sex amongst the Lacedæmonians (see note on 2 Cor. 11. 2. a.) And proportionably with these, it was the office of these Deaconnesses to instruct and take care of the younger women, and infuse all Christian practises into them.

d. Οἰκουρόν

Οἰκουρῶν, to keep at home, is the office of wives, See Artemidorus Ὀνειροκ: l. 1. αἱ γὰρ δὴ τὸ πλεῖστον οἰκουροῦσιν αἱ γυναῖκες, wives for the most part keep at home. This Phidias expressed by the Tortoise, that carries her house about with her, Pausan. Eliac: 2. See Faber's Semestria, p. 29. And therefore Plutarch in his γαμ: παραγγελμ: saith 'twas the custome for women among the Ægyptians, to use no shooes, ἵνα ὦσιν ἐν οἴκῳ διατελοῦσαι, that they might live quietly at home. Thus the Dogges being called οἰκουροί, which are used ὅπως τῇ φυλακῇ κλωμάτων: to keep our goods, doe saith Artemidorus, signifie women in the Oneiriticks, or the interpreting of dreams. So in Eurypides in Oreste οἰκουρήματα signifies wives ἅτ' ἔνδον οἰκουρήματ' ἀλλαττόμενοι φθείρουσι, they that are left within doores corrupt their wives. Under this word οἰκουρεῖν are contained two things, both staying at home, and taking care of the family, as in Naumachius. Σοὶ δ' οἰκουρεῖν μᾶλλον, οἴκοισι φυλάσσειν, thou art to take care of the profit of the house and to look to the family. Contrary to these are the περιερχόμενοι τὰς οἰκίας they that goe about to houses. 1 Tim. 5. 13.

e. Περιούσιος

The notion of περιούσιος is set down by the Glossaries, περιούσιος λαὸς, ὁ ἴδιος, saith Phavorinus, ὡς τὸ Ἰσραὴλ εἰς περιποίησιν ἑαυτῷ ἀνέλῃ τὸ εἰς αἷμα, it signifies acquired or purchased, as, Israel for an acquisition, i. e. a possession to himself. So περιούσιος περιούσιος, saith Hesychius, a purchased people, but especially as that referreth to the richnesse, plentifulnesse, excellency of the possession, Περιουσία, περισμὸς, πλῆθος, it denotes wealth, plenty, and περιουσιασμῶ, πλήθει multitude, and περιούσιον, πολὺ, περιοὐσιον, abundant, and περιούσιος, πλούσιος, πολὺς, rich, much, all in Hesychius. The full notion of it must be fetch'd from the Hebrew סגל from whence סגלה signifies peculium, proprium, thesaurus, facultates, res chara, that which is a man's own, his treasure, his estate, any thing dear unto him, and so עם סגל which is generally rendred λαὸς περιούσιος, Exod. 19. 5. Deut. 7. 6. & 26. 18. 14. 2, and 26. 18. is rendred by the Targum חֲבִיב dilectus, beloved, and so in Exodus also, and accordingly here it signifies a beloved, pretious, excellent people (for which Symmachus puts ἐξαίρετοι) as Mal. 3. 17. סגל is rendred by us jewels, and by Aquila περιούσιος.

Paraphrase.

1. PUT them in mind to be subject to Principalities and powers, to obey magistrates, to be ready to every good work,]

1. And let it be thy frequent and special care to exhort all Christians under thee to yeild all honest obedience to the Kings and Governors under whom they live, and to be ready and cheerfull to the practise of all acts of charity.

2. Καλὰ ἔργα

That καλὰ ἔργα] both here and v. 14. ſhould ſignifie honeſt trades or callings, there will be ſmall doubt, or difficulty, when 'tis obſerved how ἐργάζεσθαι to labour, is uſed 1 Cor. 4. 12. & 9. 6. of S. Paul's working in his calling, and ſo 1 Theſſ. 2. 9. & 2 Theſſ. 3. 8, 10, 11, 12. Then by comparing Epheſ. 4. 28. ἐργαζέσθω τὸ ἀγαθὸν ταῖς χερσὶ, working with his hands that which is good, where bodily labour is called working of good. Thus a very antient Greek author, Palaephatus περὶ ἀπίστ. ſpeaking of Actaeon that ſpent all his time upon hunting, he adds, τῶν δ' ἀγαθῶν ἀφέμενος ἰδίων, he neglected the good thing, i.e. his buſineſs, all men being then, ſaith he, ἀνεργοὶ, having no ſervants, but doing their own buſineſs themſelves, tilling the ground &c. and he being the richeſt τῶν ἐν ἀγρῷ καὶ ἐργατικώτατος τῶν χωρίων, who was moſt laborious in his husbandry, whereas this man, ſaith he, ἀμελεῖ τῶν ἰδίων neglected his domeſtick or his own affairs. Where ἀγαθὸν πρᾶγμα the good thing,] and ἰδίων his own or domeſtick affairs] are all one, and ſignifie the buſineſs of the calling. Thus Act. 9. 36. Tabitha is ſaid to be full of good works, i.e. a very laborious work-woman, that wrought or made many garments

Ἐργάζεσθαι τὰ ἀγαθὰ

ments v. 39. and by that means, as it follows, was a very liberal, charitable almes-giver, gave the garments, when she had made them to old widows &c.

b. αἱρετικὸς

The literal notation of the word Αἱρετικὸς may best be taken from the verb αἱρετίζω, from which it immediately comes, as from δογματίζω δογματικὸς and the like; what that is, will be seen by these severals in Hesychius, Αἱρεῖται μᾶλλον, προτιμᾶται μᾶλλον ἢ ἄλλοι, to preferre before others, Αἱρετίζων, αἱρούμενος. to choose, to be pleased, Αἱρεῖται (it should be αἱρετίζει) παραλαμβάνει, αἱρεῖ ἀντὶ τοῦ ἰδιωτεύειν, to take, or receive others to ones self; All which put together, will make up this compound, to take up an opinion upon ones own choice, or judgment, and preferre it before the doctrine established in the Church, and to gather, and receive disciples, or followers to himself, in opposition to, or separation, and division from the Church, according to which the heretick is defined by that learned Grammarian, ὁ ἄλλο τι ἀντὶ τοῦ ἀληθοῦς αἱρούμενος ἔχων, He that chooseth to have some other opinion or doctrine besides, (or in opposition to, or preferring it before) the truth, (for so ἀντὶ signifies) where as αἱρετίζειν and αἱρεῖσθαι are all one, so, αἵρεσις coming from the latter of those, αἱρετικὸς that comes from αἵρεσις, and αἱρεσιώτης, that comes from the former αἱρετίζω, are all one also; And both denote a leader of a faction, a teacher of some new doctrine, which, that he may get disciples to him, makes a rent, or division in the Church. Such were those false teachers, that crept in among them, and led silly women captives, removed them from that union of the Church, in which before they were, and, (as captives are carried by the conqueror into his own quarters, so) took them off from the society of Christians, in which they had been, and led them into separated assemblies, or congregations. Not that the name Heretick is competible to none but those that are the first in disseminating a false doctrine, but that it belongs to all that endevour to corrupt others and draw them into the faction with them; Such were all the Gnosticks wheresoever they came, and those were principally here meant.

c. Μὶα καὶ δευτέρα νουθεσία

The first and second admonition] here referres to the method prescribed by Christ in proceeding against Christian offenders, Mat. 18. 15. but in some circumstances differs from it; There is mention of a threefold admonition, one by the injured person alone, a second by two or three taken with him, the third by the Church; But here onely a first and second admonition. The cause of this difference is to be taken from the quality of the person, to whom this Epistle is written, Titus a Bishop; whereas there the speech was addrest to every private Christian, that is injured by any. Here the first admonition of the Bishop carries an authority along with it, farre above that of the private person, and the two or three with him, and so may well supply the place of both those, and then the second here will be parallel to the third there, and so, after that is despised or proved ineffectual, it is seasonable to proceed to Censures, to excommunicate the contumacious, which is the meaning of the παραιτοῦ here, the avoiding of him. Thus 2 Cor. 13. 2. Immediately after the second admonition delivered by S. Paul, προλέγω τὸ δεύτερον, I foretell you the second time (characterized v. 1. by, In the mouth of two or three witnesses) he tells the offenders, οὐ φείσομαι, I will not spare but proceed to Censures. And v. 10. he tells them, that this admonition is, ἵνα μὴ ἀποτόμως χρήσωμαι, that he may not proceed to excision, or cutting off, which he there calls καθαίρεσις taking away, the word ordinarily used in the Canons for excommunication.

προλέγω τὸ δεύτερον,

d. Αὐτοκατάκριτος self-condemned, signifies not the man's publick accusing, or condemning his own doctrines, or practises; for that self-condemnation, being an effect and part of repentance, would rather be a motive to free any from the censures of the Church, which were already under them, then aggravate their crime, or bring that punishment upon them; Nor yet 2dly can it denote him that offends, and yet still continues to offend against conscience, and though he know he be in the wrong, yet holds out in opposition to the Church, For, (besides that there are very few that doe so, and those known to none but God, and if that were the character of an heretick, then none but hypocrites could be hereticks, and he that through pride and opinion of his own judgment stood out against the Doctrine of Christ, and his Church in the purest times, should not be an heretick,) this inconvenience would farther be incurred, no heretick could possibly be admonished or censured by the Church, for no man would acknowledge of himself, that what he did was by him done against his own conscience, nor could any testimony be produced against him before any humane tribunal, no man being able to search the heart. It is rather an expression of his separation from, and disobedience to the Church, and so an evidence of the ἐξέπεσες ἀπὸ χάριτος, being perverted and sinning wilfully, and without excuse. For he that thus disobeyes, and breaks off from the unity of the Church, doth in effect inflict that punishment on himself, which the Church useth to malefactors. That is καθαίρεσις 2 Cor. 13. 10. & ἐκκόπτω cutting off from the Church, which he being an heretick (and therein a schismatick also) doth voluntarily, without the judges sentence, his very αἵρεσις heresie is a spontaneous καθαίρεσις or excision. So saith S. Hierome, Whereas fornicators &c. are turned out of the Church, the heretick inflicts this on himself, suo arbitrio ab Ecclesiâ recedens, departing from the Church out of his own choice, which departing, saith he, propriæ conscientiæ videtur esse damnatio, seems to be a condemnation of his own conscience. So in the Councel of Laodicea, Can. 40. after an order that no Bishop shall disobey a citation from the Councel, 'tis added, εἰ δὲ καταφρονήσοι, ἑαυτὸν αἰτιάσθω, if he doe despise it, he shall be conceived to accuse himself, which is the next degree to self-condemnation. So in the African Codex Can. 22. 'tis said of a Bishop that appears not on citation, ὅτι ἐὰν καθ' ἑαυτὸν ἡ καταδίκη ἢ ὑπὲρ ἐκπρωτείας κριθήσεται, he shall be judged to have pronounced sentence of condemnation against himself, according to that of Apollonius Tyanæus in Philostratus l. 7. c. 7. Οὐ γὰρ ἐκλιπὼν τὸ δικάζειν, πῶς ἂν διαφύγοι τὸ μὴ οὐκ ἐφ' ἑαυτῷ ἐψηφίσθαι, he that declines a judicature, how shall he avoid the being thought to have condemned himself? So in the 12 tables, Præsenti litem addicito, he that appears not is alwaies cast, and so most nations have observed it, ut absens causa caderet, deret, ni ſomnia nuntiaſſet, that the abſent ſhould alwaies loſe the cauſe, unleſſe he gave his juſt cauſe of being abſent. So Regula ab Abbat: Floriac: conſtituta, Qui non comparuerit, tanquam convictus judicabitur, he that appears not, ſhall be judged convict, i. e. damnabitur. The like phraſe we have on another occaſion in Joſephus, l. 2. c. 12. de Bell: Jud: Oathes, ſaith he, were wholly avoided, and counted worſe than perjury, Ἤδη γὰρ κατεγνῶσθαι φασὶ τὸ ἀπιστούμενον δίχα ὅρκου, For he, ſay they, that is not beleived without ſwearing, is already condemned, His uſing an oath condemns him of lying, See Marculf: form: l. 1. c. 37. and Hieron: Bignonius on them, Steph: Forner: Rer: Quotid: l. 6. c. 21. Juſtell: in the Notes on Cod: Can: Eccl: Univ: p. 38. By all which it appears, that every one which ſubmits not to, but ſeparates from the Orthodox Church, whoſe member and ſubject he is (and this every heretick and ſchiſmatick doth) is properly ſaid to be ſelf-condemned, His receding from the Church is an evidence, that his doctrine or practiſe is contrary to that which the Church approves, and that being received from Chriſt and his Apoſtles, this ſingular doctrine or practiſe of his is condemned by the contrariety to that, and himſelf by his non-ſubmiſſion to the Governour of the Church.

c. Ἡμῖτες The ἡμῖτες here are all one with the οἱ ἐξ ἡμῶν, they that are of us 1 Joh. 2. 19. of which he ſaith μεμενήκασι μεθ' ἡμῶν, they remained with us, contrary to the Gnoſticks that broke off, and ſeparated from them. Thoſe are deſcribed ver. 8. and in reſpect to them peculiarly he commands the doctrine here ſpoken of, of following the buſineſſe of their callings, to be earneſtly preſt becauſe thoſe παραδιδόντες Παραδιδόντες there, the Gnoſticks that had been profeſſors of the faith, wanted that leſſon ſo much. But now he extends it to thoſe that are not fallen off to that ſect, that they be taught it too, that none live idly upon the ſcore of being a Chriſtian, or make that advantage of the liberality of other Chriſtians, but every man labour to earn his own living.

What ἀναγκαία χρεία, neceſſary uſe, ſignifies, is manifeſt by this place of S. Baſil in his Ἀσκητ: p. 560. Edit: Baſ: Ἄνδρωπι ὄντες δίκαιοι καὶ εὐσεβεῖς, πένητες δὲ, καὶ τῶν ἀναγκαίων ἐν ἐνδείᾳ, πόνοις σώματος ἀσχολοῦντο διὰ παντὸς, τῷ ἀναγκαίᾳ χρείᾳ τὴν ἑαυτῶν συμπορίζοντες, Thoſe that were righteous and pious men, but poor, and not furniſhed with neceſſaries, continually laboured, that they might earne neceſſary uſe for themſelves. Where it diſtinctly ſignifies all thoſe things which are neceſſary for life, meat, drinke, cloathes, &c. THE

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL TO PHILEMON.

Philemon, to whom this Epiſtle was written, is ſaid to have been an eminent perſon in Coloſſa, and ſo that of *Col.*4.9. inclines to beleive, where Oneſimus, Philemon's ſervant, is ſaid to be one of them. S. Paul had converted him to the faith ver. 19. but that not at Coloſſa, (for he had not been perſonally there, *Col.*2.1.) but in ſome other place, where he had alſo contracted a friendſhip with him. Oneſimus had been his ſervant, and had ſtolne and run away from him, and coming to Rome, while Paul was priſoner there, was converted by him, v. 10. and is now returned to his Maſter with this Epiſtle of commendation, to obtain a pardon and reception for him; which conſequently was written and ſent from Rome, where he now was in priſon, An. Chr. 59. And this at the ſame time that the Epiſtle to the Coloſſians was ſent, as may be conjectured by theſe characters common to them, 1. Timothy joyned with Paul in the beginning, 2. the ſame ſalutations in the concluſion, Epaphras, Marcus, Ariſtarchus, Demas, and Lucas, and 3. Archippus called upon in both to take care, and look to the truſt committed to him.

CHAP. I.

Paraphraſe.

1. PAVL a priſoner of Jeſus Chriſt and Timothy our brother, unto Philemon our dearly beloved and fellow-labourer,

2. And to our beloved Appia, and Archippus our fellow-ſouldier, and to [the Church in thy houſe,]

2. thoſe Chriſtians that are with thee.

3. Grace to you and peace from God our father, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt,

4. I thank my God, making mention of thee alwaies in my prayers,

5. Hearing of [thy love and faith, which thou haſt toward the Lord Jeſus, and toward all ſaints,]

5. thy charity to all the ſaints, and thy faith in Chriſt (ſee note on Mat.7.d.)

6. That the communication of thy faith may become effectual by the acknowledging of every good thing, which is * in you † in Chriſt Jeſus.]

* among & † toward us

6. That your liberality and charity to others that are in want, flowing from thy faith in Chriſt Jeſus, (ſee note on Act.2.c.) may be able to demonſtrate to all the zeal of your charity, and kindneſſe toward Jeſus Chriſt.

7. For we have great joy and conſolation in thy love, becauſe the bowels of the ſaints are refreſhed by thee, brother.]

7. This liberal charity of thine is matter of great joy, and comfort to me, to conſider how many Chriſtians are in their wants refreſhed and comforted by thee, my beloved Philemon,

8. Wherefore, though I might be much bold in Chriſt, to injoyn thee that which is convenient,]

8. And therefore though from my experience of thee I have great freeneſſe of behaviour toward thee, in or through Chriſt (ſee Joh.7.a.) and am not ſhie or backward to lay it upon thee, as an Apoſtolical command, knowing that thou wilt readily obey it,

9. Yet for love's ſake I rather beſeech thee, being ſuch an one as Paul the aged, and now alſo a priſoner of Jeſus Chriſt.]

9. Yet I chooſe rather to make it my requeſt, upon the ſcore of thy love toward me, who as an old man and a priſoner, ſhall obtain ſome kindneſſe and affection from thee.

10. I beſeech thee for my ſon Oneſimus, whom I have begotten in my bands,]

10. And my requeſt is not for my ſelf, but for Oneſimus, one whom I have converted to the faith, ſince I was a priſoner,

11. Which in time paſt was to thee unprofitable, but now profitable to thee and to me,]

11. A perſon that formerly injured thee, when he ran away from thee, but is now, if thou wilt receive him again (according to the ſignification of his name) likely to be profitable to thee, and, if thou pleaſe, to me alſo (ſee v. 13.)

12. Whom I have ſent again: thou therefore receive him that is mine own bowels.]

12. He is thy ſervant, and therefore I have remitted him to thee, I pray receive him, and entertain him with all kindneſſe, as one dearly beloved by me.

13. Whom I would have retained with me, that in thy ſtead he might have miniſtred unto me in the bonds of the Goſpel.]

13. Had it not been for the reaſon ſpecified v. 14. I would have kept him here with me, that he might attend and doe me all thoſe good offices, while I am in priſon for the doctrine of Chriſt, which I know thou wouldeſt doe, if thou were here.

14. But without thy mind would I doe nothing: that thy * benefit ſhould not be as it were of neceſſity, but willingly.]

* good deed
τὸ ἀγαθόν σου

14. But I would not doe ſo, till thou hadſt given thy conſent, that thy charity to me may be perfectly free, and ſo thy kindneſſe in affording him to me, if thou thinkeſt meet.

15. And for his leaving thee ſo injuriouſly there may come advantage to thee thereby; it is very poſſible that he was by God's ſpecial providence thus permitted to run away from thee for a little while, that by the reformation and converſion now wrought on him by me, he may be an uſeful ſervant to thee forever;

15. For perhaps he therefore departed for a ſeaſon, that thou ſhouldſt receive him forever;]

16. Being now ſo improved, that he will not only deſerve to be looked on as a ſervant, uſefull to thee ſo, but more than ſo, as a fellow Chriſtian, and uſefull to thee in thoſe beſt things, one very uſefull to me, and therefore in any reaſon to be ſo much more to thee, who haſt a double relation to him, as one of thy family, and one of thy faith.

16. Not now as a a ſervant, but above a ſervant, a brother beloved, ſpecially to me, but how much more unto thee, both in the fleſh, and in the Lord?]

17. If therefore thou lookeſt on me as a friend, if all be common between thee and me, as between friends, treat him as thou would'ſt doe me, if I ſhould come unto thee.

17. If thou * count me therefore a partner, receive him as my ſelf.] * haſt ἔχεις

18. And if at his coming away from thee he purloined any thing from thee, or hath any thing of thine in his hands, I will be anſwerable to thee for it.

18. If he hath wronged thee, or oweth thee ought, put that on mine account.]

19. I give thee this bill under my hand, whereby I oblige my ſelf to pay it, though I might put thee in mind, that a greater debt than that need not be ſtood on between me and thee, who oweſt thy converſion, and ſo thy ſoul and wel-being, and ſo thy ſelf to me.

19. I Paul have written it with mine own hand, I will repay it, albeit I doe not ſay to thee how thou oweſt unto me even thine own ſelf beſides.]

20. give me cauſe of rejoicing to ſee thee doe as becomes a true charitable Chriſtian to doe.

20. † Yea, brother, let me have joy of thee in the Lord: [refreſh my bowels in the Lord.] † I pray thee Nad

21. Having confidence in thy obedience I wrote unto thee, knowing that thou wilt alſo doe more than I ſay.

22. that by the benefit of the prayers of you and others for me, I ſhall have liberty from my bonds, and be permitted to come and viſit you.

22. But withall prepare me alſo a lodging, for I truſt [that through your prayers I ſhall be given unto you.]

23. There ſalute thee Epaphras my fellow-priſoner in Chriſt Jeſus.

24. Marcus, Ariſtarchus, Demas, Lucas my fellow-labourer.

25. The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with your ſpirit. Amen.

Theſe words are to be explained by the Roman laws, that of Ulpian among their axiomes, Si quis ſcripſerit ſe fidejuſſiſſe, omnia ſolenniter acta videri, If any one write that he hath undertaken a debt, this is a ſolemne obliging of him. And that of Juſtinian, Ut quodcunque ſcriptum ſit, quaſi actum, etiam actum fuiſſe videatur, That whatſoever is written, as if it were done, ſeems, and is reputed to have been done. Both to this purpoſe, that a man is bound as much by his own hand, or confeſſion under it, as if any other teſtimonies or proofs were againſt him of a fact or debt, or himſelf under a ſolemn obligation. So Anianus paraphraſing on Paulus lib. 5. collect: t. 7. *Si ſcribat aliquis ſe quamcunque ſummam redditurum, ita habetur quaſi ad interrogata iſta, Dabis? THE [a] EPISTLE
TO THE HEBREWES.

---

a. Ἐπιστολὴ πρὸς Ἑβραίους

WHether this Epiſtle were written by Saint Paul hath not only of late, but antiently been doubted. And as the title, or ſuperſcription which is in our copie, pretending not to be a part of the Epiſtle, is not ſufficient to conclude any more, than that it was, in that time, when this title was prefixt, beleived to be Saint Pauls, ſo there is no doubt but that it went without any ſuperſcription or known author, more antiently, and ſo hath left ſome place to variety of conjectures, who the author ſhould bee; Saint Chryſoſtom in his proeme to the Epiſtle to the Romans expreſſeth his opinion of it, that it was by Saint Paul written at Rome in his bands; (but that cannot well be imagined, when he tels them c. 13. 24. that with Timothy, if he come ſhortly, he will ſee them; for that ſignifies the author to be at liberty, when he thus purpoſed) Long before him, Clemens Alexandrinus (as we ſee in Euſebius l. 6. c. 11.) renders reaſons, why Saint Paul prefixt not his name in the front of it, as in all other Epiſtles of his he had done, [Paul an Apoſtle, &c.] which though it be an evidence of that antient writers opinion, yet it is alſo of its being queſtioned in that time, and is alſo an acknowledgement, that it was not own'd by Saint Paul at the time of writing it, or then publickly acknowledg'd to be his; Others were antiently inclinable to father it on Barnabas, others on Clemens Romanus, others on Luke, which is a farther argument of the uncertainty of it. And for the laſt of them, there is a paſſage c. 2. 3. which is conceived to make it more probable to be written by him, than by Saint Paul; For ſpeaking of the ſo great ſalvation, whether that be the Goſpel, and doctrine of Chriſt, or whether the deliverance of the faithfull out of their perſecutions (ſee c. 2. note b.) he ſaith of it, ὑπὸ τῶν ἀκουσάντων εἰς ἡμᾶς ἐβεβαιώθη, it was confirm'd to us by them that heard it, whereas it is known of Saint Paul, Gal. 1. 12. that he profeſſeth not to have received the Goſpell by man, nor to have been taught it, but by the Revelation of Jeſus Chriſt, and ſo likewiſe of the deliverance of the faithfull, of which he ſo often ſpeakes ſo confidently, there is no doubt, but among the many Revelations, which he had received 2 Cor. 12. 7. this was alſo revealed to him; But to this the anſwer is eaſie, 1. that ἡμᾶς us] is not to be reſtrained to the writer only, but ſo as to comprehend thoſe, to whom he writes, as we ſee it uſed Tit. 3. 3. and Eph. 2. 5. we being dead in treſpaſſes, &c. for it followes immediately, [by grace ye are ſaved] and ſo [we] is all one with [ye] And 2dly, it is no new or ſtrange thing, for Saint Paul to confirm the truth of the Goſpel by the teſtimony of others, and tradition from them, which ſaw, and heard. See 1 Cor. 15. 3. &c. Other κριτήρια are added by the learned Hugo Grotius, from the obſervation of the ſtyle, and idiom, which render it probable to be written by Saint Luke; But as all which can be ſaid in this matter, can amount no higher, than to probable, or conjecturall, ſo is it not matter of any weight or neceſſity, that it be defined, who the author was, whether Saint Paul, or Saint Luke, a conſtant companion of his for many years, the author of two other bookes of the ſacred Canon. And as for the author, ſo for the place, from whence it was written, it is uncertain alſo, the ordinary copies reading, in the ſubſcription, ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰταλίας, from Italy, but the Kings MS. ἀπὸ Ῥώμης from Rome. And the argument which is produced in favour of the former, becauſe c. 13. 24. in the ſalutations are mention'd οἱ ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰταλίας, which is ordinarily rendred, they of Italy, is not of much force, becauſe that may more fitly be rendred, they from Italy, i. e. thoſe that came from thence to Rome, or to any other place where the author now was at the writing of it. So again that Timothy was the bearer of this Epiſtle, (as is affirmed in the ſubſcription) it is not certain, nor, if we will judge by c. 13. 24. probable, for there mentioning Timothies being ſet at liberty, it is added [with whom, if he comes ſhortly, I will ſee you] which referres to the authors intention to bear Timothy company to them, which is not well reconcileable with Timothy's carrying this Epiſtle from him. So that in all theſe circumſtances there is very little certainty. As for thoſe, to whom it is written, the Hebrewes, they are the Jewes-Chriſtian, which the author had known in Judea, and Syria, (which all belonged to Jeruſalem as the chief, and principal Metropolis) who being perſecuted by the unbeleiving Jewes, were by the infuſions of the Gnoſticks inclined to great caution, and complyances, and conſequently began to forſake the Chriſtian aſſemblies, and to fall off from the profeſſion of the faith; which being the occaſion of this monitory Epiſtle, the ſubject of it conſequently is, to confirm them in the truth of the Goſpel againſt the Jewiſh pretenſions, to repreſent the great danger and ſin of falling off, and to fortifie them with conſtancy and perſeverance by many examples of faith, and patience, putting them in mind of the deliverance from their perſecutors, which ſhould now very ſhortly befall them, c.10. 37. That this Epiſtle was written in Hebrew is phanſied by ſome, but without any reaſon, the Hebrewes to whom it was written, underſtanding and ſpeaking Greek, from whence they are called Helleniſts in many places, And accordingly the places of the Old Teſtament, which are cited in this Epiſtle, are generally ſet down in the words of the Septuagints tranſlation, which was in uſe with the Helleniſt Jewes, and read in their Synagogues.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. I.

1. God which uſed formerly ſeveral ſteps or degrees, and likewiſe ſeveral waies & means of revealing to men the things to come, delivering them out in portions, not all together, and that ſometimes by viſions, or by dreams, ſometimes by the oracle, ſometimes by the coming of his Spirit upon the prophets, and ſometimes by voice from heaven.

1.* GOD who at ſundry times, and in divers manners ſpake in time paſt unto the fathers by the prophets,]

2. Hath in theſe laſt daies ſpoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom alſo he made the worlds,]

* God having in many parcels ſpoken of old time

2. In this latter age of the world, hath ſent his Son out of his boſome, the eternal ſon of God, to exerciſe this office, to take our humane nature upon him, therein to declare with more authority his fathers will unto us, and as a prophet to foretell his deſigne of dealing with his Church (ſee c.2. note b.) And to reward his fidelity in this office, he hath given him dominion over all things, power to command and judge men, to rule and govern the Church, as it was he alſo by whom he hath created the heaven and the earth,

3. Who being the means of reflecting to us the ſight of him, who is otherwiſe inviſible, Joh 1.18. and having perfect dominion over all, and accordingly adminiſtring all by his divine power, having by his death and reſurrection done his part toward the juſtifying and ſanctifying us, pardoning our ſins, and reforming our wicked lives, he aſcended to the right hand of his Father in heaven, there to reign, and as a king to defend his faithfull ſervants, and puniſh his enemies.

a. 3. Who being the † brightneſſe of his glory, and the * expreſſe image of his perſon, and † [a] upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himſelf * purged our ſins, ſat down on the right hand of the majeſty on high,]

4. And ſo is advanced to a ſuperiority even over the Angels themſelves, which you may diſcern by the compellations that are beſtowed on him, farre higher than any that are beſtowed on the Angels.

b. 4. Being made ſo much [b] † better than the Angels, as he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they.]

† ſuperior

5. As that of Son, in the Pſalms, which though in ſome ſenſe it belong to David, yet is by the Jewes themſelves acknowledged in a more ſublime ſenſe to belong to the Meſſias.

5. For unto which of the Angels ſaid he at any time, Thou art my ſon, this day have I begotten thee. And again, I will be to him a father, and he ſhall be to me a ſon.]

6. And again when the Scripture deſcribes the bringing Chriſt into the ſuperiour world, the heavens, v. 3. & c. 2. 5. the words are

6. And again when * he bringeth in the firſt begotten into the world, † he ſaith,] And let all the Angels of God worſhip him.

* it brings
† it ſaith

7 Whereas the titles which he gives the Angels, are no higher than of winds and flames.

7. And * of the Angels he ſaith, Who maketh his Angels † ſpirits, and his miniſters a flame of fire.]

* to the or † winds

8. But he gives farre higher tirles to the Meſſias, calling him the eternal King and God, mentioning his throne and ſcepter, and his great juſtice in exerciſing his Regal power in ſuccouring the faithfull, and puniſhing the obdurate.

8. But unto the ſon he ſaith, Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever, a * ſcepter of righteouſneſſe is the ſcepter of thy kingdome.]

* the rod of uprightneſſe

9. All thy doctrine and practiſe, thy words and thy example, have been deſigned for the advancing of all kind of virtue; and by way of reward for that, God hath entertained, or treated thee more liberally than any other, (ſee note on Mat.26.c. and on Act.10.c.) preferred and dignified thee before all Angels and men.

9. Thou haſt loved righteouſneſſe and hated iniquity, therefore God even thy God hath anointed thee with the oile of gladneſſe above thy fellows.]

10. Another place Pſal. 102. 5. applies that which is ſaid of God Gen.1.1. about the creation of the world, to the Meſſias, calling him Lord and Creatour of heaven and earth, (which is a proof of what is added in the end of v. 2.)

10. And, Thou Lord in the beginning haſt laid the foundation of the earth: and the heavens are the works of thine hands.]

11,12. They ſhall at laſt be deſtroyed, and in the mean time decay daily, be put off like clothes, and worn no more, But the Meſſias ſhall continue immutable, and immortal.

c. 11. They ſhall periſh, but thou remaineſt; and they all ſhall wax old as doth a garment,

12. And as a veſture ſhalt thou [c] fold them up, and they ſhall be changed, but thou art the ſame, and thy years ſhall not fail.]

13. And accordingly thoſe words ſpoken of him, that he ſhould reign till all his enemies were ſubdued, and brought to the acknowledgment of him, that he ſhould act a ſignal revenge upon his crucifiers, were never delivered, or applied unto any the moſt dignified Archangel, but only to this eternall ſon of God.

13. But to which of the Angels ſaid he at any time, Sit on my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footſtool?]

14. Are they not all miniſtring ſpirits, ſent forth * to miniſter for them who ſhall be heirs of ſalvation?]

14. The higheſt dignity that is beſtowed on them is, that they are ſervants under God for the uſe of men or Chriſtians, thoſe eſpecially, who are now under perſecution, and ſhall ſhortly be reſcued out of it, by a ſignal deliverance, and upon their conſtancy and perſeverance, ſecured of eternal ſalvation, (ſee c. 2. note b)

Notes on Chap. I.

2. Φέρων

a. The Hebrew נשׂא ſignifies two things, fero, to bear, and rego, to rule, and from the latter of them it is, that נָשִׂיא is the ordinary word for a Prince; Agreeably to this, φέρων,] which is ſometimes the rendring of the Hebrew נשׂא, as Num. 11. 14. Deut. 1. 9. may accordingly ſignifie, to rule, to govern, διοικῶν to adminiſter, as a Commander, or Governour, or Procurator of a Province, and ſo 'tis here taken, to denote the regal power of Chriſt, to which he is advanced by his reſurrection.

b. Κρείττων ἀ- γέλων

When we read Iſa. 52. 13. Behold my ſervant ſhall proſper, he ſhall be exalted, and extolled, and be very high, the Chaldee reads, my ſervant the Meſſiah; And Abrabanel a Jew confeſſes, that the antient wiſe men of the Jewes, did interpret that place of the Meſſiah, after this manner, that the Meſſiah ſhould be exalted above Abraham, above Moſes, and that he ſhould be higher than the Angels themſelves. And agreeably to this known doctrine of theirs it is, that the Apoſtle here writing to them, thus ſpeaks, ſignifying Chriſt to be indeed the Meſſiah, and ſo ſuperior to the Angels themſelves.

c. ἑλίξεις

That this whole text is cited out of Pſal. 102. 25,26,27. 'tis evident. In that place of the Pſalmiſt, the Septuagint, or Greek tranſlation in the ordinary copies read, ἑλίξεις, thou ſhalt fold, and from that 'tis ſtill continued here, at leaſt our copies read it ſo. But there is little doubt, but that the reading of the Greek there, was not ἑλίξεις thou ſhalt fold, but ἀλλάξεις thou ſhalt change, for ſo the ᾧ ἀλλαγήσονται, and they ſhall be changed, that followes, doth manifeſt, and ſo alſo the Hebrew תַּחֲלִיפֵם clearly ſignifies; For חלף mutavit, is thus ordinarily applied to changing of garments, 2 Sam. 12. 22. וַיַּחֲלֹף שִׂמְלֹתָיו and he changed his clothes, and Gen. 35. 3. change your garments, the ſame word is again uſed. By which it is clear, that either the copie here is by tranſcribers corrupted (as it is eaſie to ſuppoſe, when we remember that the copies of the Greek Pſalterie reading ἀλλάξεις] might very eaſily occaſion their conforming that, which here they found, to what was before them in the place, from whence 'twas manifeſtly cited) or elſe that the author himſelf following the Septuagint, tranſcribed this teſtimony verbatim as the words then lay in the copies of the Greek bible, and did not reform it by the original, the ſenſe indeed, though a little changed, being not much diſturbed by this other reading, it being the manner, when a man ſhifts or changes his ſuits, to fold and lay up that which is put off. If in the time of writing this Epiſtle the Septuagint were thus corrupted in the copies, then this is likely to be the truth of it, it being ordinary for the Apoſtles to cite Scriptures, as they were found then in the Greek Bibles, though they varied from the Hebrew, becauſe thoſe Greek bibles, and not the Hebrew, were in uſe among thoſe to whom they wrote. But if the corruption in the Pſalms were of a later date, then 'tis probable, that the tranſcriber of the Epiſtle corrupted it from ἀλλάξεις to ἑλίξεις. That one of theſe is the truth, there will be little ground of doubting, though which it is, it be not certain. Mean while the meaning of the place is clear, that the heavens ſhall be changed, after the manner of mens changing their clothes, putting off the old, and putting on new, i. e. that there ſhall be new heavens, a new ſort of world. The heavens having no more ſervice to doe to the earth, by inlightning and ſhining on it, ſhall be changed into a form, which ſhall be moſt agreeable to the preſent imployment, or uſe of them.

5. For unto Angels hath he not put in ſubjection the world to come, whereof we ſpeak.]

6. But this was given to Chriſt onely, And accordingly of him are thoſe words to be underſtood in the diviner ſenſe, which the author of Pſal. 8. hath, that he is a mean and vile man in outward appearance, not worthy to be conſidered or reguarded by God,

7. * Thou madeſt him a little lower than the Angels, thou crownedſt him with glory and honour, and didſt ſet him over the workes of thy hands.]

* Thou haſt leſſened him a little while below ἠλάττωσας αὐτὸν βραχύ τι παρ'

8. And all his enemies and the perſecutors of his Church ſubjected to him, and he advanced above all created beings, This prophecie of the Meſſias cannot be fulfilled, if any enemy be left which is not brought under him, and from thence it is manifeſt, that there is a yet future ſubduing of his enemies to be expected, for as yet the Jewes and Gnoſticks doe perſecute the Orthodox Chriſtians, and are not ſubdued or deſtroyed, and the Chriſtians delivered by that meanes.

8. † Thou haſt put all things in ſubjection under his feet. For in that he put all in ſubjection under him, he left nothing that is not put under him: but now we ſee not yet all things put under him.]

† Thou haſt put all things under his feet, for in putting all things under him, he left nothing unſubjected to him, Πάντα ὑπέταξας ὑποκάτω τῶν ποδῶν αὐτοῦ, ἐν τῷ γὰρ ὑποτάξαι αὐτῷ τὰ πάντα οὐδὲν ἀφῆκεν αὐτῷ ἀνυπότακτον.

9. Only this wee ſee already, that the Meſſias that was humbled for a while even to the death of the croſſe, for the benefit of all mankind and every man in the world, is now after, and for that humiliation of his rewarded and crowned with glory and honour, and a throne erected for him in heaven, of which this is but conſequent that his enemies ſhall be made his footſtool.

10. For God, the univerſal deſigner of all, in his wiſedome foreſeeing the oppoſitions and ſufferings that would befall his people, beleivers in this world, thought it fit that Chriſt his own ſonne, the author of their deliverance, ſhould through ſufferings come to his reward and crown, (ſee note on Phil. 3. 13.) that ſo he might after his own example deliver thoſe that ſuffer conſtantly and patiently.

11. For as among the Jewes both the firſt fruits and the whole harveſt are of the ſame nature; and as the prieſt that wrought expiation, and the people for whom it was wrought, were of one beginning, ſo are Chriſt and all mankind of one making, and Chriſt and the Jews from one original, (to wit, of Abraham v. 16. who was called One, Mal. 2. 15.) and therefore we muſt expect in our way to exhaltation or deliverance, to paſſe through the like condition of afflictions; In which reſpects Chriſt and we are brethren, and we ſo owned by him,

11. For both hee that ſanctifieth and they that are ſanctified, are all * of one; for which cauſe he is not aſhamed to call them brethren,]

12. According to that of the Pſalmiſt ſaying,

12. Saying,] I will declare thy name unto my brethren, in the midſt of the Church will I ſing praiſe unto thee.

13. Another proofe alſo of the ſame (viz. that both Chriſt and we are brethren in this, both to paſſe by ſufferings v. 10.) is that of Iſa. 8. 17, 18. where firſt he ſpeakes of waiting on the Lord that hideth his face, and withall truſting in him, being confident of his uncovering his face, giving deliverance, in whatſoever adverſity relying and depending on him, thereby noting that he is to paſſe through ſuch, and after ſpecifying and inſtancing in himſelf and his children given him by God, i. e. (in the antitype to Iſaiah and his children, given him by God for a ſign) Chriſt and all faithfull Chriſtians, which are his children ſpiritually begotten to him by God.

13. And again, I will put my truſt in him. And again, Behold I and the children which God hath given me.

d. 14. Seeing therefore that Chriſtians or beleivers, thoſe that are to be brought to heaven by Chriſt, are here in humane fleſh and ſufferings, and ſeeing that brethren, or fellow-children are of like natures, Chriſt therefore, who is called our brother, is to be ſuppoſed to have part with us in fleſh and ſufferings, and ſo to ſuffer alſo, And by ſo doing he was to fruſtrate and make void the devils deſign, (which was to keep men for ever under the power of death) to rob death of its ſting, and to reſcue men from the bands or power of death, by a reſurrection from death to life,

14. For as much then as children are partakers of fleſh and blood, he alſo himſelf likewiſe took part of the ſame, that through death he might † * deſtroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devill,]

15. And ſo take away all that fear of perſecutions and death it ſelf, which makes men ſo cowardly, and keeps them in ſuch awe, i. e. in a moſt unchriſtian and ſervile condition, whilſt they ſee no hope of deliverance.

15. And deliver them who through fear of death were all their life time ſubject to bondage.

e. 16. For tis not ſaid any where, that he catches hold of Angels, as they are falling, or running, or carryed captive from him, to ſave or reſcue them from ruine, or to bring them out of captivity, but onely to men doth he this favour peculiarly.

16. * For verily he * took not on him the nature of Angels, but he took on him the ſeed of Abraham.]

* For he doth not any where lay hold on Angels, but he layeth hold on the ſeed of Abraham

17. And therefore he was not to come in an Angelical glorious guiſe, but in an humble ſuffering condition, whereby he is the better qualified to have compaſſion on thoſe that

For by the sorrowes which himself suffered, 'tis very proper and agreeable that he should become compassionate, and willing to relieve those that fall into the same or the like evils, that are under the sharpest persecutions in this life.

Notes on Chap. 11.

a. Παραῤῥυῶμεν is a phrase used from the water, which when tis not kept within limits, fals away, runs about: Hesychius, Παραῤῥυῶμεν ἐξολισθῶμεν, and Phavorinus, παρατρωμεν, it signifies to be lost or fall away, and so Prov. 3. 21. when μὴ παραῤῥυῇς, fall not away, is set opposite to τήρησον δὲ, but keep, and so here to προσέχειν take heed, and therefore the Syriack, render it, lest we fall, and so the Arabick Interpreter also. Παραῤῥυῶμεν

b. It may here be matter of some question, what is the meaning of the word [σωτηρία salvation, or deliverance] Three notions of the verb σώζειν] have been oft mention'd, one for escaping out of the vitious customes of the world, repentance, and conversion to Christ, receiving the faith (see note on Lu. 13. b.) the other for deliverance out of calamities (from whence comes a third notion, for eternall blisse in heaven, as an eternal deliverance from all evill whether of sinne, or punishment:) and accordingly σωτηρία is oft taken for that eminent deliverance from persecutions, which was to befall the faithfull, at the time of the utter destruction of the Jewes, (see note on Rom. 13. c.) If the word be here used in the first notion, then it must signifie the preaching of the Gospel, the meanes of converting, and bringing men to good life. And so it may possibly be, comparing the Gospel here delivered by Christ, with the Law delivered by Angels. The second notion also, having two parts, one to signifie a signal deliverance here, another to signifie eternal salvation, it is not impossible, that both here and c. 1. 14. it should belong to the latter of these, especially there, where there is mention of inheriting it. But yet the former of these two latter notions, that for the signal deliverance, of the faithfull, long promised, and at the writing of this, now approaching, and 1 Pet. 1. 5. call'd the deliverance ready to be revealed in the last season, may very probably be it, that is here meant in both places. In the former c. 1. 14. where the Angels are said to be sent εἰς διακονίαν, for ministery, διὰ τοὺς μέλλοντας, for them that are ready to inherit this deliverance, that is very agreeable to the manner of expressing it elsewhere, by his coming with his angels or holy myriads, to punish the Jewes, and rescue the faithfull Christians, and accordingly in the 7th of the Revelation the Angel is sent to seal the faithfull, when the rest are to be destroyed by the four Angels. And this deliverance being a fatherly act of mercy in God, made over by promise to all that should persevere, may well be said to be inherited by such, and the neerneſse of it, at that time, every where spoken of, may be denoted by the μέλλοντας, their readinesse to receive it, as in Peter, it was ready to be revealed. And so for the πηλικαύτη σωτηρία here, if we will judge by the context, it must most probably signifie this, For 1. this will by the consequents appear to be the design of the whole Epistle (see note on the title a) to fortifie the beleiving Jewes by the approach of this deliverance, 2dly, the Epistle beginning with Gods speaking in these last times by Christ, as he had formerly by ordinary prophets, c. 1. 1. and the rest of that chapter being spent in the setting out the dignity of this prophet above all, even angels themselves, he applies it to this very matter c. 2. 1. that they give heed to what hath been thus foretold by Christ, lest they should fall away, and this enforced by the danger of so falling, v. 2, 3. and by the greatnesse of this deliverance, such as was thought fit to be foretold by Christ, and his Apostles, who were furnished with power of working miracles, to confirm their prophecy. Where, as the σωτηρία that began to be spoken of v. 3.] is all one with the ἀκουσθέντα the things heard, v. 1. so both are fitly appliable to this matter, which we know Christ solemnly foretold, Matt. 24. and the Apostles in their preachings, and in their Epistles (see note on the title of the Epistle to the Romans, a.) And 3dly the consequents in this chapter agree to this interpretation, where Christ is set out as a King v. 5. all things to be subjected to him, which being not yet fulfilled, as long as his enemies prosper, and prevail against the Christians, that is there used as an argument, that some farther exercise of this power of his, some deliverance of the faithful was yet to be expected. So again v. 9. where he is exalted by way of reward for his sufferings, that by the same way as he past, they might passe also, i. e. through persecutions to deliverance. v. 10. 11. and so be as his brethren v. 12. 13. which in the last verse of the chapter is expresst by his succouring them that are tempted, i. e. relieving them that are persecuted (for so πειρασμὸς temptation signifies.) And so on in the next chapter, where by occasion of the mention of the Israelites provoking and being excluded Canaan, he re-inforceth his exhortation of not falling off, that they may enter into Gods rest, which expects the Christians; which that it belongs to this mater of their deliverance from persecutions, and halcyonian dayes attending it, see note c. on ch. 3. So likewise may the phrase εἰς σωτηρίαν] be interpreted c. 9. 28. Where the mention of Christs second appearing, or coming, and that quite contrary to the first, (when he came to dye for our sinnes) a coming in power to destroy his crucifiers, may very fitly determin it to that deliverance, which the persecuted Christians, that held out constantly, in expectation of his making good this his promise to all such, should reap by it; But not so in any of these, as to exclude, but farther to comprehend that eternall deliverance, which we ordinarily call salvation. Κλησεως σωτηρίας. Πειρασμὸν πάσχοντας. εἰς σωτηρίαν: ἐν σωτηρίᾳ ἑτοίμῃ.

c. The Hebrew עוֹד hath a double notion, in respect of quantity, or of time. Psal. 8. 5. whence this verse is taken, as the comparison is set betwixt Enosch, or Ben Adam, the lowest man on earth, and the heaven and Angels, so the words will bear the first sense, that man is little lower than the Angels, but as those words were a prophecie, & the application of them here an enunciation concerning Christ, so עוֹד is an adverb of time, & signifies a little while. Βραχύ τι.

d. That καταργῶν signifies to frustrate, evacuate, invalidate, take away all force, or power Καταργήσῃ from any, hath been formerly said, Ro. 7. note a. And so it must be taken here, and καταργῆσῃ διάβολον will be to evacuate or frustrate the devils design, and cancell that deed, by which, upon sinnes coming into the world, men were bound over to death. For by Christ, though death temporall be not quite taken away, yet it is rob'd of the sting, and victory, or reigning power over man, who by Christ is rescued from death, i. e. from the κράτος, or power of it here, κρατῶν, (as of Christ it is said Act. 2. 24. that it was not possible κρατεῖσθαι αὐτὸν ὑπὸ θανάτου for him to be held under death) and raised to eternal life, and meane while, while the body lies in the grave, 'tis but as in a still, quiet sleep, a freedome from the pressures of this life, and so hath nothing of evil, or formidable in it. This notion of the phrase doth fitly belong to it here, where it is laid as the foundation of comfort to them that dread persecutions, because they fear death, v. 15. by assuring them, that Christ hath taken away the sting of death, and that consequently, if they that are now under pressures for Christ, do not outlive them, or enjoy the promised deliverance here, yet death shall be no losse, or diminution to them, they shall rise to eternall life.

κράτος θανάτου

c. The notion of ἐπιλαμβάνεται is best expres'd by Chrysostome in these words, φεύγουσιν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ οἱ ἀνθρωποι πόρρω φεύγουσι δὲ πρόσω φύσει Χριστὸς κατεδίωξε καὶ ἐπιλαβέσθαι, when mankind fled, fled far from him, Christ pursued and caught hold of it, and this he did by fastning on our nature in his incarnation, wherein the Angels were not concerned, for he did not so to them, but onely to us, according to that of the Antients, that that which was not assumed was not ransomed by him, that the nature of man being only assumed by Christ, and not the nature of Angels, man onely had the benefit of it, all his coming and preaching designed to bring sinful man to repentance, but not to recall, or recover the lapst Angels.

CHAP. III.

1. Upon these grounds I may most

1. WHerefore holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and high priest of our profession Christ Jesus,] reasonably exhort you my Christian brethren, who are called and admitted to the same common faith, disciples of this crucified Saviour, to consider and imitate Jesus Christ, who was sent with commission by his father to preach that Gospell to us, which we professe, and to ratifie it with his own blood, the effusion of which denominates him our high-priest, who sacrificed himself for us, his office, to which he was designed by God in every particular, in like manner as is affirmed of the fidelity of Moses, who governed and administred not any one part, but all the house of Israel.

2. 3. Nay Christ's condition is much

3. For this man * was counted worthy of more glory than Moses, in as much as he who hath [a] builded the house hath more honour than the house.]

more honourable than that of Moses, as farre as that of the Master of the family above any the most eminent servant in the house.

Scripture move you, and from the example of those murmurers and complainers (that were perpetually mutinying against God, when any hardship approached them, ready to turn back into Ægypt upon every slight fear and discouragement, and for so doing, were excluded from the promised land, and rest) doe you take heed, lest the present discouragements and pressures, meeting with covetous or fearfull hearts, make you fall off from the Christian profession or practise.

13. But exhort one another daily, while it is called to day, lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulnesse of sinne.] 13. But daily cheer up one another with incitations and exhortations to persevere, that none of the baites, that are now abroad in the world, those of the Gnostick heresie, which undertake to secure your feares, and gratifie your lusts, be able to gain in upon you.

* or, his confidence, for King's MS. reads ὑπος-τασεως αυτῆ

14. For we are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of * our confidence stedfast unto the end.] 14. For all our Christian profession hitherto will stand us in no stead, unlesse we persevere constant unto the end, in the courage and patience, which himself hath exemplified to us, (see note on c. 11. 2.)

15. While it is said, To day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts, as in the provocation.] 15. And thus the words in the Psalmist ly, To day &c.

16. For some when they had heard, did provoke: howbeit not all that came out of Ægypt by Moses.], 16. Whence it appears that some that were first obedient, that heard and received the law from heaven, did after rebell, and fall off, and murmur against God: but Caleb and Joshua did not so, and consequently not all that by the conduct of Moses came out of Ægypt, which may be matter of admonition to you, that you imitate those few that adhered to, and not the many that fell off from God.

17. But with whom was he grieved forty years? was it not with them that had sinned, whose carcasses fell in the wildernesse?] 17. And so when it is said that he was provoked, and wearied with them forty years, tis apparent it was with those disobedient murmurers, that would have gone back to Ægypt, and never a man of them came to Canaan, but dyed every one of them in the wildernesse, and that may be a warning for us.

18. And to whom sware hee that they should not enter into his rest, but to them that † beleived not? 18. Lastly when tis said that he sware

they should not come into Canaan, tis apparent who they are, that doe not come, the contumacious murmurers, v. 10. which gives us this matter of observation, that those that would not trust God with their preservation, shall be sure to be destroyed by that means, by which they expect to be preserved, by going back, renouncing Gods conduct, and so will it be with you, falling off from Christ will bring certain ruine on you.

19. So we see that they could not enter in because of unbeleif.] 19. And so the short is, that unbeleif, and falling from God upon our carnall fears, or impatiences, or murmurings at the present persecutions, and hardships, that befall Christians, will deprive us of all reward of our faith, as it did the Israelites, that followed Moses for a time, but after murmured and fell off.

Notes on Chap. III.

a. Κατασκευάζων οἶκον, to build a house, is here an Hebrew form of speech, in which language as οἶκος house signifies not onely the material house, but those that inhabit it, the houshold or family, so κατασκευάζειν to prepare or build, is answerable to בנה, which as it signifies to build, so it is vulgarly used for begetting, so farre that Ben בן which is the ordinary word for a son, comes from thence, and so to build a house] is to beget or raise a family, and κατασκευάσας οἶκον here, is but a periphrasis of a Pater familias, the father or master of a family. Οἶκος

b. That glorying and rejoicing are one in the New Testament, is sufficiently known, and that there is no difference unlesse of degrees, the glorying being the higher of the two. And so again that hope signifies the hope in God, reliance on him in expectation of the performance of his promise in the most improbable season, even when all things in respect of this world are most improsperous and adverse. And therefore that hope being the foundation of all a Christian's rejoicing, especially of that which is in time of affliction (and accordingly the phrase used Rom. 12. 12. rejoice in hope) this will clearly be the meaning of this phrase, The rejoicing in all that befalls us here, founded in a sure hope of receiving abundantly from God both here and in another world; And this is here joyned with παῤῥησίαν free confession of Christ in time of persecution. Thus Rom. 5. 2. καυχώμεθα we glory, or rejoice in hope of the glory of God; which is there attended with [οὐ μόνον δέ, and not only so, but we glory in afflictions,] ver. 3. which the Apostle really doth, 2 Cor. 11. 23. boasting distinctly of his toyles, and stripes, and imprisonments, and 2 Cor. 12. 9. most gladly will I glory in my weaknesses, i. e. the afflictions that have befallen me. Contrary to which is sorrowing as they that have no hope, 1 Thess. 4. and forsaking or falling off through persecution. Ἐλπὶς Καύχημα Παῤῥησία

c. What is meant by Κατάπαυσις μου Gods rest, in this place is evident, viz: that peaceable, prosperous possession of the promised land of Canaan, which after all their expectation, and endurance they should at last enjoy, (all that obeyed God) whereas God's oath is gone out against the disobedient murmurers, (that revolted from God, and in their hearts returned to Ægypt again) that they should never enter into that rest. The original of this phrase we have Deut. 12. 9. Ye are not as yet come to the rest, and to the inheritance, which the Lord your God giveth you, where the rest, is the quiet possession of that inheritance so long promised them by God, (as Ruth 3. 1. seeking her rest, is getting her a quiet, prosperous condition, and belongs there to getting her an husband, which was childlesse, that it may be well with thee, as there it followeth) and it is more fully explained v. 10. When ye goe over Jordan, and dwell in the land which the Lord your God giveth you to inherit, and when he giveth you rest from all your enemies round about, so that you dwell in safety, Then there shall be a place which Κατάπαυσις

the Lord your God ſhall chuſe to cauſe his name to dwell there, thither ſhall ye bring your burnt offerings &c. Where 1. the reaſon is manifeſt, why it is called Gods reſt here, becauſe God giveth it them, it is an eminent act of his power and mercy, that they ever come to it, 2^dly, it is clear, that the reſt conſiſts in the expulſion of their enemies, their quiet and ſafety, an immediate conſequent of which is their peaceable publick aſſembling to the ſervice of God at Jeruſalem. Now as it is the judgment of the learned Jewes, David Kimchi, &c. that the ſtate under the Meſſias is fore-typified by that reſt of Gods, ſo here it appears by this Authors application of it. And accordingly we may diſcern what is the meaning of God's reſt, which c. 4. 1. is ſaid to be promiſed the Chriſtians, even that which is moſt literally expreſt by that deſcription of that reſt in Deuteronomy, viz: a quiet, and ſafety from the perſecutors, proſperous, peaceable daies for the publick worſhip, and ſervice of God, which ſhould now ſhortly befall the Chriſtians by the deſtruction of their perſecutors, the unbeleiving Jewes, who, as the Canaanites, when they had fill'd up the meaſure of their iniquities, ſhould ſhortly be rooted ont. The only thing farther to be obſerved, (and wherein the parallel was to hold moſt remarkably, and which is the ſpecial thing that is preſſed in this place) is the fate of the diſobedient, murmuring Iſraelites, which were ſo impatient of the hardſhips, that befell them in their paſſage toward this reſt, that they frequently, and foully fell off from God, and returned to the ſins and idolatries, and villanies of heathen Ægypt, from whence they were reſcued by God, and all theſe were excluded from this reſt of Gods giving, their carcaſſes fell in the wilderneſſe, and of that whole generation, only Caleb and Joſhua, which were not of the number of theſe provokers, attained to that reſt, were allowed entrance into Canaan; And juſt ſo the Gnoſtick Chriſtians, thoſe that in time of perſecution forſook Chriſt, and returned to the heatheniſh, horrid villanies, from which Chriſtianity was deſigned to reſcue them, were never to enter into this reſt of God's, were certainly to be deſtroyed with the Jewes, with whom they ſtruck in, and complied, and deſiring to ſave their lives, ſhould loſe them, uſing their own waies to attain their reſt, or quiet, ſhould miſcarry, and never have part in God's reſt; Whereas all that have beleived c. 4. 3. i. e. that have, or ſhall adhere, and cleave faſt to Chriſt in the preſent perſecutions, and never murmure, nor provoke, doe certainly enter into this reſt; (as many as ſurvive theſe perſecutions,) happy, Halcyonian daies of a peaceable, proſperous profeſſion of Chriſtianity were very ſhortly to attend them. And this is a ſufficient means of explaining, and underſtanding that whole 4^th chapter of the κατάπαυσις and σαββατισμὸς, the Reſt and the Sabbatiſme (as that is diſtinctly ſevered from the ſeventh daies Sabbath v. 4.) which ἀπολείπεται remaineth (and is now ſhortly to be had) to the people of God, the faithful, ſincere, conſtant Chriſtians, the true Iſraelites, ver. 9. and ſo ver. 10, 11. where alſo the parallel is obſerved betwixt this reſt of God's giving, and that Sabbatick reſt, which God is ſaid to have reſted, on the ſeventh day. For as that was a ceſſation from all the works of the ſix daies creation, v. 10. ſo is this reſt, that is now to befall the Chriſtians, a remarkable, diſcernible ceſſation from all the toyles, and labours that their perſecutions under the Jewiſh unbeleivers had brought upon them, and is accordingly ſtyled ἄνεσις θλιβομένοις reſt, or releaſe to the perſecuted, 2 Theſſ. 1. 7. and ἀμέσεως ἀναψύξεως, daies of refreſhment, or breathing from theſe toyles, ſee Act. 3. note a. According as it fell out in Veſpaſian's time, immediatly after the deſtruction of the Jewes. See note on Rev. 1 d. And thus when death is mention'd as the releaſe of the Confeſſors from their ſufferings, Rev. 14. 13. it is expreſt by ἀναπαύσονται ἐκ τῶν κόπων αὐτῶν, their reſting from their toyles, or labours. See Rev. 14. e. And it is farther obſervable to this purpoſe, that the inſtitution of the Sabbath among the Jewes, though it be in Exodus 20. tranſcribed as a copie of God's ſeventh daies reſt, yet Deut. 5. where that commandment is again repeated, 'tis ſet parallel to, and commemorative of the deliverance out of Ægypt, Remember thou waſt a ſervant in the land of Ægypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence with a mighty hand and ſtretched out arm, therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the ſabbath day, v. 15. By which it appears how fitly, and with what analogie to ſcripture-ſtyle, this deliverance from perſecutions, and daies of peaceable ſerving of God, are here ſtyled a reſt, that had long been promiſed, and now approached the Chriſtians. For as the Jewiſh Sabbath in ſome things reſembled the reſt after the creation, (in being a ceſſation from works of weight and difficulty with which formerly the perſon was exerciſed, and ſo alſo in reſpect of the time of obſerving it, the ſeventh day) but in other things is the repreſentation, and commemoration of the deliverance out of Ægypt, in reſpect of the taſks, and ſtripes, from which they were freed, and of the plentiful condition to which they were brought, ſo may the word reſt prophecied of by the Pſalmiſt, as ſtill future, both after the creation, and after the entring into Canaan ſo many years, be fitly interpreted reſt from perſecutions, and have one eminent completion in this, the Chriſtians peaceable enjoying of Chriſtian aſſemblies, which was now through the conduct of God approaching them.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. IV.

1. Upon thoſe words of God c. 3. 15. (an ominous admonition, if it be not heeded) we have great reaſon to fear, leſt that promiſe of coming to Gods reſt, (as for thoſe others, to Canaan) being made to us, a promiſe of deliverance from our perſecutors, and peaceable daies of profeſſing the Goſpel, attending it, (ſee c. 3. c.) we may yet (ſee note on Mat. 3. f.) by our diſobedience miſſe of attaining to it.

1. LET us therefore fear, leſt a promiſe being left us of entring into his reſt, any of you ſhould ſeem * to come ſhort of it.] * to miſſe ὑστερηκέναι

2. For as they had the law of God, the decalogue,

2. For unto us was the Goſpel preached, as well as unto them: but the word † preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it.] † of hearing, or which was heard ἀκοῆ decalogue, delivered to them, so we have the Gospel, the new law of God, preached by Christ on that other mountain, Mat. 5. 6, 7. But as then, so here, this word of God being only heard, and not digested by faith, will not be profitable, or stand them in any stead that have heard it, it being the practise of the Gospel-precepts, patience and constancy, &c. which will advantage any.

* or let us which have beleived, enter into the rest, for the King's MS. reads εἰσερχώμεθα † had been done yesterday

3. For * we which have beleived doe enter into rest, as he said, As I have sworn in my wrath, if they shall enter into my rest: although the works † were finished from the foundation of the world.]

3. For as there is such a thing as a rest, yet future, for us to hope for, so it is most certain, that this is only for constant persevering beleivers to enter into, and such must we be if we mean to enter into God's rest; by God's rest, I mean not that which is so oft called by that name, the Sabbath of the seventh day after the creating of the world in six daies, there are more rests of God beside and after that, That mentioned in the Psalmist, Psal. 95. 8. is called God's rest, though it were many years after the creation of the world, And so there is now a yet future rest for us, happy, peaceable, Halcyonian daies here in the Church of Christ now persecuted, which shall shortly come, after the destruction of Christ's enemies, quiet seasons of worshipping of God (answerable to that Canaan that the Israelites (all but the murmurers) possest, after the expulsion of God's enemies, the Canaanites &c.) which they that hold out, and are not discouraged by the present pressures, shall attain to, if they live so long, and however an eternal rest in heaven. And it neerly concerns us now to attempt to enter into that, and to be very carefull to doe so.

4. For he spake in a certain place of the seventh day on this wise, And God did rest the seventh day from all his works.]

4. For one place of scripture speaks of that first sabbath immediatly after the creation, thus, And God &c.

5. And in this place again, If they shall enter into my rest.]

5. And another, in the Psalmist, long after, mentions this other rest as still future, which cannot referre to that after the creation, or that of the Israelites in Canaan, being written after them both.

* some enter εἰσερχοῦνται † disobedience, ἀπειθ. &c.

6. Seeing therefore it remaineth that * some must enter therein, and they to whom it was first preached, enter not in, because of † unbeleif;]

6. Seeing then there is such a thing as a rest for some to enter into, and the Israelites that came out of Ægypt, through their disobedience failed of entering into it,

* defines ὁρίζει

7. Again, he * limiteth a certain day, saying in David, To day, after so long a time, as it is said, To day if ye will hear his voice harden not your hearts.]

7. And again seeing the Psalmist, so long after the Israelites entring into Canaan, speaks of a set time of entring into his rest, and that at that time still future,

† Ioshua Ἰησοῦς * have spoken of another day after these things οὐκ ἂν περὶ ἄλλης ἐλάλει μετὰ ταῦτα ἡμέρας † a sabbatizing, Καταπαύσεως

8. For if † Jesus had given them rest, then would he not * afterward have spoken of another day.]

8. (For if Joshua, which is in the Syriack dialect call'd Jesus, (see Act. 7. 45.) had completed that prophecie by leading them into it, whom Moses had not led, the Psalmist would not then have spoken of another future,)

9. There remaineth therefore † a rest to the people of God.]

9. It from all these premises clearly follows, that there is now for Christians a rest still behind, which all that adhere fast to Christ shall now have their parts in, and of which that place in the Psalm is a typical prediction.

10. For he that is entred into his rest, he also hath ceased from his own works, as God did from his.]

10. And this rest is a rest from toyl and labour, a quiet repose of the Church in a free exercise of the true religion, such as will be had after the destruction of the persecutors, parallel to that sabbath, wherein God rested from his labours, and hallowed it a day unto his service.

11. Let us labour therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall off after the same example of * unbeleif.]

* disobedience, ἀπειθείας

11. Let us then set carefully about this designe of getting our parts in this rest, and that must be, if we fall not from these promises and hopes, through disobedience, as the Israelites fell from their rest in the promised Canaan.

† living and active ζῶν καὶ ἐνεργὴς * nerves ἁρμῶν † imaginations and thoughts ἐνθυμήσεων καὶ ἐννοιῶν

12. For the [a] word of God is † quick, and powerfull, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the * joynts & marrow, and is [a] discerner of the † thoughts and intents of the heart.]

12. And let us not think to deceive or escape that vengeance that expects all that fall off from Christ how closely and cunningly soever they doe it, For what Christ hath foretold, that he that will save his life shall lose it, and that they only that hold out and endure to the end, shall escape, is sure to prove so true, that there is no hope by the most artificious dextrous managery, to avoid the force of it, The word of God being like God himself, vital and operative, piercing into the depths and secrets of men, distinguishing between those which are the hardest to be discriminated, the true and the hypocritical Christian, and when the actions doe not discover, searching into the thoughts, and most cunning contrivances (as the priest in dissecting the sacrifices, observes, and separates those things, which are most secret, and closest joyned together.)

* before it, ἐνώπιον αὐτοῦ † cut down the back, * that of which we speak ἀπὸ οὗ περὶ οὗ ὁ λόγος

13. Neither is there any creature, that is not manifest * in his sight: but all things are naked and [b] † opened unto the eyes of * him with whom we have to doe.]

13. And no man shall be able to disguise himself so cunningly but he shall be discovered, discloſed, layed open, and bare, as the sacrifice, when tis first flead, then cut down the back, and all laid open, and discernible before the priest.

14. Seeing then that we have a great high priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the sonne of God, let us hold fast our profession.]

14. On these considerations therefore, (the rest which is promised upon our constancy, and the certain ruine, if we doe not persevere) and withall having such an example before our eyes, Christ that having suffered, ascended through the clouds unto the right hand of the Father in the supreme heaven, which is a token to us, that sufferings are the way to exaltation, let us take heed, and be sure, that what ever opposition, or afflictions we meet with in the way, we be not discouraged from our course of Christianity, and the acknowledging and professing it publickly.

† have compassion on συμπαθῆσαι * after our likeness ἐξ ὁμοιότητος χωρὶς ἁμαρτίας

15. For we have not an high priest which cannot † be touched with a feeling of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted, * like as we are, yet without sinne.]

15. For Christ our high priest, that is entred into heaven before us, hath also suffered before us all that we can suffer, and so will be sure to be sensible of our condition, and to assist, and aid, and relieve us, that if we be not wanting to our selves, we shall be able to stand.

c. 16. And accordingly let us adhere to him, and pray confidently to him, make an open free diſcovery of all our wants and requeſts to God, who though he ſits upon a throne, yet ſits there to hear our requeſts moſt freely, (ſee Joh. 7. a.) to relieve us in a fit ſeaſon, and will do ſo, when we moſt want and leaſt look for it.

16. Let us therefore come † boldly unto the c throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace * to help in time of need.]

† with freeneſſe μετὰ παῤῥησίας

a. ὁ λόγος τ. θ.

a. That ὁ λόγος τ. θ. the word of God, ſhould ſignifie Chriſt, the eternal word, is not impoſſible, it being among the Jewes the known title of the Meſſias (ſee Lu. 1. note b.) and to that the mention of eyes v. 13. doth ſomewhat incline it. But this phraſe being not elſewhere found in this ſenſe in the New Teſtament, ſave only in Saint John's writings, who is therefore called θεολόγος, It is more reaſonable here to take it for the word of God, i. e. that which had been delivered by Chriſt, and particularly that ſevere ſanction, and denunciation of judgment againſt all, that hold not faſt to him in time of temptation, thoſe that openly or clanculary deny him by their words or actions. For it muſt be obſerved that this Epiſtle being accommodated to the preſent condition of the Chriſtians in Judea, who were now daily ſollicited by the Gnoſticks, and drawn off from their conſtancy and purity, doth labour by all arguments to fortifie them. And in this chapter doth it by two arguments, one depending on the other; Firſt, from the advantages, which they ſhall reap by a conſtant adhering to Chriſt, not only eternal reſt in heaven, an ample reward for all their perſecutions, whatever they are, but even in this life more peaceable dayes of profeſſing and worſhipping Chriſt, when the unbeleiving Jewes the perſecutors ſhould be deſtroyed, and that time was now at hand c. 10. 37. And this hath formerly been explained to be meant by the ἀνάπαυσις, the reſt, that is here ſpoken of, a reſt from the labours, i. e. wearyſome perſecutions, and preſſures, that lay upon them, This he reſembles to the Iſraelites Canaan, as in the refreſhment that it yeilded the people of God after a ſad travaile in the wilderneſſe, ſo in the propriety that the faithfull ſervants of God had in it, none but they admitted to it, when they that had been brought out of Ægypt, and received the Law from God's mouth at Sinai, and ſo were highly favoured and dignified by him, yet upon their murmuring and falling back toward Ægypt in their hearts, through impatience of hardſhips and the like (herein directly parallel to the Gnoſticks, and thoſe that were ſeduced by them, who either ſecretly or openly forſook Chriſt in time of perſecutions) were cut off, and deſtroyed in the wilderneſſe, and not a man of them entred into Canaan. And accordingly the ſecond argument is here taken from the ſeverity of Chriſt's denuntiations againſt theſe (every where in the Goſpell) which ſhall thus fall off from him, the ſeed on the ſtony ground, and they that are ſcandalized in him, and they that ſeek to ſave their lives, &c. which denunciation ſaith the author here, ſhall like a divine vengeance, certainly find out every one that is obnoxious to it, how ſecretly ſoever he have contrived it. This is here rhetorically and figuratively expreſs'd by the reſemblance of a prieſt's knife, cutting up the ſacrifice, proceeding, and entring into the leaſt, and the moſt ſecret parts of it, the nerves the leaſt, and the marrow the inmoſt parts. And all this meant but to aſſure them, that they which thus fall off, ſhall never be concealed, This vengeance foretold will find them out, if they be not carefull to make good their conſtancy, and ſo to be of the number of thoſe, to whom the reſt is promiſed, which is the meaning of that exhortation v. 11. which this is ſet to back, as the reaſon of it, Ζῶν γὰρ ὁ λόγος τ. θ. for the word of God is living, &c. Upon which it followes v. 14. that we ſhould therefore hold faſt our profeſſion, or avowed confeſſion, and acknowledgement of Chriſt, conſidering what he hath ſuffered before us, by which we may be ſure, that he will aſſiſt and relieve us, if we ſtick faſt to him.

b. ταραχλίζειν

The notion of ταραχλίζειν here, hath been much doubted of; I conceive it is moſt clearly that which Phavorinus thus expreſſes, Ταραχλίζειν, διχοτομεῖν τὰ λάχανα, ἤγουν τὰ διὰ τῆς ῥάχεως χίζειν, it ſignifies to cut in two, to divide downe the Spina dorſi) (ῥάχηλος ſignifying, ſaith he, τὰ σπονδύλια τῶν ἀγγυλίων, the ſpondyls of the back bones) and ſo it belongs clearly to the cuſtome of the prieſts, in examining the ſacrifices, whether they were intire, and without blemiſh or no; This is called δοκιμάζειν and ἐξετάζειν ἱερεῖα, to try, and ſearch the ſacrifices, (as in Lucian περὶ θυσ: Οἱ θύοντες στεφανώσαντες τὸ ζῶον καὶ πολὺν πρὸτερον ἐξετάσαντες εἰ ἐνδελὲς ἐστιν &c. ἐπιτίθεσι τῷ βωμῷ, The prieſts put a crown on the beaſt's head, and having firſt ſearched it a great while, if it be perfect, they bring it to the altar,) and among the fathers μωμοσκοπεῖν, to look as a Momus or Cenſor, and conſider, whether there were in the ſacrifice any מוּם or blemiſh, whether all were ἄμωμα καὶ ἀπαῆ, immaculate and unhurt; They that did this, were the μωμοσκόποι, who to that end uſed to flea the body firſt, and then cut it down the neck, or back-bone, called τράχηλος, and being ſo cut, to lay it upon the altar, that the prieſt might ſearch and look into the inwards, and, as Philo ſaith, ἴσα δὴ γαστρὶ καὶ μηρῷς ἀνακείσθωσαν, whatſoever is hid in the belly, &c. To which refers that of Solomon Prov. 20. 27. The ſpirit of the man is the candle of the Lord, ſearching the hidden parts of the belly. As therefore the entrails of the ſacrifice, and the moſt ſecret parts are conſpicuous to the Prieſt, by the help of the μωμοσκόποι, and by cutting the ſacrifice thus down the τράχηλος, neck, or back-bone, ſo are all before the word of God, the moſt ſecret things diſcerned, and ſeen into, and that is the meaning of γυμνὰ and τετραχηλισμένα, naked, in reference to fleaing, taking off the skin, with which the fleſh was clothed and covered, and cut down the back alſo. Thus ſaith Iſidore Peluſiote Ep. l. 1. 94. that the phraſe here uſed is ἐκ μεταφορᾶς τῶν ἱερείων τῶν εἰς θυσίαν ἀγομένων, by a metaphore of conſecrated beaſts brought to ſacrifice, ὅταν γὰρ ἐκδύσαντες τῶν δορῶν ἀφαιρήσωσι πάσης τῆς φαινομένης ἀπογυμνώσωσι περιβολῆς καὶ τῶν κεκρυμμένων ἔνδοθεν ὑπὸ δέρμασι διάδηλα, καὶ ταραχλίζωσιν εἰς ὕδραν πολλὴν ἰόντα, καὶ μίλλας, ὅσα τὸ πολὺ ἐκκαθαρθῶσι, ὕπω &c. For as they being ſtead are made

made naked and deveſted of all the viſible covering, and ſhew the placing of thoſe things which were hid within,' and are cut down the back bone, to the end that he may ſearch, and look into every bone and part, that all may be cleanſed, or found to be pure, before they are ſacrificed, ſo &c. Hence is that of Heſychius, πεπαχηλισμένα, πεφανερωμένα, and Phavorinus, ἀνακεκαλυμμένα, the word ſignifies diſcovered, and made manifeſt.

The Jewes mention a double throne of Gods, כסא רחמים the throne of pity or mercy, and כסא דין the throne of judgment, and they adde that when ſitting in the throne of judgment he ſees the multitude too great of thoſe that deſerve puniſhment, he then removes to the throne of mercy, or pity, i.e. of pardon. c.

CHAP. V.

Paraphraſe.

* being taken from men ἐξ ἀνθρώπων λαμβανόμενος † conſtituted καθίσταται

1. FOR every high prieſt * taken from among men, is † ordained for men in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both gifts and ſacrifices for ſinnes;]

1. To this purpoſe of Chriſt's being our high prieſt; and as ſuch, working deliverance for us c 4.15. it will not be amiſſe to inlarge a while by comparing the chief things obſervable in an Aaronical prieſt with the like which are obſervable in him, every one of them, They are chiefly three, Firſt, the Aaronical high prieſt is ſevered and ſet apart from the common multitude, and appointed to act in ſtead of them in all things between them and God, and particularly in matter of burnt-offerings, which are by men given to God, and ſo ſpent by the Prieſt wholly in God's ſervice, and of ſin-offerings, ſuch as Lev.4.3.

* Being able to συμπαθῆσαι † are in error πλανωμένοις

2. * Who can have compaſſion on the ignorant, and on them that † are out of the way, for that he himſelf alſo is compaſſed with infirmity.]

2. Both which he offers for the ſins of the people, thoſe which they commit without deliberation, through ignorance, ſurreption, or ſuddain paſſion, and this 2dly, he can doe affectionately, and with a fellow-feeling of thoſe infirmities which have betrayed them to ſuch ſins, through incogitancy, without malice or preſumption, as conſidering that he himſelf is ſubject to the like infirmities as well as others, and ſo the more inclinable in all reaſon to mildneſſe toward them.

3. And by reaſon hereof he ought, as for the people, ſo alſo for himſelf, to offer for ſins.]

3. And becauſe the Prieſt is ſubject to thoſe infirmities, 'tis therefore appointed that he ſhall offer alſo for himſelf, not only in caſe of any actual commiſſion of this kind, of which he is at any time guilty, Lev. 4. 3. but alſo becauſe ſuch ſins may paſſe by him undiſcerned, he is therefore on the great day of expiation, when he offers for the ſins of the people, to offer for himſelf alſo, Lev. 16. 6.

* as Aaron alſo was καθάπερ καὶ Ἀαρών

4. And no man taketh this honour unto himſelf, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron.]

4. And 3dly, the nature of this office was ſuch, that no man might legally aſſume it to himſelf, but only he that was of Aaron's line, and ſo called to it by God that had aſſigned it to that line.

5. So alſo, Chriſt glorified not himſelf to be made an high prieſt, but he that ſaid unto him, Thou art my ſon, to day have I begotten thee.

6. As he ſaith alſo in another place, Thou art a prieſt for ever after the order of Melchiſedek.]

5,6. Now of theſe three things propounded of a legal high prieſt, the firſt, v. 1. the ſecond, v.2,3. and the third, v.4. Every of them are directly appliable to Chriſt, as firſt the laſt of them (ſee note on Mat 7. b.) that Chriſt did not intrude himſelf upon this office, but God called him to it; And that is the meaning of two places in the Pſalmes, firſt Pſal. 2. This day have I begotten thee, O my ſon, i. e. beſtowed this ſpecial dignity upon thee to be a King and Prieſt after thy reſurrection, i. e. upon the aſcending of Chriſt, which was his going into the holy of holies, whither none but the high prieſt went. The ſecond, Pſal. 110. Thou art ſuch a Prieſt as Melchiſedek was, that is, a king and a prieſt together, and that never to ceaſe, or to be ſucceeded by any, till all be delivered up to God the father, 1 Cor.15. 24.

† preſerve him out of death, σῴζειν ἐκ θανάτου ἐισακουσθεὶς * hearkned to, delivered from his fear

7. Who in the daies of his fleſh, when he had offered up prayers and ſupplications, with ſtrong crying and tears unto him that was able to † ſave him from death, and was * [a] heard, in that he [b] feared.]

7. The ſecond parallel betwixt Chriſt and the Prieſt in his offering for himſelf, now follows; For ſo did Chriſt alſo in the time of his loweſt eſtate of infirmities, and deſtitution, (when upon the croſſe he cried out, My God, my God &c.) offer up prayers and very ſubmiſſe petitions to his father, that he would, if he died, yet deliver him out of death, preſerve his ſpirit, and reſtore it again, ſaying, Father, into thy hands I commend my ſpirit, and cried with a loud voice (Mat.27.50. Mar.15.37. Lu 23.26.) at the delivering thoſe words, and, it ſeems (though it be not mentioned in the Goſpel) added tears therewith, and accordingly he was delivered from that which he feared, and according to his ardent prayer, he was thus preſerved by God, and though he died, was yet reſtored from death by God, and not ſuffered to lie under the power of it. a. b.

8. Though he were a ſon, yet learned he obedience, by the things which he ſuffered.]

8. And having paſt through ſo much of ſufferings, even to the higheſt degree of death it ſelf, in obedience to his fathers will, and ſo having found how dear obedience coſt him, though he were the ſon of God in an eminent manner, he could not but learn from thence, what an hard thing it is to perform conſtant obedience, when death it ſelf ſometimes muſt be taken in the way to it, and conſequently he could not but learn to have compaſſion on thoſe that ſin out of weakneſſe v. 2. though in that he were unlike the prieſt, that he was not ſubject to ſin, like him, which taught the prieſt his compaſſion to ſinners.

† conſummate or conſecrated * Being pronounced by Γενηθεὶς ὑπὸ

9. And being † [c] made perfect he became the author of eternal ſalvation unto all them that obey him:

10. * Called of God an high prieſt after the order of Melchiſedek.]

9, 10. After this third and ſecond part of the parallel, the firſt now follows in the laſt place, that as the prieſt is taken from among men, and advanced to that office, to negotiate between God and man, in the things belonging to God, eſpecially in offering ſacrifices, ſo Chriſt is parallel to the prieſt alſo, though in an higher manner, not taken from the common multitude of men, as the prieſt was (in that unlike) but yet negotiating in the whole buſineſſe of ſouls, as the prieſt did conſecrated by his ſufferings, as the prieſt by the ceremonies of his conſecration, and being ſo conſecrated, he offers up himſelf unto his father (as the prieſt did gifts and ſacrifices v. 1.) preſents himſelf now at his right hand in heaven by way of interceſſion for

for us, for pardon and for grace, and by that means if we live ſincerely, though not perfectly obedient to him, becomes unto us the author of eternal ſalvation, being after his reſurrection from the grave, pronounced, or declared by God an high prieſt, ſuch an one as Melchiſedek was, a king and a prieſt together, the prieſt to pray for bleſſings on us, as Melchiſedek did on Abraham, and the king to doe that with power, actually to beſtow thoſe bleſſings on us.

11. Of which reſemblance alſo between Chriſt and Melchiſedek I might ſpeak very much, which would not eaſily be underſtood, if I ſhould ſpeak it, For I cannot boaſt much of the quickneſſe of your underſtanding, or perception in divine things, or your forwardneſſe to hearken to what is thus ſaid unto you.

11. * Of whom we have † many things to ſay, and hard to be uttered, ſeeing ye are dull of hearing.]

* Concerning which Prep. † much matter, and which would not eaſily be interpreted by ſpeaking, περὶ ὁ λόγος ἡμῖν πολὺς καὶ δυσερμήνευτος λέγειν * what are the elements or letters of the beginning τίνα τὰ στοιχεῖα τῆς ἀρχῆς, ſee note on Rom. 3. a. † partakes of μετέχων * taſts not] of γεύομαι

12. For ſome of you that have been long employed in the Church, and in that reſpect might be fit to be Biſhops, (ſee note a. on ch. 6.) in ſtead of that, have indeed need that the firſt doctrines and principles of Chriſtianity, neceſſary for all the youngeſt and tenderſt Chriſtians to know, ſhould be taught you again, and 'tis unfit to give you ſuch myſterious abſtruſe doctrine, concerning the prieſthood of Chriſt and Melchiſedek, who want inſtruction in the plaineſt parts of Catechiſtical doctrine.

12. For when for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again * which be the firſt principles of the oracles of God, and are become ſuch as have need of milk, and not of ſtrong meat.]

13. For he that is gotten no higher than milk, will be hurt, not fed, by having more ſolid food given him; and ſo they that are not gotten beyond the loweſt, moſt neceſſary part of Chriſtian knowledge, muſt not be burthened with higher doctrines, ſuch as belong to proficients, for they are as children, which have neither teeth, nor ſtomach, to overcome ſuch harder food.

13. For every one that † uſeth milk, * is unskilfull in the word of righteouſneſſe, for he is a babe.]

d. 14. But 'ſtrong meat belongeth to them that are of full age, even thoſe who by reaſon of uſe have their ſenſes exerciſed to diſcern both good and evil.]

14. But these higher doctrines, like ſtronger meats, are for thoſe that are perfect men of full growth, (and, anſwerable to them, thoſe that are of full knowledge in Chriſtianity) that by long cuſtome and converſation in the ſacred writings, have ſo exerciſed and improved their faculties that they can diſcern between good and bad, true and falſe doctrines (which children, and raw rude perſons cannot doe) See Origen. cont. Celſ. l. 6. p. 262.

Notes on Chap. V.

ἐπακούειν to hear] is uſed by the Greek tranſlators of the Old Teſtament to expreſſe שׁוּעַ to preſerve, or deliver, ſo Pſal. 55. 18. (to which the Greek σώζειν, which we ordinarily render to ſave, is directly anſwerable, and ſo is here joyned with ἐπακούειν in the ſame ſenſe) and it is alſo uſed in other places for עָנָה reſpondit, anſwered, which is in effect the ſame, [the anſwering a prayer for deliverance,] being all one with [delivering.] So Pſal. 22. 22. Thou haſt heard, or anſwered me from the horns of the Unicorn, i. e. delivered me from that great danger.

b. εὐλάβεια

εὐλάβεια, noting ordinarily a pious fear, doth in S. Luke (who ſome think to be the author of this Epiſtle) denote any other kind of fear alſo, ſo Act. 23. 10. where in the commotion the commander is ſaid to be ἐυλαβηθεὶς, afraid, that Paul would be torn in pieces. So מוֹרָא φόβος fear, from יָרֵא timuit, is rendred ἐυλαβοῦς Exod. 3. 6. And being here taken alſo in the ſame ſenſe, it is yet with ſome difference, being here uſed (as many other words which denote the affections) to ſignifie not the affection, but the object, or thing it ſelf which is feared. So 1 Pet. 3. 14. τὸν φόβον αὐτῶν μὴ φοβηθῆτε, fear not their fear, i. e. the puniſhments which the threaten, and ſo Iſa. 8. 16. (from whence the place is taken) the Hebrew which is rendred φόβον αὐτοῦ his fear is מוֹרָאוֹ, which ſignifies the terrible thing, the object of fear, not fear it ſelf, which is יִרְאָה. and therefore it followes in that very place, Κύριον τὸν θεὸν φοβοῦ, The Lord ſhall be thy fear, i. e. ſurely, the object of it, he ſhall be feared by thee, and ſo the Hebrew is in other places rendred by ἐφόβους, Deut. 26. 8. terrible ſights or appearances, and c. 34. 12. θαυμάσια τὰ μεγάλα, the great wonders or terrible things that were done before them. So פַּחַד fear, is ſometimes rendred πόλεμος warre Job 22. 10. ſometimes ὄλεθρος deſtruction Prov. 1. 26. ſo Jude 23. οὓς δὲ ἐν φόβῳ σώζετε, whom ſave in fear, i. e. in time of danger, as it follows, ſnatching out of the fire, ſo φόβος terror is uſed for the thing that is feared, Prov. 3. 25. φόβος ἐπιπεσὼν, the fear approaching, explained by ἐμπεσὼν ἀσεβῶν ἐπιχείρησις, the aſſaults or violences of the wicked that come upon them. Of theſe and the like words, ſee note on Lu. 1. g. And thus ἐυλαβεια will be anſwerable to διὰ θανάτου death preceding, as εἰσακουσθεὶς heard] to σωζόμενος being ſaved. As for the other interpretation of the ἀπὸ τῆς ἐυλαβείας taken from the notion of ἀπὸ in that place, where 'tis ἀπὸ ſaid they could not ſpeak ἀπὸ χαρᾶς for joy, or in that they were ſo full of joy, by analogie with which ſome would render this, that he was heard, in that he was ſo much afraid, there will be little reaſon for that, even according to that analogie, his joy being the cauſe (and that noted by ἀπὸ) of what they did, or abſtained from doing, but his fear being not in like manner the cauſe of what another did, or of what he ſuffered, but the pleaſure or mercy of him that did hear him, i. e. of God, of which this hearing was the effect, and not of his feare.

τελειοῦς in the Agoniſticall notion, we have formerly explained, note on Phil. 3. d. Another notion there is of it not far diſtant from thence, uſuall among the Greek tranſlators of the Old Teſtament, to ſignifie the conſecration of a prieſt, who was to perform and paſſe through ſome ceremonies, and thoſe being done, and he actually conſecrated, hee was ſaid τελειοῦσθαι to be conſummate. The Hebrew word to which this is anſwerable, is מִלֵּא from מָלֵא implevit, to which τελειοῦν is not unfitly accommodated, becauſe τελειοῦσθαι and πληροῦσθαι, to be perfected and filled] are ſo neere Synonyma. The applying of this word to the conſecration of a prieſt, was perhaps from that cuſtome of filling the hands, of him that was conſecrated, with fleſh and bread, Gen. 29. 24. Hence the ram that was offered at the conſecration of the prieſt is called אֵיל הַמִּלֻּאִים of impletions, and the fleſh again, the fleſh of

of impletions or fillings, but in Greek δυσὶν τῶν πληρώσεων, the sacrifice of consecration, in the septuagint, Exod. 29. 34. That it is taken here in that notion, may appear by the προκεχρηματίσθαι ὑπὸ τοῦ ἀρχιερέως, that follows, as an explication of it, v. 10. pronounced, or proclaimed, or declared high priest, which belongs to Christ after his resurrection, and not before, that being the time, wherein all power was given unto him, viz. that power of blessing, wherein the Melchisedek-Priesthood consists. As for the sacrifice on the crosse, that was the ceremony of his consecration, answerable to that which was prescribed, Exod. 29. 11. after which he was assumed solemnely to this office of priesthood, according to that of Menander in Artemidorus Oneicrocrit: l. 4. who dream'd in Greece that he was crucified ἐμπεσόντα ἱερῷ Διὸς πόλεως, before the temple of Dios polis, or the city of Jupiter, upon which, saith he, ἱερεὺς ἀποδεχθεὶς ἐκείνου τοῦ Διός, λαμπρότερος ἐγένετο καὶ εὐπορώτερος he was appointed or constituted priest of that God, and so became more splendid and wealthy then he was.

d. Στερεὰ τροφὴ

What στερεὰ τροφὴ, solid food, literally signifies, hath no doubt or difficulty in it; 'tis that which is agreeable to healthy men's stomachs, and tends most to the nourishing of such, but is too hard and heavy for children, or weak silly persons, and doth rather destroy, then advantage such. What tis here figuratively applyed to, is clear also, viz. the explication of figures, or types in the Old Testament, so as to discover Evangelicall truths in them. As for example, the comparing of the Priests under the old Testament, whether Aaron or Melchisedek, with that which the Gospel teaches us of Christ, and shewing what those, typically or mystically, or in a spiritual sense, signifie. That these are here meant by solid food, appears by the discourse, which this Author had now in hand, though he tell them, that they are scarce fit to receive it, And on that occasion, by way of Parenthesis, that which is here said, and at the beginning of the next chapter, comes in, After which he returns to this kind of discourse again, at the end of c. 6. and beginning of c. 7. Thus Melchisedek &c. The only difficulty here to be explain'd, is, why or how the Author here fals off into this long digression, interserting this strange parenthesis in the midst of his discourse about Christ's Melchisedekian Priesthood, on which he was entred here in this c. 5. v. 10. and returns not perfectly to it again, till the beginning of c. 7. To this the solution is, that on occasion of this mystical explication of some passages in the Old Testament, he began to think of the Gnostick leaven among them, which consisted much in giving figurative mystical interpretations of the Old Testament, which being called γνῶσις knowledge, they assumed that title of Gnosticks or knowing men to themselves, upon this ground of their dealing so much in these interpretations, and gathering and confirming all the branches of their heresie from places of Scripture perverted by that means. Upon this occasion he therefore thinkes fit to tell them 1. that as the interpreting Scripture after this manner is a difficult task, and if it be undertaken by unskilfull raw teachers, it may doe a great deal of hurt, so if the auditors be ignorant, and not well and habitually setled in the truth of Christianity, and somewhat conversant in the Scriptures, so as to be able to judge between true and false, Christian and hereticall doctrin, this way may do them a great deal of hurt; may seduce, and corrupt, and destroy them, as strong meat doth weak stomachs. 2^dly, That this is the case of many of these Hebrews, even those that have been Christians long enough to bee better proficients, and judges of true and false doctrine, meaning no doubt those that had received some of these Gnostick heretical infusions, and either were already fallen off into their abominable practises, or else were very much in danger of doing thus. And of these hee resolves that (though he doth not now mean to do it, c. 6. 1. but may perhaps at some other opportunity v. 3. yet) it were most proper to begin with them, as with new converts, or children, not yet sufficiently catechised in the principles, and to instruct them in the nature of faith and repentance from wicked abominable works, of Baptisme and the vow of it (to forsake all carnall sins, and to stick close to Christ in despight of all temptations) of imposition of hands in the absolution of those that were laps'd (as many either were already, or were likely to be) and in like manner of the resurrection of the dead and everlasting judgment (which these *Heretick*s began to doubt of, see 2 Tim. 2. 18. and 1 Cor. 15. 12.) upon which he farther thinks fit to warn them of the danger of such apostasie from the Christian faith, c. 6. 4. And that enlargeth the Parenthesis. And that, having resolved them thus unfit to have this solid food allowed them, he yet proceeds, ch. 7. to give it them, entring there into this mystical divinity concerning Melchisedeks Priesthood, the reason is clear, 1. because this touch here given might be sufficient to avert the danger, and 2^dly, because of the generality of them, he was perswaded better things, c. 6. 9. though of some he had reason to passe this severer censure.

CHAP. VI.

Paraphrase.

* The discourse of the beginning of Christ ἡ ἀρχὴ τοῦ Χριστοῦ λόγος † be caried on φερώμεθα.

1. THerefore leaving * the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us † go on unto perfection, not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith towards God,]

1. And that we may discourse at large of this high point of Christs Melchisedek-Priesthood, c. 5. 10. it is necessary (though some mens stupid ignorance and impenitent lives, or relapses to their former unchristian sins after their receiving of Christianity, would tempt one to return and plant again the first principles among them, see c. 5. note d.) to passe over those rudiments of Christian Religion, in opposition to perfection here, and the word of righteousnesse, c. 5. 13. or those first things that wee read of in the Gospel (see note on Rom. 3. 2.)

2. Of the doctrine of Baptismes, and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment.]

2. And these are referr'd to six heads, as so many stones in the foundation, 1. Repentance or change of mind, a resolute forsaking of all sinful works, 2. Faith

2. Faith on Chriſt, or embracing the Goſpel, 3. The Doctrine of Baptiſme now among Chriſtians, as before among the Jews, the ceremony to receive Proſelytes into the Church. 4. Impoſition of hands for thoſe that were fallen after Baptiſme, after the example of Chriſt, who laid his hands on the ſick when hee healed them, to which abſolution is anſwerable, (the cure of the ſick being the looſing from that band, Lu. 13.16. See note on 1 Tim.5.f.) 5. Reſurrection from the dead, and 6. Eternal judgment.

3. Of which, if God ſee fit, I may have another ſeaſon to inſtruct others Catechiſtically that ſtand in need of it, (but at this time I ſhall not doe it, but aſcend to higher parts of Chriſtian knowledge, the underſtanding of the figures and types of the Old Teſtament applicable to Chriſt under the Goſpel) the danger being ſo great to them that doe not underſtand them aright, and order themſelves accordingly.

3. And this wee will doe, if God permit.]

4,5,6. For as for thoſe that have been received into the Church by Baptiſme, and ſo by oath obliged themſelves to continue in the true faith, and Chriſtian practiſe to their lives end, and having done ſo, have for ſome time enjoyed the privileges of Chriſtians, pardon of ſin, and peace of conſcience, a conſequent of the mercy ſealed in Baptiſme, and yet farther have had ſome of thoſe extraordinary gifts of the holy Ghoſt poured out upon them (ſee Note on Acts 6.c.) and by their continuance in the Church for ſome ſpace, have had experience of the promiſes of Chriſt, and the wonderful works of mercy wrought for us by him under the Goſpel, *Eph.*1.19. If thoſe, I ſay, ſhall through the Gnoſtick infuſions apoſtatize from the faith, after all theſe engagements to continue in it, they muſt never bee received to the peace of the Church again, and thoſe conſequent advantages and privileges, from which they are falien, being guilty of the ſame ſin, that the Jews were in denying and crucifying of Chriſt, and making an Impoſtor of him: (for thus did all they that fell off to the Gnoſtick hereſie, in which Judaiſm, and denying of Chriſt was a ſpecial ingredient.)

4. For it is impoſſible for thoſe who were once inlightned, and have taſted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the holy Ghoſt,

5. And have taſted the good word of God, and the powers of the * world to come,

2. b. 6. † If they [a] ſhall fall away, to [b] renew them again unto repentance, ſeeing they crucifie to themſelvs the Son of God afreſh, and put him to an open ſhame.]

† and have fallen away again to.

7,8. For as the ground that being ſowed and watered from Heaven, fructifies proportionably for the benefit & advantage of them to whom it is deſigned to be uſeful, is commended by God as good ground, on which the rain from Heaven is beſtowed to ſome purpoſe, and as far as it is capable, rewarded by him with more rain, more fructifying ſhowers & beams, that it may bring forth more fruit (like the good tree, & the good ſervant in the parable.) But contrariwiſe that ground or field, which after the like ſowing & irrigation, brings forth only thorns in ſtead of fruit, is given over, rejected by God, and man, and may juſtly expect to be curſed, as the fruitleſs Fig-tree, and is finally fit for nothing but to be burnt and deſtroyed (like that of Sodome) never to bear fruit again: So he that hath been baptized, and made partaker of the holy Ghoſt, and hath extraordinary gifts of the Spirit beſtowed upon him, on purpoſe for the benefit of others, if he renounce and apoſtatize from Chriſt, he is never to be reſtored to his dignity again, but is to be look'd on as one that in ſtead of edifying, hath endevoured and done his worſt to ruine the Church, and ſo is to bee caſt out of it irreverſibly, the curſe of a fruitleſſe Tree or Field to fall upon him. And ſo generally the Gnoſtick Apoſtatizers, eſpecially thoſe that from any extraordinary gifts, have fall'n into this foul noiſome hereſie, are to look for an heavy curſe, for fierce judgments approaching them, and in the concluſion for utter deſtruction.

7. For the Earth which drinketh in the rain, which cometh oft upon it, and bringeth forth herbs meet for them * by whom it is dreſſed, † receiveth bleſſing from God.

c. 8. But that which beareth thorns and briars is * rejected, and is nigh unto curſing, whoſe end is to be burnt.]

† partaketh of
* reprobate and neer a curſe, ἀδόκιμος ἐγγὺς κατάρας

9. But beloved, wee are perſwaded better things of you, and things that

d. [d] † accompany ſalvation, though we thus ſpeak.]

† are neer

9. But after all this thus ſaid to you, by way of caution, I have more comfortable hopes of you, and perſwade my ſelf, that you will have your parts in the great ſignal deliverance, (ſee Note on ch. 2.b.) that now the faithful are to look for, preparatory to their eternal bliſſe, and not the deſtruction that attends others.

10. For God is not unrighteous, to forget your work and labour of love, which yee have ſhewed toward his name, in that yee have miniſtred to the Saints, and do miniſter.

10. And the ground of my hope is, becauſe you have been formerly ſo couragious in profeſſing of Chriſt, and ſo charitable to poor Chriſtians, and are ſo ſtill, which works of yours God is, according to his promiſe of mercy in the Goſpel, bound to reward with giving more grace, and not to forſake and leave ſuch without all grace, as thoſe which for their obſtinacy in ſin are accurſed by him, v.8.

11. And wee deſire that every one of you do ſhew the ſame diligence to the * full aſſurance of hope unto the end,]

* conſummation of your hope πληροφορίαν τῆς ἐλπίδος

11. All the deſign of my preſent admonition and digreſſion is, to ſtir up every one of you to the continuance of this diligence to the end, that you may perſevere in the performing that condition, upon which all the promiſes are propoſed, and your hopes grounded, (ſee note on Lu.1.2.)

12. That yee be not † ſlothful, but followers of them, who through faith and * patience inherit the promiſes.]

† cowardly, ſluggiſh νωθροὶ
* longanimity μακροθυμίας Syriac

12. That you doe not now like faint-hearted perſons give over your courſe, but imitate and follow their pattern, who by faith continuing, and enduring through all afflictions, did at laſt enjoy their part in the promiſes made unto them.

13. For when God made promiſe to Abraham, becauſe hee could ſwear by no greater, he ſware by himſelf,

14. Saying, Surely bleſſing I will bleſſe thee, and multiplying I will multiply thee.]

13,14. Such were thoſe promiſes which were made by God to Abraham under oath, under the ſtyle of bleſſing and multiplying him, by which was meant Gods bringing his ſeed into Canaan, and all faithful Chriſtians to the reſt, mentioned c.3. note c.

15. And ſo after he had patiently endured, he obtained the promiſe.]

15. And theſe promiſes being made under oath, were in themſelves moſt ſure, and being faithfully relyed on, and believed by Abraham, were though not preſently, yet in time performed to him, i.e. to his ſeed, the Jews.

16. For

† is to them the end of all contestation for establishment, πάσης αὐτοῖς βεβαίωσις πέρας

16. For men verily ſwear by the greater, and an oath † for confirmation is to them an end of all ſtrife.]

16. For as a man when he would ſwear alwaies ſwears by the greateſt perſon he knows, and an oath being taken by one of the conteſting perſons, one ſaying one thing, the other the contrary, ſets an end to that affirming and denying, and confirms the judge to the believing of one party againſt the other (ſee note on 1 Tim. 5. e.)

*Wherefore Ἐν ᾧ † he interpoſed by oath μεσιτεύσας ὅρκῳ * we may have ἰσχυρὰν

17. * Wherein God willing more abundantly to ſhew unto the heirs of promiſe the immutability of his counſel, † confirmed it by an oath,]

17. So God was pleaſed to ſwear by himſelf, having no greater to ſwear by, v. 13. and by that means to aſcertain thoſe to whom his promiſes belong, i. e. all conſtant Chriſtians, of the performance of his promiſe concerning believers, the ſpiritual ſeed of Abraham,

18. That by two immutable things, in which it was impoſſible for God to lie, * we might have a ſtrong conſolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope ſet before us:]

18. That by promiſing firſt, which, when the condition is not neglected, is immutable, and then by adding an oath to it, he might give us ſecurity of enjoying what we hope for, of receiving the reward propoſed to us.

† the inner part of the veil, τὸ ἐσώτερον τοῦ καταπετάσματος

19. Which hope we have as an anchor of the ſoul, both ſure and ſtedfaſt, and which entreth into † that within the veile:]

19. This hope being that which keeps us from being toſt and ſhipwracke with the billows of the world, as being able indeed to ſee through the afflictions and perſecutions of this world, and ſee ſomewhat beyond them, dates of reſt and releaſe here, and beyond that eternal reſt hereafter in heaven, meant by the holy place, whither none but the prieſt could enter, and parallel thereto, the true faithfull Chriſtians:

20. Whither the forerunner is for us entred, even Jeſus, made an high prieſt forever * after the order of Melchiſedek.]

20. And whither, to make the way acceſſible to us, our Saviour Chriſt is gone as our harbinger, even he that king and prieſt, or powerfull intercceſſor of ours, of which I ſpake ch. 5. 10. And on occaſion of the mention of which, all that ſince hath been ſaid, hath by way of Parentheſis, as it were, been interpoſed, to fortifie you againſt thoſe that deceive you by figurative explications of Scripture (ſee note on chap. 5. d.)

2. Παραπεσόντας

What παραπεσόντας, falling away] here notes, may beſt be collected from the context, and that 1. from the antecedents, the illumination, and taſting the heavenly gift, and partaking of the Holy Ghoſt, and taſting the good word of God, and the powers of the future age, and 2^dly, by the conſequents, crucifying again, and putting to an open ſhame the ſon of God. The former ſhews from whence it is that they are ſaid to fall, and the latter how deep the fall is, that is here ſpoken of; The former conſiſts of ſeveral degrees, 1. φωτισθέντας, thoſe that have been inlightned, That certainly ſignifies baptiſm, which among the Antients was generally call'd φωτισμὸς, illumination, And this contained under it not only the acknowledgment of the truth c. 10. 26. but farther alſo the vow of baptiſme, that of forſaking all wicked waies, and adhering conſtantly to Chriſt to their lives end. Now all that were thus baptized, and thereby entred into the Church, were received to abſolution of all their ſins paſt, admitted to be members of the Church, and to enjoy the privileges of Chriſtians, the mercies afforded men there, called the gift of God, Joh. 4. 10. And they that have enjoyed the benefit and comfort of this for ſome time, may here fitly be expreſt by γευσαμένους & δωρεᾶς & ἐπουρανίου, that have taſted the heavenly gift, and that phraſe being annext to the φωτισθέντας, illuminate, with the conjunction [τε, and] may fitly be reſolved to belong to the ſame matter, as a fuller expreſſion of the φωτισθέντας enlightned] thoſe that by being baptized have been admitted to theſe privileges of Chriſtians, and have taſted, enjoyed them for ſome time. But then, as beſide theſe of baptiſme, and pardon of ſin, there were other χαρίσματα, extraordinary powers and gifts in the Church, So here beſide the mention of being inlightned, and taſting the heavenly gift, are added theſe other phraſes, that ſeem to be ſet on purpoſe to denote thoſe higher endowments, 1. Μετόχους γενηθέντας πνεύματος ἁγίου, made partakers of the Holy Ghoſt, thoſe which have the Holy Ghoſt, which deſcended on the Apoſtles, Act. 2. communicated to them, for ſo had many believers at that time in the Church of Judea, (ſee note on Act. 2. d. and on Act. 6. c.) and 2^dly, καλὸν γευσαμένους θεοῦ ῥῆμα, δυνάμεις τε μέλλοντος αἰῶνος, having taſted the good word of God, and the powers of the future age; where 1. μέλλων αἰὼν, the future age, is the very phraſe uſed in the Septuagint, Iſa. 9. 6. for the ſtate of Chriſtianity, where Chriſt is called πατὴρ μέλλοντος αἰῶνος, the father of the future age, there being in the Jewes account two ages, the one before, the other after the coming of the Meſſias, and the ſecond, in reſpect of the former, called μέλλων future, (and ſo οἰκουμένη μέλλουσα, the future world, ch. 2. 5. that after the coming of the Meſſias,) and אחרים ימים the after, or later daies, ἐσχάτου ἡμερῶν, often mentioned in the New Teſtament. 2^dly, δυνάμεις, powers, is the ordinary word to denote miracles, and ſo δυνάμεις μέλλοντος αἰῶνος] will be either thoſe miraculous powers, extraordinary gifts, which were beſtowed on believers by the coming of the Holy Ghoſt upon them, for the confirming themſelves, and converting of others, (and ſo were generally the conſequents, and effects as of the Holy Ghoſt's deſcending on the Apoſtles, ſo of their impoſing hands on others, and their receiving the Holy Ghoſt, for of ſuch we oft read, that they ſpake with tongues, &c. which were theſe δυνάμεις powers, miraculous gifts here ſpoken of,) or elſe more ſimply, and ſo as to agree with the good word of God, (whereby the Evangelical promiſes are denoted) the miraculous tranſcendent mercies enjoyed under the Goſpel. And then that will be the importance of theſe ſeveral ſorts of phraſes, here put together, thoſe that are, not only baptized Chriſtians, but furniſhed with extraordinary gifts and graces, and ſuch as have had experience of the wonderfull mercies and performances of Chriſt to Chriſtians under the Goſpel. And ſuch as were ſo, will be the ſubject of this propoſition.

Μέτοχοι γενηθέντες πνεύματος ἁγίου

Then

Then for the conſequents, they expreſſe the degree of the fall here ſpoken of; They that are here ſuppoſed to have fallen from this ſtate, are ſaid ἀνασταυροῦν to crucifie Chriſt a ſecond time, and παραδειγματίζειν, i. e. to inflict open puniſhment upon him, (ſee note on Mat. 1. h.) That muſt needs include renouncing and denying of Chriſt, the looking on him as ſuch, as the Jewes pretended him to be, when they crucified him, i. e. as an impoſtor, and accordingly the Hebrew מרד anſwerable to ἀποστῆναι, falling away, ſignifies with them Apoſtaſie, and ſo מעל, which is oft rendred ἀποστῆναι to fall away, doth denote alſo, 2 Chron. 29. 19. and elſwhere, and ſo the Gnoſtick hereticks (which are in the Apoſtles eye) are ſuppoſed by S. John to deny Chriſt, and thereupon are called Ἀντίχριστοι Antichriſts; And both theſe put together ſeem to make up the full importance of this place, that they that being baptized illuminate Chriſtians endowed with extraordinary gifts, and having continued ſo for ſome time (and ſo for their time ought to be Doctors, c. 5. 12.) fall off after all this not only to ſome waſting ſin, but to denying of Chriſt, renouncing of him, apoſtatizing from him, could not poſſibly be again renewed to repentance, and what that ſignifies, will be ſeen note b.

b. What ἀνακαινίζειν ſignifies, may, I ſuppoſe, be beſt concluded by the notion of ἐγκαινίζειν to dedicate, from whence we have ἐγκαίνια the feaſt of the dedication of the Altar, in the book of the Maccabees, mentioned in the Goſpel. Agreeably when men, which by their creation after God's image, were dedicated to his ſervice, had fallen away from him, into idolatry, or ſin, the receiving them to baptiſme, upon vow of new life, was the ἀνακαινίζειν εἰς μετάνοιαν, dedicating them anew to repentance, or new life. And accordingly to prepare them for baptiſme, they uſed to confeſſe their ſins, and the Catechiſt to lay hands on them, and pray for abſolution, as it is ſaid of Conſtantine, Ἐξομολογάμενος τῶν διὰ χειροθεσίας ἰυχῶν ἔτυχεν, He confeſt, and obtained the prayers by impoſition of hands. Euſeb: de vit: Conſt: l. 4. Conſequently πάλιν ἀνακαινίζειν εἰς μετάνοιαν again to renew to repentance, is to uſe ſome new courſe of dedicating and conſecrating them anew, after ſome foul fall, or waſting ſin after baptiſme, and that was wont to be by penance, and abſolution. For μετάνοια repentance is ſometimes taken for admiſſion to pardon, or the whole proceeding of the Church with the penitent, in order to his abſolution from the Cenſures. So μετάνοιαν αἰτεῖν to ask repentance, is to demand or beg admiſſion to that courſe, which ſhould prepare them for abſolution, Conc: Neocaeſ: Can: 52. and elſwhere frequently. And ſo in our 16th Article, the grant of repentance, is put to explain that which had been before, in King Edward's Articles, the place for penitents, and in the Auguſtan confeſſion, Abſolutionem impertire, to afford abſolution, Art. 12. and this according to Scripture-ſtyle, where to preach repentance is to proclaime admiſſion to pardon upon repentance. And therefore when it is here ſaid that it is ἀδύνατον impoſſible (not to be hoped for, or attained) again to re-dedicate ſuch an one to repentance, the meaning will be, that ſuch as are here ſpoken of, Apoſtate Gnoſticks, that from ſo high a ſtate of Chriſtians, ſo long continued in, ſhall fall off, and joyn with the Jewes in denying of Chriſt, and perſecuting Chriſtians, are never to hope to be received to the peace of the Church again, to have the benefit of their publick prayers, as c. 10. 26. it is ſaid of ſuch, that there remains no more ſacrifice for ſin. For although for other foule acts of ſin, ſacrificing to Idols, &c. the antient Church, eſpecially of the Roman Communion, allowed place for reconciliation, and abſolution, after a firſt offence, (ſome denying it to a ſecond, amplius nunquam, ſaith Tertullian de pœn:) yet to Apoſtates, and thoſe which turned open, obſtinate enemies, after the acknowledgment of the truth, this was not allowed, (And accordingly we read of Julian the Apoſtate, that in ſtead of praying for him, they prayed againſt him.) And this, or the like underſtanding of theſe words, ſeems to be the reaſon that the Roman Church, which at firſt received not this Epiſtle, thinking it to oppoſe admiſſion to the peace of the Church, for any act of known, and groſſe ſin after baptiſme, did after receive it into the Canon, obſerving ſome other interpretation (reconcileable with their doctrine) of which the words were capable. And if this be not thought to come home to the force of the word ἀδύνατον impoſſible, becauſe though the Church will not receive ſuch, yet it is ſtill poſſible they may, that is eaſily anſwered, by obſerving, that that word is uſed ſometimes to ſignifie that, which by law may not be done, though naturally it may, So Joſephus againſt Appion, l. 2. ſpeaking of great offenders, ſaith, Ἀδύνατον ἦν τὴν χαλεπὴν ζημίαν, 'tis impoſſible to obtain remiſſion of the puniſhment, i. e. the law permits it not. One other notion there is, that this place may be capable of, by applying it yet more peculiarly to the Gnoſticks at that time, that they that ſo foully fell off from Chriſtianity through the Jewiſh perſecutions, ſhould in the iſſue never be capable of repentance, the deſtruction, that as a thief in the night, ſhould come ſo unexpectedly on the Jewes, ſhould alſo involve them, and ſweep them ſuddenly away, And to this belongs that which is added v. 8. that they were neer a curſe, whoſe end was to be burnt; and to that the place Heb. 10. 26. very well accordeth. But the words here have generally been conceived by the antient Church to belong to the Cenſures, and admiſſion to penance, and abſolution, and to that the phraſe ἀνακαινίζειν εἰς μετάνοιαν renewing to repentance, hath a propriety, and that other may be the interpretation of v. 8. and preſuppoſe, and fitly be ſuperadded to this, and not be excluſive of it.

c. What εὐλογία bleſſing here ſignifies, is ſomewhat uncertain, the word being capable of ſeveral acceptions, that which is moſt commodious to the matter in hand, and contrary to κατάραν curſing] which follows, is, that it ſignifie praiſe, or approbation, by way of reward, the [well done good and faithfull ſervant] and the bliſſe attending it. And then, as any that doth his duty, is ſaid to be approved, and any that brings in fruit to be commended by God (eſpecially when it is conſidered that the ſimilitude of the earth is here uſed to ſignifie men, who are capable of ſuch payments by way of reward from God, if the earth be not) and becauſe the ſimilitude is not here applied, the ἀνταπόδοσις being left out, it was therefore more reaſonable to uſe this phraſe, (which belongs more properly to the the man, than the earth) more ſignally to note, that what is ſaid of the earth, is meant of the man. It is here farther obſervable, of this earth, that the thing for which it is rewarded, (and for want of which the reprobate earth is curſed) is the bearing fruit meet for them, by whom it is plowed, not for God, that ſends it the rain; which notes the perſons which are meant under the repreſentation of the earth to be thoſe which had gifts given them by God for the uſe of others, and ſo ſignally denotes thoſe that had received the Holy Ghoſt, and the extraordinary graces thereof, (parallel to the rain from heaven) in order to the inſtructing and profiting of others; to which end they that make uſe of thoſe gifts as they ought, bring a great bleſſing on others, convert many to righteouſneſs, and withall themſelves reap the fruit of it, ſhine like ſtarres, ſee Jam. 5.20. And ſo this is a farther evidence, that it is not the fall of an ordinary Chriſtian, but the Apoſtaſie of one that had been partaker of extraordinary gifts which is ſpoken of in the former verſes, And that may be matter of admonition to the moſt perfect, not to be high minded, but fear, leſt he thus fall after all this.

d. That ἐχόμενα ſignifies adjoyning, and that proportionably to the Septuagint, who render מִן next after, by ἐχόμενα, hath been ſaid note on Mar. 1. b. and then ſo it muſt ſignifie here, things that joyn neer upon deliverance, or ſalvation. The onely difficulty will be, what notion belongs to σωτηρία deliverance or ſalvation in this place, And that will moſt probably be the temporal deliverance here, preparative to the eternal reſt hereafter, this being the interpretation of the promiſes, v. 12. which by faith and endurance are poſſeſſed, whereas they that now for perſecutions fall off, loſe both their preſent and future reward, are deſtroyed here with the Jewes the perſecutors, and are loſt eternally.

Κατὰ τάξιν after the order] may here ſignifie no more than ſicut or quemadmodum, even as, or after the manner of, for the words in the Pſalmiſt are עַל דִּבְרָתִי which Aben Ezra explains by after the manner, or like as. Not that τάξις ſhould ſignifie here, as it would doe, being ſpoken of the Aaronical Prieſt, for there it ſhould ſignifie a natural ſucceſſion in that line from Aaron, obſerved among all the Levitical high Prieſts, but onely a ſimilitude or agreement, in ſo many particulars nominated, with Melchiſedek (ſee Cunæus de Rep: Heb:) particularly that of being a King and a Prieſt together, which was ſo ſolemnly preſignified of Chriſt by the prophets, and perhaps from thence taken into the heathen Oracles, that about that time among the Romans the dignity of the Pontificate was joyned with the Imperial, firſt by Auguſtus, and afterwards by the reſt of the Emperors, ſee Sueton: in Auguſt: and in Galba c. 8. and in Claud: c. 22. and thereupon ſaith Tacitus An: l. 3. Nunc Deûm munere ſummum Pontificem ſummum hominem eſſe, Now by the gift of the Gods, the chief prieſt is the ſupreme man or Emperour. e.

CHAP. VII.

Paraphraſe.

1. FOr this Melchiſedek King of Salem, Prieſt of the moſt high God, who met Abraham returning from the ſlaughter of the Kings, and bleſſed him;

2. To whom alſo Abraham gave a tenth part of all, firſt being by interpretation King of righteouſneſſe, and after that alſo King of Salem, which is King of peace;]

1, 2. Now that Chriſt was not onely an Aaronical Prieſt, but of a much higher kind, appears by the nature of the Prieſthood of Melchiſedek, after the manner of which Chriſt's Prieſthood was, For this Melchiſedek, who in his name [King of righteouſneſſe] and in his Title [King of Salem, or Peace] reſembled Chriſt moſt abſolutely, and is called Gen. 14.18. a Prieſt of the moſt high God, and ſo a King and Prieſt both; and who, as ſuch, when Abraham came from his victory over Kederlaomer and the other Kings, came out and treated him civilly, as a King, and, as a Prieſt, bleſſed him, and received from him the tenth of all he had there;

* pedegree ἀγενεαλόγητος

3. Without father, without mother, without * deſcent, having neither beginning of dayes, nor end of life; but made like unto the Son of God, abideth a Prieſt continually.]

3. One, of whoſe father, or mother, or pedegree there is no mention in the ſtory in Geneſis, (which notes him to bee no Prieſt by deſcent, as the Levitical Prieſts were, and accordingly their Genealogies, and pedegrees both on the fathers and mothers ſide, were preſerved exactly) as neither of his birth nor death, the time of his entring on, or leaving his office, and ſo ſtands in the ſtory as a kind of immortal Prieſt without any ſucceſſor mention'd in his Prieſthood (nay, perhaps the laſt Prieſt of the true God that was in Phœnicia, Idolatry preſently coming in) This Melchiſedek, I ſay, is in all this an embleme of Chriſt (and ſo is ſet down Pſal. 110.) who is ſuch a Prieſt as he, in reſpect of the conjunction of Prieſthood and Regal office, of the no predeceſſors or ſucceſſors in the line, of the title of King of righteouſneſſe, and Prince of peace, and of his continuing for ever in that office, i.e. as long as there ſhould be need of any (as Melchiſedek did, as long as the worſhip of God continued in Phœnicia.)

† out of the prime of his ſtore.

4. Now conſider how great this man was, unto whom the Patriarch Abraham gave the tenth † of the [a] ſpoils.]

4. And yee will ſoon diſcern what an eminent perſon this Melchiſedek was, when yee but remember that the Patriarch Abraham, that had undertaken the ſervice of the true God, and was the ſtock from whence all the Aaronical Prieſthood ſprang, did himſelf give him a tithe out of the choiceſt of the ſpoils which he took in the victory over the Kings. a.

5. And verily they that are of the ſons of Levi, who receive the office of the Prieſthood, have a commandment to take tithes of the [b] people according to the Law, that is, of their brethren, though they come out of the loins of Abraham.]

5. Now the Levitical Prieſts had commiſſion by Law to receive tithes of all Jews, that came from Abraham, as Levi did, i.e. from their own Countrymen. b.

6. But he whoſe deſcent is not counted from them, received tithes of Abraham, and bleſſed him that had the promiſes.]

6. But Melchiſedek, who was no kin to to Abraham, not of that people, a ſtranger to him, received tithes from him, (which is an argument of greater dignity, then to receive it onely from his own people) and bleſſed him who was ſo ſpecial a favorite of Gods, as to receive promiſes of ſuch a nature, ſo oft repeated to him.

7. And this is a clear argument that Melchiſedek was a greater perſon then Abraham.

7. And without all contradiction, the leſſe is bleſſed of the better.]

8. And in the Levitical Law they that receive tithes, dye, ſucceed, and are ſucceeded, their ſucceſſion of one after the death of another is recorded in the Scripture, and ſo their death punctually ſet down, but in that place of Geneſis, Melchiſedek hath no other mention made of him, but that he liveth, no kind of mention of his death.

8. And here men that die receive tithes, but there he receiveth them, of whom it is witneſſed that he liveth.]

9. So again if you compare it, you ſhall find that Levi alſo, who under the Law hath the privilege of receiving all the tithes, did in Abraham's perſon (as the ſons are included in the parents) pay tithes to Melchiſedek, which ſhews again the dignity of that Prieſthood, above the Levitical.

9. And as I may ſo ſay, Levi alſo who receiveth tithes, paid tithes in Abraham.]

10. For Levi was in the loins of his great grandfather Abraham, and as it were included in him, and ſo may be ſaid in ſome ſenſe to have done what he did, and paid what he paid.

10. For he was yet in the loins of his father, when Melchiſedek met him.]

11. This is an argument that the Levitical Prieſthood was not ſo perfectly able to make a perfect expiation of ſin, (although it be true that it was inſtituted by the Law of God for that time) for if it were, there would then have been no need, as it ſeems there was, that God ſhould inſtitute another ſort of Prieſt, to wit, his own ſon, to be ſuch a Prieſt as Melchiſedek was, and not ſuch an one as Aaron.

11. If therefore perfection were by the Levitical Prieſthood (for * under it the people received the Law) † what farther need was there that another Prieſt ſhould * riſe after the order of Melchiſedek, and not be † called after the order of Aaron?]

* about that † What need now is there
* be raiſed
† named or ſaid

12,13. And the truth is, the Prieſthood being a thing about which the Moſaical Law was principally converſant, the changing of the Law about that, and tranſlating it to a Tribe, or family, that of Judah, and David, of which none by the Law were to be Prieſts, is an evidence that the Law is aboliſhed, and conſequently that neceſſity of legal obſervances, or continuing in all the words of that Law, and of the Moſaical yoke.

12. For the Prieſthood being * changed, there is made alſo of neceſſity, a † change of the Law.

13. For he of whom theſe things are ſpoken, pertaineth to another Tribe, of which no man gave attendance at the altar.]

* tranſlated † tranſlation

14. Now this is clear by our Saviours being of the Tribe of Judah, a Tribe from whence the Prieſts were not to come.

14. For it is evident that our Lord ſprang out of Judah, of which Tribe Moſes ſpake nothing concerning Prieſthood.]

15. And more clear by the diſtinct words concerning him, of his being ſuch a Prieſt as Melchizedek was, not as Aaron.

15. And it is yet far more evident, for that after the ſimilitude of Melchiſedek * there ariſeth another Prieſt,]

* another Prieſt is raiſed up

16. For by that it is manifeſt, that Chriſt who is now our Prieſt, and inſtalled to it after his reſurrection, was not made a Prieſt by any Law that provides for the mortality of Prieſts, and ſo appoints them in a ſucceſſion, as the Aaronical Prieſthood was, but by that Spirit, that powerfully raiſed him from the dead, never to dy again, and ſo to be a Prieſt for ever.

16. Who is made not after the Law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an † endleſſe life.]

† indiſſoluble

17. According as the Pſalmiſt teſtifieth, Thou art a Prieſt for ever &c.

17. For he teſtifieth, Thou art a Prieſt for ever after the order of Melchiſedek.]

18. And indeed that this Moſaical Law was aboliſhed, and the Levitical Prieſthood changed, and Chriſt made a Prieſt after the order of Melchiſedek, and not after that of Aaron, was neceſſary, becauſe the Law could not make the comers to God perfect, and ſo could not ſave them, and therefore it was fit it ſhould be changed for a better, which could do it. And this Law of Moſes, or Levitical Prieſthood, could not do it, becauſe it was not able to give ſtrength to the obſervers of it to keep it, and ſo could not procure pardon for the tranſgreſſors of it, but left them under the curſe of it, and therefore was to be changed for a better, which could do both.

18. For there is verily a diſannulling of the commandment going before, for the weakneſſe and unprofitableneſſe thereof.

Law ſhould be evacuated, there was reaſon, becauſe it was ſo unable and uneffectual to doe that which was deſigned, viz. the expiating of, or cleanſing from ſin.

19. For the Moſaical Law got no man any freedome from ſin, was able to give no man ſtrength to fulfil the will of God, and could not purchaſe pardon for any that had broken it. This therefore was to be done now afterwards by the Goſpel, which gives more ſublime and plain promiſes of pardon of ſin, which the Law could not promiſe, of an eternal and heavenly life, to all true penitent beleivers, which gracious tenders now made by Chriſt, give us a freedome of acceſſe to God, and confidence to come and expect ſuch mercies from him, to lift up pure hands &c. 1 Tim. 2. 8. and in all reaſon we are to make that uſe of it, and not to fall off from Chriſt to Moſaical obſervances.

19. For the Law made nothing perfect, but the † bringing in of a better hope did, by the which * wee [c] draw nigh unto God.]

c. * ſuperinducing of better † or let us, for the King's MS. reads

20,21,22. And 'tis likewiſe added by the Pſalmiſt, that God ſware, and will not repent, interpoſed his oath in this matter, which is an argument of the immutability and weighineſſe of the matter, and of the eternal continuance of this Prieſthood of Chriſt, and ſo of the prehemineſce of it beyond the Aaronical, which was not eſtabliſhed by God by oath, And ſo as much as a durable, immutable, eternal Prieſthood, is more excellent then a tranſitory, mutable, finite Prieſthood (ſuch as the Levitical, being fixt in mortal perſons, one ſucceeding the other, and ſuch as was it ſelf mortal, not to laſt any longer, then the coming of Chriſt) ſo much was that Covenant, wherein Chriſt was Sponſor, and Surety for God, that it ſhould be made good to us on Gods part (on condition we performed that which was required of us) viz. the Covenant confirmed to us by Chriſt in the Goſpel, a better Covenant then the Covenant of the Law, wherein Moſes undertook for God to us.

20. And inaſmuch as not without an oath he was made Prieſt,

21. (For thoſe Prieſts were made without an oath, but this with an oath, by him that ſaid unto him, The Lord ſware and will not repent, Thou art a Prieſt for ever after the order of Melchiſedek)

22. By ſo much was Jeſus made a ſurety of a better * Teſtament.]

* Covenant

23. And

23. And they truly were many prieſts, becauſe they were not ſuffered to continue by reaſon of death.] 24. And the Levitical prieſts are a number of men ſucceeding one another, by whom proviſion is made for the mortality of the men, which otherwiſe will bring it to an end.

* a prieſthood that paſſeth not away † perpetuity or ἀπαράβατον

24. But this man, becauſe he continueth ever, hath *and unchangeable prieſthood.] 24. But Chriſt being now no longer mortal, hath no ſucceſſor in his prieſthood, his prieſthood paſſes not from him to any other. d.

25. Wherefore he is able alſo to ſave them to † the uttermoſt, that come unto God by him, ſeeing he ever liveth to make interceſſion for them.] 25. By all which evidences it appears, to our preſent comfort, that he living for ever can intercede for ever for us, beſtow on us whatever we ſtand in need of, and ſo from time to time relieve and ſuccour againſt all temptations thoſe that are true ſincere Chriſtians, that ſerve Chriſt with all their hearts, that adhere conſtantly to him.

* free from evil, undefilable, ἄκακος, ἀμίαντος

26. For ſuch an high prieſt became us, who is holy, * harmleſſe, undefiled, ſeparate from ſinners, and made higher than the heavens;] 26. And ſuch was a ſort of high prieſts, that we ſinfull weak creatures had need of, one that being mercifully diſpoſed, is alſo uncapable of ſuffering any hurt, of being defiled or corrupted, or conſequently of dying, v. 25. and to that end is advanced to a pitch above our ſinfull, corruptible condition here;

27. Who needeth not † daily, as thoſe high prieſts, to offer up ſacrifice firſt for his own ſins, and then for the peoples: for this he did once, when he offered up himſelf.] 27. Who hath no neceſſity oftentimes, as upon the great day of expiation once a year (ſee ch. 10. 11.) to offer ſacrifice firſt for his own, then for the peoples ſins, as the high prieſt did under the law. All that was neceſſary for him to doe, in proportion to thoſe offerings of the Levitical prieſt, was performed by him at once by his death upon the croſſe, by which he both offered for himſelf, i. e. made expiation as it were (not to deliver himſelf from ſin, for he was never guilty of any, but from the infirmities aſſumed by him, but eſpecially from death it ſelf, and ſo is now never likely to die, and determine his Melchiſedek-prieſthood) and for others alſo, offered one ſacrifice for the ſins of the whole world, which will ſerve turn without ever repeating it again.

28. For the law maketh men high prieſts, which have infirmity, but the word of the oath which was ſince the law, maketh the Son who is conſecrated for evermore.] 28. For the Levitical Law makes ſuch men prieſts and none elſe, which are ſubject to mortality, But the oath of God, Pſal. 110. concerning the immutable prieſthood, makes Chriſt the chief prieſt, whoſe life, and ſo whoſe prieſthood was never to determine, whoſe offering for himſelf, i. e. for the putting off his infirm, mortal body, was complete at that once, and needed never to be offered again by him, any more than the ſame offering of his, as it was for the ſins of the world, ſee ch. 10. 11, 12.

Notes on Chap. VII.

2. Ἀκροθίνια

The true notion of ἀκροθίνια will be beſt diſcerned by conſidering the parts of it, θῖνες, and ἄκρα; θῖνες ſignifies properly ζωγοὶ, heaps whether of ſand or corn, or any other goods, And Phavorinus obſerves that in the feminine gender it ſignifies (from that of heaps of ſand) αἰγιαλὸς, the ſea ſhore, but in the maſculine it is taken for χρημάτων ἢ λίθων, an heap of goods or ſtones, and the like, ſo again ſaith he, p. 110. θῖνες δὲ εἰσὶν οἱ ζωγοὶ τῶν πυρῶν ἢ κριθῶν, the word ſignifies heaps of wheat or barley (where by the way the ἢ πᾶσα ἀπαρχὴ that follows in the author, muſt not be taken as an interpretation of θῖνες, but ſubjoined to ἀπαρχὴ τῶν θινῶν before, and accordingly the punctation muſt be altered from what it is in the printed copie, thus, Ἀπαρχὴ τῶν θινῶν (θῖνες δὲ εἰσὶν οἱ ζωγοὶ τῶν πυρῶν ἢ κριθῶν) ἢ πᾶσα ἀπαρχὴ) Then for the word ἄκρα it ſignifies the top or prime, or choiſe part of any thing (as ἀκρόδρυα are the prime part of the trees, viz: the fruits upon them, οἱ ἀχρεῖοι δενδρεῶται) And then theſe two put together in compoſition, are the prime, or chief part of whatſoever it is that is meant by θῖνες, and what that is particularly in any place, the matter ſpoken of muſt determine: Thus when the notion of θῖνες is that of corn or fruits &c. then ἀκροθίνια are in the Grammarians αἱ ἀπαρχαὶ τῶν καρπῶν the prime or choice of the fruits or firſt fruits, ſuch as among all men were wont to be conſecrated to the Gods (not in order of time the firſt that are gathered, but) for quality the faireſt or beſt of the heap; So when the notion of θῖνες is the heaps of goods taken in warre, τὰ ἀπὸ τῶν πολεμίων, be it gold or other pillage, χρυσία, or σκῦλα, then the ἀκροθίνια are the prime and choice of thoſe, ἀπαρχαὶ λαφύρων the prime part of the prey, which generally was dedicated and preſented to God (ſuch as is mentioned 1 Sam. 15. 21. under the title of the chief things of the ſpoil, ſheep and oxen &c. to ſacrifice unto the Lord in Gilgal) And this is by Herodotus, Thucydides, Xenophon, and Eurypides called ἀκροθίνια. And there is a memorable place in Arrian's Κυνηγετ: χρὴ, ſaith he, ὅτι θήρᾳ ἀρχὰς ἀπὸ θεῶν &c. τῇ ἀπαρχὰς ἀλισκομένων ἀναθήσας, ἢ μεῖον ἢ ἐν τῇ τῶν πολέμων ἀκροθίνια, Men ought in hunting to begin frō the Gods, and to preſent to them the firſt fruits of what they have taken, no leſſe then in a victory in war, the chief of the ſpoils. So when θὶν ſignifies the ſea-ſhore, then ἀκροθίνια are the prime of thoſe rarities ἃς ἀναθήσειν οἱ ἐξ ἠπείρου, which the merchants, when they return from a voyage, offer up, as ἀναθήματα to the Gods. From theſe ſo many notations of the word, it comes not onely to ſignifie any or each of theſe, but in general, πᾶσα ἀπαρχὴ, all the prime or choice of any kind, but this καταχρηστικῶς, ſaith he, by way of abuſe, not in the firſt propriety. Agreeably hereunto, δεκάτη τῶν ἀκροθινίων] will here ſignifie a tithe or tenth given to Melchiſedek, as to the prieſt of God (not of the ἀκροθίνια, a tenth part onely of them, for that were δεκάτη ἀκροθινίων, but) tenth of all, Gen. 14. 20. and that tenth paid ἐκ τῶν ἀκροθινίων, out of the choice or prime, or beſt of the ſtore, for that was wont to be pick'd out and dedicated to God. The whole difficulty then remaining will be, not whether he paid a full tithe of all the ſpoils, for that is already cleared by Geneſis, he gave him tithes of all, and by this chap. v. 2. δεκάτην ἀπὸ πάντων, a tithe from all, to which ἐκ τῶν ἀκροθινίων is added, not to deny what was before ſaid, but to ſpecifie, that this tithe of all was choſen out out of the beſt and choiſeſt, but, I ſay, the onely remaining difficulty will be, whether this tithe then paid by Abraham were of all his own poſſeſſions, and ſo that the notion of ἀπὸ πάντων v. 2. and paid tithes of all, Gen. 14. 20. or whether it were onely of the tithes of the ſpoils taken in that warre againſt the four Kings, and ſo that the notion of ἐκ τῶν ἀκροθινίων here. To which I anſwer 1. That there is little doubt but that ἐκ τῶν ἀκροθινίων here, and ἀπὸ πάντων ver. 2. referre to the ſame thing exactly, to wit, that which Gen. 14. 20. is called the tithe of all, and if that be the tithe of the ſpoils onely, then πάντα muſt be interpreted (with this reſtraint from the matter in hand) not all his own goods, but all that he had there with him, all that he had then acquired, all the ſpoils; Or if ἀκροθίνια ſhould ſignifie his other ſtore, his corn, and fruits at home (as, according to the notion of the word, 'tis clear it may doe) then πάντα ſhall ſignifie all his tithable poſſeſſions of any kind. But then 2. it muſt be conſidered that Abraham was not now at his own home, but in his return from the conqueſt over the Kings v. 1. and that, if it ſhould be doubted of, farther appears, becauſe Melchiſedek king of Salem came out to meet him, as a ſtranger in his paſſage, which ſignifies that he was then paſſing through Melchiſedek's dominions; And he, i. e. Melchiſedek, brought him forth bread and wine, Gen. 14. 18. not offered bread and wine to God, as ſome would have it, but, ſaith Cyril of Alexandria, ἐξήνεγκεν αὐτῷ brought it out to Abraham; And Philo Judæus mentions this act of Melchiſedek as an act of bounty and hoſpitality, oppoſite to what Amalek after did to Iſrael, Amalek, ſaith he, met not Iſrael with bread and water, but Melchiſedek met Abraham with bread and wine, and preſented it to him, and bleſſed him. And Joſephus, Ἐχορήγησε ὁ Μελχιζεδέκης τῇ Ἀβραάμου στρατιᾷ ξένια, καὶ πολλὴν ἀφθονίαν τῶν ἐπιτηδείων παρέχει, καὶ δεῖπνα καὶ εὐωχίαν ἄντικρυς τε ἐπαινεῖν ἤρξατο, καὶ τὸν θεὸν εὐλογεῖν ἐπευχόμενος αὐτῷ ποιήσαντα τοὺς ἐχθροὺς, He brought forth gifts, and abundance of victuals to Abrahams army, and at the feaſt began to commend Abraham, and bleſs God that had ſubdued his enemies. All agreeing to make this bringing forth bread and wine to Abraham an act of regal liberality in that King of Salem toward that ſtranger or paſſenger, as his bleſſing him was of his prieſtly office. And therefore 3^dly, it cannot be imagined that Abraham had all his poſſeſſions there with him, at that time, but onely the ſpoils which his conqueſt had afforded him, and nothing elſe, unleſſe there were ſome ſmall remainders left of proviſion, which he had carried out for his march. Nay 4^thly, the manner of paying tithes being not ordinarily thus, that a man ſhould give the tenth of all his poſſeſſions, but onely the tenth of his increaſe, much leſſe that he ſhould give a tenth of that all, whenſoever, or as oft ſoever, as he meets a prieſt, but onely at the time of harveſt, or whenſoever he receives from God's hand any kind of encreaſe, It will not appear reaſonable that Abraham ſhould at this time pay to Melchiſedek a tithe of all his poſſeſſions, not indeed of any thing, but what he had now reaped by way of harveſt, i. e. of the increaſe that God's proſpering hand had given him in the victory over thoſe Kings. And of that it is, that it is here ſaid he preſented the tithe to Melchiſedek, and having done that, and allowed a portion to them that went with him, Gen. 14. 24. he reſtored all the reſt (but what was eaten in the warre v. 24.) to the King of Sodome, from whom it had formerly been taken, and ſo the truth is, Of the whole tithe, which Abraham gave Melchiſedek, no part was of his own poſſeſſions, but onely of the King of Sodome's goods, which Abraham had taken, as lawfull repriſal from the four Kings, on whom he avenged the cauſe of his nephew Lot, and the King of Sodome, formerly conquered by them. All which notwithſtanding, it ſtill ſtands good in the 5^t place that Abraham did pay full tithe, and that of the choiſeſt of this increaſe of his, i. e. of the ſpoils taken in that warre, and that will be a ſufficient example and teſtimony of the cuſtome in Abraham's time of paying tithes to the Prieſt of all our increaſe, of what kind ſoever it is. Though that this was paid to a Prieſt of another countrey, ver. 6. was a peculiar dignity and honour to Melchiſedek, as 'tis there intimated, the due being onely to receive tithes of their own countrey-men, ver. 5.

Τὸν λαὸν here ſignifies the Jewes, that people, called oft τὸ ἔθνος the nation, and ὁ λαὸς the people, as when Caiaphas prophecies that it was expedient that one man ſhould die for the people, and that the whole nation periſh not, and many the like, And ſo here, with an addition, ὁ λαὸς κατ' ἐξοχὴν ὁ νόμων, the people that were under the Moſaical law, i. e. punctually the Jewes. And this is more probable than that κατ' ἐξοχὴν νόμων ſhould belong to ἀποδεκατῶν, tithe according to the law, for that had been ſaid before in ἐντολὴν ἔχουσι, they have commandement, and needed not again be ſo ſuddenly repeated, and 2^dly, the τουτέστι, that is, that follows, ſeems to ſet τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς αὐτῶν, their brethren, as an interpretation of what went immediately before, which cannot be of the κατ' ἐξοχὴν νόμων ἀποδεκατῶν, tithe according to law, but will very readily be ſo of the ὁ λαὸς κατ' ἐξοχὴν νόμων, the people according to law, in this notion of it, that people to which the law was given, the legal people, the people of the Jewes. b. ὁ λαὸς καθ' ὁ νόμος

What is the importance of ἐγγίζων here, will appear by the Hebrew קרב which ſignifies promiſcuouſly to draw nigh, and to offer. From it comes the ordinary word Corban, which the Evangeliſts render a gift, viz. that which is preſented and conſecrated to God in the Temple, and the place where the offerings were laid up, was alſo called by that name, and τὰ δῶρα gifts, Lu. 21. 4. So קָרְבָּן ſignifies alſo both to draigh nigh, and to offer. From the firſt notion of it the word ἐγγὺς neer ſeems to be derived, the conſonants or radicals in both being the ſame, and accordingly 'tis fitly rendred by ἐγγίζω to draw neer. So Exod. 19. 22. Οἱ ἐγγίζοντες ἱερεῖς Κυρίῳ the Prieſts that draw nigh to the Lord, and Lev. 21. 21. οὐκ ἐγγιεῖ τοῦ προσφέρειν θυσίας, He ſhall not draw nigh to offer ſacrifices. And this and the other ſignification of the Hebrew words are here both conteined under the word ἐγγίζω to draw nigh, which is here anſwerable to either of thoſe Hebrew, For that is the meaning of it here, that we by our high Prieſt Chriſt are made a kind of Prieſts our ſelves, enabled to draw nigh to God, and offer up our ſelves to him, to preſent our bodies to him a living ſacrifice, Rom. 12. 1. to lift up pure hands, 1 Tim. 2. 8. i. e. to c. Ἐγγίζειν Κύριον τὰ δῶρα

doe as the Priests were wont to do. This the vulgar Latine seems to have considered, when he renders ἱερεύειν here offerre, to offer, not, as Lucas Brugensis conjectures, as if he had read ἀναφέρειν, but out of the exact critical notation of the word and ἀναφέρειν among these writers and the translators of the Old Testament.

d. That ἀπαράβατον here signifies that which doth not passe from father to son, from one successor to another, is upon the nature of the word ἀπαραβατὸς transire, to passe, and so they are the words of Athanasius concerning Christ, ἀπαράβατον ἔχει τὸν ἱερατεύειν, he hath a pontificate or Priesthood that passeth not away, or doth not go by succession to others.

CHAP. VIII.

Paraphrase.

1. NOw of the things which we have spoken, this is the summe: We have such an high Priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the Heavens,]

1. Now to recapitulate all that we have said in this matter of Christs being our high Priest, The high Priest which intercedes for us Christians, is one that is entred into Heaven, and there sits at the right hand of God, i. e. reigns there, hath all power given unto him, and so is a King and Priest together, actually bestowes upon us all those things, for which he intercedes for us, grace and pardon to all obedient sincere Christians, and is able and ready to help us in time of need,

2. A Minister of the Sanctuary, and of the true Tabernacle, which the Lord * pitched, and not man.]

* hath built ἔπηξεν

2. One that ministers and officiates in his Church, that hath the ordering of the true, not typical, figurative Temple, and Tabernacle, that which is not built by humane workmen, but by God, (all power being given unto him in Heaven and in Earth, having dominion instated on him over his Church to deliver them, and over his enemies to destroy them.)

3. For every high Priest is ordained to offer gifts and sacrifices: wherefore it is of necessity, that this man have somewhat also to offer.]

3. A Minister, I say, for so every Priest is, his business being peculiarly to sacrifice, and offer burnt-offerings, and sin-offerings &c. c. 5. 1. and agreeably Christ was to have some sacrifice to offer to God as a Priest, and that was himself presenting himself in Heaven, the true Sanctuary, after the slaying him upon the crosse, c. 9. 12.

† should not have been οὐκ ἂν

4. For if he were on earth, he † should not be a Priest, * seeing that there are Priests that offer gifts according to the Law,]

* Those being Priests ἱερέων

4. And for his being a minister not on Earth onely, but now more especially in Heaven, and there exercising his Priesthood, 'tis clear, because here on Earth, there be store of Priests which officiate according to the prescription of the Mosaical Law, viz. those that offer the Levitical sacrifices, and so there is no need that Christ should take that office upon him, if it were to be exercised onely here, because that legally belongs to others.

5. Who † serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things, as Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the Tabernacle. For see, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the Mount.]

5. And those Priests which officiate here on Earth, do attend on and perform none but that figurative typical service, which signified and represented this offering of Christ, presenting himself to God in Heaven, and there interceding for us; (So that that which was by God himself said to Moses, when he was to make the Tabernacle, that he should take care to make it according to the pattern shewed him in the Mount, may fitly be applied by way of accommodation to this matter, This offering of Christ's in Heaven, being indeed that substantial idea, of which all the service of the Tabernacle was but a type or shadow, and so fitly styled an heavenly pattern.)

6. But now hath he obtained a more excellent Ministery, by how much also he is the Mediatour of a beter covenant, which was * established upon better promises.]

6. But as for Christs office or Ministery, that he thus exerciseth, it is above that of the Levitical Priests, which consisted onely in typical observances, and as much above them, as the Covenant which Christ mediated between God and man, was above the Mosaical œconomy: Of this Covenant it is observable, 1. That is is now settled as a Law, in which both parties are mutually bound to each other, God to man, and man to God; and 2. That it is a much more excellent, perfect, beneficial Covenant, then the former, The duties now required more spiritual and sublime, and the promises now proposed, infinitely better promises, then those which were under the Law, (viz. not onely legal impunity, which the sacrifices under the Law yeilded, but pardon and remission, that pardon not onely for light faults, sins of error &c. for which those sacrifices were designed, but even for wilful sins, if forsaken and repented of, yea and the pouring out the Spirit on all flesh, giving spiritual gifts for the building up of the Church, not onely to a few, as to one or two Prophets under the Law, but to many, even to all, Gentiles as well as Jews, yea to all Christians in some measure; and Lastly, in stead of the promises of a temporal Canaan, the plain promises of eternal life and blisse.)

7. For if that first covenant had been faultlesse, then should no place have been sought for the second.]

7. For if the Covenant under the law had been so perfect, that it could not have been improved or bettered, there would have been no need of a second Covenant.

† he saith to them αὐτοῖς λέγει

8. For finding fault † with them, he saith, Behold, the dayes come, (saith the Lord) when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and the house of Judah;

8,9. Which appears by this, because when he speaks in the Prophet Hieremy c. 31. 32. of making a new Covenant, he doth it by way of complaint, or finding fault with the weaknesse and imperfection of the former, (see c. 7. 18.) after this manner, or form of speech, The Covenant which I will now make, is not after the rate of the Covenant, which I made with the Israelites by Mo-

9. Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Ægypt, * because they continued not in my Covenant, and I * regarded them not, saith the Lord.]

ſes (a Covenant made up of external carnal commandments) when I brought them out of Ægypt, for that was not effectual to them, was not able to attract them to obedience, or perſeverance, but they fell off from me, and conſequently I forſook them, ſaith the Lord.

10. But this is the Covenant, which I will make in the latter dayes, or age of

10. For this is the Covenant that I will make with the houſe of Iſrael after thoſe dayes, ſaith the Lord, I will put my Laws into their mind, and write them † in their hearts, And I will be to them a God, and they ſhall be to me a people.] † or on the Meſſiah, in time of the Goſpel, I will in ſtead of thoſe external carnal ordinances and obſervations, give them ſpiritual commands for the regulating their affections, precepts moſt perfectly agreeable to all rational minds, and by the exceeding greatneſſe of that grace and mercy, in this and many other particulars, v. 12. I ſhall incline their affections willingly to receive my Law, as well as convince their underſtandings of their duty, and ſo I will take pleaſure in them, and they ſhall perform obedience unto me, live like a people of God, worthy of ſuch a Leader.

what they are to do, as under Moſes Law, (which conſiſted of many outward performances, which had no ſuch inward eſſential goodneſſe in them, as that a mans own reaſon ſhould prompt him to them, and approve them as beſt and moſt excellent, if they were not taught by the Law-maker, and kept ſtill in their minds by inſtruction in the Law) but the precepts now propoſed being ſo agreeable to humane reaſon, they ſhall be found written by every man in his own heart (as it were) able of themſelves to approve themſelves to men, ſee Deut. 30. 11.

promiſe and aſſurance of pardon, for all forſaken ſins, as alſo for frailties and weakneſſes daily continuing upon us. For in all reaſon ſuch a covenant as this, giving us aſſurance of ſuch gracious uſage, will have great efficacy to move any man to devote himſelf wholly to Gods ſervice, that eaſie and bleſſed yoke.

13. And this form of ſpeech, A new covenant, is an argument that the former was old, and an evidence, that ſo indeed that legal Covenant or Moſaical Law was, and being now perfectly old and decaied, 'tis not likely to live long, but, with the Jewiſh Church and Common-weal, within few years (within ten after the writing of this Epiſtle) 'tis ſure enough to bee deſtroyed.

13. In that he ſaith, A new covenant, he hath made the firſt old: now that which decaieth and waxeth old, is ready to vaniſh away.]

a. Ἠμέλησα αὐτῶν.

This whole place, being by this Writer cited out of Jeremy, c. 31. 32. ſome difficulty there will be to accord this part of the citation [ἠμέλησα αὐτῶν, I regarded them not] with that which we now find in the Hebrew there; For the words בְּעָלְתִּי בָם as our Hebrew copies now read, ſignifie [ἐκυρίευσα αὐτῶν, I ruled over them] which is very far diſtant both from the deſigned ſenſe of that place, if we will judge by the context, and from the words [I regarded them not] as they are here recited. The unfitneſſe of thoſe words in that place in the Prophet, is viſible to any reader, that obſerves the words immediately precedent, [which my Covenant they brake] to which theſe other cannot connect (but rather the contrary) [and I ruled over them, or, I was their Lord] Here our Engliſh have put [husband] for [Lord] and [although] for [and] and yet farther altered it in the margent [ſhould I have continued an husband unto them?] by way of interrogation; which as it makes the ſenſe directly contrary to what it would be, without the interrogation, ſo it is a confeſſion, that that contrary ſenſe is (in the truth) it, which alone is agreeable to the place. It is therefore far more reaſonable to conſider, that the words which are here recited in this Author, and are exactly agreeable to the context in the Prophet, (which is deſigned to ſet down the Iſraelites breaking of Covenant, and Gods dealing with them by way of puniſhment) are the very words, by which the Greek Tranſlator had rendred that place in the Prophet, which makes it neceſſary to conclude, that the Hebrew Copy now, is in this particular varied from what it was when they tranſlated it. That all Copies tranſcribed from hand to hand, ſhould be ſubject to ſome light changes, is nothing ſtrange, Nay, 'tis evident by comparing 2 Kin. 20. 12. with Eſay 39. 1. that ſuch miſtakes have been committed, for there in a ſtory, which in both thoſe places is exactly the ſame, we now read בְּרֹאדָךְ Berodach in the former place, and מְרֹדָךְ Merodach in the latter, which muſt needs be imputed to the hand of the Scribe, and not to any other Original. So in the ſame ſtory, in the very next verſe, 2 Kin. 20. 13. we read וַיִּשְׁמַע And Hezekiah heard, or hearkned, but Iſai. 39. 2. it is וַיִּשְׂמַח And Hezekiah was glad of them, where the light change of ח into ע is viſibly the error of the Scribe. And ſo the eighteenth Pſalm, which was certainly delivered by David in one fixt, certain form, is yet varyed in many particulars, 2 Sam. 22. which cannot be imputed to any cauſe, but that of the Tranſcribers; and the Maſorites pains, coming long after theſe changes were come in, can give no ſecurity or fence againſt them. And then there will be no reaſon to doubt, but that thus it hath happened in that place of Jeremy, which is here recited. Accordingly Hugo Grotius conceives it apparent, that the Septuagint read it בחלתי, not בעלתי, and accordingly rendred it ἠμέλησα, I forſook, them, regarded them not, continued not my defence unto them, but permitted them to be often worſted by their enemies; but Mr Meade ſuppoſeth it to have been נעלתי (which is as light an alteration, only ב for נ, as in the other ע for ח) which is alſo ἠμέλησα ἀφέστης, ἐβδελύξω, I neglected them, departed from them, deteſted or abomin'd & accordingly forſook them. Other examples of this nature we have in the New Teſtament, wch may here fitly be taken notice of, Mat. 15. 9. We have theſe words Καὶ μάτην σέβονταί με διδάσκον- Μάτην σέβο- νται με.

τῶν διδασκαλίας ἐντάλματα ἀνθρώπων, In vain they worship me teaching doctrines the ordinances of men. This verse is taken out of Isa. 29. 13. where yet the Hebrew reading now, וַיִּתּוּרֵנִי יִרְאָתָם אֹתִי מִצְוַת אֲנָשִׁים מְלֻמָּדָה hath nothing that can be duly rendred [καὶ μάτην and in vain] But by the Septuagint there, (and the Evangelist here) it it to be beleived, that it was otherwise read, when they so rendred it; and if for וַיִּתּוּרֵנִי in the beginning of the verse we read וַיְתוֹרוּ and onely change the points of the last word, without change of any letter, and read מְלַמְּדֵי, docent, teaching, in stead of מְלֻמָּדָה taught, it will then be exactly, as the Septuagint render, and the Evangelist cites it from them; For that תּוּר signifies [μάτην in vain] appears by the use of it in that sense, Isa. 45. 18, & 19. & c. 49. 4. and from thence it is, that the Idols are oft in this Prophet called תֹּהוּ vanity. So Mat. 27. 9, 10. we have these words cited out of Jeremy the prophet, Καὶ ἔλαβον τὰ τριάκοντα ἀργύρια, καὶ ἔδωκαν αὐτὰ εἰς τὸν ἀγρὸν τοῦ κεραμέως καθὰ συνέταξέ μοι Κύριος. Wherein there are many difficulties. As first, how these words come to be cited out of Jeremy, which are found in Zachary onely. But that may be salved, either by saying, that this was first in Jeremy's prophecie (somewhat of his, not now extant, but by tradition delivered down to have been originally his) and afterward in Zacharie's, according to a saying of the Jewes, that the spirit of Jeremy rested on Zachary, or else by affirming, that those latter (the 10, 11, 12.) chapters of Zachary were really the prophecies of Jeremy, though, as other mens Psalmes are annext to David's, and Agur's Proverbs to Solomon's, so these chapters of Jeremy's prophecie (perhaps coming not to light till after the captivity) are affixed to the former chapters of Zachary. A second difficulty there is, how ἔλαβον and ἔδωκαν, they received and gave] can here connect with συνέταξέ μοι the Lord commanded me. And that may be answered also by observing that ἔλαβον being answerable to וָאֶקַּח in the Hebrew, must necessarily be rendred in the first person singular, I received, not in the third plural, they, and consequently that the ν in ἔδωκαν] is to be lookt on as a mistake of the Scribe, (conceiving that ἔλαβον had been the third person plural, and so according this unto it) whereas both the Syriack in Matthew reads it I gave, and the Hebrew in Isaiah וְאֶשְׁלַח I gave, or sent. And that this must be so read appears by the μοὶ retained in all, as the Lord commanded (not them, but) me. But then there is a third difficulty, which can no way be salved, but by making use of the observation, which we are now upon, For in stead of those words in Matthew [καθὰ συνέταξέ μοι Κύριος, according as the Lord appointed me] the Hebrew reads in Zachary בֵּית יְהוָה the house of the Lord, and the Septuagint agrees, with a little change (the addition of εἰς into) εἰς τὸν οἶκον Κυρίου, into the house of the Lord, rendring וְאֶשְׁלַח I gave or sent, (which belongs to laying down the price in the purchase of the field) καὶ ἐνέβαλον and I cast, as if it referred to the casting it down in the Temple. For salving of which, it must first be observed that the thing to which this prophecie is applied in Matthew, is the high priest's buying the potters field, v. 7. with that money, which Judas returned to them, ver. 3. casting it down in the Temple, v. 5. which accordingly they take up, λαβόντες, v. 6. which is an evidence that the testimony applied to that matter, must be interpreted of those high priests, represented prophetically in the first person singular, ἔλαβον I received, וָאֶקַּח and ἔδωκα, and I gave, or parted with them, אֶל הַיּוֹצֵר εἰς τὸ χωνευτήριον in the Septuagint, and εἰς τὸν ἀγρὸν τοῦ κεραμέως for the potters field. Secondly, the phrase בֵּית יְהוָה seems to be a mistake for somewhat else, and that Mr. Meade hath very probably conjectured to be (by an easie change of כ for ב, and ר for י) כְּמוֹ יְהוָה according to the word of the Lord, as the phrase is used Hest. 1. 8. & 15. and often in that book, and so that will be exactly rendred by the [καθὰ συνέταξέ μοι κύριος, according as the Lord appointed] And unlesse some such change be imagined, there will be no sense in the Hebrew, 1. because בֵּית יְהוָה, without any preposition before it, is to be rendred the house, not into the house of the Lord, and 2^dly, because the place, belonging to the high priest's buying the field, hath nothing to doe with Judas's casting down the money in the Temple, or house of the Lord, which act of his was precedent to the high priest's ἔλαβον, and ἔδωκα, taking, and giving that money for that purchase. Thus again Act. 15. 17. where we read Ὅπως ἂν ἐκζητήσωσιν οἱ κατάλοιποι τὸν ἄνθρωπον τὸν Κύριον, that the residue of men may seek the Lord, &c. the words are evidently taken out of Amos 9. 12. And yet there the Hebrew words, as now we read them, are quite another matter, לְמַעַן יִרְשׁוּ אֵת שְׁאֵרִית אֱדוֹם that they may possesse the remainder of Edom, And therefore, both by the Septuagints translation, and the citation in the Acts it must be resolved, that the Hebrew was then distant from what now we find in the copies, most probably thus לְמַעַן יִדְרְשׁוּ אָדָם שְׁאֵרִית אָדָם that the residue of men may seek the Lord, and all this by light changes of י for ד, ח for ת and ל and אָדָם Edom for אָדָם man or men, the singular number collective, being oft put for the plural. So when Amos 14. 2. we find in the Hebrew copie, which we now use, פָּרִים שְׂפָתֵינוּ the calves of our lips, but in the Greek translator, and from thence, Heb. 13. 15. καρπὸν χειλέων ὁμολογούντων, the fruit of our lips, there is little reason to doubt, but the antienter and true reading was פְּרִי (not פָּרִים) which signifies καρπὸς fruit. These examples all according in this matter (and many more discernible in the Old Testament, by comparing the Hebrew, as now we have it, with the Greek) make it very reasonable to receive this account, which hath here been given of [ἀναλόγως] on occasion of which these others have been here mention'd, because omitted in their proper places.

CHAP. XI.

1.* THen verily the † first covenant had also ordinances † of divine service, and a worldly sanctuary.]

* The first therefore † worships

1. That first covenant indeed had ceremonial lawes, peculiar waies of worshipping God, and a tabernacle 2 And first for the latter of them, (see Mat. 7.

note b.) the Tabernacle (that was a type of the whole world, of earth and heaven, this made by Moſes, but that by God, ch. 8. 2.) this conſiſted of two parts,

2. For there was a tabernacle made, the firſt wherein was the candleſtick, and the table, and the ſhew-bread; which is called the ſanctuary,]

2. For as this world conſiſts of two parts, this lower world, and the higheſt heavens, ſo alſo the Tabernacle had two regions in it, the firſt was called the Holies (or the Sanctuary) wherein was the candleſtick (with ſix branches, and one in the midſt to ſignifie the planets) and the bread, or twelve loaves ſet upon the table (to ſignifie the fruits of the earth, brought forth by that inſivening influence of the heavens, ſaith Philo.)

3. And after the ſecond veile, the Tabernacle which is called the holieſt of all,]

3. And the ſecond was a place of more ſanctity than the former, which was beyond the former, anſwerable to the place, where the oracle was in the former Temple, and is the image of the higheſt heaven,

4. Which had the golden cenſer, and the ark of the covenant overlaid round about with gold, wherein was the golden pot that had manna, and Aarons rod that budded, and the tables of the covenant,]

4. Having a golden cenſer, not alwaies kept in it, but carried in, when the prieſt went in, who was not to goe without incenſe, and the Arke covered round about with gold, and neer this the pot of Manna, and Aaron's rod, and in it the tables of the commandements, in reſpect of which it is called the ark of the covenant,

5. And over it the cherubims of [b] glory, ſhadowing the [c] mercy-ſeat:] of which we cannot now ſpeak particularly.

6. Now when theſe things were thus ordained, the prieſts went alwaies into the firſt tabernacle, accompliſhing the ſervice of God,]

6. And this being thus deſcribed, we may aſcend to the former things mentioned v. 1. the prieſts officiating, and the ſtatutes about that; And that ſervice of the prieſts was of two ſorts, the daily ſervice, and that was in the former outward part of the tabernacle.

7. But into the ſecond went the high prieſt alone once every year, not without blood, which he offered for himſelf, and for the [d] * errors of the people.] * ignorances

d. 7. But into the inner part of the tabernacle, or the holy of holies none entred but the high prieſt, and he onely one day in the year, on the faſt, or great day of expiation, and then alwaies he carried with him blood of calves and of goats, of calves to offer for himſelf, and of goats to offer for the people, (By which it appears that the offering of Chriſt which is anſwerable to this, is after his paſſion, performed at his going into heaven, which was ſignified by the holy of holies.)

8. The Holy Ghoſt this ſignifying, that the way into the holieſt of all was not yet made manifeſt, while as the firſt tabernacle was yet ſtanding.]

8. By which the Holy Ghoſt typically ſignified, that no man by the power of that firſt covenant could goe to heaven, or that the way to heaven was not there revealed, none being then admitted thither but the high prieſt once a year, who was a type of Chriſt; but now that that holy of holies is deſtroyed, and therewithall the Judaical law, there is now admiſſion, for all true Chriſtians or worſhippers of God, who now have promiſes and right to heaven, though till after death they are not admitted to their poſſeſſions.

9. † Which was a figure for the time then preſent, * in which † were offered both gifts and ſacrifices, that could not make him that did the ſervice perfect, as pertaining to the conſcience,]

And the parabolical, typical meaning of this will be applicable to thoſe of this time, that ſtill obſerve and contend for the obſervation of the Judaical forms of worſhip, and think it is ſtill in force; For all theſe performances will not be able to give any man confidence to pray to God, to bring any man to heaven, or to obtain for him the pardon of any wilfull or preſumptuous ſin in the ſight of God, to free him from any ſin that hath waſted his conſcience, or give him grace to purge himſelf from ſuch ſin (ſee note on 1 Joh. 3. b) nature of Covenants, which are among the Eastern Nations still signed with bloud, and of Testaments which are not in force till the Testators death, we read in the Law, that the ceremony of bloud was used in the sanction of the first Covenant, that under the Law.

18. And therefore agreeably to this

19. For when Moses had spoken every precept to all the people, according to the Law, he took the bloud of calves and of goats, with water and scarlet wooll, and hyssope, and sprinkled both the book, and all the people, by Moses recited to all the people according to Gods appointment, then, as it follows, Ex. 24. 6. he took &c. and sprinkled &c. (which noted this sanction of Covenants (as of Testaments by death) by the Ceremony of bloud and fore-signified the shedding of the bloud of Christ for the making of a new Covenant with us) course was, that all things that were purified should be purified by that ceremony of shedding bloud, and so in like manner, that when any sin was committed, a beast should be slain for a sacrifice, by way of confession that that sin deserved death.

23. And therefore the Law commanding that the Ta-beginning of the world have dyed many times) But in this, his presenting himself in the sight of God, his going to heaven to intercede for us, differs from the Priests going into the holy of holies, that Christ doth shed none but his own bloud, and that but once for all, and that now in this last age, (see Note on Mat. 24 c.) this close or shutting up of the Jewish state, on purpose to obtain pardon for whatsoever sins repented of, and to work reformation among us:

28. So Christ having yeilded up himself for a sacrifice for us, and so born our sins up to the crosse with him (dyed as our surety or proxy) shall doe this but once; When he comes again it shall be in another manner, he shall not come to this earth to dye again, but shall come in glory and power, (quite unlike that state, wherein he was, when he bare our sins) to the relieving and bestowing deliverance on those who expect and wait for him, and constantly adhere to his commands.

Notes on Chap. IX.

a. Πρώτη

That it must be read ἡ πρώτη the first] without σκηνὴ, tabernacle] will appear by the authority of antient MSS. (as, besides others taken notice of by other men, in an antient one in Magd. Col. Library in Oxon) and of the Syriack, and old Latine Translation, and of Saint Chrysostome, and the Greek Fathers, who read it not: And then there is little doubt but the Substantive to it must be διαθήκη Covenant, mentioned in the former chapter, and called ἡ πρώτη, the first, in the verse immediately preceding this, c. 8. 15. which antiently was conjoined with this, before the division into Chapters. Besides the addition of σκηνὴ tabernacle will not be very congruous, for then the tabernacle must be said to have in it τὸ ἅγιον κοσμικὸν the worldly holy, i. e. the tabernacle, as appears v. 3. where σκηνὴ tabernacle is called ἅγια ἁγίων the holy of holies. As for δικαιώματα ordinances, see Rom. 8. d. and λατρείας is in any reason to be taken not in the Genitive, but the Accusative plural, and so will note sacrifices and other institutions for Gods worship, which belonged to that Mosaical Covenant.

Λατρίαι

b. Δόξα

Δόξα, glory, is here set to signifie the Schechina, or appearing of God, which was wont to be by Angels, of which these Cherubims were the representations. See Note on Mat. 16. n. and on Mar. 1. a.

c. Ἱλαστήριον

The word Ἱλαστήριον is answerable to the Hebrew כפרת, Now the word כפר signifies two things, 1. to cover (and indeed the English word cover seems to come from it) and that either simply to cover, or to cover with pitch &c. and secondly, in Piel, to cleanse, expiate, and to be propitious: Hence it is rendred sometimes ἀσφαλτοῦν to plaster or cover with bitumen or pitch, and sometimes, most ordinarily, ἱλάσκομαι, ἐξιλάσκομαι, καθαρίζω, to propitiate or cleanse. And accordingly כפרת is rendred sometimes καταπέτασμα, a covering, Exod. 26. 36. sometimes ἱλαστήριον propitiatory, and ἱλαστήριον propitiatory, when the sense is καταπέτασμα, covering, see Note on Rom. 3. g. And so in this place, where it notes a part of the Ark, it must be taken in the notion of the Hebrew, and rendred in that sense of καταπέτασμα, covering, as 'tis Exod. 26. 34. and 30. 6. or as the Hebrew כפרת, if it had been here retained, would have imported.

d. Ἀγνοήματα

The word ἄγνοια, though it signifies peculiarly ignorance, yet is taken among the Greek Writers in the Old Testament for sinning indifferently. So Tob. 3. 3. Judith 5. 20. Eccles. 51. 26. 1 Mac. 13. 39. 2 Mac. 13. 37. Eccles. 23. 2. and 3 Mac. σύστημα μηδὲν ἠγνοηκὸς, a company that had not sinned against the King, according to the notion of the Hebrew שגה, which as it signifies ignoravit, erravit, ignorance, error, so also it signifies defecit, recessit, falling off, failing, and so here it signifies all those sins, for which there was allowed expiation and sacrifice under the Law, i. e. all sins but those of presumption, or will.

e. Ἁγιάζει

Ἁγιάζειν to sanctifie in this place, signifies to purifie, in the notion, that belongs to the Hebrew טהר, which is sometimes rendred καθαρὸς pure, sometimes ἅγιος holy, and accordingly καθαρὰ and ἅγια, impure and holy] are set opposite 1 Cor. 7. 14. So also the Hebrew קדש which is vulgarly ἁγιάζειν to sanctifie, is used for washing among the Jews, see note on 1 Cor. 7. d. Thus it appears to be used here, not onely by the κεκοινωμένους unclean or polluted, immediately precedent, and the καθαρότητα cleansing, or puritie, following, but by the evidence of the matter here spoken of, For that was the design of the legal sacrifice, bloud & ashes, to cleanse them that were legally polluted, which is the meaning of πρὸς τὴν τῆς σαρκὸς καθαρότητα for the cleansing of the flesh, i. e. to make them legally clean, such as might come into the congregation again, But this still in a metaphorical signification, as cleansing signifies expiation, or obtaining pardon of sin, freeing from the inconveniences, or Censures that belong'd to it. In this same sense the word is used c. 10. 10. Through which will we are sanctified, ἡγιασμένοι ἐσμὲν, i. e. our sins are expiated, through the offering of the body of Christ once for all, which v. 26. is expressed by another phrase, that he hath now once appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself.

Ἡγιασμένοι ἐσμὲν

What the word φέρειν] signifies here, will be best guest by the context, which looks to the validity of Wills and Testaments, and to the pleading of them in Law, to receive benefit from them; This is expressed, v. 17. by βεβαία and ἰσχύει, and of this it is sufficiently known in all Laws, what is here said, that as long as the Testator lives, there is no validity in his will, no pleading any thing from it, because voluntas est ambulatoria, say the Lawyers, a man as long he lives may change his will; In this sense may this 16. v. be thus interpreted, Ὅπου διαθήκη, where there is a Testament, i. e. where a Testament is produced or pleaded, or where a Testament is a Testament, or, to the confirming

f. Φέρεσθαι

firming of a Testament, to the proving of a will, ἀνάγκη, it is necessary, φέρεσθαι θάνατον τοῦ διαθεμένου, that the death of the Testator be brought, produced, alledged, brought into the Court, testimony brought of it, for otherwise the will will not be βεβαία firm, nor ἰσχύει of force, ὅτε ζῇ &c. as long as the Testator is alive, or as long as there is no constat of his death. Thus is the word φέρειν and φέρεσθαι used sometimes in the New Testament, in a forensical sense, as κατηγορίαν φέρειν, to bring an accusation, 1 John 18. 29. ῥήματα φέρειν, Act. 25. 7. to bring accusations or charges against any, and φέρειν κρίσιν to bring or enter a suit against one.

Ἀθετῶν properly signifies to frustrate, as ἀθετεῖν βουλὴν θεοῦ, to frustrate God's counsel, i. e. deprive it of (evacuate) the end of it, and so here Christ's death is ἀθέτησις ἁμαρτίας, depriving sin of its end or design, which was first to get us into its power, to reign in our mortal bodies, and then maliciously to bind us over to punishment eternal, from both which Christ's death was designed to redeem us, from living in sin, and from being punished for it, according to the two benefits of Christ's death, signified in the Sacraments, grace and pardon. * the good things. † by the same sacrifices every year κατ' ἐνιαυτὸν θυσίαις

1. For the Law having a shadow of * good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never † with those sacrifices, which they offered year by year continually, make the comers thereunto perfect.]

1. For the Mosaical Law, which contained no more then an imperfect shadow or rude first draught of those mercies made over to us by the Gospel, eternal life &c. and not the lively representation, or effigies of them, such as the Gospel now affords us, is no way able by sacrificing every year, as long as the temple lasts, bullocks and goats, i.e. by repeating often those same kinds of sacrifices, to work that great benefit for the worshippers, which the Gospel is designed to doe, viz. to give men full pardon of sin, and purifie their consciences.

* Sure they would have ceased, for many other copies read ἐπεὶ ἂν ἐπαύσαντο Certe leaving out ἂν, † a commemoration ἀνάμνησις

2. For then * would they not have ceased to be offered, because that the worshippers once purged, should have had no more conscience of sin.

2. For then they would not need to be offered again continually, when the work for which they were offered, were once wrought.

3. But in those sacrifices there is † again remembrance of sins made every year.]

3. Whereas now being only a commemoration of sins, not a purging them away, they are offered every year anew on the day of expiation, thereby commemorating not onely the sins committed that year, since the last day of expiation, but their former sins again, for which they had formerly sacrificed, at the the time of committing of them, and to typifie, that one true sacrifice of Christs, that alone is able to do the work for all our sins.

4. For it is not possible that the bloud of bulls and goats should take away sins.]

4. For the truth is, it is not in the power of any sacrifice of any beast to take away the guilt of sin, or purifie the conscience.

* thou hast not delighted in, καὶ ἐδοκίμασας † framed κατηρτίσω

5. Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he saith, Sacrifice and burnt-offering * thou wouldst not; but a body hast thou † prepared me.]

5. And therefore in the Prophetick Psalm concerning Christ's coming into the world, God's despising of those legal sacrifices is mentioned, and all that is thought fit to be depended on in order to obtaining pardon for sin, is the body of Christ, God giving him a body and designing that to crucifixion, fitting it for the Crosse, as the servants ear for the door-post, Deut. 15. 17. to which it was to be nailed, (on which ground of similitude it is, that in stead of opening or boaring my ear, in the Psalmist, 'tis here framing him or fitting him a body, see note on 2 Cor. 13. c.)

6. In burnt-offerings and sacrifices for sin thou hast had no pleasure.

6. And then hee adds in the name of Christ speaking to God his father, The offerings of legal sacrifices, I know, are not acceptable in thy sight, or able to reconcile thee to sinners.

7. Therefore I, i.e. Christ, come (according to what he had undertaken and bound himself by bond to his Father, in order to that great work of our redemption) to perform whatsoever thou my God shalt require of me.

* according to the Law κατὰ τὸν νόμον

8. Above, when he said, Sacrifice and offering, and burnt-offerings, and offering for sin, thou wouldst not, neither hast pleasure therein, which are offered * by the Law;]

8, 9. By which place of the Psalmist, Psal. 40. it is clear, that the sacrifices appointed by Moses's Law, are not of any force with God, but onely the sufferings and death of Christ, the first being in that place wholly renounced and disclaimed, and onely the second set up.

9. Then said he, Lo, I come to do thy will (O God:) He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second.]

† through which τῷ θελήματι * by διὰ τῆς

10. † By the which will we are sanctified*, through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all.]

10. And by this gracious will of God (which Christ came to perform, in the body, which God prepared for him, v. 5.) by offering that body once for all, and not by those legal sacrifices, which were oft repeated, all our sins are expiated, (see note on c. 9. c.) and we received into Gods favour, as many of us, as by performing the condition of sincere obedience, still required of us, are rendred capable of that great benefit purchased for us by the sufferings of Christ.

11. And every Priest † standeth * daily ministring and offering oftentimes the same sacrifices, which can never take away sins.]

11. Again, under the Law, the high Priest was wont every year once (see c. 7. 27.) on the great day of Expiation, to officiate and offer up yearly the same kinds of sacrifices, bullocks, &c. none of which have power to free the conscience from the guilt, or the offender from the punishment of sin.

12. But

12. But Christ having by his own death made one complete sacrifice, which will suffice for the sins of all the world, without need of repeating it, (sealing to all that shall ever live a covenant of mercy and remission upon repentance) hath ever since continued at the right hand of God, and shall doe so for ever,

12. But this man after he had offered one sacrifice for sins * for ever, sate down on the right hand of God,] * hath for continuance ἐκάθισεν εἰς τὸ διηνεκὲς see v. 14.

13. Exercising his regal office in mens hearts, and meaning to exercise it also over sin, and death it self, in abolishing or subduing them both in the resurrection.

13. † From henceforth expecting till his enemies be made his footstool.] † For the time to come τὸ λοιπὸν

14. For that one offering of his in his death hath done the whole work, once for all completely, for all obedient Christians, all sanctified disciples of his (that having the intercession of Christ in heaven, the sending the Spirit, &c. adjoyned with it, which are the grounds of furnishing us with all grace, &c.)

14. For by one offering he hath perfected forever them that are sanctified.]

15, 16, 17. And of this the scriptures of the Old Testament doe testifie, For after he had premised, as the first thing promised in his covenant, the writing his lawes in their hearts and on their minds, and revealing his will, and giving them his sanctifying grace for the reforming of their wicked lives, he then adds as a second part of his covenant, the free pardon of all the sins and transgressions of their former life, whatsoever they have been.

15. * Whereof the Holy Ghost also is a witnesse to us, for after that he had † said before,

16. This is the covenant that I will make with them after those daies, saith the Lord, I will put my lawes into their hearts, and * in their minds will I write them,

17. And their sins and iniquities will I remember no more.]

* And the holy Ghost also beareth us witnesse, Μαρτυρεῖ δὲ ἡμῖν καὶ τὸ † first said προειρηκέναι * upon τὸν

18. And this being done once for all, there is no need of any farther sacrifices, or Judaical observances, for which some of you doe so zealously contend.

18. Now where remission of these is, there is no more offering for sin.]

19. The doctrine then of the superlative excellence of Christ's priesthood, above the Mosaical, being thus evidenced, and the benefit of it being to us so great, even to give us liberty (see Joh. 7. 2.) to approach unto God in prayer, and apprehension of his promises, to have title to heaven it self, through what Christ hath purchased for us,

19. Having therefore, brethren, † boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus,] † liberty παῤῥησίαν

20. (Which confidence and liberty to enter he hath helped us to, by a way never known before, and that a clear or living way in opposition to the dead shadows and rudiments under the law, which, I say, he hath helped us to, by passing himself from the outer to the inner tabernacle, from this life to another, breaking through the veile or partition between them, i. e. through his flesh, being fain to die before he entred heaven)

21. And having an high priest over the house of God,]

22. Let us serve & worship him unfeignedly, being fill'd with faith (see note on Lu. 1. 2. & h.) and having reformed our wicked lives in sincere resolution of heart, (without which there is no more reception to be hoped for at God's hands, Isa. 1. 15. than under the law there was liberty to come into the congregation, for them that had touched any impure thing, till they were sprinkled with water by the priest) and having our actions washed and pure also,

22. † Let us draw neer with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water,] * Let us come to him in fulness of faith, Προσερχώμεθα ἐν πληροφορίᾳ

23. Let not all the afflictions and dangers that can approach us, move us so much as to waver in our Christian profession, which having the hope of eternal life joyned with it, is fortification enough against all the terrors of this world, having God's fidelity engaged to make good the promise to us.

23. Let us hold fast the profession of the * faith without wavering, (for he is faithfull that promised)] † hope ἐλπίδος

24. And let us weigh and consider all advantages that we can have upon one another, to provoke and excite one another to charity, and all actions of piety, (such as are joyning in the publick service, ver. 25.) whensoever we see any thing of fainting, or growing cold in any,

24. And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and unto good works,]

25. And not suffer our selves to proceed so farre toward defection, as to give over the publick assemblies (the forsaking of which is not onely deferring of the publick profession of Christ, but also of the means of growth in grace) but stirre up one another to the performance of this, and such other duties of confession toward Christ, by this argument among others, that now their deliverance from the persecutions which so discouraged them, is neer at hand, (by reason of the destruction of the enemies of the crosse, the Jews and Gnosticks, that have caused all these persecutions) which therefore would make it unreasonable for them now to give over their constancy, and lose all, when they are so near the end of their voyage, (see Rom. 13. 11. & Jam. 5. 7, 8.)

25. Not forsaking the assembling of our selves together, as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the [a] day approaching.]

2. a

26, 27. For if we obstinately commit such a sinne as this, defection from Christ, and forsaking Christianity (as they that forsake the publick assemblies are in danger to doe) after once receiving it (see note on Mat. 12. h.) there is no plea, or apologie of ignorance, or unwillingnesse for that; and consequently, as under the law no sacrifices are to be offered for such, nor ever any for Apostates, so now there is no way of remission, which will be profitable for such, all that is to be expected is the judgments and wrath of God, such as are like to be sent out speedily to utter destruction, against all such enemies of Christ, (see note on 2 Pet. 3. d. & Heb. 6. b.

v. 2. Ἡμέρα Χριστοῦ

The notion of ἡμέρα Χριστοῦ, the day of Christ, and ἡμέρα day, and παρουσία Χριστοῦ, coming of Christ, and βασιλεία Θεοῦ, kingdome of God, and many the like, signifying that famous deſtruction of the Jewes, hath been often mentioned. The other phraſes have been gathered together from their diſperſions through this book, note on *Mat.*3. c. *Mat.*24. b. c. &c. Now for this of ἡμέρα, day, or ἡμέρα Χριστοῦ, day of Christ, although ſomewhat hath been ſaid on Rom. 13. note d. yet now more fully it muſt be explained. The force of the phraſe may appear Zach. 14. 1. Behold the day of the Lord cometh, and I will gather all nations againſt Jeruſalem to battel, and the city ſhall be taken &c. and ſo in many places of the Old Teſtament, And accordingly in the New, Lu. 17. 24. The ſon of man ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ αὐτοῦ, in his day, i. e. when he comes to deſtroy Jeruſalem, ſo Mat. 24. 36. περὶ δὲ τῆς ἡμέρας ἐκείνης of that day and hour, i.e. the punctual time of this deſtruction (not of the day of the laſt judgment, but of ſomewhat that was to come in that age, v. 34.) knows no man, So Lu. 17. 30. ἡμέρᾳ the day wherein the Son of man ſhall be revealed, and v 31. ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ in that day, and c.19.40. ἡμέραι the daies ſhal come in which thy enemies ſhal caſt a trench, So *Act.*2. 20. ἡμέρα Κυρίου μεγάλη καὶ ἐπιφανὴς, the great and conſpicuous day of the Lord, from which none of the Jewes ſhould eſcape, but onely the beleivers, In which place, as 'tis cited out of Joel, 'tis obſervable, that there is firſt mention of the laſt daies v. 17. (which as the Jewes render the daies of the Meſſias, ſo Peter interprets the time after the reſurrection of Chriſt, in which the Spirit was poured out) then of this great day v.20. which is as it were ἐσχάτων ἐσχάτη the laſt of the laſt, fourty years after his reſurrection, in which Judæa was to be laid waſt, So 1 Cor. 1. 8. the day of the Lord Jeſus agreeable to the ἀποκάλυψις Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ, revelation of the Lord Jeſus, ver. 12. both of them denoting this time of judgment on unbeleivers, and deliverance of the faithfull; See alſo c.3.13. So 1 Theſſ. 5. as χρόνοι and καιροὶ times and ſeaſons, v.1. reſerre to this matter (as, the time is come, Ezech. 2. 7.) ſo ἡ ἡμέρα Κυρίου, the day of the Lord cometh as a thief (the ſame that is ſaid of it 2 Pet. 3. 10.) belongs to this matter alſo. So 2 Theſſ. 1. 10. In that day. So here ἐγγίζουσα ἡμέρα, the day approaching, as Lu. 21. 8. ὁ καιρὸς ἤγγικεν, the ſeaſon approacheth, or as Joel 2. 1. ὅτι ἐγγὺς ἡμέρα Κυρίου, ὅτι ἐγγὺς, the day of the Lord is come, it is nigh at hand. So the ἡμέρα διαυγάζουσα day dawning is that day of judgment to the Jewes, and deliverance to the beleivers among them, 2 Pet. 1. 19. (ſee note g.) And that this phraſe ſhould thus ſignifie, will not be ſtrange, when it is conſidered, that in all languages and idiomes, the word Day ſignifies judgment here on earth. So ἡμέρα 1 Cor. 3. 13. the day ſhall declare, i. e. the judgment, or trial, and ἀνθρωπίνη ἡμέρα, man's day, 1 Cor. 4. 3. i. e. the judgment of men, ſo dies in Latine, diem dicere, to implead, and in Engliſh a daies-man, an umpire or judge (ſee note on Mat. 3. c. & Mat. 24 b.) That this is the meaning of this place will appear by the ſcope of the place, which is, to comfort them which were ready to fall off from Chriſtianity, upon the continued perſecutions of the Chriſtians by the Jewes, among whom theſe Hebrew Chriſtians lived, as will appear in the ſtory, Act. 11. 19. & 1 Theſſ. 2. 14. the approach of whoſe deſtruction muſt conſequently be matter of comfort to them that had ſuffered long, and ſo of keeping them from falling away, (ſee note on Rom. 13. c.) and 2^dly, 'twill appear by the plain words that follow to this very purpoſe, to ſuſtain their patience v.37. Yet a little while and he that cometh, ὁ ἐρχόμενος, i.e. Chriſt, which hath promiſed to come to their puniſhment, and your relief, will come (and that notes this particular, the deſtruction of the Jewes, which is called his coming, Mat. 24.) καὶ ὁ χρόνος, and he will not tarry, that notes the ἐγγίζειν, the approach of that day. And to this purpoſe to confirm men in patient expectation of this, without all diſheartning by the delay, follow all thoſe examples of faith c. 11. in which it appears that many depended by faith on performances of promiſes to their poſterity, which were never performed to themſelves perſonally, and ſo might very well fortifie the Hebrewes for an expectation of a farre ſhorter time, it being now very neer at hand. The ſame is expreſſed, when it draws nigher at hand, by ἐγγὺς ὥρα 1 Joh. 2. 18. the laſt houre.

What is meant by this phraſe Ἑκουσίως ἁμαρτάντων μετὰ τὸ λαβεῖν τὴν ἐπίγνωσιν τῆς ἀληθείας, Sinning wilfully after receiving the acknowledgment of the truth] muſt be collected by a brief ſurvey of every part of the phraſe. And ſo here ſure it muſt ſignifie, the ſin here ſpoken of, ver. 23, & 25. being the not retaining, i. e. forſaking the profeſſion of their hope, i.e. the Chriſtian profeſſion, & ἐγκαταλείποντες τὴν ἐπισυναγωγὴν ἑαυτῶν, forſaking the aſſemblies of publick worſhip, &c. which though done upon the motive of fear, to avoid perſecution, yet was an Apoſtatizing from the Chriſtian courſe, and that no ſuddain, paſſionate, but weighed, deliberate act and courſe, and is therefore defined v. 38. to be an ὑποστολὴ εἰς ἀπώλειαν a drawing back to perdition, an Apoſtaſie from the Chriſtian profeſſion, a preferring the advantages of the world, the preſerving their own preſent ſafety, before the ſervice, and worſhip of God, and privileges belonging to it; and accordingly this ſin of theſe forſakers is elſwhere ordinarily expreſt by loving the world, and the things of the world, in oppoſition to, and excluſion of the love of the Father, loving of pleaſures more than of God, ſerving of the belly, &c. and 'tis known of theſe Gnoſticks, that as they renounced the Chriſtian profeſſion, ſo they joyned with the enemies (called here ὑπεναντίοι adverſaries v.27.) againſt the Chriſtians, and to ſave themſelves calumniated, and perſecuted others. Now this ſin thus conſidered, is here farther expreſt to be ſo by the mention of their former acknowledgment of the truth, and by their continuing in this courſe ἑκουσίως wilfully after the acknowledgment of the truth, That may be taken in a double notion, Firſt to ſignifie the

But, I suppose, there is yet a farther notion of it, which must be added to this, the doing this contemptuously against the Apostles doctrine, and admonition, concerning the infusions of the Gnostick hereticks, and consequently a casting off the authority of the Apostles, and Governours of the Church, who acted in power of the Holy Ghost, and they that thus disobeyed, were lookt on, and dealt with, as heathens, and Publicans, desperate, and incorrigible, Mat. 18. 17. Thus, saith Photius, Πολὺ ἡ διαφορὰ τῶν ἐξ ἀγνοίας ἁμαρτημάτων πρὸς τὰς ἐν γνώσει καὶ μετὰ καταφρονήσεως πραττομένας ἀδικίας πλῆξις, There is great difference between sins committed out of ignorance, and wicked practises committed in knowledge and with contempt, Epist: p. 386. And that this was it, appears, not onely by the exhortations, and admonitions of the Apostle through this whole Epistle, [Take heed brethren that there be not in any of you an evil heart of unbeleif in departing or Apostatizing from the living God,] ch. 3. 12. and by his laying before them the examples of the murmuring, and provoking Apostatizing Israelites, which lost their Canaan, and by foretelling the like vengeance, that would suddenly fall on them, if they did thus depart, but also by one end, or consequent of their forsaking their Church-meetings, contemning and rejecting the exhortations and admonitions of their Governours, for which, among other things, these meetings were ordained. And this seemes to bee here noted by mention of the [ἀλλὰ παρακαλοῦντες but exhorting] which was especially the Governours office, and which they that forsook the assemblies, did forsake also, and did not submit themselves to it. And then they that thus sinn'd ἑκουσίως wilfully after the having received this acknowledgment of the truth, were they that did contemptuously forsake, and cast off the Christian yoke, which they had once submitted to, and that is the character of Apostates. Adde to this the consideration of v. 28. where, parallel to the state of the person here, is set Ἀθετήσας τὸν τοῦ νόμου Μωσέως, Any one that despiseth, or setteth at naught Moses law, the man that will doe presumptuously and will not hearken to the Priest, or to the Judge, Deut. 17. 12. Such an one, as when his fact is competently proved against him, he must die without mercy, And that is also the meaning of the οὐκέτι περὶ ἁμαρτιῶν θυσία, there remains no longer any sacrifice for sin, It is such a sin, for which the high priest among the Jewes was not allowed to offer sacrifice, for expiation, Ἀδύνατος ἡ καλούσης παραίτησις, saith Josephus, l. 2. cont: Apion: there was no deprecating, no possibility of averting the punishment of death which belonged to such. Accordingly we see the practise in Maimonides (in the title of dressing oblations c. 3. num. 3. 5.) that no sacrifice should be made for Apostates, though for Ethnicks there might. So again appears v. 29. by καταπατήσας τὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ, trampling on the son of God, i. e. contemptuously using him, as these Apostatizing deserters did, counting the blood of the covenant an unholy thing (as Ezech. 22. 26. to the Priests περισσῶς violating God's law, is added their profaning God's holy things) contemning the covenant, sealed by the blood of Christ, by which they have obliged themselves to adhere to him, and contumeliously using the Spirit of grace, i. e. again despising and throwing away those pretious advantages of the Spirit of God, which had been bestow'd upon them, but now are repell'd, and rejected by them, as in the Canons of the Councels, they that have undertaken the office of Church-widows, and after marry, are said to doe despite to the grace of God (see Conc: Wormac: c. 45.) for which S. Paul hath casting off their first faith, 1 Tim. 5. 12. By all which appears what the nature, and aggravations of this sin was, A forsaking the Christian, orthodox, and going over to the heretical Gnostick way, which was a downright Apostasie from Christ to Antichrist, And for such an one the punishment is figuratively expresst by [there remains no farther, or no longer sacrifice for sins] i. e. either the blood of Christ trampled on by him, v. 29. will not prove beneficial to him, and so, because there is no other sacrifice, he is capable of no mercy, Or else the prayers, and oblations of the Church which are used for those, that they have any hopes of, belong not to him; See note on chap. 6. b. and 1 Joh. 5. c.

What is here meant by ὑποστολῆς we have two waies of discerning, 1. by considering the word in the few other places of the New Testament, Act. 20. 20. οὐδὲν ὑπεστειλάμην τοῦ συμφερόντων τοῦ μὴ ἀναγγεῖλαι ὑμῖν, I did not withdraw, or hold back from declaring to you any of those things that were profitable for you, and almost in the same words and sense, v. 27. οὐ γὰρ ὑπεστειλάμην τοῦ μὴ ἀναγγεῖλαι &c. I did not withdraw or withhold my self from declaring to you the whole counsel of God, So in Phavorinus, ὑποστολάδην, ὑποστρωφᾶσθαι hiding himself, getting out of the way, and ὑποστέλλω, παρατρέπομαι, the word used c. 12. 25. for detrectare, to get off from any employment, to be unwilling to enter upon it, to hang back, to refuse; So ὑπέστειλεν ἑαυτὸν, Gal. 2. 12. he slunk away, withdrew himself, got out of their company, and that as an effect of fear, φοβούμενος &c. fearing the Jewish Christians. So Phavorinus again, ὑποστολάδην, φοβητικῶς, and ὑποστολὴ, φόβος, fearing, running away. And so here the matter of the discourse being exhortation, and encouragement to constancy in the Christian profession, in despight of all the terrors and assaults that lay on them from the Jewes at that time, and that upon constant expectation of receiving a rich reward, deliverance here within a while, if they live, and continue constant, and eternal blisse in another world, for all that they could suffer here, (which is the meaning of the παῤῥησία confidence &c. ver. 35.) It will be most agreeable that the just man's living by faith in the beginning of v. 38. should be his patient, cheerful, constant continuance in the Christian profession, meerly upon the strength of the promises, that are made to courage and constancy, the promised deliverance in this, v. 36. & 37. and eternity in another world, and contrary to that, the ὑποστολὴς drawing back here, and ὑποστολὴ, v. 39. must needs be a fainting in the course, a pusillanimous falling off, a detrectation or failing in point of perseverance, caused by fear or pusillanimity. And this will likewise appear by a second medium, by looking into the prophet Habakkuk, ch. 2.4. from whence 'tis clear those words immediately precedent are cited, ὁ δὲ Δίκαιος ἐκ πίστεως ζήσεται, the just shall live by faith. If that place of Habakkuk be observed carefully in the Septuagint and the Hebrew, this will clearly appear that the Septuagint read the Hebr. words a little otherwise, than now we read them, not עפלה arrogans fuit, was lifted up, as we read in the beginning of the verse, nor נפשו his soul, but עפלה for the former, and נפשי my soul, for the latter. Now the word עפל which they read there, is perfectly answerable to the ὑποστείλεται here (as 'tis clear the נפשי my soul is rendred here ψυχὴ μου my soul, otherwise than the Hebrew there will bear it) for the Hebrew signifies primarily texit, covered, (and so ὑποστολὴς was rendred by ὑποκρύπτεσθαι being hidden out of Phavorinus) and then also it signifies turbatus fuit, was frighted, or troubled, (which they that are, slink, or hide themselves out of the way) So Is. 50.20. Thy children עלפו the Chaldee reads, were troubled, the Septuagint, ἀπορήσουσι were in distresse or great fear, and Jonah 4.8. 'tis rendred ἀλγοψύχει was ready to faint, and so Am. 8.13. the Targum explain it by ישתלהון, they shall be weary or faint, and so in other places, the Septuagint render it by ἐκλύεσθαι fainting or failing, and so the Septuagint took it in Habakkuk. He that falls off, or faints, the coward or fearful, my soul doth not like him. And all this sets down the true notion of the word in this place thus; But if he that should live by his faith, shall cowardly withdraw himself from the publick worship of Christ, v.25. (as Ignatius saith they did, which had received the infusions of the Gnosticks, Εὐχαριστίας καὶ προσευχῆς ἀπέχονται διὰ τὸ ὁμολογεῖν τὴν εὐχαριστίαν σάρκα εἶναι τοῦ σωτῆρος: they abstain from the Eucharist, and from prayer, i.e. publick assemblies; and exhorts them to mend that fault, συνέρχεσθε σπουδαιοτέρως εὐχαριστίαν θεοῦ καὶ δόξαν αὐτῷ: Assemble more frequent assemblies, and so again ad Ephes.) if they withdraw from the ὑπομονὴς παθημάτων, the patient, magnanimous encounter of afflictions, v.32. from the παῤῥησία or confident profession of the truth, v.35. (in expectation of the future reward) from the ὑπομονὴ patience, and doing the will of God, v.36. and from the faith, v.38. whereby we depend securely on the promises of Christ, with confidence that they shall be performed to us, If, saith the Author, the just, the Christian prove thus pusillanimous, hang back from this performance of his duty, if by afflictions he be disheartned and terrified, God's soul hath no pleasure in him, he is utterly rejected, and disliked by God. And thus v.39. ὑποστολὴ cowardise is directly set opposite to πίστις faith, as περιποίησις ψυχῆς saving the soul or life to the ἀπώλεια destruction or losing of it. a. ὑπομονὴς παθημάτων

The word περιποίησις signifies acquiring, purchasing, getting, possessing. So περιποίησις δόξης, purchasing of glory, 2 Thess. 2.14. περιποίησις σωτηρίας purchasing or acquiring of salvation, 1 Thess. 5.9. But Phavorinus who hath that notion of it, gives us also σωτηρία ἀντὶ σωτηρίας, saving, delivering, and so being here set opposite to ἀπώλεια destruction, and joyned with ψυχῆς of the soul or life, it seems most probably to signifie as κτᾶσθαι ψυχὴν to possesse the soul Lu. 21.19. (which is the same with περιποίησις ψυχῆς saving the soul here, so saith Phavorinus κτῆσις περιποίησις possessing is purchasing) is σῴζειν ψυχὴν to save or preserve the life, Mar. 8.35. Lu. 9.24. See note on Eph. 2.d. 1 Pet. 2.c. d. Περιποίησις ψυχῆς

CHAP. XI.

2. 1. And that you may know to what your being Christians, and your professing the faith of Christ, obligeth you in this matter, you may consider what faith is, a confident dependence on God for the performance of his promise, a being convinced of the truth of those things, of which we have no ocular or sensible demonstration:

1. NOw Faith is the * a substance of things hoped for, the † evidence of things not seen.] * confident expectation † conviction, ἔλεγχος

2. And that you may not look on this faith, as a new and a strange thing, yee may through all times see the examples of it among pious men, which may excite you to the practise and exercise of it at this time, now you have so much need of it, c.10.36. For indeed yee may observe that this was it, by which the Antients or Fathers of the old Testament, received a testimony of Gods approbation of, and respect unto them.

2. For by it the Elders * obtained a good report.] * received a testimony ἐμαρτυρήθησαν

b. 3. One act of faith it is, by which wee rightly apprehend the omnipotent power of God in creating the whole world, heaven and earth, meerly by a word, saying, Let there be light &c. and there was light: and so by the same act of faith we see God can, and doth produce effects quite distant from the ordinary course of nature, for so all this visible world was framed not out of things conspicuous to our eyes, as now a man of a man, a tree from a kernel &c. but by the meer command of God out of nothing, or out of the earth, which is described as an invisible Chaos of confusion, Gen.1.2. (And then why may we not believe God's promise in the like manner at this time, that he is able to bring you deliverance out of your present persecutions, upon your continuing constant unto him, by those ways that are least discernible to you, meerly by acts of his own power, and wisdom?)

3. Through faith wee understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen † were [b] not made of things which do appear.] † were made not

4. Another act of faith it was (applyable also to your present purpose) which was discernible in Abel, who offered to God the firstlings and the fat, Gen.4.4. i.e. the best and fairest that he had in all his flock, whereas Cain did not proportionably, but onely brought of the fruit of the ground (without any choice of the best) an offering to God, v.3. This Abel certainly did upon a belief of God's essence and attributes, and a consequent love of him, willing to give him that which is most precious (and parallel to that is the faithful constant Christian now, that will lay down his life for Christ's sake, suffer any thing, part with all

4. By faith Abel offered unto God * a more excellent sacrifice then Cain, by which he obtained witnesse that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts, and by it he being dead, yet speaketh.] * a sacrifice exceeding that of Cain πλείονα θυσίαν παρὰ allthat is moſt precious) and from this faith it was that God pronounced him a righteous perſon, and expreſſed his approbation of his ſacrifice; and from this it was that God ſaid of him that his bloud cried from the ground, when he was dead, intimating that he had then a life with God, who was able to ſpeak to him (ſee Paſſo, l. pejorem inſtituri meliori) and that God would avenge his bloud, and the bloud of all ſuch upon their perſecutors.

5. By faith Enoch was tranſlated that he ſhould not ſee death, and was not found, becauſe God had tranſlated him; for before his tranſlation he had this teſtimony, that he pleaſed God.]

5. By faith Enoch did that which was acceptable in the ſight of God, and was rewarded by God by being tranſlated to heaven, in ſtead of dying (And that ſignifies that they that walk and perſevere in the ways of God, when they goe out of this world, they are never the worſe for it, they are removed to a place of endleſſe bliſſe)

6. But without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe him; for he that cometh to God muſt believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently ſeek him.]

6. And this acceptation of God was a proof that hee had faith, for otherwiſe his actions could not have been acceptable to God, For without beleiving the power and wiſdome, and juſtice of God, 'tis impoſſible to doe any thing that can pleaſe God, or be rewarded by him: For he that undertakes the ſervice or worſhip of God in any kind, muſt beleive that he is God, and that he rewards all his faithful ſervants, that doe what they are enabled to doe toward the ſearch and performance of his will. And he that doth beleive this, what ſhould ever tempt him to forſake or diſobey him, when his ſincere, faithful performances, how dear ſoever they coſt him here, are ſure to be abundantly rewarded by God, and his forſaking and falling off to bring judgements and ruine upon him?

* delivering of his houſhold ουωσιν ἑαυτῷ εἰς ἴαση αὐτοῦ

† according to κατὰ

7. By faith Noah being warned of God of things not ſeen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an Ark to the * ſaving of his houſe; by which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteouſneſſe which is † by faith.]

7. A like example of faith we have in Noah, who beleiving the threats, and heeding the warning of God that foretold the drowning of the world, and aſſuring himſelf that God would deſtroy and drown the wicked of that age, and preſerve him and his family (an emblem of the Church of faithful obedient Chriſtians) did accordingly ſo fear the judgement of God denounced againſt the wicked, and beleive God's command of making an Ark for himſelf and his family, that he ſet preſently to making of that Ark, by that means to ſave both himſelf and his family, from the Floud (Parallel to which is your beleif of God's threats and commands, and making uſe of that way of ſecuring your ſelves, which Chriſt hath directed you, a careful obedience, and cloſe adhering to the commands of Chriſt in this time of approaching deſtruction) and he by doing this, reproached, and aggravated the contrary crime, and ſtupidity of the world, and himſelf was left the onely poſſeſſor of the earth, had it all for an inheritance to him and his poſterity, and no queſtion had the happineſſe of another world, as a reward of his pious fear and faith in God, and the actions which he did out of that principle.

8. By faith Abraham when he was called to goe out into a place which he ſhould afterward receive for an inheritance, obeyed, and he went out, not knowing whither he went.]

8. A like act of faith was Abraham's obedience to God's command of leaving his Countrey, and going whitherſoever God ſhould direct him, not knowing whither it was, onely receiving a promiſe from God, that his poſterity ſhould be the poſſeſſors of that place, whither hee was appointed to goe, but no way aſſured, that himſelf ſhould ever be owner of any part of it.

9. By faith he ſojourned in the land of promiſe, as in a ſtrange countrey, dwelling in Tabernacles with Iſaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the ſame promiſes.]

9. And accordingly a like act of faith it was in him, that though he ſojourned in that Land which was promiſed him, in the ſame manner as he ſhould if he and his ſeed had had nothing to doe with it (he and his ſons, and his ſons ſons dwelling in it in Tabernacles, erected for a tranſitory paſſage through it, and not in houſes, as in a place of poſſeſſion, and thus they lived all their lives long till Jacob was removed into Ægypt) yet he firmly beleived that his ſeed ſhould poſſeſſe that Land, and was himſelf very well ſatisfied without it,

10. For he looked for a City which hath foundations, whoſe builder and maker is God.]

10. Upon this ground of Chriſtian faith, that God had for him an abiding firm building, which after a pilgrims life expected him in another world, (ſee 2 Cor.5.1. & Heb.11.28.) and would plentifully reward all his obedience, though he had no other reward to receive in this life.

* even καὶ

11. Through faith † alſo Sarah her ſelf received ſtrength to conceive ſeed, and was delivered of a child, when ſhe was paſt age, becauſe ſhe judged him faithful who had promiſed.]

11. By the like belief and relying on Gods power and providence againſt all probabilities to the contrary, Sarah being both barren, and of an age paſt child-bearing, did not onely by her handmaid Hagar, but of her own womb, and that by Abraham, when he was very old alſo, receive ſtrength to conceive, and bring forth a ſon, having no ground to beleive this, or hope it poſſible, but that God had promiſed it, and ſhe was confident, he would not break his promiſe, but perform it.

† dead in theſe reſpects νενεκρωμένου

12. Therefore ſprang there even of one, and him * as good as dead, ſo many as the ſtars of the ſky in multitude, and as the ſand which is by the ſea-ſhore innumerable.]

12. And as the reward of their faith of this, they became ſo fruitful, that from one Abraham (called by that title of One, Iſa.51.2) and that at a time when he was paſt power of getting children, there yet came a moſt numerous progeny, according to the promiſe of God made to him, and laid hold on, and depended on by his faith.

* By or according to faith all theſe died Κατὰ πίστιν ἀπέθανον.

† ſojourners on the land παροικοῦντες ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς

13. * Theſe all died in faith, not having received the promiſes, but having ſeen them afar off, ᶜ and were perſwaded of them, and embraced them, and confeſſed that they were were ſtrangers and † pilgrims on the earth.]

13. And this his numerous poſterity did not, till the time of Joſhua, come to enjoy this promiſed land of Canaan, onely as Abraham went on chearfully, as beleiving that four hundred years after the promiſes ſhould be performed to his ſeed, ſo did they comfort themſelves with the aſſurance that their poſterity ſhould enjoy them, if they did not, and meanwhile calling themſelves guests and ſtrangers in that promiſed land, Gen.23.4. and 47.9. and not poſſeſſors of it, (which is an inforcement of that conſtancy, which is now called for of Chriſtians in perſecution, upon ſtrength of that promiſe of the approaching coming of Christ to rescue them, which in case it should not come in their dayes, yet being so sure to come to their posterity, so much sooner than the Canaan came to Abrahams posterity, this may be matter of faith and encouragement to Christians, as reasonably as the assured expectation of those promises was to Abraham and his posterity)

14. And this language of their calling themselves sojourners in Canaan, and not professors of it, signifies that they did not think themselves at home, but that they were in pursuit of a Countrey.

14. For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a Countrey.]

15. And that not their own Countrey Chaldæa, from whence Abraham first went out upon God's command, for he and his posterity had many seasons to have gone back thither, if that had been the Countrey they lookt after.

15. And truly * if they had been mindful of that Countrey from whence they came out, † they might have had opportunity to have returned.

* if they had mentioned μνημονευον

† they had σχον

16. But now 'tis clear that the Countrey which they professt to expect, was that promised to their posterity, which being not come till after this life of theirs, was a type of heaven, and in having made this provision for them, God is most justly said to be the God of Abraham &c. for whom he made so rich a preparation, destining the land of Canaan, and in that a famous City Jerusalem (though it was not yet imaginable how it should be built) for their posterity, and in that mystically foreshewing an eternal City and Kingdome, the Canaan and Jerusalem above, which they should have, which continued constant to Christ, and obtained not the promises in this life.

16. But now they desire a better Countrey, that is, an heavenly; wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God; for he hath provided for them a City.

17, 18. Another eminent act of faith it was in Abraham, that upon God's command to sacrifice his onely son Isaac, he presently and readily obeyed, took him and carried him to the Mountain, and was ready to have offered him up, if God had not stopt him, and having entertained, and embraced, and firmly beleived the promises of a numerous seed, and people, that should spring from him, and having no other son but this, from whom they should spring, nor possibility in nature, nor promise above nature, that he should have any more children, but a plain affirmation that this people, which should be counted his seed, to whom the promises belonged, should come from Isaac, he did yet absolutely obey that command of Gods, in resolving to kill that son, on whom all those promises depended, and yet never doubted of the performance of the promises,

17. By faith Abraham when he was tryed offered up Isaac, and * he that had received the promises offered up his onely begotten son,

18. Of whom it was said, that in Isaac † shall thy seed be called,]

* having admitted, or entertained the promises δεξαμενος

† shall the seed be called to thee, κληθησεται σοι σπερμα

19. Resolving with himself that rather then the promise should not be performed, which was made to him of a numerous posterity, to spring particularly from Isaac, God, who was able to raise from the dead, would so raise Isaac, when he should have killed him, having withall a kinde of pledge to assure him, that he would do that, because when he was conceived and born to him, it was a kind of coming from the dead, viz. from Sarah's womb, when she was past age of child-bearing, and from himself, who in this respect of getting children, was mortified, and dead also, v. 11, 12. (And this again is an example to encourage and confirm the faith of Christians, that in obedience to Christ they continue constant to death it self, or the utmost danger of it, knowing that God will perform his promises to them, yeild them the promised deliverance, though they cannot imagine the manner how.)

19. Accounting that God was able to raise him up even from the dead, from whence * also he received him in a figure.]

* in a figure he had also received him, ἐν παραβολῇ ἐκομίσατο

20. An act of Faith also it was in Isaac that after that manner that is storied of him, he blessed his two sons Jacob and Esau, i.e. prayed for blessings on them, nay, as a Prophet, foretold from God, what should befall them, assuring himself, that the promise made to Abraham should be fulfilled in him, Gen. 28. 4, 5. and so that what he had done, though through error, mistaking Jacob for Esau, would yet certainly be performed by God, Gen. 21. 33. 37. 4 (And the like faith will it be now in the Christians, that shall assure themselves, that God will now blesse and preserve the faithful constant beleiver, when the elder brother, the famous people of God, the Jews, for their infidelity are destroyed, and this though not yet present but future.)

20. † By faith Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau concerning things to come.]

† by faith concerning things to come Περὶ μελλόντων

21. Thus Jacob a little before his death, rose and set himself up upon his bed, and leaning upon his staffe, (which was an embleme of faith) depending and relying firmly upon God's promise, he prayed and worshipped God, and blessed prophetically Manasseh and Ephraim, forteold how God should deal with them, and the tribes that sprang from them, after his and their death.

21. By faith Jacob, when he was a dying, blessed both the sons of Joseph and * worshipped leaning upon the [d] top of his staffe.]

* worshipped upon προσεκυνησεν ἐπι

22. By the same faith, and assurance that God would make good this promise of giving Canaan to Abraham's seed, though 'twere not yet given, Joseph before his death a little, mentioned the Israelites going out of Ægypt, and commanded that, when they went, his bones should be carried with them, which argued his assurance without all doubt, that they should possesse that promised land, and be delivered out of the Ægyptian thraldome, that they were for some years to lye under.

22. By faith Joseph when he died, made mention of the departing of the children of Israel: and gave commandment concerning his bones.]

23. Another act of faith it was in Moses's parents to break through all fear, to hide the child, and endevour to save him in spight of the King's bloody law, having been assured from God that there should be born from among them, one that should deliver them out of Ægypt, and judging by somewhat extraordinary in Moses's look, that he was that person thus promised them, (And a like act of faith it will now be, thus confidently to beleive this promised deliverance, and to act accordingly.)

23. By faith Moses when he was born was hid three moneths of his parents, because they saw he was a † proper child, and they were not afraid of the Kings commandment.]

† comely ἀστειον

24. An act of faith it was in Moses, that when he came to age, he would not accept the honour of being adopted by Pharaoh's daughter,

24. By faith Moses, * when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter,]

* being grown big μεγας γενομενος

25. Choo-

25. Choosing rather to suffer afflictions with the people of God, than to † enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season;]

† to have the temporary enjoyment, or delight of sin

25. Choosing rather to endure any affliction that should fall on the Israelites, than to enjoy all the pleasures and advantages of a palace, with the guilt of that cruel sin of persecuting the children of God, which he could not escape doing, if he lived in that court, when he came to be of age.

26. Esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches, than the treasures in Ægypt; for he had respect unto the recompense of the reward.]

26. And counting that reproach which Christ and Christians endure now, and which the children of Israel, the anointed of the Lord, Psal 105 15. then endured in Ægypt, (being most reproachfully afflicted and oppressed) a far more desirable thing, then all the wealth and power in Ægypt; looking upon the great difference of rewards between those two states in another world, wealth and greatnesse and persecuting Gods children, being attended, as Dives, with flames; and affliction, and reproach with heaven, and blisse, like Lazarus. (And the like faith will it be in the Christian, to renounce all those secular advantages, that the Gnosticks now promise men, that will forsake the pure faith, and joyn with them in compliance with and assisting the persecutors; and rather to suffer any the sharpest persecutions from the Jews, then thus joyn and concur with them in persecuting the Christians.)

27. By faith he forsook Ægypt, not fearing the wrath of the King, for he * endured as seeing him who is invisible.]

* was constant in expressions

27. So after, it was also an act of his faith, and obedience to the word of God, delivered him in the bush, that, being threatned by the King, if hee should ever any more mention the going out of the people of Israel, Ex. 10.28. he went out from the King courageously, and having told Pharaoh that he would never treat with him more about it, he conducted the Israelites out of Ægypt, depending constantly on God, and as firmly, as if he had seen him present to secure and defend him, (And the like faith it is to confesse Christ now, be the danger never so great and imminent of doing so.)

28. Through faith he kept the Passeover, and the sprinkling of bloud, lest he that destroyed the first-born should touch him.]

28. An other act of faith it was and obedience to God, in Moses, that he did that which he did about the Passeover, and sprinkling the side postes of the door, to deliver by that means all the first-born of the Israelites; (by which was also typified the redemption wrought by Christ, and that which is now approaching foretold and promised by him, that he that endureth to the end, shall escape, that the beleivers shall be sealed and secured, before the destruction come out against this people, see Rev. 7.4. &c.)

29. By faith they [e] passed through the [f] Red sea, as by dry land, which the Ægyptians assaying to doe were drowned.]

29. And an act of faith it was in the people of Israel, that they ventured into the Erythræan sea, and went through part of it, as if it had been firm ground, whereas the Ægyptians persecuting and trying to follow them, were drowned; (And the like faith will now secure the constant sufferers, whilst their persecutors are overwhelmed and destroyed by the same means, that gives them deliverance.) e. f.

30. By faith the walls of Jericho fell down, after they were compassed about seven days.]

30. An act of faith it was in Joshua, and the people in obedience to him, to go about Jericho seven days together, with the Ark before them, upon which followed the falling of the walls of it, (And the like in the Christians now, to trust confidently in God's deliverance, although they use no artifices, or secular policies, or means of their own to work it for them.)

† obeyed not disobedience

31. By faith the harlot Rahab perished not with them that † beleived not, when she had received the spies with peace.]

33. An act of faith it was in Rahab, who had formerly been an Idolatresse, and an harlot, (and now kept an Inne or Victualling house) to entertain the spies sent by the Israelites, safely, beleiving that God whom they worshipp'd to be the true God, whereupon she was saved alive, when the rest of the incredulous idolatrous people of that land were destroyed, (And the like faith will it be in them now, that shall use all kindnesse and fidelity to the persecuted Christians, and the doing thus will be much a more probable way to secure them that doe it, than all the Gnosticks treacheries and compliances with the persecutors.)

* and why do I yet talk or speak any more

32. * And what shall I more say? for the time would fail me to tell of Gedeon, and of Barak, and of Samson, and of Jephtha, of David also, and Samuel, and of the prophets;

32,33. What need I give you any more examples of this matter? 'Twere Infinite to enlarge on this subject, to tell you all that might be said for your encouragement to trust God, and adhere constantly to him, such were the great champions of Gods people, who depending on Gods strength and blessing, constantly and fearlessly discharged their duty, and by Gods especial motion, and their obedience thereto, were raised up to govern the Israelites, and to fight their battels for them, and to make conquests, Gedeon over the Madianites, Barak over the Canaanites, Samson and Samuel over the Philistines, Jephtha over the Ammonites, David over the Amalekites, Jebusites, Moabites, Philistines, Idumæans, Syrians: And all these by faith, (not thinking they should be able to vanquish them without fighting, but) fighting valiantly, and depending on God's promise and power, to give them victories, with small, as well as with great numbers, who again by faith lived godly and righteous lives, received great mercies from God miraculously, onely by the strength of his having promised it. And some of them, Daniel by name, (contained under the word prophets v. 32.) obtained that miracle of mercy, and deliverance from God, that the Lions, when he was thrown into their den, did him no hurt:

33. Who through faith subdued Kingdomes, wrought righteousnesse, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions;]

34. Quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weaknesse were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens.]

34. Others were so favoured by God, that the fire did them no hurt, when they (i.e. the three children) were cast into it; others escaped present danger of being killed by the sword, as David from Saul, Elijah and Michaiah from Ahab, the Jews in Hester from Haman, others were recovered from desperate diseases, as Job, and Hezekiah, others became wonderfully courageous in fighting, as Jonathan &c. and routed the armies of the Heathen Canaanites &c. very often.

† by resurrection ἐξ ἀναστάσεως

35. Women received their dead † raised to life again: and others § were tortured not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection.]

35. Some women (as the widow of Sarepta, 1 Kin. 17.21. and the Shunamitish woman, 2 Kin. 4.) had their children restored from death to life, upon their entertaining the prophets of God, cherishing and relieving Gods servants, Elias and Elisha; Others when g.

rack'd and tormented for the acknowledgment of the truth, had no deſire to be ſpared, but refuſed to be delivered, when they might, meerly by the ſtrength of faith, believing a reſurrection to life eternal after death, and looked upon that as much more deſirable, than a preſent remiſſion of torments, Thus the mother and ſeven children 2 Mac. 6. 19, 30. and chap. 7. 9.

36. Others, as Michaiah, and Jeremiah, and the Maccabees, had patience tried by whipping, very reproachfull and painfull, others by ſhackles and impriſonment, and ſo Joſeph in Ægypt, and others.

36. And others had trials of * cruel mockings, and ſcourgings, yea moreover of bonds and impriſonment.] * cum ludibrio ſpectandi

h. 37. Some were ſtoned, as Zacharias; others ſawn aſunder, (as Iſaiah by Manaſſes, ſay the Jews) others burnt alive, or broiled, or run through with hot irons, as the Maccabees; others, very many, kill'd by the ſword; others, the prophets that preached the coming of Chriſt, meanly arrayed in skins, as Ezechiel, John Baptiſt, &c. being very poor, in great dangers, and meeting with very ill uſage;

37. They were ſtoned, they were ſawn aſunder, † were h tempted, were ſlain with the ſword; they wandred about in ſheep-skins and goat-skins, being * deſtitute, afflicted, tormented.] † were burnt with hot irons; * in want, diſtreſſed, ill handled, ὑστερούμενοι θλιβόμενοι, κακουχούμενοι

38. Uſed thus, as men that were too good to live in this wicked world, and accordingly others of them lived recluſe and retired from the world, in deſerts and hills, and caves of the earth.

38. Of whom the world was not worthy, they wandred in deſerts, and in mountains, and in dennes, and caves of the earth.]

39. And all theſe valiant champions, & ſervants of God laſt mentioned v. 36, &c. and before v. 8, 13. being much commended for their faith, did not in their time receive the promiſes made to Abraham, had no deliverance in this life from their perſecutors,

39. And theſe all having † obtained a good report through faith, received not the promiſe,] † received teſtimony μαρτυρηθέντες

40. God having determined this, as the i. time moſt congruous in his wiſdome to give the utmoſt completion to all thoſe prophecies, and promiſes, to ſend the Meſſias into the world, and, as a conſequent of his reſurrection from the dead, to grant us thoſe privileges, and advantages, that the fathers had not enjoyed, a reſt after long perſecutions, a victory over all oppoſers of Chriſt's Church, that ſo what was promiſed to Abraham's ſeed, Gen. 22. 17. that they ſhould poſſeſſe the gates of their enemies, being but imperfectly fulfill'd to the fathers, might have the utmoſt completion in the victory and flouriſhing of the Chriſtian faith over all the enemies thereof.

40. * God having provided ſome better thing for us, that they without us ſhould not be made i perfect.] * God foreſeeing ſomewhat better concerning us, that they might not be perfected without us, Τοῦ Θεοῦ περὶ ἡμῶν κρείττονός τι προβλεψαμένου,

a. Ὑπόστασις The uſe of this word ὑπόστασις, both here and in the other places of the New Teſtament, will appear by obſerving the Greek rendring of the Hebrew יָחַל and תּוֹחֶלֶת from it. The word ſignifies to hope, and in Piel to expect with ſome confidence, and ſo to ſtay and wait for any thing, generally rendred by the Targum וְאוֹרֵךְ and he expected, Gen. 8. 10, & 12. but ſometimes by מְחַצְּפִין auſi ſunt, Ezech. 13. 6. They took confidence. Now this word Mic. 5. 7. is by the Greek tranſlators rendred ὑποστῆ, where the Hebrew יְיַחֵל לִבְנֵי אָדָם he ſhall hope in the ſons of men] is by the Targum rendred סַכְיַר he ſhall expect, we render it, wait for them, The ſenſe beareth depending on them for aid, and ſo ſubſiſting in them, and that is the literal notation of the ὑποστῆ. Thus likewiſe the noun תּוֹחֶלֶת ἐλπὶς, hope, Lam. 3. 18. expectation, waiting, is rendred ὑπόστασις Pſal. 39. 8. and ſo in the books of Eſdras, 2 Eſdr. 8. They who have not ὑπόστασιν καλῶν ἔργων the hope or confidence of good works (that μέγας πλοῦτος ὑποστάσεως in Plutarch) that great treaſure of confidence, that ariſeth from well doing. Agreeable to this notion of the word is the acception of it in every place of the New Teſtament, (ſave only that Heb. 1. 3. where ſpeaking of Chriſt he is called χαρακτὴρ ὑποστάσεως αὐτοῦ, the character of his ſubſiſtence.) Thus 2 Cor. 9. 4. μὴ καταισχυνθῶμεν ἐν τῇ ὑποστάσει ταύτῃ τῆς καυχήσεως, that we be not put to ſhame in this confidence of boaſting, i. e. in having had that confidence of their liberality, and readineſſe, as to boaſt of them in that behalf: For to that belongs that great ſhame, in caſe his confidence ſhould miſcarry, as that hope which is rightly grounded upon firm promiſes, οὐ καταισχύνει doth not put to ſhame, ſaith the Apoſtle, Rom. 5. 5. and to the ſame purpoſe c. 9. 33. To the ſame ſenſe is that in the ſame words c. 11. 17. which is explain'd after by ἐὰν τὴν πλαῆ, πλωῦ κἀγὼ, If any have confidence, I alſo have confidence, according to that mention'd from the Targum, Ezech. 13. where the Hebrew anſwerable to ὑπόστασις is rendred daring, and ſo Polybius ſeems to have uſed the word ὑπόστασις for courage and valour or good aſſurance. So Heb. 3. that which is v. 6. ἐὰν πᾶν τὴν παῤῥησίαν καὶ τὸ καύχημα τῆς ἐλπίδος μέχρι τέλους βεβαίαν καθάσωμεν, if we hold faſt the confidence, and the boaſting of hope firm untill the end (as the condition of being Chriſtians or the houſhold of Chriſt) is expreſſed v. 14. in this other phraſe, little differing from it, ἐὰν περ τὴν ἀρχὴν τῆς ὑποστάσεως μέχρι τέλους βεβαίαν καθάσωμεν, If we hold faſt the beginning of confidence, i. e. that confidence exemplified to us by Chriſt, which we had from the beginning, firm unto the end. And ſo here, faith is ἐλπιζομένων ὑπόστασις, the expectation (or dependence, or confidence) or the confident expectation of things hoped for by us. The promiſe of Chriſt being the object as of our hope, ſo of our faith alſo, and differing very little in that particular, but that faith ſeems to be the greater adherence, to have the leſſe of doubring, the more of confidence in it.

Ἀρχὴ τῆς ὑποστάσεως

b. μὴ φαινόμενα things that appear not] ſeems to denote the earth, Gen. 1. 2. in that ſtate, when 'tis ſaid to be tohu vabohu, without form and void, or, as the Septuagint render it, ἀόρατος καὶ ἀκατασκεύαστος, inviſible, not to be ſeen.

c. The words καὶ πεισθέντες, and being perſwaded, which are added in ſome copies between ἰδόντες καὶ ἀσπασάμενοι, ſeeing, and καὶ ἀσπασάμενοι, and embracing, are wanting in the antient MSS. of the greateſt reputation, and beſides others mentioned by other men, in a very antient one of Mag. Coll. in Oxford.

Καὶ πεισθέντες

d. The Hebrew מַטֶּה ſignifies both a rod and a ſtaffe, perhaps antiently the very ſame word for both, though now Grammarians have pointed it diverſly, diverſly, and made a difference of ſound alſo betwixt them. The Hieruſalem Targum reads it, Laudes Dei cecinit ſuper ſpondam ſuam, He ſang the praiſes of God upon his bedſtead. The Greek here followes the Septuagint's tranſlation, and there is no queſtion of the truth of it; and indeed it may well be, that both notions of the Hebrew may here ſtand, and the truth be, that ariſing out of his bed, he ſate on it, and lean'd, as ſick perſons do, upon his ſtaffe, for we after read, that he gathered up, or returned again his feet into the bed, Gen 49.33. which is a ſigne that he was before riſen out of it, and ſate on the ſide with his feet on the ground, which was very fit for this poſture of leaning on his ſtaffe.

Ἄκρον τῆς Ῥάβδου

e. Διαβαλνειν doth not here ſignifie to goe from one ſide to the other, quite through, or croſſe the ſea, for the Iſraelites journeying makes it appear that they did not ſo, but to goe in into part of the channel, Exod. 14. 22. and paſſe on there a good way in the midſt, v. 29. and then to come out again on the ſame ſide, for ſo the Iſraelites did, as appears by the ſtory. This is expreſſed Pſal. 137. 14. by God's dividing the Red-ſea, and leading them בְּתוֹכוֹ through the midſt of it, agreeably to what is now ſaid. Διαβαλνειν

f. That ſea through part of which the Iſraelites paſſed (and in which the Ægyptians were drowned) is in the Hebrew ſtyled יַם־סוּף, mare algoſum, the ſea that was ſo full of weeds &c. (ſee Pſal. 106. 7. & 137. 13.) By the ſide or ſhore of this ſea did the poſterity of Eſau or Edom dwell, Now Edom is by the Septuagint called Ἐρυθρὰ red, becauſe as that comes from the Hebrew אדום red, with a very little change of one letter ו inſerted אדום, ſo from ἐρυθρὸς red doth the word Ἐρυθρᾶ alſo vary as little. From hence alſo (and not from Erythraus a king drowned there, as Diodorus Siculus ſaith) it is, that this ſea is by them rendred ἐρυθρὰ θαλάσσα in thoſe places of the Pſalmiſt (and elſwhere) where the Hebrew onely have יַם־סוּף the weedy ſea, and accordingly it is here retained ἐρυθρὰ θάλασσα, meaning that Edumean ſea, which by analogie would rather be ſtyled Ἐρυθρᾶλα than Ἐρυθρὰ, the Erythraan, or Edumean, than the Red ſea. Ἐρυθρὰ θάλασσα

g. What is here meant by πυμπανίζωδ] I ſhall propoſe by way of conjecture, by theſe ſteps and degrees; That this puniſhment was that inflicted by Antiochus on the Maccabees there is little queſtion, the many circumſtances here agreeing with thoſe there, doe make it manifeſt, As 1. the word πυμπανίζωδ here, and there, 2^dly, their not accepting deliverance here, ſet down there diſtinctly, 2 Mac. 6. 30. then 3^dly, the mention of better reſurrection here, compared with that their comfort there, c. 7. 9. and 4^thly, the ἐμπαιγμοὶ contumelious uſages here v. 36. and there 2 Mac. 7. 7. So 5^thly, μάστιγες ſtripes here, and there v. 30, &c. 6^thly, the πεῖρα ἐμπαιγμῶν trial of contumelies here, and there the narration how thoſe ἐμπαιγμοὶ were to trie, whether they would perſiſt or no, 7^thly, the word (whether ἐπυρώθησ tried, or) ἐπυρώθησ ſcorched, here v. 37. If it be the former, then it referres to πεῖρα trial, forementioned; if the latter, then to the burning them alive, and frying them in a pan, τηγανισμὸς 2 Mac. 7. 5. This being premiſed for the general explication of this word, and thoſe that follow, 'tis in the next place obſervable that Ariſtophanes hath this paſſage, Ὦ πύμπαν καὶ κύφωνε; where the Scholiaſt hath obſerved two ſignifications of the word πύμπανον, which Phavorinus hath borrowed from him, 1. for ξύλον ἐφ' ᾧ ἐπυμπάνιζον, an engine of wood upon which they puniſhed men in this manner, ἐχρῶντο δὲ πρὸς τοῦτο τῇ τιμωρίᾳ, for this was a kind of puniſhment, i. e. πυμπανισμὸς was ſo, 2^dly, ξύλα οἷς τύπτουσι ἐν τοῖς δικαστηρίοις οἱ πυμπάνοι, cudgels with which they were beaten in their judicatories, or, as Heſychius and Suidas adde, ἰσχυρῶς πλήττουσι, are ſtrucken very ſtrongly. 3^dly, it may be obſerved, that here κύφωνες is joyned by Ariſtophanes with πύμπανα & that κύφωνες are in that Scholiaſt, wooden yokes or clogs (for ſo κλοιὸς is turned into Engliſh by the change but of i. into g. which is an ordinary tranſmutation, and eaſie for the ſound, i. and g. having the ſame ſound in many words) hanged to the neck, and mentioned Jer. 28. 14. where it ſignifies ſuch a yoke of iron w^th ſuch a wooden clog faſtned to it, which both bound in the neck cloſe, and bowed the head down, and made it κύφην (from whence 'tis named) and 'tis mentioned alſo by Ariſtotle Pol: 5. δεδῆσθαι ἐν ἀγορᾷ ἐν κύφωνι, to be bound in the market place with this yoke. This being alſo obſerved, 'tis 4^thly, to be conſidered, that in * Lucian κύφωνες καὶ τροχοὶ are put together, as in Ariſtophanes πύμπανα καὶ κύφωνες, And therefore probably that πύμπανα in the former acception, for ξύλα ἐφ' οἷς, the wooden inſtruments, on which they were puniſhed, are the ſame that τροχοὶ wheels in Lucian. To which purpoſe we find in antient Authors, that tympanum is machina ad aquam, lapides, &c. in altum ſubvehenda parata, an engine to lift up water, ſtones, &c. mentioned of: by Vitruvius in this ſenſe, and Nic: Perottus Cornucop: p. 34. by which it appears, that it was a wheel with teeth, like that upper great wheel in a mill, which cauſes the going about of the mill-ſtone. After this form, with no great difference, 'tis moſt probable, was the πύμπανον, on which men were puniſhed, viz: a wheel on which the man was tied, and ſo fetched up on high, and therefore Suidas adds κρεμᾷ, he is hanged, and Heſychius ἐπυμπανίδησ, ἐκρεμάδησ, ἐπηωρίδησ, they were hanged, they were carried about in a ſphare. This wheel was a kind of engine on which any were tormented, and no queſtion that which is mentioned 2 Mac. 6. 28. ἐπὶ τὸ πύμπανον ἐτάθη, he came preſently to the torment, and v. 19. ἐκουσίως ἐπὶ τὸ πύμπανον ἐφοιτᾶτο, he came voluntarily to the torment. From this cuſtome of hanging malefactors upon the tympanum, it is that Celſus in Origen p. 81. ſpeaking of Chriſt, calls him ἄνδρα ἀπιθάνατον, καὶ ἐπυμπανισθέντα, a moſt infamous perſon, put to death upon the tympanum, thinking his hanging on the croſſe to be that upon the tympanum. When the malefactors were thus hanged or faſtned to the tympanum, 'tis obſervable in the 5^t place, that other puniſhments followed, 1. fleaing, whereupon in Heſychius [ἐκδάρῃ], is flead] is ſet to the explication of it, and ſo 2 Mac. 7. 7. τὰ δὲ κεφαλόδερμα σὺν ταῖς θριξὶ ἐσπάσθησαν, they pull'd off the skin with the hairs (and ſo in Agathias l. 4. p. 128. where he diſcourſeth of the antiquity of that puniſhment, and fetcheth it from Sapores King of Perſia) then 2^dly, upon examination of the perſon, and not yeilding, but ſtill hold- ing out againſt the torment, they proceeded either to ἀκρωτηριασμὸς, cutting off the extreme parts, hands and feet, and tongue, or to βάσανος, wrack, c. 7. 8. which was by blows inflicted with a cudgel or tympanum, c. 6. 30. (and therefore 1 Sam. 21. where the Septuagint read προσποιῶν ἢ ἐτυμπάνιζεν, Aquila reads προσεκρουεν beat him) and theſe blows were to death, as in the Maccabees 'tis clear, μᾶλλον ἢ τὰ πληγαῖς τιλάτων, being ready to die with the blows, and again when he ſaith, ὠνειδίζω κατὰ τὸ σῶμα ἀλγηδόναις μαστιγούμενος, I am grievouſly pained with thoſe blows, it follows preſently μιλίλαξεν, he died, v. 31. From this of the cudgel in this puniſhment of τυμπανισμὸς, it is that Polybius for τυμπανίζειν ſets ξυλοκοπεῖν, to beat with cudgels, in reſpect of this one part of that puniſhment, not but that it had much more in it beſide, as beſide βάσανος, wrack, and ἀκρωλειασμὸς cutting off the extreme parts, formerly mentioned, (it ſeems by the ſtory of the Maccabees) τηγανισμὸς frying or broyling. By what hath been ſaid it appears, that this puniſhment was, 1. very painful, 2^dly, contumelious, 3^dly, capital. 1. Very painful, ſo Ariſtotle Rhet: 2. c. 5. mentions τοὺς ἤδη τυμπανιζομένους, men that are under that puniſhment, as thoſe that think themſelves διὰ πάντα πεπονθέναι, to have ſuffered all the ſad meaſure imaginable, and ἀναψυγμένους εἰς τὸ μέλλον, made ſoulleſſe and ſenſleſſe for what is behind: 2^dly, moſt contumelious, for ſo l. 3. Mac. διηκίσεις βασάνοις ἀποτυμπανιζόμενον, that puniſhment was a moſt ſhamefull torment: 3^dly, capital, bringing death finally, though ſlowly, and therefore is named by Ariſtotle Rhet: 2. 5. among thoſe things which have no ἐλπίδα σωτηρίας hope of eſcaping, and he reckons Antiphon the Poet for one, c. 6. who ἀποτυμπανιζόμενος, being thus puniſhed by Dionyſius, asked one of his companions jeſtingly, who of the ſpectators ſhould ſee them to morrow: So in Maccabees ἢ πληγαῖς τιλάτων μαστιγούμενοι c. 6. they die with it, and ſo the King of Babylon, the third after Nebuchadnezzar, as * Euſebius cites it out of Polyhyſtor, ὡὸ τῶν φίλων ἀποτυμπανίζων, was ſo uſed by his friends, and then it preſently follows ἀπολυμένου ὑ, and dying &c. which is repeated in like manner by Beroſus l. 3. Χαλδαικῶν in the fragments ſet out by Joſ: Scaliger, where yet for Χαβασσαραχός in Euſebius, we find Λοβοσσοραχόδος, who, ſaith Scaliger, was certainly Belſhazzar, of whom ſaith Juſtin Martyr from Dan: 5. ἀποτυμπανίζεται τὸ θηρίον, the beaſt was put to that death, for wch we now read in the Greek copie ἀναιρεῖται, he was killed, and no more. Megaſthenes out of Abydenus calls him Λαβασσοραχάδης, and ſaith he died ἐπὶ βίᾳ μόρῳ, by a violent death, and adds no more, See Scaliger in thoſe Fragments in the end of the Book De Emend: Temp: p. 4. By all this it appears, that this was a puniſhment uſed among the Grecians and Babylonians, And, it ſeems, by the Romans too, for ſo in Euſeb: Eccl: Hiſt: l. 5. c. 1. we find, Ἀποστείλαντος Καίσαρος τοὺς μὲ ἀποτυμπανίζεσθαι &c. of the Emperors commanding the Chriſtians to be put to this torment; and if they renounced Chriſtianity, they were to be looſed.

* Præpar: Evang. l. 4. p. 267.

h. Some copies read ἐπυράθης, others have ἐπυρώθης; The truth is, ἐπυρέθης, which is the ordinary reading, ſeems not to be agreeable, after πεῖραν ἔλαβον, they received trial &c. and neither the Syriack, nor Chryſoſtome (and they that follow him) have this word, or any thing for it, ſo that it is likely it came out of the margine into the Text, and then 'twill be doubtfull, but not much material, which reading is to be preferred.

What is the meaning of this [κρεῖττόν τι ſomewhat better] which this author ſaith was by God foreſeen, and reſerved for the faithful, conſtant Chriſtians, will beſt be underſtood by the former verſe 39. Theſe all μαρτυρηθέντες διὰ πίστεως, being commended, or having received teſtimony, or perhaps being martyred by their faith, οὐκ ἐκομίσαντο τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν received not the promiſe. Where firſt it muſt be obſerved who ἐπὶ πάντες all theſe] were, moſt diſtinctly the Maccabees, mentioned immediately before, v. 36, 37, 38. but not ſo as to exclude, or not to comprehend thoſe others, which were ſet down, as examples of faith before them, for they alſo muſt be contained in the ἐπὶ πάντες all theſe. For the Maccabees, next before mentioned, theſe are in the Jewes ſtories commended for their conſtancy in adhering to Gods commands, or the Jewiſh lawes, in ſpite of the cruelleſt perſecutors, and tormentors, and were really martyred, or put to death, loſt their lives, διὰ πίστεως by their faith or conſtancy, and of theſe it is ſaid they received not the promiſe, God having foreſeen, or reſerved ſomewhat better for us, i. e. God having reſerved for the Chriſtian Church ſome performance of promiſe, which he had not afforded thoſe former. By this it is already apparent that eternal bliſſe in another world, was not the matter of this promiſe, both becauſe this was not it, that they could be evidenced to have miſt by their being tormented, and put to death, but that which it was more ſure they received, becauſe they were ſo ill uſed here, and 2. becauſe if it were ſuppoſed to be true, (as ſome vainly conceive) that thoſe that died before Chriſt, did not attain their bliſſe till after Chriſt's reſurrection, yet it will be acknowledged by all, that they then received it, and then it will follow that the ἡμεῖς, the Chriſtians had not κρεῖττόν τι any advantage of them, that lived before, in that reſpect, thoſe obtaining the bliſſe aſſoon, or ſooner than they, and no torment or temporary pains being ſuppoſable for ſuch martyrs between the day of their ſufferings, and their attaining to bliſſe, wherein theſe latter can by any be thought to exceed them. It follows then, that as the promiſe, which they by ſuffering, received not, was ſome promiſe of this life, ſo the [κρεῖττόν τι the ſomewhat better] was ſomewhat, which the Chriſtians ſhould enjoy in this life. In the next place then, we may have another way of finding out, what this promiſe was, wherein the Chriſtians were to have the advantage of the former, by looking on ver. 13. where of Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob it is ſaid, in like manner, that they died receiving not the promiſe, That promiſe was clearly the promiſed land, that Canaan, the type of the Chriſtians reſt, or deliverance from their enemies, (ſee note on Heb. 3. c.) which they received not in their life time, and though their poſterity afterward did receive it, yet ſome promiſes there were made unto Abraham & his ſeed, which even they, that attain'd the promiſed land, did not receive. And what were they? Among the promiſes made to Abraham (not perſonally to him, but to his ſeed) this is one,

Gen.

Gen. 22. 17. that his ſeed ſhould poſſeſſe the gates of his enemies, This it ſeems was looke upon by all the Jewes as a ſpecial part of the promiſe to Abraham, repeated by all the prophets, Lu. 1. 70. that they ſhould be ſaved from their enemies, and from the hands of all that hate them, v. 71. and this diſtinctly there mentioned by Zachary, as a ſpecial part of the Covenant, and oath made to Abraham, v. 72, 73. that he would grant them, that being delivered without feare from the hands of their enemies, they might ſerve God in holineſſe, &c. ver. 74, 75. And this was it, which being not fully attained by Abraham's poſterity in Canaan, was ſtill by them expected to be perform'd by the Meſſias, and was the [κρεῖττόν τι, the ſomewhat better] that was reſerved for theſe times of the Meſſiah. For of the reſt of the faithful, named after Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, even thoſe that were poſſeſſors of Canaan, who did ſubdue enemies by their faith ver. 32, 33. and ſo are ſaid to have obtain'd promiſes there, yet this was not for a continuance, ſuch as might be called the poſſeſſing the gates of their enemies, and deliverance from the hands of all that hated them, but (as by the conſequents, eſpecially by the ſtory of the Maccabees 'tis manifeſt) this Church or nation of the Jewes fell under heavy perſecutions and oppreſſions, and was waſted, and brought low by theſe means, and at laſt was delivered up to be finally deſtroyed by their enemies, their city, their temple, and their whole ſervice, and way of worſhip. Whereas the Chriſtian faith and profeſſion, and Church was to endure, and hold out, and both flouriſh the more for perſecutions, and finally get victory over all, and never be deſtroyed by the enemies thereof; which was the meaning of Chriſt's prediction, that the Gates of ᾍδης, i.e. the power of deſtroyers, ſhould not prevail againſt it, which being all one in effect with the promiſe to Abraham, that his ſeed (ſpiritual ſeed, the Chriſtian Church) ſhould poſſeſſe the gates of their enemies (for to poſſeſſe the gates of their enemies, is directly equivalent with the gates of their enemies not prevailing againſt them) it follows moſt properly here, that they without us ſhould not be perfected, i. e. that they ſhould not have the promiſe to Abraham made good to them in the utmoſt extent, but that they were to want the higheſt part of the completion of the literal ſenſe of that promiſe, till it were accompliſht in the Chriſtian Church, which ſhould in this have the preeminence, a very conſiderable advantage above the Jewes, that however it were perſecuted, it ſhould never be deſtroyed; And this notion, and interpretation of this place, as it agrees very well with the purport of the whole Epiſtle, (deſigned on purpoſe, to fortifie the Chriſtian Hebrews againſt the dread of perſecutions, upon this one ground, becauſe Chriſt was able, and willing to deliver them, c. 4. 15. yea and would now ſpeedily come unto their reſcue c. 10. 37. and though ſome reſiſted to blood, died in the cauſe, yet a ſignal deliverance they ſhould ſpeedily have by the deſtruction of their enemies the Jewes, and in fine the Chriſtian Church ſhould not fail, but flouriſh the more for perſecutions) ſo it ſeems to be taken notice of by Procopius on Iſaiah (p. 683.) who interprets the place περὶ τῶν παρ' Ἑβραίοις ἐναρέτων τῶν παρελθόντων χρόνων θεσπιῳδήσαντος, of the pious Jewes that expected the coming of Chriſt, and again p. 701. when he ſpeaks of Chriſt's coming, he ſaith of it, καθ' ὃν τοῖς πεπιστευκόσι τὰς ἐν ὕλαις ἐπαγγελίας ἀπέδωκεν, By which God gave beleivers thoſe promiſes which they hoped for ſo long. As for the word τελειωθῶσι be perfected] that ſignifies to receive a reward, or crown, to have the full of their hope, or expectation beſtowed upon them, and accordingly Chriſt is ſaid to be τελειωτὴς τῆς πίστεως the perfecter of their faith, c. 12. 3. in giving them the full completion of the promiſes the object of their faith, which was not done to the Jewes (before Chriſt) χωρὶς ἡμῶν, without us, but had the full completion in the Chriſtian Church. According to which it is ſaid of theſe promiſes, that the Fathers of old ſaw them and ſaluted them afarre off, as thoſe that ſalute their friends at a diſtance, being not able to come neer them, μὴ λαβόντες but received them not, v. 13. that felicity being reſerved peculiar to the Chriſtian Church, which was now to enter on theſe promiſes.

CHAP. XII.

Paraphraſe.

1. WHerefore, ſeeing we alſo are compaſſed about with ſo great a cloud of witneſſes, let us [a] lay aſide every weight, and the ſin * that doth ſo eaſily beſet us, and let us run with † patience the race that is † ſet before us,]

1. Wherefore we having ſuch a multitude of examples of faith and conſtancy in the antients, which may ſerve as ſo many encouragements, and obligations to bearten, and incite us to our courſe, let us lay aſide all worldly love, and fear, that may hinder and encumber us in our way, and how fair pretences ſoever we may have to forſake Chriſt, yet let us not fall off from our conſtancy, but proceed cheerfully, and perſevere in our Chriſtian race, whatſoever difficulties, or afflictions we meet with, as they that hope not for any reward till they come to the end of their courſe, and there prove conquerors over all oppoſition. a.

2. And for our encouragement let us look on our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, who in himſelf hath given an example of the enduring of the higheſt afflictions, and will be ſure to crown all thoſe that follow after him, hath led us as a captain in this march of faith, having in his eye that reward of his ſufferings, a numerous ſeed, Iſa. 53. a Church of pious livers, and an exaltation expected from God for himſelf, Phil. 2. 9. and in intuition of theſe, going before us courageouſly through all aſſaults, and being now in the poſſeſſion of all power in heaven, hath undertaken to reward whatſoever we doe, or ſuffer for him.

3. For conſider his patience and perſeverance, how heavie preſſures he ſuffered from his enemies, and by conſidering of him you will be ingaged to perſevere alſo, never to leave the field, or turn cowards. b. c.

light skirmiſhing, you may well reſolve to prepare your ſelves for yet ſharper aſſaults; You have been exhorted, and warned by Solomon, in the perſon of wiſdome ſpeaking to her ſons, Prov. 3.11. neither to kick againſt Gods puniſhments, without making that uſe of them for which they are ſent, (as they that are no way reformed by afflictions) nor to be diſcouraged and diſheartned by them.

6. For it is an effect in God of paternal love, that on his beloved children and ſervants he inflicts puniſhments for their farther amendment, and it is an argument of his approving and acknowledging them for his own, that he dealeth thus ſharply with them, permitting them to be perſecuted.

6. For whom the Lord loveth he chaſtneth, and ſcourgeth every ſon whom he receiveth.

7. And therefore in that yee are afflicted or puniſhed, yee are to reckon your ſelves dealt with as children by their parents:

7. If yee endure chaſtening, God dealeth with you as with ſons; for what ſon is he whom the father chaſteneth not?] for among men yee ſhall ſeldome ever hear of a child that hath not ſometimes been chaſtned by his parent.

9. Again we know that when our carnall fathers, which begot us men, chaſtiſed us, we have not been incited thereby to love or reverence them leſſe, to forſake or renounce them, and ſhall we for a little perſecution fall off from Chriſt our ſpiritual father, which makes Chriſtians and Saints of us, and if obey'd conſtantly, and adher'd to in ſpight of perſecution, will beſtow eternal life on us, as a reward of our patience and perſeverance?

10. The carnal parents indeed chaſtiſed you when you were children and no longer, and that (as having abſolute dominion over their children) by the rules of their own judgement or will, which are oft corrupt. But all Gods chaſtiſements are for your advantage, that you may be the higher advanced toward his purity, or ſanctity, and ſo 'tis a mercy of his, and a kindneſſe above that of parents, that he never gives over this ſpecial care of you, but continues this healthful diſcipline unto you.

11. 'Tis true indeed that there is in all affliction, that which is ungrateful to fleſh and bloud, and ſo cannot be joyous to us at the preſent, but then in the end it gives us our payment for all our patience, viz. a bleſſed reward of bliſſe and peace to all that have ſuffered any thing as Chriſtians.

12, 13. Wherefore encourage all the cowardly puſillanimous fearful perſons

12. Wherefore lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees,

14. Two great faults there be in the Gnoſticks, of which I would adviſe you, malice and uncleanneſſe, all filthy pollutions of the fleſh, and be you carefull yee be not ſeduced into either of theſe, but on the contrary ſtrive as much as is poſſible to maintain peace, and all kind of charity even with your perſecutors, and be ſure yee doe not make uſe of Chriſtian liberty to licentiouſneſſe, to the neglecting of that purity and ſanctity of life, without endevour of, and growth in which, no man ſhall come to heaven;

18. For ye are not come unto the mount that might be touched, and burned with fire, nor unto blackness and darkness and tempest,] 18. This is enough to inforce the great admonition of this Epistle, of holding fast the faith, and not falling off, for persecutions, to Judaisme and heresie; For you Christians have a more honourable calling, than that of the Jewes, that was only to the law given from mount Sinai, a mountain on earth, onely that terrour with terrible representations of fire, and thick clouds, and thunder, and lightning,

Yea unto Jesus Christ, who as a mediator between God and us, hath established a second covenant, and assured us, that it is indeed the covenant of God, and consequently that we may be confident that God will perform his part of it, and now requires of us, and gives us grace to perform ours; And to his blood, with which we must be sprinkled, before we can be admitted into heaven (as the Priest was to sprinkle himself before he went into the holy of holies) which is quite contrary to Abel's blood, as 'tis mentioned in Genesis, that called for vengeance on Cain, this called for mercy even upon his crucifiers, if they would repent, and reform, and doth powerfully draw down mercy on the penitent beleivers.

And therefore be sure ye despise not Christ, who is come to deliver God's will unto you: For if they were destroyed that contemned Moses that delivered the Law from mount Sinai, then much severer destruction is to be expected for them that despise the commandments of Christ, that delivers them immediately from heaven.

For that is the notation of the phrase which is rendred [Yet once] which signifies some final ruine, and that very remarkable, as here the total subversion of the Jewes, of all their law and policy, as of things that were made on purpose to be destroyed, designed by God only for a time, for that imperfect state, as forerunner and preparative to the Gospel, which therefore is a state, of which there is no mention of the shaking of that, nor consequently of any other future state that shall succeed it, which signifies that that is most certainly to indure for ever, till the end of the world.

28. Wherefore we receiving a kingdome † which cannot be moved, let us have grace, whereby we may serve God acceptably, with reverence and godly fear.] 28. We therefore that are vouchsafed our part in this immutable kingdome, or state under Christ, a condition that no persecutions, nor even the gates of hell shall prevail against, but it shall be sure finally to overcome and survive all opposition, Let us take care to hold fast and not forsake the Gospel, (see note on ch. 13, c.) through which we may serve God so as he will now accept of, with reverence of so glorious a master, and with fear of his wrath, if we doe provoke him by abusing his mercies (see Phil.2.c.)

29. For our God is a consuming fire.] 29. For this gracious God which is our God, will shew himself to the provoking Christians, as (or more severely then) he threatned to the Israelites, Deut.4.24.

This

This verse is wholly agonistical (as appears by the ἀγῶνα combate or race mentioned in the close of it) and must be explained in every part by proportion with the ἀγῶνες or games among the Gracians: These Agones were sacred and solemnly kept, and in them there was a kinde of Assises or Court of Judicature: He that proposed the combat (to which refers προκείμενον ἀγῶνα the proposed race in the end of the verse) that set the laws of the agones, and adjudged the crown to the conquerour, was called ϑεσμοθέτης or κριτὴς the Judge, and to him Christ is here compared, who as he is the ἀρχηγὸς, leader, that goes foremost, and shews us the way in our Christian race, so he is τελειωτὴς v. 2. the rewarder and crowner of them that conquer: So again he that proclaimed the laws of the combate, was called κήρυξ, the praeco, or cryer, 1 Cor. 9. 27. and they that were set at the goal to discern and pronounce who came first thither (and so was conqueror) were μάρτυρες witnesses, and as they brought in evidence, so the crown was awarded by the Judge, and not onely they, but all that stood about, as spectators, to behold, and commend the courage, and constancy of the athleta, were μάρτυρες witnesses also, And of them there was always good store, a great concourse of people, from whence they were called πανηγύρεις frequentiae, populous meetings, to behold the games to see who were conquerors in them. To these last are here compared those great examples of faith and patience, which had been mentioned in the former Chapter, who being now at their Journies end, their goal, their rest, are supposed to look on the present Christian racers, both to give evidence whether they run well or no, and with their commendations to hearten and encourage them in their combates, that they faint not or give over. And there being so many here mentioned in the former chapter, they are fitly called νέφος a cloud, as any great number or troup of men, is rhetorically called a cloud, and that very frequently among authors. And because the spectators in those games stood on either side of the race or stadium, or otherwise round about, at the other games of wrastling &c. or at a Theatre, it is therefore styled περικείμενος νέφος, an encompassing cloud of witnesses, or such as is placed round about us, to look and testifie, how men behave themselves in their race. It is farther sufficiently known, that they that were to perform any of those exercises, used all care to fit and prepare themselves for it, by diet before, so as it might fit them to perform their course, and at the time by having nothing on, that might hinder or foreslow them. To this purpose they did carefully rid themselves of all weight, made themselves as light as they could, and left their very garments might hang in their way, incumber them in their course, they generally put them off, and ran naked, γυμνοὶ καὶ ἀχίτωνες, saith * Porphyrie, naked & without their garments, from whence they were also called γυμνασιαὶ, referring to their naked running. To this way of preparing themselves to the race, the Author here refers; to that of weight distinctly, by ἀποθέμενοι ὄγκον πάντα, laying aside, or putting off all weight, meaning thereby most probably the love and care of the world, which is apt to presse down the soul, and was a very considerable temptation in those times of persecution, where the love of the world was such enmity with God, and made so many inclinable to the Gnosticks, in hope of preserving their worldly wealth. To the latter, the stripping themselves, putting off their garments, our ordinary Translation refers the latter words, ἀποθέμενοι τὴν εὐπερίστατον ἁμαρτίαν, laying aside that sin which doth so easily beset us, taking the word περιστατος in an active sense, for intangling (as a light garment is wont to doe) and so hindring their course, not by its weight or pressing down, as the ὄγκος, or weight before, but by some other way of encumbring or disturbing, as light garments, which by the wind or motion of the air, become troubles and hindrances to the racer. And answerable to that we might imagine the fears that come across men in their Christian course, and much hinder their speed, and interrupt their constancy. And that cowardly humor, those treacherous fears, that, like the light garment, intangle them at every step, must be laid aside, or else they will never run δι' ὑπομονῆς with indurance or perseverance, the race that is set before them. But of that word περιστατος it must be observed, that as it is an ἅπαξ λεγόμενον, onely this once used in the whole Bible, so it will be matter of some difficulty to determine, what is the exact importance of it. First then it is not reasonable, or according to any analogy to render it, as it is ordinarily rendred, in an active sense; περίστατος of which it is compounded, and ἀπερίστατος, which is the contrary to it, being certainly passives, and so Saint Chrysostome here inclines most to a passive signification. Secondly, then, supposing it a passive, one notion of the word presently offers it self (from the Apostles use of περίστασις 2 Tim. 2. 16. and Tit. 3. 12. to decline or avoid) that which may easily be declined. So Josephus speaking of the Essens, τὸ δὲ ὀμνύειν ἀπὸ περιστάσεως, swearing is avoided by them. And Lucian, ὅπως ἐκτρέπομαι καὶ φεύγω ὥσπερ τοὺς λυττῶντας τῶν κυνῶν, I will avoid and decline them, as I would mad dogs. But this cannot here be thought the Apostles scope, to diminish the force of this sin here, as a thing easily to be avoided by our care, but rather to note it as very noxious, and apt to seduce and mischief, if it be not carefully warded. If therefore this notion of περίστατος be here taken, then certainly the meaning of the word must be, not that which may very easily be avoided, but is very fit to be declined or taken heed of, that which there is all reason to part with, and so ἀποτιθέσθαι to put off, as being so useless and so dangerous and hurtful in our course. But a third notion I suppose of this word may be thus fetcht out. Περιστάσεις literally signifies circumstances, as when we read in Rhetoricians ϑέσις ἀπερίστατος, a bare naked position, and ζήτημα ἀπερίστατον, a question generally proposed, without the circumstances of time, place, person, intention, occasion; see Hermogenes l. 3. περὶ ἰδεῶν: According to this it is that Hesychius explains ἀπερίστατον by μωρὸν, ἀφροσύνῃ μὴ ἔχον, which I suppose is thus to be rendred, Stolidum, nullas habens hypotheses, nulla argumenta, foolish, and that which hath no reasons, arguments, or consequently pretences for it. And if this be the notion of the privative, then ἀπερίστατος will be

be that which hath ſuch fair arguments and pretences for it, the ſin which is ſet forth with ſuch goodly circumſtances to ingratiate and recommend it to us, as when he that denies Chriſt, doth it (as the Gnoſticks ſaid of themſelves) onely with the mouth, not with the heart, and again with an innocent intention, and onely to avoid perſecution, and utter undoing in the world; And this ſenſe as it agrees beſt with the critical importance of the word, ſo it accords exactly with the context and ſcope of the Author; who here exhorts to venture all the hazards, perſecutions, death it ſelf, rather then, upon any pretence, to forſake the Aſſemblies, to deny Chriſt, c. 10, 11. and here in this chapter he ſets Chriſt's example before them, a pattern of conſtancy and perſeverance even to death. And ſo this is the moſt probable notion of the word, that I can think of.

b. Κάμητε is alſo an agoniſtical word, literally ſignifying to be tyred, belonging to them that are worſted in any of thoſe exerciſes (Νικήσαντος δὲ οὐκ ἔστι κάμνειν, ſaith Plutarch, it cannot be affirmed of the victors) to goe out of the field, like a wounded, or wearied, or worſted perſon. So when Coriolanus being wounded, was admoniſhed by his friends to retire, and cure his wounds, he anſwered ὁ δὲ νικῶντα κάμνειν, A conqueror ought not to retire, or ſubduce himſelf out of the field. And thus generally it ſignifies to give over fighting, ἀπόνως and ἀπαγγέλλειν in Phavorinus, to give over, to deſpair, and again ἀνδρίζεσθαι to play the coward or runaway. Κάμητε

c. Ψυχαῖς ἐκλύεσθε, and ἐκλύεσθαι ſimply, v. 4. ſignifies in the ſame ſenſe that κάμητε, to turn coward, or puſillanimous, ſuch as whoſe ſouls within them fall away like water, diſſolve, and 'tis ſpoken of thoſe, who give over the attempt as hopeleſſe, flie diſheartned, creſtfallen, out of the field (ἀναπεπτωκότες and ἀνδρωθέντες in Thucydides) expreſſed again v. 12. by παρειμένας χεῖρας the hands that hang down, which note the prælii detractatio, giving over the buſineſſe, yeilding, flying out of the field, confeſſing themſelves conquered, So Eccluſ. 2. 12. after the woe againſt them, 'that truſt not in the Lord, διειλαὶ καρδίαι cowardly hearts, and χεῖρες παρειμέναι, the hands hanging down, are put together, for which the Greek of Jer. 35. 3. read ἀνειμέναι χεῖρες extended hands, as in * Plutarch, ἀναπλῆσαι χεῖρας to hold up, and in Cicero, manus tollere, in Virgil, tendere palmas, to hold up, or ſtretch out the hands; the holding out and hanging down of the hands being both equally contrary to the uſing them, or holding them up (the exerere lacertos ſtretching the arms in a manlike manner againſt all oppoſers) and both ſignes of a conquered perſon, that yeilds himſelf ſo, which the Greek expreſſe by ἀπονεῦσαι. Ψυχαῖς ἐκλύεσθε Παρειμένας χεῖρας *in Lycurg.

d. Of the umbratilis pugna, or σκιαμαχία, beating the air, or σκιαμαχεῖν, we have formerly ſpoken, on 1 Cor. 9. 26. the firſt lighter ſkirmiſhes before the ſtata pugna, or ſet combate, the beginning of the bloudy fight. To this the Apoſtle here refers, when he ſaith, yee have not yet reſiſted, μέχρις αἵματος, as far as blood, i. e. as far as the old athleta were wont, who after the σκιαμαχεῖν, or brandiſhing of their arms or weapons, at laſt fell to down-right blowes with their caſtus in their hands, which ordinarily brought the blood with them. This μέχρις αἵματος the Apoſtle applies to their ſpiritual agones (πρὸς τὸ ψυχῆς ἀλύμασι ἀγωνιζόμενοι, the Olympicks of the ſoul in Porphyrie's ſtyle, and here πρὸς τὴν ἁμαρτίαν ἀντιγωνιούμενοι, combating againſt ſin) that they had no reaſon to be diſheartned with Chriſt's permitting them to be afflicted and perſecuted as they were, for there are far greater and bloudier combates againſt ſin, ſuch as bring bloud and death, and againſt thoſe they muſt be provided, in compariſon of which, theirs yet are but σκιαμαχίαι, or ſkirmiſhes.

Agreeably to the former agoniſtical expreſſions in the beginning of the chapter, is here added γεγυμνασμένοι, exerciſed in theſe gymnaſia of afflictions, and the receiving of their βραβεῖον or reward, ſtyled here καρπὸς δικαιοσύνης the fruit of righteouſneſſe, that fruit which belongs to all righteous men now under the Goſpel (or elſe according to a ſingular notion of δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſſe for felicity, mention'd in the note on 2 Tim. 4. 2.) and emphatically εἰρηνικὸς καρπὸς, referring as the learned P. Faber hath conceived, to the corona oleagina, the olive crown, (that tree being an emblem and ſymbolum of peace) of which the Olympian crowns for their victors were ordinarily made. But of that ſee more, Ja. 3. note f. e. Γεγυμνασμένοι Καρπὸς δικαιοσύνης Ἐιρηνικὸς καρπὸς

Why Eſau, in ſelling his birth-right, is here called profane, will appear by that known obſervation among the Jews, that as long as God was ſerved within private walls, before the erecting of the Tabernacle and Temple, and inſtitution of Prieſthood, the right of Prieſthood in every family was annexed to the primogeniture, the firſt-born was ſtill the Prieſt. Thus Exod. 24. 5. when 'tis ſaid that Moſes ſent the young men of the children of Iſrael to offer burnt-offerings and peace-offerings unto the Lord, the Chaldee paraphraſe renders them בוכרי the firſt-born, and Uzielides adds this Scholion, becauſe as yet the Aaronical Prieſts were not inſtituted. This, ſay the Jews (and 'tis reaſonable to beleive them) was it, that made Jacob ſo ambitious of the πρωτότοκια or privileges of the primogeniture, and, if Baal Haturim on Gen. 28. out of Bereſith Rabba, may bee heeded, this was it, which Jacob deſired to have confirmed to him by God in thoſe words Gen. 28. 20. If God will be with me. And therefore for Eſau to ſell this ſacred privilege for one meſſe of pottage, to undervalue this prerogative of offering to God, ſo vilely, out of a little preſent impatience, (and proportionably for the Hebrew Chriſtians, for a poor ſecular end, viz. to rid themſelves of a little perſecution, or affliction for the Goſpel, to quit the publick ſervice of God, as it appears ſome did at this time, c. 10. nay to forſake Chriſtianity it ſelf, to apoſtatize utterly (to which that was but a præludium) and ſo to part with that privilege of Prieſts, which belongs to all Chriſtians, ſo far as the prerogative of offering up prayers to God) this will eaſily be acknowledged an act of great profaneneſſe. To which may be accommodated that which the Jeruſalem Targum, Gen. 25. 34. ſaith of Eſau, he contemn'd his primogeniture, and ſet at nought his part in the world to come, and denied the reſurrection of the dead, viz. becauſe in contemning his privileges of primogeniture, and, in that, of the Prieſthood, he is interpreted to have done all this. f. g. Πανήγυρις

The word πανήγυρις signifies properly, ἀγὼν, συνάθροισις, a theatre, a multitude of people come together, as in the Grecian games to behold their agones and their sacra. Hence doth it signifie also any frequentia populi, but especially a promiscuous mixt multitude from all parts, and, in a sacred sense, an assembly of worshippers of all sorts and countreys, which is a particular notation of the Christian Church, the net, which gathers up good and bad (i. e. Jewes which were called the onely people of God before, and Gentiles which were proverbially called ἁμαρτωλοὶ sinners) is made up of a company of all nations, nay takes in the Angels themselves named immediately before, and who are said to sing, and joyn with us in our publick assemblies.

h. Τὰ πρωτότοκα πρωτότοκον

The first-born had not onely the privilege of the priesthood before the law, but alwaies since, the פִּי שְׁנַיִם the double portion, διπλοῦν μέρος, the portion not onely of possessions, but of dignity and honour above the rest of the brethren; And proportionably the Apostles which were either simply the first converted to the faith of Christ, or else preferred before others, as Judah to the primogeniture of dignity, and Levi in respect of the Priesthood, are call'd here the first-born, and the Church first founded in them, and planted by them, is here called ἐκκλησία πρωτοτόκων, the Church of the first-born, the Apostolical Church.

i. Ἀπογεγραμμένοι ἐν οὐρανοῖς

Ἀπογεγραμμένοι signifies to be enrolled (see note on Lu. 2. i.) and this belonged either to all the congregation of Israel, Num. 1. 18. or in a special manner to the first-born of every family, who had that dignity before others, and in time came (as families grew into tribes) to be princes of the tribes of their fathers, Num. 1. 16. or to some choise renounced men, who were to be captains or heads of thousands in Israel, or finally to all souldiers listed or enrolled. And to this manner of enrolling doth this phrase ἀπογεγραμμένοι ἐν οὐρανοῖς, written, or enrolled in heaven, referre, to denote those that are registred by God, matriculated in heaven, i. e. beside the Apostles, all other holy men, renowned in the book of God, and so this phrase is fit to be joyned to the πανηγύρει foregoing in the forementioned notion.

k. Τετελειωμένοι

Τετελειωμένοι are those that have received their crown, their reward, in the agonistical notion so often mentioned, i. e. that have attained the end of their race, are triumphant in heaven. And the use of this very phrase among the Jewes, is ordinary קדושים נכלים ἅγιοι τετελειωμένοι, those that are advanced to be, as they are wont to say, under the throne of glory.

l. Χρηματίζει

Χρηματίζει is a word of a special signification, noting divine revelation, either by בת קול the voice from heaven, or any other way. So Mat. 2. 12. 22. revelation of God's will by dream, and Lu. 2. 26. by that or some other such way, and Act. 10. 22. a revelation by an Angel. So of Moses, Heb. 8. 5. and here, of Noe c. 11. 7. and Rom. 11. 4. ὁ χρηματισμὸς that voice from heaven to Elias, 1 Kin. 19. 12. Hence saith Phavorinus, χρηματισμὸς θεσπεσία, it signifies a vision, ῥημάτων, the giving of the law, and again χρηματισμὸς δίδωμι ἤγουν θείους λόγους, oracles, or divine speeches, agreeable to the known notion of χρηστήριον, for μαντεῖον τοῦ θεοῦ, an oracle of God. According to which notion of the word it is here to be rendred, not speaking simply, but speaking from God, delivering oracles, warnings or precepts from him.

CHAP. XIII.

1, 2. And for particular directions of Chriſtian life, I ſhall commend theſe unto you at this time, in reſpect of your preſent ſtate, Be kind unto all Chriſtians, not onely thoſe of your own nation, Jewes, but to any of all countreys, ſtrangers ſo called, or aliens, let not the Chriſtian virtue of hoſpitality to ſtrangers be ſtrange to you, for by the practiſe of that Abraham and Lot, Gen. 18, & 19. received Angels into their houſes unawares.

1. LET brotherly love continue.
2. Be not forgetfull to entertain ſtrangers, for thereby ſome have entertained Angels unawares.]

3. Have that compaſſion to priſoners, that ſenſe of their ſufferings, as you would have if you were in the ſame condition with them; relieve and reſcue thoſe that are under any affliction, as men that know and conſider your ſelves to be in the ſame frail humane eſtate, ſubject to all that befalls any man.

3. Remember them that are in bonds, as bound with them; and them which * ſuffer adverſity, as being your ſelves alſo in the body.]

* are evil intreated κακουχούμενοι

4. And whereas the Gnoſticks pronounce marriage unlawfull, but indulge to all unnatural luſts, doe ye look on marriage not onely as lawful, but as honourable, inſtituted by God: onely take care that you make uſe of it as a fortification againſt all unlawfull luſts, For fornication of what ſort ſoever, which the diſlike of marriage brings many to, and adultery which is the violation of marriage, are ſins that will be ſeverely puniſhed by God.

4. † Marriage is honourable in all, and the bed * undefiled; but † whoremongers and adulterers God will judge.]

† Let marriage be honourable among all, Τίμιος ὁ γάμος ἐν πᾶσιν,
* be undefiled ἀμίαντος
† fornicators πόρνοις

5. And in ſuch times eſpecially as theſe of perſecution, there is no temper ſo fit for you to be furniſhed againſt, as that of covetouſneſſe, whatever God at preſent allows you, be ye fully ſatisfied with that. For what God ſaid to Joſuah of the Jewes, he ſaith to all true Chriſtians, of whom thoſe were the type, that he will by no means utterly deſtitute them, and ſo they have no need of that fear, which is wont to betray men to covetouſneſſe.

5. Let your * converſation be without covetouſneſſe: and be content with † ſuch things as you have: for he hath ſaid, I will never leave thee, nor forſake thee.]

* diſpoſition, temper of mind, manners, be free from the love of money, ἀφιλάργυρος ὁ τρόπος
† the things that are preſent τοῖς παροῦσι

6. So that we Chriſtians, particularly you Hebrew Chriſtians, that ſuffer ſo much for the profeſſion of the faith, may from the word of God take courage and ſay, I will truſt God with my ſecurity, and live fearleſſe of all danger, knowing that as long as he ſees it beſt for me, he will deliver me from worldly dangers, and that when he permits them to come, the utmoſt ſhall doe me no hurt.

6. So that we may boldly ſay, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man ſhall doe unto me.]

7. * Remember

* Remind of your Governors μνημονευετε των ηγουμενων υμων

7. * Remember them [a] which have the rule over you, who have ſpoken unto you the word of God, whoſe faith follow, conſidering the end of their converſation.] 7. Set before your eyes the Biſhops and Governours that have a.

been in your Church, and preached the Goſpel to you, obſerve their manner of living, their perſeverance till death, and then make their faith, their perſeverance and conſtancy, in the doctrine of the Goſpel, the example for you to imitate and tranſcribe.

8. Jeſus Chriſt the ſame yeſterday, and to day, and for ever. 8. The ſame faith that then was the true faith in which they perſevered to the death, will be ſo now unto you, and to all ages, you have no reaſon to think that 'tis ſo ſuddenly changed, that Judaiſme which they took to be aboliſhed, ſhould now be in force again among you, as your Gnoſtick teachers are willing to perſwade you.

† various ποικιλαις * which walked εν οις περιεπατησαν

9. Be not carried about with † divers and ſtrange doctrines. for it is a good thing that the heart be [b] eſtabliſhed with [c] grace, not with meats, which have not profited them * that have been occupied therein.] 9. This change & bringing in of new doctrines of Judaiſm b. c.

into the Church is a piece of dangerous inconſtancy, 'Twere ſure more for the turn to be grounded in the truth, to take that which is beſt for your turn, and then never to remove or be carried about from that to any other, And that that is the Goſpel, and not the Moſaical law about ſacrifices and meats, &c that this is much better for the ſoul than tother, will ſoon appear unto you, if you conſider, how empty and unprofitable thoſe obſervances of the law alwaites were, (conſidered in themſelves) even when they were in force, for even then they that dealt in them were really little profited by them, (ſee ch. 10. 1,2,3. where the ſacrifices are ſaid only to be a commemoration of ſin, unable to expiate, and ſo leaving in eſtate of damnation, unleſſe they advance farther to Chriſt, ſignified by thoſe ſacrifices.)

10. We have an altar whereof they have no right to eat, which ſerve the tabernacle.] 10. And if any man think his Judaizing will doe him no hurt in reſpect of Chriſtianity, that thoſe that ſtand for the Moſaical performances, may yet have their portion in Chriſt, let him know he is miſtaken, For Chriſt, the only Chriſtian altar to which we bring all our ſacrifices, and who is ſo beneficial to us, will not be beneficial to them that depend on the Moſaical law, they that doe ſo, have no right to partake of Chriſt (Gal. 5. 2. If you be circumciſed, Chriſt ſhall profit you nothing.)

† for a ſin-offering περι αμαρτιας

11. For the bodies of thoſe beaſts, whoſe blood is brought into the ſanctuary by the high prieſt † for ſin, are burnt without the camp.] 11. And the truth of this you may diſcern by a ceremony among the Jewes, to wit, in the ſacrifice of atonement or expiation, of which the prieſt never eat a bit, the blood he carried in with him into the holy place, and the body was burnt without the camp: Now by that ſacrifice the Meſſias was typified moſt lively, as is acknowledged by themſelves, ſo that they, even the Prieſts and principal perſons among them, being not allowed to eat of that ſacrifice, might hence collect this truth in hand, that they that eat or partake of Chriſt, ſhould reap no benefit by him as long as they pretended their law in force, and depended on theſe legal ceremonies for heaven.

12. Wherefore Jeſus alſo, that he might ſanctifie the people with his own blood, ſuffered without the gate.] 12. And that the burning that ſacrifice (all the body of it) without the camp, ſo that no part of it was uſefull to the Jewes, people or prieſt, did typifie this truth, that Jewes relying on their religion ſhould not receive benefit by Chriſt, may farther be illuſtrated by our Saviours practiſe, who when he was to enter into the holy place, i. e. heaven, to bleſſe and ſanctifie us, and to that end to ſhed his own blood, to carry it as it were in with him, as the prieſt did, the blood of goats and bullocks into the holy place, (to ſignifie that there is no means of expiation to be had but by his blood) he ſuffered without the gate, ſo fulfilling the type, and confirming this truth typified by it, that it was not by thoſe legal ſacrifices, but by Chriſt's offering himſelf, that any benefit is to be hoped for by us.

13. Let us goe forth therefore unto him without the camp, bearing his reproach.] 13. Let us therefore leave the Judaical ſervice, the Moſaical law, though many afflictions threaten us for ſo doing, let us relie wholly on Chriſt upon the croſſe, (know nothing but Jeſus Chriſt, and him crucified) and take all afflictions, in the way to that, cheerfully, therein imitating Chriſt himſelf, who indured the croſſe, deſpiſed the ſhame &c.

14. For here have we no continuing city, but we ſeek one to come.] 14. For this that is to be had here, is no condition of reſt and tranquillity, we, like Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, that ſojourned in Canaan, are not to look upon our preſent being, as the preferment which is promiſed Chriſtians (which if it were, we might then expect it free from afflictions) but we have a future expectation of ſtability, whereon we depend.

15. By him therefore let us offer the ſacrifice of praiſe to God continually, that is, the fruit of our lips, giving thanks to his name.] 15. Let us therefore now our high prieſt is entred heaven, by him offer up to God our Chriſtian ſacrifice, our ſacrifice not of beaſts bodies, but that figured by them, our ſacrifice of praiſe, and that not like to that of the Jewes, at ſome ſet ſeaſons onely, but continually all the daies of our lives, not the fruit of our herds, but lips only, Hoſ. 14. 3. in acknowledgment of his power and goodneſſe.

* beneficence and liberality ευποιιας κ κοινωνιας, ſee note on Act. 2. d.

16. But * to doe good and to communicate, forget not, for with ſuch ſacrifices God is well pleaſed.] 16. But beſide that ſacrifice of prayer and praiſing of God, another there is very acceptable to God, and is as it were our peace-offering, our liberality and works of mercy to other men (ſo inſeparably joyned to our praiſing of God, that the Euchariſt in the Apoſtolical and primitive times was never celebrated without it.)

† grieving or ſighing στενάζοντες

17. Obey them that have the rule over you, and ſubmit your ſelves: for they watch for your ſouls, as they that muſt give account, that they may doe it with joy, and not † with grief, for that is unprofitable for you.] 17. Obey thoſe that are ſet to rule you in your ſeveral Churches, the Biſhops (ſee note a.) whoſe whole care is ſpent among you, as being to give an account of your proficiency in the Goſpel, And by your ſubmiſſion to them doe ye endevour to make their task as eaſie and ſweet as you can, that they may have joy not ſorrow in the execution of it, for 'twill be ſmall benefit to you that they have no comfort in the diſcharge of their office toward you, and as long as they doe it ſadly, can not doe it ſo effectually as otherwiſe they might.

* we are confident πεποιθαμεν † to behave our ſelves well in all things εν πασι καλως αναστρεφεσθαι

19. And one thing I most earnestly desire you, to pray for us, that I may come to you the more speedily.

19. But I beseech you the rather to doe this, that I may be restored to you the sooner.]

* but I the more abundantly beseech you Περισσοτέρως δὲ παρακαλῶ

20. Now the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great shepheard of the sheep, through the bloud of the everlasting covenant,]

21. Incline and prepare your hearts for all Christian performances, particularly that of peace and concord, enabling and exciting you to doe whatsoever will be acceptable in his sight now, according to the commands of his son Jesus Christ, God blessed for ever. Amen.

Notes on Chap. XIII.

a. Ἡγούμενος

The word ἡγούμενος is a common word to signifie all kind of authority, or rule, ἡγούμενος λαοῦ, ruler of the people, Ecclus.9.22. ἡγούμενος ἐκκλησίας, ruler of the congregation, c.13.54. ἡγούμενος δυνάμεων, ruler of the armies. 1 Mac. 13.8. ἡγούμενος Ἰουδαίων ruler of the Jews, v.42. ἡγούμενος ἔθνους, ruler of the nation, Ecclus.17. 13. ἡγούμενος πόλεως, ruler of the city, c.10.2. ἡγούμενος ἀδελφῶν, ruler of the brethren, v. 24. and c. 49. 17. and frequently ἡγούμενος ruler, simply. So the Hebrew נשיא and משל and נגיד, which are ordinarily rendred, ἄρχων Governor, are often ἡγούμενος ruler. And what kind of Government it is, must still be judged by the circumstances of the context in any place, and not from the nature or use of the word. In the New Testament it is applied to Christ, as ruler or Governor in Israel, *Mat.*2. 6. and so also to the government of the Apostles in the Church, *Lu.*22.26. ὁ ἡγούμενος ὡς ὁ διακονῶν, let him that ruleth, i. e. who shall be constituted ruler in the Church, be as he that serveth, and there it is all one with ὁ μείζων ἐν ὑμῖν the greater, or greatest among you. So Joseph is ἡγούμενος εἰς Αἴγυπτον a ruler over Ægypt, Act. 15. 22. Judas and Silas that were sent by the Councel of Apostles and Elders at Jerusalem, and chosen ἐξ αὐτῶν out of them, and so some of that number of the Bishops of Judæa, that were in the Councel, are called ἄνδρες ἡγούμενοι ἐν τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς, rulers among the brethren, which there appear to be Bishops of Judæa, (see note on *Act.*15. e.) and accordingly do teach and exhort and confirm and impose hands, all which were the Bishops office, in that place. And thus it is here used in this verse, and again v.17. and 24. οἱ ὁποιοιοῦν λέγει he speaketh of Bishops, saith Chrysostome and others. And these the Bishops of Jerusalem, and the other cities of Palestine, (τῆς ἐν Παλαιστίνῃ καὶ ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις, say the Scholiasts in the Argument of the Epistle) to whom the Epistle was sent. Of these there are these Characters in this Chap: all agreeing to this interpretation, 1. That they had spoken to them the Word of God, i. e. preach'd the Gospel to them in this verse. 2dly, That they watch over their souls, and are to give an account of them, and consequently the Hebrews must obey and be subject to them, v. 17. all evidences of their charge and authority in the Church. 3dly, All their rulers, and all the saints] are the two comprehensive words which contain all the Hebrews, to whom this Epistle is written, the former noting the Bishops, the latter all the faithful committed to their charge. And 'tis observable that the latter Jewish Writers, when they speak of Christian Bishops, expresse them by a word of great affinity with this here, retaining the Greek ἡγούμενος in their language, with little or no change, הגמון or אגמון either with or without the aspirate. So in Abrabantel on Isa. 34. fol. 54. *col.*4. speaking of the famous Burgensis, from a Jew turned Christian, and at last become a Bishop, he saith, that he was formerly called Solomon the Levite, and afterward became שר ונזיר בין הנוצרים a ruler and a great man among the Nazarites, or Christians, אגמון בורגינשיש Egemon, i. e. Episcopus Burgensis. See Elias Levita in Thisbi, and Buxtorf: Lex: Talmud: in the word אגמון.

The Hebrews expresse food by the staffe of bread, because feeding is the sustaining and upholding of the body, which would otherwise, as a cripple deprived of his crutch, as the sick or weak man of his staffe, soon fall to the ground. Accordingly the Hebrew סָעַד stabilivit fulcivit to establish and sustain, signifies also refecit, refreshing.

b. Βεβαιοῦσθαι καρδία לב heart (answerable to καρδία here) as Psalm 104. bread to strengthen mans heart, and Gen. 27. with corn and wine I have sustained him. And in Chaldee and Syriack the same word signifies eating, taking meat, So 1 Kin. 13. 7. Come home with me וסעוד and feed, or eat, the Septuagint, καὶ ἀριστήσον and dine, and Lu: 22. 11. the Syriack hath לסכעו to eat, and among the Rabbines ordinarily סעודה convivium, a feast. And so here βεβαιοῦσθαι to be established (one sense of that Hebrew סעד) is set to signifie that other of feeding or eating, and with the addition of χάριτι, with grace, imports the Gospel, the spiritual food of soules, to tend more to our spiritual advantages, than ever the sacrifices of the Jewes did, or could, which are here called βρώματα meats, because of them part being sacrificed to God, part going to the Priest, the rest went for the furnishing a feast for the sacrificers and others, whom they invited to them, and therewith they refreshed and cheered themselves before the Lord, Deut 12.18.

Χάρις c. That χάρις grace hath in many places of the New Testament, and particularly in this, a special peculiar notion to signifie the Gospel, as that is opposed to the Law (upon this ground, because the matter of the Gospel is free undeserved mercy, and besides the sending Christ and the Holy Ghost and the Apostles to reveal this, is an act of infinite charity in God also) will appear, not onely by the opposition here to βρώματα meats, which, as βρῶσις also, signifie the Mosaical feasts and sacrifices, 1*Cor.*8.8. *Heb.*9. 10. Rom. 14.17. Col. 2. 16. but more evidently by viewing these many other places in the New Testament, wherein the word χάρις signifies the Gospel John 1. 17. ἡ χάρις καὶ ἀλήθεια grace and truth, the Gospel (and substance of all the Mosaical shadows) is said to have come by Jesus Christ, in opposition to the Law by Moses. So Act. 11.23. ἰδὼν τὴν χάριν τοῦ θεοῦ, having seen the grace of God, i. e. the Gospel so successefully preach'd among them, (see note on Act. 18. d.) and accordingly c.13.43. they exhort them προσμένειν τῇ χάριτι τοῦ θεοῦ to continue in the grace, i. e. the Gospel of God, that had been preached, the doctrine thus mercifully revealed from God by them, So Act. 14. 3. the Lord is said to bear witnesse to the word of his grace, i. e. by miracles to confirm the preaching of the Gospel, So v. 26. and c. 15. 40. Paul and Barnabas were commended by the Apostles τῇ χάριτι τοῦ θεοῦ to the grace, i. e. the Gospel of God, to the preaching of it, expres'd after by εἰς τὸ ἔργον ὃ ἐπλήρωσαν, the work which they performed. So c.15. 11. διὰ τῆς χάριτος Ἰησοῦ by the Gospel, in opposition to the yoke of the Law laid by the Judaizers upon the Christians. So πιστεύσαντες διὰ τῆς χάριτος, they that beleived through the preaching of the Gospel, So c.20.40. ἐυαγγέλιον τῆς χάριτος the Gospel of grace, and v. 32. λόγῳ τῆς χάριτος the word of his grace, i. e. preaching of the Gospel, So λαμβάνειν χάριν we received grace, Rom 1.5. and then ἀποστολὴν Apostleship, first the mercy of receiving the Gospel, then commission to preach it, So *Rom.*5.2. εἰς τὴν χάριν ταύτην into this grace, the Gospel, in which we stand, &c. So c.6. 14. and 15. we are not under the Law, but ὑπὸ χάριν under grace, i. e. under the Gospel. So 2 *Cor.*1.12. ἐν χάριτι θεοῦ by the grace of God, the Gospel set in opposition to the σοφίᾳ σαρκικῇ the fleshly heathen wisdome (because this was no way to be attained, but by God's revealing it) so c.6.1. they are exhorted not to receive χάριν θεοῦ the Gospel again, εἰς κενὸν in vain. So *Gal.*2.21. οὐκ ἀθετῶ τὴν χάριν τοῦ θεοῦ, I do not evacuate the Gospel, I doe not let that great favour of God of revealing the Gospel to me, to be cast away upon me, and c.5. 4. of them that depended on the law τῆς χάριτος ἐξεπέσατε, yee have fallen from grace, i. e. from the Gospel. So Eph. 1.6. the glory of his grace, and 2.7. the abundant riches of it, i. e. of the Gospel revealed to the heathen, So Col. 1.6. ἀφ' ἧς ἡμέρας ἠκούσατε καὶ ἐπέγνωτε τὴν χάριν τοῦ θεοῦ ἐν ἀληθείᾳ, from the day that yee heard and knew the grace of God in truth, where by the conjunction of ἀλήθεια truth with it (as before in John, grace and truth) and the hearing and knowing, 'tis clear there can be nothing meant by χάρις grace, but the Gospel. So 2 *Thess.*2.16. a good hope ἐν χάριτι in the Gospel, and 2 *Tim.*2 1. ἐνδυναμοῦ be strong ἐν τῇ χάριτι in the preaching of the Gospel. So Tit. 2. 11. the grace of God hath appeared, teaching &c. clearly the Gospel and the doctrine thereof; So in this Epistle, c. 18.29. the spirit of grace, the spirit of God, that, in God's great kindnesse to us, was sent to consecrate the Apostles to their office of preaching the Gospel. So c.12.15. ὑστερῶν ἀπὸ τῆς χάριτος τοῦ θεοῦ, falling short of the grace of God, noting apostasie or defection from the Gospel, and perhaps contrary to that v. 28. χάριν ἔχωμεν, let us hold fast grace, So 1 *Pet.*1.10. εἰς τὴν εἰς ὑμᾶς χάριν, the grace to you, or the Gospel preach'd unto you, and v. 13. τὴν φερομένην ὑμῖν χάριν the Gospel brought to you, and c. 5.12. testifying ταύτην εἶναι ἀληθῆ χάριν τοῦ θεοῦ, that this is the very Gospel of God. So Jude 4. transferring the grace of God to lasciviousnesse, i. e. making that use of the Gospel to Libertinisme.

a. Καθολικὴ

BY the word Καθολικὴ, Catholick, is here noted, that this Epistle was not written to any particular Church of one denomination, as S. Paul's Epistles were, but to all the Jewish converts, whersoever they were, That those were dispersed into several parts, and thence called the διασπορὰ, dispersion, see note on Joh. 7. d. the places where they especially lived, are mentioned 1 Pet. 1. 1. and Pontus being there first mention'd, S. Cyprian mentions that Epistle of his, as that which was called Epistola Petri ad Ponticos, The Epistle of Peter to those of Pontus, Cyprian l. 3. de Testimon: 39. But that not to exclude the other parts of their dispersion after mention'd. Such Epistles as these are those which are antiently called ἐγκύκλιοι, which being delivered to the Church of some one city, were appointed by them to be transcribed, and sent about to all the other Churches within such a κύκλῳ compasse, or circuit.

b. Ἰάκωβος

Who the writer of this Epistle was, is thus farre agreed on amongst most, that it was the Bishop of Jerusalem, though the Syriack conceive it to be the son of Zebedee: But he was cut off by Herod Act. 12. 1. before this dispersion of the Jewish Christians was so considerable, as it was at the writing of this Epistle. The main question is, what James it was that was Bishop there, whether James the son of Alphaeus, one of the twelve, or some other. That it was the son of Alphaeus is thought to be favoured by the title of the Epistle, which in most copies hath Ἰακώβου τοῦ Ἀποστόλου, of James the Apostle; But this sure is a mistake, for the Bishop of Jerusalē was James the Just known by the title of the brother of the Lord, i.e. the son of Cleophas (Christ's uncle) and so his cousin germane, which is ordinarily expressed by brother in the sacred Dialect. So Clemens Hypotyp: l. 6. in Euseb: l. 2. c. 2. Peter, and James and John (the sons of Zebedee) μὴ ὅπερ διεζήλωσε δόξης, ἀλλὰ Ἰάκωβον τὸν Δικαίων ἐπίσκοπον Ἱεροσολύμων ἐλέξε, did not contend for the dignity, but chose James the Just Bishop of Jerusalem. And this, it seems, as next of kin to Christ; For of Simeon the second Bishop saith Hegesippus in Eusebius, l. 4. c. 22. Μετὰ τὸ μαρτυρῆσαι τὸν Ἰάκωβον καὶ Δίκαιον, πάλιν Συμεὼν ὁ τοῦ Κλωπᾶ ἐπίσκοπος, ὃν προέθηντο πάντες ὅτι ἀνεψιὸν τοῦ Κυρίου ἐδόκουν, After the martyrdome of James the Just, Symeon again was constituted Bishop of Jerusalem, whom all preferred to that dignity, as being (after James the next, or) second cousin of Christ. Now that this James the Lord's brother was not one of the twelve, is clear by Eusebius l. 1. c. 12. Εἷς δ' ἦν οὗτος τῶν φερομένων τοῦ Σωτῆρος μαθητῶν, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀδελφὸς λέγετο, This James was one of the reputed disciples, yea and brethren of Christ. Where disciples are clearly opposed by Eusebius to the twelve. So in the Author of the Recognitions, this James is affirmed to be none of the twelve, So in the Menologie of the Greek Church they celebrate three James's, James the son of Alphaeus, Octob: 9. James the brother of the Lord, Octob: 23. and James the son of Zebedee, Apr: 30. So saith Eusebius again l. 2. c. 23. that he was called James the Just, ἐπεὶ πολλοὶ Ἰάκωβοι ἐμαρτύρησαν, because there were many of that name. See more of this note on 1 Cor. 15. a. As for the title of Apostle which here is bestowed upon him, that is no objection against what hath hitherto been said, For S. Hierome in his Comment: on Isaiah calls him the thirteenth Apostle, and upon the mention of him, Eusebius adds, l. 1. c. 12. εἶδ' ὡς ἄλλοι τινὲς ἐκ μίμησιν τοῦ δώδεκα πλείους ὄντων ἀποστόλων, beside the twelve there were many other Apostles in that age, after the similitude, or by way of imitation of the twelve. And Theodoret pronounces indifferently, νῦν καλούμενοι ἐπίσκοποι· Ἀπόστολοι ὠνόμαζον, those that are now called Bishops, they then called Apostles. So Thaddaeus (not Lebbaeus or Judas, one of the twelve, but, saith Eusebius) one of the Seventy, who ten years after Christ was sent by Thomas to the King of Edessa, is out of the Syriack records of that city called Ἀπόστολος Θαδδαῖος, The Apostle Thaddaeus. So Luke, or possibly Silas, S. Paul's fellow-travailer, is named among the Apostles of the Church, 2 Cor. 8. 23. and so by Epiphanius and Theophanes, Luke is styled Ἀπόστολος Apostle. So Mark S. Peter's follower, that first planted the Church in Alexandria and Pentapolis, is by the anonymus writer of his life in Photius, by Eusebius l. 2. c. 24. by Epiphanius, Haer: 51. called Ἀπόστολος Apostle. So Timothy, converted by S. Paul, and after that made Bishop of Ephesus, is by the anonymus in * Photius ὁ Ἀπόστολος Τιμόθεος the Apostle Timothy, and in Theodoret on 1 Tim. 3. 1. Ἀσιανῶν Ἀπόστολος ὁ Τιμόθεος, Timothy the Apostle of the Asiaticks. And so Theophanes, τῷ Ἰουλίῳ μηνὶ χρόνοις ἐγκαίνια τῶν ἁγίων πανευφήμων, Ἀνδρέου, Λουκᾶ, καὶ Τιμοθέου, τῶν ἁγίων Ἀποστόλων, In the moneth July were the dedication of the memorials of Andrew, Luke, and Timothy the holy Apostles. So Titus is by Theodoret styled Κρητῶν Ἀπόστολος Τίτος Titus the Apostle of the Cretans. And so Epaphroditus, Phil. 2. 25. is Ἀπόστολος ὑμῶν your Apostle, for which Theodoret gives the reason, because ἐπισκοπικῷ οἰκονομίᾳ ἐπιστάθη, ἔχων ἐπισκόπου προστασίαν, he was intrusted with the Episcopal government of them. So Clemens Romanus the Bishop of Rome, is by Clemens Alexandrinus l. 4. called ὁ Ἀπόστολος Κλήμης the Apostle Clemens, by S. Hierome in Isa. 52. vir Apostolicus an Apostolick person, by Ruffinus,

* Bill. num: 254

Ruffinus, de Adulterat: lib: Orig: pene Apoſtolus, almoſt an Apoſtle, So Ignatius, Biſhop of Antioch, is by Chryſoſtome in his encomium of him, called Ἀποστολικὸς Apoſtolick.

For the time, when this Epiſtle was written, there is no certainty of defining, ſave that, as it muſt be after the Apoſtles preaching and converting the Jewes in the other regions beſide Judæa, ſo it muſt be before the year 63. For then this James was put to death by Annas the younger, the high prieſt; ſee Joſephus Antiq: l. 20. c. 8. The deſigne of the Epiſtle is viſible, to fortifie the faithfull againſt all temptations wherewith the Gnoſtick heretick could ſollicite them, and to ſecure their patience, and purity, and faith, and charity, and all other Chriſtian practiſes in them, and to foretell them the no ſtead, that their worldly wealth moſt ſollicitouſly preſerved, will ſtand them in, at the approaching calamity, which will involve incredulous Jewes and Gnoſticks together, c. 5. 1. hereby comforting the faithfull, and encouraging them to perſevere, till this coming of Chriſt for their reſcue from their perſecutors, v. 8.

CHAP. I.

Paraphraſe.

1. JAMES a ſervant of God, and of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, to the t welve tribes which are * ſcattered abroad, greeting.] 1 James the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, employed by God and Chriſt in the ſervice of that Church, ſends greeting to the Jewiſh Chriſtians, that are diſperſed among the nations out of Judæa, in divers cities.

* in the diſperſion ἐν τῇ διασπορᾷ

2. My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall † into divers temptations,] 2. Look upon it as the bleſſedeſt condition that can befall you, the joyfulleſt thing imaginable, that you meet with afflictions here in your Chriſtian courſe, and thoſe of many ſorts and kinds, a ſucceſſion of many of them.

† among περιπέσητε ſee Lu. 10. 30.

3. Knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience.] 3. And this you will doe, if you duly conſider the gainfull effects of theſe afflictions, For as by them your faith is tried, whether it be ſincere or no, ſo that trial exerciſes and gives you the habit of that excellent Chriſtian virtue, of patience and courage and conſtancy, and that being a ſuperiority of mind, and a victory over a mans ſelf, over his moſt hurtfull and unruly paſſions, his fears, his ſorrow, his rage, his revenge, and over all the world beſides, over injuries, rapines, contumelies, death it ſelf, it muſt needs be a delightful joyous virtue.

* And δὲ

4. * But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and intire, wanting nothing.] 4. And then let this patience by conſideration of the advantages of our ſuffering for Chriſt, and pieties ſake, and by the delightfulneſſe of theſe exerciſes of it, advance to this pitch of rejoicing in tribulations, of bleſſing and glorifying God for them, together with conſtancy and perſeverance therein, and the more and heavier the afflictions are, of rejoicing ſtill the more v. 2. which is the giving patience the full ſcope, improving that virtue to the higheſt degree of perfection, and this will be infinitely for your advantage, the greateſt riches that ye can be capable of in this world.

† But if, Εἰ δὲ

5. † If any of you lack wiſdome, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not, and it ſhall be given him.] 5. To this indeed there is not only fortitude required, but wiſdome, and that of the higheſt nature, And if in ſuch times of preſſure as theſe, any man want this true heavenly ſpiritual wiſdome, this skill of managing himſelf at this time, of ſecuring his intereſt with Chriſt, rather than with the world, of depending on Chriſt's care of him, without uſing other artifices of ſecuring himſelf, of bearing not only patiently, but joyfully the utmoſt evils, let his recourſe be continually to God, whom he need not make ſcruple, or be aſhamed to conſult upon every occaſion, For his liberality is not confined, like ours, nor is he wont to reproach thoſe, whom he gives any thing to, and he will certainly ſhew him this truth, and furniſh him with this ſtrength of enduring cheerfully, and give him, when time comes, the experimental knowledge of what I here ſay, how joyfull a thing it is to be thus exerciſed, and to retain this ſuperiority of mind in all the afflictions that can befall us.

6. But let him ask [a] in faith, nothing wavering; for he that wavereth is like a wave of the ſea driven with the wind and toſſed.] 6. But let him come to God with firm adherence on him, a mind reſolved, whatſoever comes, to ſtick faſt to God, to uſe no means of delivering himſelf, but ſuch as are acceptable to him, never entertaining any doubt, whether Gods waies or his own are to be adhered to, for the obtaining of his ends, making no queſtion of God's power or will to anſwer his requeſts, and therefore praying and depending on him quietly for an iſſue out of all; Whereas the contrary doubting, or wavering keeps men in a perpetual tempeſt and agitation of mind, alwaies toſſed from one hold, one dependence to another, ſee note on 1 Joh. 5. b. a.

7. For let not that man think that he ſhall receive any thing of the Lord.] 7. And beſides it is the blaſting of our prayers, God being not wont to hear them that doe not ſincerely and faithfully depend on him.

8. A double-minded man is unſtable in all his waies.] 8. A wavering, inconſtant Chriſtian, that together with the faith of Chriſt applies himſelf to unlawfull courſes for his own ſafeguard, hath the infelicity of never knowing which way to turn himſelf, being alwaies betwixt two, and diſquieted upon all occaſions, ſee Eccluſ. 2. 13, 14, 15, 16.

* But let δὲ

9. * Let [b] the brother of low degree rejoice † in that he is exalted: 9, 10. But let the rich man that falls into a low condition through the afflictions to which this world is ſubject, be as well pleaſed and thank God as heartily for his being reduced to this low eſtate, as a poor man is wont to be when he is preferred or exalted, (ſee note on Mat. 9. d.) Or thus, Is is no unhappy ſtate for a man to have loſt all, to be brought low in the world, and ſo to have nothing left to loſe, or ſecure, Nay this he may really look on, as a dignity, or preferment, that he hath reaſon to be very glad of, and not to mourn for. And ſo likewiſe may the rich man look with joy upon the plunderings and violences that befall him; becauſe his riches is as fading and tranſitory a thing as the greenneſſe of the graſſe, not worth the valuing; And the care of keeping and perpetuating it unto him, will bring him a great deal of temptation and vexation, and little of joy or advantage. b.

† in his own height ἐν τῷ ὕψει αὐτοῦ

10. But the rich in that he is made low, becauſe as the flower of the graſſe he ſhall paſſe away.]

11. For as it is with the green graſſe on the ground, as ſoon as ever the ſun riſeth and ſcorcheth it, it makes it wither, and all the floríd part and beauty vaniſheth preſently, and there is no poſſible preſerving it at ſuch a time, ſo the rich man, when afflictions and devourers come upon him, doth in a ſmall time wither and fall away, his riches leave him, or he them, if God ſee fit to ſend or permit afflictions, he will not by all his dexterities, by any means, (but prayer and fidelity, and conſtancy, ver. 5, 6, 7.) be able to avert them.

11. For the ſun * is no ſooner riſen with a burning heat, but it withereth the graſſe, and the flower thereof falleth, and the grace of the faſhion of it periſheth; ſo alſo ſhall the rich man † fade away in his [c] waies.]

* aroſe with burning heat, and dried away the graſſe, and the flower thereof fell away, & the beauty of the look of it perished: Ἀνέτειλε γάρ. † be withered in his own waies, συμπορευόμενος τοῖς ἴδιοις πορείαις

12. Whereas on the other ſide for the true conſtant pious Chriſtian, it is a bleſſed thing for him that he meets with afflictions, which are but means to trie and exerciſe his Chriſtian virtues, which being done, he ſhall receive approbation from God, and with it a reward, ſuch as in the Goſpel is promiſed to all that adhere and cleave faſt to God, if not deliverance here, eternity hereafter.

12. Bleſſed is the man that endureth temptation; for * when he is tried he ſhall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promiſed to them that love him.]

* being approved δόκιμος γενόμενος

13. Let no man, that by afflictions is brought to any ſins, ſay that God is the author of this, for as God cannot himſelf be brought to ſin by any means, ſo doth not he by ſending affliction ſeduce or inſnare any, cauſe him to fall by that means, (as appears by the ſincere Chriſtian, whoſe fidelity is not betrayed, but approved by afflictions.)

13. Let no man ſay when he is tempted, I am tempted of God; for God cannot be tempted † with evil, neither tempteth he any man.]

† to

14. But every man's falling into any ſinne comes from himſelf, his own treacherous ſenſual appetite, which being impatient of ſufferings, ſuggeſts, and tenders him ſome ſenſitive carnal baits, and ſo by them draws him out of his courſe and intices him.

14. But every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own luſt and inticed.]

15. And when his conſent is joyned to that propoſal or invitation of his ſenſual part, againſt the contrary dictates of his reaſon and the Spirit of God, then that, and not the affliction and temptation ver. 13. begetteth ſin, every ſuch conſent is the engaging the ſoul in ſin; and ſuch ſin, when by repetition of acts or indulgence, it comes to ſome perfection, it engageth the ſoul in eternal death, ſee note on 1 Theſſ. 5. f.

15. Then when luſt hath conceived, it bringeth forth ſin, and ſin when it is finiſhed bringeth forth death.]

16, 17. Doe not permit your ſelves to be deceived by the Gnoſticks that creep in among you, and flatter you with hopes that they by their compliances will be able to preſerve you from ſuffering here, No certainly, it is God muſt ſecure you, or ye are not likely to be ſecured, the preſent avoiding of perſecutions by not confeſſing of Chriſt will ſtand you in ſmall ſtead, involve you only in the deſtruction that attends the perſecutors, And this will be a ſad deceit, when it befalls you, How much better and ſafer will it be to adhere to God, when every good thing that is given to men, whether of the lower, or higher ſort, the ordinary prizes in their ſpiritual exerciſes, and the moſt illuſtrious crowns, (ſee note on Phil. 3. d.) come from heaven, deſcend to us from God, who is the great ſpring and fountain of all good things, who like the ſun ſends out light to all that want, but then is not like that, in its changeableneſſe (as in the ſeveral appearances of the ſun, when it riſeth, when 'tis high noon, and when it ſets) whereas God is conſtant in the ſame, powring out his raies on us, hath no riſing nor ſetting) nor again in his yearly removing or going from us, which cauſes different ſhadows on the earth; God ſends forth his light without mixture of ſhade, his gifts without all niggardlineſſe or reſtraint.

16. * Doe not erre, my beloved brethren,

17. Every good † gift, and every perfect gift, is from above, and cometh down from the father of lights, with whom is [d] no variableneſſe, neither ſhadow of turning.]

d.

* Be not deceived Μὴ πλανᾶσθε

* variation nor caſting of ſhadow, cauſed by his turning from us.

18. He hath now begotten us in a more excellent way and manner, than when we were called his children, being Iſraelites, begotten us by the Goſpel to be Chriſtians, and heirs of ſalvation, and therein he hath allowed us the favour of being the firſt that have been called to this dignity, Epheſ. 1. 12. and that out of no conſideration of any thing in us, but only of his own free will and pleaſure, which being an evidence of his free goodneſſe toward us, we have little reaſon to miſdoubt him.

18. Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth, that we ſhould be a kind of firſt-fruits of his creatures.] *

19. Seeing therefore God hath been ſo gracious to us, let theſe advantages be made uſe of to reform every thing that is amiſſe, let it engage us to thoſe moral duties oft recommended to us, as to be very ready to hear and learn, and yet very deliberate and warie in our words, ſo to be very hardly brought to anger or impatience, whatever the wickedneſſe of men, whatſoever our provocations be.

19. Wherefore my beloved brethren, let every man be ſwift to hear, ſlow to ſpeak, ſlow to wrath.]

20. For it is not at all agreeable to the Chriſtian temper, required Mat. 5. to be impatient, and fall out into ſuddain wrath or anger, and he that is ſuch, will never be able to doe that, which is preſcribed by God, and acceptable to him under the Goſpel.

20. For the wrath of man worketh not the righteouſneſſe of God.]

21. And as the ſins of wrath and malice, ſo obſervable in the Gnoſticks among you, (which are therefore called dogs, and the concision, by S. Paul) ſo likewiſe of luſt alſo, all thoſe that circumciſion noted the caſting from us, and are anſwerable to the ſuckers that grow from the root of the tree, let them be plucked off and removed, that you may be the more docile and capable of receiving the whole Goſpel-doctrine, which is as it were a graffe of a ſweet, kindly fruit, graffed into the ſtock of our ſowre, and corrupt nature, and being received and proſpering in our hearts, will fructifie unto holineſſe, and finally will bring men to heaven.

21. Wherefore lay apart all filthineſſe and ſuperfluity of naughtineſſe, and receive with meekneſſe the engraffed word, which is able to ſave your ſouls.]

22. But then 'twill not be ſufficient to doe that, which is preſcribed by God, and acceptable to him under the Goſpel.

22. But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers onely, deceiving your owa ſelves,] receive that doctrine into your ears or brain, but it muſt be uniformly practiſed, or elſe it is but the deceiving of your ſelves,

23. For

23. For if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his * natural face in a glasse, 23, 24. For he that hears the directions that are given in the Gospel for good life, &c.

24. For he * beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was.]

and the motives and obligations to it, and when he hath done so, sets not with any care to live accordingly, a pious Christian life, may be resembled to a man looking in a mirrour, to observe what spots or sullages are there in his face, and when he hath done, goes away, and forgets what he saw there, never thinks to reform what was amisse.

* beheld himself and went away, and presently forgot κατανοήσαντα, ἀπελήλυθε, ἐπιλέλησται

25. But † whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his * deed.]

25. But he that hath studied the Gospel to purpose, seen his own image there, all that he is concerned in for his present and eternal well-being, and hath not looked slightly, but insisted, continued looking on it, and lays it to heart, and applies it to practise, and lives and acts accordingly, actually performing that which is required of him, that man may receive comfort and joy in his course, and God will blesse him in it.

† he that hath looked close and dwelt upon it, and is not παραμείνας, ἀλλὰ παραμείνας

* doing ποιήσεως

26. If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, that man's religion is vain.]

26. If a man appear or make shew of serving and worshipping God, professe to be religious, and yet gives his tongue the reins to rail riotously on his fellow-Christians, that man deceiveth himself, flattereth himself with vain hopes, if he think that his religion should ever stand him in any stead.

27. Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father, is this, To visit the fatherlesse and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world.]

27. The true Christian religion, such as God, which is our father, will accept of, consists of two special parts, charity to all that are in need, and purity of life, abstaining from filthy lusts, and all the evil examples, and temptations of the world.

Notes on Chap. 1.

2. First

The word this faith] which is generally thought in this place to belong to beleiving that the prayers shall be heard, may very well be taken in the ordinary notion, for a firm adherence to the doctrine of Christ, a constancy in the Christian profession and practise. Thus is beleiving used Eccles. 2. 13. woe to him that is faint-hearted, for he beleiveth not, and this joined with the sinner that goes two ways v. 12. as here the double-minded man, being set opposite to doubting, and wavering, and instability. This notion will very well agree with the Context, where comforting the dispersed, persecuted Christian Jews, v. 2. and bidding them rejoyce in those sufferings, to which he again returns, v. 9. (which argues that all which is betwixt doth also belong to the same matter) he inforces his exhortation, v. 3. by remembring them that the trial of their faith, meaning that by which their faith or constancy is tried, i. e. afflictions (so δοκίμιον signifies, and differs from δοκιμὴ Rom. 5. 4. as κριτήριον from κρίσις, that by which the judgement is made, from the judgement it self) worketh, or perfecteth patience, i. e. that if they had no afflictions to trie their constancy of adhering to Christ, there were then no place for that great Christian virtue (at least no way of perfecting it) to which the promises were made, viz. patience, perseverance; which patience must have its perfect work, v. 4. i. e. Christianity requires perfect patience, and perseverance in spight of all temptations, and he that fails in any, loses all, and he that is not tried (and gives testimonie of his sincerity) in every thing, he is imperfect, and wants somewhat, that trial would make him capable of. But because in the many temptations of the world, a man may fail, or for want of wisedome how to behave himself, miscarry sometimes, (and that consideration may discourage men, when heavy pressures come tumbling in upon them) therefore v. 5. he proceeds to answer that objection, by telling thē that this defect is reparable by prayer, God can supply them in this (and Christ in the like condition bids the disciples take no thought: never premeditate what answer they shall give.) If they refer themselves in prayer to God's guidance, in this matter, he will give them this wisdome abundantly. But then v. 6. that which is required to qualifie them to have this prayer of theirs granted by God, is, that they keep close to God, have no waverings, or inconstant demurs, or doubtings, whether they shall keep close or no; In which S. James looks particularly on the Gnostick compliances, and warpings of some Christians, that to avoid persecutions, were ready to forsake Christ, which is here expressed by the wave driven by the wind of persecution (as Eph. 4. 14. by false doctrine) and the double-minded, unstable person, v. 8. (which c. 4. 8. is also look'd on, as impure) which had no reason to expect any wisdome or assistance from God, v. 7. And so though 'tis possible the [asking in faith] may signifie in a narrower sense, confidence that his prayers shall bee heard, yet it accords very well with the scope, that it should be taken in the greater latitude; when he prays for wisdome, to behave himself in persecutions as he ought, let him stick fast to his profession, and never waver in that, come to God with that firm, unmoved purpose, and resolution of mind, and he shall be sure to be assisted by God, so 1 Joh. 3. 22. Whatever we ask we receive from him, because we keep his commandments, adhere and stick fast to him, and doe what is pleasing to him.

Τέλειον ἔργον

Κλύδων ἀνέμου. ἀκατάστατος. Αἰτείτω δὲ πίστει

What the meaning of this verse is [Καυχάσθω δὲ ὁ ἀδελφὸς ὁ ταπεινὸς ἐν τῷ ὕψει αὐτοῦ, but let the brother that is low, triumph or rejoice in his hight] is to me very doubtful, and therefore I have set down two notions, of which it is capable. The former hath already been set down from an idiome of the sacred dialect, Mat. 9. d. and need not be again recited here. The latter hath these probabilities for it, 1. from the context which from the beginning of the chapter had been to exhort them to rejoyce in tribulations, to count it all joy, ver. 2. and that is all one with καυχᾶσθ rejoyce or boast here, and then that which is matter of all joy, or of boasting, being alwayes some good accession, some dignity, some advancement, it is very reasonable, that that which he is bid rejoyce in, should be lookt on as ὕψος αὐτοῦ his hight, his preferment.

ὕψος 2dly, From the word ὕψος which is here used, and signifies hight, not ὕψωσις exaltation, or being made high, which is it that is opposite to ταπείνωσις being brought low v. 10. which notes this ὕψος or hight to be that, which the brother which is low, hath, whilest he remains such, and not that, to which he is raised from his low estate, and ceaseth to be low, when he is so raised. And upon this notion the second sense is founded, that the Christian in a low condition, is not to be sad or dejected at that, as at an unhappy estate, but to look upon it with joy, as a thing that hath many huge advantages in it, especially in such times of persecution to Christians, as those were, (it riddeth him of envy, plunderings, and continual fears) a preferment, or dignity, to him. 3dly, From the δὲ but] in the front, But let the brother &c.] which is a note of connexion with the former, and so an argument, that this is the meaning, which is most agreeable with the fore-going discourse, which was wholly of the advantages of afflictions, and rejoycing in them, and not of exaltation. And thus also it will connect very fitly with the following verse, for if the person in a low estate be to look upon it as a preferment, or advantage then Ταπείνωσις in reason the rich man is to rejoyce at his ταπείνωσις being brought low, i. e. at his being reduced to that condition, which is said to have so much of hight and advantage in it. All this thus put together, renders this a very probable interpretation.

c. Πορίαις The word πορίαις wayes here may possibly be a change of the Transcriber for ἐμπορίαις tradings or merchandises, as c. 4. 13. 'tis the rich man's speech ἐμπορευσόμεθα καὶ κερδήσομεν, we will traffick and gain. But because πορίαις wayes hath no inconvenient sense in it, therefore there is no use of any such alteration.

d. Παραλλαγὴ The word παραλλαγὴ] signifieth Astronomically the several habitudes, and positions, wherein the Sun appears to us every day at the rising, in the Τροπὴ Meridian, and when it sets. And so τροπὴ is also a like word, belonging not to the daily, but yearly course of the Sun, which is farther from us, or nearer to us, after the measure, or in the proportion, that it moves toward the Northern or Southern Tropick. And from thence it is, that it casts several shadows to the several people of the world, and gives Geographers occasion to divide them into Ἄσκιοι, ἑτερόσκιοι and ἀμφίσκιοι, those that cast no shadows, those that cast shadows on one side, and those that cast shadows round about. And Ἀποσκίασμα agreeable to this is the word ἀποσκίασμα casting of shadow here, and being joyned with [τροπῆς turning] signifies the variations of the shadows, according to the various motions of the Sun before mentioned.

Some difficulty there is in understanding this verse, which will be resolved, if, as ordinarily it is Τὸ πρόσωπον τῆς γενέσεως thought, τὸ πρόσωπον τῆς γενέσεως αὐτοῦ, be determined to signifie no more, than a mans own face, reflected to him in a glasse, and ἔσοπτρον be taken for that glasse or mirrour. For then the meaning of the verse will be, that the word of God is as such a glass reflecting to him the pourtraicture of himself, ὁποῖός ἐστι, what a kinde of person he is, whether Omits ἐστι there be any thing amisse in him, or no; and he that hears the word of God, and doth it not, is, as if a man should look upon, and contemplate his face in a looking glasse, and no more, (That will be the meaning of κατανοοῦντι, hee that beholdeth, Κατανοῶν in the present tense) As for any use, or effect of this looking, it follows, he beheld, and went away, and presently forgot, when he hath seen what blemishes there are to be wiped off, to be reformed in him, he contents himself, with having seen them, and having done so, departs and never thinks more of them, layes not to heart what he sees thus amisse in himself, forgets to reform or emend any thing. To this interpretation the chief objections are, 1. From the word γενέσεως, which seems unnecessarily added, when πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ his own face] would have served the turn, and again, γένεσις signifying birth or nativity, it is not obvious, what should be meant by the face of his own birth; 2dly, From the γὰρ for, v. 24. which seems to divide the period, and make that of going away and forgetting, the proof of his being like a man that beheld his face in a glasse, whereas by this interpretation the going and forgetting is connected with his seeing his face, and both of them together are the thing to which the forgetful hearer is resembled, To the first of these this answer may be offered, 1. that a man may be said to have a double face, an inward and outward, spiritual and corporal, the face of his mind, thoughts and actions, and that is to be beheld and considered in a spiritual mirror, the word of God; as the outward, the bodily face, or countenance, is by the ordinary glasse, or mirror represented to us, And the similitude being here set between one of these and the other, it will not be improper, to the mention of the face, to adde a word of distinction, πρόσωπον γενέσεως, that face which belongs to a man by nature, by birth, and is not acquired by study, by actions, by any thing in his own will or choice, as the face of his mind, the soul may be said to be; Or it is possible, because πρόσωπον signifies sometimes a false face, that of an actor, a stage-player, a personator, that here πρόσωπον γενέσεως, that face that he is born with] may be set opposite to that. As for the setting it in the genitive case adjectively, that is an ordinary Hebraisme, as the Mammon of unrighteousnesse for the unrighteous Mammon, and we have an example of it in this very place, v. 25. ἀκροατὴς ἐπιλησμονῆς an hearer of forgetfulnesse, Ἀκροατὴς ἐπιλησμονῆς for a forgetfull hearer, which is as strange, as here the face of his own birth, for his natural countenance, or that which he hath by his birth. To the second it may also be answered, 1. That the particle [γὰρ] is not always causal, or a note of probation in these writers, but sometimes a form of connexion onely, and yet 2dly, That here according to the interpretation premised) it may be allowed to have that force, his going and forgetting, being the reason why he that hears, and doth not the word, is likened to him that thus onely looks or contemplates. Not that every one that sees his face in a glasse, doth, when he goes away, forget, but that he that doth onely look, and, without more care or effect of his looking, doth goe away and forget, is a fit emblem of the forgetfull hearer of the word. From this notion of the words there will now be no reason to inquire (as some have done) whether a face seen in a reflexion or mirror, be ordinarily retained in the memory of the man whose face it is, i. e. whether a man use to remember his own face, Much lesse for that nicer question, whether women ordinarily doe it, though men doe not, as if that were the reason why the word [ἀνὴρ a man] in the masculine, were here used, and not ἄνθρωπος which which is common to man and woman: These sure were no part of S. Iames's observation, but onely that he, or she that have looked on themselves in a glasse, may possibly goe away and never think more of what they saw, never wipe off the spots which they discerned there, and then that man, or woman is a fit emblem to expresse the matter in hand, the bare unfruitful hearer of the word. Having thus cleared this interpretation of the words from those objections, it is not unreasonable to acquiesce in it, and therefore I shall not trouble the Reader with another interpretation, which I had conceived more appliable to this place, by rendring σχῆμα γενέσεως] the scheme of a man's nativity, in the Astronomers use of the word Scheme, and the Evangelists notion of the word σχῆμα, face, *Mat.*16.3. *Lu.*12.56. for the appearance of the skie (and in like manner of the heavens) at any point of time, for which Origen in his Philocalia useth χαρακτῆρα τῆς γενέσεως, the habitude or figure at the nativity, and then interpreting ἐν ἐσόπτρῳ] in an artists glasse, wherein he represents to any man his fortune.

f. That this verse is a defensative particularly against the Gnosticks of that time, may appear by these two parts of worship here mentioned, the first charity to them that want, the second pollesse from the pollutions, especially of the flesh, but also from other sins of the world; These two branches are styled by two names, the one pure, the other undefiled, worship, and both of them taught both by God the Father in the Old Testament, and now by Christ. Contrary to these were the Gnostick practises in the two particulars. For the second both of uncleanness, even the highest baseness and villany, and of loving the world, and the pleasures and advantages thereof, more than God, and complying with the persecutors still, rather than they would suffer any thing, there is very often mention made in the Epistles, and for the first, beside the very frequent inculcations of the duties of charity, and the finding fault with (and complaining for) the want of them, there is in Ignatius's Ep: ad Smyrn: an eminent testimony. For fortifying them against the heresie of the times, μηδεὶς πλανάσθω, let no man deceive you &c. and having resolved that faith and charity τὸ ὅλον ἐστὶ, ὧν οὐδὲν προέχει, are betwixt them the whole, or all of a Christian, before which nothing is to be preferred (in opposition to the Gnosticks, who supposed themselves so perfect, that they had no need of either) he speaks plainly and punctually of them, under the name of ἑτεροδοξοῦντες εἰς χάριν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τὴν εἰς ἡμᾶς ἐλθοῦσαν, of false opinions toward the grace of Christ which is come to us, and bids them observe how contrary they are to the doctrine of God in these particulars following, Περὶ ἀγάπης οὐ μέλει αὐτοῖς, οὐ περὶ χήρας, οὐ περὶ ὀρφανοῦ, οὐ περὶ θλιβομένου, οὐ περὶ δεδεμένου, ἢ λελυμένου, ἢ περὶ πεινῶντος ἢ διψῶντος, they have no care of charity, no care for the widow, nor orphane, nor oppress, nor imprisoned, nor hungry, nor thirsty.

CHAP. II.

Paraphrase.

1. MY brethren, have not the [a] faith [*] of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, with respect of persons.]

[a] of the glory of our Lord Iesus Christ

1. Christianity being so great a promoter of justice and charity to all, and especially to Christians, and again to those that most need our relief and assistance, ch.1.27. 'tis a most unchristian thing to be partial to one before another Christian, on consideration that one is richer, or in better clothes than the other.

2. For if there come unto your [b] assembly a man with a gold ring, in goodly apparel, and there come in also a poor man in vile raiment,]

[b] synagogue

2. For if a cause in your judicatures or consistories happen between a rich gallant, and a poor beggarly person,

† And ye shall look upon him, καὶ ἐπιβλέψητε ἐπὶ [*] fairly καλόν

3. † And ye have respect unto him that weareth the gay clothing, and say unto him, Sit thou here [*] in a good place; and say to the poor, Stand thou there, or sit here under my footstool,]

3. And if you shall make a difference between them, in respect of their wealth and clothes, and shall set one in a more honourable place than the other, (see note b.) consider one and despise the other,

† And are doubtful in, or debate not among your selves

4. † Are yee not then [c] partial in your selves, and become judges of evil thoughts?]

4. And without any doubt or scruple in your hearts, be thus unjustly partial; or if ye doe not so much as debate among your selves, or consider the merit of the cause, but as wicked corrupt judges, hood over head, adjudge the cause to the rich, (and despise the poor, v. 6.) whatsoever the justice of the cause, and merit of it be, or preferre the rich before the poor, and judge the cause by the person, not the person by the cause,

[c] or promise, for the Kgs MS. reads ἐκρίθητε

5. Hearken, my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the [*] kingdome, which he hath promised to them that love him?]

5. This is a most unchristian dealing in you: And then doe but consider, Hath God had any such partialities in bestowing Christianity and his graces on men, and hath he not on the other side picked out men as poor as any, to be as eminent beleevers and saints as any?

6. But ye have despised the poor. Doe not rich men oppresse you, and draw you before the judgment seats?

7. Doe not they blaspheme that worthy name † by which ye are called?

† which is called upon you? τὸ ἐπικληθὲν ἐφ' ὑμᾶς

6,7. But you, if a man be poor, despise him, consider him not. And truly 'tis no very amiable thing to be rich, nor doth it produce any excellencies in them that are so, or favours toward you, that deserve to be so considered by you, For riches make men apt to oppresse others, and to enter vexatious suits against them, and to despise Christianity, and blaspheme that good profession of yours.

8. If

8. If ye obſerve the law of Chriſt our king, 8. If ye fulfill the royal law according to the ſcripture, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelf, ye doe well.]
which he hath in a particular manner preſcribed us, Joh. 13. 34. & 15. 12. and to which above all other men, all we Chriſtians are to be ſubject, and that agreeable to what is mentioned in the Old Teſtament, Levit. 19. 18. the command of meaſuring our love to our neighbour, by that which we bear to our ſelves, this is ſomewhat like a Chriſtian.

9. But if ye uſe this partiality ver. 2. this is a ſin, and ſo condemned by the law, Lev. 30. 15. Deut. 1. 17. 16. 19. Exod. 23. 3. and ſo you offend even againſt the law, and not onely againſt the Goſpel. 9. But if ye have reſpect to perſons, ye commit ſin, and are * convinced of the law as tranſgreſſors.] * reproved ὑπ' ἐλέγχεται

10. And 'tis but a ſmall excuſe for you to think that this is but one tranſgreſſion, and therefore not conſiderable, For the obedience to God's will is required univerſally to all that he commands, and he that offends in one, though he keep all the reſt, is guilty of the breach of that obedience, and puniſhable as well, as if he had broken all, 10. For whoſoever ſhall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, † he is guilty of all.] † is become γέγονε

11. For it is the ſame Lawgiver that impoſed the one and the other law, that interdicted adultery and murther, and his authority is equally deſpiſed by the comminting of either. 11. For he that ſaid, Doe not commit adultery, ſaid alſo, Doe not kill; now if thou commit no adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a tranſgreſſor of the law.]

12. Let your words and actions be like thoſe that are to be judged, not by the Moſaical law, which requires thoſe external obſervances ſo ſeverely, circumciſion under pain of death &c. but by the law of Chriſt, which hath ſet us at liberty in this kind, and requires of us another ſort of performances. 12. So ſpeak ye, and ſo doe, as they that ſhall be judged by the law of liberty.]

13. And firſt for the latter of theſe, that of actions, 'Tis certain that among the precepts of Chriſt there is none more eminent, than that of works of mercy, unto which the promiſes of God's mercy are ſo linked and proportioned, that he that condemns others ſhall himſelf be condemned, and he that doth forgive others, need not fear God's condemnation, Mat. 6. 13. For he ſhall have judgment without mercy, that hath ſhewed no mercy: and mercy * rejoiceth againſt judgment.] * triumpheth over καὶ κατακαυχᾶται

14. And 'tis not for a Chriſtian to ſay that his faith ſhall render ſuch works unneceſſary, for indeed without ſuch works his faith will nothing profit him, and 'tis ridiculous to think it will. 14. What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man ſay he have faith, and have not works? can faith ſave him?]

15. For in caſe a Chriſtian be in great want and diſtreſſe for ſupply of the neceſſaries of life, food and rayment, 15. If a brother or ſiſter be naked, or deſtitute of daily food,]

16. And you give him good words, bid him have plenty, or wiſh he had, but doe no more to help him to the things which he hath need of for his body, what is he the better for your words? 16. And one of you ſay unto him, Depart in peace, be you warmed, and filled: notwithſtanding ye give them not thoſe things which be needfull to the body: what doth it profit?]

17. So if faith be by it ſelf, without actions conſequent and agreeable to it, 'tis as fruitleſſe and liveleſſe, as thoſe words were. 17. Even ſo faith, if it hath not works, is dead † being alone.] † by its ſelf καθ' ἑαυτὴν

18. And any man that looks on this uncharitable beleiver, will be able to reprove him thus, Talk as much of thy faith, as thou wilt, no man will believe thee, thy works muſt be ſuperadded to the confeſſion of thy faith, to approve the ſincerity of it. 18. * Yea, a man may ſay, Thou haſt faith, and I have works: ſhew me thy faith † without thy works, and I will ſhew thee my faith by my works:] * But one will ſay, Ἀλλ' ἐρεῖ τις † ſo the Syriack, Arabick & Latine copies read, and ſo the King's MS. ἄνευ τῶν others read ἐκ by

19. One act of thy faith is, the beleiving one true God, and this is moſt abſolutely neceſſary to thee, But if thy life be not anſwerable to this part of thy faith, and that evidenced by piety and charity, thou art then to remember that the beleiving there is one God is ſuch a good quality, as is common to thee and the devils alſo, and if it have no more joyned to it, will beſtead thee no more than them. 19. Thou beleiveſt that there is one God, thou doſt well; the devils alſo beleive and tremble.]

20. 'Tis a meer vanity to conceive that faith without Chriſtian obedience can be effectual to juſtification, and you may diſcern it by this. 20. But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?]

21. Abraham was the father of the faithfull, the great example of faith and juſtification, but 'twas not upon his bare beleiving God's promiſe that he was juſtified, but upon that high act of obedience to God, in being ready to offer up his only ſon, in whom the promiſes were made to him. 21. Was not Abraham our father juſtified by works, when he had offered his ſon Iſaac upon the altar?]

22. And ſo you ſee his obedience to God's commands, as well as beleif of his promiſes, concurred to the rendring him capable of the continuance of God's favour and approbation, And through the performance of that ready obedience it was, that his faith came to attain the end deſigned it. 22. * Seeſt thou how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect?] * You ſee Βλέπεις

23. And by this triall of his obedience it was that Abraham was moſt eminently ſaid to be approved by God, 1 Mac. 2. 52. and lookt on as a friend by him, Gen. 22. 15. and in which that place of ſcripture (before delivered Gen. 15. 6.) concerning God's imputing his faith for righteouſneſſe, was moſt eminently completed. 23. And the ſcripture was fulfilled, which ſaith, Abraham beleived God, and it was imputed to him for righteouſneſſe: and he was called the friend of God.]

24. Yee

24. Yee see then, how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith onely.] 24. And so this is one great testimony that to a mans approbation with God, obedience is required, and not faith deemed sufficient, that hath not that joyned with it.

25. Likewise also was not Rahab the harlot justified by works, when she had received the messengers, and had sent them out another way?] 25. Another evidence of this truth is to be fetcht from that we read of God's approving and rewarding of Rahab, a proselyte and stranger, no native Jew, whose faith is set forth, Heb. 11. 30. and she in a special manner rewarded by God, Jos. 6. 25. and what was it that was thus rewarded in her? why, her care and charity to those that were sent to view the land, Jos. 2. 4.

26. For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also.] 26. And so the conclusion is clear and infallible, that as the body of man, without the soul inlivening it, exercises no actions of life, so doth not faith profit to our justification, without works of obedience to the commands of Christ, justice and charity &c. v. 1. 8, 14.

Notes on Chap. II.

2. Δόξα Χριστοῦ, the glorie of Christ, we have explained often to belong to the Shechinah, that again to his ἐπιφάνεια or appearance in the flesh, his incarnation, and all that was consequent to that: This being here improved with the addition of the words Lord Jesus Christ, doth more set out the necessity of obeying, and observing all those things, which this Lord and Saviour, the Messias of the world hath commended to his Disciples, i. e. to all Christians, beleivers, faithful persons, of which nature especially is charity in the following verses, and impartial strict justice (supposed and conteined in that) in this present verse. Then for πίστις τῆς δόξης the faith of the glory (for so the Syriack construes the words) it signifies this Christian faith, this faith, or profession of, or beleiving this incarnation and resurrection of Christ; and πίστιν ἔχειν ἐν προσωπολημψίαις to have this faith in, or with respect of persons] is to look on those that professe this faith, not as they are Christians, but as they are rich or poor, preferring partially one before the other, accordingly as he comes into your courts in greater splendour, And so the meaning of the whole verse is, That they that are professors of Christianity (and are here supposed to be so, and are put in mind of it by the title of ἀδελφοί μου, my brethren] ought not to have any such unchristian temper in them, as in their Judicatures, (for so συναγωγὴ signifies an assembly for judicature, and that for Ecclesiastical as well as Civil affairs, and so it seems to signifie here, v. 2.) to prefer or favour one Christian before another, onely in respect of his wealth or fine cloathes, when Christ hath equally received them both, or (if any) hath preferr'd the poor, v. 5.

b. That συναγωγὴ signifies all kind of assemblies, meetings in the Market place, Mat. 6. 2. Consistories for Judicature, Mat. 10. 17. and 23. 34. (and not onely places for the publick service of God) hath been formerly said, Note on Mat. 6. d. That it may doe so also among Christians, and that it doth so here, appears 1. by the προσωπολημψία acceptation of persons, partiality, v. 1. which especially respects Judicatures; 2dly, by the foot-stool, v. 3. which was proper to great persons, Princes on their Throne, or Judges on their Tribunal; 3dly, by the word κριταὶ ἐγένεσθε, yee become Judges v. 4. they were Judges, it seems; 4thly, by the mention of κριθείσεσθε Judicatures, v. 6. which clearly signifie such Consistories, 1 Cor. 6. 4. and lastly, by v. 9. where their partiality, particularly that of preferring the rich to a better place, than the poor, is said to be a breach of the Law. For so by a Canon of the Jews it is provided, that when a rich man and a poor have a suit together before their Consistories, either both must sit, or both stand in the same rank, to avoid all marks of partiality. Agreeable to which is the now present practise of the Jews, so that if in matter of difference about meum and tuum, a Christian having to do with a Jew, think fit to refer it to a Chacham, or Judge among them, and at his coming into the room where he is, chance, or choose (as taking himself to be a person of better quality) to sit down, he presently saith to the Jew, be he never so mean, Sit thou down also.

What is the meaning of [ὁ διακρίθητε] here, will not easily be resolved; I suppose it may best be done by these degrees, 1. by observing that διακρίνεσθαι in the middle voice, generally signifies in these books, either doubting, (wavering, Mat. 21. 21. Mar. 11. 23. Act. 10. 20. & 11. 11. Ro. 4. 20.) or disputing, there being a connexion betwixt these two, he that doubts, always disputes with himself. From whence also it signifies to implead, (with [πρὸς τινὰ, or περὶ τινὸς] added to it) or to lay any thing to ones charge, either in, or out of Judicature, as Act. 11. 2. they of the Circumcision διεκρίνοντο πρὸς αὐτὸν, charged Peter, or disputed with him, saying, Thou wentest in to the uncircumcised, and didst eat with them. For the notion of wavering, Hesychius is punctual, διακρίνει, ἀμφίζει, ἀδιστάζει, ἀναβάλλει, it signifies, to be divided, to doubt, to fear, so twice in this Epistle, c. 1. 6. μηδὲν διακρινόμενος, nothing wavering, ὁ γὰρ διακρινόμενος, for the waverer. And as by this notion of the word I conceive a difficult place will be explained, Jude 22. (see note b on that Epistle) so we may conclude that in this Epistle c. 3. 17. ἀδιάκριτος will be best rendred without wavering, or constant, (see note f on that chapter) Secondly, by observing the force of [ἐν ἑαυτοῖς in your selves] added to it, for as that refers oftentimes to the inward thoughts of the heart, (and then not to doubt in themselves] is to do what they do, without any inward reluctance, check, or scruple, or dubitancy, which in a sinful, and irrational fact, (as this here spoken of, is) cannot but be a great aggravation of it) so, being applied to disceptations or disputes, it oft signifies [among themselves, or one with another] And if it be so here, it will then belong to the Judges in this Ecclesiastical Councel, or assembly of Bishops, debating or considering among themselves what justice there is in the cause. Thirdly, by observing that punctation, which wee finde of it in Oecumenius (and ſo alſo in ſome printed copies) without any note of interrogation; And that that is the right reading is ſufficiently evident, both by the mood, and the copulative [ἐὰν δὲ] which connect it with what went before, and demonſtrate it to be govern'd of the [Ἐὰν If] v. 2. as εἰσιλθῃ, & ἐκβαλλόμενοι, & ἔλθητε] are, And then this muſt needs be the right rendring of it, If a man enter having a gold ring, and if a poor man in ſordid apparel enter alſo (i. e. if they implead one the other) and if you look on (or have a partial reſpect to) the rich, and ſay unto him, &c. ἂν ὑ διακρίθητε ἐν ἑαυτοῖς, and if yee either doubt not, diſpute not within your ſelves in your own hearts, or elſe among your ſelves make no diſceptation about it, never conſider the merit, or juſtice of the cauſe, but meerly looking upon the perſons, which of them is in fine, which in ſordid clothes, and become Judges of evill thoughts, unrighteous Judges,] where the ſenſe being all this while ſuſpended, one difficulty there is ſtill remaining, to reſolve, what ſhall be the latter part of the period, anſwerable to the If by way of ἀπόδοσις; And that may poſſibly be the Ἀκούετε ἀδελφοὶ, Hear my beloved brethren v. 9. as if hee ſhould ſay, If in your Judicatures you deal thus partially, I muſt then tell you, or bear you, and remember, my beloved brethren, Hath not God choſen the poor? i. e. done quite contrary to what you now do? Or elſe there muſt be acknowledged (which is very ordinary) an Ellipſis, thus to be ſupplied, If you do thus and thus, then ſure you are partial to your fellow-Chriſtians, v. 1. And either of theſe are very commodious and ſufficiently clear the words from all farther difficulty; whereas there be many difficulties that preſſe the other reading by way of interrogation, as firſt that the ἂν, before the ὑ, is not at all rendred or taken notice of in that reading, And ſecondly, it is ſcarce to be obſerved in any Author, that the negative words, ὐ, οὐκ, οὐχ, οὐχὶ, or μὴ are at any time interrogative, when they ſtand not firſt in the ſentence, as here the ὑ doth not, the ἂν being before it, And thirdly, that other reading ſuppoſes, and proceeds upon a notion of διακρινὼς] which may belong to the active διακρίνων, but never to the mean voice (as διακρινὼς is) in the New Teſtament, or any other Author, or Gloſſary.

CHAP. III.

Paraphraſe.

2. 1. MY brethren[a], be not many * Maſters, knowing that we ſhall receive † the greater condemnation.]

1. And as for actions, (ſee c. 2. 12, 13.) ſo for words ye are not to judge your brethren, or to take upon you that office of Maſter or Teacher, which belongs onely to Chriſt, but to conſider that there is a greater, an higher judicature, the judgment of God to which we are all reſerved.

* teachers
† a greater judgement
μείζων κρίμα

2. For in many things we offend all. If any man offend not in word, the ſame is a perfect man, and able alſo to bridle the whole body.]

2. The beſt of us have much to blame and accuſe in our ſelves, and therefore ſhould not be forward to accuſe or judge others. And of all vices, thoſe of the tongue (whereof this of judging is an eminent one) are moſt ordinary, and they that can rule and manage that (as the Judaizers are farre from doing, c. 4. 11.) and keep innocent from all faults of that kind, do thereby demonſtrate themſelves to be true ſincere Chriſtians, able to reſiſt all other temptations, and guide all their actions according to the Chriſtian rule.

* bridles
χαλινοὺς

3. Behold, we put * bits in the horſes mouthes, that they may obey us, and we turne about their whole body.]

3. As in managing of horſes, when by a bridle put into his mouth, we have gotten power over that part, we are thereby enabled to diſpoſe of the whole beaſt, though a very ſtrong one, as we pleaſe.

4. Behold alſo the ſhips which though they be ſo great, and are driven of fierce winds, yet are they turned about with a very ſmall helme, whitherſoever the governour liſteth.]

4. And ſo though a ſhip on the ſea be a vaſt unweildy veſſel, and in the power of winds and waves (as we are of temptations) to carry it violently before them, yet the Pilot by means of the helm or ſtern, a ſmall part, of an unconſiderable bigneſſe, is able to rule it, and turn it as he pleaſe.

b. 5. [b] † Even ſo the tongue is a little member, and * boaſteth great things: behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth.]

† So
* makes great boaſts
μεγαλαυχεῖ

5. Again, the tongue is one of the ſmalleſt parts of a man's body, and yet makes a great noiſe, doth a great deal of hurt, ſtirres up faction and contention in the Church, as a little fire, ye know, will ſet a whole houſe, or any the greateſt pile on fire.

c. d. 6. [c] And the tongue is † a fire, a world of iniquity; ſo is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and ſetteth on fire the [d] * courſe of nature, and it is ſet on fire of hell.]

† or is ſet in the members a fire of iniquity to the world
* wheel of affairs.

6. And the tongue cannot more fitly be reſembled than to fire, for though it be but one, and that a very ſmall member of the body, yet ſo it may be uſed, as to ſet the whole ſociety of men, a church, a kingdome, a whole world, on fire with ſtrife and contention, and all wickedneſſe, infecting and poyſoning the whole ſociety, ſetting all in combuſtion, being it ſelf ſet on work by the devil, kindled by that fire that comes from hell.

e. 7. For † [e] every kind of beaſts, and of birds, and of ſerpents, and things in the ſea is tamed, and hath been tamed * of mankind,]

† all the nature
* by the nature of man

7. 'Tis in the power and skill of man, (as through all times we ſee) to repreſſe the violence and poyſon of all other creatures, to ſubdue and diſarm them of their weapons and means of hurting mortally,

8. But the tongue can no man tame, it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poyſon.]

8. But the tongue is more hard to be ſubdued than any of theſe, an irremediable author of many evils, ſtrikes, and wounds, and kills like the moſt venemous beaſt, and no antidote is ſufficient againſt it.

9. There-

† and ſ 9. Therewith bleſſe we God, † even the father, and therewith curſe we men, which are made after the ſimilitude of God.] 9. And what a ſoul ſin is it in a Chriſtian or profeſſor of piety, to uſe this member to ſo diſtant offices, to confeſſe with the tongue and acknowledge him, who is both our God and our father, and to judge and raile at our Chriſtian brethren, who for that image of God, they bear upon them, are to be looked on and uſed with all kindneſſe?

10. Out of the ſame mouth proceedeth bleſſing and curſing. My brethren, theſe things ought not ſo to be.] 10. This contrariety of our practiſes is a moſt unchriſtian thing, and ought to be reformed in you, your profeſſion of piety to God ought to have all charity to your fellow-Chriſtians accompanying it.

11. Doth a fountain ſend forth at the ſame place ſweet water and bitter?] 11. No fountain can ſend forth two ſorts of waters of ſo diſtant a nature, ſo contrary one to the other, ſweet water, to which the effluxions of our charity may fitly be compared, and bitter water, by which curſing was expreſt Num. 5. 22,

* A figtree, my brethren, cannot bring forth olives, or a vine figs, neither will ſalt-water produce ſweet, for the Kgs MS. reads, ουτε αλυκον γλυκυ ποιειν ὑδωρ

12. * Can the figtree, my brethren, bear olive berries? either a vine, figs? ſo can no fountain yeild both ſalt water and freſh.] 12. Any more than one tree can bear the fruit that belongs to another tree.

13. Who is a wiſe man, and † indued with knowledge amongſt you? Let him ſhew out of a good converſation his works with meekneſs of wiſdome.] 13. And therefore for them that deſpiſe and condemne others, and take upon them to be the onely perfect men, ver. 1, 2. the Gnoſtick Judaizers, Let them know, wherein the true Chriſtian knowledge conſiſts, even in doing all works of charity, as well as piety, with all meekneſſe (as that is oppoſed to pride of their own wiſdome) accompanying them.

14. But if you have bitter envying and ſtrife in your hearts, * glory not, and lie not againſt the truth.] * 14 But bitter emulation and contention is farre from being a piece of ſpiritual wiſdome, and therefore if this be among you, what is this but an hypocritical boaſting? or ye have little reaſon to boaſt, or pretend that you are the wiſe or ſpiritual, as the bitter contentious Gnoſticks doe, ſee v.15.

* doe ye not boaſt and lie-μὴ κατακαυχᾶσθε καὶ ψεύδεσθε

15. † This wiſdome deſcendeth not from above, but is earthly, * ſenſual, devilliſh.] 15. This is quite contrary to the true celeſtial wiſdome that Chriſt came to teach and infuſe into us, 'Tis that which 1. the love of the world, 2. Mens own carnal unregenerate hearts, or 3. Satan himſelf, that profeſſeth to be an enemy of all good men, infuſeth into them.

† This is not the wiſdome that deſcendeth from-ἡ σοφία ἄνωθεν κατα-

* animal ψυχικὴ

16. For where envying and ſtrife is, there is † confuſion and every evil work:] 16. For there is nothing ſo ill, i.e. ſinfull, be it ſedition, or diſturbance of the whole State or Church, and nothing ſo ill, i.e. miſerable, no ſuch curſe to any community, or unquietneſſe to any particular perſon, but it is certainly to be expected, where emulation and contention have once entred.

† ſedition ἀκαταστασία

* mild, eaſie to be perſwaded, ἐπιεικὴς, ſuaſile, ſuaſible

† without wavering

17. But the wiſdome that is from above is firſt pure, then peaceable, * gentle, and eaſie to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, † without partiality, and without hypocriſie.] 17. But the true Chriſtian celeſtiall wiſdome indeed may be known by theſe properties, that it is 1. pure from all luſts and filthineſſe, ſo frequently practiſed by the Gnoſticks, 2^{dly}, peaceable, and ſo quite contrary to the contentious factious humour of the Gnoſticks, 3^{dly}, not rigid, but gentle, mild, equitable, receding from his own ſtrict right in order to peace (ſee note on 2 Cor. 10. 2.) 4^{thly}, very ready to beleive any thing that is good of another, or that may mitigate or alleviate his fault, (ſee note on 1 Cor. 13. c.) 5^{ly}, abounding in all charitable works, 6^{thly}, without all wavering or inconſtancy, or danger of falling off to the ſeducers, or perſecutors, Gnoſticks or Jewes, 7^{thly}, without diſſimulation, or appearing to be what they are not, ſuch as the falſe brethren 2 Cor. 11. 26. which brought ſuch miſchief on the Apoſtle. f.

* But δὲ

† for them that cauſe τοῖς ποιοῦσι

18. * And † the fruit of righteouſneſſe is ſown in peace † of them that make peace.] 18. But they that love and follow peace ſhall accordingly be repaid the reward of the righteous, the peace, and all the mercies of God ſhall be their reward. g.

Notes on Chap. III.

3. μὴ πολλοὶ διδάσκαλοι γίνεσθε, be not many maſters] What the full importance of this admonition is, may perhaps be thus collected. One great fault of the Judaizing Chriſtians & Gnoſticks, frequently taken notice of, is that of judging others, the orthodox Chriſtians, and ſeparating from them. Thus Rom. 2. 1. the ὁ κρίνων, he that judgeth, in the beginning and end of the verſe, hath been ſhewed to ſignifie (ſee note a. on that chap.) him that teacheth the neceſſity of obſerving the Moſaical law, and accuſeth, and ſeparateth, and ſpeaks evil of the Orthodox Chriſtians, as breakers of the Law, as παραβάται a ſort of Apoſtates, becauſe they are not circumciſed. Theſe are there farther deſcribed, v. 18, 19, 20. as thoſe that take upon them to know the will of God moſt perfectly (and are thence called Gnoſticks) to be guides of the blind, lights of them that are in darkneſſe, inſtructers of fools, διδάσκαλοι νηπίων, teachers or maſters of babes, &c. where their aſſuming thoſe titles of guides, lights, inſtructers, maſters, is joyned with the judging of others, as blind, ignorant, fools and babes. And as there διδάσκαλος teacher or maſter (the ſame as here) is one of the titles they aſſumed, ſo v. 21. is [ὁ ἕτερον διδάσκων ἕτερον thou that teacheſt another] in this ſenſe again, thou that aſſumeſt to know more than all others, to be able to inſtruct and teach others, as if no man knew his duty but they. Theſe are again deſcribed Rom. 14. 4. by the ὁ κρίνων ἀλλότριον οἰκέτην, he that judgeth another man's ſervant, that, when Chriſt hath given Chriſtians liberty in the matter of circumciſion, and other Judaical performances, require all thoſe performances of their fellow Chriſtians, as if they, not Chriſt, were the lords and maſters of their faith. So again Col. 2. 16. Μὴ οὖν τις κρινέτω, Let no man judge you in meat or drinks, &c. where the judging is that of the Judaizers, and is called dogmatizing, ver. 20. by ordinance retrenching that liberty that Chriſt hath given us, and thereupon judging all that are not their diſciples, and ſo that is all one with this notion of διδάσκαλοι maſters here. A ſpice of this

ὁ κρίνων ἀλλότριον οἰκέτην

μὴ οὖν τις ὑμᾶς κρινέτω Κριτὴς

humour it was that Chriſt noted in the Phariſees, *Mat.*23. when he tells them, they loved to be called Rabbi, Rabbi, v. 7. i.e. my maſter, my maſter, my guide, my inſtructer, which Chriſt forbidding his diſciples to imitate, gives this reaſon, εἷς γάρ ἐστιν ὁ καθηγητὴς, for one is your guide or maſter, Chriſt, and again ver. 10. μηδὲ κληθῆτε καθηγηταί· Be not ye called guides or maſters, for one is your maſter Chriſt. And that this is the notion of διδάσκαλοι maſters, here, may appear 1. by the circumſtances of the context, and 2dly, by comparing them with theſe other places now mentioned. For the firſt, in the 12th verſe of ch. 2. S. James ſpeaks diſtinctly to theſe Judaizers, and admoniſheth them of their words, as well as actions, that they are to be guided by the Chriſtian, not Moſaical law, and accordingly to be judged, That the Chriſtian law teacheth liberty from the Moſaical, and they that ſpeak or doe contrary to that liberty, are much to be blamed; Which being thus generally propoſed on thoſe two heads, he begins (by way of ὑπόδειγμα) firſt with the laſt actions, thoſe eſpecially of mercy, moſt contrary to the practiſe of theſe Judaizers, who fiercely perſecuted the Orthodox Chriſtians, and on that head he proceeds to the end of the chapter, ſhewing how little available faith or Chriſtian profeſſion will be without charity. And then at the beginning of this chapter he returns to the firſt, that of the tongue or ſpeech, a ſpecial part of which is that of judging others, & ſo goes on to this matter of the unrulines of the tongue, v. 3. &c. and ſhews how contrary that is alſo to Chriſtian profeſſion v. 9. it being the curſing of men, when they pretend to pay reverence and bleſſing to God, And this, it ſeems, they were guilty of, not only by what had before been ſaid, c. 1. 26. that he that ſeems to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, that man's religion is vain, but here alſo, v. 10. My brethren theſe things ought not to be ſo. And that they are the Gnoſticks that are thus noted by him, appears v. 13. Who is wiſe, and endued with knowledge among you? let him by a good converſation ſhew his own works with meekneſſe of wiſdome, intimating, that this proud, faſtidious, ſupercilious wiſdome, judging and cenſuring others, is that which is here deſigned to be beaten down by him, and ſo the πικρὸς ζῆλος, bitter zeal, v. 14. And that is the reaſon alſo, that c. 4. 11. having exhorted them not to ſpeak againſt one another, he adds, He that ſpeaks againſt his brother, and judgeth his brother, ſpeaks againſt the law, and judgeth the law, i. e. by his practiſe condemns the law of God, which he ſo zealouſly profeſſeth to ſtand for. That this is the importance of the place may appear 2dly, by comparing this verſe here with Rom. 14. 10. There for the ſuppreſſing this fault of theirs, judging or ſetting at nought the brother, this reaſon is given, πάντες παραστησόμεθα τῷ βήματι τοῦ Χριστοῦ, for we ſhall all appear before the judgment ſeat of Chriſt, (as in another matter, 1 Cor. 4. He that judgeth me is the Lord, therefore judge nothing before the time, untill the Lord come &c. i. e. judging others is an unchriſtian thing, derogating from Chriſt's judicature, to which all muſt be referred:) And ſo here, Be not many Maſters, knowing we ſhall receive a greater judgment, i. e. anſwer for what we doe, at an higher judicature, And ſo again c. 4. 12. There is one lawgiver who is able to ſave and to deſtroy (i. e. to whom all judging is to be referred) Who art thou which judgeſt another? This is farther confirmed by comparing it with 1 Tim. 1. 7. where of the Gnoſtick Judaizers (evidently deſcribed v. 6. by the τινὲς ἀστοχήσαντες, and ἐκτραπέντες εἰς ματαιολογίαν, ſwerving from the faith and good conſcience, and being turned to vain ſpeaking) he ſaith, that they are deſirous to be teachers of the law, i. e. Rabbies, i. e. all one with the διδάσκαλοι Maſters or teachers here, and this, it ſeems, in reſpect of their aſſerting the neceſſity of the Chriſtian's obſerving the Moſaical law (as appears ver. 8.) and that is in effect the judging of them that obſerve it not. And ſo 1 Tim. 6. ſpeaking of theſe, under the title of ἑτεροδιδασκαλοῦντες Heterodox teachers, puffed up, as Gnoſticks, but μηδὲν ἐπιστάμενοι knowing nothing, he adds mention, as of their envy and ſtrife, ſo of their evil ſpeaking, and evil ſurmiſing, the judging which we now ſpeak of. As for the putting in the word πολλοὶ many, be ye not many maſters, I ſuppoſe that is in oppoſition to the εἷς διδάσκαλος or καθηγητὴς the one maſter or guide, Mat. 23. or the εἷς νομοθέτης, the one lawgiver, or judge here, Jam. 4. 12. For it being Chriſt's office onely to give lawes to the Church, theſe Judaizers doe clearly intrench upon his office, and ſo are πολλοὶ διδάσκαλοι many, in ſtead of the one Maſter. This one difficulty being thus explained, and the interpretation confirmed, the reſt of the chapter will be very perſpicuous and coherent to it, which in any other interpretation of the verſe will be obſcure, and the connexion very hard to be diſcerned.

That the word [ὕτω, ſo] here, is a note of the latter part, or ἀντιστρόφου of the ſimilitude, may at firſt ſight be beleived, but upon farther conſideration will be found a miſtake. For that which is here added is not fitly illuſtrated by the foregoing ſimilitude of the horſe or ſhip, but by another ſimilitude annexed after it, with the particle ἰδού, behold, For that is the way of bringing in ſimilitudes (and is uſed before v. 3. and 4.) and not onely the forms ὥσπερ, ὕτω, as, and ſo, Nay when the plain ſenſe, or matter to be illuſtrated, is firſt ſet down, as here it is, v. 2. If any man offend not in word, he is able to bridle the whole body alſo, there the ἰδού, behold, is by much the fitteſt form to introduce the ſimilitude, as there it doth of the horſe and ſhip. And if that be converted into the other form, it muſt be by placing the latter part firſt after this manner, As a man turns or rules an horſe by a bridle, or a ſhip by a ſtern: ſo he that hath command of his tongue, is able to bridle or rule the whole body, And again v. 5. As a little fire ſets a great deal of matter on fire, ſo the tongue, being a little member, μεγαλαυχεῖ, makes a great noiſe, keeps a great ſtir, puts whole multitudes into a combuſtion. And therefore another notion of [ὕτω ſo] is here to be taken notice of, as a form of bringing in a ſecond, or third part of a diſtribution, without any [ὡς or ὥσπερ as] antecedent. And ſo it ſeems to be in this place, a form of tranſition from one part of the Diſcourſe of the tongue, conſidered, when it is bridled, v. 2, 3, 4. to another v. 5. &c. when it is not bridled, and will be beſt rendred [In like manner] or [ſo likewiſe.] As for the ὕτω v. 6. which ſeems otherwiſe uſed, it is not to be found

c. The words of this v. 6. in the ordinary copies, Καὶ ἡ γλῶσσα πῦρ, ὁ κόσμος ἀδικίας οὕτως ἡ γλῶσσα κατάκειται) &c. And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity, So is the tongue seated in the members] seems not to be rightly set, The King's Ms. leaves out the οὕτως, But that change will not render the words any complete sense. The Syriack seem to have read it shorter without the latter [οὕτως ἡ γλῶσσα; so the tongue] and to have read [τῷ κόσμῳ to the world] in stead of [ὁ κόσμος the world] and then the plain meaning is, And the tongue is placed in the members, a fire of iniquity to the world, i. e. As a fire in the midst of a great deal of combustible matter, sets all presently in a flame, so doth the tongue in our members, it is a cause of contention, sedition, &c. (and so of the greatest iniquity, that sin of uncharitableness, so contrary to the Christian law) to the world, the whole society of men about us. That this is the true rendring of the place, by making the world answerable to the ὕλη matter, which is set on fire (and not that the tongue compared to fire is here styled a world of iniquity) appears by the end of the verse, where in like manner it is said φλογίζειν to put into a flame & τροχὸν γενέσεως the wheel of affairs, (see note d.)

Πῦρ ἀδικίας τὸ κόσμῳ

d. That γένεσις signifies affairs or actions, all that comes to passe, see note on Mat. 1. a. Τροχὸς signifies a wheel, and the Hebrews are wont rhetorically to expresse businesse or affairs of the world by the turning of wheels אוֹפַנַּי גִּלְגַּל תְּסִבּוֹנָה פְּרִיכֶם how are the rolling or whirling of the wheels of your affairs turned. Buxtorf: Instit: Epistol. Epist. 1. And so ὁ τροχὸς γενέσεως will signifie the compasse or sphere or succession of affairs, meaning of men or mankind, and so putting that into a flame, will be in another phrase all one with πῦρ τῷ κόσμῳ fire to the world, at the beginning of the verse, putting the world, i. e. all the affairs of the world, into a combustion.

Γένεσις Τροχὸς φλογίζειν

Another notion I have had of this phrase, which I shall but mention, by taking γένεσις in the Astronomers notion (toucht on note on c. 1. d) for Nativity or Geniture, as that notes all the events of life, by Astrologers conjecturally foretold, from the position of the heavens at the time of any ones birth. This the Artists might fitly represent in a wheel, bringing up one part of the life (and the events thereof) after another, to which the antients wheel of Fortune may seem to refer, and when this wheel was represented fiery, that would fitly note contentions and wars, &c. And accordingly φλογίζειν τὸν τροχὸν τῆς γενέσεως] might be rendred to set the wheel of Nativity on a light flame, i. e. to turn the whole life into contentions and feudes, which is but an elegant way of expressing that sense which is acknowledged to belong to these words.

e. For the understanding this verse, it must first be premised that the notion of φύσις nature for kind, or οὐσία essence, being, in Hesychius, is commodious to it here, both in the beginning and end of the verse, so that πᾶσα φύσις θηρίων &c. may signifie all kind of beasts, i. e. beasts indefinitely, so ἀνθρωπίνη φύσις may be mankind, i. e. men indefinitely of all ages or times, proportionably to δαμάζεται) and δεδαμασται is tamed and hath been tamed, i. e. in all times perpetually have been tamed. The greater difficulty will be, what is meant by δαμάζειν to tame; That may (as ordinarily it doth) signifie cicurare, to take off from wildnesse, and so to make tame and familiar, to bring to hand, and that may be very appliable both to θηρία and πετεινὰ beasts and birds, which are by men thus tamed, and made serviceable to us. But because this is not so commonly practised in serpents, and fishes, and yet these are here named indifferently with the former, it is more reasonable that another notion of the word should here be pitched on, which may indifferently be appliable to all the kinds here mentioned, And that is the notion of subduing, mastering, getting power over them, so saith Hesychius, δαμάζει, ὑποτάσσει, it signifies to be subdued, kept under, the very Latine, domari, restrained, that it shall not be able to offend or hurt, and so here ἀνυπόταττον, that which is not cannot be restrained, is opposed to it. And then this will be of a larger extent, belong to all hurtful creatures, which by horns, or teeth, or heels, or by their poisonous nature are able to hurt us, and to all the several ways and inventions that men have to avoid and restrain these, by taking them, depriving them of their weapons of offence, their stings, their teeth, or when they have bitten or poisoned any man, by curing that wound, overcoming that poison, And this last of poison, if it be not primarily here meant, is certainly to be taken in, as may be guess'd by the ὑποτύπωσις, or second part of the similitude v. 8. where the tongue that no man can subdue or restrain, is said to be full ἰοῦ θανατηφόρου of deadly, mortiferous poison, whereas the poison of other things is conquerable, curable; and so when v. 6. 'tis said σπιλοῦν to defile, i. e. to infect, or poison the whole body, and accordingly the θηρία in the front, which we render beasts, are vipers among the Physitians, Nicander &c. whose θηρίακα comes from thence, and so θηρίον is used for a venemous beast, Act. 28. 4. (all one with ἐχίδνα viper v. 3.) and so are Ἑρπετὰ serpents also. and to that may possibly belong the other part of that enumeration, the creatures of the other elements, the air and water, πέτεινα and ἐνάλια, And then perhaps it may not be amisse to resume the common ordinary notion of φύσις nature for the natural quality, and faculty of all these here named, whether strength, violence, ravenousnesse or poisonousnesse, which is by nature implanted in several creatures, enabling them to hurt and kill us, which yet ἀνθρωπίνη φύσις, by man's nature, his wit, understanding, faculty of inventing of means to secure himself, or weaken or disarm them, have from time to time been subdued, weakned, deprived of their power of hurting mortally, whereas the tongue cannot be restrained, the poison of that is mortal, and neither to be cured nor prevented.

That διακρινόμενος signifies to dispute or doubt, or waver, in the middle voice, and not to judge, or be partial, hath been already shew'd (see note on c. 2. c. and on Jude k) To which it is most consequent, that ἀδιακρίτως here should signifie [without wavering] and so it will be a very fit Epithet of the supernal wisdome, the true Christian Piety, that he which hath it, adheres firmly and constantly to Christ, whatsoever temptations attempt to drive, or invite him from it. And this is most fitly added here, where the character of the true Christian is ſet oppoſite to that of the Gnoſticks, whoſe compliances (ſo often noted in him) with the Jews or heathens, when the Chriſtian was perſecuted by either, were the higheſt degree of wavering and inconſtancy, and eſpecially his doctrine of the ἀδιαφορία, that it was an indifferent thing to forſwear Chriſt in time of perſecution. And ſo this part of the character is fitly prefixt before ἀνυπόκριτος without hypocriſie, which oppoſeth the Chriſtian to the falſe, deceitful Profeſſor of Chriſtianity, ſuch as betrayed the ſincere Orthodox beleivers to the Jewes and Perſecutors.

g. Some difficulty there is in this verſe, ariſing from the different notions that καρπὸς fruit and εἰρήνη peace are capable of. Καρπὸς fruit, noting that which is any way (whether naturally or morally) produced, ſignifies either an effect or reward. As an effect it is uſed v. 17. immediately precedent, where of the ſupernal wiſdome it is ſaid, that it is πλήρης ἀγαθῶν καρπῶν full of good fruits, thoſe fruits being the effects or productions of that wiſdome. But elſwhere it ſeems to be taken in that other notion, So Heb. 12. 11. where chaſtening though at preſent not joyous, is yet ſaid afterward to yeild (by this moral way of production, not as an effect, but a reward) the peaceable fruit of righteouſneſſe, and ſo here the ſame phraſe, καρπὸς δικαιοσύνης fruit of righteouſneſs, i. e. of that ſupernal wiſdome, or Chriſtian piety and charity (ſee Heb. 12. e.) ſignifies the reward of it, and this is here ſaid to be ſown, as there to be yeilded or returned (ſo ἀποδίδωμι ſignifies retribution) here ἐν εἰρήνῃ, in peace, as there to be εἰρηνικὸς peaceable. Then for εἰρήνη peace, that ſignifies 1. that virtue of charity, peace with men, and ſo 'tis certainly uſed in the end of the verſe, in oppoſition to all the uncharitableneſſe and emulations in the former part of this, and the beginning of the next chapter, and conſequently ποιεῖν εἰρήνην to doe or make peace (proportionable to the phraſes ποιεῖν δικαιοσύνην to do righteouſneſs, and ποιεῖν ἁμαρτίαν to doe, or commit ſin) ſignifies to uſe all diligence of endevour and induſtry to attain it, διώκειν εἰρήνην to purſue peace, φιλοτιμεῖσθαι to be emulous, ambitious of quiet, ſtudiouſly to contend for it, and ſo is εἰρηνοποιοὶ peace-makers uſed, (ſee Mat. 5. note d.) But then it doth alſo ſignifie, according to the notion of the Hebrew שָׁלוֹם, all happineſſe and proſperity, as when Peace be to you] is the form of ſalutation and contains all the bleſſings in the world, ſpiritual and temporal, under it, and ſo by the ordinary figure of ſacred Rhetorick, ἀνταναάκλασις (ſee note on Mat. 8. k.) it ſeems to ſignifie here in the former place, in peace, i. e. in a moſt happy, gracious manner, or with a confluence of all felicity attending it.

CHAP. IV.

1. All the open wars among the Jews at this time, (ſee note on c. 5. c.) and all the lower ſtrifes, and diſſenſions, and emulations, wherein the Chriſtian Judaizers are now engaged againſt others, (ſee Zonar. in Can. Ap. 65.) are far from any pious, or divine, ſupernal principle, c. 3. 17. they proceed viſibly from your own carnal hearts, your deſires, and purſuits of thoſe things, that are matter of ſatisfaction to your luſts within you, thoſe ſenſual luſts, which firſt war againſt your reaſon and upper ſoul, and then againſt the directions of God's Spirit, firſt move a ſtrife within your own breaſts, rebelling againſt the law of the mind, Rom. 7. and then diſquiet all others neer you.

1. FRom whence come wars and * fightings among you? come they not hence, even of your † luſts, that war in your members?]

* contentions μάχαι

† pleaſures ἡδονῶν

2. All your coveting, and envying, and contending, and fighting, brings you in no kind of profit, becauſe praying to God, which is the only means of attaining, is neglected.

2. Yee * luſt, and have not; yee kill and † deſire to have, and cannot obtain; * yee fight, and war, yet yee have not, becauſe yee ask not.]

* covetings ἐπιθυμεῖτε

† envy ζηλοῦτε

* ye contend and fight μάχεσθε καὶ πολεμεῖτε

3. And for them that doe pray to God, 'tis yet among many of you only, or principally, for ſuch things, which may be inſtrumental to your luſts, and therefore God who hath promiſed to grant all things that we pray for, if it be for our advantage that he ſhould, doth not grant you ſuch prayers as theſe.

3. Yee ask and receive not, becauſe yee ask amiſſe, that ye may conſume it upon your own luſts.]

4. And yee that thus behave your ſelves to God as adulterers, or adultereſſes to their mates, that receive other loves into competition with him, that think to love God and the world too, muſt know that this cannot bee done, the loving of the world, the purſuing of worldly ends or advantages, is not the loving but the hating of God; whoſoever therefore is a lover of the world, is by that to be preſumed to be a profeſt enemy of Gods.

4. Yee adulterers and adultereſſes, know yee not that the friendſhip of the world is enmity with God? Whoſoever therefore will be a friend of the world, is the enemy of God.]

a. 5. This odiouſneſſe of carnal minds in the ſight of God, was long ſince expreſſed in the Old Teſtament concerning the old world, Gen. 6. where, as the cauſe of the threatned deluge, is mentioned, that the ſpirit that was in the men of that age v. 3. i. e. their ſouls or minds, were inſatiably ſet upon their own luſts, imagined evil continually.

5. Doe yee think that the [a] Scripture ſaith in vain, The ſpirit * that dwelleth in us, luſteth to envy?]

† Which hath ſojourned in us deſireth-

b. 6. To thoſe God then gave time of repentance, an hundred and twenty years, and pardon if they would make uſe of it, and ſo God doth ſtill, but that ſtill available to men only upon condition of repentance and reformation, according to what is ſaid in another Scripture, Prov. 3. 34. God ſetteth himſelf againſt the ſtubborn, vitious perſon, but is gracious and merciful to the obedient and penitent.

6. But he giveth more grace, wherefore he ſaith, God reſiſteth the [b] proud and giveth grace to the humble.]

7. Submit

7. Submit your selves therefore to God; resist the devil, and he will flie from you.] 7. By this it appears how necessary it is for all that expect any mercy from God to be wholly conformed to his will, And whatever suggestions to envie, strife, emulation, the devil, and that wisdome which is not from above c.3.15. shall offer to you, doe you repell them, and it is not in his power without your consent to hurt you, but he will certainly being repelled, depart from you.

8. Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you: cleanse your hands, ye sinners, and purifie your hearts ye double-minded.] 8. Make your humble addresses in prayer to God, and faithfull obedience to him, and he will be ready to assist you against all temptations mentioned ver.8. As for all you Gnosticks, that are for God and the world too, v.4. (see note a. on ch.1.) which will professe Christ no longer, than 'tis safe to doe so, inconstant, cowardly, wavering hypocrites, your hearts must be purified from that profane mixture, and wholly consecrated to God's service.

9. Be afflicted, and mourn, and weep: let your laughter be turned to mourning, and your joy to heavinesse:] 9. Your reformation of such sins as these must be joyned with great humiliation, and mourning and lamenting them, And that but seasonably at this time, for there be sad daies approaching on this nation, utter excision to the unreformed, to the unbeleiving obdurate Jewes, and to all the Gnostick hereticks among them, see c.5.1. & Jude note 2.

* Be ye humbled Ταπεινώθητε

10. * Humble your selves in the sight of the Lord, and he shall lift you up.] 10. The onely way to get into the number of those that there shall be delivered, is timely to repent and return unto Christ.

† Speak not against- Μὴ καταλαλεῖτε * against † against

11. †Speak not evil one of another (brethren:) he that speaketh * evil of his brother, and judgeth his brother, speaketh † evil of the law, and judgeth the law; but if thou judge the law, thou art not a doer of the law, but a judge.] 11. Speak not against them which do not observe those legal ceremonies, which some of you Jewish Christians doe still retain, nor condemn any man for not observing them, for he that doth so, speaketh in effect against the law, by which that Christian rules his actions (i. e. the law of Christ, the Gospel) censures that for imperfect, in that it commands not those things, and if thou dost so, then in stead of obeying the law of Christ, thou undertakest to overrule and judge it, and canst not truly be called a Christian.

* and judge, for the Reg. MS. reads ἢ κρίνει

12. There is one lawgiver *, who is able to save and to destroy: Who art thou that judgest another?] 12. Christ, and none else, hath authority to give laws unto us, and punish the refractary, and it is not for you to impose observances where he hath given liberty.

† merchandise ἐμπορευσόμεθα

13. Goe to now, ye that say, [c] To day, or to morrow we will goe into such a city, and continue there a year, and †buy and sell, and get gain:] 13. And (as now the times are, a saddain destruction approaching the Jewes) one admonition will be very seasonable for those that use these or the like arrogant forms of speech, To day &c. assuming to themselves power over the future: c.

14. Whereas ye know not what shall be on the morrow: for what is your life? it is even a vapour that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away.] 14. Whereas (beside the Atheisticalnesse of it, in taking themselves off from depending on God) it is certain they doe not know what they shall be able to doe to morrow, For even your life it self, on which all your designes must necessarily depend, is but a most frail mortal transitory thing, short and presently vanisheth.

* If the Lord please, and if we shall live, we will even or also doe this. Ἐὰν ὁ Κύριος θελήσῃ, καὶ ζήσωμεν, καὶ ποιήσωμεν τοῦτο ἢ ἐκεῖνο.

15. For that ye ought to say, * If the Lord will, we shall live and doe this, or that.] 15. And therefore your forms of language ought to be of another making, never mentioning any purpose of yours, but with subordination to the good pleasure of God.

16. But now ye rejoice in your [d] boastings, all such rejoicing is † evil.] 16. And for you to take pleasure in such insolent speeches as these, is a wicked Atheistical thing. d.

† wicked πονηρά

17. Therefore to him that knoweth to doe good and doth it not, to him it is sinne.] 17. And for Christians to be guilty of this, who have received so much light and knowledge to the contrary, this will render you the more inexcusably guilty and punishable.

Notes on Chap. IV.

a. There is no place of scripture of the Old Testament, which can own so much of this citation as that Gen. 6. where in the Septuagint's reading there is πνεῦμα spirit and κατῴκησεν abideth; and the κατοικητὴν abiding, there, is all one with the παροικίαν sojourning here. Now whereas 'tis here added of that Spirit, that it doth ἐπιποθεῖν εἰς φθόνον, desire to envy. 1. 'tis clear that the πνεῦμα μου, my spirit, there, is the spirit or soul of man, given him by God, and so called God's, in respect of the original, (see note on 1 *Pet.*3. e.) but signifies the mind of man, as it is in him, and is corrupted by an habite of worldly and wicked desires, which cannot be affirmed of God's holy Spirit, (and for any evil Angel, it will be hard to say, either that such dwell in us, or that it is they that lust in us, It is our own corrupt hearts, even when the devils move us, to which the lust and all the sin is to be imputed) and 2dly, this is parallel to what Gen. 6. 3. is said of that old world, that man is flesh, and the thoughts of his heart alwaies evil, i.e. his carnal, or worldly desires are insatiable, bent to all manner of wickednesse, the desires here being distinctly noted by ἐπιποθεῖν, desiring, and either the wickednesse or insatiatenesse of them by φθόνος envie, which sometimes in Authors is the contrary to liberality, and signifies all manner of covetousnesse, pining to see any man have what we have not, and elsewhere signifies malice, violence, and the like. As for the addition here ver. 6. [But he giveth more grace] that seems to be the Apostles own observation of that place in Genesis, that when the world so provoked God, yet he gave them time of repentance (as it there follows, Nevertheless his daies shall be an hundred and twenty years, they shall have that space allowed them to reform and escape punishment) and so God in Christ doth now; and upon repentance there is yet mercy and Μείζονα δὲ δίδωσι χάριν pardon to be had, upon which is superstructed naturally that which follows, Wherefore he saith &c.

b. ὑπερηφανοις The word ὑπερήφανος here notes not particularly the vice of pride and haughtinesse, but a general disobedience and resistance against the law of God, which is called ὕβρις contumelion sneſſe, and superbia pride, in opposition to obedience, as in Virgil,

——Regum est
Parcere subjectis, & debellare superbos, It is the part of Kings to spare those that submit, and subdue the proud: a place directly parallel to this here, out of the Proverbs; and which S. Augustine conceives to be had from thence; The place in the Proverbs reads, God scorneth the scorners (because scorners use to repell with scoffs all good counsels and admonitions) And so saith Æschylus Περσ:

Ζεὺς τοι κολαστὴς τῶν ὑπερκόμπων ἄγαν Φέρτατα σπάσαι ὑπαὶ ὑβρεως βαρὺς. God is the just and heavy punisher of the proud.

c. Σημερον μνηστευομενος It was an old saying of the Hebrews mentioned by Ben Syra, Let no man say he will doe any thing, unlesse he first say, If the Lord will. On which occasion there follows in him a story of a man, who, when he said, To morrow I will sit with my spouse in the marriage chamber, was admonisht that he ought to say, אם גזר השם If God will, and he answered, Whether God will or will not, I will sit there. Of whom, saith he, it followed, that he sat with her all the day, but at night when they were going to bed, before he knew her, they were both dead, Wherefore they said, The spouse went up to her marriage-bed, and knew not what would befall her, Therefore whosoever desires to doe any thing, let him first say, If God will.

d. Ἀλαζονία Ἀλαζονία signifies boasting, or assuming to ones self more than belongs to him, and differs from αὐθάδεια self-pleasing or insolence, Tit. 1. 7. in this, that that is a great love, or high opinion of ones self, φιλαυτία self-love, 2 Tim. 3. 2. being puffed up, 1 Cor. 13. 4. being wise in ones own conceit, Rom. 11. 25. & 12. 16. but this is a fastuous speaking, and as this is ordinarily expressed in magnifying ones own abilities or power above other men, so hath it here a notion little different from it, speaking in such a form, as if he depended not upon God himself, and so it belongs to the fault reprehended v. 13. when a man promises or affirms that simply, which is not in his power, but as God is pleased to enable or concurre with him. And thus it is used Prov. 27. 1. Boast not thy self of to morrow, i.e. assume not to thy self arrogantly that thou wilt doe this or that to morrow; for, saith Solomon, thou knowest not what a day may bring forth. These kind of speeches then are here called ἀλαζονίαις boastings, and they that take pleasure in such language, in assuming thus to themselves, speaking thus magnificently of their own purposes, are here said καυχᾶσθε ἐν ταῖς ἀλαζονίαις to rejoice, or glory, in such boasting, and though all sort of rejoicing be not, yet πᾶσα καύχησις πονηρά, all such kind of rejoicing is evil, ver. 16. and that in an high degree.

Paraphrase.

CHAP. V.

1. There will now shortly come such daies, that all the rich among you, or that place any part of their interest on this world, are likely to have a very mournfull time of it, in respect of their great disappointments, and the sad destructions and calamities, that are about to fall on the Jewes.

2. Your riches are † corrupted, and your garments * moth-eaten.] † putrified σέσηπεν * are become σῆτος

3. And that rust which is wont to breed in iron by lying unused, breeds in your coin, your gold and silver (which are not ordinarily capable of rust) and this covetous withholding more than is meet, will not onely tend to your want, but is moreover a foul and crying sinne, that shall rise in judgment against you, and shall gnaw on, and devoure your flesh; your treasuring up wealth is as the treasuring up fire, which shall onely help to bring more miseries upon you, and so more fearfully to consume you, when the destruction of the Jewes, now approaching, comes, and falls most sharply upon the wealthiest men, (as soon after it fell out.)

2. 3. Your gold and silver † is cankered, and the rust of them shall be a witnesse against you, and shall eat your flesh [a] as it were fire: * Ye have heaped treasure together for the last daies.] † are rustied κατίωται * you have treasured it up ἐθησαυρίσατε

4. These riches of yours have not kept you from being unjust, but rather tempted you to oppression of the poor labourer, And this griping and cruelty of yours is a crying sin, and will bring down severe vengeance upon you from the Lord of hosts.

4. Behold, the hire of the labourers, which have reaped down your fields, † which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth: and the cries of them which have reaped, are entred into the ears of the Lord of * Sabaoth.] † being by you taken away, ὁ ἀπεστερημένος ἀφ' ὑμῶν * hosts σαβαὼθ

5. You have set your hearts upon the pitifull poor delights and joyes of this earth, lived delicately and luxuriously (as Dives) And what hath all this been, but the pampering your selves as it were for the shambles?

5. Ye have † lived in pleasure on the earth, and been wanton; ye have * nourished your hearts as in a day of slaughter. † revelled, and been luxurious ἐτρυφήσατε καὶ ἐσπαταλήσατε * fed your hearts as for the day. ἐθρέψατε τὰς καρδίας

6. Your nation hath condemned Christ to death and crucified him, he making no resistance, and now ye Gnostick Judaizers have dealt in like manner with the pure orthodox Christians.

6. Ye have condemned and killed the just, and he doth not resist you.]

b. 7. As for you that are Christians indeed, and are now persecuted by them, yee may be confident, that Christ will shortly come and avenge his and your cause upon them, see ver. 8.

7. Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the [b] coming of the Lord: behold, the husbandman waiteth for the pretious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, untill he receive the † early and and latter rain.] † former πρώϊμον

5. 8. and therefore yee may well wait patiently so short a space, till that time come, and then you shall be rescued from the present distresses (see Note on Mat. 24.b.) For thus doth the husbandman give you an example of patience, waiting for the fruit of the earth, and, in order to that, for the showers that come in the seed-time to fit the ground, and before harvest or reaping, to plump the corn, and accordingly he defers to do one or other, to sow or reap, with patience, and attendance to the other duties of his calling, till those seasons come.

* Doe yee endure patiently, and your selves confirm. Μακροθυμήσατε καὶ ὑμεῖς στηρίξατε

8. *Be ye also patient, stablish your hearts, for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.] 8. And their example yee may very fitly transcribe at this time, and thereby confirm and encourage your selves in your adherence to Christ, whatever your sufferings are, as being assured that coming of Christ (described Mat. 24) in vengeance on his enemies, is now very neer approaching (see Mat. 24.b. and Heb. 10.37.)

† Do not sigh * gates θυρῶν

9. c † Grudge not one against another, brethren, lest yee be condemned; behold, the Judge standeth before the * door.] 9. Envy not one another, break not out into those acts of hatred or emulation, or murmuring against one another, lest you bring that vengeance upon you; For behold the coming of Christ to the destruction of the Jewes and malicious persecuting Gnosticks, is now very nigh at hand, see Mat. 24.b. c.

† longanimity μακροθυμίαν

10. Take, my brethren, the prophets, who have spoken in the name of the Lord, for an example of suffering affliction, and of † patience.] 10. And whatsoever the temptations or persecutions are, which might tempt you to comply and joyn with the persecutors, consider what yee read, and know of the prophets of God in the old Testament, who when they came to proclaim God's judgements against the sinful Jewes, were generally very contumeliously used by them, but yet never fainted or were discouraged thereby, and such examples will fortifie you against the like temptations, that they may not have any impression on you, to weary you out of your constancy, and bring you to join with the Judaizers.

* we blesse μακαρίζομεν

11. Behold, * we count them happy which endure. Yee have heard of the patience of Job, and have seen the end of the Lord, that the Lord is pitiful and of tender mercy.] 11. There is nothing that, according to the principles of Christianity, is more honourable and blisseful, than suffering patiently and constantly. You remember what sufferings Job met with, and upon his patient bearing of them, what in the end the Lord gave him, double to all that he had lost, Job 42.10. By which it appears, how far God is from despising us in our afflictions, or leaving us in the hands of the persecutors, how much he loves, and how careful he is of you.

12. But above all things, my brethren, swear not, neither by heaven, nor by the earth, nor by any other oath: but let your yea be yea, and your nay nay, lest you fall into d † condemnation.] 12. One special caveat I shall further give you, that yee permit not your selves that custome of swearing, by heaven or earth, or any other form of oath; In stead of such unnecessary customes it will be much more for your turn that yee take care that your performances be agreeable to your words (see note on 2 Cor. 1.b) that you fall not into lying or false speaking. d.

13. Is any among you afflicted? let him pray. Is any merry? let him sing Psalmes.] 13. Again let your care be, that whenever any affliction befalls you, your praying to God be the constant effect of it, as on the other side, singing thanksgivings, of your prosperity.

14. Is any sick among you? let him call for the * elders of the Church, and let them pray over him, f anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord. 14. When any man falls into any disease, he is to look on it, as that which comes from God, for some special end of his, very ordinarily for some sin of ours, committed either against God, or man, not yet repented of, as it ought; and because the man so visited may not be so well able to judge of himself, but that he may stand in need of spiritual directions, and counsel, to discern his own guilts, and because whatsoever his condition be, he may receive much benefit thereby, let him call to his assistance some spiritual person, the Bishop in every city (see note on Act. 11.b.) or whosoever is by or under him ordained for such offices, and when he hath afforded the sick man his best directions and assistances, let him also pray to God with, and for him, that God will pardon his sins, assuage his pains, remove the disease, and restore him to his former health, withall using that ceremony of unction, so ordinarily used by Christ in curing diseases, and doing it in the name of Christ. e. f.

* absolution shall be given him

15. And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up, and if he have committed sins, g * they shall be forgiven him.] 15. And the prayer of the Bishop &c. and of the sick, if it come from faith in Christ, in the one, praying to God in Christ for his recovery, and in the sick person from a true Christian, penitent heart, shall be of force (save where God is pleased otherwise to dispose of it, for the good of the patient, and his own glory) to heal and recover the sick, (see note on Mat. 10.g. and Lu. 13.b.) and God shall restore him to his former health: To which purpose also it is useful, that, if upon examination he be found to have committed any wasting sin or sins, which probably have brought this disease on him, the sick person first fit himself for, and then receive absolution from the Bishop. g.

† or therefore, for the Kings MS. addes δὲ * inspired ἐνεργουμένη

16. Confesse † your h faults one to another, and pray one for another, that yee may bee healed: the * effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.] 16. Upon these considerations therefore, it will be very proper for all that are in this estate, to make acknowledgment of their sins to such as are thus called to visit them, and that besides other respects, in order to their cure from such diseases as are then upon them, by virtue of their intercession to God for those, who shall thus approve to them the sincerity of their repentance, see Gen. 20.7. For this is certainly known, that the prayer of a man of God, to which he is incited by the Spirit (as the prophets were when they prayed, and as they were under the Gospel, who had the gift of miracles, see note on Gal. 5.b.) will be very effectual, even work miraculous cures. h.

† Land γῆν

17. Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are, and he prayed earnestly that it might not rain, and it rained not on the * earth by the space of three years and six moneths.] 17. Elias was a prophet, and a righteous man, but a man for all that, and subject to the same afflictions and frailties that we are, and yet by earnest prayer he brought drought and famine upon the Land, for the punishment of the sins of the people, that ran idolatrously after Baal, and so upon the land of the ten tribes it rained not for three years and an half, Luk. 4.25. & Rev. 11.6.

18. And

18. And upon ſome reformation hee again prayed, 1 Kin. 18. 45.

18. And he prayed again, and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit.]

and he was heard in abundance of rain and fruits.

19. To conclude this diſcourſe, begun v. 14. let this be remembred, and conſidered by all, If any Chriſtian tranſgreſſe the Evangelical rule of life, fall into ſin, and any man take him off from that vicious courſe,

It is a moſt excellent glorious work of mercy, which he hath wrought, the effect of which is, that God will free him on whom this change is wrought, from death eternal, and perhaps from temporal preſent death, through ſickneſſe fallen on him, for that ſin, v. 15. and beſides he will accept, and reward that charity of him that hath wrought that good work on him with the free diſcharge of whatſoever ſins he hath formerly been guilty, but hath now repented of.

20. Let him know, that he which converteth the ſinner from the error of his way, ſhall ſave a ſoul from death, and ſhall hide a multitude of his ſins.]

Notes on Chap. V.

2. ὡς πῦρ θησαυρίσατε

That the words, ὡς πῦρ, as fire, are to be joined with θησαυρίσατε, ye have treaſured up, and not with the former, the ſenſe doth much inforce, and the antient manner of writing without points, doth well permit, and it hath a ſpecial ſignificancy in this place, agreeable to the times, wherein this Epiſtle was written: For the laſt dayes, being the time of the Jewes deſtruction, (ſee note on Act. 2. b.) and to treaſure up wealth as fire, being no more than to lay up their wealth, ſo as it ſhould miſchief and devour, and conſume, in ſtead of advantaging them, this is here moſt truly ſaid of the uncharitable, and unchriſtian Judaizers at that time, in reſpect of the deſtruction of that people approaching, where the rich miſers were the moſt miſerably harraſt of any, (ſee note on Rev. 9. c.)

Ἐσχάταις ἡμέραις

b. Παρουσία τοῦ Κυρίου

The coming of the Lord is here expreſſly defined by Oecumenius to be Ῥωμαϊκὴ ὁδὸς the expedition of the Romanes, to which he there applies the words of Chriſt concerning John, If I will that he tarry til I come, Καὶ ὁ παρεπίδη ἐν τούτῳ ὁ τῆς ζωῆς παύτης χρόνος ἕως ἡ ἁλώσεως Ἱερουσαλὴμ, καὶ μικρὸν ἐπιλοιπα, For the time of this life was to him extended untill the taking of Jeruſalem, and a little beyond it.

c. μὴ στυγάζετε

The practiſes of the Zelots among the Jewes, a little before the great miſerable deſtruction of that people, are often mentioned in Joſephus, and referred to in this Epiſtle eſpecially, and in thoſe of S. Peter, written about the ſame time, and to the ſame perſons, that this of S. James was, viz. to the diſperſed of the Jewes: And although thoſe to whom the Epiſtles were directed immediately, were the Jewiſh Chriſtians, yet of theſe there were ſo many, that did ſtand for the continuance of the Moſaical law, and ſo were Judaizing Chriſtians, and theſe lived ſo intermixtly with the unconverted Jewes themſelves, and ſo maliciouſly acted with them to the perſecuting of the Orthodox Chriſtians, that as ſome paſſages of this Epiſtle ſeem to belong onely to the Jewes unconverted, as the former part of this chapter, till v. 7. ſo many more pertain to thoſe that went on with them in their ſins, thoſe that reconciled Chriſtianity and the world, and all the moſt enormous ſenſual ſins c. 4. 4. and particularly the outrageous practiſes of the Zelots, For ſo it appears by Act. 21. 20. that many myriads of converted, or beleiving Chriſtian Jewes were all ζηλωταὶ τοῦ νόμου, of the number of theſe Zelots, that were very vehement perſecutors of all that ſtood not for the law of Moſes. To theſe refers the unruly tongue c. 3. compared to a fire that kindled ſo much matter, made ſuch combuſtions among them, φλογίζουσα ſetting into a flame the whole wheel or courſe of affairs v. 5. 6. untameable, v. 8. full of curſing and bitterneſſe v. 10, 11. and in plain words πικρὸς ζῆλος bitter zeal, v. 14. and again ζῆλος zeal or envy, v. 16. and from thence ἀκαταστασία καὶ πᾶν φαῦλον πρᾶγμα, ſedition, or tumultuouſneſſe, and every evil deed, the very character of the Zelots in Joſephus, ſo again c. 4. the πόλεμοι καὶ μάχαι ἐν ὑμῖν, the wars and quarrels among them, v. 1. which, as it is obſerved, were firſt inteſtine among themſelves, begun by thoſe of the Zelots, and ſo prepared them to their wretched deſolation, when the Romane Eagles came, And more punctually v. 2. φονεύετε καὶ ζηλοῦτε, yee kill and envy: And to this purpoſe the στενάζετε here moſt properly belongs, which though it ſignifie ſighing, or groaning, or murmuring, yet becauſe that is an effect of envy and emulation, which ſighs at other men's proſperity, and becauſe envy proceeds wholly from uncontentednеſſe, (as in the ſtory of Cain it appears, firſt his countenance was ſad, and then he maligнes and ſlayes his brother) therefore by a figure it is ſet to ſignifie the ſame thing that φθόνος and ζῆλος, envy and bitter zeal had before ſo often done.

d. εἰς ὑπόκρισιν

The antient copies generally (and, beſide thoſe produced by others, the forementioned in Magdalene College Library in Oxford) read, εἰς ὑπόκρισιν into hypocriſie. The word ὑπόκρισις in the Septuagint ſignifies ψευδολογία falſe ſpeaking, for the Hebrew נָבָל, which vulgarly ſignifies to be an hypocrite, to diſſemble, ſignifies alſo to ly, to deceive, to deal fraudulently, (as neer in ſignification, as in ſound to our Knave, as it is now uſed among us) and ſo one of theſe is taken for the other, the word ὑπόκρισις ſet to ſignifie ψευδολογία, falſe ſpeaking; And then the exhortation of this place will be parallel to that of Philo, Κάλλιστον τὸ ἀνώμοτον, ὅπου ἡ ἀληθὴς ἐν ἐκείνοις ὡς τοῦ λόγου ὅρκος νομίζεται. It is beſt not to ſwear at all, but to take ſuch care of ſpeaking truth with every man, that our words may be thought to be oaths. And that of the Arabians, Let thy ſpeech be I and No, that thou mayſt be a true ſpeaker among all men, And Joſeph: de Bell: Jud: l. 2. c. 12. of a ſort of Jewes, Πᾶν μὲν τὸ ῥηθὲν ὑπ' αὐτῶν ἰσχυρότερον ὅρκου· τὸ δὲ ὀμνύειν αὐτοῖς ἐφίεται, χεῖρον τὸ ἐπιορκίας ἀπολαμβάνοντες, ὅτι μὴ ὃν μὴ πιστεύουσι θεὸν ἀπὸ ἀνθρώπων διηκὰ ᾠῶ. All that is ſaid by them is ſtronger than an oath, oath, Swearing is forbidden by them, counting it worſe then perjury, and affirming that that man is already condemned as unfit to be truſted, which is not beleived without calling God to witneſſe.

e. Πρεσβύτερους τῆς ἐκκλησίας

What is here meant by Πρεσβύτερους τῆς ἐκκλησίας, elders of the Church, is not eaſie to be determined. If there were at the time of the writing this Epiſtle, beſide the ſeveral Biſhops in each Church, a ſecond order, of Presbyters, under the Biſhops, and above the Deacons, and of them more then one in each Church, it would then be moſt reaſonable to interpret this place of thoſe, But becauſe there is no evidence, whereby theſe may appear to have been ſo early brought into the Church, (ſee Act. 11.b.) and becauſe Πρεσβύτερους in the plural, doth no way conclude that there were more of theſe Elders, than one in each particular Church (any more than that the ſick man was bound to call for more than one) and becauſe Πρεσβύτερους, Elders of the Church, was both in the Scripture ſtyle (ſee note on Act. 11.b.) and in the firſt writers, the title of Biſhops, and laſtly, becauſe the viſiting of the ſick is antiently mentioned, as one branch of the office of Biſhops, therefore it may very reaſonably be reſolved, that the Biſhops of the Church, one in each particular Church, but many in the univerſal, are here meant. Thus in Polycarpe's Epiſtle to the Philippians, where the Πρεσβύτερους Elders, being the higheſt order mentioned, and and thoſe to whom κρίσις judicature belongs, may (as in Papias, and Irenæus, and Clemens Alexandrinus, and Tertullian they doe) moſt reaſonably be conceived to denote Biſhops, One part of their office is ſet down, that they are ἐπισκεπτόμενοι πάσας ἀσθενείας, thoſe that viſit all the ſick. And accordingly ſo it moſt probably muſt in this place.

f. Ἀλείψαντες ἐλαίῳ

That anointing with oil] was a ceremony ſometimes uſed by Chriſt, and his Apoſtles, in working their miraculous cures, healing diſeaſes, and caſting out devils, appears Mar. 6.13. where at the Apoſtles going out, it is ſaid, that they caſt out devils, καὶ ἤλειφον ἐλαίῳ πολλοὺς ἀῤῥώστους, καὶ ἐθεράπευον, and anointed many ſick perſons with oil, and cured them. Another ceremony there was, uſed to the ſame purpoſe, impoſition of hands, *Mar.*16.18. and *Act.*9.17. and 28.8. And to theſe prayer was added as the more effectual and ſubſtantial performance, of which unction and impoſition of hands were onely the ceremonies, and this prayer commenced in the name of Chriſt, or elſe the name of Chriſt, in prayer, called over the ſick; And by theſe means, together with the ſick man's examining, and confeſſing, and ſincerely forſaking whatſoever ſin he ſtood guilty of, either toward God, or man. It was ordinary, while thoſe extraordinary gifts remained in the Church, for diſeaſes to be cured, and health reſtored to the ſick, without the uſe of any other means, of phyſick &c. where, as the prayer of faith, or calling the name of Chriſt over the ſick was the means of curing the diſeaſe v.15. and ſo Act. 3. 16. Chriſt's name hath made this man ſtrong, and the faith which is by him hath given him this perfect ſoundneſſe, ſo the ceremony, whether of oil or impoſition of hands, was indifferently either uſed or not uſed by them. In the Goſpels many ſuch cures are wrought without either, and ſo in the Acts by taking by the hand, by embracing, c. 3.7. c.20. 10. and by his bare word c.9.34. and ſo again v.40. And c. 14. 10. and c. 16. 18. and 19. 12. From whence it appears, 1. To what end this unction was uſed, preciſely to that of miraculous healing, or recovering the ſick to health, and that not through any efficacy or virtue in the oil, but directly the contrary, as touching the eyes, laying on the hands, and ſaying the word, were uſed, none of which have any natural force in them, nor were uſed on other deſigne, than to demonſtrate the miraculouſneſſe of the work, which was wrought without any contribution of means. 2^dly, That this uſage, as a bare ceremony was not inſtituted by Chriſt, or any way commanded to be continued by the Apoſtles or their ſucceſſors in the Church, even while the gifts of healing did continue among them, but was by the Apoſtles themſelves very frequently omitted in their working of cures. 3^dly, For that uſe of unction or enoiling, as a viand to thoſe that depart out of the world, there being nothing ſaid of it here (but on the contrary the whole uſe of it, in order to the recovering of the ſick) there is no colour of ground for aſſerting it, nor obligation to the uſe of it, to be met with in the New Teſtament, and therefore allowing it to be a bare ceremony, or a ſigne of our ſpiritual cure, it is ſtrange how it ſhould come to be eſteemed a Sacrament, and that diſtinguiſhed from Abſolution on the ſick bed, and as ſuch, be deemed neceſſary to all that depart out of this world, and uſed to them only, when it is thought certain, that they will dy, and all this meerly on the authority of this one place, where it is deſigned on purpoſe to the recovering of the ſick perſon. 4^thly, That even in order to the recovering of the ſick, it is not now a ceremony of any propriety or fitneſſe for uſe, the gift of miraculous healing being not now pretended to in the Church, and therefore this ceremony which was then ſometimes attendant on that gift, and was adjoined to the exerciſe of it, on purpoſe to ſhew that it was clearly a gift, operating without natural means (to which end the unefficaciouſneſſe of unction was very proper) muſt long ſince ceaſe to have any propriety. Mean while the other parts of S. James's direction here to the ſick are very worthy obſerving in order to our preſent practiſe, that they ſhould call for the Elders of the Church, that thoſe Elders ſhould pray over, or for them, and that in the name of our Lord Jeſus, that if the ſick have upon examination been found guilty of any ſinne or ſinnes, which may probably have brought that admonition from heaven, (that ſickneſſe) upon him, he confeſſe them to God, and if they be treſpaſſes againſt a brother, confeſſe them to the injured perſon, and deſire his reconciliation alſo, and in either caſe approve the ſincerity of his reſolution, contrition, and change of mind to the elder or ſpiritual perſon, who may bee deemed in many reſpects more likely to paſſe a right judgement on it, than he can on himſelf, and by his office is rendred moſt fit to be thus intruſted, and employed; and then laſtly, that upon a due performance of all this, and upon a due preparation of the patient, and expreſſion of his ſincere deſire of it, the Abſolution of the Church ſhould be afforded him. And as this may be a very proper method to be uſed for the obtaining the peace of God, and of real comfort

to the true penitent soul. so may it now by the blessing of God, in case the disease was sent for such correction, be a most probable means, together with the skilful directions, and applications of the Physitian, and a patient submission to them, σῶζειν κάμνοντα, to recover the diseased, and to qualifie him to receive benefit by the Physitian, and to partake of the promise here, ἐγερεῖ αὐτὸν ὁ κύριος, The Lord shall raise him up, when he in wisdome, and mercy shall see that fittest for him, and the like may be said of all other afflictions; For as certainly as God hath the disposing of the world, every particular disease that befalls any, is sent by him, and from him comes with some commission, whether to remove out of this world, or to exercise patience, or to mortifie sin, or to call to reformation, and if the latter be it (as I think I may truly say, most commonly it is, and it is most safe to suspect, and examine alwaies, whether it bee not so) then nothing can more contribute to the remove of this evil, then to take away the cause of it, and to perform that work for which it was sent, according to what we finde in the cures wrought by Christ, that the forgiving of the patient's sinnes, [Son, thy sinnes are forgiven thee] is the ordinary preface to his recovery, And so Eccles. 2.11. before God's releasing, or delivering in time of tribulation, there is first his ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτίας remitting of sins, as 2 Mac. 3. when Heliodorus had been scourged for his sacrilegious enterprize, and the high priest offered sacrifice for his recovery, v. 32. the Priest is said to have made an atonement, and God thereupon to have granted him life, v.33. And so in Hezekiah's sickness, when the Prophet is sent unto him, this is the method of his recovery. And accordingly the son of Syrach counsels, Eccles. 38.9. My son in thy sickness be not negligent, but pray unto the Lord, and he will make thee whole, Leave off from sin, and order thy hands aright, and cleanse thy heart from all wickedness: Give a sweet savour, and a memorial of fine flower, and make a fat offering, as one that is to dy, Then give place to the Physitian, for the Lord hath created him. --There is a time when in their hands there is good successe. And why may not this be that time, which I now mention?

That ἀφεθήσεται] here must be taken impersonally, and so rendred, absolution or remission shall be given him, may appear by the antecedent, ἁμαρτίας sins, which being the plural number, cannot be joined with this, which is in the singular, nor is there any other noun, that can belong to it; For if ὁ κύριος, the Lord, were the antecedent to it, it must have been in the Active voice, ἀφήσει he shall remit them. And thus in all probability it would have been, if it had been a promise of God's pardon, or remission, for then, as it was said, the Lord shall raise him up, so would it commodiously have been added, and if he have committed sinnes, he, i. e. Lord, will remit them. By this impersonal form therefore somewhat else seems to be meant, beside the Lord's remission, and then that, from the precedent mention of the Elders of the Church, will be concluded to be the absolution of the Church in the hands of the Rulers thereof, the Bishops, Of which see note on John 20. 23. This is of two sorts, 1. a release of the offender from the Publick Censures of the Church, excommunication &c. (inflicted on scandalous offenders upon publick cognizance of their faults) upon repentance restoring such to their communion again, 2*dly*, more private, in case of any wasting sin, more privately committed, and in confession revealed to the spiritual person; In which case, upon faithful premise of reformation, and obedience to spiritual advice, and direction (upon recovery to health) the Elder may, and ought to give the sick person the peace of the Church, and the benefit of absolution. And that being by him done Ministerially, and pro officio, and clave non errante, as it brings the blessing and prayers of the Church along with it, so it may reasonably tend to the quieting of the Conscience, and avoiding all scruple, and doubtfulnesse (as our Church affirms in the exhortation before the Communion) and be a means of obtaining a release from the disease, if God see fit, or a pawn and pledge of remission in heaven.

What is the meaning of [ἁμαρτήματα sins] here, is matter of some doubt; For as, according to the notation of the word, it may signifie some lapses or lighter sins, and so be opposed to ἁμαρτίας committed sins, in the former verse, so by the ἀλλήλοις one to another, adjoyning, it may seem to be restrained to trespasses, offences against the brethren, i. e. other men, or Christians, and so to be opposed to ἁμαρτίας sins against God. In either of these notions, the [ἐξομολογεῖσθε ἀλλήλοις confessing one to another, will not necessarily import any more, than confessing those lighter sins to any inferior fellow Christian, or to the wronged brother, the addition of whose prayers may be very usefull to the obtaining any mercy from God, particularly that of the ἴαμαι healing, that here follows, and the seeking his reconciliation in case of trespasse, will be a duty, if not of this, of another text, Mat. 5. 24. and must be performed, before there be any reason to hope that God will accept his private offerings, or prayers, for the removing that punishment, which his injuring his brother hath cried to heaven, and fetch'd down upon him. But it is to be observed, that the King's MS. reads this place with some variation, ἐξομολογεῖσθε οὖν ἀλλήλοις τὰς ἁμαρτίας, Confesse therefore your sins to one another, and so the Latine also, And then as that distinction of the two sorts of sinnes, heavier and lighter, against God and against the brother, is superceded here. so the οὖν therefore, connecting it to what went before, the prayer, and absolution of the Elders, and indeed the Elders being the only persons, who are supposed to be present there, and whose prayers ex officio will be most fit to be compared with Elias's praying, v. 17. it must follow, that the [ἀλλήλοις one to another] must be restrained onely to the Elders forementioned (as πάντες ἀλλήλοις ὑποτασσόμενοι in the ordinary copies, 1 Pet. 5.5. Be ye all subject to one another, must signifie, as it is defined by the matter, subjection, which is not mutual, nor of superiors to inferiors, nor of equals to equals, but onely of inferiors to superiors) and the confessing of sins to them, be here prescribed, as the preparative and condition of their absolution. To which purpose it is certain, that as repentance, if it be sincere, comprehends confession to God, and if the penitent desire to approve the sincerity of it to the spiritual person, and obtain absolution from him

him, it is necessary that he make at least a general confession, and such as shall not hide any sort of his guilts from him, (as we read at John Baptist's baptisme, Mat. 3.6. and in the story Mat. 19.18. where the Greek Fathers and scholiasts agree, Δεῖ πάντα πᾶν λόγον πᾶσι ἐμφανίζειν &c. Every faithfull man ought to tell his offences, and to renounce and disclaim them,) and very useful and expedient, that he descend to particulars also, that his prayers may be more particularly adapted to his wants, and probably prove more efficacious by this means, So this particular confession will be very advantageous to the penitent, for the obtaining direction to the most proper remedies for the resisting, and preventing the returns of those sins, in order to his fortifying himself against them.

1. Καλύπτει πλῆθος ἁμαρτιῶν

What is the meaning of this phrase Καλύψει πλῆθος ἁμαρτιῶν, shall cover a multitude of sins] is a matter of some difficulty to determine. It seems to be a proverbial speech, and very neer that of Prov. 10.12. Love covereth all sins, and if by analogie to that, it be interpreted, it must signifie to cover other mens sins from our own eyes, to cause us to look favourably on others faults, to see few faults in them, in order to peaceable and friendly living with them, for thus in that place of the Proverbs, the opposition inforceth, Hatred stirreth up strifes, but love covereth all sins, where hatred being opposed to love or charity, covering all sins, must also be opposite to stirring up strife, and so must be the composing of our minds, breeding kindnesse and charity to others, which is done by seeing as few faults in them, as may be. But it will be very unreasonable to affix this sense to this place, which speaks of him that converts another from the evil of his waies, and so shall save that other's soul from death, but cannot fitly be said in the future to breed in himself charity to that other, or to look upon his sins with favour and indulgence. It must therefore first be remembred, what hath oft elsewhere been noted, that the writers of the New Testament doe make use of phrases or places in the Old, in other senses, than what in the fountain belonged to them, not by way of testimony, but by way of accommodation, affixing to the words some sense, which they will fitly bear, though not that, which had originally belonged to them. And then 2^dly, Κρύπτειν ἁμαρτίας to hide sinne, is a known phrase for pardoning or forgiving of sins, So Psal. 32.1. Blessed is the man whose iniquity is forgiven, and ὧν ἐπεκαλύφθησαν αἱ ἁμαρτίαι, whose sins are thus covered, and so it may most reasonably signifie here, And then the onely question will be, whose sins they are, which he that converts another to righteousnesse, shall cover, his own, or that other man's. That they are not his own, is thought reasonable, because then a man shall be said (or his charity shall be said) to cover, i.e. to forgive his sins, which is the work of God onely. But that objection is of no force, or if it were of any, it would equally hold against a man's covering another's sins, for neither he, nor his charity can forgive another's sins, in propriety of speaking. And therefore there being a necessity to acknowledge some figure in the expression, it will be as easie by that figure to interpret it of a man's own sins, That, as in Daniel c. 12. 3. They that turn many to righteousnesse shall shine as the stars forever and ever, and as Dan. 4.27. Nebuchadnezzar is exhorted to break off his iniquities by shewing mercy to the poor, and as they that had fallen under the Censures of the Church by sin, were in the antient Church, according to the Apostolick rules, to fit themselves for absolution, not onely by repenting, and reforming their sins, but by addition of ἀγαθοεργίας, works of charity and mercy, So this great charity of converting any from the error of his way, which is a means of saving the soul of the converted alive, should be very acceptable in the sight of God, and being added to his sincere repentance for his sins, how many soever he hath committed, should be effectual to the obtaining his pardon, through the mercies of Christ under the Gospel. And as this sense seems most agreeable to this place, where there is a double encouragement offered to excite that charity, 1. the intuition of the advantage to the receiver, saving his soul alive (which includes, and cannot well be improved with the addition of covering, or forgiving his sins) and secondly of the advantage that devolves to himself, so it will be found perfectly concordant with the doctrines and interpretations of the Antient Church, and no way unreconcileable with the merits and satisfaction of Christ (by which onely it is that God becomes propitious to our best performances) or the doctrine of justification by faith, which doth not exclude, but suppose the rewarding of our charity: If this be the meaning of this place, there will then be little reason to doubt, but it is the importance also of the same words 1 Pet. 4.8. for charity shall cover a multitude of sinnes, which are used as an argument to the beleiving Jewes to impresse on them the practise of Christian charity, then, at that time of the approach of God's judgments on the obstinate persecuting Jews and Gnosticks, whose impurities, and hating, and pursuing of the Orthodox Christians, were sure to bring vengeance suddenly upon them, and sobriety, and vigilance in prayer, and fervent charity, were the likeliest means to averr it from any, the latter of which, saith the Apostle, hath that force in it, as to propitiate God to those that have been formerly guilty of many sinnes, supposing now they have repented and forsaken them.

THE FIRST EPISTLE GENERAL OF PETER.

† the Apostle Peter, for the Copies ordinarily read ὁ Ἀπόστολος Π:

2. Πέτρος ἐστίν

THE time of writing this first Epistle of S. Peter is ordinarily affirmed to be the 44th year of Christ, at which time he is supposed to have planted a Church at Rome, and from thence to have wrote this Epistle to the Jewish Christians, which either before their Christianity dwelt out of their own countrey (see Act. 2. 10.) or, because they were Christians, were driven out of it, Act. 11. 19. That it was written from Rome, seems evident by the salutation in the close, ch. 5. 13. where the Συνεκλεκτὴ fellow-chosen, questionless signifies their fellow Church of Jewish Christians; and that ἐν Βαβυλῶνι, in Babylon, denotes Rome, see note on Revel. 18. a. That S. Peter and other the Apostles were persecuted by Herod Agrippa appears Act. 12. 1, and accordingly the Apostles going out of Judæa is placed by Baronius in An: Chr: 43. i. e. in the second of Claudius's Empire: That Peter came to Rome in that second of Claudius, is affirmed by Eusebius in Chronico, and in like manner by S. Hierome de script: Eccles: Secundo Claudii anno Simon Petrus Romam pergit, In the second year of Claudius Simon Peter goes to Rome, And so saith Orosius l. 7 c. 6. that at the beginning of Claudius, Peter came to Rome, and converted many there to the faith of Christ, according to that of Epiphanius that the Church of Rome was founded by Peter and Paul, And so saith * Gaius, and Dionysius Bishop of Corinth, the former calling the monuments of those two Apostles τρόπαια τῶν ταύτην ἱδρυσαμένων ἐκκλησίαν, the trophees of those that built that Church, and the latter calling that Church ἀπὸ Πέτρου καὶ Παύλου φυτείαν γενομένην, the plantation made by Peter and Paul: All which, as they are evidences of Peter's having been at Rome, so is that the prime thing doubted of by those later writers which question this date of this Epistle. Agreeably hereunto the principal design of this Epistle is to comfort and confirm those Jewish converts, who were thereupon driven from their homes Act. 8. and from Judæa and Samaria, where at first they were scattered v. 1. driven farther off at length by the malice and persecutions of the obdurate Jewes, to Phœnice, and Cyprus, and Antioch, Act. 11. 19. and here to Pontus, Galatia and Cappadocia, Asia and Bithynia, Which persecutions for the name and profession of Christ he makes matter of the greatest joy to them, c. 1 6. and so again c. 4. 13. mixing withall many precepts agreeable to their present condition, especially that of abstaining from carnal lusts, c. 2. 1. and discharging the offices that belonged to them, in their several relations of subjects, c. 2. 13. of wives, c. 3. 1. of husbands, v. 7. of Bishops in the Church, c. 5. 1.

Who according to the good pleasure and purpose and decree of God, to rescue a remnant of the Jewes out of the common deluge of sin and destruction, are by the word preached, and miracles wrought by the Apostles (the means used by the holy Ghost to convert men to Christianity) brought to this blessed state, to obey Christ, and to be in covenant with him, who signed it with the effusion of his blood, and thereby enabled, and obliged us to perform the condition of it: I salute you all in the Lord, and wish you all increase of all Evangelical blessings, and of all prosperity.

3. Blessed be the name of that eternal God, the God and father of Jesus Christ, who is our Lord, who out of his infinite mercy to frail sinfull mortal men, hath by raising Christ from the dead and setting him at his right hand, and by the blessed consequents of that, given us grounds and matter of hope, and cheerfull assurance,

7. That the triall of your faith by sufferings, being a thing that tends much more to your advantage than the trial of gold doth to the advantage of gold, (because gold is apt to be worn out and perish (see v. 18.) even after it is tried in the fire, and found to be good, whereas your faith, approving it self to God, shall not perish, and so hath the advantage) may prove successfull to the obtaining for you approbation, and honour, and glory at the final day of doom, and the like here at this other day of Christ's coming to destroy your persecutors, and to give you an honourable, discernible deliverance, ver. 5. see v. 13. & ch. 4. 13. and note on 2 Thess. 1, b.

17. And if you professe to be the children of that father, i.e. of God, who is not partial to Jewes above Gentiles, but judgeth both according to their actions, you will be concerned to walk reverendly, strictly and watchfully (see Phil. 2. c.) all your time, and being strangers among other nations, v. 1. to behave your selves like strangers (see c. 2. 11.)

18. For as much as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers;]

18. Considering that Christ by his death hath taken away the legal rites of meer external obedience, wherein the sages of the Jewes placed all their religion, and that therefore the falling back to that is the forfeiting a greater privilege, than a redemption out of the power of temporal enemies, such as is wont to be purchased with gold;

22. Having therefore by yeilding obedience to the Goſpel (preached to you) brought your minds, without all mixture of hypocriſie, to the ſincerity and purity of Chriſtian charity, be careſull that ye continually perſevere in the exerciſe and practiſe of that virtue one toward another. 22. † Seeing ye have purified your ſouls in obeying the truth through the Spirit, unto unfeigned love of the brethren, ſee that ye love one another with a pure heart * fervently,] † Having purged your minds through obedience of the truth by the Spirit, Τὰς ψυχὰς ὑμῶν ἡγνικότες ἐν τῇ ὑπακοῇ τῆς ἀληθείας διὰ πνεύματος * or durably ἐκτενῶς

24. The word of God now revealed to us by Chriſt, ſhall never be abrogated, but continue and laſt for ever, and this is that Goſpel which hath been preached to and received by you, from which therefore you muſt not fall off to Judaiſme again, whatever your temptations or allurements are from the Jewes or Gnoſticks. 25. But the word of the Lord endureth forever: and this is the word † which by the Goſpel is preached unto you.] † which is preached τὸ εὐαγγελισθὲν

Notes on Chap. I.

2. Ῥαντισμὸς αἵματος

What is meant here by ῥαντισμὸς αἵματος Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, the ſprinkling of the blood of Jeſus Chriſt] will be diſcernible by obſerving that it is in the ſame caſe, and ſo in conjunction with ὑπακοὴ obedience] preceding. By this it appears that it muſt be taken in a paſſive ſenſe, ſo, as they are ſuſceptible of it, who are here ſaid to obey, that is, ſo as the beleivers here through the ſanctification of the Spirit, ſhall be ſprinkled with that blood; The only queſtion is, what notion of our being ſprinkled with Chriſt's blood is here referred to. For more poſſible notions there are, of which the matter is capable, The principal, that in reference to the practiſe Exod. 24. 8. where the people are ſprinkled with blood, by way of obſignation of the Covenant between God and them, for upon reading of the Covenant in the audience of the people, and upon their profeſſing [All that the Lord hath ſaid, we will doe, and be obedient] v. 7. it follows, v. 8. Moſes took the blood and ſprinkled it upon the people, and ſaid, Behold the blood of the Covenant which the Lord hath made with you, concerning all theſe words. Were it not for that laſt clauſe [concerning all theſe words] it might ſtill be uncertain what part of the Covenant it was, (whether onely that on God's, or that alſo on the peoples part) which was thus ſigned, and conſequently ſignified by the ῥαντισμὸς, ſprinkling of blood; But by the uſe of the phraſe [all the words] v. 3. viz: all the words which the Lord hath ſaid, 'tis evident that the peoples part, which is obedience, and not onely Gods part in making good his promiſes to them, was it that was ſealed, and ſo ſignified by their being ſprinkled with blood by Moſes, and to it is immediately annexed, All that the Lord hath ſaid will we doe, and be obedient v. 7. And Moſes took the blood and ſprinkled it &c. ver. 8. And to this it is very agreeable that here it is (in the ſame caſe) joyned with ὑπακοὴ, obedience and the ſprinkling of the blood of Jeſus, noting this of Evangelical obedience to be the condition required on our part in this new Covenant, which Chriſt ſealed with his blood, in like manner as that Moſaical Covenant was there ſealed with ſprinkling of blood, and to which he hath both enabled, and obliged us by his death, having given himſelf for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purifie to himſelf (which is the effect of ſprinkling) a peculiar people, &c. Tit. 2. 14. and ſo we read of this blood of ſprinkling (by wch Chriſt's death is typified) that it was the blood of the Covenant which the Lord commanded to you, Heb. 9. 20. a rite to engage our obedience to God. And this ſeems to be the moſt proper notation of the words, and is fully parallel to that of Epheſ. 1. 4. where God is ſaid to have choſen us in Chriſt that we ſhould be holy &c. Some other notions the phraſe might be capable of, either to ſignifie God's pardon and acceptance, Heb. 9. 22. Rom. 3. 25. (but that will not ſo well agree with the paſſive acception of the word, looking rather on God, who is the agent in it, and the blood of Chriſt the meritorious cauſe of it, whereas this being joyned with obedience, ſeems to be ſomewhat in us, to which we are enabled, and engaged by the blood of Chriſt) or elſe to denote our imitating Chriſt's conſtancy and perſeverance, ſhedding our blood in his cauſe, as he hath given us an example, And thus indeed to be ſprinkled by Chriſt's blood may may be a phraſe, figuratively to ſignifie our tranſcribing this bloody copie of his, but yet ſeems not to be any part of the intimation of the ceremony of ſprinkling with blood in Exodus, from which this rather ſeems to be tranſcribed.

CHAP. II.

Paraphraſe.

* naughtineſſe, κακιαν † So ὑποκρισεις is to be rendred, but it may be perhaps ὑποκρισεων, and then it muſt be read, drink or ſuck in, * the rational pure milk τὸ λογικὸν ἄδολον γάλα and ſo the Syriack and Latine.

1. Wherefore arming your ſelves againſt the erroneous doctrines and practiſes of the Gnoſtick hereticks, that inſinuate themſelves among you, to infuſe villany, and all kinde of deceitfulneſſe and hypocriſie, as alſo of malice, and calumniating of others the pureſt Chriſtians,

2. As new born babes † deſire * the ſincere milk [a] of the word, that ye may grow thereby. †]

2. Behave your ſelves with that ſimplicity which becometh new born children, ſuck in that pure nouriſhment, which by your rulers is afforded you (ſee Rom. 12. 2.) viz. inſtruction, or Chriſtian doctrine, and that pure from all Jewiſh or heretical mixtures, which may increaſe your Chriſtian ſtature, advance you to an higher pitch of Chriſtianity, and at laſt bring you to ſalvation. a.

† here the King's MS. adds εἰς σωτηριον unto ſalvation,

3. If ſo be ye have taſted that the Lord is gracious;]

3. Which ſure you will doe, if you have but once (as David ſaith of Gods law, Pſal. 34. 9.) taſted how ſweet, how much for our advantage it is, which is deſigned us in the Goſpel of Chriſt;

4. To whom coming, as unto a living ſtone, * diſallowed indeed of men, but † choſen of God, and pretious,]

4. To whom aſſociating or conjoyning your ſelves (by obedience and worſhip) as to a living, not dead foundation, or corner-ſtone, rejected indeed by the Jewiſh Sanhedrim, but in God's account moſt choiſe and eſteemed, and meant for the foundation of a viſible Church.

5. * Ye alſo as lively ſtones are built up a ſpiritual houſe, an holy prieſthood to offer up ſpiritual ſacrifices, acceptable to God by Jeſus Chriſt.]

5. Doe you accordingly, not as dead, but living members, joyn together, not onely in inward piety, but in continual aſſemblies or Church-meetings, of which every Chriſtian is to be a part, and ſo all together make up a ſpiritual temple, i. e. congregation, to pray unto, and praiſe God, to perform to him thoſe acts of the Chriſtian ſacrifice, to which you are as it were conſecrated, and ſet apart by God, and which being now offered to God in the name of Chriſt, or through what he hath ſuffered and done for us, will be ſure to be acceptable to God, without the bodily ſacrifices of the Jews, or obſervation of their law.

6. Wherefore [b] it is contained in the Scripture, Behold, I lay in Sion a chief corner-ſtone, [c] elect, precious: and he that beleiveth on him ſhall not be † confounded.]

6. Aeccording to that which the Scripture tells us, that in the erecting the new Church under the Goſpel, Jeſus Chriſt and his doctrine, in oppoſition to all other, is appointed by God to be the foundation of the foundation, ſo that all that is in the Church muſt be founded and buiſe on him, and whoſoever doth ſincerely beleive, and is truly built on him, ſhall never fail of his expectation, he ſhall never miſcarry that lays his weight on that foundation, ſee note on Rom. 9. m. b. c.

7. Unto you therefore which beleive * he is precious: but unto them which be diſobedient, the ſtone which the builders diſallowed, the ſame is made the head of the corner,]

7. To you therefore that are beleivers, this is matter of infinite advantage, but for thoſe that ſtand out in unbelief, to them belongs the reproach of that prophecy, that he that is refuſed by the Jews is honoured by God, and made the ſole total foundation of his Church, on which nothing muſt be built which he hath not taught, no Judaical old, or heretical new doctrine muſt be mingled with it.

8. And a ſtone of ſtumbling, and a rock of offence, even to them which ſtumble at the word, being diſobedient, whereunto alſo they were [d] appointed.]

8. But this foundation ſtone ſuch an one, as ſhould be apt to hurt and miſchief many, who ſhall apoſtatize and fall off from the faith of Chriſt, through fear of perſecution, and by that means be deſtroyed among the perſecutors. And this is no ſtrange thing, but the very ſame that is propheſied of, and ſo appears to be part of God's decree, that they that obey not the Goſpel of Chriſt ſhould be deſtroyed by him, or that the ſeed ſown in ſtony ground ſhould at the ſcorching of the Sun wither away, that all carnal profeſſors ſhould be thus tried and diſcovered by perſecution, and ſo that this corner-ſtone ſhould be the bruiſing and ruining of many, who ſtumble and fall from Chriſt, becauſe Chriſtianity brings ſufferings along with it. d.

9. But ye are a † choſen generation, a roial prieſthood, an holy nation [e], a * peculiar people, that ye ſhould ſhew forth the † praiſes of him who hath called you out of darkneſſe into his marvellous light.]

9. But you are, and ſo muſt approve your ſelves to be, a ſpecial ſort of men, a kingdome or multitude of prieſts, ſet apart and conſecrated for the continual ſerving and daily waiting upon God, a people that being delivered from the dominion of other your former maſters, ſin, and Satan, and perſecuters, and ſet free to be Lords of your ſelves, with liberty to what Chriſt commands you, and ſo kings; muſt now behave your ſelves alſo like ſo many prieſts, (thoſe who ſpent all their time in ſacrificing &c. and ſo ſhould you) in the performing conſtant ſervice unto God, in the publick aſſemblies, which God requires of you, as he did the ſacrifices of the Levitical prieſts (ſee note on Rev. 1. d.) And ſo a ſacred holy nation, (as the whole people of the Jews were an holy people in one reſpect, Lev. 25. 23. and as the Levites were in another) a peculiar treaſure of Chriſts for him to preſerve firſt Mal. 3. 17. then to poſſeſſe as his own, that ſo by this means, by this conſtant publick ſerving of him, you may ſet forth and illuſtrate Chriſt's powerful and gracious workings (ſee note on 2 Pet. 1. 2.) who hath wrought ſo glorious a bleſſed change in you. e.

* the people λαὸς

10. Which in time paſt were not * a people, but are now the people of God: which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy.]

10. Who at firſt continued in unbeleif among your brethren the Jews, and ſo were becom a kinde of heathen people, were not at all within the obedience of Chriſt, the pale of his Church, but now are received into it, you that a long time, while Chriſt lived here on the earth, had not the happineſſe to beleive in him, but have found place of repentance ſince, and are now received into the Church, and the favour of God.

11. To you therefore that are at this time diſperſt among the nations, c.1.1. (ſee c.1.17.) as to ſo many ſcattered, travelling perſons, who ought of all others to be moſt wary to avoid dangers, and to behave your ſelves tenderly as in the ſight of ſtrangers, my preſent exhortation becomes ſeaſonable, to avoid the doctrines and practiſes of the Gnoſticks, and to that end to remember, that you are not at home, but in a journey, and ſo that it is moſt unſeaſonable for you at ſuch a time to indulge your ſelves to the exceſſes, and jollities, which men in their own houſes or countries do ſometimes indulge to, but do not uſe them in a ſtrange place, or before thoſe they know not, Remembring farther the dangerous malignant nature of ſuch luſts, that they are moſt pernicious to the ſoul.

11. Dearly beloved, I beſeech you as ſtrangers and pilgrims, abſtain from fleſhly luſts, which war againſt the ſoul;]

12. But that you on the contrary live ſo, as may be of good report among the Gentiles, that they that look on Jews, not onely as perſons of another Religion, but alſo as rebels and malefactors, may ſee the Chriſtians to be quite otherwiſe, and by your actions reverence you, and ſo entertain a good opinion of Chriſtian religion, which hath ſuch an influence upon you, in making the Chriſtian Jews ſo much more regular and meek, than the other Jews are, more quiet under the heathen government, which is now over them, and ſo more capable of good uſage under the Emperors, when they ſend their Proconſuls to ſuppreſſe the ſeditions, then the unbeleiving Jews have appeared to be.

12. Having your converſation honeſt among the Gentiles, that whereas they ſpeak againſt you as evil doers, they may * by your good works which they ſhall [f] behold, glorifie God in [g] the day of viſitation.]

† be ſubject therefore to every humane creature Ὑποτάγητε οὖν πάσῃ ἀνθρωπίνῃ κτίσει

14. Or unto Governors, as unto them that are ſent by him for the puniſhment of evil doers, and for the praiſe of them that do well.]

15. For to this doth Chriſtian religion oblige all, that by ſubjection to our heathen ſuperiours, and by all other Chriſtian performances (ſee note on c.4. f.) we ſhould leave the heathens unable to object any thing againſt us:

15. For ſo is the will of God, that with well doing ye may put to ſilence the ignorance of fooliſh men:]

16. As men that are freed by Chriſt from many yokes, but not from that of ſubjection to God or to ſuperiours, and therefore not pretending to any ſuch liberty, nor covering ſedition &c. under colour of Chriſtianity, as the Gnoſticks did, 1 Tim.6.

16. As free, and not * uſing your liberty for a cloke of maliciouſneſſe, but as the ſervants of God.]

17. Honour all men; Love the brotherhood; Fear God; Honour the King.]

18. Let all ſervants approve their obedience to their maſters to be ſincere, by performing it, not onely when they uſe them kindly and favourably, but even when by unjuſt uſage they provoke them to ſome impatience and reſiſtance, for this is the ſeaſon for them to ſhew forth the influence of Chriſtianity upon their hearts.

18. Servants be ſubject to your maſters with all fear, not onely to the good and gentle, but alſo to the froward.]

19. And this will be accepted graciouſly and rewarded by God (ſee Lu 6.32. and Lu.1. note i.) if upon ſight of our duty to God we bear with all patience thoſe preſſures which moſt unjuſtly light upon us.

19. For this † is thank-worthy, if a man for conſcience toward God endure grief, ſuffering wrongfully.

20. For what great matter is it, worth conſidering, or rewarding; what heroical action is it to which honour is thought to be due, if men indure ſubmiſſely thoſe puniſhments which fall juſtly on them for their demerits? But on the other ſide, if when ye have done no ill, and are then by your ſuperiors abuſed, and uſed contumeliouſly, if this be born patiently and humbly by you, and doe not provoke you to any reſiſtance or return of violence, this is that Chriſtian virtue of meekneſſe, which God will certainly reward in you.

20. For what glory is it, * if when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye ſhall take it patiently? but if, when ye doe well and ſuffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is † acceptable with God.]

Notes on Chap. II.

a. Λογικὸν γάλα

What λογικὸν γάλα rational milk ſignifies hath been noted on Rom. 12. note a. that milk, or food, which men, i. e. rational creatures feed on, and which men, rational creatures, again the Apoſtles of Chriſt afford them, for their ſpiritual nouriſhment, or inſtruction. Such figurative ſpeeches as theſe are very ordinary, and have no more ſtrangeneſſe in them, than νοερὸν or πνευματικὴ τροφὴ, intellectual, or ſpiritual food, i. e. food to the underſtanding, or to the ſpirit, Νοῦς, and λόγος, and πνεῦμα the underſtanding, and reaſon, and ſpirit being in effect all one, and milk being every where uſed for that inſtruction, that is fit for thoſe of younger years, Heb. 5. 12. Agreeable to this figurative expreſſion of rational milk is that of Plato, when he calls Rulers νομεῖς καὶ ποιμένες ἀνθρώπων, feeders and paſtors of the humane herd, this flock of reaſonable creatures which are fed with this rational milk, and ſo in Euſtathius on Homer Ιλιαδ. ϛ'. Ἀνδρωνῦται ποιμαντικὴν ἀσκοῦντες, they that exerciſe this trade of feeding of men, (as ſhepherds feed their flocks,) which have therefore ſo ordinarily that title of ποιμένες Paſtors.

b. Ῥητὸν

The word ῥητὸν is taken notice of by Grammarians, as a word fit for the citing any paſſage out of an Author; So in Erotian's Medicinal Lexicon, in the word Κάμωρος, [λέξις ῥητὸν ἔχουσα] is, a word which is to be met with in the author and place which he there cites. Here it is uſed impersonally, as ἀνῆκεν (ſee Mar. 14. note d.) and ſo 1 Mac. 15. 2. & 2 Mac. 9. 18. Accordingly ῥητὰ is uſed for any place cited out of the ſcripture, Act. 8. 32. Ἀνῆκεν Παρεῖχε

c. Ἐκλεκτὸς

By occaſion of this word ἐκλεκτὸς elect, in this place, it will not be amiſſe to give an account, once for all, of the uſe of that, and the like words generally in the ſcripture. To begin with the Old Teſtament firſt, the Hebrew word which muſt eſpecially be taken notice of is בחר probavit, examinavit, elegit, to approve, examine, chooſe. From whence is the noun בחור, directly anſwerable to ἐκλεκτὸς elect here, taken adjectively: And therefore Prov. 7. 3. where the Hebrew hath בחר, and our Engliſh render rightly from thence, The Lord trieth the hearts, the Septuagint read ἐκλεκτὰς καρδίας Κυρίῳ, hearts elect before the Lord. This word בחור is from hence taken by them to ſignifie 1. any choiſe perſon, fit for employment, eſpecially for warre, and from thence is uſed 1 Mac. 4. 1. for a choiſe party, ἐκλεκτὴ ἵππου, a thouſand of the choiſe, i. e. beſt horſe-men, and Exod. 14. 7. choſen chariots, and ſo the left-handed men, that were ſuch excellent archers, Jud. 20. 16. are ἐκλεκτοὶ choſen men, and ſo Pſal. 78. 31. the choſen men, i. e. the ſouldiers, or military men; and accordingly the word doth ſignifie a young man, who is fitteſt for military, and ſuch other employments. Thus 1 Sam. 8. 16. בחוריכם, we render your goodlieſt young men, (which the Septuagint miſtaking, and reading ן in ſtead of ר render καὶ βουκόλια ὑμῶν your herds) and Deut. 32. 25. it is clearly taken for young men in oppoſition to maidens בתולה, ſaith the Targum; But the notation which is moſt primitive and literal to it, is that of choiſe, or choſen, as that notes the beſt, and thoſe that are, upon trial, found fit to be preferred before others, as every בחור choſen man in Iſrael, 2 Sam. 6. 1. And David gathered together all the choſen men in Iſrael, all that were fit for the militia, and indeed by a Metalepſis, it was that it came to ſignifie a young man, becauſe the age was determined, after which (and not before) a man was thought fit for that employment, and ſo the choiſe men, or thoſe of the militia, were conſequently thoſe of ſuch an age, and therefore Num. 11. 28. when Joſhua is called a ſervant of Moſes מבחוריו (which the Targum reads מטלמוהי of his young men) the Septuagint reads ἐκλεκτὸς αὐτῷ, a choiſe perſon about him. Thus again from men is the word brought to be applied to things, as Gen. 23. 6. במבחר קבורינו in the choiſe of our ſepulchres, בשפר, ſay the Targum, in the faireſſe, i. e. in the faireſt and beſt of them. So Deut. 12. 11. your choiſe vows, or the choiſe of your vowes, and Iſa. 22. 7. the choiſeſt valleys, and ſo Eccluſ. 24. 15. Σμύρνα ἐκλεκτὴ, the choiſeſt, or beſt myrrhe, and (to adde no more) Iſa. 28. 16. from whence the words in S. Peter are cited, the λίθος ἐκλεκτὸς, choiſe ſtone, here, is there juſtly rendred a tried ſtone, the Hebrew בחון ſignifying this trying, and fitting it for the place, where it was to be ſet, viz. for the corner, to which, being the principal place of the whole building, that ſtone that was truly fit for it upon trial, is truly ſaid to be a pretious corner-ſtone, in the words following, both there, and here. Beſides בחור, there is alſo another word very near it, which is oft uſed in this ſenſe, the Hebrew ברר, which ſignifying to make pure, and clean, ſignifies alſo elegit to chooſe, and then the noun ברור from thence, is rendred καθαρὸς, ἁγνὸς, and ἐκλεκτὸς, pure, clean, elect promiſcuouſly, and elect, as that ſignifies the beſt of the kind. So ὄρνις ἐκλεκτὴ, a cramm'd fowle, ſaith Buxtorfe, and 2 Sam. 22. 27. with the pure thou ſhalt be pure, which the Greek reads μετὰ ἐκλεκτοῦ ἔσῃ ἐκλεκτὸς, with the elect thou ſhalt be elect. As the Arabick נסא which ſignifies to clariſie and purge, ſignifies alſo to chooſe, to ſet apart, to deſigne to an office, as of David, Pſal. 78. 70. and of the Diſciples Act. 1. 2. In the New Teſtament we have the verb ἐκλέγομαι, the ſubſtantive ἐκλογὴ, and the adjective ἐκλεκτὸς. The verb ἐκλέγομαι ſignifies to preferre one before another, either in the beſtowing of undeſerved favours, or deſigning to an office. In the firſt ſenſe, Mar. 13. 20. οὓς ἐξελέξατο, they whom God had choſen, i. e. favoured before others, to wit, the beleiving Jewes, who ſhould be delivered out of that deſtruction, which lay ſo heavy upon πᾶσα σὰρξ all fleſh, i. e. the whole Jewiſh nation; And that the Chriſtians of them were deſigned to this favour, ſee Mat. 24. note g. out of Joſephus, by whom it appears that the ſiege of Jeruſalem by Gallus was unexpectedly raiſed, by which means all the Chriſtians in the city got out of it to ſome other place, ſo that when Titus ἐξελέξατο τὸς came some months after to the fatal siege, there was not one Christian remaining in it: So Joh. 15.16. You have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, i.e. 'Tis not you that have begun to me, that were first in your expressions of kindnesse and favour to me, but I to you: And so v.19. I have chosen you out of the world, i.e. allowed you this favour of taking you out, discriminating you from the rest of the world, by taking you nearer to my self, than I have done other men, So Act. 13.17. speaking of God's favour to the Israelites beyond all other people, he saith ἐξελέξατο τοὺς πατέρας ἡμῶν, he chose our fathers, and exalted the people, &c. according as they are called ἐκλεκτοὶ his chosen Eccles. 46.1. and Jerusalem ἐκλεκτὴ πόλις a chosen city, c.49.7. So 1 Cor. 1.27,28. and in the parallel place, Jam. 2.5. God hath chosen the foolish, weak, despised things, i.e. persons of the world, and τοὺς πτωχοὺς the poor of this world, i.e. revealed the mysteries of the Gospel unto them, allowed them that favour above learned, proud Grecians, and so Ephes. 1.4. ἐξελέξατο ἡμᾶς ἐν αὐτῷ hath chosen us in him] is God's bestowing upon us that favour of being Christians, of revealing his Gospel to us, making known the mysterie in Jesus Christ, v.9. a favour much beyond any vouchsafed to the former ages. For the second sense of designing or choosing to some office, so it is Lu. 6.13. ἐκλεξάμενος ἀπ' αὐτῶν δώδεκα, out of the number of Disciples, sequestring twelve for Apostles. So Joh. 6.70. and 13.18. Act. 1.2. and 24. And so the Apostles designing Stephen to the office of Deacon, ἐξελέξαντο they chose him, Act. 5.6. So c.15.7 and so of those that were designed to be sent to Jerusalem, Act. 15.22. and 25. These are all the places in the New Testament, wherein the verb is used (unlesse those two to another matter, Mary's choosing the better part, and the guests choosing the uppermost places) and in all these the Context shews the meaning and use of it, when it is spoken of God, that it belongs either to some special undeserved favour of God, peculiarly that of revealing the Gospel, or to his designation to some peculiar office, especially that of Apostleship. Proportionable to these two notions of the verb, is that of the substantive ἐκλογὴ, in respect of the undeserved favours, freely afforded one before another, so as we are said to choose, when no obligation lies upon us, and to be obliged, when we cannot choose. So we have κατ' ἐκλογὴν] according to election, Rom. 9.11. where it signifies the free unobliged preferring of the younger before the elder, and κατ' ἐκλογὴν θεοῦ προθεσις God's purpose in that respect, his free determination to preferre the Jewes, that should come from Jacob, before all other people, particularly before Esau's progenie, the Edomeans. So Rom. 11.5. λεῖμμα κατ' ἐκλογὴν χάριτος, the remnant according to election of grace, i.e. the remnant that should have the favour to be left or reserved, according to the rule observed in the Gospel, the humble, pious Jewes, that beleived the Gospel, when the rest stood out, and were destroyed; which, though a reward of their repentance and faith, was yet an act of free mercy in God, thus to accept of their repentance. And so v.7. the election hath obtained, i.e. the beleiving Jewes, the remnant, which had that free undeserved favour from God above the rest. And v.28. of the Jewes again, that they were κατὰ τὴν ἐκλογὴν ἀγαπητοὶ, beloved according to the election, i.e. beloved in respect of the undeserved promises of peculiar favour made to that people for Abraham's sake, So 1 Thess. 1.4. ὑπὸ θεοῦ τὴν ἐκλογὴν ὑμῶν, your election from God, i.e. the great favour of God, so unexpected to the Gentiles, to have Christ and the Gospel made known unto them, and 2 Pet. 1.10. where they are advised to all diligence βεβαίαν ποιεῖσθαι to confirm or ascertain to themselves τὴν κλῆσιν καὶ ἐκλογὴν, their calling and election, i.e. that special favour vouchsafed unto them, to retain to Christ, to be Christians first, and then to be that peculiar remnant, to whom those special promises were made, and in whom they should be fulfilled, when all the rest of that people should be destroyed. One onely place more there is, wherein this word is used, Act. 9.15. where God saith of Saul Σκεῦος ἐκλογῆς μοί ἐστιν, he is to me a vessel of election, which seems to referre to the second notion of choosing, viz. to that office of the Apostleship. Lastly for the adjective ἐκλεκτὸς, that is proportionable to the use of the word in the Old Testament, for the choicer sort of men, approved of by God, preferred before others in that respect; As Mat. 20.16. and 22.14. Many are called, but few are chosen, πολλοὶ δὲ κλητοὶ ὀλίγοι δὲ ἐκλεκτοὶ, there are many that retain unto Christ, many Christian professors, but few special labourers, in the former place, few fit to be received at his table, few penitent sincere beleivers, in the latter, see note on Mat. 20.c. And so Lu. 23.35. where Christ is said by the Jewes to be ὁ ἐκλεκτὸς τοῦ θεοῦ, the chosen of God, one that had exactly approved himself to God, and that in an eminent manner, and so should in any reason be delivered by him. Thus in this place where Christ is compared to a corner-stone, he is called (however he be rejected by men) παρὰ θεῷ ἐκλεκτὸς, elect with God, v.4. & v.6. a choise approved special stone in the estimation of God, and therefore τίμιος precious also in both places; And so perhaps when the Christians, to whom he writes, are called by him γένος ἐκλεκτὸν a choise sort of people v.9. And so all the other phrases joyned with it doe import. Thus it is frequently used, as in the Old Testament for a souldier, so in the New in an Evangelical sense for one of Christ's militia, a beleiver, a Christian, a faithful servant of his, as they that are such differ from all others, unbeleivers, and crucifiers of Christ. Thus διὰ τοὺς ἐκλεκτοὺς, Mat. 24.22. & v.24, & 31. & Mar. 13.20. 27.22. Lu. 18.7. all in the same notion, to signifie beleivers or Christian Jewes, that had that promise, that they should escape out of those calamities, that fell on that whole nation, the οἱ σωζόμενοι the saved, Lu. 13.23. and an observable place there is to this purpose in Theophylact on Mat. 22.14. (though OEcolampadius leave it out in his translation, yet extant in the Romane Edition) πολλοὶ κλητοὶ ὁ θεὸς, μᾶλλον δὲ πάντες, ὀλίγοι δὲ σωζόμενοι καὶ ἐξ αὐτῶν ἐκλεκτοὶ θεῷ· διὸ, ὅτι ἐν ἡμῖν τὸ κλῆσαι, τὸ δὲ ἐκλεκτοὺς γενέσθαι, οὐ μᾶλλον, ἀμήχανόν ἐστι, God calls many, or rather all, but there are few elect, for there are few that escape, or are fit to be chosen or approved by God, so that it is in God's part to call, but ours to be elect or not, which supposes the σωζόμενοι and ἐκλεκτοὶ the saved and the elect to be all one, and both those the Christians, that Mat. 24.22, are said

said σωθῆναι to escape and to be ἐκλεκτοὶ elect, viz: those that in that great tribulation, that overwhelmed the Jewes, did yet escape and survive. Thus again in that general notion for beleivers and Christians, Rom. 8.33. Τίς ἐγκαλέσει κατ' ἐκλεκτῶν θεοῦ; Who shall lay any thing to the charge of Gods elect, bring any charge against the faithfull servants of Christ, the lovers of God? ver. 28. So Rufus ἐκλεκτὸς ἐν Κυρίῳ, elect in the Lord, Rom. 16. 13. a special beleiver, certainly without any relation to any particular decree of God's concerning him, which could not appear concerning his person, (of the ἐκλεκτὴ κυρία the elect Lady, 2 Joh. 1. and her ἐκλεκτὴ ἀδελφὴ elect sister, v. 14. see note on 2 Joh. a.) and therefore must be so interpreted as to denote that which was discernible in him, viz: his faith and Christian behaviour, So οἱ ἐκλεκτοὶ τοῦ θεοῦ, as the elect of God, Col. 3. 12. i. e. as faithful, approved disciples and servants of his, and 2 Tim. 2. 10. I suffer all for the elect, i. e. the Christian beleivers, for the advancement of the Gospel; and Tit. 1. 1. κατὰ πίστιν ἐκλεκτῶν θεοῦ, for the faith of the elect of God, i. e. of the sincere, converted Christians, or beleivers, in opposition to all the rest of the unbeleiving world, as 1 Tim. 5. 21. ἐκλεκτοὶ ἄγγελοι the elect Angels, are those that did not apostatize, but continued faithful, and obedient to God, and 1 Pet. 1. 1. ἐκλεκτοὶ παρεπίδημοι the elect strangers, i. e. the beleiving Jewes, that sojourned in that countrey. And this seems the more clear by Apocal: 17. 14. where κλητοὶ, καὶ ἐκλεκτοὶ, καὶ πιστοί, the called, and elect, and faithful, are joyned together as words of the same importance, and if there be any difference, then is [πιστοὶ faithful] to be looked on as an higher degree, then ἐκλεκτοὶ elect, as that then κλητοὶ called, For that they should be so called to denote the order of time, ἐκλεκτοὶ before πιστοὶ faithful, as election from the beginning, before faith in time, will not be agreeable to the place, because then κλητοὶ, being called, must be in order before election, which cannot be affirmed. The short is, that the word notes generally somewhat of eminence above other men, of difference from them, as the beleiver or Christian excells, and differs from all that are not such, and so the sincere from the formal professor, or hypocrite, and that is all the notation of it. Agreeable to which is that of Phaverinus, Ἐκλεκτὸς ὅδε, ὁ ἀπὸ πολλῶν, διὰ τὸ ἔχειν ἀντῶν ἔργα τινὰ σεμνὰ καὶ ἄλλως ἐκλαμπρά. The word signifies one that differs from other men, or is preferred before them, because he hath some choise works above those others. And in Hesychius ἐκλεκτὸς (for which the ordinary copies read corruptly ἐκλεκτὸν) ἐνδοξον, τίμιον, it notes famous, honourable, a person of approved excellence, value, and esteem.

d. τιθέναι The word τιθέναι to put or set] is ordinarily used for appointing or ordaining, and being applied to God, or spoken indefinitely, doth oft signifie his decree or destination. Thus Joh. 15. 16. ἔθηκα ὑμᾶς I have appointed you, as harvester, to goe abroad in all the world, and bring in converts to heaven. So of Christ Act. 13. 47. Τέθεικά σε εἰς φῶς ἐθνῶν, I have set, i. e. appointed or decreed thee a light for the Gentiles, So 1 Thess. 5. 9. Οὐκ ἔθετο ὑμᾶς ὁ θεὸς εἰς ὀργὴν, ἀλλ' εἰς περιποίησιν Gerneim, God hath not set us, i. e. decreed, determined us to wrath or destruction, (as he doth those, whom, for their obstinate course in sin, he forsakes, and no farther calls them to repentance) but for the obtaining of salvation, i. e. both decreed to call us to the knowledge of the truth by the preaching of the Gospel, and so to repentance and reformation here, the means to attain eternal salvation hereafter, if we doe not resist and evacuate his gracious calls and admonitions. And so without question it is to be understood here, that of the ἀπειθοῦντες τῷ λόγῳ] of them that disobey the word or Gospel of Christ, and so προσκόπτουσι fall or bruise themselves, or (if the comma, as it is in the ordinary Copies, be placed after τῷ λόγῳ, the word, not before it) προσκόπτουσι λόγῳ fall and bruise themselves at the word, ἀπειθοῦντες disobeying and rejecting it, when it is preached to them, It may truly be said, εἰς ὃ καὶ ἐτέθησαν, that they were ordained thereunto. And of that there are two possible interpretations, both agreeable to analogie of faith, 1. that the ἀπειθοῦντες, they that disobey the Gospel, that stand out obstinately against it, ἐτέθησαν were decreed and appointed by God to stumble and fall at that stone, i. e. to be bruised and ruined by this means, to be destroyed among the crucifiers and condemned with them hereafter, it being most just with God, that they that will not reform and amend at the preaching of the Gospel, and so receive benefit by it, should be, for their obstinacy, condemn'd, and so much the worse for it, as the Gospel is said to be the savour of death to them that perish, or goe on still in their destructive courses, and as Christ is said by Simeon, Lu. 2. 34. κεῖσθαι εἰς πτῶσιν to be set i. e. decreed by God (the same that τιθέναι to be set or ordained, here) for the falling of many in Israel, i. e. of those that beleive not on him. This is the most obvious sense of the words by referring [εἰς ὃ, to which] to [προσκόπτουσι τῷ λόγῳ, stumble or fall at the word] and interpreting the fall, of the mischief not the sin, (which is noted by ἀπειθοῦντες disobeying) that they incurre by this means. But if (as others conceive) the ἀπείθεια disobedience be that, to which they are said to be ordained, yet may that be taken in a commodious sense also, that the Gospel was designed by God to be of such a temper, and the profession of it mixt with so many persecutions, that none of the proud, worldly minded men (represented by the stonie, and thornie ground in the parable) none but the humble and honest heart, could lay hold on it. But the former sense is most agreeable to the context v. 7. where Christ is said to be a stone of offence σκάνδαλον to the disobedient, which must needs signifie the fall and mischief of the disobedient, not their disobedience simply, to be the thing here spoken of, and to which they are said to be appointed, v. 8. However it is clear, that here can be no proof or testimony of any absolute, irrespective decree of God either for sin, or without sin, for punishment, for if sin, disobedience should be decreed or ordained by God, then disobeying would be a compliance with his ordination, or will, and thereby cease to be sin (which is a resisting of his will) and for punishment, that cannot here be supposed to be without sin, the sin of disobedience, or infidelity, being here named, upon which they are ordained to that punishment, and not without respect unto it.

What εἰς ὅπερ ἐτέθησαν] signifies here, must be discerned from Exod. 19. 6. whence it is taken (though

(though the words are removed out of their place, and theſe, which are there before the royal prieſthood, here placed after it) The Hebrew reads there וְהִיִּיתֶם לִי סְגֻלָּה, which is literally, you ſhall be to me a treaſure, or κειμήλιον, any thing that is laid up and preſerved moſt carefully. The Greek render it there, more according to the ſenſe, ἔσεσθέ μοι λαὸς περιούσιος, ye ſhall be unto me a ſpecial or peculiar people, as that phraſe is uſed and rendred Tit. 2. 14. And though the Apoſtle here doth not uſe that whole phraſe, yet he takes λαὸς people from thence, and for the word סְגֻלָּה, he renders it from Mal. 3. 17. εἰς περιποίησιν for an acquiſition or poſſeſſion, for ſo there that ſpeech of God's אֲשֶׁר אֲנִי עֹשֶׂה סְגֻלָּה, which I make a treaſure, or κειμήλιον (i. e. lay up tenderly and carefully, and, as it follows, ſpare as one ſpareth his ſon that ſerveth him) is rendred in the Greek ὧν ἐγὼ ποιῶ εἰς περιποίησιν, which I make for an acquiſition or treaſure. What the word περιποίησις ſignifies hath been ſhewed on Heb. 10. d. viz. the ſame with Σωτηρία ſaving or preſerving, and ſo it perfectly agrees with the Hebrew סְגֻלָּה, which is a jewel to be preſerved or kept moſt ſafely, and ſo λαὸς εἰς περιποίησιν are thoſe whom God means to keep moſt chariſly, as his deareſt children or moſt valued treaſure, and ſo that is the meaning of the whole place here, that whereas other temporarie beleivers, according to the purport of the ſeed on the ſtonie ground in the parable, doe fall off from Chriſt in time of perſecution, and ſo, by complying with the perſecutors, bring certain deſtruction on themſelves even in this world, take part in that ruine of the Jewes, the faithful perſevering Chriſtians are moſt carefully preſerved by God, and reſcued out of the common deſtruction of Jewes and Gnoſticks, and eternally crowned afterward. And the conſequent of this their preſervation is the exaltation of the glory of God by this means, who hath thus powerfully reſcued them out of that unbeleif, (wherein the generality of the Jewes lie immerſed) and then magnified his providence in ſecuring them. As it follows here, that ye may ſet forth &c. ſee note on Epheſ. 2. c.

f. Ἐπισκόπου. The word ἐποπτεύσαντες] in this place, may probably ſignifie more than looking on, becauſe 1. that will not ſo well agree with ἐκ καλῶν ἔργων by your good works, and the ſupplying it by [which they ſhall behold] ſuppoſeth ἐκ καλῶν ἔργων by your good works] to belong to δοξάζωσι glorifie] following, whereas it is evidently joyned with ἐποπτεύσαντες, 2^dly, ἐποπτεύω to behold, is c. 3. 2. put with an accuſative caſe after it, ἐποπτεύσαντες ἀναστροφὴν, beholding your converſation. Heſychius hath a word neer unto this, ἐπόπτης which he renders εὐλαβὴς revere, and ἐπόπτευε, proportionable to the Latine, ſuſpicere (looking on the ground, to note modeſty and reverence) is ordinarily taken in that ſenſe; And that which ſeems moſt probable, is, that either ἐποπτεύω may have that ſenſe alſo, or elſe be by the ſcribe miſtaken for one of thoſe, and ſo be beſt rendred revering you, or looking with reverence upon you.

g. Ἡμέρᾳ ἐπισκοπῆς What the day of viſitation] ſignifies here, may be a matter of ſome queſtion, but that in part reſolved by the uſe of the ſame phraſe Iſa. 10. 3. What will ye doe in the day of viſitation, and the deſolation which ſhall come from farre? where it is evident, that the day of viſitation,] and the coming of deſolation, or deſtruction] are all one. So to viſit ſignifies to puniſh, to avenge, very frequently in the prophets, Shall I not viſit for this? ſhall I not be avenged &c. and, I will viſit their offences with a rod, And ſo the Biſhops title, Ἐπίσκοπος Ἐπίσκοπος Viſiter] may fitly be given him in reſpect of the rod, or cenſures, the Eccleſiaſtical puniſhments intruſted to him, which are εἰς ὄλεθρον σαρκὸς, for deſtruction of the fleſh, and εἰς καθαίρεσιν for exciſion. This then being premiſed, the only difficulty will be, what day of vengeance this was, that here is meant; And the context ſeems ſufficient to anſwer that, For having admoniſhed the Chriſtian Jewes to behave themſelves honeſtly among the Gentiles, that they may not ſpeak againſt them as evil doers,] and preſently ſpecifying, wherein this honeſt converſation conſiſted, in ſubmitting to, and obeying their heathen Governours, ver. 13. this evidently referres to the frequent ſeditions that were ſtirred up among the Jewes againſt the Roman yoke, which made them look't on by their Procurators, and the Emperors, as unquiet, turbulent people, and brought the Roman armies, and deſtructions upon them, And ſo againſt this it is, that he warns the Jewes Chriſtians, that they meddle not with them, that are given to changes, joyn not with the ſeditious, and that upon this motive, that by ſo doing, by being found quiet, obedient ſubjects, when this vengeance comes upon the ſeditious, the heathens may obſerve the difference betwixt beleiving and unbeleiving Iewes, the firſt very good, the ſecond very ill ſubjects, and ſo have a good opinion of that religion, that hath wrought ſo much good upon them, (and perhaps be attracted to Chriſtianity, when they come to deſtroy the Iewes.) And thus indeed it happened, that preſently after Titus's deſtroying of the Iewes, the Chriſtians had favour from the Emperors, liberty for their aſſemblies, halcyonian daies beſtowed on them. The Syriack here read in the day of temptation, i. e. of affliction, coming on the Nation, the falling of which upon the obdurate unbeleiving Iewes, and the eſcaping of the Chriſtians (as moſt remarkably they did by Gallus's raiſing the ſiege, and the Chriſtians going out, and flying to Pella) could not but be taken notice of, by the heathens, and ſo be means of their acknowledging of God's good providence, and mercy toward the Chriſtians, and glorifying God for this work of his. And ſo this is the full importance of this place.

h. Ἀναφέρειν ἀναφέρειν is to carry up, to bear to an higher place, and becauſe the θυσιαστήριον or altar was ſuch, it therefore ſignifies to offer up a victime there, Heb. 7. 27. Iam. 2. 21. but here being joyned (not, as there, with θυσίας ſacrifices, but) with ἁμαρτίας ἡμῶν our ſins, and ἐπὶ ξύλον to or upon the croſſe, (which was an high place alſo, and therefore his crucifixion is expreſſed by ὑψωθῆναι being lifted up or exalted) it muſt therefore here ſignifie to bear or carry up our ſins thither, which is a phraſe for ſuffering the puniſhments of ſin, making expiation for them, as Num. 14. 33. where the Hebrew read וְנָשְׂאוּ אֶת זְנוּתֵיכֶם and they ſhall bear, or carry your fornications, the Chaldee render it וְיִקַּבְּלוּן & ſuſcipient, and they ſhall undergot, i. e. literally ἀναφέρουσι, which the moſt learned P. Fagius ginis renders, luent pœnas peccatorum vestrorum, they shall bear the punishments of your sins. Thus Βαστάζειν κρῖμα Gal. 5. 10. to bear the judgment] is to be punished for sin, and] Ezech. 18. The son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, i. e. be punished for it.

CHAP. III.

Paraphrase.

1. Likewise ye wives be in subjection to your own husbands, that if any obey not the word, they also without the word may be * won by the conversation of the wives,] 1. And as there is one obedience and subjection due from subjects and servants to their Kings and Masters, c. 2. 13. 18. so there is another due from wives to their husbands, which ought to be with so winning an humility, and kindness, that the husbands that are not converted to Christianity by the Gospel preached to them, may by the enamouring behaviour of their wives, which they are taught by Christianity, be, without any more preaching, wrought on, and converted to the faith,

But the inward secret invisible beauty of the heart, made up of incorruptible materials, meekness, &c. whereas all those external are fading and corruptible, or consisting in the truth, and sincerity, and constancy of the meek and quiet spirit, meek in a lowly opinion of your selves, and quiet in a contented enjoying of what God sends, without disquieting, or disturbing the peace of the family (as in greater societies, emulation, ambition, covetousness, are the disturbing and shaking of whole Kingdomes) And this, as it is the greatest ornament in the eyes of men, so is it most highly valued and rewarded in the sight of God. 2. b.

For after this manner of external simplicity of attire and inward meekness, the Saintly women of antient times, that were taken notice of for their piety, did beautifie and set out themselves, viz. living in obedience to their husbands.

6. Even as Sarah obeyed Abraham, and called him Lord, whose daughters ye are, as long as ye do well, and are not afraid * with any amazement. 6. Thus did Sarah live in obedience to her husband, calling him by a title of honour, not equality; to whom you shall be like, as children to a mother, if you discharge a good conscience in all the duties of life, and be not by any fear (to which your sex is subject) driven out of your duty.

Likewise ye husbands dwell with them [c] according to knowledge, giving [d] honour unto the wife as to the weaker vessel, and as being heirs together of the [e] grace of life, that your prayers be not hindred.] 7. Let the husbands in like manner live conjugally with their wives, and behave themselves toward them as Christianity requires of them, or as the mystical understanding of the story of their creation directs, providing for them that they want nothing, because they are not so able to provide for themselves, and considering that they are by God designed to be co-partners with them of all the good things of this life, which God bestowes in common on them, that so they may also joyn efficaciously in prayers to God, 1. As having this perfect union and community of every thing, the want of which would be some hinderance to the joint performance of that duty of prayer, and 2dly, That being provided for by the husband, the wife may have no distractions and sollicitudes for the world, which are most apt to disturb her prayers also. c. d. e.

16. Keeping your ſelves blameleſſe before all men (particularly in this of maintaining that duty of meekneſſe and reverence toward the heathen rulers, v.15. and c.2.12. ſee note on c. 4. f.) that they that accuſe you as malefactors, or ſeditious perſons, may be convinced and put to ſhame, and confeſſe that the lives of Chriſtians are very honeſt and inoffenſive, and that they have moſt foully calumniated you in ſaying otherwiſe of you.

16. Having a good conſcience, that whereas they ſpeak evil of you, as of evil doers, they may be aſhamed that falſly accuſe your good converſation in Chriſt.]

17. For if it pleaſe God that a man ſuffer innocently, there is no matter of ſorrow in that, there is much more danger, that a man by deſiring to avoid that, ſhould fall into ſome evil, and then ſuffer juſtly for that, and then that will be a ſad thing indeed, without any allay or matter of comfort in it.

17. For it is better, if the will of God be ſo, that ye ſuffer for well doing, then for evil doing.]

18. For Chriſt is an example of the former in his dying for ſins, not his own but ours, he being righteous dyed for us who are unrighteous (that when we were aliens and enemies to God, he might reconcile us to him, and give us authority to approach him) wherein yet for our example and comfort it muſt be obſerved, that though as a man clothed in our fleſh, he was put to death, and that innocently, to purchaſe redemption for us, yet by the power of God in him, he was moſt gloriouſly raiſed from the dead (ſee c.1.11.) and ſhall conſequently, by raiſing and reſcuing us out of the preſent ſufferings, and deſtroying all obdurate ſinners, ſhew forth wonderful evidences of power and life.

18. For Chriſt alſo † hath once ſuffered for ſins, the juſt for the unjuſt, (that he might bring us to God) being put to death * in the fleſh, but quickned by the Spirit,]

(an effect of what was done v. 2.) ſo in God's warning, and denouncing of judgments, and ſhewing a way to the righteous, that ſtick cloſe to him, to eſcape, to wit, the renouncing of thoſe heathen ſins, noted by Baptiſme, that antitype to the Ark in the water, keeping men ſafe from being drowned (I mean not that outward part of baptiſme alone, which is but the cleanſing of the body, but (that which is ſignified by it, as it is the Sacrament of initiation) the ſeeking to God as to the oracle for the direction of the whole future life (ſee note on Rom. 10. f.) and the undertaking faithfully to perform thoſe directions) delivering firſt out of the deluge of ſin, and then of deſtruction attending it, and this, I ſay, as an eminent effect of the reſurrection of Chriſt, who roſe on purpoſe to turn all that will be wrought on, from their iniquities, Act. 3.26. and ſo bring deſtruction and vengeance on all others.

Notes on Chap. III.

2. Κρυπτὸν καρδίας ἄνθρωπος] is a phraſe made up of two Hebraiſmes, 1. τὸ κρυπτὸν καρδίας the hidden or ſecret of the heart, is an Hebrew form of ſpeech, as when Pſal. 51. 8. the Original hath בַּסֵּתֻם in cluſo, ſecretly thou haſt made wiſdome known to me, the Targum read בְּטָמִיר לִבָּא in the hidden of of the heart, i. e. in the heart which is hidden. Then for χρυπτὸς ἀνθρωπος the hidden man, that is by the ſame analogie that παλαιὸς ἀνθρωπος the old man, and καινὸς ἀνθρωπος the new man, and καινὴ κτίσις the new creature, as they ſignifie continuing in ſin, and renovation of life, and ὁ ἔσω ἀνθρωπος, the inner man, i. e. the mind of man, oppoſite to the carnal or ſenſitive appetite, and ſo χρυπτὸς καρδίας ἀνθρωπος the hidden man of the heart ſhall be no more than it's oppoſition to ὁ ἔξωθεν the outward &c. ver. 3. will inforce, viz: the inward inviſible accompliſhments, or beauty of the heart, according to that of the Poet, Παλαιὸς ἀνθρωπος. Καινὸς ἀνθρωπος. Καινὴ κτίσις. Ὁ ἔσω ἀνθρωπος.

Γυναικὶ κόσμος ὁ τρόπος, κ' ὐ χρυσία, behaviour, not golden ornaments, are the ſetting out of a woman.

b. Τὸ ἄφθαρτον incorruptible] here may ſignifie as τὸ ἄφθαρτον ἀφθαρσία incorruptibleneſſe, Epheſ. 6. 24. the durableneſſe and conſtancy of the virtue ſpoken of, that will not be corrupted or debauched by any temptations to the contrary, and this proceeding from the ſincerity and ſimplicity of the affection at the preſent, which is likely to make it durable; As in nature the more ſimple and uncompounded things are, the leſſe they are corruptible, whereas the double principle renders every thing the more liable to corruption; and therefore the Scholiaſt on Homer gives the reaſon, why the plague coming into the army Ἡμιόνους μὲν πρῶτον—ſeized firſt upon the mules, which are a mixt ſpecies, made up of the horſe and the aſſe, ἐνδιάφθορον γὰρ τῶν τοιούτων, for ſuch creatures, ſaith he, are moſt ſubject to corruption and infection of all others. But another notion there is, of which the Χρυσία phraſe is capable, in oppoſition to the χρυσία &c. gold chains and ornaments v. 3. for thoſe, though pretious, are corruptible, and therefore chap. 1. 8. ſilver and gold are the inſtances of the φθαρτὰ corruptible things, And in oppoſition to thoſe [ἐν ἀφθάρτῳ in the incorruptible &c. will here ſignifie that incorruptible ornament of a meek and quiet ſpirit, ſo much more valuable than gold.

c. That κατὰ γνῶσιν according to knowledge, doth κατὰ γνῶσιν here more probably denote that knowledge of duty by which a Chriſtian's life and actions muſt be directed, is the opinion of H. Grotius, who applies to this ſenſe thoſe other places Rom. 15. 14. filled with all knowledge, able to inſtruct others, and 1 Cor. 1. 5. inriched in all knowledge, and 2 Cor. 6. b. in purity and in knowledge; To this it may perhaps be fit to adde (what hath been noted 1 Cor. 1. note c. and will again be enlarged on γνῶσις 2 Pet. 1. b.) that the word γνῶσις knowledge hath a critical notion in theſe Books, for a ſpecial χάρισμα or gift of the Spirit, 1 Cor. 12. 8. viz: that ſort of Chriſtian knowledge, which conſiſts in explaining of parables or myſterious expreſſions in ſcripture; And that may be thus appliable to this place; The duty of the husband toward the wife is beſt to be learned from the myſtical explication of the words, and ſtorie of the creation of the man and woman, Gen. 1. 27. God created them male and female, and bleſſed them, and ſaid unto them, Be fruitful and multiply, and replenish the earth, and ſubdue it, and have dominion over the fiſh of the ſea, and over the fowl of the aire, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth. And God ſaid, Behold, I have given you every herb bearing ſeed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree in the which is the fruit of a tree yeilding ſeed, to you it ſhall be for meat. And c. 2. 22. God took out one of Adam's ribs, and made it a woman, And Adam ſaid, This is now bone of my bone, and fleſh of my fleſh. —Therefore ſhall a man leave his father and his mother, and cleave unto his wife, and they ſhall be one fleſh. That by this rule of the Creation, the Chriſtian doctrine of the duties of husbands and wives is regulated, appears Mat. 19. 4. where to that queſtion about divorces Chriſt anſwers, Have ye not read that he which made them at the beginning, made them male and female, and ſaid, For this cauſe ſhall a man leave father and mother, &c. What therefore God hath joyned together, let no man put aſunder. And ſo Mar. 10. 6. So 1 Cor. 6. 16. What, know you not (making this a ſpecial piece of knowledge) that he which is joyned to an harlot is one body with the harlot? for they two, ſaith he, ſhall be one fleſh. And Epheſ. 5. 31. having ſaid, For this cauſe ſhall a man leave his father and mother, and ſhall be joyned to his wife, and they two ſhall be one fleſh, he adds v. 32. This is a great myſterie — collecting myſteriouſly (or κατὰ γνῶσιν, according to knowledge, i. e. by the skill of interpreting myſteries of ſcriptures) all the conjugal love and union, as between husband and wife, ſo between Chriſt and his Church from that one paſſage in the Creation, So 1 Cor. 11. 8. to prove that the wife is to be covered, as a token of her ſubjection to her husband, he ſaith, For the man is not of the woman, but the woman of the man, neither was the man created for the woman, but the woman for the man. All which are but concluſions drawn, by this γνῶσις or myſtical explication, from thoſe paſſages in the creation of man and woman. And ſo it may be very fitly affirmed here of the ſeveral parts of the husband's duty to the wife, they are all evidently concluſible (κατὰ γνῶσιν according to knowledge, or by explication of the hidden ſenſe) from the words in the creation; 1. Συνοικοῦντες cohabiting (contrary to the infuſions of the hereticks falſly called Gnoſticks) is the interpretation of the firſt part of God's bleſſing, Gen. 1. 28. in theſe words, Be fruitful and multiply, and again of their two being one fleſh. And this Plato himſelf appears to have learned from the ſtory of the Creation, writing in his Dialogue περὶ ἔρωτος, that antiently male and female were put together in one body. 2^dly, The woman's being taken out of the man's ſide, doth, not onely with the Jewes in theirs, but with Chriſt and his Apoſtles, in their Chriſtian Cabala, ſignifie, that the woman is dependent of the man, unable to ſubſiſt without him, from whence it follows here, that he muſt provide for her, honour or maintenance, as being the weaker veſſel (ſee note d.) 3^dly, The woman's being joyned with the man in the dominion over the creatures, God's having given the fruit of the earth for food to them both, in common or equally, Gen. 1. 28, 29. is a direct foundation of what is here added, that they are συγκληρονόμοι coheirs of the gift of life, as ζωὴ life ſignifies the neceſſaries of life, of which therefore the wife is in all reaſon to partake with him, or if ζωὴ be taken for life it ſelf, then it belongs to the creation, male and female created he them, which is again a myſtical proof or argument of conviction, that they that partake of life equally, ſhould alſo partake of the neceſſaries of life. To which we ſhall not need to adde a third acception of ζωὴ life for eternal or everlaſting life, which ſeems not to be looked on here. See note e.

d. τιμὴ The word τιμὴ ordinarily ſignifies maintenance, ſo 1 Tim. 5. 3. τὰς χήρας τίμα honour, i. e. maintain, relieve the widows, and ſo when the ruling elder is ſaid to be worthy of double honour, 1 Tim. 5. 17. that denotes ſuch a proportion of maintenance above others, as was wont to belong to the elder brother in the family, So Act. 28. 10. of the Barbarians πολλαῖς τιμαῖς ἐτίμησαν ἡμᾶς, they honoured us with many honours, i. e. made us many entertainments, when we were there, καὶ ἀναγομένοις ἐπέθεντο τὰ πρὸς τὴν χρείαν, and when we went away, they brought us in all things for our uſe. So in Cicero, Medico honos debetur, honour is due to a Phyſician, i. e. a reward or fee. So Num. 22. 37. Am not I able to honour thee? i. e. to give thee mercedem a reward, ſaith S. Hierome, for ſo the Hebrew כבד ſignifies both honor and reward, and alſo the neceſſaries or proviſions in an army (opes, pecudes, ſupellectilem omnem, wealth, cattel, all kind of proviſion, ſaith Schindler) Jud. 18. 21. And ſo as the Hebrew בזה ſignifies both to deſpiſe, and to take no care of, ſo to take care of, to provide for any, is expreſſed by honouring. So Mat. 15. 6. and ſhall not honour his father &c. i. e. ſhall afford him no maintenance or relief, And ſo here ἀπονέμειν τιμὴν to afford ſupplies or maintenance to the wife, as being the weaker veſſel, taken out of, and depending on him for the neceſſaries of life.

c. χάρις gratia The ſeveral notions of the word χάρις grace in the ſacred dialect have been often taken notice of, ſee note on Lu. 1. i. Act. 2. f. Heb. 13. c. Act. 18. c. All of them ſpringing from that primarie notion of it for charity and liberality. Thus is the word uſed 1 Cor. 16. 3. ἡ χάρις ὑμῶν, your charity or liberality to the poor Chriſtians. So Eccluſ. 17. 22. ἡ χάρις &c. the charity of a man, and c. 20. 13. χάριτες ἀφρόνων the charities of fools, for ſo it follows v. 14. The gift of a fool &c. and c. 40. 17. it is rendred bountifulneſſe. Thus in Ariſtotle χάρις is defined ὅταν τις ὠφελῇ τῷ δεομένῳ μὴ ἀπὸ τινὸς μηδ' ἵνα τι αὐτῷ τῷ ὠφελοῦντι, ἀλλὰ ἵνα τῷ ἐκείνῳ τι, Rhet: l. 2. c. 7. When any man relieves him that wants, not that he himſelf may gain any thing by it, but onely that the other may. Where the Anonymus Scholiaſt expounds it χάριν ὅτι δωρεάν, Grace, that is, gift, and ſo Heſychius χάρις δωρεὰ. So 2 Cor. 8. 1, & 4. 'tis clearly uſed for a gift or liberal beneficence to the poor. Thus in this Epiſtle c. 4. 18. ποικίλη χάρις θεοῦ the manifold grace of God, is God's liberality of divers kinds, particularly the wealth that he hath given to men, as to ſtewards to diſtribute to them that ſtand in need of it, and at the beginning of the verſe it is called χάρισμα, Ἕκαστος καθὼς ἔλαβε χάρισμα, Every man as he hath received wealth, or any other ſuch gift of God. So the grace of God, ſo often mentioned, is the mercy and gift of God, as in the benedictions, the grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, all one with ἀγάπη God's love, and κοινωνία communication after it. So Joh. 1. 16. we have received χάριν grace, mercy, liberal effuſion of goodneſſe, ἀντὶ χάριτος in reſpect of (and in proportion to) his great goodneſſe, and mercy, and abundant charity to us, mentioned before v. 14. and after v. 17. where the grace of Chriſt is ſet oppoſite to the ſtrictneſſe of the law, which hath nothing of mercy in it. Agreeable to this notion of χάρις, as it ſignifies an act of this mercy in God, i. e. a gift, is the uſe of it in this place, where the husbands are commanded to diſtribute to their wives all things that they ſtand in need of, ὡς ζυγκληρονόμοι χάριτος ζωῆς as copartners of the gift of life, i. e. the wife and the husband are joyned together in receiving from God that largeſſe of his, whether it be ζωῆς, as that ſignifies life it ſelf, as we know it was in the creation, God equally diſtributed this gift of life to them, or as it notes the comforts and neceſſaries of life, the wife as well as the husband hath right of inheritance from God to all the good things of this life, as having equally dominion given to them both over the fiſh, and fowle, and beaſts, and herb, and trees, Gen. 1. 28. All which are given them for meat v. 29.

For the explicating of this very obſcure place, the beſt riſe will be that which S. Hierome on Iſaiah hath ſuggeſted to us, by looking on the words of God to Noah concerning the ſins of the old world, and his judgments deſigned againſt them, Gen. 6. 3. where conſidering Noah as a prophet (and preacher of repentance to the old world) it will not be ſtrange if the expreſſion be prophetical and figurative. The Hebr: hath it thus, לא ידון רוחי באדם, which the ordinary Engliſh render, My ſpirit ſhall not alwaies ſtrive with man, the Greek οὐ παραμενῶ πνεύμα μου ἐν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις τούτοις, my Spirit ſhall not abide in theſe men, perhaps reading לא ולין from לין to lodge, or abide, The Engliſh render the Hebrew ידון as if it came from דין diſceptavit, judicio contendit, to contend or go to law, But the word comes from נדן, which ſignifies a ſheath, 1 Chron. 21. 27. and is uſed for a body, Dan. 7. 15. my ſpirit in the midſt of my body] as being the ſheath or receptacle of the ſoul, and ſo the writers of the Talmud ordinarily uſe it, and Tertullian de reſurrect: Caro vagina afflatus Dei, Fleſh is the ſheath of the breath of God, no doubt referring to this place, and accordingly לא ידון is literally to be rendred [ſhall not abide as a ſword &c. in a ſheath,] As for רוחי my ſpirit or breath] that ſure is that breath breathed by God into man, Gen. 2. 7. by which he became a living ſoul (ſee Jam. 4. a.) Spiritum meum filiis hominum indidi, I have given my breath or ſpirit, (afflatus Dei in Tertullian) to the ſons of men, ſaith the Hieruſalem Targum there, according to that of Seneca, Ep: 66. Ratio nihil aliud eſt quam in corpus humanum pars divini ſpiritus merſa, Reaſon is nothing elſe but a particle of the divine ſpirit immerſed in a man's body; and ſo in the Poet is a man's ſoul called divinæ particula auræ, a particle of the divine breath or ſpirit. From hence the meaning of thoſe words is clear, My ſpirit ſhall no longer be ſheathed in man, i. e. the ſouls which I have breathed or given to men, the ſons of Adam, and which are ſheathed in them, impriſoned, detained unprofitably, ſhall no longer continue or abide in them, and this as a figurative obſcure expreſſion, is twice afterward ſet down more clearly, the Lord ſaid, I will deſtroy man, whom I have created, from the face of the earth, v. 7. and the end of all fleſh is come before me, and

f. Ῥημῶναι πολλαί

χάριτος ἀντὶ χάριτος

I will deſtroy them from the earth, v. 13. It muſt here be farther obſerved, that in the latter part of that third verſe is added, 1. The reaſon of that ſentence of God, 2^dly, The ſpace, in his long-ſufferance, deſigned, before which was paſt, it ſhould not be executed. The former in theſe words, For that he alſo is fleſh, i. e. extremely given to the ſatisfying of the fleſh, that age being a moſt carnal and abominable age, uſed ordinarily by the Jewes (under the phraſe of דור המבול the age of the deluge) for an example of all impiety, and that I ſuppoſe here meant alſo by, the earth was corrupt before God, ver. 11, & 12. the corruption there, as φθορὰ in the Apoſtles, ſignifying all manner of unnatural luſt and villanie. And for the latter, it is evident that they were allowed ſixſcore years to repent in, and avert the judgment, and that Noah was ſent to preach repentance to them by denouncing the judgment and building the ark, Ecce dedi ut reſipiſcentiam agerent, Behold I have given them that ſpace, that they might repent, ſaith the Hieruſalem Targum. And accordingly this age is ordinarily, and by way of Proverb, uſed by the Jewes as an evidence and example of God's μακροθυμία his patience and long-ſuffering to ſinners, before he comes to puniſh them. And when the judgment came upon that world of ungodly men, yet a remnant was delivered, Noah and his family in the ark from periſhing in the waters. By this explication of that verſe in Geneſis, as it already appears, how perfect a parallel that was of God's dealing with the Jewes, giving them time to repent, delivering all that did repent, and deſtroying the whole nation beſides, ſo it is evident, that from thence this verſe of S. Peter's may be interpreted. For the τοῖς ἐν φυλακῇ πνεύμασι the ſpirits in the priſon, or cuſtodie, or ſheath, here (φυλακὴ ſignifying any kind of receptacle, Rev. 18. 2.) are thoſe ſouls of men, that lay ſo ſheathed, ſo uſeleſſe, and unprofitable in their bodies, immerſed ſo deep in carnality, as not to perform any ſervice to God, who inſpired and placed them there (and 'tis elſwhere a figurative ſpeech to expreſſe wicked men, who are called priſoners, in priſon, i. e. ἐν φυλακῇ, Iſa. 42. 7. and c. 49. 9. and bound in priſon, Iſa. 61. 1.) they, the thoughts of whoſe hearts were evil continually, v. 5.

Πορευθεὶς ἐκήρυξεν ἐν πνεύμασι. To theſe Chriſt, i. e. God eternal πορευθεὶς ἐκήρυξεν ἐν πνεύμασι, went and preached in, or by that Spirit, by which he was now raiſed from the dead, where Πορευθεὶς 1. the phraſe πορευθεὶς ἐκήρυξεν, went and preached, or going preached, is but an idiome of the ſacred ſtyle, wherein πορευθεὶς going, and ſuch like words, are frequently uſed as παρέλκοντα expletives, ſo, to omit many more, Epheſ. 2. 17. ſpeaking of Chriſt after his departure from the world (in the ſame manner as here before his coming into it) and of his preaching by his Apoſtles, not perſonally himſelf to the heathen world, S. Paul expreſſes it after the ſame manner as here, ἐλθὼν εὐηγγελίσατο εἰρήνην, and he went and preached peace. 2^dly, By his Spirit is evidently here meant that divine power by which he was raiſed from the dead, after his crucifixion, and by which he means now to act revenge on his crucifiers, after a while, if they repent not, but in the mean time to preach repentance to them; And that makes the parallel exact betwixt the matter here in hand, and the ſtorie of the old world. Here men are divided into two ſorts v. 17. thoſe that ſuffer for well doing, the pious, conſtant, yet perſecuted Chriſtians, and thoſe that ſhall ſuffer for evil doing, the contumacious obdurate perſecuting Jewes and Gnoſticks, as there the violent and corrupt on one ſide, which were, after the hundred and twenty years, ſwept away with the deluge, and Noah (and his familie) on the other ſide, who by being ſet forth as an example of the godly, delivered out of temptations, 2 Pet. 2. 5, 9. appear to have been oppoſed and wronged by them; And therefore to prove (what was undertaken v. 17.) that even in reſpect of this world, it is farre better to be of the number of the perſecuted, who ſhall be delivered, then of the moſt proſperous perſecuters, which ſhall after a time be deſtroyed, as the example of Chriſt was very pertinent, v. 18. who having ſuffered a while, was raiſed in power to deſtroy the crucifiers, ſo the example of the old world is fitly made uſe of alſo, who are evidently pointed at, not onely by the πνεύματα ἐν φυλακῇ, ſpirits in the ſheath, or cuſtodie, or priſon (which ſo fitly agrees with the חתום ſheathed in the old prophecie) but by that which here follows [ἀπειθήσασί ποτε which were diſobedient of old,] ſee note g. (which clearly takes it off from belonging to the Gentiles of Chriſt's time, to which ſome interpreters are willing to apply the place) and that ποτὲ of old] defined by the ὅτε when] that follows, ὅτε ἅπαξ ἐξεδέχετο when once God's long-ſufferance waited (or without once, ὅτε ἀπεξεδέχετο as the King's MS. reads it) ἐν ἡμέραις Νῶε when it waited in the daies of Noe, &c. which particular of God's long-ſufferance, awaiting their repentance 120 years, and daily admoniſhing, and reproaching them all that time (ſee Heb. 11. 7.) by the κατασκευαζομένη κιβωτὸς preparation of the arke, and his ſaving the remnant (as the ſon of Syrach calls it Eccluſ. 44. 17.) by this means, δι' ὀλίγων τοῦτ' ἔστιν ὀκτὼ ψυχῶν through or out of the water (ſee 1 Cor. 3. note b.) are very commodiouſly applied to S. Peter's preſent purpoſe alſo, Chriſt's deferring this vengeance on the Jewes, fourty years after his crucifixion, being on purpoſe deſigned 1. to bring the crucifiers to repentance, 2^dly, To make triall of the patience and perſeverance of the ſincere Chriſtians, and to deliver them peculiarly out of this deluge of deſtruction, Rev. 2. 7. &c. when all others, Jewes and temporizing Gnoſticks were deſtroyed.

The word ἀπειθήσαντες diſobedient] is uſed for a courſe of great notorious ſin, ſpoken of the ἀπειθοῦσι προσκόπτοντες exaſperators, provokers, Heb. 3. 16, 18. againſt whom God's oath was gone out, that they ſhould not enter into his reſt, ver. 19. They are here certainly the wicked men of the old world, on whom the flood came, called ἀσεβῶν κόσμῳ, the world of the ungodly, 2 Pet. 2. 5. which are there joyned with the wicked of Sodome; From whence and from ſome other evidences it is probably to be concluded, what their ſin was, which brought the flood upon them, viz: the ſin of unnatural uncleanneſſe, or Sodomie, contrary to that breath of God breathed on them, the light of law, and reaſon, and nature, and the very ſoul within them, For ſo Gen. 6. 2. upon the ſons of God taking them wives of the daughters of men, preſently follows the decree of God to ſend the deluge upon them. The ſons of God, and of men, were certainly the worſhippers of the one true, and the many falſe Gods, and the marrying of thoſe Idolaters was the means of inſnaring the godly in the heathen Idol-worſhips, and all the villanies in their practiſes, or ſacrifices (as after it was Num. 25. 2.) This is there in general expreſſed, v. 5. by, The wickedneſſe of man was great upon the earth, meaning by πονηία wickedneſs, villanie (as ἀκρασία incontinence Mat. 23. 25. is πονηία wickedneſs, Lu. 11. 39.) & v. 11. by, The earth was corrupt before God, and filled with all violence, by corruption ſignifying theſe unnatural luſts, ſo ordinarily called φθορὰ, and φθορεῖς, corruption and being corrupted (ſee note on 2 Pet. 1. b. & 2. a.) and by violence either the ſame again in the moſt enormous kind, ſuch as was by the Sodomites offered to the Angels (ſee note on 1 Cor. 5. h.) or elſe perſecuting all others, that would not goe on with them in all their riotous courſes, and both together expreſſed v. 12. by one of them, corrupt, And all fleſh corrupted his way, and both again by violence, v. 13. The end of all fleſh is come before me, for the earth is filled with violence, So that either of theſe ſingle, or, which in probability is all one, both together, is the notation of the ſin for which the flood came, and the interpretation of the ἀπειθοῦσι πάλαι, thoſe that of old were diſobedient in this place.

The King's MS. reads Ο Καὶ ἀντίτυπον &c. where Ο in capital letters (as that whole book is written) ſignifies oftentimes Τ, as in an inſcription of an antient cup in Athenæus ΔΙΟΝΤΣΟ is written for Διονῦσου. CHAP. IV.

Paraphraſe.

1. Ye muſt therefore, ſeeing Chriſt hath ſuffered for you, reſolve to follow and imitate him in ſuffering alſo, or dying with him, viz: dying to ſin (ſee v. 6) or ceaſing from it, as he that is dead, or hath crucified the fleſh with affections and luſts, alwaies doth,

1. FOraſmuch then as Chriſt hath ſuffered for us in the fleſh, arm your ſelves likewiſe with the ſame mind: for he that hath [a] ſuffered * in the fleſh, hath ceaſed from ſin,] a. * or, to the fleſh, for the King's MS. reads σαρκὶ

2. That for the remainder of the life that ye live, this frail mortal life, ye live no one minute longer in obedience to thoſe luſts, or compliance to thoſe appetites that are ordinary among men, but in perfect obedience, and compliance to the will of God.

2. That † he no longer ſhould live the reſt of his time in the fleſh, to the luſts of men, but to the will of God.] † ye ſhould no longer live the reſt of your time εἰς τὸ μηκέτι ἐπιθυμίαις ἀνθρώπων ζῆσαι

3. For ye have ſure continued long enough in thoſe heathenish villanies, ſo ordinary in the Gentile world, ye have ſufficiently gratified them by accompanying them in unnatural acts of uncleanneſſe (ſee note c.) and carnal luſts, in drinking of wine, luxurious feaſts, Bacchanals, and thoſe deteſtable ſins of luſt, uſed in the idol-worſhips of the Gentiles, ſee note on 1 Cor. 5. 1.

3. For the time paſt of our life may ſuffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in laſciviouſneſſe, luſts, [b] exceſſe of wine, * revellings, banquettings, and abominable idolatries:] b. * feaſtings, drinkings, κώμοις, πότοις

4. Who wonder as at a ſtrange thing, and reproach and rail at you, if you make any ſcruple of thoſe unnatural abominable ſins, which are not to be ſpoken of, or refuſe to run on headlong with them to the commiſſion of them:

4. Wherein they [c] † think it ſtrange that you run not with them to the ſame [d] * exceſſe of riot, ſpeaking evil of you:] c. d. † wonder & blaſpheme ξενίζονται βλασφημοῦντες * confuſion

5. Who ſhall be moſt ſadly accountable to God the judge of all the world, who hath all the actions and thoughts of men, dead and living, ſo ready to him, that he can paſſe a moſt juſt ſentence on them, whenſoever he pleaſes, and will certainly ere long ſo deal with the provoking ſinners, Jewes and Gnoſticks, of this age, as he hath dealt formerly with the like through all times, ſince the beginning of the world.

5. Who ſhall give account to him that † is ready to judge the quick and the dead.] † hath in readineſſe ἑτοίμως ἔχοντι

6. For thus hath he formerly proceeded with the ſinners of the old world (ſee note on c. 3. f.) and all others that are now long agoe dead, firſt preached to them, (when they were alive) as now unto us, and made known his will and commandments, on this one deſigne, that they might mortifie all ſinfull luſts, reform their vicious abominable waies, and ſo ſuffer to the fleſh (ſee note a.) and for the future live new lives, obey the commandments of God.

6. For, for this cauſe was the Goſpel preached alſo to them that are dead, that they might be * judged according to men in the fleſh, but live according to God in the ſpirit.] * judged to the fleſh according to men, but live to the Spirit according to God

7. But that great fatal deſtruction to the obdurate Jewes, ſo oft ſpoken of by Chriſt and his Apoſtles (ſee note on Mat. 10. g. & 24. c.) is now neer at hand, which is an obligation to all care in performing all acts of piety, in praying for the averting of Gods wrath, and ſecuring you from being overwhelmed in it, and to that end there is nothing ſo neceſſary as ſobriety, in oppoſition to the ſins forenamed v. 3, 4. and care and vigilance that the day of viſitation come not on you unawares.

7. But the end of all things is at hand; be ye therefore ſober, and watch unto † prayer.] † prayers προσευχὰς

8. But above all things, be ſure to maintain a moſt earneſt love, and charity toward your fellow Chriſtians, (the contrary to which, the contentions and factions of the Gnoſticks, ſhall concurre with their other villanies to involve them in the vengeance that befalls the perſecuting Jewes.) For this added to repentance from all thoſe other dead works, is the likelieſt means to propitiate God, and avert his judgments from you, ſee Jam. 5. 8.

8. And above all things have fervent charity among your ſelves: for charity ſhall cover the multitude of ſins.]

9, 10. Every one as he hath received wealth or any other good thing, ſo diſtributing it to them that want; as counting your ſelves but ſtewards of thoſe many gifts and liberalities of God, (ſee note on c. 3. c.) and diſcharging that office, as it ought to be diſcharged, to the greateſt advantage of others,

9. Uſe hoſpitality one to another without * grudging:

11. If any man ſpeak, let him ſpeak as the oracles of God. if any man * miniſter, let him doe it as of the ability which God giveth, that God in all things may be glorified through Jeſus Chriſt, to whom be praiſe and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.]

11. He that teacheth the people, let him doe it with that uprightneſſe, as becomes one that is a ſteward, or diſpenſer of the oracles of God: He that exerciſes liberality to the poor (ſee note on Lu.8.2.) let him do it in proportion to that eſtate which God hath given him, that ſo God may be glorified in his gifts, i.e. receive honour by that uſe which is made of them, by your obedience to the Goſpel of Chriſt, who is God bleſſed for ever. Amen. (ſee Rom.9.c.)

† wonder not, or, be not ſurpriſed at this burning, or caſting into the fire that is among you, as is befallen you for your trials, μὴ ξενίζεσθε τῇ ἐν ὑμῖν πυρώσει πρὸς πειρασμὸν ὑμῖν γινομένῃ

12. Beloved, † think it not ſtrange concerning the * fiery trial which is to try you, as though ſome ſtrange thing happened unto you.]

12. Brethren, be not amazed, or much troubled at the terrible fire of perſecution and affliction which is among you at this time, it is that which God ſends for your trial, and 'tis no ſtrange or new thing to have ſuch things befall Chriſtians.

13. But rejoice, in as much as ye are partakers of Chriſt's ſufferings, that when his glory ſhall be revealed, ye may be glad alſo with exceeding joy.]

13. But count it matter of joy to you, that thereby you are made like unto Chriſt in ſuffering, and then as there was a reſurrection of Chriſt after his ſuffering, and that reſurrection the more glorious, becauſe of that forerunner, ſo after theſe ſufferings of yours, there will be a glorious revelation and coming of Chriſt, that ſpoken of Mat.24. (ſee note or 2 Theſſ.1.a.) to the deſtruction of thoſe crucifiers of Chriſt, and perſecuters of Chriſtianity, after which you ſhall have a great calm and tranquillity, and that will be matter of exceeding joy to you.

* for the ſtate of glory ὅτι τὸ τῆς δόξης (the King's MS. adds ἡ δυνάμεως, and of power) and the ſpirit of God καὶ τὸ τοῦ θεοῦ πνεῦμα

14. If ye be reproached for the name of Chriſt, happy are ye, * for the ſpirit of † glory and of God reſteth upon you; on their part he is evil ſpoken of, but on your part he is glorified.]

14. In the mean, whatſoever contumely or perſecution ye ſuffer for your Chriſtian profeſſion's ſake, it is the happyeſt thing that could befall you, For by your being reviled for being Chriſtians, it ſeems the very ſame condition which was in Chriſt incarnate, and wherein his power was moſt evident, and the very ſpirit, and temper of God is in you, which temper of Chriſt is looked upon with reproach by the men of the world, not conceiving how ſuffering can become a God, but by you, who have imitated it by your own ſufferings, it is commended and glorified.

15. But let none of you ſuffer as a murtherer, or as a thief, or as an evil doer, or as a buſie body in other mens matters.]

15. But I deſire not that any of you ſhould be ſo in love with ſufferings from the heathen powers, as to do ought that may juſtly deſerve it from them, as by any act of murther, ſtealth, aſſuming, or pretending authority to make others, that belong not to your charges, to perform what you term their duties.

16. But if any man ſuffer as a Chriſtian, let him not be aſhamed, but let him glorifie God on this behalf.]

16. But if keeping himſelf innocent from theſe and the like, be yet fall under perſecution for the faith of Chriſt and diſcharge of his Chriſtian duty, let this be matter of rejoicing to him, and of thankſgiving to God,

† That it is the ſeaſon that judgment ſhould begin

* the firſt be from us, ἀφ' ἡμῶν τὸ πρῶτον

17. [h] † For the time is come that judgement muſt begin at the houſe of God; and if * it firſt begin at us, what ſhall the end be of them that obey not the Goſpel of God?]

17. That there being a firſt and ſecond draught of bitterneſſe, i.e. of puniſhments for men, one by way of chaſtiſement, or exerciſe, the other for utter excision, or one in this world, the far lighter of the two, the latter to come in another world, much more formidable; and the former now ſometimes befalling the deareſt ſervants of Chriſt, this is the time, or ſeaſon for that to fall on you. And if it be ſo, what is this but a very ominous ſign, that it will be very heavy and inſupportable to the wicked, the obdurate crucifiers of Chriſt, and perſecuters of Chriſtianity, whoſe portion is that other far bitterer part of the Cup, which is reſerved for them even in this world, a fatal exciſion now ſuddenly approaching. After the righteous have been ſufficiently tried, then their rod is to be caſt into the fire, and ſo an utter deſtruction of the obdurate Jews (ſee Lu.23.31.) and that in an heavier manner in another world after this life.

† hardly eſcape μόλις σώζεται

18. And if the righteous † ſcarcely be ſaved, where ſhall the ungodly and the ſinner appear?

18. And if the righteous have a compenſation, or portion of miſery in this life, Prov. 11. 31. and, though he eſcape, yet do it through many afflictions, then how fearful is the expectation of ungodly ſinful men?

* commit their ſouls or lives παρατιθέσθωσαν τὰς ψυχὰς

19. Wherefore, let them that ſuffer according to the will of God, * commit the keeping of their ſouls to him, in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator.]

19. By all this it appears to be moſt reaſonable, that they that ſuffer in Chriſts cauſe, bear it patiently, and quietly, never doing, or attempting any unlawful thing to caſt the croſſe off from their own ſhoulders, but committing their lives and every thing to God, who having created all, and ſo being able to preſerve them as eaſily, if he pleaſe, and being moſt certain to perform all his promiſes to every faithful ſervant of his, will certainly preſerve them, if it be beſt for them, and if he do not, will make their ſufferings a paſſage to, and enhaunſement of their glory.

Notes on Chap. IV.

2. τὸ βιῶσαι ἐν σαρκὶ

What is here meant by ſuffering in the fleſh, (or, as the King's MS. reads, σαρκὶ, to the fleſh) which we are to do by way of correſpondence to Chriſt's crucifixion, doth not onely appear by many other phraſes elſewhere, as being dead to ſin, crucified with Chriſt, noting thereby mortification and forſaking of worldly ſinful courſes, but alſo by the diſtinct words here added [πέπαυται ἁμαρτίας, he hath ceaſed from ſin] which refer the phraſe here to reformation of wicked lives, not to ſuffering of afflictions, as the words might be thought to ſignifie. And this irrefragably appears by v. 2. That we ſhould no longer live the reſt of our time in the fleſh to the luſts of men, but to the will of God. Which verſe if it be compared with that harder phraſe, κριθῶσι κατὰ ἀνθρώπους σαρκὶ judged to the fleſh according to men, v. 6. it may poſſibly give ſome light to the explication of it, For ἐπιθυμίαις ἀνθρώπων the luſts of men v.2. may well be anſwerable to κατὰ ἀνθρώπους σαρκὶ, the fleſh according to πέπαυται ἁμαρτίας

men v. 6. noting thereby the customary sinful lusts of the Gentiles, as on the other side [the will of God] v. 2. is all one with the spirit according to God, the godly spiritual inclinations and dispositions, and then why may not [μηκέτι βιῶσι living no longer] i. e. dying, be all one with [κριθῶσι, be judged] or condemned or sentenced to death? For when all the phrases that belong to Christ's sufferings, crucifixion, death, burial, are applied by accommodation from Christ to the Christian, in respect of his dying to the flesh, to the world, to sin, and when the opposite to being judged is living, (and when that opposition is strictly observed in all other parts of the phrase, πνύματι spirit, opposed to σαρκὶ flesh, and κατὰ θεὸν according to God, to κατ' ἀνθρώπους according to men) why should not [κρινεῖς to be judged or condemned] which is the thing immediately preparatory to execution, be taken here (though not often elsewhere) for execution, or suffering that sentence? And so κριθῶσι σαρκὶ judged to the flesh, be all one with dead to the world, or flesh, i. e. mortifying all sinful lusts, opposed to living according to God to the spirit, an holy and godly life. Another notion these words v. 6. may be thought capable of, ἵνα κριθῶσι μὲν κατ' ἀνθρώπους τῇ σαρκὶ (speaking of penitent sinners involved in a common ruine) that though as far as men can see, κατ' ἀνθρώπους according to men] they be judged in the flesh, swept away in the calamity, in respect of their bodily outward condition, yet they are at rest, and so in their soul or spirit, live with God. If suffering in or to the flesh v. 1. did belong to afflictions, this then might probably be the meaning of v. 6. But the former being otherwise determined by the context, this latter will best be interpreted by analogy therewith.

b. Οινοφλυξ — Οἰνοφλυξ, μέθυσος, ὁ εἰς τὸ οἶνον ὁρμῶν, φλύαρ γὰρ τὸ ὁρμὴν ἔχειν σημαίνει, saith Phavorinus, the word signifies a drunkard, one impetuously given to wine. And again Οἰνοφλυγία, ἐπιθυμία οἴνου ἄμετρος, an immoderate desire of wine.

c. Ξενίζεσθαι — Ξενίζεσθαι is to wonder as at a new or strange accident. So in Polybius, ξενίζεσθαι καὶ διαπορεῖν διὰ τὸ παράδοξον, to think strange and doubt, as at a paradox, all one with ξενοπαθεῖν to be surprized with some unexpected event. So ξενίζω ἐκπλήττω in Phavorinus, and proportionably in the passive ξενίζεσθαι, ἐκπλήττεσθαι, to be stricken on a sudden, or amazed, so here again v. 12. μὴ ξενίζεσθε τῇ πυρώσει, be not surprized, amazed, astonish'd, or vehemently affected with wonder, at that πύρωσις which is among you.

d. Ἀνάχυσις — Ἀνάχυσις φυσμὸς, σύγχυσις, saith Phavorinus, where σύγχυσις signifying confusion is a general word, and would not much tend to the illustrating of the other, did not the φυσμὸς tell us what kind of confusion it was, viz. a confusion of sexes, in committing those base sins, for so saith he of φυσμὸς μολυσμὸς, ῥύπος, μίασμα, it notes those filthy abominable pollutions, and accordingly Hesychius having rendred it φυσμὸς θηλεία, interprets the latter of these μαλακία mollities, the word so commonly used for effeminacy, and particularly for these base sins. Another notion of this word there is (the primitive, I suppose whence this is by metaphore derived) for ponds or cavities which are filled with the sea at the time of flote, and will carry boats at such times to the main land, and to cities built there. So saith Strabo l. 3. Λέγονται ἀναχύσεις αἱ πλήρωμαι τῆς θαλάττης κοιλάδες ἐν ταῖς παραλίοις, καὶ πόρρω δίχα ἀνάπτυκτοι διὰ τὴν μεσόγαιαν ἔχουσι καὶ πόλεις ἐν αὐταῖς πολλάς. These Ptolemee calls ἀχύσεις, as our Humber in England is by him expressed by Ἄβα (in all probability for Ἄβρα) εἴσχυσις. And this overflowing of the sea is very fit to expresse this of extravagant enormous lust (see note on Jude b.) Agreeable to this is the ἀσωτία notion of Ἀσωτία here also joined with it, Ἄσωτος, ἀσέλγης, ἀσελγὴς, and Ἀσωτος αἰσχρῶς, saith Phavorinus, it notes incontinence, and lasciviousnesse, or filthinesse, which what it signifies in that writer, will appear by the account which he gives of ἀσελγαίνειν, viz. that principally and properly it signifies τὸ παρὰ φύσιν ἐν γυναιξὶ μίγνυσθαι, the sin mentioned Rom. 1. 26. from whence saith he, there was a city called Ἀσέλγη, ὅτι κακῶς ἔζων οἱ ἄνδρωποι, καὶ ἀλλήλοις ἐκοινώνουν, where such unnatural villanies were ordinarily committed, and κοινῶς, ἀσέλγεια, ἀκαθαρσία uncleannesse, but that especially of the basest and foulest sort, as may appear by his rendring Ἀθεμίτοις εἰδωλολατρείαις abominable practises of the Gentiles in their idolatries, v. 3.

What πύρωσις] here signifies, will easily be defined in general, any kind of adversity, or sharp persecution, which (as fire blown up into flames, to gold or other metals, is the means of exploring and purifying them) is in like manner here said to be γινομένη ὑμῖν εἰς πειρασμὸν, befallen them for their trial. Thus Prov. 27. 21. δοκίμιον ἀργύρῳ καὶ χρυσῷ πύρωσις casting into the fire is the trial for silver and gold, and Psal. 66. 10. ἐπύρωσας ἡμᾶς, ὡς πυροῦται ἀργύριον, thou hast cast us into the fire, as silver is cast into the fire, unless perhaps that should be read ἐπύρωσας ὡς πυρέζεται, thou hast tried us as silver is tried, and so in other places of the Old Testament. The word we have again Rev. 18. 9. where καπνὸς πυρώσεως we rightly render the smoak of her burning or being set on fire. If this be now applied to the Jews in general at that time, it may then be fitly interpreted of the great combustions and seditions caused by the Ζηλωταὶ and στασιασταὶ, Zelots and seditious, oft mentioned by Josephus, which raised such stirs among them, and brought such heavy, bloudy slaughters upon them before their destruction by the Romanes, and not onely in, but out of Judea: And in opposition to these, perhaps it is, that they are advised to be Ζηλωταὶ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ Zelots of that which is good, for so the King's MS. reads in stead of μιμηταὶ imitators or followers, c. 3. 13. and accordingly now, when the τὸ τέλος ἤγγικε the destruction or fatal excision was but approaching, the πύρωσις is spoken of as already γινομένη ἐν ὑμῖν befallen among them, and so may fitly be the forerunner of their destruction, as Josephus observes it was. But if it be more strictly applied to the Christians, to whom S. Peter writes, it must then signifie the persecutions which from the Jews and Gnosticks, fell on the pure and orthodox Christians, wherever Christianity was planted in the Provinces, and was particularly εἰς πειρασμὸν, for the exploring and trying them, the malice of the perſecuters being ſuch (and no other means of appeaſing them, ſave the denying of the faith, or, by compliances, ſeeming to doe ſo) that whoſoever was not ſincere, was ſure to be tempted out of his profeſſion.

f. Δόξα That δόξα glory is anſwerable to the Hebrew Schechinah the appearing of God by Angels, or any other glorious way, hath been often ſaid, note on Mar. 1.a. (ſee 2 Pet. 1.3.17. and Jude 24.) and that that alſo ſignifies that eminent way of God's appearance (which is therefore called his ἐπιφάνεια) the incarnation and beeing of Chriſt here on the earth, hath been formerly noted alſo, on Joh. 1.b. So 2 Cor. 4.b. the glory of God in the face of Jeſus Chriſt, is the glorious exhibition of God, ſo viſible in Chriſt here on the earth; And ſo moſt probably here it ſignifies, and then τὸ τῆς δόξης δόξης will be the ſtate or condition of Chriſt, when he was here upon the earth, with which is here fitly joined τὸ πνεῦμα τοῦ θεοῦ, the ſpirit of God (ſo Chriſt incarnate was, God bleſſed for ever) i.e. the ſame way of diſpenſation and œconomy, which was uſed on Chriſt, when he was here on earth (ſee note on Lu. 9.d.) And that this is the meaning of it here, will be judged by the context, which pronounces them happy, that are reproached for Chriſt's name; becauſe by that means they are made like Chriſt, that prime perſon, that ſuffered for well doing.

g. What the ἀλλοτριεπισκοπὴ here ſignifies, will beſt be gueſt by obſerving firſt, that it is here joined with other great and groſſe ſins, theft, murther, evil doing; 2^dly, by comparing it with another word of neer ſignification, περιεργία 2 Theſſ. 3.11. (againſt which the Apoſtle exhorts, 1 Theſſ. 4.1.) This crime is either of a lower or higher ſort, the firſt is idleneſſe, the ſecond improves it into ſedition. Againſt the former the Apoſtolick doctrine did proceed by way of cenſure, that they were not to be acknowledged in the Catalogue of thoſe poor that were to be relieved by the Church out of the publick ſtock, but rather under the title of the ἄτακτοι diſorderly perſons, uſed as thieves (with whom they are here placed) which were to be ſold as ſlaves, forced to labour, and ſo taken off from their idleneſſe and medling with other men's matters. Thus among the Ægyptians idleneſſe was a capital crime; among the Lucani, he that lent money to any idle perſon was to loſe it; among the Corinthians the ſlothful were delivered to the carnifex, ſaith Diphilus. Another, higher then this, there was, of undertaking to have the charge of thoſe that do not belong to them, a fault which at this time was very obſervable among the Jewiſh Zelots, who pretending to and promiſing themſelves a perpetual immunity from all power of men (as the onely children of God, which were not therefore to be under any man, particularly under heathens, but to enjoy an ἀυτονομία or immunity) would force all men to join with them againſt the Romanes, i.e. againſt the publick peace, calling themſelves the ὑπερμάχους καὶ σωτῆρας benefactors and ſaviours of the nation, and plundering all that would not be as active and ſeditious as themſelves. Such as theſe were very rife at the time of writing this Epiſtle, and might juſtly be here ranked with thieves and murtherers, being moſt eminently both of theſe, under pretence of zeal to the law, and making all men perform their duty.

The ἐν here will moſt conveniently be joined with the δοξάζετω v. 16. as the matter of the Chriſtians joy, and occaſion of his glorifying God, that this is the ſeaſon of judgments beginning at the houſe of God. For there being two parts of God's κρῖμα or judgment, the one tolerable, the other intolerable, the one for advantage of the ſufferer, the other for the greateſt diſadvantage, the one here called ἀρξάμενος κρῖμα, the beginning or τὸ πρῶτον firſt part of the judgment, the other τὸ τέλος, the end, or tail of it, the one aſſigned to pious men, the οἶκος θεοῦ houſe of God, the other to the impious, obdurate, ἀπειθοῦντες diſobedient (ſee c. 3.g.) it muſt needs be look'd on as an happy condition, and that which is matter of joy and not of ſorrow to any; that they have their part in the former of theſe, and not in the latter of them. What the τὸ τέλος the end here is, may perhaps be queſtioned, whether any vengeance in this life, or that greater in another life. But the anſwer is eaſie, it belongs primarily to the vengeance that here ſhould light upon the obdurate Jews, their utter exciſion now approaching, ſtyled τὸ τέλος πάντων the end of all things v. 7. in compariſon with which the perſecutions that now fell on the perſevering Chriſtians from their hands, were very light and ſupportable, but this not to exclude, but to be the entrance on that ſad arrear, the dregs of that bitter cup in another world. What is here added of the δίκαιος μόλις σώζεται, the righteous ſcarcely eſcaping, is taken from Prov. 11.31. where that which is in the Hebrew הן צדיק בארץ ישלם and is from thence rightly rendred by our Engliſh, behold, the righteous ſhall be recompenſed on the earth, is by the Septuagint (by miſtake, as it is probable, of בארץ for ſome other word) rendred δίκαιος μόλις σώζεται, the righteous hardly (i. e. not without ſome difficulties and perſecutions) eſcapes, where, as the recompenſe on earth, which the righteous meets with, is the puniſhments and afflictions which befall him in this life, ſo the σώζεται ſaved, muſt be the temporal preſervations here, or immunity from afflictions, and μόλις σώζεται hardly ſaved, his bearing ſome ſharp, pungent part of them, but thoſe not comparable with that other part of God's cup of trembling, which expects the ungodly both here, in a remarkable deſtruction, and in another world.

CHAP. V.

1. THe Elders which are among you I exhort, who am * alſo an elder, and a witneſſe of the ſufferings of Chriſt, and alſo a partaker of the glory that † ſhall be revealed.]

1. The Biſhops of your ſeveral Churches (ſee note on Act 11.

2. Take care of your severall Churches, and govern them, not as secular rulers, by force, but as pastors doe their sheep, by calling and going before them, (Psal. 80. 1.) that so they may follow of their own accord; nor out of consideration of the gain which may be made by receiving the contributions of the Church put into your hands, as secular rulers again make gain of their governments, but so ruling them, that they may obey your doctrine and example cheerfully;

2. Feed the flock of God which is among you, † taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind;] † governing it ἐπισκοποῦντες

4. And when Christ which is your ruler and governor, as you are rulers of other men, shall come to judgment, you shall assuredly receive from him a crown, which is not made of such fading materials, as those in the Olympick games, but one that fadeth not, a crown of glory (see note on 1 Cor. 9. 25.) a reward of your good (i.e. eminently good) work, or office, 1 Tim. 3. 1. See note a.

4. And when the chief shepheard shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away.]

c. 5. And in like manner all inferiors must live obediently under their Bishops, and so must all of you be subject to those that are set over you (see note on Jam. 5. b.) putting on humility as your badge, Or, and so must all of you put on humility as your badge, For God, saith Solomon, setteth himself against the haughty and disobedient, but is very favourable to the meek and obedient.

5. Likewise ye younger, submit your selves unto the elder: yea, * all of you be subject one to another, and † be c clothed with humility; for God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble.] * or, all of you toward one another put on humility, for the King's MS. leaving out ὑποτασσόμενοι reads πάντες δὲ ἀλλήλοις τὴν ταπεινοφροσύνην ἐγκόλπωσθε † put on as your badge

6. Submit your selves therefore in all obedience to all those that are placed over you by God, that he may in the time of visitation (see note on c. 2. 9.) and hereafter in the day of doom, exalt and reward your humility:

6. Humble your selves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in * due time:] * or the season of visitation, for the King's MS. reads καιρῷ ἐπισκοπῆς

7. And whatsoever difficulties ye have to wrestle with; be not anxiously solicitous about them, but refer all to God's guidance, either to avert or enable you to support, for he hath a particular care of you, and will not let any thing befall you, which is not really best for you.

8. Observe carefully all the rules of sobriety, and vigilance, or diligence, for the devill that upon all occasions indicteth, and accuseth you before God, is always watching advantages to get you into his power and reach, and useth all means to that end, as a Lion doth roaring, to fright and amaze, and so catch his prey;

8. Be sober, be vigilant, because your adversary the devill as a roaring Lion walketh about, seeking whom he may devour;]

9. Whose temptations can bring you no hurt, but by your yielding to them, and therefore it concerns you to resist him with all constancy and fidelity, making use of the shield of faith, Eph. 6. 16. to repell all his assaults, that being the tryed instrument of overcoming the devil, as well as the world, 1 Joh. 5. 4. and for your encouragement to constancy, you cannot but know, that you are not the only sufferers in the world, but that the Christians at Rome, v. 13. and in other places, suffer in the very same manner that you doe.

9. Whom resist * stedfast in the faith, knowing that the same afflictions † are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world,] * firm, by faith στερεοὶ τῇ πίστει † befall your brotherhood which is in the world τὴν ἐν κόσμῳ ὑμῶν ἀδελφότητα ἐπιτελεῖσθαι

10. But the same God of all mercy and consolation, who by revealing Christianity to you, hath advanced you to a capacity and (if you be not wanting to your selves) to the possession of his eternall glory through the sufferings of Christ, by his special providence restore you to a peaceable quiet condition of serving him, after these your dispersions are over (see note on 2 Cor. 13. b.) and by that means confirm you to hold out to the end.

10. But the God of all grace who hath called us into his eternal glory by Christ Jesus; after that yee have suffered a while, * make you perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle you.] * himself restore you, αὐτὸς καταρτίσει ὑμᾶς, or, shall himself restore, for the King's MS. reads καταρτίσει

12. I have written this short Epistle to you by Sylvanus, I take it, a worthy and faithfull person, perswading you thus to persevere, and assuring you that this which I now preach to you, is that faith which was at first received and beleived by you, wherein ye have continued so long.

12. By Sylvanus † a faithfull brother unto you, (as I suppose) I have written briefly, exhorting and testifying that this is the true grace of God wherein * ye stand.] † a brother faithfull to you ὑμῖν τὸν πιστὸν ἀδελφὸν * yee have stood ἐστήκατε

14. Greet yee one another with a kisse of charity: Peace be with you all that are in Christ Jesus. Amen.]

Notes on Chap. V.

a. Κατακυριεύειν

Κατακυριεύειν is κραταιοῦν, saith Phavorinus, to have and exercise dominion; What this is, will appear by that place of the Gospel, Mat. 20. 25. where 'tis explained by the practise of the heathen rulers, Kings or Emperors over them, who doe ἐξουσιάζειν, and κραταιοῦν (both to the same sense) act as κύριοι, Lords, masters of their people, and that not onely by dominion over their persons, but over

over their estates too, so farre as to maintain all their state out of the peoples purses by way of tri- διακονῆσαι bute and taxes. This is the meaning of διακονῆς there v. 28. to be served or benefited by their subjects, the same that Xenophon means by ὠφελῶνλο ὑπ' αὐτῶν, Praef: to Κυρ: Παιδ: being profited by them. For this is the manner of the Kings of the nations (and consequently will be so of their King, if they will have one) 1 Sam. 8. 11. to receive tributes and the like from their subjects, and to be maintained by them in all their splendor and greatnesse that belonged to them, all the pomps and expences of their families and courts being fetched out of their subjects purses and persons, Which consideration would, saith Samuel, make them think their present estate under the θεοκρατία (being governed by God immediately) much better to them, v. 18. And that is the meaning of the κλαχειδίν, to behave themselves after the manner of these, to use their power in order to their own profits, and greatnesse, (like those Neh. 5. 5. where the word ὑποδουλῶν is used) And this is here forbidden the governours of the Church, they may not make this their manner of ruling, to exercise this power over their flock, but to give them examples of all kind of Christian virtue, and so neither to be πλήκτ' strikers, imperious, masterly persons, ruling roughly, and harshly, and in ostenta- πλήκται
tion of their power, nor ἀισχροκερδεῖς, covetous, griping, making advantage of Ecclesiastical power to squeez gain out of men. Which two things are so severely interdicted the Ecclesiastical ruler, 1 Tim. 3. 3. & Tit. 1. 17. and perhaps are intended ἀισχροκερδεῖς here also, v. 2. the first by οὐκ ἀναγκαστῶς not forcibly, in an active sense, not using violence toward οὐκ ἀναγκαστῶς
the flock, and the latter by the ἀισχροκερδῶς not making filthy gain, i. e. such as the use of their power over the flock brings them in, over and above that proportion, which by the Church is allotted for their maintenance.

b. Κλῆρος may here be the several provinces over which each of the Governours (mentioned together in the plural ver. 1.) are placed, So Act. 1. 25. κλῆρος διακονίας καὶ ἀποστολῆς the lot of ministry and Apostleship,] is that charge or portion assigned by lot to Matthias, whither he was to goe, and officiate, and preach the Gospel, From which division then made among the twelve at their setting out on their travails to plant the Gospel, they and all others, ordained by God to be Apostles or Bishops, had afterward their provinces to govern, ποιμαίνειν
ποιμαίνειν and ἐπισκοπεῖν to rule as Pastors and Bishops ver. 2. when they were converted to Christianity; As among the Romans, the Province, which such a Proconsul was to administer or govern, was his lot or κλῆρος, according to which, κληρυχία in Phavorinus is rendred δεσποτεία Lordship. In relation to these Provinces among the Romans, over which Procurators, or Prators, or Proconsuls were set, or to which they were advanced, as to a Magistracie or preferment, and raised great wealth there from their Provinces (as Cicero tells us of Verres and the Prator of Sicilie) it is, that here the Apostle commands the Bishops, not to bear rule, as they doe over their Provinces (i. e. by force, and with griping and squeezing wealth out of them, that is κλαχειδίν τ κλήρων, and ἀναγκαστῶς, and ἀισχροκερδῶς, see note a.) but to rule them as Pastors do a flock, going before, and so conducting them, which is here the meaning of τύποι γινόμενοι τῷ ποιμνίῳ, becoming examples of the flock, after the manner of the sheep in those parts, where the Pastor going before, the sheep hear his voice and follow him, and that, as it is here, ἑκουσίως and προθύμως willingly and cheerfully.
τύποι γ. τῷ ποιμνίῳ

What ἐγκόμβωμα signifies, is particularly set down by Julius Pollux, Ὀνομαστ: l. 4. c. 18. in these words, Τῇ τ δούλων ἐξωμίδι ἱματίδιόν τι περίκειται λευκὸν, ὃ ἐγκόμβωμα λέγεται ἢ ἐπίβλημα, Upon the servants coat is added a little white garment, called by this name, by which it appears to be a habit peculiar to servants, and by what Hesychius and Phavorinus say, (ἐγκομβωθεὶς δεθείς, it signifies being bound, and again ἐγκόμβωμα δεσμὸς a band,) it appears to be some kind of girdle or belt, and agreeably Hesychius and Phavorinus explain κόστυμβος by ἐγκόμβωμα ἢ ζῶμα Αἰγύπτιον, an Ægyptian girdle. This, as it is a belt, or girdle, is an embleme of obedience, and much more so, as that girdle was proper to servants, and so 'tis here used by the Apostle to denote humility to those that are placed over them, as their badge, by which they may be known to be servants of Christ. That it is no barbarous word, see Photius Epist: 156. who cites out of Epicharmus ἐγκαλύμβω, and ἐσκομβώσαιτο out of Apollodorus, ἡ ἐπωμίαν πλύξασα δεσμῷ ἄνωθεν ἐσκομβωσάμενος, I girt it upon me, Which agrees with the notion of a belt which we have given of it.
c. Ἐγκομβώσασθε

Ἐκλέγειν to choose and ἐκκλησίαν to call or cull out, are in effect all one, and agreeably ἐκλελεκτὴ chosen, and ἐκκλησία Church are so too, noting the society and assembly of Christians, as they are separate from the world, and in that respect said to be called, or picked, or culled out of it. And then Συνεκλεκτὴ] will signifie that Church which was planted together with them, their sister Church, see note on 2 Joh. a. That S. Peter was now at Rome, when he wrote this Epistle, in the 2d year of Claudius, is collected by Baronius, and accordingly Βαβυλὼν] here will be resolved to signifie Rome, so called, either διὰ τὸ περιεῖναι, because of the great splendor of that city, saith OEcumenius, or else, because of the great confusion of idolatrie, which S. Peter found there, see Rev. 18. note a.

a SECOND EPISTLE GENERAL
*OF PETER.

a. * of the Apostle, for the copies ordinarily read ὁ Ἀποστόλος simply.

2. Ἀπόστολος Πέτρος

THat this second Epistle of S. Peter was not at first received in the Church of Christ with so universal an agreement and consent, as the former, may be concluded from Eusebius, and others of the Antients. But that either it was not received into the antient Canon, or not acknowledged to be written by that Apostle, is the too hasty affirmation of some few later writers; For the confirming of which because the posthumous Annotations of the most learned and judicious Hugo Grotius (a person, which hath deserved so extremely well of this last age) have offered a special argument, it will not be amisse briefly to consider it. It is this; Peter, as all know, died under Nero, but this Epistle, as it is there suggested, at least the third Chapter of it, was written after the destruction of Jerusalem, This is attempted to be thus proved, because no Christian ever beleived that the end of the world would come till after the destruction of the Jewish state (but that, soon after that, it would come was the opinion of many,) Whereas, saith the objection, the writer of this Epistle arms his readers with patience in expectation of the last day, if it came not so soon as they expected. Hereupon the conclusion there is, that Simeon, the Bishop of Jerusalem, next after James is probably to be deemed the writer of this Epistle, who lived after the destruction of Jerusalem, till Trajan's time, and then was crucified. To make this good, these inconveniences are presently foreseen, which this opinion must necessarily fall upon, One from the beginning of the Epistle, where he is styled Simon Peter, (which cannot belong to Simeon Bishop of Jerusalem, who was not called Peter) and Ἀπόστολος Apostle of Jesus Christ, which as little belongs to Simeon, whose predecessor James in his Epistle styles himself no more than δοῦλος a servant of Jesus Christ. A second from c. 3. 15. where he calls the Apostle Paul ἀγαπητὸς ἡμῶν ἀδελφὸς, our beloved brother. To these inconveniences the onely expedient that is there offered, is this conjecture (Puto titulum fuisse &c. that the word Πέτρος Peter should be left out in the title, and so likewise the word Apostle, and so the form be reduced to that of James and Jude, Συμεὼν δοῦλος Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, Symeon the servant of Jesus Christ, and so likewise that the words rendred our beloved brother, were not in the antient Copies. But of this there is not pretended any colour of authority from any antient Copie, but onely Credo ita comperturum si quis antiquiora, quàm nos habemus, Epistolæ hujus exemplaria invenerit, I beleive that he which shall meet with more antient copies than those which we now have, will find it thus. Which as it is an acknowledgment that no copie which we now have, favours this conjecture, and so that it is deprived of all authority, or probable ground, so it is an evidence of the infelicity and great injury done to learned men, whose notes and all their most sudden conjectures, which never past the Authors review, or second, maturer thoughts, are indifferently put together, and set out by others after their death, For it is not imaginable that that most judicious learned man, who was so great a master of reason, and so seldome, or never assumes to put off any opinion of his own, upon his own [Puto and Credo] thoughts and beleifs, or conjectures, should thus leave out words and expressions upon his own phansie, without any pretense of any one Copie to assist him. This will be yet more strange, if it be remembred 1. that ch. 3. 1. this is said to be a second Epistle, written much to the same purpose with the former, which is very agreeable to S. Peter's being the author of it, the former being wholly bent to fortifie the Christian sufferers in their constancy against the baits and seductions of the Gnosticks, but can no way be competible to Symeon the Bishop of Jerusalem, of whom no records of those times tell us that he ever wrote any, and of whom it is not by those Annotations pretended, that he wrote two Epistles. 2^dly, That ch. 1. 16, 17. there is a whole passage which cannot possibly belong to Bishop Symeon, but signally doth belong to the Apostle Peter, that of having been on the holy Mount with Christ, and hearing those words, This is my beloved son &c. which certainly belongs to the transfiguration, Mat. 17. where only Peter and James and John were present with Christ. And it is as strange, which on those verses, is said in those Annotations, 1. that these words must not be referred to the transfiguration on Mount Tabor, but to that other passage, Joh. 12. 28. (whereas H. Grotius in those Annotations (which are known to be his) on Mat. 17. distinctly applies the words to that on Mount Tabor) And 2^dly, that when the voice Joh. 12. 28. was in the other words [ἐδόξασα καὶ πάλιν δοξάσω, I have glorified, and will glorifie again] it is there suggested, that the words [This is my beloved son &c.] were put in by some scribes, who took the Epistle for S. Peter's, For which again there is not the least proof offered from any Copie antient, or modern; So unhappy are all those conjectures in this matter, and so injurious to him whose name they have assumed to give them authority. 'Tis true, there is some shew of proof offered there, that the phrase [holy mountain] v. 18. cannot belong to mount Tabor, being used by the Hebr: only for the mount Moriah, where the Temple was; But that argument is of ſmall validity, becauſe though Moriah be ordinarily ſtyled the holy mountain, and no other vouchſafed that title by the Jewes, becauſe of God's preſence peculiar to the Temple, which gave it the title of holineſſe, yet it is certain that other places, where God hath appeared to be preſent by his Angels, have by the Jewes and God himſelf been acknowledged and ſtyled holy (as when Moſes is commanded Act. 7. 33. to put off his ſhooes, for the place where he ſtands is holy ground) and it is evident that that glorious appearance, and cloud, and voice at mount Tabor were evidences of this preſence, which might therefore by analogie with the ſacred ſtyle, denominate it an holy mountain. To this purpoſe it is farther evident that S. Jude ver. 18. ſpeaking of the ſcoffers that ſhould come in the laſt time, walking after their own luſts, cites that prediction from the Apoſtles of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, v. 17. where it is reaſonable to beleive that this Epiſtle ch. 3. 3. is referred to, (as indeed a great part of the argument of this Epiſtle is there made uſe of) for in it thoſe very words are met with, (and are not ſo in any other Apoſtolick writing) Knowing this firſt that there ſhall come in the laſt daies ſcoffers, walking after their own luſts. From all theſe premiſes conſidered, it is abundantly clear, that if there be truth in this Epiſtle, (which they that acknowledge it a place in the Canon, and onely queſtion its being written by S. Peter, cannot well be allowed to doubt of) or if S. Jude ſay true, then S. Peter was the author of it, For there are not greater and ſurer evidences of any Epiſtles being written by the acknowledged author of it, then are theſe forenamed, the title of Simon Peter, the addition of an Apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, the mention of a former Epiſtle, the having been with Chriſt on mount Tabor, the being called an Apoſtle of Chriſt by S. Jude; All which in all copies ſtand unmoved, to ſecure the authority of this Epiſtle, and to convince us of the Author of it. As for the argument taken from the time of S. Peter's death before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, &c. it is void of all force; For, (to grant all the former parts of it, that S. Peter died under Nero, that that was before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, that all Chriſtians expected that deſtruction before the end of the world) 1. It doth not follow, that if this Epiſtle were written by Symeon, it ſhall therefore fall to be after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, for James the firſt Biſhop was put to death, and ſo Symeon ſucceeded in that ſea 8 years before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and 5 years before the death of S. Peter. 2*dly*, It is not true which is ſuggeſted in the argument, and on which one thing all the validitie of it depends, that this Epiſtle was written after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem. And for the onely proof of that, taken from hence, that the Author of this Epiſtle arms his readers with patience in expectation of the laſt day, that is as farre from truth alſo, there being no word in this Epiſtle to that matter. One paſſage there is which referres to the end of the world, chap. 3. ver. 7. but not as approaching or conceived by any to approach; But the other paſſages of the coming of the day of the Lord as a thief, and the like, belong all to that judgment on the Jewes, expreſſed in like phraſes by Chriſt, Mat. 24. and by the Apoſtles in their Epiſtles, and not to the day of univerſal doom or deſtruction of the whole world, (ſee chap. 3. note d.) Having thus anſwered the pretenſions againſt the Author of this Epiſtle, it remains that we inquire of the time of writing it, which by c. 1. 14. may juſtly be concluded to have been a little before his death, and that in the time of his laſt danger before his martyrdome, from the evident approach whereof, or revelation concerning it, he affirms himſelf to know, that the time of his putting off this his tabernacle, i. e. his death, πηχινή ἐστι, is very ſuddainly to come, very neer at hand. That Peter and Paul from ſeveral parts of their travails came to Rome about the twelfth of Nero, to defend, and comfort, and confirm the Church that was perſecuted there, hath been reaſonably concluded by Chronologers, And in this year Anno Chr: 67. about the beginning of October they are both thought to be caſt into priſon, and ſoon after put to death, And then this is the moſt probable time for the writing this Epiſtle, Which being ſo neer the warre, on which followed the deſtruction of the Jewes, it is evident what occaſioned the writing of this Epiſtle (and S. Jude's, which being on the ſame ſubject muſt be dated about the ſame time) viz: the confirming the perſecuted afflicted Chriſtians in their expectation of that deliverance, which they ſhould now ſhortly meet with, by the deſtruction of their perſecutors; The certainty of which he declares, as alſo the reaſons of its being thus long delayed, and the undiſcerniblenеſſe, when it comes, Fortifying them alſo againſt the inſuſions of the Gnoſticks, who took advantage of the continuing of their perſecutions ſo long, and much ſolicited and aſſaulted the conſtancy of the afflicted Chriſtians; Of whom he therefore warns them, and that by foretelling, that they ſhould be ſoon deſtroyed alſo, and all that were corrupted by them.

To all the Jews where ever they are diſperſed, (ſee 1 Pet. 1. 1.) which have received the faith of Chriſt, (and in that reſpect are as valuable in Gods ſight, as we the Apoſtles of Chriſt) that faith, I ſay, whoſe object is the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, our God, and Saviour, either as that ſignifies his way of juſtifying men now under the Goſpel (ſee note on Rom. 1. b.) or as it may note his fidelity, and juſtice, in performing what he hath promiſed us in the Goſpel.

2. I ſalute you, and wiſh you all that felicity, which I promiſe my ſelf you will enjoy by the receiving of the faith, and by your experience and evidence of God's goodneſſe, and faithfulneſſe to you in Jeſus Chriſt.

controlling omnipotent power, hath afforded us all things that pertain to felicity hereafter, or to piety here, by means of our faith and profeſſion or acknowledgment of Chriſt, who hath revealed himſelf unto us, and called us into his ſchool, by moſt convincing arguments of his authority and miſſion from heaven, firſt by that glorious act of the holy Ghoſt's deſcending upon him, and the angel ſaying from God [This is my beloved ſon, in whom I well pleaſed, (For that that is the meaning of the word Glory, ſee note on Mat. 3. k. 5. In reſpect of whom it is neceſſary that you be very careful and diligent, that conſtancy, courage, perſeverance (ſee note a) be ſuperſtructed on your profeſſion of the Chriſtian faith; that knowledge of myſteries be joyned to that courage, and that it ſupplant it not;

That ſtrict continence be one thing that accompanies that knowledge, then to that continence, in avoiding the pollutions of the fleſh, to which the Gnoſticks would ſeduce you, under pretence of myſterious knowledge, add a chearful patience, or reſolution of bearing whatſoever may fall on you from the enemies of your profeſſion, whether Jews or falſe heretical Chriſtians; To that patience, piety and frequenting of the publick ſervice of God, not giving over the aſſembly as ſome of the Hebrews did, Heb. 10. 25. to avoid perſecution;

8. For the practiſe of theſe virtues, eſpecially if they be in you in any eminent degree, will render you good and faithful ſervants of Chriſt, and ſuch as becomes your Chriſtian profeſſion.

And he that falls back into any of thoſe ſins, contrary to thoſe virtues, is like a purblind man that cannot ſee things that are at a diſtance from him, thinks (through this fault in his eyes, or forgetfulneſſe in his underſtanding) that Chriſtianity may give him liberty and licenſe, (as the Gnoſticks ſaith it doth) whereas it was not long ago that Chriſtianity call'd him out of theſe pollutions, and wrought this purification upon him, which is directly contrary thereunto.

For by this means you ſhall be capable of being the men of which the kingdome of Chriſt ſhall be made up, that kingdome which begins in the vengeance executed on beleiving impenitent Jews, and in delivering the unbeleivers, and ſhall laſt moſt gloriouſly for ever in ſubduing of enemies, and delivering of diſciples.

12. Wherefore * I will not be negligent to put you alwaies in remembrance of theſe things, though ye know them, and be eſtabliſhed in the preſent truth.]

12. The vaſtneſſe of your concernments herein, makes me thus ſollicitous to inculcate theſe things unto you, Not that I think you ignorant in this point of doctrine concerning the method that ſhall be uſed by Chriſt in erecting his kingdome here on earth, v 2. by coming in vengeance on the obdurate, and delivering the conſtant perſevering Chriſtians; for I am ſure you have been taught it over and over again, and ſufficiently inſtructed, and ſatisfied in the truth of it.

† But ſi

13. † Yea, I think it meet, as long as I am in this tabernacle, to ſtir you up by putting you in remembrance,]

14. Knowing that ſhortly I muſt put off this my tabernacle, even as our Lord Jeſus Chriſt hath ſhewed me.]

14. Knowing that the time of my diſſolution now ſuddenly approacheth, according as Chriſt when he foretold of ſome that ſhould ſurvive this coming of his to the deſtruction of the Jews, (which now I ſpeak of) gave an intimation to me, that I ſhould not, Joh. 21. 18. 22. and poſitively aſſigned, that I ſhould be crucified, as ere long I expect to be.

* But ſi

15. * Moreover, I will endevour, that you may be able after my deceaſe, to have theſe things alwaies in remembrance.]

15. And therefore I being to dy before this comes to paſſe, but many of you likely to live to ſee it, it is my duty and purpoſe by this Epiſtle to fix it in you, that when I am dead and gone, you may remember this certain truth of Chriſt's kingdome, and coming to deſtroy the Jewiſh unbeleivers and crucifiers, and to preſerve and reſcue the beleivers among them (ſee c. 2. 9.)

16. For we have not followed cunningly deviſed fables, when wee made known unto you the power and [c] coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, but were eye-witneſſes of his majeſty.]

16. For they are not phanſies or deceivable arguments upon which we have grounded this doctrine concerning Chriſt's coming in power to the deſtruction of his enemies, and reſcuing of beleivers, but the very things which we ſaw adumbrated, and heard diſcourſed on by Moſes and Elias (ſee note on Mar. 17. 2. and Lu. 9. 31. note b.) when I and James and John were with Chriſt on Mount Tabor, and ſaw the Majeſty that was inſtated on him at his transfiguration, Mat. 17.

17. For † he [f] received from God the father honour and glory, when there came ſuch a voice to him from the * excellent glory, This is my beloved ſon in whom I am well pleaſed.]

17. For at the time of his receiving that Majeſty from the Father by way of viſion, foretelling what ſhould ſoon be inſtated on him, there was a voice which came out of that ſhining cloud, Mat. 17. 5. and with it theſe words, Thou art my beloved ſon &c. which ſignified God's deſign of inſtating the kingdome on him. f.

† we alſo heard και ἀκουσαμεν *being ὀντες

18. † And this voice which came from heaven we heard, * when we were with him in the holy mount.]

18. And I alſo with James and John heard this voice which came out of the cloud Mat. 17. 5. being then with him on that mount, where he was transfigured, and which by the evident preſence of God by his Angels there, became an holy place, ſee note on the Title of this Epiſtle.

† And we have a more firm prophetick word δ, ἐχομεν βεβαιοτερον προφητικον λογον * morning ſtar

19. † We have alſo a more ſure word of prophecie, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that ſhineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the [g] * day-ſtar ariſe in your hearts,]

19. And beſide theſe adumbrations by way of viſion in the mount, we have many propheſies in the old teſtament concerning this matter, v. 12. of the deſtruction of the Jews, and preſerving of a remnant, which together with Chriſt's predictions Mat. 24. are yet a more firm ſure infallible argument to us then any other. And 'tis well done of you to ſtudy and obſerve theſe propheſies, which may ſtay your hearts in this ſtate of affliction and perſecution, until that day of your deliverance come, or till the forerunners of it, Lu. 21. 28. begin to ſhew themſelves unto you. g.

† of their own incitation, motion, letting looſe

20. Knowing this firſt, that no prophecie of the ſcripture is † of any private interpretation.] [h]

20. This being a principle known to all, that no Scripture-prophecie is without particular miſſion, and appointment from God, That which the prophets there have foretold being not the ſuggeſtions of their own ſpirits, what they thought good, but what God inſpired and moved them to, by his Spirit's coming upon them. h.

* For prophecy was not any time brought οὐ γαρ ποτε θεληματι ἀνθρωπου † being carried φερομενοι

21. * For the prophecie came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God ſpake † as they were moved by the holy Ghoſt.]

21. For none of the prophets of any time have undertaken that office on their own heads, or prophecied their own phanſies or perſwaſions, but all the Scripture-prophets have been men called and ſent by God on his meſſages, and inſpired and inſtructed by the holy Spirit of God, every word which they have delivered. And therefore you cannot run any hazard in depending upon that which they have foretold ſhall come to paſſe, in theſe, which they called the laſt days, Joel 2. 28. 30, 31, 32. and in many other places.

Notes on Chap. 1.

2. Ἀρετη

The word ἀρετη virtue, beſide the ordinary known notion of it for probity of manners among men, as the generical word, that contains all moral and Chriſtian virtues under it, (in which ſenſe it is uſed Phil. 4. 8.) doth in this chapter ſignifie two things, very diſtant from one another, and both of them differing from this; In this verſe it ſignifies the power of God, which he ſhewed in Chriſt, eſpecially the miracles which he was enabled to work, and ſo 'tis here joined with the glory; whether the deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt on him, and on the Apoſtles (which is ordinarily called δόξα led Schechina and δόξα glory, see Mat. 3. c.) or whether the glory that shone in his works and doctrine be meant by it. So 1 Pet. 2. 9. ἀρετὰς καλεσαντος Christ & the virtues (in the plural) of him that called us out of darkneſs into this great light, i. e. his miraculous power, divine affections and words together. But then in the 5th ver. of this chap: the word ſeems to have yet a third notion, and belonging there evidently to men, not God, as here, it cannot yet be fitly interpreted by that word Virtue, which is the general comprehenſive title of all virtues, for many of them are after named, as continence, patience, &c. and required to be ſuperſtructed upon this of ἀρετὴ virtue, which would not be ſo proper; but it ſeems rather to ſignifie (in that notion, wherein both the Greek ἀρετὴ and the Latine virtus are often uſed) ἀνδρειζεσθαι 1 Cor. 16. 13. manhood, courage, or fortitude, in adhering to Chriſt, Mat. 16. 24. which the Gnoſticks, againſt whom he armes them, would ſo fain rob them of, now in time of perſecutions; and ſo to their virtue or courage they muſt adde knowledge, i. e. that true Chriſtian knowledge, to which their ψευδώνυμος γνῶσις knowledge falſly ſo ſtyled was oppoſed; and to that, continence, contrary to their uncleanneſſe and filthineſſe, and to that, perſeverance &c. Juſt as 2 Cor. 6. 6. after patience in afflictions ver. 4. and purity, is γνῶσις knowledge, which again that it is ſet oppoſite to that pretended of the Gnoſticks, ſee the Context there, and note a. on that chapter.

b. φθείρεσθαι corrumpi, ſignifies ſometimes to be debauched to ſin, particularly, and in the moſt eminent manner, to thoſe ſins againſt nature, abominable heathen luſts, So 2 Cor. 7. 2. οὐδένα ἐφθείραμεν we have corrupted no man] ſeems to relate to thoſe falſe teachers, the Gnoſticks among them, who did thus corrupt and ſeduce their diſciples, and ſo διαφθείροντας τὴν γῆν c. 11. 3. So perhaps διαφθείροντας τὴν γῆν, Rev. 11. 18. corrupting the earth, ſee note c. So Epheſ. 4. 22. the old heathen condition is called the old man, φθειρόμενον κατὰ τὰς ἐπιθυμίας τῆς ἀπάτης, corrupted according to thoſe luſts of deceit, i. e. the unnatural luſts of the heathen world, then brought into the Church by the falſe teachers, the Gnoſticks, So Jude 10. ἐν τούτοις φθείρονται, in theſe they are corrupted, noting their corrupt practiſes contrary to nature. Thus ἐκφθείρει in Ignatius Epiſt: ad Epheſ: is by the Tranſlator rendred Maſculorum concubitores, and by Heſychius μοιχοι, and ſo παιδοφθόρος in the Epiſtle of Barnabas, in this ſenſe, ſo vulgar in other authors. And thus it clearly ſignifies in this place, (and others of this Epiſtle) having [ἐν ἐπιθυμίᾳ in luſt] added to it, and [ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ, that is in the world] referring to thoſe unnatural Gentile practiſes. So φθορὰ corruption c. 2. 12. is all unnatural filthineſſe, ſee note on Rom. 8. 1. and note on 2 Pet. 2. 2.

c. γνῶσις The true notion of the word γνῶσις knowledge in this and many other places will be beſt diſcerned by obſerving that the word is uſed 1 Cor. 12. 8. as a peculiar χάρισμα or gift of the Spirit (ſee note on 1 Cor. 1. c. & 1 Pet. 3. c.) and ſignifies the underſtanding of the word of God, i. e. the ſcriptures, in the divine and more myſterious ſublime ſenſe, ſuch as the Judaizing Gnoſticks pretended to have an abſtract of, Rom. 2. 20. called there μόρφωσιν γνώσεως, ſuch as to which the Jewes pretend in their Cabala. So again c. 13. 2. where πᾶσαν γνῶσιν, all knowledge is the ſame with [εἰδῇ τὰ μυστήρια, know myſteries] precedent, and differs from πᾶσα πίστις, all faith in this, that πᾶσα γνῶσις all knowledge is that more ſubtile myſterious underſtanding of the Old Teſtament, and πᾶσα πίστις, all faith, is all kind of Chriſtian faith, even that, that hath the gift of miracles annexed to it. So again ver. 8. where 'tis mention'd as an extraordinary gift, and joyned with tongues, and prophecyings, ſo c. 14. 6. revelation, knowledge, tongues, prophecie, and from thence it comes to ſignifie κοινῶς the more exquiſite knowledge of Chriſt, and the myſteries of the Goſpel, as Col. 2. 3. the hidden treaſures of knowledge, which is alſo intimated by κλεῖδα τῆς γνώσεως, the key of knowledge, Lu. 11. 52. that knowledge which is lock'd up. So Rom. 11. 33. γνῶσις θεοῦ, the knowledge of God, of which there was ſuch a βάθος profundity, and c. 15. 14. πᾶσα γνῶσις the knowledge of all myſteries, That this is it that is ſpoken of 1 Cor. 8. 1. appears by that which is affirmed of it, that it doth φυσιοῖ, puffe up, for ſo knowledge of myſteries is of all things moſt apt to doe, So ver. 10. that knowledge which another looks on in thee with that reverence, and on occaſion of which, he, being not able to diſcern ſo ſubtilly, comes to ſin and periſh by reaſon of thy having and uſing it, ver. 11. So 2 Cor. 4. 6. the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jeſus Chriſt, i. e. the underſtanding of that great myſterie, wherein God exhibited himſelf to us in the perſon of Chriſt incarnate, So when we read [ὑπερπλεονάζουσα] abounding, or [ὑπερέχουσα] excelling joyned with it, Epheſ. 3. 19. & Phil. 3. 8. From theſe notions of the word it is that the Gnoſticks of thoſe times took their names, pretending to all ſecret myſterious underſtanding of the Old Teſtament, and grounding all the filthy paſſages of their doctrine upon ſeveral places ſo interpreted by them after their own polluted phanſies, as may be ſeen in Epiphanius. This is mentioned by the Apoſtle under the title of ψευδώνυμος γνῶσις knowledge falſly ſo called, 1 Tim. 6. 20. by them called γνῶσις knowledge, and the γνωστικοὶ knowing perſons, but, ſaith he, ψευδώνυμος very falſly ſo ſtyled by them, And according to this it is, that the Apoſtle Barnabas in his Epiſtle (thoſe fragments of it that are come to us) ſetting himſelf diſtinctly againſt theſe Gnoſticks, that out of the myſtical interpretation of the Old Teſtament, brought in many damnable doctrines, (not only the neceſſity of continuing circumciſion, &c. but the lawfulneſſe of all abominable unnatural filthineſſe, and withall the denying of Chriſt's coming really in the fleſh) ſets up another γνῶσις, or myſtical expoſition of the Old Teſtament, and in that whole Epiſtle interprets many places of ſcripture to the maintaining of Chriſtianity againſt them. And hence, I conceive, it is, that in this Epiſtle, which is ſo wholly deſigned as an antidote againſt the Gnoſticks (as the Epiſtle of S. Jude alſo is) and particularly againſt their abominable filthy practiſes, the word γνῶσις knowledge is uſed not for that χάρισμα or gift of myſterious knowledge, but for the true ſaving, Chriſtian knowledge in oppoſition to that pretended to by the Gnoſticks, and therefore it is here encompaſſed with virtue on one ſide, meaning by it courage and conſtancy in the faith (see note a.) so opposite to their doctrine of compliances, and ἐγκράτεια continence on the other side, and the adding of these one to another, courage to their faith, and continence to their γνῶσις knowledge, is by him advised to, on purpose to testifie and demonstrate their having forsaken the φθορὰ ἐν ἐπιθυμίᾳ ver. 4. those abominable lusts, ἐν κόσμῳ, so used in the heathen world, and brought into Christianity by the Gnosticks.

d. κλῆσις calling

ἐκλογὴ election

What is meant by κλῆσις calling, hath been said at large note on Mat. 20. c. the mercy of God in making them Christians, and so what by ἐκλογὴ election, note on 1 Pet. 2. b. that peculiar favour of being the remnant, to whom the promises of deliverance belonged, and in whom they should be fulfilled, when the rest of that people, remaining obdurate in their sins, should be destroyed. All the difficulty remaining is to determine what is meant by βεβαίαν ποιῆν, to make either, or both these firm, or sure. And first that this referres not to the assuring our selves of either, i. e. to our being confident that we are called or elected, to our acquiring any certainty of belief or firmness of hope in our own minds, that we are in the favour of God, which is ordinarily styled certitudo subjecti, the certainty of the subject, may appear by this, that there is in this verse no mention of either faith or hope, or any thing in us, but only of calling and election, which are acts of God's favour without and concerning us. The King's MS. reads it indeed with some change διὰ τ καλῶν ὑμῶν ἔργων βεβαίαν ὑμῖν τ παράκλησιν καὶ ἐκλογὴν ποιῆσαι, by your good works to make consolation and election firm to you, where consolation doth more sound to that sense, than calling could doe; But of that reading it is observable, 1. that the antient Latine that appears to have read the first part of it, as it is in the King's MS. διὰ τ καλῶν ἔργων by good works, doth not acknowledge the latter, but retains κλῆσιν calling with the other ordinary Copies, 2^dly, That the word Calling is oft in other places joyned with Election, but Consolation never, which is a farther prejudice against this reading, 3^dly, That if παράκλησιν consolation were retained, yet it must necessarily signifie that consolation, as it is afforded by God, not as it is in us, his real goodness to us, not our apprehension of it, so that it may agree with ἐκλογὴν election, which we know is God's electing or preferring of us, or the favour done to us by God, without any intimation of our apprehensions. 2^dly, this phrase cannot referre to the promises of God, so as to signifie our making them sure or firm, for they are certainly and immutably so already, and it is God, not we, that is to make them so, by performing them to us. It remains then that by this phrase βεβαίαν ποιῆσαι to make firm, must be meant that, which through the grace of God is in the Christians power by care and diligence to doe, viz. to qualifie themselves with a capacity of receiving the benefit, and fruit of these mercies, and favours of Christ, to remove the hinderances, which will keep them from being actually beneficial to us, and so to render them firm, i.e. effectual to the good of our souls. And all the promises of God being conditional, and our performance of that condition being from us required, that the favours of God bestowed on us, his calling and election, may be effectually such to us, really for our advantage, not our woe, the only way to make them effectual to us, is our discharging our parts, performing the condition, and to this it is that our diligence is here required, which cannot be available in any thing else. That this is the meaning of the words may appear by the like phrase, Rom. 4. 16. εἰς τὸ εἶναι βεβαίαν τ ἐπαγγελίαν παντὶ τῷ σπέρματι, that the promise may be firm to all the people, which no way referres or looks to their confidence or perswasion of it, nor to the firmness of the promise only, but to the benefit and fruit and effectualness of it to them, so Rom. 15. 8. Christ became a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, i.e. to make good God's promises to the Jewes, εἰς τὸ βεβαιῶσαι τὰς ἐπαγγελίας τ πατέρων, to make the promises of the fathers firm, i. e. effectual, to exhibite and perform them to them. So Heb. 2. 2. If the word which was spoken by Angels, i. e. the law given to Moses, be firm, i. e. were performed, failed not of the effect, (without any reference to their perswasion of it) for so 'tis expressed by what follows, and every transgression and disobedience received a just reward, i. e. the breaches of that law were actually punished. And accordingly here their diligence in making their calling and election firm] is taking care, that the mercies of God toward them in calling, and choosing, or preferring them before others, may prove effectual to them, i.e. that they may obtain that benefit, which was designed them by God in these mercies, and which they certainly shall obtain, if they perform what is required of them. Thus in a like phrase, to apprehend or lay hold on eternal life, ζωῆς 1 Tim. 6. 12. is but the interpretation of, fight the good fight, going before, The only way to the obtaining of that βραβεῖον or reward (like that in the Olympick games) which is given to none but conquerors, being the contending νομίμως, according to the laws of the agones, fighting and overcoming, which is expresst Phil. 3. 12. by διώκω εἰ καὶ καταλάβω, I pursue or run, if so be I may obtain.

That παρουσία Χριστοῦ the coming of Christ] signifies the remarkable destruction of the impenitent Jewes, and deliverance of the beleivers among them, hath been often shewed (see note on Mat. 24. b.) and particularly that 'tis called his coming with power, Mat. 24. v. 30. i.e. as a King or mighty person. Agreeably to that is here the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, δύναμις καὶ παρουσία] in this sense of his coming to discriminate between the persecutors, and disciples, so that one should be taken, and the other left, Mat. 24. 40. the obstinate obdurate Jewes to be utterly destroyed by the Roman Eagles, as by Christ's executioners, and the faithful among them delivered out of that ruine. And to that doth the context here, and almost all the rest of this Epistle direct those words, see c. 3. 1, & 4. All the difficulty will be, how that which here immediately follows, but were eye-witnesses of his majesty, can belong to this particularly. To which I answer that the word μεγαλειότης is there set to expresse that majesty, which was by way of vision represented, and instated on Christ, at the time of his transfiguration on mount Tabor, at which Peter was present as an αὐτόπτης or eye-witnesse. This is clear from v. 17. by the voice that came out unto him from the magnificent glory glory (i. e. from that ſplendid cloud, Mat. 17. 5. Mar. 9. 7. and Lu. 9. 35. and that glorious appearance of angels, called his glory, Lu. 9. 31, 32.) This is my beloved ſon &c. the very paſſage that is there mentioned. Now this Transfiguration was meant by Chriſt to give Peter and John ſome image and ſhadow of (a kind of parable to expreſs) this coming of Chriſt in this glorious manner againſt his crucifiers, and for the reſcue of all perſevering diſciples. This appears by theſe two circumſtances, 1. by the paſſage immediately precedent (with which the ſtory of the tranſfiguration connects, in all the three Goſpels, where 'tis mentioned) viz. that he that will ſave his life, i. e. forſake Chriſtianity, to avoid the preſent preſſures, ſhall loſe it, i. e. ſhall be deſtroyed in that παρουσίᾳ: But he that will loſe his life for Chriſt's ſake, i. e. venture the utmoſt danger, rather than fall off from Chriſt, ſhall find, or ſave it, i. e. be thus delivered, at Chriſt's coming to execute vengeance on thoſe perſecuters, which are the very words again uſed by Chriſt in the deſcribing of that coming of his to the deſtruction of the Jews Lu. 17, 33. And farther, that he that ſhall be aſhamed of Chriſt, of him ſhall Chriſt be aſhamed, when he ſhall come in his own glory, and his Fathers, and the holy Angels, i. e. when he comes in this kingdome of his (not onely at the day of doom, but) peculiarly within the ſpace of the life of ſome by-ſtanders, as all the Goſpels agree in that place, and as at another time Joh. 21. Chriſt ſaith particularly of S. John, who lived to ſee it. Of which that he might give them ſome eſſay, he had three of them up to the mountain and was tranſfigured before them, gave them ſome glimpſe of that future glorious coming of his. The ſecond circumſtance to make this appear reaſonable, is the buſineſſe of the diſcourſe which was betwixt Moſes, and Elias, and Chriſt, at that time, which appears by Matthew and Mark to be the approach of the great and dreadful day of the Lord from that queſtion of the diſciples Mat. 17. 10. and Mar. 9. 11. Why then ſay the ſcribes, that Elias muſt firſt come? who, ſaith Malachi, was to come before that great and dreadful day, This S. Luke more particularly mentions, c. 9. 31. ἔλεγον τὴν ἔξοδον αὐτοῦ ἣν ἤμελλεν πληροῦν ἐν Ἱερουσαλὴμ, they ſpake of his exodus, which he was ready to perform at Jeruſalem, What this Ἔξοδος was, hath there been ſaid, ſee note on Lu. 9. b. viz. Chriſt's going out of this world, as Moſes went out of Ægypt, Heb. 11. 22. (which one ſtory gives that title of Exodus to that ſecond Book of Moſes ſo called) and to this is that great day of the Lord reſembled Jude 5. being attended 1. with the deſtruction (as of the Ægyptians there, the oppreſſors of him and the people of God, and after of the Iſraelites themſelves that beleived not, Jude 5. ſo) of the Jews here, the crucifiers of Chriſt, and perſecuters of Chriſtians, and withall of all vicious abominable Chriſtian profeſſors, that turn the Goſpel into licentiouſneſſe, and 2^dly, with the deliverance of God's people, as there of the children of Iſrael, ſo here of all the true Iſraelites, the faithful diſciples of Chriſt, that ſtick cloſe to him in deſpight of perſecuters and ſeducers. In reſpect of which as Moſes was their σωτὴρ, ſaviour or deliverer, and a God of vengeance to Pharaoh, &c. and as ſaviours are ſaid to judge, Obad. 21. ſo is this coming of Chriſt, the coming both of a King, and of a Saviour, to deſtroy enemies, and deliver friends, Which being the matter of Elias and Moſes's diſcourſe with Chriſt, at which S. Peter himſelf was preſent (and by thoſe very perſons ſomewhat was adumbrated alſo, Elias being he that called for fire from heaven, to conſume, and Moſes he that thus delivered the Iſraelites out of Ægypt) S. Peter here may very well mention it, as a demonſtrative evidence, by which he was able to make known unto them this power and coming, v. 16. i. e. this powerful regal coming of Chriſt, that now we ſpeak of.

What is meant here by λαβὼν παρὰ θεοῦ πατρὸς τιμὴν καὶ δόξαν, receiving from God the father honour and glory] will eaſily be gueſſed both by what hath been ſaid, note e, and eſpecially by the μεγαλειότης, majeſty of Chriſt, of wch they are ſaid to have been eye-witneſſes, For this verſe being by the γὰρ, for, annex'd as a proof to the former, it muſt follow that the honour and glory which Chriſt received here, v. 17. is that majeſty, which they ſaw, v. 16. That ſurely ſignified the dignity royal, that there by way of viſion, or prophecie, he was inſtated in, this Commiſſion ſent him from heaven, as it were, by the hands of two great men, Moſes and Elias, who alſo talk'd with him on this ſubject, and told him what ſhould befall him, firſt in his paſſage to this kingdome, and then how it ſhould be exerciſed by him upon his crucifiers; And then this muſt be the meaning of his receiving honour and glory here, i. e. this kingdome being thus (in viſion) inſtated on him, A ſolemnity of which is that which follows, φωνῆς ἐνεχθείσης τοιᾶσδε, this or ſuch a voice being brought to him, or delivered out of the magnificent glory, (i. e. out of the bright ſhining cloud (ſee note on Mat. 3. c.) that appeared in that viſion) This is my beloved ſon &c. ſignifying God's purpoſe of ruling the world by him, devolving the government of all upon him. Some place of miſtake here may be, by confounding together this ſolemnity, and this majeſty, from thence imagining that this voice from heaven was the τιμὴ καὶ δόξα honour and glory which he received; But this is a miſtake, it being firſt evident, that there were two things here mentioned of this viſion, one the object of their ſight, of which they were αὐτόπται eye-witneſſes, the other, of their hearing, or which ἀκούσαντες they heard. And the former of theſe was in ſeveral phraſes, the μεγαλειότης Majeſty, and τιμὴ καὶ δόξα honour and glory, that was veſted on him, the latter the proclamation, as it were, before him, when, in viſion he enters on this office, And of this it is ſaid, v. 18. καὶ ταύτην τὴν φωνὴν ἡμεῖς ἀκούσαμεν, This voice alſo we heard, as before they had ſeen the majeſty or honour and glory, making theſe, two diſparate things, as the lightning and the thunder, the one to the eye, the other to the ear, but both proofs of the ſame matter (the argument or ſubject here in hand) the kingdome which Chriſt had, at his reſurrection, entred on, and ſhould now ſhortly actually exerciſe it in the deſtroying of his crucifiers. That λαβὼν here in the Nominative hath no verb following to govern it, is after the manner of theſe Hebraizing writers, and in the conſtruction muſt be ſet, as if it were λαβόντι, the Genitive taken abſolutely.

The word ἡμέρα day, for Chriſt's coming in vengeance vengeance on his crucifiers, hath been interpreted formerly. See note on Heb. 10. 2. Rom. 13. 12. and so most particularly here it signifies, ἀμέρα διαυγάζουσα, the shining forth of that day, that had been before but obscurely prophecied of. Then for the word φωσφόρος, that is a known star, which as a πρόδρομος or harbinger to the day or Sun, ushers him into our Hemisphere. Proportionable to this are the particular remarkable passages which Christ foretold, as the immediate harbingers before this coming of his, such as are mentioned Lu. 21. 28. which when they begin to appear, then, saith he, lift up your heads, take comfort, διότι ἐγγίζει ἡ ἀπολύτρωσις ὑμῶν, for or because your redemption draweth neer. And so the Lucifer or morning star shall signifie the immediate forerunners of this day, which till it come, they must content themselves with the darker prophecies, and sustain themselves by that means. And if the addition of ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ὑμῶν in your hearts wherein the Phosphorus is said to arise, be thought to resist this interpretation, the account of that is ready, 1. That the rising of the Phosphorus here not being literally to be understood, was by this addition very fitly confined to the metaphorical notation, [in our hearts] being opposed to [in the heavens] 2. That our hearts being the seat of practical judgment, by which we ponder, and consider, this morning star, signifying the forerunners of that eminent, famous day, will then be said to arise in our hearts, when we, by consideration of the predictions, come to take notice of them as such. As the faithful are in story said to have done, when seeing the Roman armies to have begirt Jerusalem, they from thence concluded according to Christ's words, that the destruction thereof was nigh, and thereupon, as soon as they had the advantage of the siege being raised, they fled out of the city to Pella, and there continued.

Ἔπαυσις] here seems to be an agonistical word, to signifie the starting, or watch-word, or signe, upon which the racers set out, or begin their course. The place from whence they set out is called ἔφεσις, where when they set out, they are said to be let loose, and this is literally ἄφεσις; To this is the sending of prophets here compared, who are said to run, Jer. 23. 21. Ezech. 13. 6. 7. They run, and I sent them not, i. e. οὐκ ἐπαύσατο, I gave them no watch-word to run, as in the Psalmist, God gave the word, great was the company of preachers. When any undertakes to prophecie without God's sending, this is ἰδίας ἐπαύσεως, of his own starting, and this is here denied of the prophets of the Old Testament, for, as it follows, οὐ θελήματι ἀνθρώπου ἠνέχθη ποτέ, it was never brought by the will of man, i. e. 'twas never ἰδίᾳ ἐπαύσεως, of their own incitation, but holy men φερόμενοι ὑπὸ πνεύματος, carried by the Spirit, θεοπνευστούμενοι inspired and carried by God, did prophecie &c.

CHAP. II.

Paraphrase.

1. BUt there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, * even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction.]

1. But as among those prophets sent, and incited by the holy Ghost, c. 1. 21. some false ones also slily crept in, so also now according to Christ's prediction Mat. 24. 11. shall there be false teachers among you, viz. the Gnostick Christians, bringing into the true faith, under pretence of greater perfection, most destructive doctrines of liberty, and licentiousnesse, and that count it an indifferent thing to deny Christ in time of persecution, (see 1 Pet. 2. 21. and note on Rev. 2. b.) and forswear him who redeemed them, that are thus unlike him, as not to venture any danger for him, who dyed for them, and do also by this means most imprudently incur the dangers, which they desire (and pay so dear) to avoid, by complying with the Jews, come to speedy destruction with them, according to that of Christ, Mat. 16. 25.

* and that denying τὸν ἀγοράσαντα

2. And many shall follow † their pernicious ways, by reason of whom * the way of truth shall be evil spoken of.]

2. And these carnal doctrines of theirs shall have many followers, Mat. 24. 11. and thereby the glorious pure Gospel of Christ shall be much defamed, when Christian professors shall live such filthy lives.

† or filthinesse, for so many antient copies, the King's MS. and that in Magdalen Coll. Oxon. read δοξολογίαν or the glory of the truth, for the King's MS. reads ἡ δίξα

3. And † through covetousnesse shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you; whose judgement now of a long time lingreth not, and their damnation slumbreth not.]

3. And with cunning discourses shall they circumvent you, and gain you to all filthinesse, (see note on Ro. 1. h.) which shall within a while be most signally punished, with utter destruction here, and damnation attending it.

† with feigned speeches they will gain you to inordinate lusts, ἐν πλεονεξίᾳ πλαστοῖς λόγοις ὑμᾶς ἐμπορεύσονται

4. For if God spared not the Angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darknesse * to be reserved unto judgment;]

4. For if God, when the Angels rebelled against him punished them severely, and having decreed them to eternal hell, cast them presently out of heaven into the abysse, a kinde of dungeon, or dark prison, there to be reserved, as condemned malefactors, to the day of judgment, the time of their execution,

* or to keep them punished unto judgment, for the King's MS. reads εἰς κρίσιν κολαζόμενος τηρεῖν

5. And spared not the old world, but † saved Noah the eight person, a preacher of righteousnesse, bringing in the flood upon the world of the ungodly.]

5. And if he punish'd the whole world of sinners in Noahs time, bringing a deluge on them, and onely preserved Noah (with seven more) who warned them to amend their abominable lives, or else that vengeance would befall them,

† kept ἐφύλαξε them to ashes

6. * And turning the cities of Sodome and Gomorrha into ashes, condemned them with an overthrow, making them an ensample unto them that after should live ungodly.]

6. And if he adjudged the cities and suburbs of Sodome and Gomorrha to utter destruction by fire from heaven, and made them an exemplary spectacle, and document to all that should ever live in their sins,

* And condemned the cities to subversion, and burnt τὰς πόλεις—τεφρόσας κατεκρίνας κατέκρινε

7. At that time delivering Lot (and his familie) who was a perſon ſo farre from being guilty of that lewdneſſe and unnatural filthineſſe, that he was extremely vext, and moleſted by dwelling among thoſe that lived in thoſe villanies,

7. And delivered juſt Lot vexed with the † filthy converſation of the wicked.]

† converſation of thoſe wch broke all laws in their uncleanneſſe ἐν ἐπιθυμίᾳ ἀκαθαρσίας

8. (For he being a very pure and chaſt perſon, yet inhabiting among them that were ſo impure, was from day to day continually afflicted, and tormented, to ſee them doe as they did.)

8. (For that righteous man dwelling among them, in ſeeing and hearing, * vexed his righteous ſoul from day to day, with their unlawfull deeds)]

* tormented with their unlawful works) ἀθέμιτοις ἔργοις ἐβασάνιζεν)

9. If, I ſay, all theſe examples of vengeance on wicked obdurate rebels and carnal perſons, (the patterns of the crucifying Jews and lewd Gnoſticks) and withall, the deliverances afforded to the righteous in theſe paſſages of ſtory, be conſidered, we may then ſure learn from hence, how ready and able God now is, to reſcue the perſecuted conſtant Chriſtian out of the perſecuters hand, and to reſerve the perſecuters themſelves, and all wicked livers, that joyn or comply with them, by cutting them off here, to eternal perdition in another world, ſee note on Rom. 13. b.

9. The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and to reſerve the † unjuſt unto the day of judgment to be puniſhed ;]

10. Of this ſort eſpecially are the Gnoſticks, whoſe character it is to commit all filthineſſe, and to deſpiſe all kind of authority of magiſtrates or maſters (1 Tim. 3. 6.) a bold inſolent ſort of men, that can without any trembling or fear, ſpeak contumeliouſly of the Apoſtles themſelves, ſee note on Jude b.

10. But chiefly them that walk after the fleſh in the luſt of uncleanneſſe, and deſpiſe government : * Preſumptuous are they, ſelfwilled, they † are not afraid to ſpeak evil of dignities :]

13. And ſhall receive the reward of unrighteouſneſſe, as they that count it pleaſure to riot in the day time : ſpots they are, and blemiſhes, † ſporting themſelves in their own [b] * deceivings, while they feaſt with you,]

c. 14. Their eyes are ſo filled with unlawfull objects, that they can receive nothing elſe, nor ever take them off from beholding them, they corrupt young new-converted Chriſtians, and have their hearts as their eyes, alwaies buſied with baſe filthy thoughts, perſons fit for nothing but a curſe.

e. 17. Theſe take upon them to be fountains of all deep knowledge, but have no drop either of truth or good practiſe among them, they pretend to be ſublime above other men, but are onely like clouds in the aire, that darken the skie, but never diſtill into rain, and thoſe driven impetuouſly by every wind, be it never ſo black or dark, from one vicious helliſh doctrine, and practiſe to another, and to theſe black ſouls is reſerved in the juſt judgment of God eternal darkneſſe and blackneſſe.

18. For attributing divinity to Simon & Helena, and exalting them idolatrouſly above the God of Iſrael, (ſee note on Jude b.) they entice and catch again, bring back to all manner of carnality and filthineſſe thoſe who had not long ſince gotten out of the heathen beſtiality, (ſee note one Jude b.) and really given them over.

18. For when they ſpeak great ſwelling words of vanity, they * allure through the luſts of the fleſh † through much wantonneſſe thoſe that * were clean eſcaped from them who live in error.]

19. And this upon pretenſe of giving them liberty, whereas they are themſelves the greateſt ſlaves in the world, to wit, enſlaved to all baſeneſſe and filthineſſe (ſee note on ch. 1. a.) for the title of victory giving dominion, they muſt needs be ſlaves of thoſe luſts which have conquered them, to whom they have yeilded themſelves captives.

19. While they promiſe them liberty, they themſelves are the ſervants of corruption ; for of whom a man † is overcome, of the ſame is he brought in bondage.]

20. And this is ſo farre from being extenuated by the priviledge of their being Chriſtians, that it is become the greater and more dangerous guilt by this means, for certainly they that have been converted from all their heathen ſins by accepting of the faith of Chriſt, and then again relapſe and return to them, this latter ſtate of theirs, this Chriſtian heathenſime is worſe than their bare heathenſime at firſt,

21. For it had been more for the advantage of ſuch never to have been taught the doctrine of Chriſt and Chriſtian practiſe, than when they have undertaken to obey it, to fall back again into their heathen, vicious courſes,

* But that of the true proverb is befallen them, The dogge returning — ἀναστρέψας) αὐδὲς τὸ τῆς ἀληθοῦς παροιμίας, Κύων ἐπιστρέψας

22. But now their condition is a moſt profane unclean ſtate, beſt ſignified by a dogge and a ſwine, two moſt unclean profane creatures, which among the Jewes, ſtood interdicted both for ſacrifice and food, and are both obſerved proverbially for this quality, that the dogge when any thing lies upon his ſtomach, which cauſes him to vomit, when that trouble is over, he preſently licks up again, what he had before vomited up, (ſee Prov. 26. 11.) and the ſwine, when ſhe is waſhed never ſo clean, takes pleaſure to tumble again in the next mire ſhe comes to. f.

Notes on Chap. II.

2. Ἅλωσις

Γεγυμνάσμενα εἰς ἅλωσιν

εἰς φθορὰν

The word ἅλωσις, catching, is here in an active ſenſe, to prey, or take, or catch, and not to be taken, and γεγυμνάσμενα εἰς ἅλωσιν made for taking] are creatures, beaſts or birds, of prey, vultures, So Job 24. 5. לטרף (rendred by the Greek εἰς ἅλωσιν to catch) is in the Chaldee Paraphraſe expreſſed by riſing up early to their prey, So φθορὰν is alſo here in an active ſenſe, and ſo εἰς φθορὰν to, or for the corrupting, or defiling, or polluting of others. In reference to which it is that the creatures which are caught and torn by wild beaſts, the θηριάλωτα, are by the Law counted unclean or polluted, Lev. 17. 15. (ſee Excerpta Gemara tr: Sanhedr: c. 1. §. 7.) and are ordinarily by the Rabbines ſet to ſignifie all forbidden meats, as if the lungs of any thing have an hole in them, they call it טרפה that which is torn by wild beaſts, ſaith Elias Levita in Thisbi p. 139. And ſo theſe vicious, luſtful, filthy Gnoſticks, that like the Sodomites, force, and corrupt all that come in their way, and by making them their prey, doe alſo defile, and pollute them (as thoſe creatures that are torn by wild beaſts are accounted polluted) are here ſaid to be γεγυμνάσμενα εἰς ἅλωσιν καὶ φθορὰν, like thoſe land-vultures, born to take, and pollute, and nothing elſe, and I ſuppoſe are noted by ἅρπαγες forcers, ſnatchers, raviſhers, 1 Cor. 5. 10. ſee note h. on that chapter.

Ἅρπαγες

b. ἐν ἀπάταις

That which is read here ἐν ἀπάταις, in deceits, may not improbably be miſtaken by the ſcribe for ἐν ἀγάπαις αὐτῶν, in their Chriſtian feaſts, inſtituted in order to maintaining of charity, but defiled by the luxurie of carnal Goſpellers, Thus it is read in Jude v. 12. (which in moſt things is agreeable with this ſecond of Peter) and that verſe in the other parts of it is directly parallel to this (there σπιλάδες ſpots, as here σπίλοι καὶ μῶμοι, ſpots and blemiſhes, there συνευωχούμενοι, feaſting together, as here in the ſame word) and ſo probably alſo in this word, which differs ſo little from ἀπάταις, that it might be eaſily miſtaken for it.

c. Μοιχαλὶς

Μοιχαλὶς ſignifies diſtinctly an adultereſſe (not adulterie) and the phraſe of, having eyes full of her, is very agreeable to that of the Rhetorician cited by Plutarch de verecund: who deſcribing an impure unchaſt perſon. (an ἀναίσχυντον, one without ſhame) rhetorically ſaid of him, ὃ κοράς ἀλλὰ πόρνας ἐν τοῖς ὄμμασιν ἔχει that he had whores in his eyes, inſtead of κόρας; which is an equivocal word, and ſignifies both a maid (or virgine, oppoſite to πόρνη whore) and the pupilla oculi, the apple of the eye alſo, and is therefore made uſe of in that Rhetor.

d. Βοσὸρ

The name Boſor here is Beor in the Old Teſtament, the Hebrew being בעור, and the Chaldee pronouncing the ע by S. and accordingly the Arabick tranſlation reads here the ſon of Beor.

e. Λαῖλαψ

Λαῖλαψ is by Heſychius rendred καλαγὶς, and ἄνεμος συσσοβὸς. what καλαγὶς notes is by him beſt expreſſed elſwhere, ὑπερβολὴ ἀνέμου σοβεροῦ the violence of a ſtrong wind. To this Phavorinus adds σκότος μὲν συσσοβοῦς ἀνέμου, darkneſſe with a violent wind: And ſo it is here fitly ſet to ſignifie that black wind, as it were, of dark heathen errors and practiſes, by which theſe νεφέλαι cloud, to which S. Jude adds ἄνυδροι, empty, waterleſſe clouds, the Gnoſticks, are driven and carried about, to which therefore is apportion'd ὁ ζόφος τοῦ σκότους, the blackneſſe of darkneſſe for ever, in the end of the verſe.

f. The Hebrew word for a ſwine חזיר is deduced from חזר rediit, reverſus eſt, returning, to note this quality of the ſwine taken notice of by this proverb of returning to the mire again.

CHAP. III.

Paraphraſe.

1. THis ſecond Epiſtle, beloved, I now write unto you, in both which I ſtirre up your pure minds by way of remembrance,

1, 2, I have now written two Epiſtles to you, both to the ſame purpoſe, to be remembrancers to you whoſe minds remain yet

* your Apoſtles, for the King's MS. reads ἁγίων Ἀποστόλων

2. That ye may be mindfull of the words which were ſpoken before by the holy prophets, and of the commandments of * us the Apoſtles of the Lord and Saviour,] yet unrainted, of that which you cannot but have heard, being propheciedof in the Old Teſtament very frequently, Joel 2. and by Chriſt, Mat. 24. and by us Apoſtles of Chriſt (ſee a teſtimonie out of Lactantius in note a. on the title of the Epiſtle to the Romans) viz: that within a ſhort time there ſhould come a notable deſtruction upon the unbeleiving or impenitent Jews, and all the pollured Chriſtians among them, and a remarkable deliverance of all the perſevering Chriſtians, the one an act of Chriſt as Lord, the other as Saviour or deliverer.

a. 3. But before this come, there is one thing to precede, a very remarkable defection of many from the Chriſtian profeſſion, ſee 2 Theſſ. 2. 3. according to what was foretold by Chriſt Mat. 24. 12. and thoſe that thus forſake Chriſt, ſhall betake themſelves to all unclean practiſes, And therefore this is now to be expected.

3. Knowing this firſt, that there ſhall come in * the laſt days [a] ſcoffers, walking after their own luſts,] * the end of the days ἐπ' ἐσχάτου τῶν ἡμερῶν

b. 4. And they that do thus forſake the faith, ſhall as a ground of it, pretend, that they perceive themſelves cheated by thoſe prophecies, which have promiſed, and foretold this coming of his (ſee c. 1. and Mat. 24. b.) which, ſay they, is ſo far from being performed, that all things ſtand unchanged, in the ſame conſtant form, from the beginning of the world till now, ſave onely that all the men that have lived upon the earth (father Adam, Noah, Abraham, &c.) are dead, and others now live in their ſteads among us. But for any thing elſe, ſay they, things have gone in a ſetled conſtant courſe ever ſince the creation, without any diſcernible or obſervable change.

4. And ſaying, Where is the promiſe of his coming? for † [b] ſince the fathers fell aſleep, all things continue as they were, from the beginning of the creation.] † except that

c. d. 5, 6. To theſe I anſwer, and firſt for the latter of theſe (ſee note on Mat. 7. b.) Theſe Atheiſtical ſcoffers, that ſuppoſe or affirm that there hath been no conſiderable change ſince the creation, do not conſider what a change there was once in Noahs time, the whole world deſtroyed with a floud, for the ſins of impure impenitent ſinners, ſuch as theſe who now object thus, For the heavens being created at the beginning, and the earth ſo framed, that there was abundance of waters within the globe thereof, and it ſelf placed in the midſt of waters, in the clouds round about, God being pleaſed in the creation ſo to diſpoſe of it, in order to the puniſhing of wicked men, at length the windows of the heavens, i. e. the clouds were opened, and the fountains of the great deep broken up, Gen. 7. 11. and by this means the whole earth was covered and drowned by waters.

5. * For this they [c] willingly are ignorant of, that † by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth [d] ſtanding out of the water and in the water,

6. Whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, periſhed.] * For they that are of this mind, are ignorant † there were heavens from of old & the earth conſiſting of water & in the midſt of water, by the word of God, ἐξ ὕδατος καὶ διὰ ὕδατος συνεστῶσα τῷ τοῦ θεοῦ λόγῳ

e. 7. But the world which now is, by the ſame appointment of God, is now ſecured that it ſhall be drowned no more, (God having given his promiſe for it Gen. 9. 11.) nor ſuffer any other kind of deſtruction but by fire, which is the puniſhment to be expected by abominable men.

7. But [e] the heavens and the earth which are now, by the ſame word are kept in ſtore, reſerved unto fire againſt the day of judgement and perdition of ungodly men.]

8. This anſwer being firſt given to the latter part of the Atheiſt's objection v. 4. [that all things continue as they were ſince the creation] I now proceed in the ſecond place, (by way of regreſſus, ordinary in Scripture, ſee note on Mat. 7. b.) to anſwer the former part propoſed by way of queſtion, [where is the promiſe of his coming? i. e. Sure God's promiſe in the Old Teſtament repeated by Chriſt Mat. 24. of his coming to puniſh the obdurate Jews and Gnoſticks, and delivering the pure perſevering beleivers, is not performed.] And my anſwer is this, That you may be miſtaken in reckoning of times, in thinking that what the prophets have foretold of the later days, the times of the Meſſias, muſt be inſtantly performed, as ſoon as Chriſt is gone to heaven, or elſe 'twill not be performed at all, In this matter it muſt be conſidered who it is that makes the promiſe, v. 2. an infinite God, and then though forty years (for example) is a very great time among us men, whoſe lives are ſo ſhort, yet with God, who is infinite, a thouſand years is no conſiderable ſpace, but a very ſhort or ſmall duration, Pſal. 90. 4. and therefore though the prophecy be not yet fulfilled, about three or four and thirty years after Chriſt's departure from us, yet it may, and will moſt certainly, and that within few years now.

8. But, beloved, be not ignrant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thouſand years, and a thouſand years as one day.]

9. As for any ſlowneſſe in perfoeming his promiſe of coming, which they that expect and deſire to reap a ſudden fruit of it in their deliverance, or that others, which would corrupt them, and make them fall off through deſpair of it, are apt to charge upon God, it is meerly a miſtake in them, for it is not thus deferred out of want of kindneſſe to the perſevering Chriſtians, but out of abundance of patience and long-ſufferance to the worſt, and an earneſt deſire that they may all amend and be delivered, without which amendment, whenſoever this coming ſhall be, all are infallibly deſtroyed, ſee Act. 3. 19. note a.

9. The Lord is not ſlack concerning his promiſe, (as ſome men count ſlackneſſe) but is long-ſuffering to us ward, not willing that any ſhould periſh, but that all ſhould come to repentance.] for, for your ſake, for the King's MS. reads διʼ ὑμᾶς

f. g. 10. But this judgment of Chriſt ſo remarkable on the Jews ſhall now ſhortly come, and that very indiſcernibly, (ſee Lu. 17. 20. 1 Theſſ. 5. 2.) and the temple ſhall be ſuddenly deſtroyed, the greater part of it burnt, and the citie and people utterly conſumed, ſee note d. and Mat. 24. 30. and Act. 2. 19. 20.

10. But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night, in which the heavens ſhall paſſe away [f] with a great noiſe, and the elements † ſhall [g] melt with fervent heat, and the earth alſo, and the works that are therein ſhall be * burnt up.] * being on fire ſhall be diſſolved † conſumed καυσούμενα

11. Seing then this deſtruction ſhall thus involve all, and now approacheth ſo neer, what an engagement doth this lay upon us to live the moſt pure ſtrict lives that ever men lived?

11. Seeing then that all † theſe things ſhall be diſſolved, what manner of perſons ought ye to be in all holy converſation and godlineſſe?] † theſe ſhall διλυτων

12. Looking for the coming of Chriſt for our deliverance, and by our Chriſtian lives quickning and haſtning God to delay it no longer (ſee v. 9.) that coming of his, I ſay, which as it ſignifies great mercy to us, ſo it ſignifies very ſharp deſtruction to the whole Jewiſh ſtate, ſee note d.

12. Looking for and * haſting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire ſhall be diſſolved, and the elements ſhall melt with fervent heat.] * haſtning the coming σπεύδοντας τὴν

13. Never-

* But N

13. * Nevertheleſſe we, according to his promiſe, look for new heavens, and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteouſneſſe.]

13. In ſtead of which we look for a new, a Chriſtian ſtate, in which all proviſion is made by Chriſt for righteouſneſſe to inhabit, according to the promiſe of Chriſt, concerning the purity that Chriſt ſhould plant in the Evangelical ſtate, ſee note d. and Rev. 21. 1. and note a.

14. Wherefore, beloved, ſeeing that ye look for ſuch things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without ſpot and blameleſſe.]

14. This therefore being your expectation, you muſt in reaſon uſe all diligence to keep your ſelves from all pollution, ſpot, or blemiſh, from indulging to any of the carnal invitations that are now ſoliciting you, and ſo to continue till this coming of his, that you may then be found acceptable before him, and that then you may reap the profit of it, that all may be proſperous with you.

† or deliverance σωτηρίαν

15. And account that the long-ſuffering of our Lord is † ſalvation, even as our beloved brother Paul alſo, according to the wiſdome given unto him, hath written unto you.]

15. And reſolve that the end of God's delaying this judgement, this execution ſo long, hath been (ſee v. 9) on purpoſe to bring in, and encreaſe the number of convert Jews, thoſe to whom this deliverance is promiſed, according as S. Paul hath alſo ſaid, Rom. 2. 4, 5. and eſpecially Rom. 11. to which this place ſeems to refer, (ſee the ſum of that Chapter at the concluſion of the Paraphraſe of it)

* or, in all his Epiſtles, for the King's MS. leaves out ἐπὶ πάσαις

† among which things ſome are hard. ἐν αἷς ἐστί τινα δυσνόητα, but the King's MS. reads ἃ αἷς referring to Epiſtles.

16. * As alſo in all his Epiſtles, ſpeaking in them of theſe things, † in which are ſome things hard to be underſtood; which they that are unlearned and unſtable wreſt, as they do alſo the other ſcriptures, unto their own deſtruction.]

16. And indeed in moſt, if not in all his Epiſtles hath he ſaid ſomewhat of

h

this matter, concerning this famous day of vengeance on the obdurate Jews, and deliverance of the faithful, and deferring that day of deſtruction on the former, on purpoſe (v. 15.) to gather in as many of the latter as he could. So Ro. 9. 29 33. Ro. 10. 8, 9, 10 &c. Ro. 11. 5, Ro. 13. 11, 12, 1 Cor. 1. 7, 8. and c. 3. 13. 1 Theſſ. 2. 16. and c. 5. 1, 2, 3 9. and 2 Theſſ. 1. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. & c. 2. 1, 2, 3. 8. & 1 Tim. 4. 1. & c. 6. 14. In which matter ſome things there are concealed by God purpoſely from the knowledge of men and angels, as the punctual time of the coming of it, &c. from whence ſome unskilfull unſtable Chriſtians have taken occaſion to fall off from the faith of Chriſt, and ſo ruine themſelves by ſo doing, This they do by deductions from ſome places of ſcripture, wreſted by them (as it is ordinary with them to wreſt and diſtort the writings of the prophets &c.) but it is through their ignorance and ungroundedneſſe on the Chriſtian faith that they do ſo.

* by the ſeduction of abominable men τῇ τῶν ἀθέσμων πλάνῃ

17. Ye therefore, beloved, ſeeing ye know theſe things before, beware leſt ye alſo being led away * with the error of the wicked, fall from your own ſtedfaſtneſſe.]

17. You therefore my brethren whom I have thus timely warned, and inſtructed, ought to make this prudent uſe of my admonitions, to take all care that ye be not inſnared by the filthy unnatural practiſes of the Gnoſticks (ſee note on Jude b.) and ſo apoſtatize from the faith.

18. But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt: To him be glory both now and for ever. Amen.

18. But daily increaſe in the true profeſſion of the Goſpel, and in the knowledge and practiſe of the pure doctrine (in oppoſition to the Gnoſticks knowledge falſely ſo called, 1 Tim. 6. 20) delivered to us by Chriſt our eternal God and bleſſed Saviour, who muſt be for ever praiſed by us. Amen.

3. Ἐμπαῖκται

ἐμπαῖκται] ſcorners] here, and Jude 18. is anſwerable to the Hebrew לֵצִים very frequent in the Old Teſtament, which denotes the higheſt degree of defection from and renouncing of piety, ſo Pſ. 1. 1. of the three degrees of ungodly men the לֵצִים irriſores, ſcoffers or ſcorners are the laſt. By theſe therefore are fitly here noted the Chriſtians, which at this time, in great numbers, fell off to the Gnoſtick hereſie, and by ſo doing complyed and joined with the perſecuting Jews, and fell into all the villany in the world, expreſt here by τὰς ἰδίας αὐτῶν ἐπιθυμίας πορευόμενοι, walking, i. e. going on habitually, as in a courſe, according to their own deſires, or, (as when there was no King in Iſrael) every one doing that which was right in his own eyes, without any reſtraint of law, of nature, or Chriſt, &c. Of theſe S. Jude ſaith, that the Apoſtles of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt had foretold, they ſhould come in the laſt time, By the laſt time or days, meaning there, and here, the time immediately preceding the deſtruction of the Jews, (as hath been often ſhewed) And ſo, as Chriſt had foretold Mat. 24. 11. that at that point of time many falſe prophets ſhould ariſe, and deceive many, and again that many ſhould be ſcandalized, or fall off from Chriſt v. 10. and the love of many i. e. their zeal to the faith of Chriſt grow cold, v. 12. ſo the Apoſtles of Chriſt in their preachings, and in their Epiſtles had alſo frequently foretold this, 2 Theſſ. 2. 3. that this coming, or day of Chriſt, v. 1, 2. was not to be ἐὰν μὴ ἔλθῃ ἡ ἀποστασία πρῶτον unleſs the apoſtaſie firſt come, this apoſtaſie of the many Chriſtians to the foul Gnoſtick hereſie, and v. 5. ὑμῖν μνημονεύετε do you not remember that when I was with you, I told you theſe things? So 1 Tim. 4. 1. the Spirit ſaith expreſly, i. e. Chriſt, and his Apoſtles by their prophetick ſpirit every where, that in the laſt times ἀποστήσονταί τινες ἀπὸ τῆς πίστεως ſome ſhall apoſtatize from the faith, προσέχοντες πνεύμασι πλάνοις giving ear to impoſtor-ſpirits, the very interpretation of Chriſts πολλοὺς πλανήσουσι that theſe falſe teachers ſhould deceive many, and theſe deſcribed in the following words, as thoſe that had caſt off all Laws, forbidding to marry &c. and ſo walking after their own unnatural luſts. And to theſe he refers again 2 Tim. 3. 1. But know this, &c. By all which it appears, that theſe that were thus foreſeen that they ſhould fall off at this time, and ſo mentioned here v. 2. were the Gnoſtick heretick, and thoſe that were ſeduced by them, and ſo this weight there will be in the word πρῶτον, firſt] that as theſe were to apoſtatize thus, before that coming of Chriſt to the deſtruction of the Jews, ſo now in the diſcourſe of it, begun purpoſely

Ἐπιμένουσι τοῖς ἰδίοις ἐπιθυμίαις ἐπιστήσονται πλάνοις

πρῶτον

ἐπὶ τῆς παρουσίας τοῦ Χριστοῦ

v. 2.

ver. 2. this was the first thing to be set down, and that is the full meaning of Τοῦτο πρῶτον γινώσκοντες, Knowing this first.

b. Ἀφ' ἧς, à quâ, or, à quo, may be taken in respect of time, as an Epocha, from whence the writer takes his rise, from such or such a time, excluding what was before, and including all since. But it may also referre to matters, as well as to time, and then it notes no more than the excluding or excepting that which is named, and including all that is not named, and will then best be rendred [unlesse it be] or [except that] That this must be the notion of it here, and not the former, is evident by what follows, that all things remain in the same manner from the beginning of the creation, where the creation is an Epocha of a farre longer date, than that of the death of the fathers. Besides, it would be hard to define what fathers are here meant, if that were the meaning of it; For it cannot be appliable so to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the fathers of the people of the Jewes, for to confute this speech of these scoffers, the Apostle draws his proof from the times of the flood which was long before them. Which would not be a good way of arguing against them, if they had dated their observation no farther then the times of Abraham, for they might well acknowledge a change in the deluge, though none since Abraham. But in the other notion the matter is clear, From the creation of the world, say they, there hath been no change in any material thing, so as to be fit to deterre men from complying with the Jewes, for the avoiding of persecutions, so as to make men fear, that Christ will now come in any eminent manner to destroy the Jewes or Gnosticks, or to persevere in hope that he will deliver the persecuted Christians out of their hands One change they acknowledge there hath been in the world, some men have slept with their fathers, and others have lived in their stead, a succession of fathers and sons to reple sh the world, men have not been immortal, the fathers have died, and given way to their children, But except this (which is an unconsiderable matter, not pertinent to the point in hand) all things else, say they, have continued in the ordinary constant course, without any discernible interposing of God's providence to punish one, or to relieve another. This sure is the Atheists objection, occasioned by the delay of Christ's coming to destroy the Jewes. And this it is which is punctually confuted in the following verses, and so that must in all reason be the notation of ἀφ' ἧς which is most reconcileable with this.

c. The word θέλοντες] seems here to be taken in a sense not ordinary in other places, for being of opinion, or affirming, perhaps with this addition of asserting it magisterially, without any reason rendred for it, but a Sic volo &c. So I will, I cõmand, my will is my reason. Thus in Latine we are wont to use it, Qui hoc volunt, they that will this, for, they that are of this opinion, and thus ἃ βούλομαι 2 Cor. 1. 17. the things that I will, i.e. which I teach, or affirm, see note c. on that chapter. And so τοῦτο θέλοντες, they that will this] are, they that are of this mind, that affirm this.

d. The meaning of this fift verse will be best discern'd by considering it, as preparative to the sixt; For the one thing that was here to be affirmed and proved for the confuting of that Atheistical aphorism v. 4. that [there was no such thing as punishment inflicted on wicked men, or deliverance for the godly, to be expected from any overruling power of heaven, all things going on in a constant course, from the beginning of the world to that time,] was this, that the whole world was once drowned for the sins of the inhabitants, and that is said v. 6. But to prepare for this, here is, in this verse, a description of the frame of this lower world in the first creation, as it was formed τῷ τοῦ θεοῦ λόγῳ, by the word of God, that word, by which he said, Let there be light, and there was light, let there be a firmament, and there was so, and God saw that it was good, i. e. all that he did, was designed for such uses, as he in his wisdome thought agreeable. And that is thus described, ὄυρανοὶ ἦσαν ἔκπαλαι, there were heavens from of old, i. e. in the beginning the heavens were created, and so the earth also Gen. 1. 1. the earth so formed, that whensoever God pleased, it might be drowned without creating any new thing, For thus it was framed, The very globe of the earth consisted of a great quantity of waters, called the abysse or deep, Gen. 1. 1. so great as to cover the face of the earth, till God put it into one place, that drie land might appear, Gen. 1. 10. And this is it that now makes the whole body of the ocean, and all other rivers in the world, and besides great quantities of water in the bowels of the earth, breaking forth in fountains, that flow perpetually, and maintaining with supplies all the rivers, and seas in the world. And this may fitly owne the expression that is here used of the globe of the earth, that it is ἐξ ὕδατος καὶ διὰ ὕδατος συνεστῶσα, made up of water, hath abundance of water in its compasse, which is the water, which Gen. 1. 7. is called the water under the רקיע or expansion, i.e. under the body of the aire, and so makes up, as the Philosphers say, one globe with the earth. And so this part of the frame of the earth did competently prepare it for drowning, it being evident, that there was so much water in that globe of the earth, as, till it was put into receptacles, and cavities, it covered the face of the earth, no drie land appeared, Gen. 1 9. But beside this, there was great store of waters in the clouds, which is called the waters above the expansion, Gen. 1. 7. the lower region of the aire being between them, and the earth, and when God is pleased to loosen those clouds which is called opening the windows of heaven, then the rain falls, and adds to that store of waters, which was in the globe of the earth already. And these clouds encompassing the earth on every side, the earth is here also said to be συνεστῶσα δι' ὕδατος, placed in the midst of the waters, for so the preposition διὰ by] is set to render the בתוך in the midst] and so 'tis used by this author, 1 Pet. 3. 20. διεσώθησαν δι' ὕδατος, they were saved in the midst of water, and so σωθήσεται ὡς διὰ πυρός, he shall be saved but so as in the midst of fire, 1 Cor. 3. 15. So in Herodotus διὰ νήσων] is among, or in the midst of Islands. And so this part of the frame being added to the former, the clouds and cataracts incompassing the earth, and impendent over it, the earth was ascertain'd to be drown'd, and swallow'd up, whensoever God should let loose these cataracts upon it, as in the deluge he did, Gen. 7. 11. and so there is the

δι' ὃν — foundation of the [δι' ὃν by which] v.6. this frame, and diſpoſition of Gods, that the earth ſhould have ſo much water in its own boſome, and ſuch clouds of water encompaſſing it, was the means, by which the old world being drowned by water periſhed, and ſo this is the clear meaning of the place.

e. οἱ οὐρανοὶ καὶ ἡ γῆ — The phraſe οἱ οὐρανοὶ καὶ ἡ γῆ, the heavens and the earth, are here ſet to ſignifie the whole compages of this ſublunarie world, and all the creatures that are in it, all that was deſtroyed by the flood, and is now ſecured from periſhing ſo again, and is reſerved for fire, by which it is (by perpetual tradition) beleived, that the world ſhall finally be deſtroyed. The Hebrews have no one word to ſignifie this, but ordinarily uſe שמים וארץ the heavens and earth, And ſo the heavens, and elements, and earth, v.10, & 12. which would literally denote the world, ſignifie figuratively the whole city of Jeruſalem, temple, and palace, towres, and buildings of the city, not one ſignified by one, another by another, but all by all together, and proportionably to that, the new heavens and new earth are a Chriſtian people, ver. 13. And ſo 'tis ordinary in other expreſſions in that language, as, his body, his fleſh, and his bones, Eph.5.30 ſignifies him, and no more, and ſo the evening and the morning ſignifie the natural day, ſee note on Mat. 12.n. So the Elders, high Prieſts and Scribes every where in the Goſpels, ſignifie the Sanhedrim, and ſo in like manner the phraſe Father and mother, and wives and children and fields &c. ſignifies this one thing, poſſeſſions or comforts of life, and muſt ſo be rendred in the groſſe, and not in the retail, or elſe the true meaning of ſome places in the New Teſtament will not be intelligible, As *Mar.*10.30. when 'tis ſaid that he that leaves father and mother &c. ſhall receive an hundred fold more in this life, houſes and brethren and ſiſters and mothers, for 'tis clear enough that he ſhall not receive an hundred mothers; but as all theſe ſeverals put together, denote the comforts and poſſeſſions of this life, ſo it is to be expected that the promiſe of God will be performed to thoſe that part with any thing for Chriſt's ſake, ſee note on Epheſ. 5. h. and *Col.*1. c.

h. ἐν οἷς

In this place the King's MS. reading ἐν αἷς in which] in the feminine gender (which if it be true, then it muſt refer to the Epiſtles fore-mentioned) but other copies, and the printed ones generally, reading ἐν οἷς in the neuter, which cannot agree with Epiſtles, but with περὶ τούτων of theſe things] it is not certain, which reading muſt be adhered to. That which ſeems to me moſt probable, is, that the ordinary reading ſhould be retained, ἐν αἷς, &c. and that render'd [among which things ſome are hard to be underſtood &c.] If this be the ſenſe, then Saint Peter doth not at all give this character of any parts of S. Pauls Epiſtles, that they are δυσνόητα hard to be underſtood, but that among theſe things (of which S. Peter is now a treating, and of which, ſaith he, S. Paul hath written in all his Epiſtles, and generally the prophets of the Old, and the Apoſtles of the New Teſtament, v. 2.) τινὰ δυσνόητα ἐστὶ ſome are hard to be underſtood &c.] What the things here ſpoken of are, hath been cleared by the Paraphraſe of this, and the former Epiſtle, viz. in general, the coming of Chriſt to deſtroy his enneifiers, and deliver the pious Chriſtians out of their perſecutions. This is apparently ſpoken of by the prophets and by Chriſt, and by the Apoſtles, both in their preaching (ſee note a. on the title of the Epiſtle to the Romans) and in their Epiſtles, written but a little before it was to come. That it was ſo long deferred, was matter of ſome trouble to ſome, and objection againſt the truth of theſe predictions v. 4. to which this Apoſtle here anſwers v. 9. that the reaſon why God doth make ſome ſtay in this matter, is that men may have time to repent, and reform, and eſcape this vengeance, (which when it comes, will come ſo ſuddenly and unexpectedly, as to ſurprize many, that look not for it v. 10. and that he repeats again, v. 15. bidding them count the long-ſuffering of the Lord (i.e. this deferring his judgements) ſalvation, i. e. a means deſigned by God to bring men to repentance. And for this particular it is that he cites S. Paul, as concurring with him in this account of the reaſon of Chriſts delaying his coming, adding onely this of S. Paul, that in all his Epiſtles, he hath ſpoken of theſe things. i. e. ſaid a great deal concerning this coming of Chriſt. Having gone thus far, he paſſeth his obſervation of the then preſent temper of men, and behaviour in this matter, that there were ſome giddy, unſetled Chriſtians, which upon occaſion of ſome things not ſo clearly revealed by thoſe that have foretold this coming of Chriſt, have fallen into pernicious errors, What things thoſe were which are here ſaid to be δυσνόητα hard to be underſtood, and what dangerous errors drawn from thence, will perhaps be hardly defined by us at this diſtance. That Cerinthus by miſunderſtanding ſome of theſe predictions came to think that Chriſt ſhould have a temporal kingdome upon earth, where men ſhould enjoy all carnality, ſee note on Rev. 2. a. and he and his followers may be thought to be theſe ἀστήρικτοι here, the unſtable Chriſtians, that diſtorted theſe predictions. Or becauſe it is added of the ſame men, that they doe diſtort other ſcriptures alſo to their own deſtruction, it will not ſo fitly be reſtrained to Cerinthus, but more generally be ſpoken of the Gnoſticks, who by a ſtrange liberty, which they uſed in expounding the Scriptures of the Old Teſtament (calling it γνῶσις knowledge of myſtical ſenſes) brought in moſt damnable doctrines of uncleanneſſe, &c. And theſe ſure are the men here ſpoken of, called unſtable, becauſe they fell off from the truth, and ἀθέσμων ἀμπαίκται ſcoffers, v. 3. as that notes Apoſtates (ſee note on Jude 18.) And having thus diſcovered, who the men were, it will be more poſſible by the ſame same clew to discover what the things were, which are by S. Peter called δυσνόητα, hard to be understood.] I shall here offer my conjecture. Our Saviour, when he foretells this his coming very particularly, Mat. 24. and defines the time so far, that it shall be certainly within the compasse of that generation, v. 34. (and in the life time of some that were there present, Mat. 16.28.) yet for the precise time of it, the day and houre, he pronounceth clearly that no man, nor angel, v. 36. (no nor the Son himself, Mar. 13.32.) knows of that, i.e. none but the Father. Accordingly he answers the Apostles Act. 1.7. demanding whether he would then (after his resurrection) restore the kingdome to Israel? It is not for you to know the times and the seasons, which the Father hath kept in his own power, i. e. the day, and houre in Matthew, the punctual time of this kingdome of God, this coming of Christ, God the Father had kept secret, revealed it neither to man nor Angel, neither should it be revealed to any. This I suppose is the meaning of 1 Thess. 5. 1, 2. that of the times and seasons, i. e. of the very time, which God in his wisdome had chosen for this remarkable coming of Christ upon his crucifiers, he needed not write, it being sufficiently known, that it was to come, as a theif in the night, i.e. not to be discerned before hand, In which place, that which is χρόνοι καὶ καιροὶ times and seasons v.1. is ἡμέρα κυρίου the day of the Lord v.2. just as Act. 1.7. the times and seasons are all one with the day and houre, Mat. 24. 36. and so in stead of no mans knowing of it Mat. 24. and Gods reserving it in his own power, so that it is not for them to know it, Act. 1.7. is there [the coming of that day as a theif in the night] by which may be concluded, that that phrase of that dayes coming as a theif in the night, is set to signifie the uncertainty, when that day would be; And so Christ explains that phrase; if the good man of the house knew in what watch the theif would come &c. intimating that the coming of a theif is supposed to bee unknown to him, that is to be robb'd by him. Now it is apparent that this saying of Christ's, in this sense, is here laid as the foundation of the discourse and words, which here wee are endevouring to explicate. But the day of the Lord shall come as a theif in the night, v. 10. that is, But the punctual time of this coming is unknown, upon which he builds all watching, and caution, and continual expectance, v. 12. And having added what advantage the faithful Christians shall receive by this means, peaceable days of serving Christ, expreſt by new heavens, and new earth, i. e. a new world, wherein dwelleth righteousnesse, which therefore he adviseth all to wait for, (for that is the meaning of προσδοκῶμεν not προσδοκῶμεν, let us (not we doe) expect them, and depend on them according to his promise) he then gives them an account, why 'tis thus long deferr'd, and adviseth all to make the right use of it, make it their season of repentance v. 15. which being confirmed by S. Pauls authority, he hath no more to add on this matter, but this, that the objection of the Apostates v. 3. against the truth of Christ's promise of coming in this matter, was founded onely in the obscurity, and unknownnesse of some particulars in this matter, which very probably signifies, that profest unintelligiblenesse of the punctual time of Christ's coming, which because no body would, or could tell them, when it would be, therefore they will not wait for it, in purity, and sobriety, and practise of such Christian virtues, as were required to prepare them for it, when it should come, but walk after their own lusts v. 3. follow their own sensual courses, and perswade themselves, that it will never come, that no such judgement is likely to come at all upon them, and so that day comes upon them unawares, and they perish in it with the crucifiers, and so are fitly said to detort these δυσνόητα, the uncertainty of the punctual time (and some other such particulars) to their own destruction, to perish remarkably by this means. This is no improbable meaning of these words, compared with v. 3. from whence the rise of this discourse was taken. And if it be here objected, that this particular of the day and hour] was more then δυσνόητα, hard to be understood, God having kept it a perfect secret to himself, and so that this cannot be it, which is here spoken of, I answer, that words of this nature are not so strictly to be taken, as to be thought to signifie no more than hard; For when it is said of him that trusts in riches, that it is hard for him, to enter into the kingdome of God, that which is expreſt by δύσκολον hard, Mar. 10.24. is presently interpreted to be impossible, not onely by the matter which is such, but also by the similitude of the Camel entring through the eye of a needle, v. 25. So when the disciples complain of an hard saying, Joh. 6.60. it follows, who can hear it? i. e. no man can possibly be supposed to eat the Son of mans flesh, and so hard] is impossible] there also, i. e. morally so, that which cannot be done without great impietie, and so δυσνόητα here in the forementioned interpretation, are not absolutely impossible to be known, because God may, though he will not, reveal it, but which could not be understood, supposing that God (as Christ had said) would keep it in his own power, and reveal it to no man.

a. [a]FIRST EPISTLE GENERAL
† JOHN.

† the Apostle John, for the copies generally read τῆ Ἀποστόλῳ Ἰωάννῃ

3. Ἰωάννου ἐστὶν

OF the Author of this Epistle, that it was John the beloved disciple, the same that wrote the Gospel, and the Revelation, there hath never been any question in the Church of God, which hath from all times ἀναμφιβόλως, without any doubt, received it into the Canon. That he begins not, as the other Apostles (all save onely the Author to the Hebrews) had done all their Epistles, with his name, and expression of those to whom he wrote, by way of salutation, may most fitly be interpreted by his customary practise in his other writings, who in the Gospel scarce ever names himself, but chooses to use some circumlocution, as, he that saw, the disciple whom Jesus loved, he that lay leaning on Jesus bosome, and the like, and begins his discourse without one word of formality, or title, or preface, which all the other Evangelists had used. In what year of Christ this Epistle was written, is no otherwise certain, then by what may be collected from some passages in it, as c.2.18. where it seems to have been a little before the great destruction, which befell the Jewes, called by other Apostles [the day of the Lord, and the last day] but by him [ἐσχάτη ὥρα, the last hour, or part of that day] and again the true light already shining c. 2.8. i.e. the Christian, bright state turning out the Mosaical shadows, or typical services, which was finally to be done at the destruction of the Temple, And now already was done in some part. And the same again appears by the Ἀντίχριστοι, many counterfeit Christs and false prophets, that, in that 18th verse he saith, were then among them, such as Christ tells us, were to be the immediate forerunners of that destruction, Mat. 24. And accordingly the whole businesse of the Epistle is to encourage them, chap. 1. 4. to confirm the faith, and constancy of the Christian professors, who were now solicited vehemently by these seducers, and the Church torn asunder in every place by the Gnosticks, (the followers of Simon) who now denied the reality of Christ's coming in the flesh, and would no longer confesse a crucified Christ, or venture any persecutions for that confession. That it was called antiently the Epistle to the Parthians, is affirmed by S. Augustine, meaning thereby those converted Jewes, which lived beyond Euphrates, of which there were great multitudes, saith Josephus, Ant: l.18. c.12. And to them it is not improbable it was written.

CHAP. I.

1. That which from the beginning of the world was in the decree and purpose of God (and was afterward foretold by him) but by us the Apostles of Christ heard from God speaking from heaven, and really beheld and looked on by us, known and testified by all our senses, concerning Christ and the Gospel of Christ, shewing us the way to life eternal,

1. THAT which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled * of the word of life,]

2. († For the life was manifested, and we have * seen it, and bear witnesse, and shew unto you that eternal life which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us.)]

* concerning περὶ
† And καὶ
* seen, and ἑωράκαμεν, καὶ

2. (Which Christ and which Gospel were revealed unto us visibly and discernibly, of which I can testifie as an eyewitnesse, and doe therefore now declare to you Christ the fountain of eternal life, who from all eternity continued with the Father, and at last became man, and was clearly revealed to us.)

3. What, I say, we know thus assuredly, that we make known to you, that you may partake with us in it, and that participation be of all others the most blessed desirable participation, (see Act. 2. d.) a participation of knowledge, and grace, and immortality, and that with God himself through Christ Jesus.

3. That which we have seen and heard, declare we unto you, that ye also may † have fellowship with us; * and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his son Jesus Christ.]

† partake with us κοινωνίαν ἔχητε μεθ' ἡμῶν
* and our partnership be μετὰ τοῦ πατρὸς καὶ μετὰ τοῦ υἱοῦ αὐτοῦ

4. This Epistle, and, in it, this testimony doe I write unto you, for your encouragement in the profession of the Gospel, which many Gnosticks and false Christs are apt to shake you out of.

4. And these things we write unto you, that your joy may be † full.]

† completed πεπληρωμένη

5. And this is the summe of the Gospel preached by Christ, which we now testifie unto you, that all purity is required of you, that all God's commands are pure, and that there is nothing which hath any degree of impurity in it, which God in Christ doth not now abominate, but on the other side, a farre greater purity now required than before, which may sufficiently arm you against

a.

5. This then is the message which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, that God is [a] light, and in him is no darknesse at all.]

against all the deceits of the Gnosticks, which under the notion of Christian liberty, are apt to lead you into all the impurity in the world.

* partnership κοινωνιαν

6. If we say that we have * fellowship with him and walk in darkneſſe, we lie, and doe not the truth.] 6. If we say we are partakers of his purity, or have any likeneſſe or conformity with him, and live in any impure course, as the Gnosticks doe, we neither speak nor act according to the Gospel, which prohibits and interdicts all such waies as they daily and avowedly practiſe.

† or we have partneſſhip with him, for though in the King's MS. there be here a lacuna, yet the space is not large enough for ἀυτῷ, but fit for ἀυτ, and this is agreeable with v. 6.

7. But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, † we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his son cleanseth us from all sin.] 7. But if we live pure lives, as he is perfectly pure, then we partake with Christ of his graces, and resemble him in his purity, (see v. 3. and v. 6.) and the death of Christ is beneficial (to us, who thus imitate his purity) to cleanse us from all the guilt of past sins, and present infirmities.

8. If we say that we have * no sin, we deceive our selves, and the truth is not in us.] 8. All these mens pretensions to perfection are a perfect cheating of themselves. Whosoever conceive, as the Gnosticks doe, (calling themselves, The perfect &c.) that such actions, as are done by them, are reconcileable with perfection, or innocence, they most miserably deceive themselves, and must know that they are so farre from any state of perfection, that they act quite contrary to the rule, which the Gospel gives for the regulating of mens lives.

9. If we confeſſe our sins, he is faithfull and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousneſſe.] 9. The only way is to repent & acknowledge what we have done amiſſe, and then God, having promised pardon to all humble penitents upon sincere reformation is obliged in fidelity, and justice to make good this promise to you, to free you from all punishment of sin; And no other course but this will render you capable of his mercy.

10. If we say that we have not sinned, we b make him a liar, and his word is not in us.] b. 10. Nay they that live such lives, as these men, and yet pretend to perfection, doe not onely lie, v. 6. deceive themselves, v. 8. but proceed farther, and make God a lyar, who having sent Christ into the world to reveal his will, to give certain rules of life, to define what is now sin, and what is not, hath universally defined such actions, as are committed by these pretenders to perfection, to be horrible and damning sins, and therefore they that doe thus, and yet thus pretend, give God the lie, and manifest how farre they are from obeying his commands, living according to Gods will.

Notes on Chap. 1.

a. φῶς light] The word φῶς light is a figurative expression to signifie the most perfect, immaculate purity; and σκότος, darkneſſe] is directly the contrary, mixture of all impurity: The affirming of which concerning God, that he is perfect purity, without any mixture of impurity, is no such strange thing, as that the Apostle should introduce it with so much ceremony, as here we see made use of, That which we have heard and seen, which we have looked on, and our hands have felt. v. 1. What we have seen, we declare, v. 3. and, This is that message which we declare, ver. 5. That which all this solemnity was thought fit to introduce, was certainly somewhat either doubted of, and questioned by the doctrines, or opposed and resisted by the lives of those, to whom he writes. And that which seems most probable to be the full importance of it, is in the general to denote the great perfection of purity, which is now commanded in the Christian law, and more particularly the great obligation that lies upon Christians not to make that profession a pretense, or excuse for the favouring themselves in any degree of liberty or impurity. Christ came certainly from God to declare his will unto us, That God a God of all purity, and consequently his commandments which Christ came to reveale (like himself) made up of severe rules of purity, And then how contrary to all piety and Christianity must the Gnostick infusions necessarily be, which allow and practise all impurities, and make them a special part of their religion, and call themselves τέλειοι and γνωστικοὶ perfect and knowing men, beyond all others, and living in a sink of all uncleanneſſe, say they have not sinned, for all this, v. 10?

ὁ Ἀκηκοαμεν

Ψευδῆ ποιεῖν αὐτὸν

What it is [to make God a lyar] hath no great difficulty in it, it is certainly to deny the truth of that which God hath somewhere affirmed, And so 'tis used c. 5. 10. The greater question is, wherein the truth of this affirmation here is founded, that if we say, we have not sinned, we thus deny the truth of what God hath affirm'd, or give God the lie. The best way of deciding this, will sure be taken from the context, where, v. 6. the foundation of this speech is laid. There it is, If we say we have fellowship or partnership with God, and walk in darkneſs, we lie and doe not the truth. There certainly we may discern, who are the [we] that are here spoken of, viz. not the Apostle, and the pious Christians (for the first person doth not alwaies signifie so, but is used to personate any other, that the Apostle would speak of, see Rom. 7. note d.) but those that are supposed to walk in darkneſſe, i. e. to go on in unchristian sinnes, and yet to pretend partnership with God, i. e. to a state of great innocence and perfection. These are certainly the Gnostick hereticks, whose character that is, to live in all carnality, and uncharitableneſſe, &c. and yet to pretend themselves to be the most perfect men; Of those he there saith, that they lie notoriously, their foul actions, and pretensions to perfection are very contrary, and they doe not the truth, they live contrary to that rule of life, which as Christians they have received to live by. To these same persons he proceeds ver. 7. to tell the positive truth, contrary to their lie, that if they walk in the light, i. e. live Christian lives of purity, and charity, then they may truly be said to have partnership with him, (as the King's MS. seems to have read ἀυτῷ and not ἀλλήλων, and as is most agreeable with v. 6.) i. e. to be blameleſſe, pious, perfect men, and then for any frailties, or forsaken sins, the blood of of Chriſt is accepted as a ſacrifice of expiation for ſuch. This is again ſaid (both in the former, and latter part of it, v. 8, 9. but with ſome little change of the phraſe, which yet muſt ſure be interpreted by analogie with the former, If we ſay ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ ἔχομεν we have not ſin, that is all one with the precedent, [we have partnerſhip with him] for ſinleſneſſe is that property of Gods, which they pretended to be communicated to them, and then though there be nothing in that verſe anſwerable to their walking in darkneſſe, ver. 6. yet the perſons being ſtill ſuppoſed the ſame, that are ſpoken of in both verſes, the impious, carnal Gnoſticks, this of their wicked lives is ſuppoſed in the 8th ver. having been already, ver. 6. ſufficiently expreſt; and ſo as of them, whoſe lives of carnality and pretenſions of perfection were ſo contrary, it had been affirmed ver. 6. that they lie, and doe not the truth, ſo in that 8th verſe, 'tis ſaid with little change, they deceive themſelves, and the truth is not in them, which only adds to the former, the conſideration of their danger, that they thus brought upon themſelves, they flattered themſelves to their ruine, whereas v. 9. If they would acknowledge their ſins and danger, and forſake them, and flie to God for pardon upon repentance, he having promiſed it to ſuch, would be faithfull and juſt to forgive them their ſins, would deal with them according to his promiſe. And then follows v. 10. If we ſay that we have not ſinned (which is directly all one with [we have not ſin] ver. 8. ſee note on ch. 3. a.) i. e. If theſe men that thus live, pretend ſtill that they are the perfect, (as of their followers in Irenæus we read, that they called themſelves the ſpiritual, and affirmed that all the foulеſt actions did no more pollute them, then gold was polluted by being in the mire, or the ſunbeams by ſhining on a dunghill) they make God a lyar, (which is an addition to their lying firſt, ver. 6. and then deceiving themſelves ver. 8. and ſo frees theſe repetitions from tautologie) i. e. directly give God the lie, who hath every where declared ſuch actions, as theſe men practiſed confidently, (abominable pollutions &c.) to be moſt vile, and moſt puniſhable ſins. And ſo this appears to be the full meaning of this verſe, and being ſo, leaves no place of diſputing from hence, whether of any regenerate man it can be ſaid at any time, that he hath not ſinned (in that notion, which belongs to that phraſe in theſe Epiſtles of S. John, and is explained note a. on ch. 3. to belong to wilfull, adviſed, deliberate ſin) for ſure theſe Gnoſtick, ſoul livers were farre from regenerate men. That this is the full meaning of the place will farther appear by the words immediately ſubſequent, chap. 2. 1. Theſe things I write unto you that you ſin not, Which are very fitly adapted to this purpoſe, for there is no ſuch way to perſwade men not to fall off into thoſe ſoul ſins, that now ſollicited them, as this, of undeceiving them in this point, and aſſuring them, that if they lived Gnoſtick lives, they ſhould never be deemed perfect men, which as long as they entertained themſelves with any hopes of, nothing could convince them of the neceſſity of forſaking them. Whereas any other way of underſtanding the place would not tend to that end of exhorting, and warning them not to ſin. For if it were to be underſtood of all the beſt mens being guilty of ſinne, how could that be a way of inforcing on them their duty of not ſinning? Many more arguments might be uſed, by refuting all other imaginable interpretations of this place to confirm this, But this one of the context may be ſufficient, which accordingly in the next chapter purſues the ſame ſubject more expreſly. Hereby we know that we have known him, that we are true Gnoſticks indeed, (and not thoſe that falſly aſſume that name) truly perfect men, ſuch as Chriſtianity was deſigned to make us, if we keep his commandements, v. 3. practiſe thoſe virtues of purity and charity, which Chriſt commandeth, and then v. 4. juſt as here in this chapter, but more largely, and explicitly than in this verſe, He that ſaith, I have known him, i. e. calls himſelf a Gnoſtick, perfect man, and keepeth not his commandements, lives ſo contrary to the rules of piety, and purity, and all Chriſtian virtue, as theſe pretended Gnoſticks doe, ψεύστης ἐστὶν is a lyar, (juſt as c. 1. 6. we lie) and the truth is not in him, as c. 1. 8. the truth is not in us. But who ſo keepeth his word, v. 5. i. e. lives according to the ſtrict commands of Chriſt, ἀληθῶς ἐν τούτῳ in this man hath the love of God been truly perfected, he may on ſome grounds of truth, pretend to perfection of charity toward God, to which theſe Gnoſticks falſly pretended, and ſo was the occaſion of all this diſcourſe of pretended perfection, when men live in vile ſins, as after of that perfect love, which if truly ſuch, caſteth out fear, chap. 4. i.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. II.

1. My tender Chriſtians, I write this to you which I have laſt written, v. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. (ſee ch. 1. note b.) to deterre and forewarn you of this deceit, that ſo many are now fall'n into, that you may not be drawn away into the hereſie and impurities of the Gnoſticks, either by following them into unclean, beſtial ſins, or by depending on, and pretending to ſuch a perfection in your ſelves, which may ſecure you in any one act of deliberate ſin, but that if you have fallen, or ſhall fall into any ſuch act, that then preſently you confeſſe it, and forſake it freely, and lay hold on Chriſt, who (for your encouragement, you may know) is on God's right hand, acting as an advocate, for thoſe that have ſinned, and now reform, and amend their lives, and, when the Church praies to him for any lapſt ſinner, he is juſt and faithfull to perform his promiſe, to hear the Churches prayers, and to preſent them to his Father, and to manage all that belongs to ſuch, to their beſt advantage.

1. MY little children, theſe things write I unto you, that ye ſin not. And if any man ſin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jeſus Chriſt the righteous.]

2. And he, having entred by blood into the holy place, i. e. having died for us, and gone to heaven, where he is now inveſted with power, which he exerciſeth in our behalf, is a powerfull means of reconciling God to us, of obtaining free pardon for our ſins (on condition of our giving of our ſelves up to new life) and not for ours onely, but for all the ſins of all the world of men, (on condition of faith in Chriſt, and new life.)

2. And he is the propitiation for our ſins; and not for ours only, but alſo for the ſins of the whole world.]

3. And

† that we have known him, ἐν τούτῳ γινώσκομεν

3. And hereby we do know † that we know him, if we keep his commandments.]

3. And this is a character, by which it may be discerned whether we truly know Christ or no, (as the Gnosticks call themselves by that name, which signifies knowledge, 1 Tim. 6. 20.) i. e. whether we have a right notion of Christ as he is our advocate, v. 1. and propitiation for our sins, v. 2. and of his Gospel, or no, viz. If we do what he commandeth us to do, live obedient to the directions of Christ, (see note on c. 1. b.)

* I have known him, ἔγνωκα

4. He that saith, * I know him, and keepeth not his commandements, is a liar, and the truth is not him.]

4. He that undertaketh to be a Gnostick, or perfect Christian, i. e. one that hath more perfection of divine knowledge, and love of God, v. 5. then all others, if he expresse not this in a pure, and holy life, is the greatest hypocrite in the world, (see c. 1. note b.)

† in this man hath the love of God been truly perfected, ἀληθῶς ἐν τούτῳ ἡ ἀγάπη τοῦ θεοῦ τετελείωται

5. But whoso keepeth his word, † in him verily is the love of God perfected, hereby know we that we are in him.]

5. But the observing his commands is the only sure argument, that he that doth so, is a perfect lover of God, truly so called, (the appellation being falsely assumed by the Gnosticks) and an argument of evidence to himself, that he is a branch, a member of Christ, as the Gnosticks boast that they are, and that whatsoever they doe, it cannot make them cease to be so, (see note on c. 1. b.)

6. He that saith he abideth in him, ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked.]

6. He that pretends to be a member of Christ (see Joh. 15. 4.) doth by that engage himself to live as Christ lived, or if he doe not, to give over so pretending.

* or, the word which ye heard from the beginning, is the old commandment.

7. Brethren, I write no new commandment unto you, but an old commandment, which ye had * from the beginning: * the old commandment is the word which ye have heard from the beginning.]

7. 'Tis not any new matter, which I now discover, or write unto you, but that which you were taught at the first preaching the faith unto you, and that which was taught you so early may deserve to be styled an old commandment. 2.

† a thing which is true in it self, ἐστὶν ἀληθὲς ὃ ἐστιν

* or in us because the shadow passeth, for the King's MS. reads ὅτι ἡμῖν, ὅτι ἡ σκιὰ παράγεται

† already ἤδη

8. Again, a new commandment I write unto you, † which thing is true in him and * in you: because the darkness is past, and the true light † now shineth.]

8. 'Tis that indeed that Christ called a new commandment, and so it is in comparison with the Mosaical law, to which Christ hath added some degrees of perfection, but that is no prejudice to it, it is not the less true for being so, nor the less considerable to you, but ought in all reason (as proclaim'd by God from heaven, and Christ sent on purpose to preach it) to be looked on as a thing wherein we are at this time concerned most particularly, those dark imperfect shadows of the Mosaical œconomy being now at an end, and the more perfect Christian precepts which are to take place, and to turn out the Mosaical performances, being already, as the Sun, risen, and shining in our Horizon, in full force, obligatory to all Christians.

9. He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, is in darkness even until now.]

9. This consideration obligeth you to all Christian practises, actions of light, particularly that of charity and kindness to all your fellow-Christians, contrary to those emulations, and contentions, and seditions, and persecuting of their fellow-Christians, that are observable in the Gnosticks among you.

* scandal σκάνδαλον

10. He that loveth his brother, abideth in the light, and there is no * occasion of stumbling in him.]

10. He that is thus charitably disposed, and inclined, is the true Christian, and hath little occasion to insnare him in any sin, little temptation to any ill, most of the sins that men fall into, flowing from this original of uncharitableness, see Mat. 6. 22.

11. But he that hateth his brother, is in darkness, and walketh in darkness, and knoweth not whither he goeth, because that darkness hath blinded his eyes.]

11. For as the dark keeps any man frō discerning which way to go, so doth uncharitableness obstruct all Christian practise.

12. I write unto you, little children, because your sins are forgiven you for his names sake.]

12. A precept I have v. 15. which I desire to enforce upon all sorts of you, 1. On the tender Christians among you, because God hath been so kind to you, as to forgive your sins for Christ's sake, which will be an engagement to you, v. 15. to take off your love from the world, and place it on God.

13. I write unto you, fathers, because ye have known him that is from the beginning. I have written unto you, young men, because you have overcome the wicked one. I write unto you, little children, because ye have known the Father.]

13. The same I have for you, the most ancient, for you know Christ, (which is agreeable to those of your age, to know the antient of days) and that may be an engagement to you, to love whom you know: And so 'tis likewise for young men, to whose age it is agreeable to entertain ambitions, and desires of conquering, and have been enabled by God to do so, to overcome the evil one, both the devil, and every other that can mean you any hurt, and (if you adhere fast to Christ) all temptations of the world or devil, Which sure is an engagement to you not to love the world which you have overcome. And for you little ones again, your knowing of the Father is an obligation to love him with a most filial love.

14. I have written unto you, fathers, because ye have known him that is from the beginning. I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong, and the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the wicked one.]

14. And again I reiterate and reinforce this exhortation upon you antient men. as I did before, to impresse it the deeper, and so on you young men also; and the exhortation on which I lay so much weight to you all, is this,

15. Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him.]

15. Love not the world, nor any thing in it, for whosoever doth so, that man hath not that love of God, which is prescribed now under the Gospel, of parting with all, when he calls for it, and following him.

16. For all that is in eſtimation in the world, thoſe things that tend to our ſenſual pleaſures, profits, honors, and the like, and the deſires that are fixed on thoſe objects, (which are ſo obſervable all of them in the Gnoſticks, 1. their filthy abominable luſts, 2. their love of the world, which makes them deny Chriſt, rather then incur perſecution by profeſſing him, and 3. their looking on themſelves as men of deepeſt knowledge, and priding themſelves in thoſe perfections) are all from an earthy, not an heavenly principle.

16. For all that is in the world, the luſt of the fleſh, the luſt of the eyes, and pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world.]

17. And all theſe, all wherein they ſo delight themſelves, what are they but poor momentany tranſitory things, whereas obedience to God's will helps us to perpetuity?

17. And the world paſſeth away, and the luſt thereof: but he that doth the will of God abideth for ever.]

b. c. 18. This diſſeminating of unchriſtian doctrines among you, is no more than what Chriſt foretold ſhould fall out about this time. For now the great day of deſtruction upon the obdurate Jewes, is cloſe at hand, (ſee note on Mat. 24. b. and Heb. 10. a.) and as Mat. 24. 5. 11, 12. 'tis foretold by Chriſt that immediately before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, there muſt be falſe Chriſts, i. e. ſome that take upon them to be ſent from God, as Chriſt was, and ſo to be counter-Chriſts, falſe counterfeits of the the true, and again falſe prophets, bringing in new doctrines, and pretending to do miracles to get authority to them, ſo now we ſee it fulfill'd, there having already appeared many, who undertake to be the ſaviours and redeemers of the Jewes, to reſcue them (which is their notion of a Meſſias) out of their conquerours hands, &c. and now falſe teachers, the Gnoſticks, under Simon the Magician; by whom therefore you ought not to bee ſeduced, but to look on them, as the men foretold by Chriſt, which ſhould, if it were poſſible, deceive the very elect, and by which we know infallibly that this is that time there prophecied of, which though it bring us ſome perſecutions at preſent, yet withal it ſignifies, that if we continue conſtant in the faith, we ſhall ſhortly be delivered.

18. Little children, it is the [b] laſt * time, and as you have heard that Antichriſt † ſhall come, even now are there [c] many Antichriſts, whereby we know that it is the laſt * time.]

* hour † cometh

19. The Antichriſts, or falſe teachers, that are now abroad, may perſwade you, and be conceived by you to be of the ſame piece with us diſciples, and Apoſtles, and Orthodox Chriſtians, and not to differ from us in any conſiderable matters, becauſe they lived in the ſame aſſembly with us, immediately before they thus went out, and taught theſe falſe doctrines among you; But let them not impoſe upon you thus: the truth is, they were not of us, or of the ſame faith with us, though they went out from among us, and an argument of that you may have from their leaving us, or going out from us; For if they had been of the ſame faith with us, what needed they to have ſeparated? they would certainly have continued communion with us; and their not doing ſo, is a manifeſtation, that though they did live among us, yet they were none of them of the ſame faith with us, when they thus forſook us.

19. They went out from us, but they were not of us: for if they had been of us, they would no doubt have continued with us: but they went out that they might bee made manifeſt, that they were not all of us.]

20. And that teſtimony of the truth of the Goſpel of Chriſt, which was given to it by the holy Ghoſt, is imparted to you, and gives you ſuch an aſſurance of the truth againſt theſe impoſtors, that you cannot in any reaſon be thus cheated by them, ſee note on Act. 10. c.

20. * But ye have an unction from the holy One, and ye know all things.] * And Kai

21. And conſequently my writing to you now, is not out of jealouſie, or ſuſpicion, that you are ignorant of the truth; for then I would write more largely on this matter, and give you the evidences, and proofs of all this, but I ſatisfie my ſelf with theſe brief admonitions, becauſe you are ſo firmly rooted in the truth, that you cannot but diſcern the difference of every ſuch falſe doctrine from the one revealed truth.

21. † I have not written unto you, becauſe ye know not the truth; but becauſe ye know it, and that no ly is of the truth.]

† I have written unto you not becauſe in hypoſa ejus ivri

22. There is no ſuch liar, ſuch dangerous falſe teacher as he that denies Jeſus to be the Meſſias, and thus do the ringleaders of the Gnoſtick hereſie (ſee note a.) Whoſoever doth ſo, is an Antichriſt, denying in effect both the Father and the Son, the Son directly, the Father by conſequence, becauſe he hath teſtified of Chriſt by miracles, and voice from heaven, which teſtimony of the Father is not true, if Jeſus be not the Chriſt.

22. Who is a liar, but he that denieth that Jeſus is the Chriſt? * he is Antichriſt, that denyeth the Father and the Son.

* This is the Antichriſt denying, Τοῦτο ἐστὶν ὁ ἀντιχριστος ὁ ἀρνούμενος

23. And ſo whoſoever denieth the Son to be the Meſſias, renounceth the Father alſo, who hath teſtified him to be ſo. And this do the followers of Simon, the Gnoſticks, who deny Chriſt to have been born, or lived, or died truly, but onely in appearance.

d. 23. Whoſoever denieth the Son, the ſame [d] hath not the Father, but he that acknowledgeth the Son, hath the Father alſo.]

24. You therefore, whatſoever your temptations be, forſake not the doctrine, which from the beginning of your Chriſtianity you have received: To which if you firmly adhere, if you continue in the conſtant profeſſion of the true faith of Chriſt, at firſt revealed to you, you ſhall continue alſo in the favour and love of God the father, and of Chriſt, which is reward ſufficient for that conſtancy.

24. Let that therefore abide in you which ye have heard from the beginning: if that which ye have heard from the beginning ſhall remain in you, ye alſo ſhall continue in the Son, and in the Father.]

25. And whatſoever hazard we run by ſo doing, it matters not, though it be to loſſe of life it ſelf, becauſe he hath promiſed eternal life to thoſe that ſtick faſt to him, though with the loſſe of this.

25. And this is the promiſe that he hath promiſed us, even eternal life.]

26. And this have I ſaid to arm you againſt the ſeducing Gnoſticks, &c. that are now among you, and are ſo ſollicitous to doe ſo.

26. Theſe things have I written unto you concerning them that ſeduce you.]

27. But

27. But the anointing which ye have received of him, abideth in you: and ye need not that any man teach you; but as the ſame anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie; and even as it hath taught you, * ye ſhall abide in him.]

27. And indeed I need give you no other armature againſt theſe, then what you have already, for the teſtimony of the holy Ghoſt, and ſo of God himſelf, given to the truth of that Goſpel, which hath been preached among you, is ſufficient to fortifie you, and that is ſtill among you, and you have no farther need of teſtimonies of that truth againſt all oppoſers and deceivers; Onely hold faſt and perſevere in that, which you have formerly been infallibly taught by that means, ſee ver. 20. And let not theſe ſeducers yet work upon you.

* or remain in him even now, or ſtill, for the Kgs MS. reads, and pounces it to, μένετε ἐν αὐτῷ καὶ ὑμεῖς.

28. And now, little children, abide in him, that when he ſhall appear, we may have confidence, and not be † aſhamed before him at his coming.]

28. I beſeech you, my tender children, keep faſt to Chriſt, unmoved, that when that great fatal day of viſitation comes, that coming of Chriſt ſo long expected (ſee note b. & Mat. 24. b.) wherein the obdurate unbeleivers ſhall be deſtroyed, and the beleivers delivered and preſerved, we may come with cheerfulneſſe and confidence (ſee Joh. 7. a.) and not be turned with ſhame from him, or as inconſtant (and ſo guilty) perſons, be aſhamed to meet him.

† aſhamed of, or from him, αἰσχυνθῶμεν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ

29. If ye know that he is righteous, * ye know that every one that doth righteouſneſſe is born of him.]

29. Reſolving of this, that Chriſt is a moſt juſt judge, and conſequently that every upright perſon is a child of his, like unto him, and certainly ſhall be uſed by him as a ſon, have all protection and inheritance from him.

† or know that alſo. for King's MS. reads γινώσκετε ὅτι καὶ ὑμεῖς

Notes on Chap. 11.

2. ἀπ' ἀρχῆς Παλαιὰ ἐντολὴ

There be in theſe two verſes, which ſeem perſpicuous, very many difficulties, which it will be fit to explicate. 1. What is meant by the beginning, and ſo by the old Commandment, which they had heard from thence. It hath been conceived by others, that the old commandment was that given to the Iſraelites by Moſes, and then the beginning muſt be the beginning of the Jewiſh Church under Moſes, And ſo there may be truth in it, that the commandment, which this Apoſtle now gives them (whether more generally, that they that profeſſe God, ſhould not fall into thoſe black heathen ſins, c. 1. 6. 8, 10. & c. 2. 1, 3. 4. or more particularly, that profeſſion of piety muſt carry charity to our brethren along with it, which is the precept immediately ſubjoyned ver. 9, 10, 11.) was the very doctrine, and commandment of Moſes, whom the Judaizers ſo zealouſly adhered to, and therefore they were not to look upon it, as any new, or ſtrange doctrine, brought in by Chriſt. But it muſt be remembred, that thoſe whom this Apoſtle here writes to, being thoſe, which had formerly by his preaching received the Chriſtian faith, and the end of this Epiſtle being to confirm their conſtancy, againſt the ſeducers, that were now amongſt them, it might be to them a ſufficient argument to receive, what now he ſaid to them, that it was no more than he had taught them, and they had abſolutely beleived, and entertained at the firſt preaching of the Goſpel unto them; For the Gnoſticks pretending to be perfect, and ſo that whatſoever they did, they ſinned not, (ſee note on c. 1. b.) that which the Apoſtle here from the beginning of the chapter deſires to impreſſe upon them, is the unreaſonableneſſe of this, the obeying the commands of God being the one thing wherein true perfection conſiſted, ver. 5. and the living of Chriſtian lives, after Chriſt's pattern, the only way to approve themſelves Chriſtians v. 6. And to this it will be moſt pertinent to apply theſe words of the Apoſtle, v. 7. following immediately upon thoſe; and then | from the beginning | muſt ſignifie from the beginning of the Apoſtles preaching, and their receiving the faith of Chriſt, thus that what he now ſaith unto them, they had once received for granted, when they firſt embraced the faith, And therefore why ſhould they now be led unto other perſwaſions, think they may live unchriſtian lives, and yet be perfect men, good Chriſtians. That this is the meaning of ἀπ' ἀρχῆς from the beginning] may be concluded from 2 Joh. 5 & 6. where the ſame phraſe is twice uſed, I write no new commandment to thee, but that which we had from the beginning, (& that in the ſame matter, ſpecified here againſt uncharitableneſſe, v. 9.) that we love one another, And v. 6. This is the commandment, that according as ye have heard from the beginning, ye ſhould walk in it. That this belongs to the true, pure, Chriſtian doctrine, taught them at the firſt planting of the faith among them, (and not to the precepts given to the Jewes by Moſes) and that in oppoſition to the new, heretical doctrines, lately brought into the Church of Chriſt by the Gnoſticks, may appear both by the antecedents and conſequents there. In the antecedents, v. 4. I rejoiced greatly, that I found of thy children walking in the truth, i. e. according to the pure Chriſtian doctrine of charity &c. as we have received commandment from the Father, referring to that voice of God in mount Tabor, in the hearing of this, and two other Apoſtles, that all were to hear Chriſt, i. e. practiſe what he had commanded, And upon that it follows, And now I beſeech thee, not as writing a new commandment, but that which we had (i. e. we Apoſtles had) from the beginning, when Chriſt firſt preached to us, that we love one another, that of charity being the precept, that Chriſt moſt early, and moſt earneſtly impreſt on his diſciples, By this ſhall all men know that you are my diſciples, if you love one another. So likewiſe appears by the conſequents, the mention of the many deceivers entred into the world v. 7. as the reaſon, why he inculcates that commandment which they had had from the beginning, For many deceivers &c. This concludes that the doctrine which he thus inculcates, was it, which they had beleived, before theſe deceivers came, and ſo fitly belongs to that doctrine, which from the beginning of their Chriſtianity they had entertained, and were now in danger to be ſeduced out of it, if they did not take care, to make good their conſtancy. By this interpretation of the like phraſes there, it is all reaſon to interpret them ſo here alſo, and then that whole 7th verſe will be very plain, Theſe ſeducers bring you new doctrine, That which I bring you, is not ſo, but the very doctrine, that you received at the firſt preaching the Goſpel to you, and that which you did receive ſo, deſerves ſure to be lookt on, not with ſuſpicion, as novel, but with ſecurity, as an old commandment, which you can no more miſtake in adhering to, then you can think you did, in your firſt receiving of the faith. And ſo that may be the moſt ſignificant rendring of the laſt words of the verſe, Ἡ ἐντολὴ ἡ παλαιά ἐστιν ὁ λόγος ὃν ἠκούσατε ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, either in the order, wherein they lie, An old commandement it is, the word which you heard from the beginning, or elſe, making ὁ λόγος the ſubject of the propoſition, the word which ye heard from the beginning (which ye received and beleived, when the faith was firſt preached to you) is the old (ſure no novel) commandement. This difficulty being thus explained, A ſecond follows, v. 8. what is meant by a new commandement? The phraſe ſure referres to the words of Chriſt, Joh. 13.34. A new commandement I give unto you, that you love one another, as I have loved you, that you accordingly love one another. Where the duty of charity to our brethren, though it had been commanded by Moſes's law, yet was now elevated to an higher pitch by Chriſt's example, and precept founded therein, even to loving enemies, and laying down or venturing our very lives for the ſpiritual advantages of other men. In which reſpect this degree of charity now required by Chriſt, is by him ſtyled a new commandement, And ſo 'tis here by this Apoſtle, And being ſaid to the Jewiſh Chriſtians, he foreſees ſome poſſible prejudice that may lie upon it, by being thus new, a ſuperaddition to Moſes's law, (it being the Gnoſticks endevour to comply with the Jewiſh Zealots, and to maintain Judaiſme againſt Chriſtianity it ſelf) And therefore to vindicate it from this, he adds ὅ ἐστιν ἀληθὲς ἐν αὐτῷ καὶ ἐν ὑμῖν, or ἡμῖν, as the King's MS. reads, which thing is true in it ſelf, and in you, or us] i.e. This ſuperaddition to the Moſaical law in this point of charity to other men, which makes it capable of the ſtyle of a new commandement, is in it ſelf true, i.e. it is moſt certainly true, that Chriſt made it, and in himſelf exemplified it to us, and therefore though it be in ſome reſpect new, yet all Chriſtians are obliged to receive it, and beſide that, it is true in you or in us, i.e. hath a ſpecial conſiderable truth in it to us at this time, and the reaſon of that laſt, is rendred in the enſuing words, ὅτι ἡ σκοτία (or as the King's MS. reads, σκία) παράγεται, καὶ τὸ φῶς τὸ ἀληθινὸν ἤδη φαίνει becauſe the darkneſſe, or the ſhadow paſſeth, and the true light already ſhineth. What is the meaning of theſe phraſes, is yet a farther difficulty, but by analogie with other the like in theſe books, may be explained; Chriſt is called the true light, Joh. 1.9. Light in reſpect of his doctrine, which was the direction of every mans life. And true light in reſpect of the more imperfect ſhadows that had been before under the Law; Thus, when it is ſaid, Grace and truth came by Jeſus Chriſt, and that the true worſhippers ſhall worſhip the Father in ſpirit and in truth, truth denotes the ſubſtance, in oppoſition to ſhadows, the ſubſtantial worſhip in oppoſition to the rudiments of the Law. And this ſenſe is much favoured here by the King's MS. which reads not σκοτία darkneſs, but σκία ſhadow, which is uſed of the Law, Col. 2 17. Heb. 10.1. and ſo the word παράγεται paſſeth] doth incline, for that is oft applied to a ſhadow, (my time paſſeth like a ſhadow &c.) but not ſo to darkneſs. And indeed as light is oppoſed to darkneſſe, ſo true light, which is ſomewhat more, that in which is no mixture of darkneſſe, is moſt fitly oppoſed to a ſhadow, in which there is ſome of that mixture. 'Tis true indeed ver. 9, & 11. we read σκοτία darkneſs, which may make it probable, that it ſhould be σκοτία not σκία, darkneſs, not ſhadow here, But that argument is of little force, becauſe there the oppoſition being betwixt that, and light ſimply, σκοτία darkneſs was neceſſarily to be uſed, and by that is meant the darkneſs of ſin in both places, the hating the brother, But here it being not ſimply light, but with this addition, the true light, ſhadow is it, to which that is moſt properly oppoſed, And it need not ſeem ſtrange, that both theſe oppoſitions ſhould here be uſed ſo neer one to the other, it being evident, that the doctrine of Chriſt which is oppoſed to ſin, and ſo to darkneſs, which denotes that, is oppoſed alſo to the Law of Moſes, as a more perfect, to that which was leſſe perfect, an higher degree of charity now exemplified, and required by Chriſt, to a lower, and more imperfect degree of it, before required by Moſes. As for the paſſing of the ſhadow, and ſhining of the true light, that evidently ſignifies the abolition of the Moſaical law, and the Chriſtian law taking place, prevailing over it. Which this Apoſtle, which knew that to be the laſt hour, and ſo the deſtruction of the Jewiſh Temple (and conſequently ſervice) ſo ſuddainly to approach, could not but know that it was now at hand, And indeed the Apoſtles having received revelations to that purpoſe, (ſee note on Rom. 7.a.) it is here truly ſaid ἤδη φαίνει, this true light already ſhineth, the Law was already aboliſhed, and only the Chriſtian doctrine in force already. And ſo this is a moſt commodious, efficacious reaſon, to prove and preſs the matter in hand, that if this were a new cõmandment, wch here he ſpeaks of, and no old Judaical one, yet it was part of the doctrine of Chriſt, & that was now in full force over the world, the Judaical law being already abrogated, and the deſtruction of their whole policie very near at hand, v. 18.

That ἐσχάτη ὥρα here ſignifies that famous period, the deſtruction of the Jewes, will not only appear by comparing that phraſe with many other of that kind in theſe Books, the τέλος end, and συντέλεια conſummation of the age, and ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ the laſt daies, but alſo by the whole context in this place; For the ἠκούσατε (here following) ye have heard] being a form of citing, muſt neceſſarily referre us to ſome prediction that had before been delivered of the matter here ſpoken of, viz. the coming of Antichriſt. This prediction was certainly that of Chriſt's, Mat. 24. where before this fatal day, in three ſtages of his diſcourſe, three ſeveral times he toucheth on this matter, firſt v. 5. There ſhall come many in my name, ſaying, I am Chriſt, and ſhall deceive many. Then v. 11. many Pſeudo-prophets (i.e. that pretend a miſſion when they have it not) ſhall ariſe and deceive many, Then v. 23. If any ſhall ſay, Lo here is Chriſt, or there, beleive them not, for there ſhall riſe Pſeudo-Chriſts and Pſeudo-prophets, and ſhall ſhew many ſignes and wonders, ſo that they ſhall deceive, if poſſible, even the elect; behold I have told you before. Of the firſt ſort are thoſe counterfeit Chriſts who pretended ſoon after Chriſt's aſcenſion, Of which it is therefore ſaid,

Θευδᾶς — οὔπω δὲ τὸ τέλος, the end is not yet, they were to be some years before this destruction. Of this sort was Theudas, not he which is mentioned Act. 5. 36, 37. as antienter then Judas Galilæus; but another mentioned by Josephus, under Claudius's reign, when Fadus was Procurator of Judæa, who, saith Eusebius l. 2. c. 11. out of Joseph: Ant: l. 20. c. 5. — Γόητος — πολλὰς deceived many. Of this sort was the Ægyptian, Act. 21. 38. mentioned also by Eusebius, l. 2. c. 19. out of Josephus. And so also Dositheus or Dosthes, in Origen cont: Celsum l. 1. and in Hegesippus apud Euseb. l. 4. c. 22. and divers others who undertook to be deliverers of the people, which is in effect to be Christs, as a Christ is defined by S. Luke c. 24. 21. μέλλων λυτροῦσθαι τὸν Ἰσραήλ, he that should redeem Israel. So again in the last place, the false Christs and false prophets, are the like to these, differing from them only in the time, wherein they should shew themselves, viz. after the besieging of Jerusalem, v. 15. when upon the sudden raising of it again by Cestius Gallus the Christians fled out of Judæa, v. 16. for then was it an opportunity for false Christs to attempt to gather followers, and undertake deliverances, if any would be deceived by them. But the deceivers that especially belong to this place, are those of the second or middle stage, Mat. 24. 11. called there πολλοὶ ψευδοπροφῆται many Pseudo-prophets, immediately before the standing of the abomination of desolation in the holy place, i. e. (as S. Luke interprets it) before Jerusalem was incompast with armies, i. e. besieged, as here the many Antichrists among them is a proof that it was the last hour. Of that point of time five things are there foretold by Christ, which are so exactly fulfill'd in this time, wherein S. John writes, that the very reciting them is almost the sum of this Epistle, 1. that the Jewes should be very cruel in persecuting the Christians, Mat. 24. v. 9. Secondly, that many Christians should be scandalized by this means, i. e. renounce the faith, to comply with the persecuters, v. 10. Thirdly, that they that did thus renounce the faith to comply with the persecuters, (viz. the *Gnostick heretick*s) should persecute those that stuck fast to Christ, and deliver them up to the persecuters, v. 10. Fourthly, that Pseudo-prophets should rise, and, upon this advantage of ridding men from persecution, seduce many, v. 10. Lastly, that upon this increase of persecutions upon the orthodox Christians both from the Jews & Gnosticks, called the increasing of iniquity, the orthodox themselves should begin to faint, their love to Christ grow cold, v. 12. After which it soon follows v. 14. And then shall the end come. By the accordance of all which passages there and here, it is manifest who are these Antichrists here set down, as the immediate forerunners of the siege of Jerusalem, viz. those false prophets 2 Pet. 2. 1. who there are said to have denied the Lord that bought them, and here c. 4. 3. to deny Christ τὸ have come in the flesh, and so were Antichrists properly so called, profest enemies to Christ, and withal the most cruel enemies, and persecuters of the Christians, i. e. the Gnosticks particularly, a sect of unclean abominable Christians, which being followers of Simon Magus laboured to deceive many, by rehearsing the miracles which he did, and by their doctrines of the lawfulness of renouncing Christ in time of persecution gathered many to them, who were first willing to escape persecuting, and then hated, and themselves persecuted all others. And to this 'tis clear that this whole chapter belongs, first asserting the doctrine of Christ, which these had perverted and denied, v 1. then the necessitie of Christian practise v. 3, 4, 5, 6. against these most unchristian livers, then particularly the doctrine of Christian charity, against their hating and persecuting other Christians, v. 9, 10, 11. then the contempt of the world, and bearing of the crosse, & of all hardship for Christ's sake, v. 15. and then in this v. 18. having told them, that (according to Christ's prediction) this was the season to expect such deceivers, he comes particularly to them v. 19. that they went out from the Christians, but were not of them, i. e. were not true, but equivocal, and onely nominal Christians, and now were separated from them, as a sect that brake off and went out of the Church, and so were no longer to be counted Christians, v. 21. especially when they denied Jesus to be the Christ, as the Gnosticks did. And so he concludes that he had written to them of those that deceive them, v. 26. That this place, and peculiarly v. 19. belongs to the Gnosticks particularly, see Cyrill of Jerusalem, Cat. 6. p. 134. where speaking of Simon Magus he saith, Περὶ οὗ γέγραπται, Ἐξ ἡμῶν ἐξῆλθον, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἦσαν ἐξ ἡμῶν, of whom it is written they went out from us, but they were not of us, and as the Barocian MS. adds, εἰ γὰρ ἦσαν ἐξ ἡμῶν, μεμενήκασιν ἂν μεθ' ἡμῶν, If they had been of us, they would have remained with us, which is that whole 19. verse applied to Simon and his followers, whom p. 137. he names, Cerinthus, (and in the Barocian copie, καὶ Μένανδρος) Menander, Carpocrates, Ebion, and Marcion. And again Basilides and Valentinus. Before him see Polycarp in his Epist: to the Philippians, p. 20. in these words, Πᾶς γὰρ ὃς ἂν μὴ ὁμολογῇ Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν ἐν σαρκὶ ἐληλυθέναι, ἀντίχριστός ἐστι, καὶ ὃς ἂν μὴ ὁμολογῇ τὸ μαρτύριον τοῦ σταυροῦ, ἐκ τοῦ διαβόλου ἐστίν, καὶ ὃς ἂν μεθοδεύῃ τὰ λόγια τοῦ Κυρίου πρὸς τὰς ἰδίας ἐπιθυμίας, καὶ λέγῃ μήτε ἀνάστασιν μήτε κρίσιν εἶναι, οὗτος πρωτότοκός ἐστι τοῦ Σατανᾶ, Every one that doth not confesse that Jesus Christ came in the flesh, is Antichrist, and whosoever confesseth not the martyrdome or testimonie of the crosse (i. e. that doth not confesse Christ, when danger attends that confession) is of the devil, and whosoever converts the oracles of God to his own lusts, and saith that there is neither resurrection nor judgement, he is the first-born of Satan, (which is in the antients generally the title of Simon Magus) And accordingly in the Epistles of Ignatius the primitive Martyr, especially that to the Smyrneans, he fortifies them against this doctrine of the Gnosticks, that Christ did not suffer, nor was born, nor rose again ἀληθῶς ἐν σαρκὶ, truly in the flesh, but onely τῷ δοκεῖν in appearance.

Who the πολλοὶ Ἀντίχριστοι were v. 18. hath been at large deduced, note b. the whole sect of Gnostick hereticks; One mistake onely this matter may be farther liable to, by thinking the ὁ Ἀντίχριστος the Antichrist] here to be some peculiar person, distinct from the many Antichrist's there. If there were any convincing reasons to conclude this, it would soon be decided, who it was, those first-

c. ὁ Ἀντίχριστος

first-fruits of Satan, Simon Magus, who may well be supposed alive at the writing of this Epistle, being affirmed by the antients to have contended with S. Peter and S. Paul at Rome, and that most probably at their coming thither, before their martyrdome, i. e. about the twelfth of Nero, very little before the Jewish war, which brought that ruine upon them, see Arnobius l. 2. adver: Gentes Sulpicius Severus Hist: sacr: l. 2. Cyril: Hieros:ol: Catech: 6. Isidore Pelusiot: Ep: 13. All relating that contention between those Apostles and him, and that, saith Cyril, after the errror of the Gnosticks had spread it self over the Church, and so made it necessary for the Apostles to oppose him publickly. Beside him other particular persons there were also, capable of this title, Cerinthus opposed by this Apostle S. John particularly, and Carpocrates and Saturnilus and others. But there is no reason thus to affix the title, the ὁ Ἀντίχριστος the Antichrist here being visibly of the same importance with the same word v. 18. And that there, either all one with, or contained under the many Antichrists that follow. For so the words must import, that the prophecie which had foretold that Antichrist comes in the last houre, was fulfilled in the many Antichrists that were then come: which could not be, if that Antichrist foretold were another from those many Antichrists. And besides it hath already appeared that the coming of that Antichrist foretold, was the arising of false prophets, Mat. 24. 11. and then though the word be here in the singular number, yet must it be all one with those ψευδοπροφῆται false prophets in the plural. And it is ordinary for a word in the singular to be a complexum, and so to signifie a whole sort or sect of people, as it is apparent ὁ ψεύστης the liert here v. 22. denotes all those false prophets, i. e. heretical false teachers, that deny Jesus to be the Messias, and not some singular person, that did so. By all which it appears, that what is here said both of the Antichrist, and the many false Christs, belongs equally to the times before the destruction of Jerusalem, and denotes the Gnosticks to be them, and cannot duly be applied to any other. And if it be here objected that there is a difference between false prophets and Antichrists, and so that the Antichrist here will not bee the false prophets Mat. 24. I answer, 1. that here appears not the least difference in the importance of the words literally taken, (and accordingly c. 4. 1. they that are here called many Antichrists, and there v. 3. the Antichrist, are πολλοὶ ψευδοπροφῆται many false prophets, as appears also by comparing the characters of them there v. 2. with what is here said of them) for 1. Christ and prophet are all one, the word Christ denoting that divine unction or commission, to that great prophetick office, which Christ exercised here on earth, and accordingly we know that Moses foretells his coming in that style, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you, and so 2^dly, the words ἀντὶ and ψευδο] in composition, are oft all one, as in ἀντιθεσις and the like, as when we use the word counterpart of one thing made like another, which yet is not it, and so counterfeit, one which pretends, and looks like another, which he is not. And so Ἀντίχριστος will be (most litterally) rendred a Counter-Christ, and that is a Pseudo-Christ, or false Christ. And such it is certain was Simon Magus, who profess'd himself to be Christ Jesus, who appeared to converse among the Jews, See Cyrill of Jerusalem in Catech: τὰ αἰρέσεων. If this be not sufficient, then 2^dly, I answer, that the Gnosticks or followers of Simon, as they were false teachers, and so might be called ψευδοπροφῆται in that respect, so they were bitter opposers of Christ, and all the orthodox Christians, denied Christ to be come in the flesh, and persecuted all that asserted it, and in that respect 'tis as visible that they were ἀντίχριστοι, as ἀντὶ signifies opposition, or contrariety, Antichrists beyond all that ever any Christians were, or can be imagined to be. And then though Antichrists are somewhat more then Pseudo-prophets, because all false prophets, or false teachers, do not thus deny or oppose Christ, and the fundamental articles of our redemption, yet still the greater contains the lesse under it, and so that prediction that foretold there should come false prophets before the besieging of Jerusalem, was abundantly fulfilled in these false teachers, which were, over and above Antichrists, profess'd opposers of Christ, and Christians.

To have the Father] is to be expounded by analogy with having grace, Heb. 12. 28. i. e. retaining it, holding it fast, or making use of it, as in the parable of the talents, He that hath] is hee that makes use of, and improves the talents by so doing, ἔχων for κρατῶν. Thus here to have the Father] is to retain and hold fast his doctrine, not to forsake or depart from it, which every one must be said to do (and so here οὐκ ἔχων πατέρα not to have the Father) who denieth Christ to be the Messias, of whom God hath so positively testified that he is so. So again in the end of the verse, the phrase is used, and so c. 5. 12. He that hath the Son, is he that adheres, and continues in the faith of Christ. So 2 Joh. 9. He that abides not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God, i. e. forsakes and apostatizeth from him, but he that continueth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son, by adhering to Christ, and that doctrine, which he hath revealed from his Father, adheres to God also.

Paraphrase.

CHAP. III.

1. As for the persecutions that befall the orthodox professors at this time, and are such discouragements to many, tempting them to fall off from their profession, Mat. 24. 10. these are but effects necessarily consequent to God's loving us: For is not God's love very particularly, and remarkably express'd and testified to us, that he acknowledges us to be his sons, and gives us the privileges that belong to such? Certainly it is: And yet this is the very reason that we are so persecuted by the world, They look on us as a people contrary to them, having other relations then they have; for they depend upon the world and not upon God, have nothing to doe with him, and therefore no wonder that this befalls us.

1. BEhold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God: therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not.]

2. Beloved,

2. Beloved, now are we the ſons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we ſhall be; but we know, that * when he ſhall appear, we ſhall be like him: for we ſhall ſee him as he is.]

* If he appeariſe.

this ſtate and condition of ours is the ſtate and condition of the ſons of God; and what we ſhall be hereafter, what inheritance ſhall be made over to thoſe ſons, is not yet revealed. But this we know, that when that bleſſed time ſhall come, we that are ſons of God, ſhall (as the notion of ſons ſignifies in the ſcripture) be like unto that Father of ours, like him in holineſſe, and like him in bliſſe, and that bliſſe ſhall conſiſt in ſeeing of him as he is, a fountain of all that is deſirable to our natures.

2. My beloved, whatever our perſecutions or preſſures are, this I aſſure you of, that we are the ſons of God, and ſhall be ſo for ever.

† on him in' autō

3. And every man that hath this hope † in him, purifieth himſelf, even as he is pure.]

3. And whoſoever hopes or depends on God for any ſuch future ſtate, if he expect to receive it from him according to his manner of promiſing, not abſolutely, but conditionally, or indeed whoſoever ſets his heart on the viſion of God, a pure and bliſsful ſtate, not any ſenſual paradiſe, but a ſpiritual ſtate of bliſſe, made up of holineſſe and purity, will in all reaſon ſet a purifying here, be a practiſing and ayming after that excellent copie, that he may be capable of that perfect purity hereafter.

* doth alſo cōmit tranſgreſſion.

4. Whoſoever comitteth ſin, * tranſgreſſeth alſo the law: for ſin is the tranſgreſſion of the law.]

4. Sin is a contrariety to the law of God, an act of diſloyalty to our King, and he that deliberately commiteth any act of ſin, doth proportionably commit a rebellion and diſloyalty againſt Chriſt.

5. And ye know that he was manifeſted to take away our ſins, and in him is no ſin.]

5. And Chriſt both by his example, being ſinleſſe, never guilty of any act of ſin, and by all that he hath done and ſuffered for us, hath deſigned this ſpecial end to himſelf, to purifie our lives, and cleanſe us from all deliberate acts of ſin.

6. Whoſoever abideth in him, ſinneth not: whoſoever ſinneth, hath not ſeen him, neither known him.]

6. He that adhereth faſt to him, that as a member of his, continueth in him, falleth not indulgently or deliberately into any act of ſin; he that doth ſo, diſclaims all true knowledge of God, (is no Gnoſtick properly called) or converſation with him.

7. Little children, let no man deceive you: he that doth righteouſneſſe, is righteous, even as he is righteous.]

7. My young tender Chriſtians, let not the Gnoſticks ſeduce you to your ruine, he that continues in all righteous actions, that actually performs the will of God, and not onely in intention of mind, and that through his whole courſe of life, and if he fail therein, returns again ſpeedily by repentance, this perſon, and none but this, is the Chriſtian righteous man, he and none elſe is accepted by God as righteous under the Goſpel, in like manner and proportion as Chriſt doing righteouſneſſe is ſaid to be righteous, upon that and not any other ground of denomination.

† diſſolve λύσῃ

8. He that [a] committeth ſin, is of the devil; for the devil ſinneth from the beginning: for this purpoſe the ſon of God was manifeſted that he might † deſtroy the works of the devil.]

8. He that deliberately committeth any act of known ſin, is, in that, or ſo farre, an imitator of the devil, for as the beginning, ſoon after his creation, he acted rebellion againſt God, and hath done ſo ever ſince; And to take off all men from following of him, was the very deſigne of Chriſt's coming into the world. a.

9. Whoſoever [b] is born of God, doth not commit ſin: for his ſeed remaineth in him, and he [c] cannot ſin, becauſe he is born of God.]

9. Whoſoever is a true childe of God, keeps himſelf ſtrictly from all deliberate ſin, and the reaſon is clear, becauſe that principle of ſonſhip, that from whence he is ſaid to be born anew, or of God, to wit, his ſincere reſolute converſion to God, if that continue to have any energie or life in him, is directly contrary to, and incompatible with the committing any ſin, and therefore he cannot thus ſin, becauſe he is a child of God, a regenerate perſon, i. e. ſuch ſinning is unreconcileable with that ſtate. b. c.

* By this Ἐν τούτῳ

10. * In this the children of God are manifeſted, and the children of the devil: whoſoever doth not righteouſneſs [d] is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother.]

10. This is the character of difference between pious and wicked, regenerate and unregenerate men, He that lives an impious and uncharitable life, is no regenerate childe of God's, whatſoever he flatter himſelf of his ſtate. d.

11. For this is the meſſage that ye heard from the beginning, that we ſhould love one another.]

11. For this of charity is the grand fundamental doctrine, which was ſo often, and ſo earneſtly commanded by Chriſt, when he was here on earth.

† Cain was Καὶν ἦν

12. Not as † Cain, who was of that wicked one, and ſlew his brother; and wherefore ſlew he him? becauſe his own works were evil, and his brother's righteous.]

12. And how contrary is this to that emulation, and maligning of thoſe, that are better than they, which was the affection that put Cain on killing his brother, and doth the like in the Gnoſticks now abroad, who hate and perſecute all the orthodox Chriſtians to death, and can have no other quarrel to them, but that their own works are evil, and the others good.

13. Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you.]

13. But this you pure Chriſtians have no reaſon to wonder at, if it prove to be your lot.

14. We know that we have paſſed from death unto life, becauſe we love the brethren: he that loveth not his brother, abideth in death.]

14. We know that wee are regenerate Chriſtians (ſee note on Lu. 15. c.) by our charity to other men, which he that hath not, is clearly an unregenerate, unchriſtian perſon.

15. Whoſoever hateth his brother is a murtherer, and ye know that no murtherer hath eternal life abiding in him.]

15. The hating of others is by interpretation the killing of them, becauſe it is ſo in intention of heart, did not ſome outward reſtraint curb it, and he that is ſuch, is acknowledged by all men to be quite contrary to the Evangelical temper, the regenerate ſtate, from the having ſpiritual life abiding in him, which the Gnoſticks, that are ſo malicious, doe yet ſo much talk of.

16. Hereby.

16. Chriſt's love to us was expreſſed in this, that he was willing to incurre the utmoſt hazard, even to venture his life to reduce us, and agreeably Chriſtian charity obligeth us to venture even our lives for other men, after the manner, and upon ſo noble a deſigne, as Chriſt did, i. e. to bring unto the Chriſtian faith (as the martyrs did) any one or more enemies of Chriſt, and ſo likewiſe in other caſes proportionable to this;

16. Hereby perceive we the love of God, * becauſe he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.] * that is,

17. But how contrary to this is the practiſe of the world, when rich men that have to ſpare for others, have yet no compaſſion, or charity to them; which he that doth, how can he be ſaid to be mercifull as God is mercifull, or how to love God, when he doth ſo contrary to his commands?

17. But who ſo hath this worlds good, and ſeeth his brother have need, and ſhutteth up his bowels of compaſſion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?]

18. My dearly beloved tender Chriſtians, let our charity to our brethren ſhew it ſelf in actions of ſincere kindneſſe and bounty to them.

18. My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue, but in deed and in truth.]

19. And by loving one another thus, we are able to diſcern or judge of our ſelves, that we are ſuch as we profeſſe our ſelves to be, v. 18. and by ſo judging we ſhall have our hearts ſecure and confident, that God will hear our prayers, v. 22. & Joh. 9. 31. e.

19. And hereby we know that we are of the truth, † and ſhall * aſſure our hearts before him.] † and we ſhall perſwade, πείσομεν. * boldneſſe παῤῥησίαν.

20, 21. And indeed that this diſcerning our ſelves to be ſuch as we pretend our ſelves to be, is neceſſary to the giving us this confidence toward God, appears by this, that on the one ſide our hearts condemning us, is a ſure argument that God will doe ſo too, (and then not hearken to our prayers) becauſe he knoweth all things of us that we can know of our ſelves, And on the other ſide, if we have nothing to charge on our ſelves, then we may come thus confidently to God, not fearing that he will lay any thing to our charge (ſee note on Joh. 7. a.) that we are not guilty of, or that he will be wanting to them that walk ſincerely before him.

20. For if our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart, and knoweth all things.

21. Beloved, if our heart condemn us not, then have we † confidence towards God.]

22. And he will certainly hear our prayers, ſuppoſing them ſuch, as to which his promiſe of hearing doth pertain, becauſe by obeying him we are qualified to have our prayers heard by him, ſee Jam. 1. b.

22. And whatſoever we ask, we receive of him, becauſe we keep his commandments, and doe thoſe things that are pleaſing in his ſight.]

23. And one prime part of that obedience is to continue conſtant in the profeſſion of Chriſt, and perform all the duty owing from us to Chriſt and our brethren, according as he by ſpecial precept hath required of us.

23. And this is his commandment, that we ſhould beleive on the name of his ſon Jeſus Chriſt, and love one another, as he gave us commandement.

24. And he that obeyeth him is really one of thoſe which the Gnoſticks pretend to be, i.e. dwelleth or continueth in Chriſt, and conſequently receiveth all gracious influences from him, as the members from the head, as long as that is united to them, and that we are ſuch, i.e. that Chriſt hath not yet forſaken, but ſtill continues united to us, appeareth by the gracious charitable temper and diſpoſition, ver. 10, 17. which we tranſcribe from him, ch. 4. 13. ſee note on Lu. 9. d.

24. And he that keepeth his commandments, dwelleth in him, and he in him: and hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us.]

Notes on Chap. III.

2. Ἁμαρτάνειν, ἁμαρτίαν ποιεῖν, ἁμαρτίας ποιεῖν, ἁμαρτίαν ἔχειν.

Ἁμαρτάνειν, to ſin, and ἁμαρτίαν ποιεῖν. to doe, or commit ſin] which appear to be directly the ſame by comparing v. 6. & and v. 8. and ſo ἁμαρτίαν ἔχειν chap. 1. 8. to have ſin] all one with having ſinned, v. 10. have a ſpecial energie in the writings of this Apoſtle, to denote a deliberate, preſumptuous commiſſion of ſin, not every ſin of ignorance, incogitance, frailty, but, after deliberation, an adviſed commiſſion of it. This is here affirmed to be ποιεῖν ἀνομίαν, the committing tranſgreſſion, where ἀνομία ſignifies oppoſition, or contrariety to Chriſt's law; Juſtinian renders the word iniquitatem (Inſtitut: 4. de injur: Iniquitas & injuſtitia quam Graeci ἀνομίαν καὶ ἀδικίαν vocant) and iniquitas is this oppoſition or irregularity to the will of God, viz: that will of his revealed to us by Chriſt, to which we now profeſſe obedience. It is here made matter of ſome queſtion, whether theſe phraſes ἁμαρτάνειν, and ποιεῖν ἁμαρτίαν, to ſin, and to commit ſin, are to be interpreted onely of an habit of ſuch deliberate ſin, or belong to one ſingle act of it. But the reſolution is eaſie, that though he that lives impenitently in any habit of known ſin, be moſt eminently ſaid to ſin and commit ſin, yet he that is guilty of any one deliberate act, is here primarily meant by theſe phraſes. This appears by the uſe of the words in ſome of the places, where it muſt neceſſarily denote an act, and not only an habit, as c. 2. 1. Theſe things I write unto you, ἵνα μὴ ἁμάρτητε that ye may not ſin, where it would be unreaſonable to think that the holy Apoſtle deſigned his Epiſtle to keep them from habits only, and not alſo from each act of deliberate ſin, This is again evident in this place, for not onely he that lives habitually in ſin, but he that commits any one deliberate act of it, ἀνομίαν ποιεῖ committeth a tranſgreſſion of the law, oppoſeth and doth contrary to the law of Chriſt, which ſeverely forbiddeth ſuch ſingle commiſſions, and not onely the habits of them, and ſo ver. 5. when it is ſaid that Chriſt appeared that he might take away our ſins, and that there is no ſin in him, 'tis evident that he came to take away our acts, as well as our habits, and that there was no act, as well as no habit of ſin in him, and ſo in all that follows v. 6, 8, 9, &c. one act of ſin is contrary to abiding in Chriſt, i. e. to adhering to him, to ſeeing and knowing, i. e. to obeying him, one act is of or from the devil, one act as contrary to that ſeed, that purity, that principle of filiation, that is in him that is born of God, and not only an habit of it.

What γεγεννημένος ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ, being born of God, signifies, hath been noted Joh. 1. note b. to have received some special influence from God, and by the help and power of that, to be raised to a pious life. Agreeably γεγεννημένος ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ, he that hath been born of God, is literally, he that hath had such a blessed change wrought in him by the operation of God's Spirit in his heart, as to be translated from the power of darkness into the kingdome of his dear son, transformed in the spirit of his mind. i. e. sincerely changed from all evil to all good, from obedience to the flesh &c. to an obedience to God: Onely it is here to be noted, that the phrase is not so to be taken, as to denote onely the act of this change, the first impression of this virtue on the patient, the single transient act of regeneration or reformation, and that, as in the preter tense, now past, but rather a continued course, a permanent state, so as a regenerate man, and a child of God are all one, and signifie him that lives a pious, and godly life, and continues to doe so, For so that phrase of being υἱὸς or τέκνον a child or son of any kind of father, signifies a resemblance or similitude of inclinations and actions, as a child of the devil] is one that commits (and so continues to doe) Satanical wicked practises, and so sons of Belial] are vitious persons, and so our Saviour interprets the phrase, If ye were the children of Abraham, ye would doe the works of Abraham, but you are of your father the devil, i. e. you doe those things which are imitations of him, such things as he doth, And so generally in this Epistle, he that is born of God] signifies a man truly pious, an obedient servant of God, and such is the subject of this proposition here, when of such an one it is said he cannot sin.

c. ὁ δύναται

What is meant by ὁ δύναται, cannot] here, will best appear by what S. Chrysostome on Rom. 8. saith of the tree in the Gospel, where 'tis said, A corrupt tree cannot bear good fruit, nor a good tree corrupt fruit: he, saith he, that saith a corrupt tree cannot bring forth good fruit, ὁ κωλύων ἀπὸ κακίας εἰς ἀρετὴν μεταβολὴν, forbids not a change from vice to virtue (denies not that to be possible) but affirms, that ὁ ἐν τῇ κακίᾳ διατριβὴ the continuance in wickedness cannot bring forth good fruit, for, saith he, he said not that an ill tree cannot become good, but that, remaining evil, it cannot bear good fruit. And so sure the affirming here of the child of God, the regenerate pious convert, that he cannot sin, is not the affirming that he cannot cease to be what he is, cannot fall off from the performance of his duty (against which the many warnings and exhortations that are given to pious men, ch. 2. 1. 1 Cor. 10. 12. Heb. 3. 12. 2 Pet. 3. 17. are evidences of the possibility of it) but that remaining thus, a pious follower, imitator, and so child of God, that in his actions resembles him, he cannot yeild deliberately to any kind of sin. To which purpose saith Tertullian de pudicitiâ, Hac non admittet omnino qui natus è Deo fuerit, non futurus Dei filius, si admiserit. He that is born of God will not at all admit such sins as these, he shall not be the child of God, if he doe admit or commit them. And Lactantius, Virtus sine ullâ intermissione perpetua est, nec discedere ab eâ potest, qui semel eam cepit, Nam si habeat intervallum, si quando eâ carere possumus, redeunt protenus peccata quæ virtutem semper impugnant. Virtue is that which is perpetual without any intermission, He that hath once undertaken it, cannot depart from it; For if it have any interval (of sin) if we can want, or be without it, sins presently return, which alwaies impugne virtue. And so S. Hierome on Mat. 7. 18. Bona arbor non ferat malos fructus, quamdiu in bonitatis studio perseverat, A good tree bears not ill fruit, as long as it perseveres in the study or love of goodnesse. And so S. Augustine Serm. 29. de verb: Apost: Talia non facit bona fidei & spei Christianus, A Christian of a good faith and hope, doth not such things as these, i. e. homicide, adultery, &c. In this sense is οὐ δύναται, he cannot, used by Ignatius οἱ σαρκικοὶ τὰ πνευματικὰ πρᾶξαι οὐ δύνανται, carnal men cannot doe spiritual things. It will not farther be pertinent to enquire, whether the sinning here (so unreconcileable with a regenerate state) be an act only of wilfull sin, or an habit, because those Apostate Gnosticks, to whom this place is opposed, and all that went over to them, were guilty of more than single acts, even of the foulest habits of impurity and persecuting the Christians, v 10.

d. Εἶναι ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ

Εἶναι ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ, to be of God] here (and chap. 4. 6. c. 5. 19. & 3 Joh. 11.) is a phrase to signifie one that lives as God requires and approves of, a child of God in the beginning of the verse, born of God, v. 9. a sincere acceptable servant of his, that imitates the good, 3 Joh. 11. or in brief, a good Christian; and that not only upon this ground, because all Christian virtue is of God, but especially because it is agreeable to his will, an imitation of that, which is most eminently and originally in him. And so on the contrary, Vngodly living is expressed by the phrase, to be of the devil, Joh. 8. 44. explained by what follows, θέλετε ποιεῖν τὰς ἐπιθυμίας αὐτοῦ, doing, or, delighting to doe his desires, and his works, v. 41. and so to be of the world. To this purpose many the like phrases there be observable in scripture, which are set to signifie this, as being in God, 1 Joh. 2. 5. & c. 5. 20. seeing God, 3 Joh. 11. i. e. having considered and observed God in his actions, in order to imitating of them, For so to imitate is expressed, Joh. 8. 38. by doing what they have seen with their father, so again having known God or Christ, 1 Joh. 2. 3. 13. i. e. so as to imitate or transcribe what we see in him, an evidence of which is, as it follows there, the keeping his commandements, and c. 4. 6. he that knows God, and he that is of God, are set as directly the same, and so ver. 7, 8. and very often in this writer. So seeing, and knowing him, together 1 Joh. 3. 6. and especially Joh. 5. 37. to hear his voice, and see his appearance, for that is there all all one with having his word abiding in them. So to be the sons of God, Joh. 11 52. the sons of God that are scattered abroad, i. e. all that are or shall be pious faithfull servants of his all the world over, that are qualified aright for the receiving of Christ, when he preacheth to them, (such as are called the children of the kingdome, Mat. 13. 38.) and so oft in these Epistles, 1 Joh. 3. 2, 10. and to be born of God, 1 Joh. 3. 9. & 5. 4. & 18. (contrary to which are generation of vipers, and children of darkness, or Belial, of the devil, of the wicked one, in an extreme degree, and born of blood, &c. Joh. 1. 13. in a more moderate degree) signifying not any act of spiritual

CHAP. IV.

1. My brethren, let me admoniſh you not to heed or follow every teacher that pretends to be inſpired (ſee note on Lu.9.d.) but to make trial of all that ſhall ſo pretend, by the rules afforded you both by Moſes and Chriſt; and ſo much the rather, becauſe as it hath been foretold by Chriſt, Mat. 24. that at this point of time many falſe teachers ſhould come into the Church, ſo now we find by experience there are many.

1. BEloved, beleive not every ſpirit, but trie the ſpirits whether they be of God; becauſe many falſe prophets * are gone out into the world.]

* have come out ἐξεληλύθασιν

2. By this you may know the teacher to be truly divine, if he confeſſe Chriſt thus born and crucified to be the Meſſias (ſee v.15.) For no falſe prophet will ever teach that, it being not uſefull to the intereſt of the falſe pretenders, or thoſe that conſider their own advantages, to follow a crucified Saviour to all kind of purity and ſelf-denial, and taking up the croſſe after him, ſuffering perſecutions, as now all that follow Chriſt are ſure to doe.

2. Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: every ſpirit that confeſſeth † that Jeſus Chriſt is come in the fleſh, is of God.]

† Jeſus Chriſt which is come in the fleſh, Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν ἐν σαρκὶ ἐληλυθότα

3. And the Gnoſticks that in time of perſecution doe renounce and forſake Chriſt, by that appear to be not from God, and theſe are the Antichriſtian ſeducers, of whom Chriſt foretold Mat. 24. (ſee note on 1 Joh. 2. b.) that before the fatal day that expected the Jewes, they were to come into the world, and now indeed they are come, Simon and his Gnoſticks, and are already every where viſible among us.

3. And every ſpirit that confeſſeth not * that Jeſus Chriſt is come in the fleſh, is not of God: and this is † that ſpirit of Antichriſt, whereof you have heard that * it ſhould come, † and even now already is it in the world.]

* Jeſus Chriſt which is come † that of Antichriſt τὸ τοῦ Ἀντιχρίστου * he cometh ἔρχεται † and now he is already ἤδη νῦν ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ ἐστὶν

4. You, my tender Chriſtians, have your doctrine from God, and have held out againſt the machinations and perſwaſions of thoſe falſe teachers; for the true Chriſt which is by his Spirit and his doctrines in you, is greater, and more powerfull than the falſe teachers, and falſe Chriſts, which are now abroad in the world, v. 3.

4. Ye are of God, little children, and have overcome them; becauſe greater is he that is in you, than he that is in the world.]

5. They come not by any commiſſion from God, but from the incitation of their own worldly hearts, to ſave themſelves from perſecutions, they are worldly-minded, their affections are placed on worldly pleaſures &c. and accordingly their doctrine is a doctrine of licentiouſneſſe, of ſecular intereſts, and freedome from perſecutions, and worldly-minded men follow them.

5. They are of the world; therefore ſpeak they of the world, and the world heareth them.]

6. Our doctrine is the true pure doctrine of Chriſt, hath nothing of worldly greatneſſe, or ſecular intereſts in it, but only of piety and purity, ſelf-denial, contempt of the world, and every pious perſon hearkeneth to us, and this is a way of diſcerning true from falſe prophets, one is all for purity and confeſſion of Chriſt even in perſecutions, the other for worldly advantages, and ſelf-preſervation.

6. We are of God; he that knoweth God, heareth us; he that is not of God, heareth not us; hereby know we the Spirit of truth, and the ſpirit of error.]

7. Again, another evidence of our being from God is charity to our fellow-Chriſtians, for that is moſt ſtrictly commanded, and exemplified to us from God, and no practiſe renders us ſo like to God's example, and ſo concordant to his precepts, makes us ſuch Gnoſticks truly ſo called, as the ſincere exerciſes of this duty, and therefore that is my next admonition, to be ſure ye divide not, hate not, perſecute not your brethren.

7. Beloved, let us love one another; for love is of God, and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God.]

8. He that is not poſſeſſed and throughly acquainted with that grace of Love, by that appears to be utterly unacquainted with God, to have nothing of God in him, who is made up of love and kindneſſe to mankind.

8. He that loveth not, knoweth not God, for God is love.]

9. And hath manifeſted that in a moſt eminent manner to us, in having ſent his only ſon into the world to reduce us ſinners to an holy and pious life.

9. In this was manifeſted the love of God * toward us, † becauſe that God ſent his only begotten ſon into the world, that we might live through him.]

* among us ἐν ἡμῖν † that ὅτι

10. Herein

10. Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and ſent his ſon to be the propitiation for our ſins.] 10. And in this appears the height of God's love to us, not that we were earlieſt in our love to him, but that he began to us, and firſt ſent his own ſon to propitiate, or appeaſe his wrath againſt us for our ſins, to deliver us from the puniſhment of them.

11. Beloved, if God ſo loved us, we ought alſo to love one another.] 11. This love of God to us muſt be anſwered with our imitating it toward our brethren, doing thoſe acts of charity toward them, which God is not capable to receive from us.

12. No man hath ſeen God at any time. If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us.] 12. For God is not in our reach to be ſeen or converſed with by us: whereas kindneſſe, or love is moſtwhat among ſuch, the trial therefore of our love, whether we have any of that divine grace in us or no, and ſo whether God abide in us, i. e. whether thoſe eminent virtues (which are ſo remarkable in God, as that they are ſaid to be God himſelf, ſuch as charity, v. 8. 16.) are abiding in us, and whether the love which is in him toward men be copied out, and imitated, and ſo perfected by us (as the ſufferings of Chriſt are ſaid to be perfected in us, when we after his example ſuffer alſo) is this, by examining our ſelves if we are kind and loving to thoſe that are among us, our fellow men and Chriſtians, whom we doe ſee, and who are capable of kindneſſe, and the effects of love from us.

13. Hereby know we that we * dwell in him, and he in us, becauſe he hath given us of his Spirit.] 13. This is an evidence indeed by which we know that we adhere to God, are diſciples indeed, and as ſuch acknowledged by him, (ſee ch. 3. 24.) becauſe that temper, and affection of love and charity, ſo illuſtriouſly obſervable in Chriſt, is obſervable in ſome meaſure in us alſo.

14. And we have ſeen and doe teſtifie, that the Father ſent the Son to be the Saviour of the world.] 14. And as an evidence of that, how great ſoever our hazard be from the enemies of the Goſpel, yet we continue conſtantly to preach Chriſt, and being eye-witneſſes of thoſe miracles &c. which evidence him to be what he pretended, we accordingly preach and teſtifie that Chriſt is the very Meſſias ſent by God.

† abideth μένει

15. Whoſoever ſhall confeſſe that Jeſus is the Son of God, God † dwelleth in him, and he in God.] 15. He that ſhall venture to be a Martyr for Chriſt, to confeſſe him v. 2. when dangers attend that confeſſion (ſee note on Rev. 2. b.) as God is faithfull to him, ſo ſhall he truly be ſaid to be faithfull to God, ſee Joh. 14. c.

* among us ἐν ἡμῖν

16. And we have known and beleived the love that God hath * to us, God is love, and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him.] 16. 'Tis acknowledged by all, that God hath given us a moſt eminent copie, and pattern of love, by us to be tranſcribed toward him, when he calls us to it, God is made up of love, and in that degree that we partake of that grace, we are members of God, not broken off from him, but continuing in conjunction with him, and God abideth in us, is allowed a place in us, is not rejected or caſt out by us (ſee Joh. 14. c.) as he is by thoſe that doe not through love hold faſt to him, doe not adhere, obey, and imitate him, in that great duty of charity.

† In this the love with us is perfected, that we have Ἐν τούτῳ τετελείωται ἡ ἀγάπη μεθ' ἡμῶν, ἵνα

17. † Herein is our love made perfect, that we may have [a] boldneſſe in the day of judgment: becauſe as he is, ſo are we in this world.] 17. In this the perfection of that love which is to be found in a Chriſtian, (ſee note on ch. 1. b.) conſiſts, that in a time of danger when we are brought before judges, and may probably loſe our lives for confeſſing of Chriſt, then we retain courage and cheerfulneſſe, and confeſſe him willingly, that we behave our ſelves in this world, as Chriſt did when he was here, i. e. lay down our lives in teſtification of the truth. 2i

* hath not been perfected τετελείωται

18. There is no fear in love, but perfect love caſteth out fear, becauſe fear hath torment: he that feareth * is not made perfect in love.] 18. Now ſuch love as this which was in Chriſt, hath no fear in it, Chriſt ventured and underwent the utmoſt, even death it ſelf, for us, did not through fear draw back from any thing which love to man or conſtancy to the truth of God, could prompt him to, and ſo indeed perfect love baniſheth all fear of danger, even of death it ſelf, ſuffers it not to interpoſe or keep him from expreſſing acts of love, makes the lover extremely valiant, For fear, in whomſoever it is, hath pain and anxiety in it, permits him not to doe any thing that may bring danger with it, and ſo is quite contrary to perfection of love toward God, makes one man deny Chriſt, another draw back for fear of danger of confeſſing him, or elſe perhaps, fear brings puniſhment eternal of body and ſoul, Mat. 10. 28. and never permits any in whom it is, to arrive to any perfection, or reward of love, ſee note on Rev. 2. b.

† Let us love him Ἡμεῖς ἀγαπῶμεν αὐτὸν

19. † We love him, becauſe he firſt loved us.] 19. And certainly this love and degree thereof, and hazard run by it, though it be death it ſelf, is but a meer duty of gratitude in us, becauſe Chriſt hath begun to us, and when we were his enemies, ſinners that had never deſerved any thing but hatred and vengeance from him, laid down willingly his own life for us.

20. If a man ſay, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar; for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath ſeen, how can he love God whom he hath not ſeen?] 20. And it is not enough to profeſſe this our love to Chriſt by appearing to be ready to die for him, or run hazards for the teſtifying the truth of our faith; For there may be a great deal of hypocriſie in this profeſſing of our love to God, 1 Cor. 13. 3. and ſo there is certainly, if he that ſo profeſſeth, doth not love, but maligne and perſecute Chriſtians (it being impoſſible that any man ſhould truly love God, and not doe what God bids him, i. e. love his brother alſo) for the beſt way to trie our love, whether it be ſincere or no, is to obſerve how it expreſſes it ſelf on occaſion, when we meet with objects of charity, for if then we doe not exerciſe and teſtifie our love, ſure we have not that virtue in us, Conſequently, if to men, with whom we daily converſe, and meet with ſuch opportunities, we doe not expreſſe any love, what reaſon is there to imagine we ſincerely love God, when of our love to him, and the ſincerity of it, we were never able to make this trial, becauſe we never ſaw him, nor had opportunities offered us of ſhewing any real acts of love to him? And beſide, ſomewhat may be judged by the difficulty of the thing, for he that doth not the eaſier, will hardly be ſuppoſed to doe the more difficult, Now 'tis hard to love one that I never ſaw, ſight and converſation is one motive of love, and we ſee our brethren daily, but never ſaw God at any time, and therefore where the command, which is as punctual to the love of our brethren, as to the love of God v. 21. is not able to prevail upon us for this, and where, beſide the command, which is equal on both ſides, there is one advantage to allure our love to our brethren, which there is not to invite or oblige us to the love of God, if that man manifeſtly fail in the one, which is ſo much more commended to him by that one circumſtance, how can it be imagined, that he doth, or will perform the other?

21. It being evident that by his command, we are as really obliged to love our fellow Christians, as to love Christ himself.

21. And this commandement have we from him, that he who loveth God, love his brother also.]

Notes on Chap. IV.

2. Παῤῥησία

Παῤῥησία is bold and publick speaking, confession of Christ before men, especially when we have discouragements from doing so, ἄδεια fearlessness, saith Hesychius, So παῤῥησία περιπατεῖν, Joh. 11.54. is to walk publickly and fearlessly, which Christ did not, because of their consultation to kill him, v. 53. So in many other places, particularly Heb. 10.35. where παῤῥησία ὑμῶν is their constant confession of Christ, to which all that chapter had exhorted them, (and that in despight of persecutions) explain'd by ὑπομονὴ v. 36. patience or constancy in suffering, and opposed to ὑποστολὴ cowardly withdrawing, v. 38, 39. (see note on Joh. 7. a.) And so here being joyned with ἐν ἡμέρᾳ κρίσεως in the day of judgment, not the final judgment of God, but the day or time when we shall, for the name of Christ, be brought before any earthly tribunal, to be sentenced even to death it self. And so it is said of Ignatius, in the story of his Martyrdome, that he conceived that he could never come ad dilectionem Dei in plenum, to the full love of God, neque perfectum ordinem doctrinæ obtinere, nor to the perfection of Christian doctrine, nisi per Martyrii factam confessionem Domino appropinquaret, unless he came neer unto God by martyrdome. And so the meaning will be plain, that the ἀγάπη μεθ' ἡμῶν, the love or charity toward God, which is to be in, or among us Christians, ἐν τούτῳ τετελείωται, is perfected in this, ἵνα παῤῥησίαν ἔχωμεν that we have this constancy in confessing him in the time of the greatest danger; And this yet farther appears 1. by the explication that follows, that as he is, so we are in this world, i. e. that as Christ laid down his life in confession of the truth, so we doe the same when occasion serves; And 2dly, by the confirmation, which follows, v. 18 There is no fear in love, fear being indeed the contrary to this boldnesse and constancy, wherein the perfection of our love consists. Thus hath Tertullian interpreted the place in his Scorpiacum or Antidote against the Gnosticks, Johannes negat timorem esse in dilectione, John denies fear to be in love; Quem timorem intelligi præstat, nisi negationis authorem? What fear must we here understand, but that which is the author of denying? Quam dilectionem perfectam, nisi fugatricem timoris, & animatricem confessionis? What perfect love, but that which puts fear to flight, and animates men to confesse Christ? And so that which follows, For fear hath punishment, he thus interprets, Quam pœnam timore puniat (sure it should be, quâ pœnâ timorem puniat) nisi quam negator relaturus est, cùm corpore & animâ occidendus in Gehennam? What is the punishment which fear hath, or, with which he punishes fear, but that which he that denies Christ shall receive, when he is killed body and soul, and cast into hell, Mat. 10.28. or which, saith he, is threatned to the cowardly, among (yea before) the other reprobates, in the lake of fire, Rev. 21. 8. See Tertull: cont: Gnost: c. 12. and De fugâ in Persecut: c. 9. In these last words, ὁ φόβος κόλασιν ἔχει, fear hath punishment, the posthumous Notes of the learned H. Grotius have attempted an emendation, and read κόλωσιν for κόλασιν, rendring κόλωσις out of the Glossaries, mutilation, imperfection, κολόω, ἀτελῆ ποιῶ. For this interpretation of that unusual word Hesychius may be consulted, κολόει, saith he, (it should be certainly κολάει) κωλύει, ἐμποδίζει, κολοβοῖ, and κολεῖ), ἐλαττοῖ), and κολοβός, κολοβώδης, and κολόσμαλα, κλάσματα. To this the context would very well agree, the next words being, he that fears is not made perfect in love, where yet the same Annotations would turn ὁ δὲ φοβούμενος, he that fears into ὁ δὲ κολούμενος, he that is mutilated. But to impose so remote an emendation, without any authority of any copie to avow it, is too adventurous an attempt, Or, if it were not so, perhaps the substituting of κώλυσιν, impediment, hindrance, might be a more tolerable emendation, thus, for fear hath hindrance, it stops and encumbers love from doing such perfect acts as it ought, or would otherwise be apt to doe, he that feareth, is by this encumbrance kept back, is not made perfect in love. But as these, or the like emendations ought never to be admitted without great necessity, so there appears no pretense of that in this place, For 1. it may thus be rendred, Fear hath pain or torment, a kind of rack in it, which alwaies keeps men in awe, as the Apostle saith, Heb. 2.15. that through fear of death some are all their life-time subject to bondage or slavery, never dare doe any thing of virtue, or duty, or heroick action, (and so 2 Tim. 1. 7. the spirit of fear or cowardise is set opposite to power and love) and consequently never come to any perfection of love to God, or constancy of confession, to suffer any thing for his sake, as love doth, 1 Cor. 13. 7. and accordingly it follows, he that feareth is not made perfect in love, Or else 2dly, It may be set after Tertullian's way, the constant love of God is a most rewardable perfection, whereas fear of worldly dangers will be sure to bring destruction of body and soul along with it, and therefore must be cast out from having any thing to interpose, when the perfecting, or, as τελειῦσθαι signifies, the crowning or rewarding of love is spoken of. Fearfulness is so unreconcileable with perfect love, that it is the most detestable forsaking of God, the coward is all one with the Apostate. Either of these senses will accord very well with the context, and with the literal importance of the words, but especially the former of them.

CHAP. V.

1. Whereas the Gnosticks professe that they are the children of God, born of him, and also that they truly love God, as children a father, by these two marks you may judge of the

1. WHosoever beleiveth that Jesus is the Christ, is born of God; and every one that loveth him that begat, loveth him also that is begotten of him.]

the truth of these pretensions, For the first, every one that believeth and professeth Christ to be the Messias (and accordingly cleaves fast to that profession, whatsoever the temptations be to the contrary,) and expresseth the power of that faith by his love, by depending on his promises, and obeying his commands, and patient suffering of any persecution that befals him, is a regenerate childe of God, and none else (see note on c. 3. b.) And for the second 'tis as certain, that unless a man love the brethren, he shall never be deemed to love God.

2. By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep his commandments.]

2. And not onely our loving our brethren is an evidence of our loving God, without which we have no reason to think we doe love him, but such an union and conjunction there is between these two, that if we would know whether we love our brethren sincerely or no, we cannot better judge, then by knowing or examining whether we love God, for otherwise we may doe many acts of love to our brethren, which may flow from other principles, good nature, gallantry, vainglory, &c. and not from charity, whereas this love of God, which I now speak of, must be such, as expresses it self by keeping God's commandments.

3. For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments, and his commandments are not * grievous.]

* heavy Beza

3. Keeping his commandments I add because this is to love God indeed, and of these let me tell you, they are not so heavy and so unsupportable, as is now pretended by many, who fall off from Christ, because obedience to him is now like to cost them so dear, but it is an easie, gainfull, gratious yoke, Mat. 11. 30.

4. For whatsoever is born of God, overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith.

4. For every loving obedient childe of God (see note on c. 3. b.) whose affections are taken off from the world, and set upon God, c. 2 5. 7. doth with ease overcome the world, the terrors and other the temptations thereof, hath far stronger incitations to piety, than the world can offer him to the contrary, and that which so much out-weighs those carnal allectives or terrors, is that which the faith of Christ possesses us of, and he that is carried captive to the world, cannot be counted a cordial beleiver; Faith is not onely the means of overcoming, but 'tis victory it self.

5. Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that beleiveth that Jesus is the son of God?]

5. And what faith is this so victorious? why, the cordial beleiving that Jesus is the Messias, which containeth the beleiving all his promises, threats, and precepts, without which it is not imaginable that any man should resist the temptations of the devill, the delights and terrors of it, and with which it is easie to doe it.

† or, and the spirit, Jesus-for the Kings MS reads καὶ πνεύματος-ος, and so again in the next part of the verse.

6. This is he that [a] came by water and blood, † even Jesus Christ; not by water onely, but by water and blood: and it is the spirit that beareth witnesse, because the spirit is truth.]

6. For of this Christ hath given us an emblem and example in himself, and so an obligation to it, his whole course here upon the earth was compounded of innocence and purity of life, and also of sufferings, even of a shamefull death, and these two things in him are emblematically expressed by the water and blood that came, not one or the other alone, but both together out of his side at his crucifixion, (see Joh. 19. c.) and one (if not both) of these, his sinlessnesse, and indeed his being the Messias v. 5. is also testified by the holy Ghost in many particulars (see note a.) and this testimony, being the testimony of the spirit of God, is authentick, and fit to be believed, for it is his title to be the spirit of truth.

7. For as there being in heaven three able to testifie, and those three agreeing in one divine nature, and so being all infallible in their testimonies, they have all testified that Christ, as he was here on earth, was the Messias: God the father, by the voice from heaven, Mat. 3. 17. Joh. 12. 28. God the son, in his saying to Saul, Why persecutest thou me? and striking him down in the place for doing so; God the holy Ghost, in that descending on him as a dove, and after on the disciples:

8. And there are three that bear witnesse in earth, the spirit, and the water, and the blood; and these three agree in one.]

8. So on the earth there are three witnesses too, 1. the holy Ghost, 1. on Christ, and 2[dly] on and in the Apostles, who saw, and witnessed that the Father sent Christ, c. 4. 13, 14. 2[dly] the water, and 3[dly] the blood, that came both out of his side, and by doing so first prove the reality of his humane nature against those that say he was onely in appearance, not in flesh, or reality, and 2[dly] were an embleme of his innocence and sufferings, and so these three agree in this testimony, that Jesus is the Son of God, v. 5. made up of all purity and patience, &c.

9. If we receive the witnesse of men, the witnesse of God is greater: for this is the witnesse of God, which he hath testified of his Son.]

9. For the beleiving any thing, it is ordinarily thought sufficient, to have the testimony of two or three creditable men, and then sure Gods testimony from heaven, is much more worthy of beleif, And this testimony now produced for the truth of our beleif in Christ, is evidently the testimony of God.

* or witnesse of God, for the King's MS. reads μαρτυρίαν τῶ Θεῶ

10. He that beleiveth on the Son of God, hath the * witnesse in himself: he that beleiveth not God, hath made him a lier, because he beleiveth not the record that God gave of his Son.

10. He therefore that thus beleiveth in Christ and in despight of the Gnosticks Apostasie, acknowledgeth the sonne of God to have come truly in the flesh, hath no reason to fear, having Gods testimony to secure him. And he that after all this, when God hath so testified in plain words, This is my beloved sonne &c. doth still refuse to beleive it, he makes God a lyer, in not beleiving his testimony of Christ.

11. And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life; and this life is in his Son.]

11. And the sum of this testimony of Gods concerning Christ is, that the way that Christ hath put us in, is the true way to eternall blisse, and that this is to be had, by following the example and precepts of Christ, whom therefore in that voice from heaven he commanded all men to hear.

12. He that hath the Son, hath life, and he that hath not the Son of God, hath not life.]

12. He that doth so, that thus insists on Christ's doctrine, and pattern set before him, is as sure of attaining this blisse, as if he were already possess'd of it, and he that doth not, hath nothing to doe with it.

13. This I have said to all you that are true beleivers, to give you assurance that salvation, and all that on God's part belongs to it, is made over to you in Christ, that you may be incouraged to continue in the faith, and wholly depend on Christ for all that belongs to you, with all the confidence imaginable, and so never fall off in time of worldly pressures.

13. These things have I written unto you that beleive on the name of the Sonne of God, that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may beleive on the name of the Sonne of God.]

b. 14. And of this confidence this is one speciall branch, that we come boldly and freely (see Joh. 7.2.) to make our request to him, depending on that promise, which God in Christ hath made to us, viz. that he will hear all the faithfull requests of his servants; but that promise with these limitations, 1. that what they ask, be according to Gods will, not onely not abhorrent from it, but truly agreeable to it; and 2dly according to his wisedome, that which at that time to that person he judgeth fit to be granted him, and neither contrary to any thing he hath decreed, or such that by any accident God sees either hurtfull, or not usefull, or lesse profitable to him, 3dly that he ask in faith, resolved to stick fast to God, whatsoever comes, to use no means of obtaining his desires, but such as are perfectly acceptable to him. See Jam. 1.6.

14. And this is the confidence that we have † in him, that if [b] we aske any thing according to his will, he heareth us.]

† toward § him εἰς αὐτὸν

15. And if this of God's hearing our prayers be universally true of all whatsoever, that are thus qualified, then in proportion it must be true of every particular petition, which we have or shall aske of him, 'tis certain that he heareth, and granteth it instantly, and will actually, in his time, and in that manner and way that he sees best for us (though not instantly, or in the kind which we aske) most infallibly bestow it on us.

15. And if we know that he hears us, whatsoever we aske, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him.

c. 16. One instance of this I shall mention to you, If any man see his fellow Christian fall into any deliberate sin, yet so as not to refuse admonition or contemne advise to reform, i. e. if he that thus sins, doe not remain incorrigible under the censures of the Church, then in that case it is the duty of the Church, and of each particular Christian, to pray to God for him, that he will pardon his sin, and raise him speedily by his grace to that state from whence he is fallen, and for any such offence, not obstinately continued in, God will thus hear the prayers of the Church for him. But this not so, that God will upon any intercession pardon him before his returning and repenting, but that the Church may admit such an one to repentance, and upon his approving his sincerity of repentance, receive him by imposition of hands, and blessing, and absolution. But in case he goe on contumaciously and incorrigibly, there is then no mercy under the Gospell for such, nor promise that the prayers of the Church shall be availeable for such.

16. If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall aske, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a * sin unto death: * I doe not say that he shall pray for it.]

* of that I say not that he should pray ὑπὲρ ἐκείνου ἵνα τοῦτο αἰτήσῃ

17. 'Tis true indeed, all deliberate sin is such as is not reconcileable with the fear and love of God, and consequently mortiferous without repentance, yet some difference there may be in this, and some that have sinned, may not yet be so contumacious, so desperately incorrigible as others, And of those I now speak.

17 All unrighteousnesse is sin, and there is a sin not unto death.]

18. As for these deliberate sinnes, which are not looked on as sins unto death, mortiferous in so high a degree, we know that a pious person (see note on c. 3. d.) will not be guilty of any of them, He useth all care and diligence to keep himself pure, that the devill or tempter get no hold on him.

18. We know that whosoever is born of God, sinneth not; but he that is begotten of God, keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not.]

19. And we know that we Christians have by our profession undertaken pure and pious lives, are elevated to God, whereas the wicked riotous multitude of Gnosticks &c. are set upon nothing else but villany, Exod. 32. 22.

19. And we know that we are of God, and † the whole world lieth in wickednesse.]

† the world is wholly set on evill, κείται ἐν τῷ πονηρῷ ὅλος

20. But against the doctrines and infusions of these, we are armed sufficiently by Christ, who, we are sure, is come in the flesh, and came on purpose to instruct us in the knowledge and obedience to the commands of the true God, So that hereby we have all security that we cannot mistake, it being God who cannot lye, whom we adhere to, and his sonne Jesus Christ, of whom he hath given his testimony. And thus we may confidently resolve that the Christian religion is the true.

20. And we know that the Sonne of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know * him that is true: and we are in him that is true, † even in his sonne Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and eternall life.]

* or the true God, for the King's MS. reads ἀληθινὸν θεὸν † and in his sonne καὶ

d. 21. Farewell my tender Christians, and be sure you keep your selves from offering sacrifices to the false idol Gods (which the Gnosticks would doe in case of persecution) and from those mixtures of heathenisme, and uncleannesses, practised in their heathen worships by them, and brought in among Christians by that licentious sect, and even from images themselves, which the Gnosticks (who pretended to have forsaken the idolatries of the heathens, and so to have become Christians) did again fall into, worshipping the images and pictures of Simon Magus and Helena, and offering sacrifices unto them. Amen.

21. Little children keep your selves from [d] idols. Amen.]

Notes on Chap. V.

3. ὁ ἐλθὼν δι' ὕδατος καὶ αἵματος

What ὁ ἐλθὼν δι' ὕδατος καὶ αἵματος, he that came by water and blood] here signifies, will appear by considering the context, and the relation of these to the former words. There the beleif that Jesus is the Son of God, is the means of victory over the temptations of the world, the baits then offered by the Gnosticks, carnal pleasures on one side, and immunitie from persecutions on the other. And to that this beleif is a very proper instrument, For considering wherein Christ's sonship was exercised here on earth, his innocence and his sufferings, and that if we will behave our selves as sons of God, we must imitate him, and that our faith in him consists in thus transscribing these his filial qualifications, the conclusion hence follows, that he that is such a childe of God, v. 4. i. e. that beleives that Jesus is the son of God, v. 5. doth, or will overcome the world. This then being the force of the Apostles arguing, it must follow that these words, οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ ἐλθὼν δι' ὕδατος καὶ αἵματος, this this is he that came by water and blond, muſt bee the deſcription of Chriſt, as that ſonſhip of his is expreſs'd for our imitation in this matter, i. e. as he approved his innocence, faultleſneſſe to God on one ſide, and his patience, and (in ſpight of temptations, even of death it ſelf) perſeverance on the other ſide. And this is here figuratively expreſs'd, and the figure fetched from an eminent paſſage in the ſtory of Chriſt, particularly conſidered, and related by S. John, and that with a ſpecial weight laid on it, both for the truth, and the conſiderableneſſe of it, viz. the water and blond, that at his crucifixion came out of his ſide at the piercing of it, the water being a moſt proper embleme of his innocence, and the blond of his patience and conſtancy, and then the ἐλθὼν διὰ, his having come by theſe two, is no more then the having had theſe two emblemes and the things ſignified by them, moſt eminently obſervable in the diſcharge of his office here on earth, For we know that being ſent, or, coming, are the words that refer to diſcharge of office, Chriſt is ſaid to be ſent by God. and, which is all one, to come, and is proverbially ſtyled ὁ ἐρχόμενος, he that cometh, and, he that cometh into the world, i. e. the great prophet ſent by God for the diſcharge of this office, which as Son of God, Mat. 3.17. he was ordained to, and for which he came into the world, and which he did with perfect ſingleneſſe, and reſiſting unto blond, ſuffering death in the cauſe; and thoſe two were expreſs'd by that joint embleme at his death, the water and blond, which John ſaw flow from him. In this matter alſo it is, that the Spirit is alſo joyned as a teſtifier (that is the meaning of ἐστὶ μαρτυροῦν, is teſtifying) viz. of the innocence of Chriſt (which being granted, the conſtancy and ſufferings were ſufficiently known and proved by that αἱματοδαλύσεως, flowing out of water and blond, which was an evidence of the wounding and piercing him to the heart,) For 1. the Spirit's deſcending on him at his Baptiſm, and lighting on him as a dove, was one teſtimonie of his perfect innocence and acceptableneſſe in the ſight of his Father: And 2dly, by that Spirit's deſcent being inſtated on his prophetick office, he is alſo furniſhed with the gift of miracles &c. which were ſure teſtimonies that what he preached was God's meſſage, that he was no ſinner, no ſeducer, no falſe prophet, ſeeing, as the Jews confeſs'd, he did ſuch miracles. Thirdly, the coming down of that Spirit upon the Apoſtles, and that according to the promiſe of Chriſt, was a teſtimony of the truth of what elſe he ſaid, and by this deſcent the Spirit became a Paraclete or Advocate of Chriſt, and ſo teſtified and convinced the world, as of their ſin in crucifying him, ſo of his righteouſneſſe, in that, after his crucifixion, he was raiſed and taken up to the Father. All this being thus ſaid in this verſe, as it is the proving of what went before, by theſe three witneſſes, ſo doth it introduce what follows v.7,8. which is but the ſaying the ſame again, and joining a parallel with it, For ſo, I ſuppoſe, the following words are to be underſtood, For there are three that bear witneſſe in heaven, &c. not that that is a reaſon of what went immediatly before (for it would be hard to ſhew, how thus the ſeventh verſe could be a reaſon of v. 6. how the Trinity of witneſſes in heaven, ſhould be a proof, that the water, and blond, and ſpirit, do witneſs, v.6.) but that it is a parallel to illuſtrate it by, and might in ſenſe be beſt expreſs'd thus, As there be three that bear witneſſe in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the holy Ghoſt, and theſe three are one: So alſo there are three that teſtifie on the earth, the ſpirit, and water, and blond, and theſe three, though they are not one by any kind of unity of nature, as the former three are; yet they agree in one, i. e. in one teſtimony, evidently confirming the ſame thing, which they were brought to teſtifie v. 6. Of ſuch like Idioms of ſpeech we have formerly noted many, in note on Mat. 9. d. By this means, as this whole place is competently explained, and freed from all difficulty, ſo is it vindicated from a firſt miſ-interpretation, which ſome late writers have faſtned on it, interpreting the [ἓν εἰσι, v.7. are one] by εἰς τὸ ἓν εἶναι, they agree in one. But of this 1. there can be no evidence, nor indeed any reaſon aſſigned that the phraſe ſhould be ſo ſuddenly altered v.8. if the ſame thing were meant, which was (ſo immediately before, v.7.) ſo differently expreſſed. If ἓν εἰσι are one] had ſignified no more, but agree in one teſtimony v. 7. is it imaginable that of thoſe other three, wch had ſo lately been affirmed to teſtifie the ſame v.6. this would have been affirmed in other (ſo much plainer) words, εἰς τὸ ἓν εἶναι, are to one purpoſe, or agree in one? If there had been any reaſon thus to vary the phraſe, it would probably have been by applying the obſcurer phraſe to thoſe three, of whom it had been before ſufficiently affirmed, and the more perſpicuous and explicite to the three in heaven, of whom it had not been formerly affirmed, and not ſo directly contrary, as here we finde it is. Secondly, the only reaſon pretended why [ἓν εἰσι, are one] ſhould not infer really, as literally it doth, the unity of the Trinity, being this, becauſe [εἰς ἓν εἰσι, agree in one] is attributed to the three on earth, That argument is of no kinde of force, for the parallel here held between thoſe in heaven, and thoſe on earth, being onely in reſpect of the teſtimonies, and of the number of the teſtifiers, there is no neceſſity that the Apoſtle or we ſhould extend it to all other circumſtances, or if there were, it would bee as reaſonable to interpret the latter by the former, the εἰς ἓν εἰσι, they are to one purpoſe] by the [ἓν εἰσι, they are one] (which were abſurd, and is not imagined) as the former by the latter, Indeed no reaſon for either of them; But on the other ſide, having to the mention of the three witneſſes in heaven, annex'd, out of the Chriſtian doctrine, the οὗτοι οἱ τρεῖς ἓν εἰσι, theſe three are one] it was reaſonable, when he came to the other three, of whom that could not be affirmed, to affirm of them as much as the matter would bear, i. e. that they are εἰς ἓν, teſtifiers to the ſame purpoſe, though not ἓν of one and the ſame nature. Laſtly, if it were granted that ἓν εἰσι, are one,] did note (as εἰς ἓν doth) the according of their teſtimonies, yet that no way excludes the unity of the teſtifiers, becauſe both thoſe ſenſes may belong to the place, and be true, the unity of the teſtifiers neceſſarily inferring the according of their teſtimonies, though the according of the teſtimonies infer not the unity of the teſtifiers. And then both theſe being ſo conſequent one to the other, and ſo pertinent to the Apoſtle's purpoſe, (viz. the conſent of all witneſſes to the truth he had to prove) and the words being in themſelves ſelves ſo clear for the aſſerting of the unity, there can be no pretence or reaſon to doubt, but this is the importance of them. One thing onely is here needful to be added, that in the King's MS. (and many other copies) a great part of theſe two verſes is left out, and inſtead of them no more read but this, ὅτι τρεῖς εἰσὶν οἱ μαρτυροῦντες, τὸ πνεῦμα, καὶ τὸ ὕδωρ, καὶ τὸ αἷμα, For there are three that bear witneſſe, the ſpirit, and the water, and the blood. But of this it muſt firſt be obſerved, that the ordinary reading hath the authority of many antient, and all, but one, printed copies, 2^dly, that the omiſſion may have been caſual, by the error of ſome Scribe, who having tranſcribed in the copie before him as far as ὅτι τρεῖς εἰσὶν οἱ μαρτυροῦντες, his eye might by error paſſe to ver. 8. where the ſame words are again repeated, and ſo leap over what is in the midſt, and immediately ſubjoin what there immediately follows after [μαρτυροῦντες] ἐν τῇ γῇ, τὸ πνεῦμα καὶ τὸ ὕδωρ, καὶ τὸ αἷμα, καὶ οἱ τρεῖς εἰς τὸ ἕν εἰσιν. Many examples of viſible omiſſions on this occaſion are obſervable in this and moſt other MSS. as might largely be evidenced, and it is that to which the haſt of tranſcribers, and the neceſſity of taking off the eye from the copie, renders them very liable. Which error being once committed in one copie, he that ſhould come after, and tranſcribe that, might, upon judgement and reaſon, omit ſomewhat more, viz. [ἐν τῇ γῇ, and, καὶ οἱ τρεῖς εἰς ἕν εἰσιν,] becauſe thoſe two parts of the verſe being ſet diſtinctly by way of oppoſition to two former, [ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ, and ὅτι εἰσὶν οἱ τρεῖς ἕν εἰσι] the former verſe, in which thoſe two were, being once loſt, theſe later were by congruity to goe after them, and to be left out alſo. To which purpoſe it is obſervable, that (as to theſe two phraſes) there is yet a greater variety in the copies, the Syriack and Arabick having the καὶ οἱ τρεῖς ἕν εἰσι, or εἰς ἕν εἰσι, and theſe three are one, or to one purpoſe, and many copies having ἐν τῇ γῇ, on the earth, which yet have not the former verſe; Which ſhews that the former caſual error was firſt committed before this other, which was taken up on judgement, and that all that followed the one, where there was no place of choiſe, did not, where there was choiſe, chooſe to follow the other. Thirdly, that it is not imaginable, how, if this of the King's MS. and thoſe others were the right reading, this which is now in the ordinary copies, ſhould get in, unleſſe it were by groſſe fraud, and forgery, for to the infirmities of a Scribe (to which omiſſions may) theſe additions cannot be imputable. Fourthly, that if the addition be thought imputable to a fraud on one ſide, the leaving it out may much more reaſonably be imputed to a fraud on the other ſide. For 1. ſuppoſing it thus far equal, that as the omiſſion was uſeful to the Arrians, and Anti-Trinitarians, ſo the addition was of advantage to the Catholicks or Orthodox, yet it is preſently viſible, that the intereſt of thoſe that were condemned in the Church, as hereticks, was far greater, and the neceſſity more preſſing on their part, (that I mention not the greater likelihood of hereticks adventuring to make uſe of ſuch a forgery) to leave out the words and commit this fraud, then that of the Catholicks was to put them in. For if the words be once acknowledged to be the words of Scripture, it gives a concluſion to all the hereticks pretenſions, and it neceſſarily follows, 1. that they that deny the Trinity, moſt diametrally oppoſe the plain words of Scripture, the ὅτι οἱ τρεῖς, theſe three, here, and 2^dly, that they that deny the Unity, contradict diſtinctly S. John's affirmation of ἕν εἰσι, theſe three are one. 3^dly, that they that deny the holy Ghoſt to be God, and yet do not affirm him to be a creature, and conſequently conclude him to be nothing but the virtue and efficacy of God, do oppoſe the plain words here, which diſtinguiſh the holy Ghoſt from the Word, and from the Father, as much, and in the ſame manner, as the Word, or ſecond hypoſtaſis, from the Father on one ſide, or from the holy Ghoſt on the other. And ſo as long as theſe words ſtand in force, it is not poſſible for the hereticks doctrines to be maintained, (And therefore it is that Socinus and his followers finde it neceſſary to affirm, that theſe words are certainly ſuppoſititious.) But for the Catholicks, that maintain the doctrine aſſerted by the firſt great general Councels, againſt the hereticks of the Church, they had no ſuch need of inſerting and forging theſe words, Their cauſe might be otherwiſe maintained, if theſe words were expunged, and put out of the Canon, 1. by the form of Baptiſm, Mat. 28. 19. inſtituted by Chriſt, which 1. clears the diſtinction of the Father, the Son, and holy Ghoſt, as fully as this, and 2^dly, by making them the object of our faith, ſuppoſeth each to be God, as well as any, the holy Ghoſt, and the Son, as well as the Father; which being ſuppoſed, the Unity may from thence be collected alſo, by force of Eph. 4. 5. where parallel to the one Baptiſme, is added one God and Father of all, noting the one form of Chriſtian Baptiſme [In the name of the Father, and the Son, and the holy Ghoſt] to be the entring of us into the faith and name of the one God. Secondly, by the expreſſe words of Chriſt, I and my Father are one, John 10. 30. which affirming the unity of the Father and the Son, leaves no place to doubt of the like unity of the holy Ghoſt alſo. Thirdly, by the Apoſtles ſwearing by Chriſt, and (which is all one) calling to witneſſe the holy Ghoſt, Rom 9. 1. which is an act of divine worſhip appropriated to God, by whom onely we are to ſwear. Fourthly, by the Apoſtle's praying to our Lord Jeſus Chriſt for his grace, to the holy Ghoſt for his communication, or liberal effuſion of his gifts, as well as to God the Father for his love; which is become the ſolemn form of Apoſtolical benediction at the end of the Epiſtles. Fifthly, (as far as concerns the holy Ghoſt) by Act. 5. where deceiving or robbing the holy Ghoſt v. 3. is lying to God v. 4. and 1 Cor. 12. 11. where the Spirit, as a perſon, is ſaid to work, and to divide to every one according as he will; Laſtly, (as far as concerns Chriſt, who hath been moſt eminently oppoſed by all ſorts of hereticks from the Gnoſticks to the Arians, and Photinians) by the frequent doxologies, or forms of giving glory to Chriſt, in the very ſame ſtyle, as the Jews (from whom thoſe forms are taken) cuſtomarily and ſolemnly made uſe of, to acknowledge the God of Iſrael to be the eternal God, (ſee note on Rom. 9. c.) By all which, and much more, it appears, how impertinent, and unneceſſary it was for the orthodox, to feign and forge theſe words, and withal, how eaſie for their enemies to have diſproved them, and detected their forgery, if they had attempted it, and how much more temptation there was on the hereticks ſide, to free themſelves from the importunity of this place, by raſing that out of their bibles, which could not otherwiſe be perſwaded to comply with their pretenſions. And accordingly, as in S. Cyprian, (who wrote before Arius was born, and conſequently before the time, in which there could be any motive to have made this inſertion) the words are diſtinctly found, l. de Unit: Eccleſ: Dicit dominus, Ego & Pater unum ſumus, & iterum de Patre, & Filio, & Spiritu ſancto ſcriptum eſt, Et hi tres unum ſunt, The Lord ſaith, I and my Father are one, and again of the Father, Son, and holy Ghoſt it is written, And theſe three are one. And in like manner Tertullian contr: Praxeam, Qui tres unum ſunt, Which three are one; So it is confeſſed of S. Hierome, that he aſſerted the truth of our reading from the Greek copies which he had, and defended it againſt all, publickly complaining, and conteſting it, that in thoſe copies where it was wanting, it was omitted or raſed out by the fraud of hereticks; and ſo S. Ambroſe ſaith, that the hereticks did erade that place; And this was ſo farre from yeilding matter of recrimination againſt the orthodox in thoſe daies, that ſome learned men, who have expreſſed their opinion, that the addition of theſe words is ſuppoſititious, have laid that to the Arians charge alſo, who, ſay they, from thence deſired to conclude, that the Father, Son, and Spirit are one only by conſent in this teſtimony, as the water, and blood, and ſpirit are ſaid to be; But with how little reaſon this is ſuſpected, appears already by what hath before been ſaid, and needs no farther anſwer or refuting. It were here eaſie to deduce the doctrine of this verſe, as it is moſt largely ſet down, from the tradition of the Church through all times. I ſhall only affix ſome few teſtimonies, before the time of the firſt Councel of Nice, ſince which there can be no place of diſpute. In the firſt age, that of Clemens Romanus is obſervable, Ζῇ ὁ θεὸς, καὶ ὁ κύριος Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς, καὶ τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, God lives, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the holy Ghoſt, A teſtimony produced out of him by S. Baſil the Great, c. 29. περὶ ἁγ: πνευμ: where ſpeaking of the Doxologie, as one eſpecial Apoſtolical tradition, and reckoning up the antients, from whom it was derived, he urgeth this ſaying of Clemens for the uſe of it. In the ſecond Century we have Juſtine Martyr Apol: 2. pro Chriſtianis, who having mentioned the Father of righteouſneſs, he adds, Ἀλλ' ἐκεῖνόν τε καὶ παρ' αὐτοῦ ἐλθόντα καὶ διδάξαντα ταῦτα καὶ τὸν ἄλλον στρατὸν τῶν ἀγαθῶν ὁμοίων ἀνθρώπων καὶ προφητικὸν πνεῦμα τιμῶντας καὶ σεβομένους προσκυνοῦμεν καὶ σεβόμεθα, Him and the Son coming from him, and the prophetick Spirit we worſhip and adore. A tract alſo there is cited by Leontius Hieroſol: and by Euthymius owned as Juſtin's, περὶ τῆς ἁγίας καὶ ὁμοουσίου τριάδος, Of the holy and coeſſential Trinity, which, if genuine, will clear the whole matter, for there we have ὁ τῶν ἁπάντων θεὸς ὁ πατὴρ, καὶ υἱὸς καὶ ἅγιον πνεῦμα γνωριζόμενος, the God of all, who is known in Father, Son, and holy Ghoſt: and of them all, τὸ τῆς ἑνώσεως καὶ μιᾶς οὐσίας μετέχοντα, τῆς θεότητος καὶ μιᾶς δυνάμεως καὶ ἐξουσίας, theſe three partake of one and the ſame eſſence, have one and the ſame divinity: and τὰ τρία πρόσωπα, three perſons, aſſerted and cited from S. Paul, 2 Cor. 13. 13. and from Chriſt, Mat. 28. 19. and μόνῳ τῷ τριάδι τοῦ θεοῦ, καὶ τριὰς ὁ μονὰς γνωριζομένη, Unity in Trinity, and Trinity in Unity. So again the Author of the Queſtions, and Anſwers ad Orthodoxos, under Juſtin's name, reſp: ad Quæſt: 139. Εἷς ἐστὶν ὁ θεὸς τῇ ζυγομίᾳ τῶν τριῶν ὑποστάσεων τῇ διαφορᾷ ἀλλήλων, ὁ τῇ οὐσίᾳ, ἀλλὰ τῷ ὑποκεῖσθαι τρόπῳ, There is one God in the coexiſtence of three divine ſubſiſtences, differing from one another not in eſſence, but in the manner of exiſtence. So Athenagoras in his Ambaſſie for the Chriſtians, who were by the heathens looked on as Atheiſts. Τίς οὖν ἂν ἀνεπιφθόνως λόγοιτο θεὸν πατέρα καὶ υἱὸν θεὸν, καὶ πνεῦμα ἅγιον; δεικνύοντας ἑνωτικῶς καὶ κατὰ τὸ ἑνοῦσθαι δυνάμει, καὶ κατὰ τὴν τάξιν διαιρουμένους, ἀλόγους Ἄθεοις ἐγκαλοῦντες; Who would not wonder to hear them called Atheiſts, who acknowledge God the Father, God the Son, and God the holy Ghoſt, and demonſtrate their power in the Union, and their diſtinction in the order? So Clemens Alexand: in the concluſion of his Pædagogus, Τῷ μόνῳ πατρὶ καὶ υἱῷ σὺν καὶ τῷ ἁγίῳ πνεύματι πάντα τῷ ἑνὶ· To the only Father and Son with the holy Ghoſt, one in all things &c. So in the third Centurie Origen is by S. Baſil περὶ πνεύμ: ἁγ: reckoned among the aſſertors of this Tradition, l. 6. Comm: in Johan: τὴν θεότητα τῆς Τριάδος, the Deity of the Trinity, which is to be adored; and on the Romans, καὶ τὴν τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος θεότητα, the Deity of the holy Ghoſt. So Dionyſius Biſhop of Rome cited by Athanaſius in Epiſt: de Decret: Synod: Nic: Ὅτι μὲν τριὰς μετὰ κηρυττομένου ἐστὶ καὶ θείας χάριτος ἐπίστανται, Τρεῖς δὲ θεοὺς ὅτι πλαισὶν ἔστι καινὴ διαθήκη κηρύττει, Theſe, i. e. the true diſciples of Chriſt, evidently know that the Trinity is preached by divine Scripture, but that three Gods are not preached by the Old or New Teſtament. So Tertullian againſt Praxeas, Deum unicum quidem, ſed cum œconomiâ eſſe credendum, expaveſcunt ad œconomiam, numerum & diſpoſitionem Trinitatis, diviſionem credunt Unitatis, quando Unitas ex ſemetipſo derivans Trinitatem non deſtruatur ab illâ, ſed adminiſtretur, We are to believe one God, but with the œconomie or adminiſtration; they are affrighted at the œconomie, and think the number and order of the Trinity is the diviſion of the Unity, when indeed the Unity deriving the Trinity from it ſelf is not deſtroyed by it, but adminiſtred. And, Ecce dico alium eſſe Patrem, alium Filium, alium Spiritum ſanctum, non tamen diverſitate alium, ſed diſtributione, nec diviſione alium, ſed diſtinctione, Loe I affirm the Father to be another, the Son another, the holy Ghoſt another, yet not another by diverſity, but by diſtribution, nor another by diviſion, but diſtinction, And, Qui tres unum ſunt, non unus, Quomodo dictum eſt, Ego & Pater unum ſumus, ad ſubſtantiæ unitatem, non ad numeri ſingularitatem, Theſe three are one (nature) not one (perſon) as it was ſaid, I and my Father are one, for the unity of the ſubſtance, not the ſingularity of the number. The like place out of S. Cyprian was before produced, and this text from 1 Joh. 5. made uſe of for the aſſerting it, And ſo we ſee the truth of what we find in the debates of the firſt Nicene Councel, on which their decrees are founded, Chriſtum conſubſtantialem Filium Patri- juxta olim traditam Eccleſiæ Apoſtolicam fidem expreſſis teſtimoniis demonſtrantes, that the doctrine of the conſubſtantiality of Chriſt the Son to the Father- is by expreſs teſtimonies demonſtrated to be according to the Apoſtolick faith of old delivered to the Church, and that of Hoſius in the name of the Councel, Trinitatem individuam, ineffabilem, unam divinitatem, & eandem ipſius eſſentiam eſſe credentes, & eandem confitemur juxta nobis ab initio traditam ipſius fidei dogmatum integritatem, à Domino per ſanctos ejus Apoſtolos, & à ſanctis ejus Apoſtolis, & à ſanctis antiquis noſtris patribus qui Apoſtolorum ſanctam fidem illibatam conſervaverunt, We beleive the individual Trinity, the ineffable, one Godhead, and that the eſſence thereof is the ſame, and we confeſſe it the ſame according to the integrity of the doctrines of the faith from the beginning delivered to us from our Saviour by his holy Apoſtles, and from his holy Apoſtles, and from our holy antient fathers, who conſerved the holy faith of the Apoſtles intire. So in * Athanaſius's Epiſtle to the Africanes, telling them of the Acts of the Councel, and of the decree of adding ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρὶ τὸν υἱὸν, the conſubſtantiability of the Son with the Father, he adds, Οἱ δ' ἐπίσκοποι οὐχ' ἑαυτοῖς ἐνεγείλαν τὰς λέξεις, ἀλλ' ἐκ τῶν πάλαι ἔχοντες τὰ μαρτύρια, ὅπως ἔγραψαν, Ἐπίσκοποι γὰρ ἦσαν ἀρχαῖοι πρὸ ἐτῶν ἐγγὺς ἑκατὸν τριάκοντα ἢ τι μεγάλης Ῥώμης, καὶ τῆς ἐνταῦθα πόλεως. οἱ ἐπάσαντο τὸ πάντα λέγοντας τὸν υἱὸν, καὶ μὴ ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρὶ, The Biſhops in the Councel, did not invent theſe words for themſelves, but having teſtimony from their fathers, thus they wrote, For there were antient Biſhops about one hundred and thirty years before that Councel, both of Rome, and of this city, who reprehended thoſe who affirmed the Son to be a creature, and not conſubſtantial with the Father. Καὶ τοῦτο, ſaith he, ἐγίνωσκεν Εὐσέβιος ὁ γνόμῃ Ἐπισκοπος τῆς Καισαρείας, θεὶς τιθεὶς μὲ συνθέχαν τῇ Ἀρειανῇ αἱρέσει, ὕστερον δ' ὑπογράψας τῇ ἐν Νικαίᾳ συνόδῳ, ἔγραψε καὶ πρὸς ἰδίοις διαβεβαιούμενος, ὅτι καὶ τῶν παλαιῶν τινας λογίους, καὶ ἐπιφανεῖς ἐπισκόπους καὶ συγγραφεῖς εὗρομεν, οἳ περὶ τοῦ πατρὸς καὶ τοῦ υἱοῦ οὕτω τῷ τοῦ ὁμοουσίου χρησαμένους ὀνόματι, And this Euſebius Biſhop of Caſarea acknowledged, who having formerly gone on in the Arian hereſie, but afterward ſubſcribed to the Councel of Nice, wrote and confirmed it with his own words, ſaying, We have found ſome of the antients, conſiderable perſons, and eminent Biſhops and writers, which concerning the divinity of the Father and the Son uſed the word Conſubſtantial. And theſe words of Euſebius are at length to be ſeen in his Epiſtle in Theodoret, l. 1. c. 11. All which being evidences of the doctrine of the Church before the Councel of Nice, are of full force to demonſtrate that which I have now in hand, viz.: that the Catholicks in their controverſie againſt the Arians had no occaſion to inſert theſe words, and that this was the doctrine of the Church before that Councel of Nice. Much more might be added on this ſubject. This I have choſen to ſay, on ſo great an occaſion, once for all.

b. Αἰτοῦσι κατὰ τὸ θέλημα αὐτοῦ

Αἰτοῦσι κατὰ τὸ θέλημα αὐτοῦ, asking according to God's will, ſeems to comprehend two things, the firſt in reſpect of the matter of his prayer, that that be according to God's will; and the ſecond in reſpect of the diſpoſition of the petitioner, that he duly behave himſelf, in asking, according to God's will. For the former of theſe, the matter of the prayer, that muſt be according to the will of God, and ſo it may be two waies, 1. By being not only perfectly lawful, and ſo not contrary to his will, (for ſo is every indifferent thing, which we have no reaſon to be confident, that God will grant us upon our demand) but alſo good and acceptable in the ſight of God, ſuch is the gift of his Spirit, Lu. 11. 13. ſuch the increaſe of faith, which the diſciples prayed for, meaning thereby God's gift of grace, ſo farre as to enable them thus to grow and increaſe; not the habit, or degrees of the habit of that virtue, for thoſe are regularly to be acquired by our acts, or exerciſes of that ſtrength which God beſtowes, our making uſe of that talent intruſted to us, to which his promiſe of more grace is confined, whilſt from him that laies it up in a napkin he takes away that which he hath, Nor again the acts of that virtue, for thoſe are no otherwiſe given us by God, than as he gives us ſtrength to perform them, which the Apoſtle expreſſes by ἐνεργῶν ἐν ὑμῖν τὸ ἐνεργεῖν, Phil. 2. 13. his working in us to work or do, upon which the exhortation is founded of the κατεργάζεσθε, working, and working out our own ſalvation. Secondly, It may be according to his will, by being agreeable to his wiſdome, which alwaies bounds, and limits, and determins his will. And thus a thing may be ſuppoſed to be three waies, 1. When that which is prayed for, is not contrary to any decree of God, which being an act of his will, is alſo an efflux of his (incomprehenſible) wiſdome, This decree of God is to us expreſſed by God's oath paſt on any thing, which makes it immutable, Hebr. 6. 17. as when of the provokers, Hebr. 3. 18. God ſware that they ſhould not enter into Canaan, for in that caſe it was certain that neither Moſes's prayers for them, nor their own for themſelves ſhould prevail to reverſe it, though that others, who did not thus provoke ſhould thus enter, was perfectly acceptable to God, agreeable to his will and wiſdome; And ſo when the iniquity of the people is grown to ſuch a pitch, that God decrees their exciſion (and the ſame may be ſaid of any particular man, that hath ſo fill'd up his meaſure) though Noah, Daniel and Job ſhould intercede, they ſhall not prevail for them. 2^dly, When that which is prayed for, is not foreſeen by God to be inconvenient, or hurtful for him that prayeth for it, for if it be, in that caſe God's denying to grant the prayer is a greater mercy than the granting of it; He were an enemy, if he would thus hear us to our ruine.

Evertere urbes totas optantibus ipſis
Dii faciles: —

The heathens could charge it on their Gods as too great a facileneſs to deſtroy whole cities by this means of granting men their wiſhes. 3^dly, When, although that which is prayed for be good for the petitioners, yet ſomewhat elſe is better, and really more deſireable to them, And then thus to deny what is asked, and thus to exceed their asking, what is that but the divineſt and moſt advantagious way of granting it? and in that caſe God, that knows what we really moſt want, what is moſt truly agreeable to our deſires, being able to chooſe for us better than we for our ſelves, when he grants not our prayers in the kind, yet he grants them by way (not only of equivalence, but) of running over, denies us what we demand, and gives us what is more for

out advantage, denies us what is good, but grants us that which is much better for us: Thus when Christ pray'd for the departure of that cup, his prayer was not heard, but in ſtead of it the angels ſent to ſtrengthen him, and enable to drink it up, as that which was more for his, and the world's advantage; And thus when S. Paul prayed thrice that the thorn in the fleſh ſhould depart from him, that prayer was not granted, but in ſtead of it that grace given, which was ſufficient to enable him to ſupport that affliction, and that was better to him, than the other, for God's ſtrength was perfected and magnified in him through that weakneſſe, or affliction, viz. by his Chriſtian bearing of it. The ſecond thing, that which reſpects the diſpoſition or qualifications of the petitioner, may be reduced to theſe three branches, 1. That he be ſuch as to whom God's promiſes do belong, ſuch an one as performs his part of the Covenant of mercy, the pious Chriſtian liver, he that is a worſhipper of God, and doth his will; For otherwiſe God which is a hearer of prayers indefinitely, is not the hearer of his, we know that God heareth not ſinners, If they incline to iniquity in their heart, the Lord will not hear them, when they make their long prayers, the Lord will hide his face, their hands are full of blood, they muſt waſh and make them clean, before they have any title to God's hearing or anſwering their prayers. 2*dly*, that in that particular, for which he prays, he apply himſelf onely to God, and ſuch means as he knows to be acceptable to him, This is it which is called in S. James, asking in faith c. 1. b. and is oppoſed to wavering (i. e. doubting and demurring whether God's wayes or his own are to be adhered to for the obtaining his end) and to the ἀνὴρ δίψυχος double-minded man, v. 8. who ſending one mind, one will unto God in prayer, hath another for the moſt ungodly inſtruments, makes a ſecret addreſſe unto them, ἀκατάστατος which renders him there ἀκατάστατος, unſettled and various, one while in the ways of God, and another while of the Devil, and, Let not ſuch an one think, ſaith the Apoſtle, that he ſhall receive any thing of the Lord, ver. 7. 3*dly*, That his asking be joined with importunity, for to that qualification of our prayers the promiſe is expreſsly made, in the parable of the widow, and the unjuſt judge, and in the joining together of asking, ſeeking, knocking, to which the having, finding, opening unto, are promiſed by Chriſt; By this importunity meaning a continuance, and perſeverance in our prayers for that which we want, and when at the firſt asking, the mercy is not confer'd, repeating & re-inforcing the requeſt, waiting upon the Lord which hideth his face, and never giving over the importunity, until the requeſt be graciouſly anſwered by God. All theſe being thus ſet down, are the ſeveral ingredients to make up the intire qualification ſignified hereby, praying according to God's will, and to them that are thus qualified in each branch, this confidence here belongs, that whatſoever they ſhall thus ask God will hear them. By which it appears in what ſenſe it may be deemed to be required of the petitioner to beleive, that his petition ſhall be granted, viz. onely according to the importance of theſe words thus explicated, It being certain that no man is bound to beleive that which is not true, or to beleive that abſolutely, which depends upon ſo many conditions, upon performing of which, as he lawfully may, nay (as a duty of faith to God's promiſes) is obliged, and muſt beleive, that what he thus prays ſhall be granted, ſo if he perform them not, he is not obliged to beleive that his prayers ſhall be granted him, and if through a great meaſure of humility, and undervaluing his own performances, he chance to erre, and think himſelf unqualified, when he is not unqualified, and conſequently want this confidence toward God, that he will hear his prayers, when he hath (if he knew it) due grounds for that confidence, it is not to be imagined, that the want of that confidence, or the exceſs of that humility, which is ſo acceptable in the ſight of God, ſhould render him, or his prayers unacceptable and ineffectual to him. And accordingly αἰτείτω ἐν πίστει, Let him ask in faith, in S. James chap. 1. 6. muſt no otherwiſe be interpreted. Αἰτείτω ἐν πίστει

What is meant by ἁμαρτία πρὸς θάνατον, a ſin unto death, may, I ſuppoſe, be beſt learned from what we read in the Law, of him that ſins contemptuouſly, to whom death without mercy was preſcribed: This was deſcribed, Heb. 10. 28. Ἀθετήσας τις νόμον Μωσέως, He that ſet at nought Moſes's Law died without mercy, upon a ſufficient proof of it, And ſo he that is guilty of that, and, proportionably to him, he that uſeth the Son of God, now under the Goſpel, after that manner, καταπατήσας treading or trampling upon the Son of God, v. 29. ſetting his commands and terrors at nought, as there he is thought worthy of ſorer puniſhment, ſo here his ſin may fitly be ſaid to be εἰς θάνατον, unto death. What this contempt is, may appear by the ſecond Councel of Nice, which expounds the ſin unto death by ἀδιορθώτου μίσει, to continue unreformed, and incorrigible after all the admonitions and cenſures of the Church; of which as there were ſeveral degrees, ſo hee that did not reform upon the firſt, was, within ſome time, to be put under the ſecond, or higher, and not reforming then, was to fall under the third, which was wont to be called by the Jewes, Schammatha, which ſignifies, there is death, a puniſhment proportioned to this ſin, and from the title thereof, this ſeems to be called here a ſin unto death, Not that every deliberate, or wilful ſin is here ſo ſtyled (though that alſo be mortiferous without repentance) for of this ſort is ἁμαρτία, ſin, (indefinitely taken, according to the uſe of this writer, ſee note on c. 3. a.) and according to that which follows v. 17. πᾶσα ἀδικία ἁμαρτία ἐστί, every iniquity is ſin, and yet every ἁμαρτία ἐστὶ πρὸς θάνατον such, as it there follows, is not εἰς θάνατον, unto death in this ſenſe, but the phraſe peculiarly belongs to a wilful ſin (to which, without repentance or reformation, eternal perdition is denounced) hightned and aggravated farther with the addition of obſtinacy againſt all perſwaſions, and means of melting, which renders him hopeleſſe and own'd to ruine, and there is nothing left for him, but a fearful looking for of judgement and fiery indignation which ſhall devour the adverſaries τοὺς ὑπεναντίους, theſe that walk thus contrary to God, reſiſt his admonitions, his grace, all his methods of reducing them. And that was done in the anathema or Cherem, where they used execrations upon them, not as an act of hatred, but kindnesse toward them, εἰς ὀλεθρον σαρκὸς, to the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit might be saved in the day of the Lord. Where still it is not defined unlawful to pray for such, either for their pardon, or for their repentance to qualifie them for it, but they are onely look'd on as excommunicate persons, that must not be encouraged with admission to the publick prayers of the Church or the privileges of Christians, but marked out and branded and shamed to reformation.

The idols that are here mèntioned are sure those that the Gnosticks used, To which purpose there is an eminent place in Eusebius, οἱ τῷ καθ' αὐτὸν μισόθεος αἵρεσιν, τῷ χειτανῶν φιλοσοφίαν ὑποκρινόμενοι, ὡς μὴν ὕστερον ἀποστάντες καὶ τὰ εἴδωλα δεισιδαιμονίας, οὐδὲν ἧττον αὖθις ὀπίσω ἐπιστρέψαντες, καταπίπτοντες δὲ γραφὰς καὶ εἰκόνας αὐτῶν τε τοῦ Σίμωνος, καὶ τῆς αὐτοῦ Ἑλένης, θυσίαις καὶ σπονδαῖς τότε προσκυνοῦντες, Τὰ δὲ τούτων ἀπόῤῥητα---- Those that were of the heresie of Simon Magus, pretended to be of the Christian religion, and to have forsaken the superstition of the heathens in worshipping of idols, and yet came back again to that which they pretended to have forsaken, falling down to the pictures and statues of Simon and Helene, and by sacrifice, and incense, and drink-offerings doing adoration to them. And besides these, many abominable impurities, not fit to be named, there were among them. All which together may well be the εἴδωλα, idols, which the Christians are here warned to beware of.

†JOHN.

a. b. *Catholick or General Epistle, Ἐπιστολὴ Καθολικὴ † the Apostle Iohn, for the copies generally read τῦ Ἀποστόλυ

THat this second (and so likewise the third) Epistle of John, was not written by John the Apostle, is conjectured in the posthumous Annotations of the learned Hugo Grotius, and that much more tolerably, than what hath been mentioned concerning the second Epistle of Peter. There many changes were to be made in the Text to make the conjecture passable, but here all circumstances of the Text doe fitly enough concurre to make it possible, that John, which was by S. John the Apostle made Bishop of the Jewish Christians at Ephesus, should be the Author of these Epistles. Of that John the antient Author of the Constit: l.7. c.45. makes mention, that as Timothy was made Bishop of Ephesus by S. Paul (i.e. Bishop of the Gentile Christians there by the Apostle of the Gentiles) so Ἰωάννης ὑπ' ἐμοῦ Ἰωάννου John was ordained by John, i. e. a second John made Bishop of the Jewish Church there, by John the Apostle of the circumcision, Gal. 2. 9. who planted the Jewish Church at Ephesus: That this second John, the Bishop of Ephesus, was the writer of these Epistles, the chief argument that is produced, is that from the title, ὁ Πρεσβύτερος, The Elder, by which this writer calls himself, and not Ἀπόστολος Apostle. A second from the incomplete reception, that these Epistles had in the first ages, being not acknowledged by some Churches for a while, A third from Diotrephes's opposing this Author, 3 Ep: 9. which it is thought strange that any Christian should doe to an Apostle. But these arguments have very small force in them toward the inferring the conclusion. For 1. Πρεσβύτερος, Elder, being a word of honour and dignity, and belonging, in the New Testament, to the supreme Ruler of any Church (and to none else, that we can discern, see Act. 11. note b.) it may very fitly belong to an Apostle, residing and presiding in any Church (as it is certain S. John had done at Ephesus for some time) and the rather, being [ὁ Πρεσβύτερος, the Elder] by way of eminence. And this will be more probable, if it be considered what account hath formerly been given (note on tit: of 1 Joh.) of the character of this Apostles style, who useth not in his Gospel (and accordingly it is in his former Epistle, which is acknowledged to be his) to name or mention himself, unless it be by some circumlocution. And such is the ὁ Πρεσβύτερος, the Elder, here. Nay 2^dly, the persecutions, which were at this time against the Church, and wherein S. John was peculiarly involved, might make it prudent thus to conceal his name, and disguise it under this title. Or 3^dly, whatsoever was the reason of wholly omitting his name or title in the first Epistle, may here be of force for his omitting it thus farre here, And this will be a ground of answer to the second reason also. For though those Churches, whither these Epistles were sent, knew from whom they came, and accordingly never denied them reception, yet having not so publick a character upon them as others had, and being not own'd by the Author in the title, as all S. Paul's (unless that to the Hebrews) were, this might well be the cause that they had not so universal a reception at first, which notwithstanding, it yet appears, that soon after it was received into the Canon, and this inscription prefixt to it by the Church, Ἰωάννου τῦ Ἀποστόλου Ἐπιστολὴ καθολικὴ δευτέρα, The second Catholike Epistle of John the Apostle. As for the third reason, that of this Author's being opposed by Diotrephes, which is thought to be a proof that he was not an Apostle, this is of no validity, because the hereticks of those times, the Gnosticks, are known to have opposed and rejected the Apostles themselves; So of the Bishops of Asia we find S. Paul complain, 2 Tim. 1. 15. that ἀπεστράφησαν they had turned aside from him, rejected his authority; and so of Alexander he saith, he hath greatly withstood our words, 2 Tim. 4. 15. So of the Gnosticks we read, Jude 11. that they were guilty of the gainsaying of Coreh, and that, we know, consisted in their opposing Moses and Aaron, and so in the parallel must denote the opposing the Apostles, or Governours of the Church, sent immediately by Christ, and that that is the meaning of the βλασφημῶν δόξας, speaking evil of glories, Jude 8. & 2 Pet. 2. 10. see note on Jude b. To the same purpose also it is, that S. Paul, having spoken of the Gnosticks. 1 Cor. 8. through the whole chapter, proceeds immediately c. 9. to the vindicating his Apostleship, and the privileges thereof; and so Gal. 1. and speaking to Titus of these deceivers, he calls them ἀνυπόταλτοι, Tit. 1. 10. refractary, disobedient; Of these 'tis Ignatius's affirmation, that they took upon them to know more than their Bishops, Εἴ τις γνοίη πλέον τῦ Ἐπισκόπου, ὑβρίζει, If any know more than the Bishop, he is corrupted, Ep: ad Polycarp: And not onely so, But of Marcus's followers (a progenie of these Gnosticks) Irenæus plainly affirms, l.1.c.9. (and from him Epiphanius l.1. hær: 14. & 34.) that they were so arrogant, that they contemned the Apostles themselves, and l. 3. c. 2. dicentes se non solùm presbyteris, sed etiam Apostolis existentes sapientiores, saying they were wiser, not only than the Presbyters or Bishops, but even than the Apostles themselves. Which takes away all force from this argument. And then nothing hinders but that the inscription of this Epistle may be true, and John the Apostle be determined to be the author of it. And that will be more probable, if we obſerve how agreeable the matter of this is to the former Epiſtle, fortifying them in the truth v. 4. in the practiſe of charity v. 5. and warning them of the Gnoſtick deceivers, or Anti-chriſts, v. 7.

b. Καθολικὰς How theſe Epiſtles ſhould be calld Καθολικαὶ, may perhaps be queſtion'd, being not, as that of S. James and S. Peter appeared to be, addreſſed to the Jewes of the diſperſion, univerſally or indefinitely, but one of them, ἐκλεκτῇ Κυρίᾳ, ordinarily rendred, To the elect Lady, and the other to Gaius, a particular perſon. But to this it may be ſaid, 1. That it is not certain that theſe are two particular perſons, to whom theſe Epiſtles belong (ſee note a. on this Epiſt:) 2^dly, That to whomſoever they were firſt addreſt; they were yet deſigned to be tranſcribed by them and ſent to others alſo, and that is the meaning of Catholick (the ſame that of ἐγκύκλιοι ἐπιστολαὶ) viz: that theſe Epiſtles were deſigned to go from one Church unto another, and were not confined unto any, (ſee note b. on the title of S. James.) But then 3^dly, another notion of Καθολικὰ Catholick there may poſſibly be, to ſignifie the univerſal reception of theſe Epiſtles in the Church; At the firſt, beſide thoſe Epiſtles which carry S. Paul's name in the front of them, there were but few that had an univerſal reception, onely the firſt of Peter, and the firſt of John, the reſt were not ſo univerſally received into the Canon of Scripture, Hereupon thoſe two ſo received, might at the firſt be called Catholick (and ſo κανονικαὶ Canonical alſo) in oppoſition to thoſe others, which were not ſo Catholickly or univerſally intertained, And then, when upon farther evidence made to the Church, theſe others were without contradiction received alſo, this word Καθολικὰ might in like manner by the Church be added to their inſcriptions, to ſignifie that now they were univerſally received alſo, i. e. accepted into the Canon.

2. 1. John the Apoſtle and governour of the whole Church of Aſia, to the Church (unnamed) and to all the Chriſtians therein, whom I value and love in Chriſt, and not I onely, but all other true Chriſtians;

See note on 1 Joh. 2. 2.

5. And now all that I have to beg of you, is, that to the profeſſion of the truth, ye adde the practiſe of Chriſtian charity, that we may all live in unity, and peace, and concord one toward another. And this is no new commandment of mine, but that which Chriſt required of all his diſciples, and to which ye are moſt ſtrictly obliged by being Chriſtians.

Notes on John I I.

a. Ἐκλεκτῇ ἀδελφῇ ἐκλεκτῇ

That ἐκλεκτὴ ſignifies a Church, and that συνεκλεκτὴ is uſed in that ſenſe for another, or ſiſter Church, in the ſame manner as here v. 13. ἀδελφὴ ἐκλεκτὴ, hath been ſaid note on 1 Pet. 5. 13. d. Now for Κυρία, it may fitly be ſet to ſignifie no more than τῇ δεῖνα, an appellation fit to be uſed, when the name is either unknown or concealed, for in that caſe, and not onely as a title of honour, and dignity, 'tis ordinary to ſay Κύρις (which probably is grown to be in Engliſh Cyr or Syr) ſo Joh. 20. 15. the woman taking Chriſt for the Gardiner, and addreſſing her ſpeech to him as one whoſe name was not known to her, begins with Κύριε, Syr. But beſide this, it is obſervable, that both Κυρία among the Athenians, and Curia among the Romans, ſignifies the very ſame that ἐκκλησία and Eccleſia doth, i. e. the aſſembly, both as that ſignifies the perſons congregated either for civil or ſacred uſes, and the place, where they thus meet. See the worthy Sir Henry Spelman's Gloſſarie, p. 195. And then the words will be beſt rendred, the elect Church or congregation, ſome which here is not thought fit to be mentioned by name, or particularly. That he names not this Church, may be for the ſame reaſon, for which among others he names not himſelf, any otherwiſe then ὁ πρεσβύτερος, the elder, viz. becauſe of the perſecutions that were then abroad in the world. And indeed that both this and the third Epiſtle were deſigned to be ſent clancularly, and purpoſely avoided the eyes of men, appears by the cloſe, common to both, that he had many things to write, but would not commit them to paper and ink, 2 Joh. 12. and 3 Joh. 13. in reſpect of the hazard that that might bring either on them, or him, in caſe they were intercepted, or fell into other hands then thoſe to which he deſigned them. Agreeable to this it is, that we here have mention of the [τέκνα αὐτῆς her children] v. 1. and in the like manner v. 13. by which phraſe the Chriſtians of any Church are fitly ſignified, the title of mother being ſo proper for a Church, and ſo uſed Gal. 4. 26. the mother of us all. But what Church it is that was here deſigned, or what that other v. 13. we have no means to define, any farther than by remembring, that all Aſia being (as far as the Jewiſh Chriſtians there) the ſpecial charge and province of S. John, and there being ſeven chief Churches, or Metropolical Sees in that circuit, enumerated Rev. 1. 11. it is moſt probable, that S. John being in one of theſe Churches at this time, he wrote unto the other. And if Epheſus were that to which he wrote (from thence to be communicated to the reſt) there will then be another ground of calling it κυρία, as that literally ſignifies chief in power or authority, Epheſus being indeed the chief Metropolis of all Aſia.

διὰ χάρτου καὶ μέλανος

τέκνα αὐτῆς

This form of interdict here is an imitation of the practiſe of the Jewes in their חרם or anathema againſt the מומרין or apoſtates, who were to be excluded not onely from commerce, but from the ſmalleſt kind of ordinary ſalutation. b. χαίρειν αὐτῷ λέγειν

THE THIRD EPISTLE OF [a] JOHN.

[a] the Apostle John

* Epistle general

2. 1. THE Elder unto the well beloved [a] Gaius, whom I love in the truth.

2. Beloved, I * wish above all things that thou maist prosper, and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth.] * I pray εὐχομαι

2. It is my fervent prayer for thee, that it may be with thee in all outward things, as it is in respect of thy soul, that every thing may succeed prosperously with thee.

3. For I rejoiced greatly when the brethren came and testified of the truth that is in thee, even as thou walkest in the truth.]

3. For it was great matter of comfort and joy to me, when the Christians that came out of Judæa, came and told me of the sincerity of thy Christian course, (see note on 1 Cor. 13. g.) and gave me assurance of thy perseverance.

a 4. There is nothing that I more delight in in the world, or of which I more abundantly rejoyce, then to hear that those which have been converted by me, do adhere to that profession, and live after a true Christian manner.

4. I have no greater joy then to hear that my children walk in truth.]

5. It is most Christianly done of thee to do as thou dost toward the poor Christians, and strangers that have been among you, Rom. 16. 23.

5. Beloved, thou dost † faithfully whatsoever thou dost to the brethren, and to strangers,] † a faithful thing ποιεῖς πιστὸν

6. Who gave publick testimony of thy charity shewed to them; And as then thou didst, so it will be a pious work in thee to help them now again, and furnish them for their travail (see 1 Cor. 16. 2.) in publishing the Gospel, and that in a Christian manner, and for Christ's sake, whose ministers they are.

6. Which have born witnesse of thy charity before the Church, whom if thou * bring forward on their journey † after a godly sort, thou shalt do well.] * furnish for προπεμψας † so as may be worthy of God ἀξίως τοῦ θεοῦ

b. 7. For 'tis on Christ's errand that they have taken this journey, i. e. to preach the Gospel of Christ, or, for the testimony which they have given to the Gospel, i. e. because they have published the Christian faith, they have been driven out of their Country, i. e. Judæa, by the Jewes, and being so, they are also look'd on shiely by the Gentile Christians where they come v. 10. Cast out by their Country-men the Jews for being Christians, and not entertained with any kindnesse by the Gentile Christians, for being Jewes.

7. Because that for his names sake they [b] went forth, taking nothing of the Gentiles.]

8. And therefore 'tis but necessary that they be relieved by some, and they that shall relieve them, shall thereby have the comfort of co-operating and contributing their part toward the propagating of the Gospel of Christ.

8. We therefore ought to receive such, that we * might be fellow-helpers to the † truth.] * may become fellow-labourers with ἵνα συνεργοὶ γενώμεθα τῇ † for Church, for the King's MS. reads ἀληθείᾳ

c. 9. To this purpose I wrote to the Church but Diotrephes, that would fain be Bishop there, gives no heed to my Letters.

9. I wrote * unto the Church, but [c] Diotrephes, who loveth to have the preeminence among them, receiveth us not.] * or some. what to- for the King's MS. reads τι τῇ

10. For which contempt of his, I shall at my coming use some severity upon him, and teach him to use me better, especially seeing he is not content thus to slight and baffle me, and to reject the Christian Jewes that come thither, but farther restrains others that would not have been so unhospitable, will not permit the Gentile Christians to receive them to their communion, but utterly rejects them out of the Church.

10. Wherefore if I come, I will remember his deeds which he doth, † prating against us with malicious words: and not content therewith, neither doth he himself receive the brethren, and forbiddeth them that would, and casteth them out of the Church.] † batling us with wicked speeches λόγοις πονηροῖς φλυαρῶν ἡμᾶς

11. Brethren, be not ye followers of these evil ways, but contrariwise follow all Christian meeknesse towards the Jewish Christians, Rom. 14. 1 He that is kinde, and merciful, and willing to receive all to communion, is of a Christian temper, and so shews himself to be, but he that is malicious, and proud, and separates from others, knows not what belongs to Christianity.

11. Beloved, * follow not that which is evil, but that which is good. He that doth good, is of God: but he that doth evil, hath not seen God.] * do not imitate the evil but the good μὴ μιμοῦ τὸ κακὸν, ἀλλὰ τὸ ἀγαθὸν

12. Demetrius indeed a Gentile convert hath a very good testimony from all men that know him, and indeed hath done many things which testifie more fully of him then the suffrages of men can doe, And the same testimony I and others with me give him also, and ye know that what we say is true.

12. Demetrius hath good report of all men, and of the truth it self: yea and we also bear record, † and ye know that our record is true.] † or thou knowest, for the King's MS. reads οἶδας

13. I had many things to write, but I will not with ink and pen write unto thee. See 2 Joh. 12.

Notes on Joh. III.

a. Τὸν ἀγαπητὸν

Who this Gaius was, cannot certainly be affirmed. That it is the same that is mentioned by S. Paul, Rom. 16. 23. may seem probable by that which is there said of him, that he was ξένος μου, the person that entertained Paul, and the whole Church or generality of Christians, in like manner as here, ver. 5. Gaius is said to have been very kind to the brethren and to the strangers, and to have furnished them for their journey in a very liberal manner. But one circumstance there is, which is of force against this, This Gaius Rom. 16. appears to be a Corinthian, and so to be mentioned there (from whence S. Paul writes that Epistle) as his host, and so as an inhabitant, not a stranger there. And then there is little reason to doubt but that this is he that is mentioned 1 Cor. 1. 14. as one that was there converted to the faith, and baptized by Paul, whereas the Gaius here is by S. John called his son or τέκνον, v. 4. which signifies him to have been begotten in the faith, i. e. converted by S. John. Another of that name there is mentioned, Act. 19. 39. of whom it is said that he was Συναρπάγες τὸν Παύλου fellow-traveller of Paul, and this was a Macedonian, and of the city of Derbe, Act. 20. 4. and so distinct from him of Corinth also, and probably from him that is mentioned here, who could not have been so fit for the employment v. 5. of entertaining the brethren and strangers, if he were employed in preaching the Gospel, as a fellow-travailer of S. Paul. It remains therefore that this Gaius here be some third person, of a Roman name (Gaius and Caius being all one, and a very common and vulgar name, of which therefore it is not strange that there should be three distinct persons mentioned in the New Testament) and so some Gentile Christian, an eminent member of that Church, v. 9. to which S. John seems to have written his second Epistle (see note on 2 Joh. a.) no where else, but in this place, mentioned in the New Testament.

Τέκνον

b. Ἐξῆλθον

The word ἐξῆλθον, went out, is capable of two notions, 1. It may signifie a voluntary going out, and then τῷ ὀνόματι αὐτοῦ, for the name of Christ] must signifie their preaching and propagating the Gospel, for which they took their travail from their own country; But ἐξιέχθος may signifie also a violent ejection, So Mat. 17. 21. speaking of the ejection or casting out of a devil, the like phrase is used, τῦτο γὰρ οὐκ ἐκπορεύεται, this kind goeth not out- by going out, meaning ejection. Thus נפק signifies in Syriack, to go out, and to be cast out also, and accordingly Mat. 8. 12. the Syriack hath נפקין, exibunt, they shall go out, but the Greek ἐκβληθήσονται, they shall be cast out. According to which it is that ἐκβάλλειν and ἐκπέμπειν to cast out and send out, are used promiscuously the one for the other, see note on Mat. 9. i. And then going out for Christ's name, is being banished or cast out of their country for the profession of the faith of Christ, which we know the Jewish Christians were, Act. 8. 1. & 11. 19.

This Diotrephes was a Christian that from Gentilisme received the faith in that Church to which Gaius belonged, and to which the Apostle seems to have written the former Epistle commendatory of the brethren, ver. 9. From hence appears that which was intimated, Rom. 14. 1. that the Gentile Christians were in part guilty of the breach betwixt the Jewish Christians and them, and not onely the Jewes. There it seems, as the Jewish judged and condemned the Gentile Christians for using their Christian liberty, so the Gentile Christians despised, and set at nought the Jewish. Here it seems, the matter was driven higher, i. e. they did not so freely relieve the Jewish Christians, that were driven out of their country for the faith, as they ought in Christian liberality to have done. That seems to be the meaning of ver. 7. that the Jewish Christians that were driven out of Judæa for the profession of the faith (see note b.) were not now in this Church of Asia so liberally and hospitably treated, as the laws of Christian charity obliged, and as belonged to them as strangers v. 5. to furnish them for their journey, v. 6. 2*dly*, They were, some of them, so farre guilty in this matter, that when S. John wrote his letters of commendation for them, these were not effectual, Diotrephes rejected, or gave no reception, or heed to his letters, and by this means the rest of the Church also, being otherwise willing to have entertained them, were detained from doing it, ver. 10. 3*dly*, He not only denied them that hospitable reception and relief, but utterly rejected them from their communion, cast them out of the Church, ver. 10. Whether this Diotrephes were a Bishop in this Church it may be doubted, or whether only one that immoderately affected that dignity, or assumed it, not belonging to him, φιλοπρωτεύων may signifie one that loves, and useth immoderately this dignity when he hath it, and one that seeks it inordinately, or assumeth it. It is possible that he was a Bishop, and being so did ἐκβάλλειν cast out the Jewish Christians out of the Church, and that in spight of S. John's commendatory letters, who had an Apostolical power over him, and all other Bishops of Asia; But it may also be very probable, that as the heretickes of those times did contemn and affront the Bishops and Apostles themselves, so this Diotrephes might doe, without having any real authority in the Church, but only assuming it, as αὐθάδης and πολμητὴς, a presumptuous, confident, bold person.

THE GENERAL EPISTLE OF † JUDE.

† Jude the Apostle

a.

a. Ἰούδα.

IT is but agreeable to the former conjectures in the posthumous Annotations of the most learned H. Grotius, to determine here also, as in the second of Peter, and second and third of John, that the writer was not Jude, one of the twelve Apostles, and accordingly to affix it to Jude a Bishop of Jerusalem. But of this there is no proof offered, save only 1. That he calls himself δοῦλος, a servant, not Ἀπόστολος Apostle of Jesus Christ. 2dly, That it was not translated into all languages, and received into all Churches. 3dly, That in the Catalogue of the Bishops of Jerusalem, the fifteenth that is named, is called Judas. To the first of these it may be sufficient to answer that as Ἀπόστολος Ἰησοῦ, an Apostle of Jesus, signifies one sent upon the services of Christ with commission from him, so it is in effect all one with δοῦλος Ἰησοῦ, a servant of Iesus, and so the latter, as proper a style of any Apostle of Christ as the former. But then 2dly, in the title of the Epistle, which is the sense of the antient Church in this matter, it is Ἰούδα τοῦ Ἀποστόλου, of Jude the Apostle, and in the Text it self there is a mark as characteristical, ἀδελφὸς Ἰακώβου, the brother of Iames, which can belong to none but to Jude the Apostle. To the second I answer (as before to that of the second of Peter) that this Epistle was not so universally known and undoubtedly received at first, as other parts of the New Testament; which notwithstanding, it was yet, soon after, universally known, and translated, and received into the antient Canon, and the Apostolicalnesse of the writing never so questioned by any, as to assigne it any other author, or to doubt of the truth of any thing contained in it. As for Jude the fifteenth Bishop of Jerusalem, that opinion of his being the author of it, affixeth it to the time of Adrian, whereas this Epistle, by the subject of it, common to it with the second of Peter, and by the many passages of agreement, appears to have been written on the same occasion, and about the same time that the second of Peter was, which hath already appeared (see note on 2 Pet. tit: a.) to have been written before the destruction of Jerusalem. And if that were indeed granted to be written by Simeon the second Bishop of Jerusalem, yet that would be a competent distance from Judas the fifteenth Bishop there. The whole businesse of this Epistle, as of S. Peter, is such as is fully applicable to the times foregoing the destruction of Jerusalem, and the ruine of the Iewes, and Judaizing Christians, and Gnosticks involved in the same calamity, out of which only the constant Christians were to have deliverance, v. 3. And so it may very reasonably be affirmed to be written by the Apostle S. Jude, clearly defined to be the brother of James (an argument of such force against all the contrary pretensions, that those which doubt of the Apostolicalnesse of the Epistle, are fain to leave out those words, but without the authority of any one copie to countenance them) and that, as the Epistle of S. James, and those of S. Peter, addressed to the Jewish Christians in the dispersion, on purpose to fortifie them against the corruptions of the Gnosticks, which had now broke in among them.

Paraphrase.

S. JUDE.

1. Jude, one of the disciples (and Apostles) of Christ, the son of Alphæus (as James also was) and called also Lebbæus and Thaddæus, Mat. 10. 3. to those that have received the faith, the dispersed Jewish Christians (see Mat. 10. c. Rom. 1. 2.) sanctified, or beloved by God the father, and preserved by Christ from that destruction and judgment that befalls others (the contumacious resisters and crucifiers) both here and to all eternity:

3. Beloved, I thought it my office to write briefly unto you, upon one subject wherein you are nearly concerned, viz: that special promise of Christ (now shortly to be fulfilled among you) of an universal preservation and deliverance (see Rom. 13. note c.) that shall befall the Christians, when the unbeleiving Jewes shall be utterly destroyed; And being to write to you on that subject, there was nothing more necessary for me to begin with, than to exhort you to adhere constantly to, and contend for the Christian doctrine (preached

2. οἱ πάλαι Προγεγραμμένοι εἰς τοῦτο τὸ κρῖμα

The way to interpret this, as almoſt any other difficulty in this Epiſtle, will be by comparing it with the 2d of Peter, which is almoſt perfectly parallel to this. There theſe men are ſpoken of, c. 2. 3. and the paſſage that there ſeems parallel to οἱ πάλαι προγεγραμμένοι εἰς τοῦτο τὸ κρῖμα, is, ἀπώλειαι ἀυτῶν οὐ νυστάζει, ver. 1. bringing on themſelves ſwift deſtruction, and, οἷς τὸ κρῖμα ἔκπαλαι οὐκ ἀργεῖ, καὶ ἡ ἀπώλεια ἀυτῶν οὐ νυστάζει, for whom judgment for ſome while lingreth not, and their deſtruction doth not nod, v. 3. which ſignifies in both places the certain and quick deſtruction, that is likely to come upon thoſe men, who by complying with the Jewes, and profeſſing themſelves to be ſuch, to avoid their perſecutions, are by the Roman deſtroyers taken for Jewes, and ſo ſpeedily (ſoon after this time) devoured. Onely in this place is mentioned the πάλαι προγεγραμμένοι, being formerly ſet forth, or written of] anſwerable to which is 2 Pet. 2. 1. [ἐν ὑμῖν ἔσονται ψευδοδιδάσκαλοι, among you ſhall be falſe teachers] which being an affirmation that there ſhall be, muſt be grounded on ſome prophecie, or prediction that there ſhould. And that is clearly to be found in Chriſt's prediction of the deſtruction of the Jewes, Mat. 24. 10. before which there ſhould come falſe prophets, all one with the falſe teachers in S. Peter (ſee 1 Joh. 2. 6.) by which the Gnoſticks are certainly to be underſtood; (ſee note on Mat. 24. d.) And therefore at the writing of S. Jude's Epiſtle, theſe being actually come in, he ſpeaks not of them by way of prophecie that they ſhall come, but applies to them the former prophecie, that they are the men that were before written or prophecied of by Chriſt in the Goſpel of S. Matthew, and ſo capable of that title. Inſtead of this, when S. John, 1 Joh. 2. 18. ſpeaks of this very matter, he ſaith, καθὼς ἠκούσατε ὅτι ὁ Ἀντίχριστος ἔρχεται, καὶ νῦν πολλοὶ Ἀντίχριστοι γεγόνασι, as ye have heard that Antichriſt cometh, ſo now there are many Antichriſts, by which, ſaith he, we know that it is the laſt hour, juſt as S. Matthew had made it a prognoſtick of the coming of that συντελείᾳ or fatal period of the Jewes. By this it appears 1. that πάλαι formerly, here referres to Chriſt's time, προγεγραμμένοι forewritten of, to Mat. 24. or the paſſage there ſet down, and τὸ κρῖμα judgment or condemnation, to that great deſtruction that ſhould fall about that time upon all the obdurate, unbeleiving Jewes, and falſe teachers, Gnoſticks, or other abominable Chriſtians, whoſe ſin is ſet down in the following words, ἀσεβεῖς, impious &c. their judgment, or condemnation in theſe. As for the word προγεγραμμένος it ſelf, it ſignifies no more than to be ſet forth, or expoſed to publick view (as προγραμμα is any thing paſted up upon a dore to ſignifie ought, ἔκθεμα in Phavorinus) and ſo we have it uſed, Gal. 3. 1. οἷς κατ' ὀφθαλμοὺς προεγράφη, to whom Chriſt hath been ſet forth before their eyes, Only by the πάλαι added to it, it is here made to ſignifie prophecie or prediction, ſomewhat formerly ſet forth, or declared of them. And that not only their ſin, their falſe doctrine, and ſlie coming in was foretold, but their puniſhment and deſtruction alſo (by this famous coming of Chriſt to the deſtruction of his crucifiers) appears 2 Theſſ. 2. 8. &c. where S. Paul foretelling it, moſt probably referres to ſome prediction of Chriſt to this matter, And ſuch is that of Mat. 16. 25. that they that will ſave their lives, ſhall loſe them, and only they that hold out and continue conſtant in their confeſſion of Chriſt, ſhall eſcape this ruine, Mat. 10. 22. & 24. 13. And ſo this is the full meaning of this phraſe, οἱ πάλαι προγεγραμμένοι εἰς τοῦτο τὸ κρῖμα, men whoſe impoſtures firſt, and then their vengeance alſo have been foretold by Chriſt, Unleſſe we ſhould farther adde to this, that the judgments that formerly fell on the like wicked men, and the denuntiations of thoſe judgments by Enoch &c. v. 14. ſhould here be referred to alſo, as emblematical and typical predictions of the puniſhment that is ſure to fall on theſe men, upon that principle of divine judgment, that they who are parallel in the ſins, ſhall be ſo alſo in the puniſhment.

The various readings in this place, ſome having, b. but the King's MS. leaving out the word [θεὸν, God] deſerve to be conſidered. If θεὸν, God] be not read, then the whole period will belong to Jeſus Chriſt alone, without any mention of God the Father, and affirm of him, that he is our onely Maſter and Lord, referring to his great work of our redemption, by which he thus purchaſed us unto himſelf to be his peculiar ſervants, ſo as any other falſe Gods or Devils, ſo as Simon Magus, that now ſet up againſt him, muſt never have any part of our honour, or worſhip, or obedience from him. But if θεὸν, God, be read, then it will be doubtfull which of theſe two ſenſes is to be affixed to it, For 1. it may be thus rendred, Τὸν μόνον δεσπότην θεὸν καὶ κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν, Our only Maſter, God, and Lord, Jeſus Chriſt, making thoſe three the ſeveral attributes of Jeſus Chriſt, viz: that he is 1. our only Maſter, 2dly, our only God, and 3dly, our only Lord, And this, underſtood in the Catholick ſenſe of the antient Fathers and Councels, is a moſt divine truth, that Chriſt is our Maſter, by title of redemption, and our only Maſter, not excluding God the Father, and God the holy Ghoſt (for as he and his Father are one, ſo he and the holy Ghoſt are one alſo) but all other pretenders, ſuch as Simon, that thus aſſumed to himſelf to be that truly, which Chriſt, ſaid he, appeared to be here on earth; and ſo in like manner, in the ſame way of interpretation, that Chriſt is our only God, and only Lord. And this interpretation proceeds upon that way of punctation which is ordinarily retained in our copies, no comma after θεὸν, God, but all read in one coherent ſenſe [τὸν μόνον δεσπότην θεὸν καὶ κύριον, our only maſter God and Lord Jeſus Chriſt.] A ſecond rendring may alſo poſſibly belong to it, in caſe there were, or ought to be, a comma after θεὸν, God. For then θεὸν, God, being ſeparated from that which follows, would denote God the Father, and conſequently τὸν μόνον δεσπότην, the only Maſter, muſt belong to him, which if it doe, then it muſt be affirmed of theſe *Gnoſtick heretick*s, the followers and worſhippers of Simon, that they did deny God the Father, our only maſter, as well as they denied our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. And ſo indeed we read of him, that he aſſumed to be that God, who appeared to Moſes in mount Sinai, and accordingly the ſtatue was erected to him at Rome, and that is the meaning of exalting himſelf above all that is called God, 2 Theſſ. 2. 4. and of what Irenæus ſaith of him,

him, that he affirmed himself to be sublimissimam virtutem, hoc est, eum, qui sit super omnia Pater, the sublimest virtue, that is, him, who is the Father above all things, and that the Jewes God was one of his Angels, and a great deal more, (see 2 Thess. 2. note c.)

c. Δόξαι — What the word δόξαι signifies in this place, and the parallel of S. Peter, 2 Pet. 2.10. is a little uncertain; Though it be litterally rendred Glories, in the abstract, yet there is no doubt but that it denotes the persons (the subjects of that glory or greatness) in the concrete, as ἐξουσίαι powers, Rom. 13.1. signifies rulers, or men in power and authority, and κυριότης, 2 Pet. 2. 10. those in whom dominion is vested, But whether these be men or Angels, is not so clear; That they are Angels is made probable by these arguments, 1. Because the appearance of Angels in the Old Testament, is ordinarily expressed by δόξα κυρίου, the glory of the Lord, the appearances of them being visible in bright shining clouds, as hath oft been said, And so agreeably Angels in the plural, or the order or hierarchy of Angels considered together, may be called Δόξαι Glories, i. e. those glorious creatures, that attend and wait on God. 2^dly, 'Tis observable Col 2.8. that the Apostle speaking of Angels, useth the phrase ἃ μὴ ἑώρακεν which he, i.e. man, hath not seen, expressing the Angels by that periphrasis, those that are invisible spirits, never seen, nor consequently particularly known by any man, creatures above us, out of our reach, And so in like manner this Apostle here speaking more of these δόξαι, glories, v.10. expresses them by ὅσα μὲν οὐκ οἴδασι, those things which they know not, and 2 Pet. 2. 12. ἃ ἀγνοοῦσι, those which they are ignorant of, which is an expression directly parallel to that other used by Saint Paul of Angels. 3^dly, Because of other dominions their contempt had been set down before, both in S. Peter and here, by the phrase ἀθετοῦσι and καταφρονοῦσι, setting at nought, making nothing of, and despising, scornfully behaving themselves toward their superiors, and so needed not be repeated again in these words. But yet on the other side it must be said, that what was before said of their setting dominion at nought, may referre to their doctrine of Christian liberty, or their not being subject to any ruler or master, which is noted in them, 1 Tim. 6. 1. and then this of their practise superstructed on that doctrine, their speaking contumeliously of those that exercise that dominion, may be fit enough to be added to the former, and so may be set down in that phrase, βλασφημοῦσι δόξας, they speak evil of glories. And that it doth so signifie, is most probable, 1. Because we find not in any Church-writers that the heresie of the Gnosticks had any thing in it of particular opposition, or defiance to Angels, but on the contrary the Æones, noting the Angels, make up a great part of their divinity. A 2^d argument may be taken from the mention of the gainsaying of Core, whereby this sin of these Gnosticks is exemplified, ver.11. where, as ἀντιλογία contradicting, & βλασφημία, evil speaking are of the same importance; so we know the sin of Core consisted in the murmuring and rebelling against Moses and Aaron, that were by God set over them And for thus doing the Gnosticks are (2 Tim. 3) distinctly compared to Jannes and Jambres the Ægyptian Magicians (and such was Simon and Menander, and the chief of these) who by their sorceries resisted Moses coming in God's name to the Israelites and to Pharaoh, as these did the Apostles of Christ. And so this will be the meaning of the phrase, speaking ill of those that are set over them, i.e. contumelious usage of the Apostles or Governours of the Church (who are called δόξα Χριστοῦ, the glory of Christ, 1 Cor. 8. 23.) with whom particularly they had many controversies and disputations (referred to v. 9.) in which those contumelious speeches on the Gnosticks part would be but effects of their great daring pride (mentioned 2 Pet. 2. 10. immediately before it) and of their discriminating themselves from all others, v. 19. and so is very probable to have been observable, and accusable in them. See note on the title of 2 Joh. 2.

d. Χεῖρα Μωσέως — What the body of Moses] here signifies, will easily be discerned by comparing it with the place from whence this controversie of the Angel with the Devil is here cited, and that is undoubtedly Zach. 3. 1. There we have Joshua the high priest standing before the Angel of the Lord, and Satan standing at his right hand to resist him, or dispute or plead against him, as the standing at the right hand notes an accuser, impleading another, (Let Satan stand at his right hand, *Psal.*109.) And the onely words which are there mentioned from the Angel (under the name of the Lord) to Satan, are these here set down, The Lord rebuke thee. Now the matter of controversie then between the Angel and the Devil, the good and bad Angel, was (that which is the subject of that present vision) the reedifying of the Temple, and restoring of the service of God among the Jewes at Jerusalem, This is called the body of the Jewes, 2 *Mac.*15.12. where we have Onias praying for the whole body of the Jewes, And may as fitly be styled the body of Moses, in the same manner as the Christian Church, or assembling of Christians for the service of Christ, is called the body of Christ, 1 Cor. 12.20,25,27. *Ephes.*1.23. & 4.12,16. *Col.*1.18. Jam. 3. 2. The Judaical Temple and worship and service depending upon Moses, as the Lawgiver, or principle, or head under God, from whence it came, as Christ's being the Lawgiver of the Christian Church, and instituting Apostles &c. in it, is the reason why he is called the head of that, and the Church the body of Christ, as on the other side, we know he calls his body a Temple, Destroy this Temple, &c. and the Apostle of us, that our bodies are the Temples of the holy Ghost. Agreeable hereunto it is, that all Christians, as they live together in publick communion, congregating together in assemblies, are called (in reference to this notion of body) members and fellow-members, and the restoring the congregations or συναγωγαὶ αὐτῶν is called καταλλαγαί, (see note on 2 Cor. 13 c. & Ephes. 4.12.) And so in Ignatius's Epistle to the Church of Smyrna, he talks of congratulating with the Church of Syria, because they are in peace and συνεστῶτα αὐτοῖς τὸ ἴδιον σῶμα ἐστίν, their body is restored to them, where their restitution to the free publick service of God (such as here Joshua and Zerubbabel were foretold to labour for, and Satan to labour against, and the Archangel to contend with him about it) is expressed by the restoring of

Ἐπιτιμήσαι σοι Κύριος

of their own body. One difficulty here ſtill remaineth, how this example is proper to the point in hand, ſpeaking evil of glories, or dignities, or dominions, And that which ſeems moſt reaſonable is, that the devil here is the ſame that in other places is called Belzebub the Prince of devils, the Prince of the air, and Prince of darkneſſe, and *Rev.*9.11. in the antient MS. in the King's Library ὁ ἄρχων ἢ ἀβύσσου ὁ ἄγγελος, the Angel, the Prince of the Abyſſe or Pit, who having been once a principal Angel in heaven, having loſt that dignity, is now the Prince of hell, and otherwhere is noted by Principality or Power, he that hath power over the other devils. Now if Michael the Archangel in a quarrel with him, about a matter of ſuch weight, as was the reſtitution of the ſervice of God among the Jewes, would not uſe any bitterneſſe or execration againſt him, then how unreaſonable is it for theſe Gnoſticks, how without all excuſe, thus to demean themſelves toward the Apoſtles of Chriſt? That the devil is here look'd on in this notion, may be concluded by comparing it with 2 Pet. 2.11. (which ſure is parallel to this) where ſpeaking evil of them, muſt needs refer to the δόξαι glories or dignities v. 10. And therefore if the devil be comprehended there under that phraſe, (as here he is diſtinctly named) it muſt follow that he is here look'd on as a δόξα or dignity, i. e. as a Prince, though it be of devils.

ε. This expreſſion of S. Jude, τῇ πλάνῃ τοῦ Βαλαὰμ μισθοῦ ἐξεχύθησαν, hath much of difficulty in it.

Πλάνη What is meant by πλάνη error may appear by Rom. 1.27. where it is clearly ſet to ſignifie their ſeduction to Idolatry, of which the Gnoſticks were guilty, and whereby they fell into all thoſe unnatural ſins, ἄρσενες ἐν ἄρσεσι, contrary to the φυσικὴ χρῆσις ἢ θηλείας, in the beginning of that verſe. Thus is the word πλάνη uſed 1 Theſſ. 2.3. not onely for ſeduction in general, but particularly that of the Gnoſticks, being there joined with ἀκαθαρσία, uncleanneſſe, and ſo perhaps Eph. 4. 14. where the cunning of the falſe teachers is ſaid to be uſed εἰς μεθοδείαν πλάνης, for the contriving, or deſigning of deceit, or ſeduction, i. e. for the infuſing this great corruption of the Gnoſticks, all manner of luſt and filthineſſe, ſo it is clearly taken 2 Pet. 2. 18. where πλάνη is interpreted by the ἐπιθυμίαι σαρκὸς and ἀσελγείαι, luſts of the fleſh, and filthineſſes, preceding in that verſe, and as clearly 2 Pet. 3. 17. τῇ τῶν ἀθέσμων πλάνῃ συναπαχθέντες, led away with the deceit of unruly men, referring to the ſeduction, and abominable doctrines of the filthy Gnoſticks. For that this was the πλάνη τῇ Βαλαὰμ, the ſeduction into which Balaam brought the Iſraelites by his counſel to Balak (when, as the Hieruſalem Targum reads Numbers 25. 14. he adviſed Balak in theſe words, Veni nunc, conſulam tibi quid populo huic facies, Fac eos peccare, Come now, I will counſel thee, what thou ſhalt do to this people: Make them ſin.) appears by Num. 25. 1. but eſpecially by 2 Pet. 2. 15. and Rev. 2. 14. where this πλάνη is called in one ἡ ὁδὸς, in the other ἡ διδαχὴ Βαλαὰμ, the way, and, the doctrine of Balaam. Now for Ἐξεχύθησαν ἐξεχύθησαν, ſome probability there is by comparing it with that place of Rom. 1. 27. (which hath much agreement with this paſſage) that it ſhould be a miſtake in the copy for ἐξεκαύθησαν, burning, there, and denote burning in luſt. And thus 'tis clear the Syriack read it, who render it אשתרוו exarſerunt, or, as the new Paris Edition renders it libidinosè exarſerũt, they burnt libidinouſly, but the word as it is, is capable of a very commodious interpretation, ſo as to agree with the notion given of ἀνάχυσις, 1 Pet. 4.4 for thoſe unnatural ſins of uncleanneſſe and confuſion of ſexes. Thus when the Gloſſe of Phavorinus (as the printed copies have it) renders ἐξεχύθησαν by nothing but ἀφανίσθησαν were deſtroyed, and Heſychius by ἀφανίσθησαν (which muſt needs be falſe printed) that may very probably be a miſtake of the Copy for ἐκλανήσθησαν, uſed in ſtead of this word in the parallel place 2 Pet. 2.15. (So Pſal. 13. 2. παρ' ὀλίγον ἐξεχύθη almoſt gone out of the way) noting here thoſe great declinations and deviations from the right way, theſe tranſgreſſions of the Law of Nature: And ſo ἐξεχύθησαν will ſignifie the breaking or running out (as a veſſel Lu. 5. 37.) into all confuſion of luſts and baſe practiſes, ſuch as wherein the Gnoſticks tranſcended and exceeded all the men in the world. Laſtly, the word μισθῷ hath difficulty and doubt in it, whether being uſed adverbially it be to be rendred ἀντὶ μισθοῦ, by way of reward, or elſe ἕνεκα μισθοῦ, for reward's ſake. The parallel place, 2 Pet. 2. 15. inclines to the latter of theſe, for there on the mention of Balaam 'tis added, ὃς μισθὸν ἀδικίας ἠγάπησεν, who loved the reward of unrighteouſneſſe, noting that what he did by his counſel for the bringing the Iſraelites to theſe ſins, he did out of covetouſneſſe, or μισθοῦ ἕνεκα, to get reward from Balak. But the other place (which may paſſe for a parallel alſo) Rom. 1. 27. perſwades the former, for there all their obduration of heart v. 28. God's delivering them up to the νοῦς ἀδόκιμος, reprobate minde, in doing τὰ μὴ καθήκοντα, going on ſenſeleſly in all their abominable ſins, is ſaid to be ἀντιμισθία πλάνης a retribution, or reward, or puniſhment, proportioned to their Idolatrous practiſe, and ſo here it will be true of the ſeduction of Balaam, or that Balaamitical filthineſſe, that the Gnoſticks were permitted to fall, or by God were delivered up to it without any reſtraints, as a puniſhment to their ſin in converting Chriſtianity into Licentiouſneſſe. And this ſeems to be the more probable rendring of the place, thus, that they fell into thoſe filthy libidinous burnings, or confuſions of luſts, the ſame that Balaam ſeduced the Iſraelites into, and this by way of reward, or juſt puniſhment from God, who thus puniſhed them with deſertion, and tradition unto this ſtupid ſenſeleſſe continuing, and multiplying of theſe ſins. Thus when the Syriack renders it ובתר טעיותה דבלעם באגרא אשתרוו the Latine interpreter reads verbatim, Et poſt errorem Balaam in mercede exarſerunt, and the Latine Paris Edition in mercedem, both joining the μισθῷ to the ἐξεχύθησαν, that they by way of reward, or for their puniſhment, and reward, did thus fall into theſe libidinous burnings, not referring to that of Balaams doing what he did, in contemplation of reward.

Πλάνῃ τοῦ Βαλαὰμ

ζ. Φθινοπωρινὸν is a ſeaſon of the year, ἤγουν μετὰ τὸ θέρος, ſaith Phavorinus, the ſeaſon after the Summer, and again ἀπὸ τῆς ιε' ἡμέρας Αὐγούστου μηνὸς, the ſeaſon beginning from the fifteenth, or, ſay others

ζ. Φθινοπωρινὰ δένδρα

others, the 22. of August, continued to the same day of December. Thus is the year divided in Sextus Empiricus adv. Mathem. l. 5. c. 1. Ἐν μὲν θέρει γίνεσθαι φησὶ, τὸν ἀληθῆ δὲ χειμῶνα, τὸν ἀφελῆ δὲ ἔαρ εἶναι, καὶ τὸν ζέφυρον φθινοπωρινὸν, making this to winter, as the spring is to summer. And Olympiodorus in Meteor. p. 20. Διχῶς λέγεται ὁ διαφανὴς ἀὴρ, ὅταν μὲν ἀλύσῃ ᾖ τὸν καιρὸν καὶ παγῇ, καὶ εἰς ὀπώραν, ἤτοι ἔστιν ὁ ἀλύσων τὸν λίθον, ὅταν ὁ σίδηρος φαίνῃ, ἢ ὃ ἐξῆς ἄμεινον φθινόπωρον καλεῖν), ὡς ἂν μετὰ τὴν φθίσιν γενόμενον. By which it appears that φθινόπωρον begins after both parts of Summer are ended, ὀπώρα and ὀπώρα, after the dog-star hath done shining, when it draweth toward winter, and the season, though it begins in August on the 15. or 22. yet reacheth out to Christmasse, i. e. to the sharpest, and depth of winter, and is so called, because it begins from the end of the season of ripe fruit, i. e. φθίσεως ὀπώρας. In this sense of the substantive, φθινοπωρινὸς the derivative adjective, must signifie that, which belongs to that time, and so the Arabick Interpreter in the New Paris Edition of the Bible reads הַקַּיִץ autumnales, and so S. Hierome also, and so φθινοπωρινὰ δένδρα] will be trees in that condition, in which they use to be at that time of year, i. e. bare, having lost their leaves, and having nothing desirable on them (like the waterlesse empty clouds precedent) and this a direct emblem of the Gnosticks, and quite contrary to the godly man, described Psal. 1. 3, 4. whose leaf doth not wither, and then to these is fitly added ἄκαρπα, fruitlesse, trees that have neither the verdure of leaves, nor profit of fruit on them, trees which, beside that they bear no fruit, are deprived, and naked, and bare of leaves also, and such are those that are come to the denying of Christian profession it self, as we know the Gnosticks did. Another signification seems to be followed by the Syriack, who read וְאִסְפִּי אִתְבְּרִין quarum fructus emarcuit or defecit, whose fruit hath withered or failed, according to a notion of φθινόπωρον for ἡ νόσος, a disease, in Phavorinus, that disease probably such, as befalls fruit and trees, φθίσεως ὀπώρας, a blast or smut, perhaps ἰφυείαν ergo, that spoils fruit and corn, for saith Phavorinus and Hesychius, φθίσις ἡ ἰφυείαν, and then δένδρα φθινοπωρινὰ will be blasted trees, and this will also do well to signifie these rotten putrid Gnosticks, a blasted sort of Christians, withal ἄκαρπα, without any kinde of fruit on them. But the former of these is most agreeable to the nature of the word, and so fittest to be adhered to.

g. What the coming of God signifies, hath oft been said (see Mat. 16. m. and 24. b.) executing vengeance upon wicked men, and that coming of his μετ' ἀγγέλων, with his Angels, Mat. 16. 27. those being the ministers and executioners of his vengeance, and withal his satellitium, or guard, whose presence in any place is the onely thing to determine God's omnipresence to one place more than to another, And these are the μυριάδες ἁγίων] here, (not myriads of Saints or holy men, but such as are mentioned Heb. 12. 22. μυριάσι ἀγγέλων myriads of Angels, or as the Targum on Deut. 33. 2. Myriades angelorum sanctorum, where we read onely saints, from the Hebrew which reads of holy ones, i. e. Angels, but I say) his holy myriads, or hosts of Angels, with ten thousands in each, which makes his coming so solemn and so formidable a thing. And thus in the prophecie of Zacharie c. 14. 5. where we read, The Lord my God shall come, and all the saints with thee, it is to be read from the Hebrew with all his holy ones, i. e. with his guard of Angels, and that (it seemeth) here, ποιῆσαι κρίσιν, to execute judgement, and rebuke &c.

h. What is meant by the λαλῶν ὑπέρογκα here, may best be guest by comparing it with Dan. 11. 36. where we have the same phrase [λαλήσει ὑπέρογκα] there the context will sufficiently interpret it. The King shall do according to his will, and he shall exalt himself, and magnifie himself above every God, and shall speak (marvellous, we render) high swoln things against the God of Gods, There doing according to his will, is casting of all fear, or care of laws, or justice, his exalting and magnifying himself above every God, is his Atheistical despising of all religion, whether the true, or the false, the Jewish, or Heathen worship, and his speaking the high swoln things against the God of Gods, is undervaluing the God of Israel, the onely true God, and setting up some body else, as superiour to him, the same that is said of the Gnosticke heresie and their leader Simon, 2 Thess. 2. 4. that he oppeseth, and exalteth himself over or against all that is called God, or worship. The same phrase is again used, Dan. 7. 8. στόμα λαλοῦν μεγάλα a mouth speaking great, or swelling, or lofty things. To one or both these passages of Daniel this place of S. Jude seems to relate, joining these two together, walking after their own lusts] and their mouth speaketh ὑπέρογκα, high swoln words] as Dan. 11. doing according to his will, and speaking high swoln things &c. And therefore we have here reason to take it in the same sense, that there it appeareth to be used in, and though here be not mention of the God of Gods, against whom these stout things are spoken, yet to supply it from thence, And so it will agree most perfectly to the character of the Gnosticks, 2 Thess. 2. 4. who certainly are the persons here described. For of them it is evident (see 2 Thess. 2. note e.) that they attributed divinity unto Simon, made him the uppermost God, and the God of Israel, but a part of his creation, worshipt him and Helena his whore, with sacrifices &c. and so did the very thing, that there is said of the King in Daniel. And whereas S. Peter in setting this down 2 Pet. 2. 18. adds unto it ματαιότητος of vanity, that may fitly be accorded with this in the notion of vanity for idolatry, (see Ro. 8. note h.) for such was their worship of Simon, see note b.

ψυχικοὶ signifies here those that have no taste of any higher principle in them, but of the sensitive soul, that suffer those affections to carry them away, to rule and have dominion over them: Contrary to these are the πνευματικοὶ spiritual, they that move by an higher principle, that having the assistance of God's Spirit, and divine revelation, do act, and move accordingly. From hence it is that heretickes, that pretend to greater purity than other men, and so separate from all others also, have generally desired to discriminate themselves from all others by calling themselves πνευματικοὶ, the spiritual, and all others ψυχικοὶ, animales.

And ſo particularly did the Gnoſticks and their followers in Irenæus, they forſooth were the ſpiritual, φύσει πνευματικοὶ naturally ſpiritual, and had no need of any of thoſe graces and gracious actions, which were required to other men, and by their ἀπολύτρωσις, a kind of baptiſme they had, became inviſible to the Judge, and all the ſins they could commit, could no more pollute them, than the Sun beams could be defiled by ſhining on a dunghil, or Gold by being in a kennel, the very character (a little improved) of theſe here v. 18. walking after their godleſſe luſts.

k. ὁ Πνευματικὸς ἄγιον πνεῦμα ἔχων.

It is ſufficiently known, that the Apoſtles, and thoſe that were by the holy Ghoſt ſet apart for the planting of the Church, had many miraculous gifts, especial χαρίσματα or graces; Not every one all, but one one, another another. Among theſe, ſaith S. Chryſoſtome, there was in theſe firſt times, χάρισμα εὐχῆς, the gift of prayer, as alſo the gift of healing, of ſinging, propheeying &c. 1 Cor. 14 26. (ſee note on Epheſ. 6. c.) This, ſaith he, was beſtowed εἰς ἕνα τινά, upon ſome one, who did pray for the reſt, and aske thoſe things which were uſeful for them, and teach others how to form prayers. Some of theſe ſpecial prayers thus conceived, and frequently uſed by them, which were fit for the common perpetual uſe of all Chriſtians, were received, and kept by thoſe, whom they thus taught, and are they, which the antients mean by the Liturgies of S. James &c. which, or ſome other in that diſguiſe (or rather thoſe with ſome other later mixtures) are ſtill uſed by the Greek Church on ſolemn daies. Theſe extraordinary χαρίσματα, as long as they laſted, are here called (as other ſpecial gifts of the Spirit alſo are) πνεῦμα ἅγιον, the holy Ghoſt, and πνεῦμα Spirit, Epheſ. 6. 18. the immediate moderator, as it were, of all the petitions of the Church at that time. But when thoſe extraordinary χαρίσματα ceaſed, it is clear there was need of ſomewhat elſe to ſupply that place, and that would not be, (in any reaſon) to let every man pray as he would (for, for the preventing of that, and the ill conſequents of it, it was, that the χάρισμα εὐχῆς gift of prayer, had before been given) but ſet prepared forms, for the daily conſtant uſes, and thoſe provided by the Governours of the Church, Apoſtolical men, which had benefited under the prayers of thoſe that had the χάρισμα or gift, and remembred ſome forms of theirs, at leaſt the method and manner uſed by them. And this is the original of Liturgie among Chriſtians.

What διακρινόμενος in the middle voice ſignifies, hath been ſhid, note on Jam. 2. c. and note on c. 3. viz. to waver, or doubt. And accordingly if it be here rendred (as in reaſon it muſt, and by analogie with the uſe of the word in other places) it will be neceſſary to adhere to the reading of the King's MS. (which the vulgar Latine alſo appears to have followed, and the nominative διακρινόμενοι] will have no ſenſe) οὓς μὲν διακρινομένους, Some indeed, viz: thoſe that waver, though they are not yet faln off, either ἐλεᾶτε have pity on them, and out of compaſſion to ſuch weaklings, doe all that may tend to the ſetling, or confirming them, or elſe (as the King's MS. reads) ἐλέγχετε, reprove them, after the manner of fraternal correption, and admonition, by that means timely to reduce them to perſeverance, and conſtancy, before yet they fall off and make ſhipwrack of the faith, Whereas others that are already faln, muſt be more nimbly handled, even ſnatcht out of the fire, &c.

l. διακρινόμενοι

A PREMONITION Concerning the Interpretation OF THE APOCALYPSE.

HAving gone through all the other parts of the New Teſtament, I came to this laſt of the Apocalypſe, as to a rock, that many had miſcarried and ſplit upon, with a full reſolution not to venture on the expounding of one word in it, but onely to perform one office to it, common to the reſt, the review of the tranſlation; But it pleaſed God otherwiſe to diſpoſe of it; For before I had read (with that deſigne of tranſlating only) to the end of the first verſe of the book, Theſe words [ἃ δεῖ γενέσθαι ἐν τάχει, which muſt come to paſſe preſently] had ſuch an impreſſion on my mind, offering themſelves as a key to the whole prophecie, (in like manner as [this generation ſhall not paſſe till all theſe things be fulfilled, Mat. 24. 34.] have demonſtrated infallibly to what coming of Chriſt that whole Chapter did belong) that I could not reſiſt the force of them, but attempted preſently a general ſurvey of the whole book, to ſee whether thoſe words might not probably be extended to all the prophecies of it, and have a literal truth in them, viz: that the things foretold and repreſented in the enſuing viſions, were preſently, ſpeedily to come to paſſe, one after another, after the writing of them. But before I could prudently paſſe this judgment, which was to be founded in underſtanding the ſubject-matter of all the viſions, ſome other evidences I met with, concurring with this, and giving me abundant grounds of confidence of this one thing, that, although I ſhould not be able to underſtand one period of all theſe viſions, yet I muſt be obliged to think, that they belonged to thoſe times, that were then immediately enſuing, and that they had accordingly their completion, And conſequently that they that pretended to finde in thoſe viſions, the predictions of events in theſe later ages, and thoſe ſo nicely defined, as to belong to particular acts, and * perſons in this, and ſome other kingdomes (a farre narrower circuit alſo, than that which reaſonably was to be aſſigned to that one Chriſtian prophecie for the Univerſal Church of Chriſt) had much miſtaken the drift of it.

* Thomas Cromwell & Cranmer c. 14. 18. Qu: Elizabeth, Chemnitius, Lord Treaſurer Cecill, the three firſt Angels, c. 16. 1, 3, 4. Brightman Apoc. Apoc: Καιρὸς ἐγγύς

The arguments that induced this concluſion were theſe; 1. That this was again immediately inculcated, v. 3. ὁ γὰρ καιρὸς ἐγγύς, for the time is nigh, and that rendred as a proof that theſe ſeven Churches, to whom the prophecie was written, were concerned to obſerve and conſider the contents of it, Bleſſed is he that reads, and he that hears, &c. (ἐμπράκτως ἀκοήν, ſaith Arethas, that ſo hears as to practiſe) for the time, or ſeaſon, the point of time is near at hand. 2dly, That as here in the front, ſo c. 22. 6. at the cloſe, or ſhutting up of all theſe viſions, and of S. John's Epiſtle to the ſeven Churches, which contained them, 'tis there again added, that God hath ſent his Angel to ſhew to his ſervants, ἃ δεῖ γενέσθαι ἐν τάχει, the things that muſt be ſpeedily or ſuddainly. And immediatly upon the back of that are

ſee the words of Chriſt, the author of this prophecie, ἰδὺ ἔρχομαι ταχύ, Behold I come quickly, not in the notion of his final coming to judgment (w^th hath been the cauſe of a great deal of miſtake, ſee note on Mat. 24. b.) but of his coming to deſtroy his enemies, the Jewes &c. and then, Bleſſed is he that obſerves, or keeps the prophecies of this book, parallel to what had been ſaid at the beginning, c. 1. 3. 3^dly. That v. 10. the command is given to Iohn, not to ſeal the prophecies of the book, Which that it ſignifies that they were of preſent uſe to thoſe times, and therefore to be kept open, and not to be laid up, as things that poſterity was only, or principally concern'd in, appears by that reaſon rendred of it, ὅτι ὁ καιρὸς ἐγγύς ἐστι, becauſe the time is nigh, the ſame which had here at the beginning been given, as the reaſon that he that conſidered the prophecies, was bleſſed in ſo doing. ἐρχεται ταχὺ

This being thus far deduced out of ſuch plain words, ſo many times repeated, The next thing that offered it ſelf to me was, to examine and ſearch what was the deſigne of Chriſt's ſending theſe viſions in a letter to the ſeven Churches. For by that ſomewhat might generally be collected of the matter of them. What that deſigne was, appeared ſoon very viſibly alſo from plain words, which had no figure in them, viz: that they and all Chriſtians of thoſe times, being by the terrors of the then preſſing perſecutions from the Jewes, and by the ſubtile inſinuations of the Gnoſticks (who taught it lawfull to diſclaim, and forſwear Chriſt in time of perſecution) in danger to loſe their conſtancy, might be fortified by what they here find of the ſpeedineſſe of Gods revenge on his enemies, and deliverance of beleivers, that continued conſtant to him. This is the full importance of c. 1. 3. and the ſame again c. 22. 7. Bleſſed are they that keep &c. for the time is nigh. So in the proeme, or ſalutation, by Iohn prefixt to this Epiſtle of Chriſt (which from v. 4. to v. 9. was the reſult of his obſervations upon the viſions, and was not any part of the viſions themſelves, and ſo gives us his notion, and interpretation of this matter) we have theſe words, v. 7. Behold he cometh with clouds &c. Where the coming of Chriſt being a known, and ſolemn phraſe to ſignifie remarkeable judgment, or vengeance on ſinners (and in the firſt place on the Jewes that crucified him) and deliverance for perſevering beleivers, (ſee note on Mat. 24. b.) and the addition of the mention of clouds referring to Gods preſence by Angels, the miniſters of his power, whether in puniſhing or protecting, this ἔρχεται, or coming in the preſent, agrees perfectly and literally with what was before obſerved of the ſpeedineſſe of its approach at that time, and is an expreſſe ſignification, what was the deſigne of ſending the viſions to the Churches, viz: to fortifie them by that conſideration. Μακάριος ὁ ἀναγινώσκων καὶ οἱ ἀκούοντες τοὺς λόγους τῆς προφητείας καὶ τηροῦντες τὰ ἐν αὐτῇ γεγραμμένα· ὁ γὰρ καιρὸς ἐγγύς ἐστιν. Ἔρχεται Proceeding therefore by theſe degrees, it preſently appeared by demonſtrable evidences, that the firſt part of that which was thus ſuddenly to come to paſſe, was the illuſtrious deſtruction of the Jewes (which was alſo, of all things imaginable, the ſureſt and opportuneſt comfort and fortification to the Chriſtians, at that time, who were virulently perſecuted by them, and indeed, as Tertullian ſaith, owed the beginning of all their perſecutions to the Jewes) This appeared 1. by the latter part of the 7^th verſe of the firſt chapter, where the οἵτινες αὐτὸν ἐξεκέντησαν, as many as pierced Chriſt] and πᾶσαι αἱ φυλαὶ τῆς γῆς all the tribes of the land] moſt clearly denote the Jewes (as ἡ γῆ the earth or the land hath been often ſhewed to ſignifie, and ארץ the land among the Jewiſh writers, ſee note on Mat. 24. b.) whoſe wailing (there mentioned in the very words that are uſed Mat. 24. 31.) was to be for the miſeries that came upon them, Jam. 5. 1. For although ſome few words in this ſeventh verſe (as the looking on him whom they had pierced) would ſeem to make that ſeventh verſe parallel to that of Zach. 12. 10. and ſo, that it ſhould belong to the contrition, or repentance of the Jewes, for the crucifying of Chriſt, as that ſeems to doe (and if it doe, may have had its completion at ſeveral times in many thouſands of that nation, (ſee Act. 21. 20.) about three thouſand being converted in one day, Act. 2. 39, & 41.) yet the whole frame of the words of this 7^th verſe together, [Behold he cometh with clouds and every eye ſhall ſee him, and all that had pierced him, and all the tribes of the land ſhall mourn over or upon him] doth much more fully agree with the like words, Mat. 24. 30. where in the deſtruction (or the coming of the Son of man to this deſtruction) of the Jewes, we have theſe words, [And then ſhall all the tribes of the land mourn, and ſhall ſee the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory, which clearly belongs to the deſtruction of the Jewes; To which I ſhall only adde, that becauſe that royal coming of Chriſt conſiſted of two parts, to deſtroy the impenitent Jewes remarkeably, and as remarkeably to reſcue, or ſave the penitent beleivers (and therefore in that place of Matthew it follows, v. 31. and his Angels ſhall gather the elect, &c. which belongs to that delivering of the penitent, Chriſtian Jewes) therefore that alſo of the Jewes repenting for the crucifixion of Chriſt (that is, of thoſe πᾶσαι φυλαὶ τῆς γῆς Jewes that at any time did repent) may here be taken in, in the richneſſe of this divine writing, and ſo the ordinary ſenſe of the word in Zachary alſo will not be left out by this interpretation, which applies this verſe to the deſtruction of the Iewes; So c.6.9,10,11, the ſouls beneath the altar, that crie for vengeance of all the blood that was ſhed in the land, is juſt parallel to that of *Mat.*23.35. that on the Iews of that generation ſhould come all the αἷμα the blood that had been ſhed on the land, &c. And accordingly all the reſt of that 6. chap. of the great earthquake, the ſun become black, and moon as blood, and the ſtars falling from heaven, &c. are thevery particulars mention'd in the immediate ſubſequent diſcourſe of Chriſt, Mat. 24. So moſt eſpecially c.11.8. that the ſcene of theſe tragedies is the city where our Lord was crucified, i.e. certainly and literally Ieruſalem, called Sodome there, but that only πνευματικῶς myſtically or ſpiritually (or in the viſion) as the text ſpecifies. And ſo that Comment, which Biſhop Tunſtall ſet out for S. Ambroſe's, interprets the ſixt chapter to be meant of the Iewes. And in Arethas on c.6.12. concerning the earthquake, we find theſe words τινὲς ταῦτα εἰς τὴν ὑπὸ τῶ Οὐεσπασιανῶ πολιορκίαν ἐξέλαβον, τὰ εἰρημένα τροπολογήσαντες, ſome expound this tropologically of Veſpaſian's ſiege, where the thing of which he makes doubt in that interpretation, is the τροπολογία the figurativeneſſe of the ſpeech; (whereas perhaps it may be underſtood of real earthquakes, ſee note on c.6. f.) but he objects not againſt the interpretation or application of it to thoſe times of Veſpaſian and the Iewes; So Rupertus Tuittenſis interprets that chapter of the Iewes, and I ſhall not need make uſe of the ſuffrages, and conſent of many more, who have been forced to acknowledge that truth. But I muſt ſuppoſe that it will be objected and pretended, that this deſtruction of Ieruſalem was paſt at the time of Iohn's receiving and writing this viſion, becauſe 'tis affirmed by Euſebius, out of Irenæus, that 'twas received or ſeen (* ἑωράθη it was ſeen) πρὸς τῷ τέλει Δομετιανοῦ ἀρχῆς, at the end of Domitian's reigne. To this I might reply from the opinion of † S. Auguſtine, and ſome others, that theſe viſions were not all predictions of what was future, but the deſcription of what had paſſed from the firſt coming of Chriſt, And from venerable * Bede, that John recapitulates from the ſuffering of Chriſt, And † Rupertus Tuitienſis, that the Apocalypſe comprehends what had been, what is, and what ſhould be the ſtate of the Church, And this to very good purpoſe, by what was paſt to confirm Chriſtians in what was future, and now farther to be declared. And 'twould be no great objection againſt this, that 'tis all ſet down as a prophecie, for 'tis no new thing for prophecies, ſometimes to ſpeak in the future tenſe of things that are paſt, as Dan. 7. 17. Theſe great beaſts which are four, are four kings, which ſhall ariſe out of the earth, where yet the Chaldæan Monarchy was long before riſen, and now neer expiration. But to paſſe this over, I anſwer more diſtinctly to the teſtimony of Irenæus, 1. That what he affirms concerning Iohn's viſion at the end of Domitian, is not of all, but particularly of that viſion of the number of the beaſt, ch. 13. 18. Thus will Euſebius's words be underſtood, Εἰ δὲ ἔδει ἀναφανδὸν ἐν τῷ νῦν καιρῷ κηρύττεσθαι τοὔνομα αὐτοῦ, διὰ ἐκείνου ἂν ἐρρέθη τοῦ καὶ τὴν ἀποκάλυψιν ἑωρακότος, ὑ δὲ γὰρ πρὸ πολλοῦ χρόνου ἑωράθη, &c. If the name of Antichriſt ought to be proclaimed openly now, it would have been declared by him that ſaw the revelation, for it was not ſeen any long time agoe, Where 'tis clear that ἑωράθη was ſeen] may belong to τοὔνομα the name of the beaſt] as before [ἐρρέθη declared] did. And that it not only may, but muſt be ſo underſtood, appears by the Latine of Irenæus (wch only is extant) which reads it thus, Antichriſti nomen per ipſum utiq; editum fuiſſet, qui & Apocalypſin viderat, neq; enim ante multum temporis viſum eſt, ſed penè ſub noſtro ſeculo ad finem Domitiani imperii, The name of Antichriſt would have been publiſhed by him, who ſaw the Apolypſe, for it was not ſeen any long time ſince, but almoſt under our age at the end of Domitian's Empire. Where the word viſum in the neuter, ſeen, not viſa in the feminine, belongs apparently to the name, not to the Apocalypſe. Secondly, I anſwer, that although it ſhould ſtill be acknowledged to be the opinion of Irenæus, that Iohn received the Revelation & all his viſions at the end of Domitian, yet on the other ſide 'tis the affirmation of * Epiphanius, that Iohn prophecied in the time of Claudius Cæſar, when, ſaith he, he was in the Ile Patmus. And that which may give authority to Epiphanius's teſtimony, is this, 1. That Epiphanius in that place is a writing againſt the Montaniſts, about the authority of the Apocalypſe, and that the later it were ſeen or written, the more it would have been for his turn toward confuting, or anſwering them, whoſe objection it was, that the Church of Thyatira, mentioned in the Apocalypſe, was not yet a Church, when that was ſaid to be revealed. And therefore if it had been but uncertain whether it were written ſo early or no, he would without all queſtion have made uſe of this, as ſome advantage againſt his adverſaries, whom he was then in confuting. 2dly, That Epiphanius is ſo farre from doing this, that he

he doth twice in the ſame place expreſly affirm, 1. That his being in the Iſle of Patmus; 2dly, That his ſeeing theſe viſions there, were in the time of Claudius. Having ſaid this for the confirming this aſſertion of Epiphanius to have as much authority as his teſtimony can give it, Three arguments I ſhall adde for the truth of it, 1. That about the ninth year of Claudius the Chriſtians were purſued, and baniſht by the Roman Powers. That at that time Claudius baniſhed the Iewes out of Rome, is evident by Ioſephus, and acknowledged by all, And that by the Iewes the Chriſtians are meant, appears by Suetonius in the life of Claudius, c. 25. Iudæos impulſore Chreſto aſſiduè tumultuantes Româ expulit, He baniſhed the Iewes out of Rome for the tumults which they daily raiſed by the impulſion of Chreſtus. By Chreſtus it is certain that the Roman writers meant Chriſt, calling him Chreſt, and his followers Chreſtians, as Tertullian obſerves Apol. c. 3. And ſo they that were acted by the impulſion of Chreſt, in that narration, muſt, though called Iewes, neceſſarily be reſolved to be Chriſtians; And what was done at Rome, is to be ſuppoſed to have been done alſo in other parts of the Emperors dominions, And ſo that edict, mention'd Act. 18. 2. was in reaſon to reach to Epheſus, and may juſtly be thought to have involved S. Iohn there. And accordingly Chronologers have placed this baniſhment of his to Patmus in that year. Secondly, That about Claudius's time it was that the unbeleiving Iewes began and continued to oppoſe and perſecute the Chriſtian Iewes, and thereupon the Gnoſticks compliances (and making as if they were Iewes, to avoid perſecutions) are ſo oft taken notice of by S. Paul, Gal 6. 12. and elſwhere. And by all the Epiſtles both of him, and the reſt of the Apoſtles written from about that time of Claudius, the Gnoſticks are every where toucht on, as the peſts that were creeping into the Churches, againſt which they endevoured to fortifie the beleivers, and aſſure them, that thoſe perſecutions of the Iewes ſhould be ſhortly ended by their deſtruction (that night of ſadneſſe farre ſpent, and the day of deliverance, and refreſhment at hand, Rom. 13. 12. & c. 16. 20.) and that then the complying Gnoſticks, which were ſo ſollicitous to ſave their lives, ſhould loſe them, i. e. ſhould periſh with them. Accordingly, to the very ſame purpoſe is moſt of the viſion here, that concerned the ſeven Churches c 2. 2. & 4. & 9. & 14. & 20. & c. 3. 9, 10. &c. and much of the following prophecie, to aſſure them, that God would take revenge on theſe impenitent, and impure profeſſors, and reſcue the conſtant Chriſtians. And that makes it very reaſonable to beleive, that this viſion was received about the ſame time alſo. A 3d argument will be taken from the account of the eight Kings, or Emperors, c. 17. 10. which cannot, I beleive, otherwiſe be made intelligible, but by beginning the account from Claudius, ſo that he, and Nero, Galba, Otho, Vitellius, ſhall be the five that were faln, and then Veſpaſian (in whoſe time I ſuppoſe theſe viſions were committed to writing by S. Iohn) being the ſixt, ſhall be the [one is,] and Titus the ſeventh, that is not yet come, and when he comes ſhall ſtay but a little while, reigning but two years and two moneths, and then the beaſt that was and is not, and is the eighth, and is of the ſeven, and goes to deſtruction] will fall out to be Domitian, to whom (and to whom only of all the Emperors, nay of all men in any ſtory) all thoſe diſtinctive characters will appertain, as that he exerciſed the office of the Emperor, and was called Emperor at Rome, when Veſpaſian was gone into Iudæa, and after his return became a private man again, delivered up the Empire to him, and ſo was, and is not, and then was the eighth (reckoning from Claudius as the firſt) and the ſon of one of the ſeven, viz: of Veſpaſian, and ſhould be a bloody perſecutor, and accordingly puniſht, and ſo go to deſtruction. This ſeems to me to be a demonſtrative character of the time, wherein the firſt of theſe viſions was delivered, and will farther yeild ſome anſwer to the authority of Irenæus, by interpreting his words [πρὸς τῷ τέλει Δομετιανοῦ ἀρχῆς] of the concluſion of that reign of his at Rome, when his father Veſpaſian was in Iudæa, in reſpect of which it is ſaid of him, that he was and is not, i. e. that reign of his was come to its τέλος or end, was now concluded, Making this not improbably that authors meaning, that Iohn did firſt (in this time of Claudius) receive ſome viſions concerning this deſtruction of the Iewes, and the other attendants of it, and afterward in Veſpaſian's time, while he was in Iudæa, and Domitian reigned at Rome, receive more viſions, that particularly of the number of the beaſt, For I ſuppoſe the ſeveral viſions of this book were (as thoſe of Iſaiah c. 1 1. Ieremiah 1. 2, 3. Hoſea 1. 1. Amos 1. 1. Micah 1. 1. in the reigns of ſeveral Kings) received at ſeveral times, not all at once, or in one day. And if againſt that preſumption it be objected, that they were here ſent all together to the Churches of Aſia, and therefore were all received, and written at the ſame time, to this the anſwer is moſt obvious, from what we ſee done in the forementioned prophecies of Iſaiah &c. in the Old Teſtament, which though clearly received in

ſeveral Kings reigns, and each ſent to that King or the people under him, to whom they belonged, as 'tis evident that of Hezekiah was, and not concealed, and reſerved, till after their death, who were concerned in them) were yet long after the time of receiving the firſt of them, put into a book, and a title, comprehending them all, prefixt to them. And accordingly there is no difficulty to conceive that Iohn having firſt received the viſion of the ſeven Churches, and, according to direction, c. 1. 11. ſpeedily ſent it to them, did after that, (as μετὰ ταῦτα c. 4. 1. literally imports) receive more viſions, at ſeveral times, and after all, put them together into a book or volume, and dedicate them anew to the ſeven Churches, c. 1. 3. and this about the forementioned end of Domitians reigning in his Fathers ſtead, i. e. in Veſpaſian's time, when he was returning from Iudæa, to reſume his power again. I can foreſee but one farther objection againſt this date of theſe viſions, viz: that in the Epiſtle to the Church of Pergamus c. 2. 13. there is the mention, and very name of Antipas the martyr, ὃς ἀπεκτάνθη who was killed,] which may be thought to imply that this viſion was received, after that part of Domitian's reign, wherein Antipas is affirmed to have been ſlain. To this I anſwer, that this naming of Antipas by way of prophecie, may be as eaſily and probably beleived of the Spirit of God, before the time of his ſuffering, as the naming of Cyrus before he was born, which we know was done in the Old Teſtament, nay as Chriſt's telling S. Peter that he ſhould be put to death, and particularly crucified, or as Agabus telling S. Paul, what ſhould befall him at Ieruſalem, Act. 21. 10. or, as I conceive, Simeon's telling the mother of Chriſt, that a ſword ſhould paſſe through her ſoul, Lu. 2. 35. And if Zacharias the ſon of Barachias, Mat. 23. be that Zachary the ſon of Baruch, that was killed cloſe before the ſiege of Ieruſalem, (of which there is little reaſon to doubt) there is then a direct example of what is here thus ſaid of Antipas, the [ἐφονεύσατε ye have killed] being there ſaid of him, as [ἀπεκτάνθη he was killed] here (ſee note on Mat. 23. g.) That Antipas was a contemporary of the Apoſtles, and when he died, was extreme old, will hereafter appear out of the Menologie, and therefore at what time ſoever this viſion were written, 'tis certain there was ſuch a man as Antipas, and no doubt a Chriſtian, if not Biſhop of Pergamus then; And ſo 'tis leſſe ſtrange, that he ſhould be here mentioned by name, then that Cyrus ſhould, before he was born, and no more ſtrange, than for any other living perſon to have his martyrdome particularly foretold. As for the ſenſe of ἀπεκτάνθη was killed] which may be thought to conclude him already killed, ſure that is of little weight, it being very ordinary for prophecies to be delivered in words, which ſignifie the time paſt. All this may ſerve for a competent ſatisfaction to the grand difficulty, And howſoever in a matter of ſome uncertainty we may poſſibly miſtake in the particularity of time, wherein the viſions were received, yet that they belong (much of them) to the buſineſſe of the deſtruction of the Iewes, there will be little queſtion, when the particulars come to be viewed.

This being thus farre evident, it follows to be obſerved, that the deſtruction of Ieruſalem under Titus was but one part of this coming of Chriſt, I mean of the judgments upon the Iewes; Many other bloody acts there were of this tragedy ſtill behind, when that was over. Not to mention Domitian's edict of killing all David's kin, (Euſebius l. 3. c. 19.) The firſt I ſhall inſiſt upon, is that under Trajan, till whoſe reign S. Iohn himſelf lived (ſaith Euſebius l. 3. c. 23. out of Irenæus l. 2. c. 39. & l. 3. c. 3. and out of Clemens Alexandrinus) though not to this part of it. In this Emperors time it went very heavily with the Iewes, τὰ τῆς Ἰουδαίων Συμφορᾶς κακοῖς ἐπαλλήλοις ἤχμαζεν, ſaith he, their calamities came tumbling in upon them, one on the back of another; For both in Alexandria, and the other parts of Ægypt, and even in Cyrene, many Iewes behaving themſelves ſeditiouſly, and at laſt breaking out into open warres and horrid cruelties, deſcribed by Dion, and Spartianus, as well as Euſebius, and once having worſted the Grecians, they of Ægypt, and they of Cyrene joyning together under the conduct of Lucuas, and overrunning all Ægypt, the iſſue of it was, that Trajan ſent Marcius Turbo, with an army by ſea and land, horſe and foot, who in a long continued warre killed great multitudes of them, and leſt they in Meſopotamia ſhould, or ſuſpecting that they had already joyned with them, the Emperor ſent to Quintus Lucius Æmilius, that he ſhould deſtroy them all utterly out of that province, and for his care in obeying that command, he was, ſaith Euſebius, conſtituted Ἰουδαίας ἡγεμὼν Ruler of Judæa under the Emperor. Theſe paſſages we find in Euſebius l. 4. c. 2. and, ſaith he, all the Greek writers of the heathens, who ſet down the ſtories of thoſe times, have the ſame verbatim; and ſo indeed they have, See Dio, as alſo Spartianus. And the number of the ſlain Iewes in that calamity is reckoned to be no leſſe than two hundred thouſand in that reign of Trajan's And this, if there had been none before, and if there were no more behind, might well be

ſtyled a coming of Chriſt in the clouds againſt his crucifyers, a lamentable judgment on all the tribes of that land, and ſo might own the expreſſions in that 7th verſe, and ſome part of the after viſions.

But beſide this, yet farther, within few years more, in the time of Adrian, Trajan's immediate ſucceſſor, (who began his reign An. Dom. 118.) there befell more ſad deſtructions upon the Jewes, and particularly upon Jeruſalem it ſelf, occaſioned by the riſing of Barchocheba, who being but a villain, φονικὸς καὶ λῃστρικὸς τις ἀνὴρ, one that lived by robbing and killing, took upon him to come as a Meſſiah, as a light from heaven to the Jewes, and therefore ſtyled himſelf, Son of a ſtarre. And with thoſe that he thus raiſed, a great warre there was waged by the Romans in the eighteenth year of Adrian, at the Town Bethek not farre from Jeruſalem, and the iſſue was, that the Iewes were under a moſt miſerable ſiege, and Rufus governour of Iudæa, on occaſion of this riſing, without any mercy, deſtroyed all he could come to, men, women, and children, μυριάδας ἀθρόως, ſaith Euſebius l.4. c.6. whole myriads together, and, to conclude, there came out an Edict of Adrian's, after the death of the ringleader, interdicting all Iewes, and forbidding them to return to their city Ieruſalem again, or ſo much as to look toward it; To which end the foundations of the Temple were ploughed up by Rufus, (and ſo Chriſt's prophecie not till now exactly fulfilled, of not one ſtone upon another) the city inhabited by the Romans, new built, and named Ælia from Ælius Adrianus, and (they ſay) the ſtatue of a ſwine ſet over the gate of it, to reproach the Iewes, and baniſh their very eyes from it. And this was another paſſage wch might well be referred to in that place, as matter of mournful ſpectacle to all the Tribes of Iudæa, and as mournfully repreſented in ſome of the viſions. To wch muſt be farther added that the unbeleiving Iews are not the only men, to whom the deſtruction here reveal'd in theſe viſions did belong, but as notably alſo, and wel-nigh as ſoon, the erroneous vile Chriſtians of thoſe times (which were many of them Jewes alſo, and (thoſe that were not) Judaizers, or compliers with the Jewes) viz. the Gnoſticks ſo oft ſpoken of in S. Paul's Epiſtles, and by S. Peter, and S. Iames, S. Iude, and S. Iohn alſo, with intimation of their approaching deſtruction, which here is viſible in the viſion of, and the cauſes of the ſeveral deſtructions, that lighted on the ſeven Churches of Aſia, (if not wholly, yet) at leaſt on the Gnoſticks and other hereticks among them, Of whom, ſaith Euſebius, after the enumerating of their hereſies, λόγῳ θᾶττον εἰς τὸ παντὸς ἀπεσβέσθαι, they vaniſhed to nothing in a moment, and this, ſaith he, in Trajan's time, l.3. c.xθ'. And then in the ſecond place, the other enemies of Chriſt, partakers in the crucifying of him, and afterward eminent perſecuters of Chriſtians, thoſe of heathen Rome, as will appear in the expoſition of the viſions. And then 3dly, as in a parentheſis, Gog and Magog c. 20. 8. which after the peaceable flouriſhing of Chriſtianity for a thouſand years, ſhould waſte the Church again, The Turks in the Eaſt &c. And then all the enemies of God, at the fatall laſt day of doom, c. 20.11.

That this was the ſummary matter of theſe enſuing viſions, the moſt ſerious pondering of every part ſoon made unqueſtionable to me. And of it the Reader may here before-hand receive this ſhort ſcheme, viz. that, after the Preface, in the firſt Chapter, to v.10. and the viſions about the ſeven Churches of Aſia, each of them ſet down diſtinctly, c. 2, and 3. This book contains, Firſt, the proceedings of God with the Iewes, from the fourth to the twelfth chapter; Secondly, the infancy and growth of the Church of Chriſt in order to the heathen world, till it came through great oppoſitions, to get poſſeſſion of the Roman Empire, partly by deſtroying, partly by converting the heathen and villanous, impure Idoll-worſhippers; from the twelfth to the twentieth chapter. Thirdly, the peaceable, flouriſhing ſtate of the Church for a thouſand years, (and after that the breaking out of the Turk, and haraſſing the Eaſtern Churches, briefly toucht, together with their deſtruction, and the end of the world) moſt rhetorically deſcribed, from chap. 20th to the 6th verſe of ch. 22. And from thence to the end of the Book a formal concluſion of the whole matter. All which is ſomewhat proportionable to that which old Tobit prophetically ſpoke of the times that were to follow him, c.14.5. which he divided into three diſtinct ſpaces: Firſt, the re-building of the Temple, which was now long paſt, and this Book hath nothing to doe with that. Secondly, the conſummations of the ſeaſons of the age, i.e. the deſtruction of the Iewiſh ſtate, which is the firſt main period here: This is not ſo clearly ſet down in our ordinary Engliſh verſion, as in the Greek it is, for that reads not as the Engliſh doth [until the time of that age be fulfilled] confining the continuance of the ſecond temple to the time of that age, but [ἕως πληρωθῶσι καιροὶ τοῦ αἰῶνος, till the ſeaſons of the age be fulfilled,] a phraſe neer of kin to thoſe many which are uſed in the New Teſtament, for the deſtruction of this people [the latter days, or ſeaſons, συντελεια αἰῶνος. the conſummation or concluſion of the age] Mat. 24. 3. But in the Hebrew copy ſet out, and rendred by Paulus Fagius, (which appears to be tranſlated skilfully by ſome Iew out of the Original Chaldee) there is a very conſiderable addition to this purpoſe, ועוד יצאו בגלות לב ונירול, And again they ſhall go into a long and great captivity, noting the greatneſſe and duration of this beyond all the former. That theſe words in that Hebrew copy are the true reading, appears by the ſubſequent mention of a return, which cannot be ſenſe, without this precedent mention of a captivity. And that it belongs to that deſtruction of them by the Romans, appears by another paſſage, added alſo in that Hebrew copie, and directly parallel to Mat. 24. 31. for as there after the deſtruction of Ieruſalem v. 29. is mention of the Angels ſent to gather the elect Iewes from the four windes, (parallel to the viſion of the ſealing, Rev. 7,) ſo it follows in Tobit, but God, holy and bleſſed ſhall remember them, and gather them from the four corners of the world. After which follows Thirdly, the ſtate of Chriſtianity, the glorious building of Ieruſalem, and the houſe of God, foretold the prophets, (and that building ſet down c. 13. 18. 17. with Sapphires, Emrods, precious ſtones, pure gold, Beryll, Carbuncle, ſtones of Ophir, in the ſame manner, as 'tis deſcribed in theſe viſions, c. 21. 18, 19.) and that to continue for ever or, as the Hebrew reads, for ever and ever; and as a prime branch of that period the converting of the nations, and burying their idols, (which is here the ſecond main period) v. 6, 7. This parallel prediction in Tobit may be of ſome force to authoriſe the interpretation of theſe viſions; In all which, as there may be ſeveral particular paſſages either ſo obſcure (from the nature of prophetick ſtyle) as not to be eaſily explicated, or ſo copious, (and capable of more than one explication) as to render it uncertain, which ſhould be preferr'd (In which reſpect I hope, and expect that much more light may be added to it, by more ſtrict ſurvaies, and comparing the expreſſions in this Book with the like phraſes, or paſſages in the Prophets of the Old Teſtament) ſo for the general matter of theſe viſions, I ſuppoſe, upon pondering the whole, there will be little doubt, but theſe are the true lineaments of it.

And it hath been matter of much ſatisfaction to me, that what hath upon ſincere deſire of finding out the truth, and making my addreſſes to God for his particular directions in this work of difficulty (without any other light to go before me) appeared to me to be the meaning of this prophecie, hath, for the main of it, in the ſame manner repreſented it ſelf to ſeveral perſons of great piety, and learning (as ſince I have diſcerned) none taking it from the other, but all from the ſame light ſhining in the prophecie it ſelf. Among which number I now alſo finde the moſt learned Hugo Grotius, in thoſe poſthumous notes of his on the Apocalypſe, lately publiſht.

And this is all that ſeemed uſeful to be here premiſed concerning the interpretation of this Book.

THE [a]REVELATION OF John[b] the Divine.

a.

b.

THE title of this Book as it is ordinarily ſet [Ἀποκάλυψις Ἰωάννου τοῦ Θεολόγου, the Revelation of John the Divine] hath in it ſome ſeeming difference from the firſt words of the Book, which were written by S. John himſelf, (whereas that other (as the reſt of the titles of the Books of the New Teſtament) was by the Church of the firſt ages affixt unto it) Ἀποκάλυψις Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, the Revelation of Jeſus Chriſt. And this difference is to be reconciled not by making one of them to refer to the perſon that received, the other to him that gave the Revelation, for as John received it from Chriſt, ſo Chriſt alſo received it from his father, and therefore 'tis here added v. 1. [which God gave him] but it muſt be by diſtinguiſhing of the time and manner of theſe revealings. God formerly revealed theſe future events to Chriſt the Son of man, as the Mediatour by him now deſigned to conveigh all knowledge and grace to us; and this he did, when Chriſt entred on his Prophetick office (long before the time here ſpecified) from whence it was, that Chriſt, whilſt here on earth, foretold (in the parable of the King and the Husbandmen, Lu. 20. 16. and Mat. 24. and ſparſim at other times) many of the particulars repreſented in this prophecie, eſpecially that of the deſtruction of the unbeleiving Jewes. And in this reſpect this whole Book is entituled [the Revelation of Jeſus Chriſt] i. e. that prophecie, which Jeſus Chriſt received from his Father, as the viſion of Iſaiah, &c. is the prophecie, which Iſaiah received from God, or, that God gave to Iſaiah. But then as Chriſt thought fit to give a repreſentation of this to his beloved diſciple, John, and ſo John received it as a prophecie, to deliver to others, So 'tis fitly ſtyled (here in the title) the Revelation of John, who received it (in viſion, or extaſie v. 10.) by the Angel from Chriſt, as Chriſt received it from his Father. For this is the meaning of the word Ἀποκάλυψις Revelation, a word ordinarily uſed in Daniel, to ſignifie any knowledge, extraordinarily communicated to any by God, Thus is the word uſed 2 Cor. 12. 1. where he puts together viſions and revelations of the Lord (and perhaps expreſſes it, v. 2. by ἄνθρωπον ἐν Χριστῷ a man in Chriſt, as here v. 10. by being in the Spirit snatcht into the third Heaven, ſo again v. 7. abundance of Revelations. So Gal. 2. 2. I went up by Revelation, i. e. by impulſion of the Spirit of God, and Epheſ. 3. 3. By Revelation (i. e. by Chriſt's ſpeaking to him from heaven, and other the like viſions, which, it appears, he had, 2 Cor. 12. 7.) God made known to me the myſtery. In other places, the word is uſed in a greater latitude, for an expoſition, or interpretation of any ſacred figure, &c. however come by, though not by immediate inſpiration from God, the דרש among the Hebrews, expounding of difficulties (ſee note on 1 Cor. 14. b.) and yet more widely 1 Pet. 1. 7. for Chriſt's revealing himſelf in judgement on his adverſaries, and reſcuing the faithful. But here it is according to ſtrict idiome, no more then viſion, or prophecie, and ſo the title of Enoch's book, cited Jude 15. was Ἀποκάλυψις Ἐνὼχ the Revelation of Enoch, but in S. Jude's ſtyle (προφητεία Ἐνὼχ) the prophecy of Enoch. And if in this notion of the word (which is peculiarly that, which here and c. 1. 1. belongs to it) M^r Brightman intituled his comment on this book. Apocalypſim Ἀποκαλύψεως, the Revelation of the Revelation (as it ſeems he did by [a] applying the words of Scripture [the Lord hath ſpoken, who can but prophecie?] to his own performances in that comment, adding that God not onely ſpake of old by dreams and viſions, but daily now, whenſoever he inlightens the mindes of his ſervants, to the fetching out any hidden truth of his word, and that when God doth thus communicate with any, he underſtandeth a neceſſity impoſed on him to make it known to others, and that the danger is not ſhewn to him for his own private ſake) I cannot but affirm that he hath groſſely miſtaken his buſineſſe, and endevoured to impoſe falſe prophecies upon his Reader. For though by the help, and grace of God, ſought onely by prayer, and by the uſe of means, inſtrumental to that end, and ſubordinate to that grace (ſuch are comparing Scripture with Scripture, and Prophetick expreſſions with the Prophetick ſtyle, and Symbols with Symbols, and the obſervation of the uſe of words, and phraſes in the ſacred dialect) it be poſſible to attain to the expounding or revealing ſome ſecret ſenſes of Scriptures, which without the uſes of theſe means, will not be attainable, yet may not the interpretations of any meer man (which hath not the gift of prophecie, pretend to be the word of God. And whoſoever ſhall profeſſe, thus to reveal the Revelation, by God ſpeaking to him, and doth not evidence his calling and miſſion prophetick, eſpecially if he pretend to have learnt from the Revelation things ſo diſtant from what there we read, as are Germany, and France, and Britanny, of this laſt Century, from the Churches of Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicea, in Aſia, then in being, when S. John by Chriſt's appointment wrote this prophecie to them, muſt needs be lookt on as a falſe ſeer, or or falſe prophet. And this is done by Maſter Brightman in expreſſe words, ſaying, that he [b] had learnt out of the Apocalypſe that a moſt heavy trial was now ſuddenly to invade the Chriſtian world (as if what was ſaid to be ſudden neer 1600 years ſince, were ſufficiently fulfilled by being neer at hand fourty four years ago) that the Churches of Britain, Germany, and France, were moſt favourably admoniſhed of this tempeſt by Epiſtles written to them by name, that he by divine impulſion or direction (or what elſe divinitùs can ſignifie) found theſe very Epiſtles, which ſignifie this thing, and from the inſcriptions of them underſtood, to whom they were ſent, and durſt not but diſpatch them to them, leſt either by intercepting or concealing them he ſhould be condemned of wrong offered to the divine Majeſty. And that [c] thoſe Epiſtles do not foretell this by any doubtful conjecture, but teach in clear words, what he thus thinks fit to affix on them. The leaſt that can be ſaid of this, is, that 'tis the adding to the prophecies of this book, c. 22. 18. the obtruding his own fancies for divine revelations. And if the ſad calamities which have befaln this Britiſh Church, ſince the writing of this New Apocalypſe of his, be conceived to conclude him a true Prophet, in his preſaging againſt the Angel of that Church, It will be as reaſonable to aſcribe divinity to the heathen Auguries, and Oracles alſo, as oft as any part of the event followed any one of them, whereas indeed of any contingent future event, there being only two things poſſible, either that it will, or that it will not come to paſſe, and perſecutions, and ſchiſms, and commotions, and ſeditions, and changes of Government being ſo frequent, that whatſoever Church or Kingdome hath long withſtood ſuch aſſets, may at laſt by ſome advantage induſtriouſly ſought, and maliciouſly laid hold on, not improbably ſink and fall under them, whatſoever is, or can be foretold in this kinde with any common prudence, will not be improbable to fall out (in ſome part) within fourty or fifty years ſpace. Nay whatever 'tis, ſome advantage it will have toward the completion by having been foretold; As when by the flying of the birds (ſo caſual, and unſignificant a thing, as that) the Roman Augurs promiſed the ſouldiers a victory on their ſide, the courage thus infuſed into them by beleiving that prediction, did oft contribute very much to the obtaining the victory; The ſame may in ſome meaſure be ſaid in this particular. But much more conſiderable is the influence, and conſequence of that doctrine, which is ſo frequently inculcated by the Expoſitors of this Book, That the people are they, that muſt pull down Antichriſt, whilſt Kings eſpouſe his cauſe, then which nothing can be more effectual and direct toward the raiſing and fomenting of commotions, to which the proſperity of them is as probably conſequent, as victory to the number, and courage of an Army; and ſo though the preſcience of God (which is not his decree) and the predictions of true Prophets, which are but rayes of that preſcience, have no proper immediate influence on the effect, nothing of cauſality in them, yet theſe vain deluſions of thoſe falſe Prophets may have had much of (improperly ſo called, yet) real efficiency, and if ſo deſigned by them, of guilt in them. All which, proves the wickedneſſe and dangerouſneſſe of ſuch deſignes, but gives no Authority to the interpretations.

Having ſaid thus much in general of Maſter Brightman's Apocalypſe, I ſhall not think it amiſſe to give the Reader ſome view, or taſte of his way of interpreting, and the grounds wherewith he contents himſelf, And it ſhall be by mentioning his explications of the prophecies of the ſeven Churches, which are in themſelves the moſt clear, and intelligible of any part of the whole book, (as belonging peculiarly and by name to the chief Epiſcopal Sees of Aſia, ſufficiently known to all, and, in reſpect of the matter and expreſſions uſed in them, more perſpicuous, then almoſt any part of the prophecies of Iſaiah, but much more than thoſe of Ezekiel and Daniel) but by him detorted and wreſted from their native intelligible ſenſe to far diſtant purpoſes. This view I ſhall not chooſe to give here out of its place, but leave the Reader to make it up, by putting together theſe few notes on the three enſuing Chapters, ch. 1. d. ch. 2. b. d. g. ch. 3. a.

b. That the title of Θεολόγου the Divine] is here given to the writer of theſe viſions, and not 'Απoςόλου the Apoſtle] is not from any imagination of thoſe that affixt it, that the Apoſtle John was not writer of them, but becauſe that title of Θεολόγος was by the Antients, Origen eſpecially, beſtowed on this Apoſtle, in reſpect of the divinity and ſublimity of his manner of writing, obſervable in his Goſpel, and particularly becauſe he began it with ſetting down the divinity of Chriſt (whereas others begin with his birth, or humanity) the Θεὸς ἦν ὁ λόγος, the word was God. This title had by the Platoniſts been given to Orpheus, in relation to the book concerning the Gods, written by him, and ſo to Linus and Muſæus alſo; thoſe three ordinarily known by the name of Theologi poeta.

CHAP. I.

Paraphrase.

1. THE Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him, to shew unto his servants things that must * shortly come to passe, and † he sent and signified it by his Angel unto his servant John;]

* suddenly, speedily ἐν τάχει
† he signified them sending by his Ang. ἐσήμανεν πέμψας διὰ τοῦ ἀγγ.

1. The prophecie, or vision, or Revelation of Jesus Christ, which (as to our great Propher, and Intercessor, or Mediator, between God and us) was put into his hands by his Father, that he might, as he pleased, make known to his Apostles some things that should suddenly come to passe (many of them in the age wherein they lived, as his dealing with his crucifiers, and their persecutors, the Jewes) And (as some of them he made known to them all together, whilst he was alive, as then neer at hand, Mat. 24. 34. Lu. 21. Mar. 13. 30.) now he hath thought fit to send a Symbolical representation of the same, and all the rest, the whole matter of this prophecie by an Angel to John his most beloved disciple; 2.

2. That John, that had preached or given in his testimony concerning the word of God, the doctrine, and deeds, and sufferings and resurrection of Christ (whereby he testified his to be the doctrine, and will of his Father) and some particulars, which he peculiarly saw, (see Joh. 19. note d. and 1 Joh. 1. 1.) not taken notice of by others.

2. * Who bare record of the word of God, of [a] the testimony of Jesus Christ, and of all things that he saw.

* who had testified the Ὅστις ἐμαρτύρησεν

3. Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecie, and keep those things which are written therein, for the time is at hand.]

3. In this Revelation other prophecies there are, and predictions of things future (after this of the Jewes destruction) and therein, mixt, the admirable ways of God's providence in permitting and punishing his enemies, exercising and rewarding the patience of his servants, the constant Christians. And so the prophecies here set down of the destructions of the enemies of Christ, are matter of comfort to all them, that are now under persecution, and are such as concern every one that now lives to read and observe, and to perform what herein he is admonished to perform. For the time is close at hand, wherein one after another, all these propheeies, tending all to set forth Gods wonderful providence in punishing his enemies, and protecting his servants, shall be successively fulfilled.

4. John to the seven Churches in [b] Asia, Grace be unto you and peace † from him which is, and which was, and which is to come, and from the [c] seven spirits which are before his throne,]

4. These Revelations which I John thus received, I send in an Epistle to the seven Churches of Asia, which I salute my self, and am commanded to send them greeting, from the eternal God, whose name is Jehovah, which signifies, He that is, and was, and shall be, and from the Angels which attend and wait upon God ch. 4. 5. and are as, in the Sanhedrim, the officers waiting on the head of the Sanhedrim, to go on all their messages, or, as in the Church, the Deacons, to attend the commands of the Governour of the Church, and to perform them (see Mat. 18. note a.) b. c.

5. And from Jesus Christ, who is the faithful witnesse, and the * first begotten of the dead, and the Prince of the Kings of the earth: unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood,]

5. And from Jesus Christ, him that testified & made known, being here on earth, the will of his Father, with all fidelity, (see note a. & ch. 3. c.) and that being crucified, rose from the dead (and so as our first-fruits, 1 Cor. 15. 20. ascertained our resurrection, wherein we his brethren shall be like him our elder brother) and hath all power given unto him in heaven and in earth, is superiour to all the Princes of this world, (Dan. 4. 17.) whose power or persecutions ye may fear, To him that hath made use of that power, to expres the reality of his love to us, in purging us from our sins, obtaining justification and sanctification for us, by the satisfaction, wrought by the shedding of his blood, and all the merits of his death (and the power of his resurrection, and the blessed consequents of it, the sending of his Spirit, and his own Intercession at the right hand of his Father) all consequents of that blood-shedding of his, upon which God so highly exalted him above all, Philip. 2. 9.

† his God and Father τῷ θεῷ καὶ πατρὶ αὐτοῦ

6. And hath made us [d] Kings and Priests † unto God and his Father: To him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.]

6. And all this that he might purchase to himself a Church of obedient servants (and accordingly he hath now set us apart as consecrated persons (such as Kings and Priests were of old) to perform daily service unto him, and delivered us from our persecutors that we may do so) To this Saviour and Redeemer of ours be ascribed, as to our eternal God, all glory and dominion for ever and ever, Amen. (Which acknowledgment of that disciple of his, attributing the same to Christ, which Christ teaches us to attribute to our Father in heaven, Mat. 6. and which belongs onely to God, is a sure testimony that Christ is God, see note on Rom. 9. c.) d.

7. Behold, this is his season wherein he cometh to protect his servants, and to inflict vengeance on his enemies, (see note on Mat 24. b.) as discernibly, as when by the appearance of Angels in white clouds, or with thunder and lightning &c. he exhibits himselfe (see Dan. 7. 13.) and all men shall discern his particular hand in these judgements, and all that had to doe in the crucifying of him, and all the nation of the Jews, whether at Jerusalem, or wheresoever scattered (see the Premonition, and Mat. 24. b.) shall discern that these judgements are inflicted on them for their crucifying of Christ, and persecuting Christians, and shall see what cause they have to lament for their cruel usage of them, which now lights so heavy upon themselves. e.

8. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord, † which is, and which was, and which is to come, the * Almighty.]

8. The first and last letter of the Greek Alphabet is a description of me, saith Christ, who am before and after all things (and so he whose kingdome hath no beginning nor end) and am able to secure all faithful servants of mine, and to subdue and destroy mine enemies, and now mean to evidence some of my royal power in punishing my enemies, or ill subjects.

9. I

9. I John, who write this Epiſtle to you, and who with other the faithfull Chriſtian Jewes have ſuffered perſecution, and doe ſtill hold out conſtant and patient, through the power of Jeſus Chriſt (who now reignes though once he ſuffered) not permitting any temptation to ſhake my faith, or drive me from the profeſſion of Chriſtianity, was in the Iſle of Patmos, banished thither for preaching and promulgating the doctrine and faith of Jeſus Chriſt. (See v. 2 note a.)

9. I John, who alſo am your brother and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdome and patience of Jeſus Chriſt, was in the Iſle that is called Patmos for the word of God, and for the teſtimony of Jeſus Chriſt.]

10. And being there excluded from the ſociety of men, I was vouchſafed by God to receive Revelations from him, and accordingly I fell into an extaſy or tranſportation, on the * day of Chriſts reſurrection, the firſt day of the week, either the annuall, or the weekly feſtivity, ſet apart to commemorate his reſurrection, and as upon a feſtivity. I heard the ſound of a trumpet, Pſal. 47. 5. or a voyce as loud as the ſound of the trumpet, and that voyce behind me, Iſ. 30. 21. calling to me unexpectedly.

10. I was in the ſpirit on the Lords day, and heard behind me a great voice, as of a trumpet,]

11. And that which was ſaid, was, that he that ſpake to me was the eternal God, and that I was commanded by him to write down what was or ſhould be (at this or at any other time) ſhewed me, and to ſend all together in an Epiſtle to the ſeven Churches of Chriſt in Aſia, of which Epheſus was the chief Metropolis, which accordingly now I doe.

11. Saying, I am Alpha and Omega, the firſt and the laſt, and, what thou ſeeſt, write in a book, and ſend it unto the ſeven Churches which are in Aſia, unto Epheſus, and unto Smyrna, and unto Pergamos, and unto Thyatira, and unto Sardis, and unto Philadelphia, and unto Laodicea.]

12. And hearing the voyce behind me, I turned to ſee who it was, from whence this voyce came to me, And upon this occaſion of turning, there appeared unto me in the viſion the repreſentation (in Symbols or viſible Hieroglyphicks) of what that voyce v. 11. ſaid unto me. To ſignifie the ſeven Churches, appeared ſeven golden Candleſticks.

12. And I turned to ſee the voyce that ſpake with me, And being turned I ſaw ſeven golden Candleſticks,]

13. To ſignifie Chriſt, that eternall God, that ſpake to me, and ſaid I am Alpha and Omega, there appeared an Angel in the midſt of the Candleſticks (like him, deſcribed, Dan. 10. 5.) in a very ſolemn manner, habited like the high prieſt, Levit. 6. 12. and 16. 4. (to ſignifie Chriſt our mercyfull high prieſt, who hath compaſſion on our infirmities, and intercedes, and prayes for us, to be repreſented by this Angel) in an upper garment, long, ſuch as he uſed to weare (ſee note on Mat. 5. 0.) and girt with a girdle, (as he was too) and that of gold, (as Rev. 15. 6.) after the manner of the high prieſt, the curious girdle of whole Ephod was of gold, blue, purple, ſcarlet, and fine twined linnen, Exod. 39. 5. and by that intermixture of gold, diſcriminated from the girdles of ordinary prieſts (ſee note on Lu. 12. b.) and this belt or girdle, girt about the paps.

13. And in the midſt of the ſeven Candleſticks one like unto the Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about the paps with a golden guirdle.]

14, 15. And his appearance from head to foot, was like a flaming fire, noting his coming to doe vengeance, to conſume with the brightneſſe of his preſence 2 Theſſ. 2. 8. And his voyce was like the ſound of a great many waters met together, or of a multitude, Dan. 10. 6. making a huge terrible roaring noyſe.

14. His head and his haires were white † like wooll, * as white as ſnow, and his eyes were as a flame of fire,

15. And his feet like unto † [f] fine braſſe, as if they burned in a furnace, and his voyce as the ſound of many waters.]

16. And * he had in his right hand ſeven ſtars, and out of his mouth went a ſharp two-edged ſword, and his countenance was as the ſunne ſhineth in his ſtrength.]

18. And he held ſeven ſtarres in his right hand (ſignifying his approbation and care of the ſeven ſingular Governors, which were placed in thoſe ſeven Churches, repreſented by the Candleſticks) and there came out of his mouth, in ſtead of a tongue or words, a ſword of ſuch a kind as betokened ſudden deſtructions, and the ſame was ſignified by his lookes, which was the reſemblance of the ſunne, when it ſhineth in its greateſt brightneſſe.

17. And when I ſaw Chriſt thus repreſented, the terribleneſſe of the viſion and Chriſts appearance in it was ſuch, that it put me into a fainting fit (ſee Dan. 10. 8.) but he held me up, and encouraged me not to fear, but to truſt in him, as the eternall God, who would certainly doe me no hurt, how terrible ſoever he proved to his enemies, putting me in mind, who he was, the God of heaven though vilified and crucified upon the earth, (which crucifying of him, and proceeding in like manner with his ſervants, is the thing that he comes now to puniſh, and therefore there would be no matter of feare, (but much rather of comfort and joy) to any faithfull Chriſtian.)

17. And when I ſaw him, I fell at his feet as dead, and he laid his right hand upon me, ſaying unto me, Fear not, I am the firſt and the laſt,]

18. Even that Chriſt which lived here on earth and was put to death (and ſo knowes how to have compaſſion on all faithfull Chriſtians, that ſuffer in like manner, Heb. 2. 17.) and roſe again to life, and now lives never to dye again, and hath all power over that inviſible ſtate and continuance in death, and over death it ſelf (ſee note on Mat. 11. i.) being able to fetch any man out of that condition, and reſtore him to life again, and ſo fit to relieve and reward any that ſuffers, though it be death it ſelf for his ſake. To which purpoſe, ſaith he, for the evidencing the truth of what now I ſay, i. e. of my faithfull care of all thoſe that continue conſtant to me (whilſt I deſtroy the obdurate)

18. I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive for evermore, Amen, and have the keyes of † hell and death.]

19. Do thou write the viſions which thou haſt formerly ſeen, a repreſentation both of the things which are now a doing, and of others which ſhall ſoon follow after them.

19. Write the things [g] which thou haſt ſeen, * and the things which are, and the things which ſhall be hereafter.]

20. And for that which thou now ſeeſt, which thou art to write alſo, (as I bad thee, v. 11.) the meaning of it is, that it repreſenteth to thee the ſeven Churches, to which thou muſt communicate theſe viſions in an Epiſtle, and the ſeven Governours of them; The ſeven ſtarres which were ſhewed thee in the viſion, ſignifie ſo many Governours of thoſe ſo many Churches, v. 11. and the Candleſticks ſignifie the Churches themſelves.

20. The myſterie of the ſeven ſtars which thou ſaweſt in my right hand, and the ſeven golden Candleſticks. The ſeven ſtars are the [h] Angels of the ſeven Churches, & the ſeven Candleſticks which thou ſaweſt are the ſeven Churches.]

a. Μαρτυρία Ἰησοῦ

The teſtimony of Jeſus, is the Goſpel, as it was preached, and teſtified by him, the μάλιστα πιστὸς, moſt creditable authentick witneſſe ver. 5. and accordingly 'tis called 1 Cor. 1. 6. the teſtimony of Chriſt; and 2 Tim. 1. 8. the teſtimony of our Lord, and the teſtimony of God, 1 Cor. 2. 1. For as there is the μαρτυρία record or teſtimony, that God teſtified of his ſon, Joh. 8. 18. both the voice from heaven, and the miracles, which he did, &c. and as the Apoſtles office (and the Baptiſts, Joh. 5. 30.) was peculiarly, that they ſhould teſtifie of Jeſus, Joh. 19. 35. & 21. 24. Act. 1. 22. ſo it was the great Prophetick office of Chriſt, that he ſhould teſtifie of the truth, declare the will of God, and demonſtrate (by prophecies, by miracles, by laying down his life, and by his reſurrection, and deſcent of the holy Ghoſt) that it was ſuch, (ſee note on ch. 3. c.) Thus in the 9th verſe of this chapter, where John is ſaid to be in the Iſle Patmos, (i. e. baniſhed for the word of God, and for the teſtimony of Jeſus, the meaning is evident, that he was in that exile for having preached that Goſpel of Chriſt; Λόγῳ θεοῦ, εὐαγγέλιον ὃ ἔγραψεν, ſaith Andreas Caſarienſis, the word of God, is the Goſpel, which he wrote, not that it is certain, that he had written it, when he was baniſhed into Patmos, but becauſe that very Goſpel, which he wrote upon the entreaty of the Aſian Biſhops, for the confuting of Cerinthus, &c. was in ſubſtance preached before by him, throughout all Aſia, and many converted to the faith by it.

b. Ἀσία

That Aſia here ſignifies not that fourth part in the diviſion of the world, but in another notion of the word known to Geographers) the Lydian, or Proconſular Aſia, is largely demonſtrated by the moſt reverend Archbiſhop of Armagh in his diſcourſe on that ſubject. Thus the word is uſed Act. 19. 26. where Paul is ſaid to have perſwaded much people not only at Epheſus, but almoſt through all Aſia, Where Aſia muſt needs be that Province, of which Epheſus was the chief Metropolis; and ſo Act. 20. 18. all the Biſhops of Aſia are (by letters ſent to Epheſus) ſummoned to meet Paul at Miletus; Where as he foretells them v. 29. that ſoon after his departure cruel ravenous wolves will enter in, not ſparing the flock, and that among themſelves will ariſe falſe teachers, and accordingly Timothy was then left Metropolitan of Epheſus, that he might charge ſuch μὴ ἑτεροδιδασκαλεῖν not to diſſeminate theſe falſe doctrines, 1 Tim. 1. 3. ſo it appears, it ſoon fell out, for S. Paul tells Timothy 2 Tim. 1. 15. as a thing known by him, that πάντες οἱ ἐν τῇ Ἀσίᾳ all they that were in Aſia rejected him, which in all reaſon is to be underſtood of the generality of the Biſhops neer, if not under this Metropolitan, of whom two are there named by him, Phygellus, and Hermogenes; That it was the hereſie of the Gnoſticks, that thus infeſted theſe Churches, may appear by the Epiſtles to Timothy, where they are diſtinctly named by the Ψευδώνυμος Γνῶσις, Science falſly ſo called, 1 Tim. 6. 20. and by the μῦθοι and γενεαλογίαι, fabulous, Poetical Theologie, conſiſting of ſtrange Genealogies, imitated from the heathen Poets, which the Valentinians had from the Gnoſticks, and are deſcribed at large by Irenæus in his deſcription of that hereſie, And accordingly here is Chriſt's meſſage ſent to theſe Biſhops of Aſia, to reprehend, and warn them againſt this hereſie. Now in this Aſia as there were many cities, ſo there were ſome metropoles, chief, or mother cities, to each of which the leſſer adjacent cities were ſubordinate, Of this ſort the firſt was Epheſus, ſaith Ulpian, ἡ μητρόπολις Ἔφεσος, in l: Obſerv: D. de Off: Proconſ: Such again was Thyatira, ſaith Ptolemie, Θυάτειρα μητρόπολις, Geogr: l. 1. c. 2. Such Philodelphia, in the * Councel of Conſtantinople ſub Menâ; Ἐπίσκοπος * Act. 5. ἡ Φιλαδελφέων μητροπόλεως τῆς Λυδῶν ἐπαρχίας, the Biſhop of the Metropolis of Philodelphia of the Province of the Lydians. Of the ſame rank are Laodicea, Sardis, and Smyrna affirmed to be by Pliny, (nat: hiſt: l. 5. c. 29.) as cities wherein the Roman Proconſuls reſiding, kept courts for all the adjoyning cities to reſort to, And the ſame he affirms of Pergamus, c. 30. By which it appears that all the ſeven cities here named were Metropoles, and accordingly under theſe ſeven all other Chriſtian Churches of this whole Proconſular Aſia were contain'd; Of which number as it is reaſonable to think that there were more than ſeven, at the time of writing this Epiſtle, (Paul having ſpent three years in preaching the Goſpel in Aſia, and all the inhabitants ſaid to have received the faith, Act. 19. 10.) ſo it is evident in Ignatius's time (which was not long after this) that Magneſia and Trallis, upon the banks of Maander (Τράλλεις πόλις Λυδίας ἐπὶ τῷ Μαιάνδρῳ ποταμῷ, ſaith Stephanus Byzantius in: voc:) being conſequently included in this Aſia, were Epiſcopal Churches, or cities, Damas being Biſhop of one, Polybius of the other, and ſo ſubordinate to the Metropolitan of Epheſus.

There is ſome queſtion what is here meant by the ἑπτὰ πνεύματα ſeven ſpirits, Some interpret them to be the holy Ghoſt, in reſpect of the ſeven graces of that Spirit, ſome the ſeveral operations of God's providence, which they conceive to be mentioned ch. 5. 12. and noted by the ſeven eyes, Zach. 4. 10. and Rev. 5. 6. which are there called the Seven ſpirits of God ſent unto all the land. But δοκιμώτερον τοὺς ἀγγέλους πάντα νοῦν, 'Tis more reaſonable to underſtand the Angels by them, ſaith Andreas Caſarienſis, So Clemens Alexandrinus, Strom: 6. Ἑπτὰ μέν εἰσιν οἱ τὴν μείζω δύναμιν ἔχοντες πρωτόγονοι ἀγγέλων ἀρχοντες, there are ſeven which have the chiefeſt power the firſt begotten princes of the Angels; where the πρωτόγονοι ἀρχοντες firſt born princes] is ſure taken from Dan. 10. 13. where the Hebrew reads שָׂרִים הָרִאשֹׁנִים the chief princes, of which Michael is there ſaid to be one, or of the firſt. So Tobit 12. 15. Seven holy Angels, which preſent the prayers of the Saints. And there appears no reaſon why the ſeven eyes, in Zacharie, and here, c. 5. 6. interpreted the ſeven ſpirits of God, ſhould not be the Angels of God; the ſame that ſtood before God, chap. 8. 2. as here they are before his throne. It being ordinary for the Officers employed by perſons to be called eyes. Theſe ſeven Spirits we find again ch. 4. 5. where, in reference to the number of the lamps on the candleſtick in the ſanctuary, they are called ſeven lamps. And they there ſeem to referre to the ſeven deacons in the Church of Jeruſalem, God being before likened to the Biſhop;

c. Ἑπτὰ πνεύματα

ſhop, and the Saints to the 24 Elders. And if it be thought ſtrange that John ſhould pray for Grace and Peace from the Angels, which here he ſeems to doe from the ſeven Spirits, I anſwer, 1. that theſe, and the like words, [Peace be to, or, with you] are but a form of greeting, or ſalutation, which includes in it all good wiſhes of the things mentioned, but not a ſolemn prayer to thoſe perſons named in the form. This may appear by Chriſt's taking leave of his diſciples, Joh. 14. ver. 27. where, he tells them, he leaves peace with them, and gives his peace to them, i.e. he takes his leave of them, greets them at parting (and bids them not be troubled at it, not affrighted) adding that he gives it to them, not as the world gives it, i. e. he greets them heartily and affectionately, and in doing ſo, doth more than in the world is wont to be done by ſuch ſalutations; Men are wont to uſe theſe words, Peace be to you &c. formally, and by way of civility, but oft doe not wiſh it, when they ſay it, and can never doe any more than wiſh or pray for it; but Chriſt beſtows it by wiſhing it. Where 1. Chriſt uſes this greeting, and yet doth not pray to his Father in doing ſo, but actually beſtows it, and ſaith he gives it them, nay the men of the world are ſaid to give it, though not as Chriſt doth. Both which note a difference betwixt ſuch ſalutations and prayers. But then 2^dly, ſuppoſing it a prayer, yet the action of prayer being not addreſt to the ſeven ſpirits, whether immediately or terminatively, there can be no inconvenience from thence to define the ſpirits to be Angels. For 'tis certain that the Angels are uſed by God as inſtruments to conveigh his mercies to us (and the word Peace, as the Hebrew שלום in ſalutations eſpecially, ſignifies all kind of mercies, all proſperity) and then thoſe mercies come from the Angels immediately, though originally from God. And accordingly Jacob in bleſſing Joſeph's ſons, having mentioned God, before whom his fathers did walk, the God which had fed him all his life, Gen. 48. 15. adds v. 16. the Angel which redeemed me from all evil (i.e. the Angel, by whom as by an inſtrument, or ſervant, God had done this for him, and which had ſo often appeared to him) bleſſe the lads &c. where though he prayes not to the Angel, but to God, yet he may, and doth pray, that God would continue to uſe the Angel's ſervice in bleſſing the lads, which he had uſed in bleſſing him: And if it be farther objected, that theſe ſpirits here are named before Chriſt, and therefore muſt not be Angels, I anſwer, 1. that the order of ſetting down is no note of dignity, or priority in the ſcripture, In theſe benedictions the Lord Jeſus is generally named before God the father; And 2^dly, if the ſpirits ſhould ſignifie the various operations of the divine providence, as ſome, or the graces of the Spirit, as others would have them ſignifie, this inconvenience will alſo hold againſt either of thoſe, that they ſhould be named before the ſecond perſon in the Trinity, and a farther inconvenience alſo, that grace ſhould be ſaid to come from graces, or from operations, or that any thing but perſons, God, or Angels, ſhould have to doe in conveighing grace, and peace unto us. But then 3^dly, the reaſon why the mention of Chriſt is left to the laſt place, is evident, 1. Becauſe the Angels being God's attendants are accordingly joyned with him, not as one equal with another, but as ſervants following the Maſter. And 2^dly, becauſe there was more to be ſaid of Chriſt, than the bare naming him, as appears v. 5,6,7. which made it more convenient to reſerve his mention to the laſt place, in which that might moſt commodiouſly be ſpoken.

Βαϊλεῦσι ἀφίημι ὑμῖν

This phraſe βασιλεῖς καὶ ἱερεῖς τῷ θεῷ] is taken out of the Jeruſalem Targum, Exod. 19. 6. There the Hebrew reads ממלכת כהנים a kingdome of prieſts, but that Targum reads מלכין וכהנין Kings and prieſts, and the Septuagint βασίλειον ἱεράτευμα a royal prieſthood. From the Septuagint S. Peter, 1 Pet. 2. 9. reads βασίλειον ἱεράτευμα a royal prieſthood, writing to the Jewes of that diſperſion, which had the Septuagints tranſlation in their hands, and S. John here, and ch. 5. 10. βασιλεῖς καὶ ἱερεῖς Kings and Prieſts] in reſpect of thoſe Jewes again, who had that Targum in their hands alſo. And the meaning of both the phraſes is to be conceived the ſame, agreeing with the firſt notation of the Hebrew phraſe, a kingdome of prieſts, i. e. a nation not going on in the waies or cuſtomes of other people, but populus alius, a ſeveral diſtinct people, as the Targum reads it, v. 5. conſecrated, as it were, and ſet apart for the ſervice of God, as the prieſts office is to wait upon God's ſervice continually. Such were the Jewes to be by God's command, and by their entring into covenant with God, Exod. 19. 6. And ſuch muſt the ſociety of Chriſtians be now with Chriſt, who requires them to perform theſe offices of Devotion, and that in publick aſſemblies inſtituted for that turn, and not only at ſome few ſet feaſts or times, but continually (morning and evening at leaſt) The whole Chriſtians life, being typified by the Jewes ſabbath, and ſo the neceſſity lying on them to ſerve God truly, praiſe him, bleſſe him, pray to him ſolemnly all the daies of their lives; That we ſhould doe ſo was the main end of Chriſt's redeeming us, Lu. 1. 74. Tit. 2. 14. and in relation to that 'tis here ſaid, that Chriſt waſhed us from our ſins by his blood, and made us kings and prieſts to his God and father, i. e. by his blood bought us to be the conſtant ſervants of God, waiting on him, and ſerving him (the whole Chriſtian Church) avowedly, all the daies of our life; To this ſenſe is the place of S. Peter, 1 Pet. 2. 9. to be underſtood, For ver. 5. he is upon an exhortation, that they, as living ſtones of this holy building built on Chriſt a living foundation, joyn together into a ſpiritual houſe, an holy prieſthood to offer &c. i. e. to joyn together into a Chriſtian aſſembly or Church, meeting together continually (as the prieſts were wont) to ſerve God, and pray to him, and praiſe him, which God will accept of through Chriſt, as he did of the corporeal ſacrifices of the Jewes; To this he adds a teſtimony out of the Old Teſtament to enforce it, v. 6. which foretells God's purpoſe to gather a Church, that ſhould beleive and confeſſe him publickly (i. e. the meaning of not being aſhamed of him, Rom. 10. 10, 11.) which teſtimony being applied to them (as alſo in another part of it, which comes in as an acceſſary to the former) v. 7, 8. he comes back again v. 9. ὑμεῖς δὲ γένος ἐκλεκτὸν, βασίλειον ἱεράτευμα, but you are a choice ſtock, a royal prieſthood, which in all probability is, as the firſt verſe had been, not only, (or ſo ſo much) an affirmation what they were, but an exhortation, what they ought to approve themſelves to be, or if an affirmation, yet that in the force of an exhortation (like that in Exodus, whence 'tis taken, Ye ſhall be to me a kingdome of prieſts, i.e. I command or require you to be ſo, or, If you will obey my voice, you ſhall, i. e. this act of obedience I require from you, ſo there) ye are a choice kindred, a kingdome of prieſts (i.e. Chriſt hath bought you that you ſhould, and therefore you ought to be ſo) a peculiar people, ſet apart on purpoſe to this office, as it there follows to praiſe and magnifie God, and declare the power of his grace, which hath wrought ſuch a change in you, And this is moſt effectually done by a conſtant publick ſervice of him. To the ſame purpoſe alſo is that other place, wherein theſe words are again made uſe of, *Rev.*5. 10. where the living creatures and Elders offering up the prayers of the Saints v.8. (i.e. the perſecuted Chriſtians alive then, before the deſtruction of the Jewes, approaching, and drawing nigh, v. 9.) and thoſe prayers, it ſeems, prophetick praiſes (expreſt there by incenſe) for what they foreſee Chriſt would ſpeedily doe for them, they ſing a new ſong, the effect of which is, that Chriſt having been crucified by the Jewes, ſlaughter'd, as other prophets had been, ſhould yet have the privilege beyond all them, to work a notable vengeance upon thoſe bloody men, i. e. to open the ſeals of the book, which contained all thoſe woes in it againſt that people, ver. 9. and by doing ſo, by acting that revenge on his crucifiers, and the perſecutors of Chriſtians, it follows there in the ſong, that God had gathered them, (i.e. the Saints that prayed) and brought them back from their diſperſions and captivities, as it were, and made them kings and prieſts unto God, i.e. a kingdome of prieſts, a congregation, or Church, or multitude of men daily ſerving God, meeting at the publick aſſemblies to worſhip, and ſacrifice to him; Which was remarkeably the effect of the Jewes deſtruction at that time, thoſe having been the chief perſecutors of Chriſtianity, and hindring their publick aſſemblies, where they had power, and where they had not, yet ſo calumniating the Chriſtians, to the Roman Emperours and officers, that they had for ſome time brought great perſecution upon them, and moſt ſevere interdicts of all publick meetings; As for that, which this place in the Epiſtle to the Churches peculiarly referres to, I ſuppoſe, it is that degree of indulgence, which the Chriſtians now had received from the Emperors, in ſome degree, from Veſpaſian, and others after him, according to that of Tertullian, in his Apologetick, Quales ergo leges, quas adverſu nos ſoli exequuntur impii, injuſti, turpes, truces, vani, dementes. quas Trajanus ex parte fruſtratus eſt, vetando inquiri Chriſtianos, quas nullus Adrianus, nullus Veſpaſianus, quanquam Judæorum debellator, nullus Pius, nullus Verus impreſſit, The laws againſt Chriſtians Trajan took away in part, and neither Adrian, nor Veſpaſian, nor Antoninus Pius, nor Antoninus Philoſophus required to be executed on them. So ſaith Euſebius of Veſpaſian, μηδὲν καθ' ἡμῶν καινοτόμουν, he practiſed no cruelty againſt the Chriſtians (ſee 2 *Theſſ.*2.1.) And this is there expreſt, *Rev.*5.10. by [we ſhall reign upon the earth] i.e. we ſhall live here (in ſtead of a ſtate of perſecution) in a royal, cheerful way of liberty, to aſſemble and ſerve God publickly. And ſo ch. 20 4. ἐβασίλευσαν they were kings, or reigned with Chriſt a thouſand years, i. e. enjoyed peaceable daies of Chriſtian profeſſion. As *Dan.*7.18. [The ſaints of the moſt high ſhall take and poſſeſſe the kingdome] ſignifies, that the Jewes ſhould be delivered from the perſecutions of Antiochus Epiphanes (as it fell out in the time of the Maccabees) and have liberty to ſerve God publickly in the aſſemblies again. And ſo Rev. 20. 6. being prieſts unto God, and reigning a thouſand years] ſignifies the Churches enjoying freedome and tranquillity (under the Chriſtian Princes favour) to ſerve God in the congregation. That theſe are called ἡμέραι ἀναψύξεως daies of refreſhing ſee *Act.*3.19. This gives a ground of probable conjecture concerning the time when this entire book of Viſions, put all together, was, with this Preface, ſent to the Churches, viz: in thoſe daies of Veſpaſian, wherein (as farre as concern'd the Emperors Edicts) the Church received this great tranquillity, but that not perfected to them, till the Jewes were deſtroyed, at which time 'tis again repeated Rev. 5. (ſee note on ch.17. d.) And if againſt all this it be objected, that theſe perſecutions of the Chriſtians, though for a while ſuperſeded in Veſpaſian's and Titus's times, yet ſoon returned again in Domitian's, and in ſome degree in Trajan's, and ſoon after were very frequent in great violence, ſo as to fill up the number of the ten perſecutions within two hundred and ſeventy years after Chriſt. To this I ſhall anſwer in the words of Euſebius Eccl: hiſt: l. 8. c. 1. ſpeaking of the times immediately before Diocletian the laſt perſecutor, To ſhew, ſaith he, what glory and liberty the Chriſtian doctrine had obtained among all men both Greeks & Barbarians, before the perſecution of Diocletian, requires too great a work for me to perform; This, ſaith he, appears by the good will of the Emperors, and the great favour of their officers to whom they intruſted the governing of countreys, who have granted the Chriſtians liberty and ſecurity, permitted them in their palaces, and in their ſight, them and their whole families, &c. Who, ſaith he, can recount the multitudes of aſſemblies in every city? who can deſcribe the confluxes to the Oratories, and the ſpacious Churches which they built from the foundation, not contenting themſelves with the antient edifices? Theſe, ſaith he no envy could ſuppreſſe, no evil ſpirit bewitch, nor man hinder, as long as Chriſtians lived worthy of God's protection, But when the lives of Chriſtians degenerated through too much liberty into ſoftneſſe and ſloth, and Chriſtians hated and reproached one another, and with thoſe weapons of the tongue invaded and fought with one another, when Biſhops ſet upon Biſhops, and people raiſed ſeditions againſt people, when hypocriſie and ſhews of piety fill'd all places, then by little and little the judgments of God, as they are wont, began to viſit us, and when we uſed no means to appeaſe God, but multiplied ſin upon ſin, as if God did not reſpect or conſider our ſins, and ſo there was nothing left among Chriſtians but contentions, emulations, hatred, enmity, ambition, tyranny, &c. then God, as he ſaid by Jeremy, made the daughter of Sion dark, and caſt down the glory of Israel, and remembred not his footstool in the day of his wrath, &c. and all this, saith he, was fulfill'd upon us; Churches pull'd down, bibles burnt, Bishops of the Church contumeliously used, &c. Of which, all that I have to say, is to justifie the righteous judgment of God, and so he proceeds to set down the words of the Emperors edict against the Christians, c. 3. In which words is contained a full answer to this objection, For God's promises being but conditional, and the mercies contained in them, no longer ascertained to us, than that condition is perform'd by us, this tranquillity, and peaceable enjoyment of assemblies, which is here promised, and afterwards oft repeated, cannot be expected to continue any longer, than Christians walk worthy of it, and when they doe not, the greater the blessing is, the fitter is it to be withdrawn from them, the discipline, which is provided for Christians, being a delivering up to Satan, when they offend against the Christian rule, that so they may be taught amendment. But beside this, other uses there are of the frequent returns of persecutions, to teach them vigilance, and make trial of their Christian fortitude, and to give them occasion to practise all other Christian duties, of patience and meekness, and so make their light shine before men, which would otherwise be more dimme. And in this matter, it is observable, that as Christ's promise of the greatest temporal felicities, the richest harvest, the hundred fold more in this life hath the mixture of θλίψεις persecutions joyned with it, so this promise of being Kings and Priests unto God had its mixtures also. When the Jewes were destroyed by Titus, and so the Christians persecutions ceased under Vespasian, and Titus, yet in Adrian's time, the Jewes under Barchocheba raise a sedition again, and lie very heavie upon the Christians, because they would not rise and joyn with them, (see ch. 11. 7.) and so there were some gleanings of evils still behind from the Jewes, after this signal cessation here spoken of. And when the Jewish malice was at an end, then the heathen Emperors are stirred up by the devil, magicians, and oracles, to persecute the Christians, and so it often fared with them till Constantine's time, i. e. till the Roman Emperour was converted to the faith, and then the promise is c. 20. that for the space of a thousand years they shall live and reign with Christ, i. e. that for that space Christian religion shall be no more interdicted, or persecuted, and that promise was perfectly performed, And so still the objection is of no force against the truth of this promise thus interpreted. This hath been here thus largely said once for all, to clear the many passages of this nature, which are to be met with in these visions, and in other parts of these books.

That Christ's coming denotes this middle coming of Christ in vengeance on his enemies, and for the rescue of his constant servants, this especially now approaching in the destruction of the Jewes, hath been shewed, Mat. 24. note b. And that the addition of the clouds, with which he comes, is not an argument against this sense, may appear by the cloud in the wilderness, which signified God's presence to defend the Israelites, and the cloud on the tabernacle, which noted God's special presence there, and by the Psalmist calling the clouds his chariot, the ordinary way, wherein God exhibits himself present to men, to protect, or to punish, (and not only at the day of the final doom) and by Isa. 4. 5. where the cloud upon mount Sion is the defence in the end of the verse, and by the very same phrase, Dan. 7. 13. the son of man coming with the clouds of heaven, when dominion, glory, and a kingdome are given unto him, v. 14. (which is not by any pretended to belong to the day of doom, but to Christ's kingdome here in, though not of this world) and by the same phrase repeated Mat. 24. 30. the son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory (which yet was to be within the compasse of that generation, ver. 34.) and so Lu. 21. 27. And so among the heathen we have the like phrase, as when God is said by Homer to come to Diomedes Iliad: 5.

— νεφέλῃ ἐλελίχθη ὤμους, having his shoulders wrapt in a cloud, and that there on purpose to defend him. And in Virgil, when Jupiter came to assist Æneas, Æn: 7. it is said of him, that

——radiis ardentem lucis & auro
Ipse manu quatiens ostendit ab æthere nubem, he shewed a cloud from heaven burning with rayes of light and gold. By all which appears how properly is signified by this phrase Christ's protecting his constant servants, as well as punishing his enemies, which are two special acts of his regal power, to which he is installed by his resurrection.

That χαλκολίβανον] should be rendred fine brasse, will be lyable to this exception, that 'tis against analogie, that the former part of the word [χαλκο] should be set to denote the thing it self, which must rather denote some attribute of, or ingredient in the thing spoken of, as χαλκόθωρηξ] sure is one that hath entrails of brass, not brasse that hath entrails, and χαλκοχίτωνες] they that have coats of brasse (armour) not brasse that hath coats, so χαλκόμυια] is not brasse like a flie, but a kind of flie, whether in colour or something else, having a resemblance of brasse. And so in all other the compounds, the latter part of the word noting the thing or person, the former some attribute of it. That interpretation of Andreas Cæsarensis seems more reasonable, who after the former (and one more for brasse that is digged out of mount Lebanon) gives a third notion of the word, that 'tis χαλκοειδὴς λίθος, ὃν ἁλῶσιν πῖδες ἄῤῥητα κλῶσιν, ἰνόδης, πνεῦ ἰμαλῶλα, ἀτμὸς ἀποπιμπρᾶλα, Amber that looks like brasse, which Physitians call the male-amber, which coming neer the fire, sends out a perfume. Of this Dioscorides speaks thus, Πρωτεῖ ἢ ὁ ἄῤῥην καλούμενος σταγόνιας, the male is more excellent called Stagonias. And of this doth Suidas farther speak, χαλκολίβανον οὖδ᾽ ἀλίκλη, πυρώτερον χρυσοῦ, ὃ δὴ ἢ τὸ ἤλεκτρον ἀλλόπυρον χρυσίον μιγνύμενον ὕλῃ, καὶ λιθίᾳ, ὁπόθι δὴ ζωδόχου ἡ ἁγία τράπεζα τῆς μεγάλης ἐκκλησίας, It is a sort of amber more valuable than gold. Now this amber is mixt with glasse and stone, of which mixture is the communion-table of the great Church. Thus Ezech. 1. 27. I saw as the colour of amber, as the appearance of fire, round about within it, where as the appearance of fire, and the colour of amber are of the same importance, so here his feet that are ſaid to be like amber, are in the next words again expreſt, ὡς ἐν καμίνῳ πεπυρωμένοι, as it were ſet on fire in a fornace. This amber being of all things neareſt the colour of fire, and not of the flame of fire, for to that before his eyes were compared, which two being joyned with his head and hair, white as a fleece, make up the repreſentation complete, For as in a great flaming fire, the lower part, the fire it ſelf, lookes like amber, then the flame being higher than the fire, differs in colour from that, but the top of the flame looks perfectly white, So 'tis here, the head and the hair are white (being the uppermoſt part) the eyes or countenance, as an ordinary flame, but the feet, or lower part, of the colour of amber; All together making up a fiery flaming appearance, (ſee ch 9. note f.) to repreſent the glorioufneſſe of this coming of Chriſt to judgment upon his enemies, as he doth in the ſubſequent viſions. After the ſame manner God ſitting in judgment is repreſented Dan. 7. 9. he himſelf, his head, hair, and garments, white as ſnow or wool, then under that, the throne like a flame of fire, and under that the wheels as burning fire.

g. ὁ ἦν ὁ ἐστι ὁ μέλλει γίνεσθαι

The phraſe ὁ ἦν ὁ ἐστι, ὁ μέλλει γίνεσθαι] may poſſibly be rendred, [and which are, and which ſhall come to paſſe] and if it be ſo, then it muſt denote theſe two other ſorts of things, the one then preſent, and the other future, over and above what he had now ſeen, v. 13. (which was only the laying of the ſcene, and the title as it were, and breviate of the enſuing viſions of the 7 Churches, his care of them, and his ſeverity to all that provoke him to it) But 'tis much more probable, that the firſt [ὁ] ſhould be rendred [both] thus, Write the things which thou haſt ſeen, viz: the ſeven lamps, v. 13. and 7 ſtarres, &c. v. 16. (of which 'tis here added, v. 20. ἃ εἶδες, which thou haſt ſeen, where the [εἶδες, thou haſt ſeen] belongs to this, not to any former viſions) both which are, and which ſhall come to paſſe after them, noting this viſion (if it belong only to that) to deſcribe both the preſent, and future eſtate of thoſe Churches, but if it extend farther to the reſt of the prophecie, then noting the ſubſequent viſions to contain theſe two heads of matter, the preſent, and future dealings of Chriſt with his Church, permitting them for their trial to ſuffer a while, but at length upon their perſeverance rewarding them. Of both theſe it will then be here ſaid [γράψον ἃ εἶδες, write the things which thou haſt ſeen] of both theſe ſorts, ſome the repreſentation of preſent events, the preſent eſtate of Chriſtianity, and then others the repreſentation of what ſhould for the future come to paſſe; In both which Chriſt's care of his faithfull ſervants, and puniſhing of his enemies, and of all that fall off from him will be diſcernible. In the expounding theſe words M^r Br: hath made uſe of a ſpecial ſubtilty, and on that (as he * confeſſes) built his enſuing interpretations. For having rightly concluded from the plain words, that the [ἃ εἶδες, the things which thou haſt ſeen] are tam res futuras quàm præſentes, things future as well as preſent, he intepretes that thus, that every one of thoſe ſeven Churches ſignifies two things, one literally, then preſent (of which, being the only true, he hath generally little to ſay) and another by way of Antitype in that prophetically contained (as the Church of Epheſus, beſide that which literally it ſignifies muſt be the whole primitive Church from the Apoſtles to Conſtantine, and the like) and by that means hath obtained a liberty of phanſying whatſoever he will, though never ſo diſtant, and affixing it, as the antitype, or ſecond interpretation of thoſe viſions of the ſeven Churches. The falſneſſe of which proceſſe is farther viſible from the very words on which he laies all his weight (confeſſing the obſervation of that little thing to have been his key to the whole interpretation) For if, as he would have it, the thing there affirmed, were, that the ſame things were both preſent and future, the phraſe muſt then be [ἃ καὶ ἐστι καὶ μέλλει γίνεσθαι, which both are and ſhall be,] whereas the phraſe is quite otherwiſe, the things which thou haſt ſeen, καὶ ἃ ἐστι καὶ ἃ μέλλει, both which are and which ſhall be, or poſſibly, and which are, &c. which clearly is a diſtribution of the viſions in reſpect of the matter of them, into two ſorts, One, the matter of which was then preſent, the other the matter of which was to come to paſſe not long after: and no way a diſtribution of their completions, that theſe viſions were to be doubly fulfilled, once at that preſent, a ſecond time, 1600 years after. The groſneſſe of this deceit was here to be diſplayed, as being the one (groundleſſe) ſupport of the whole enſuing interpretation, which all preſently vaniſheth (as farre as concerns this ſecond completion) without any farther confutation.

h. Ἀγγέλοις

Ἀγγέλοις here are, no queſtion, the governours of theſe ſeven Churches, ἐπὶ ἐκκλησίας ἐπισκόπους Ἀγγέλους ἔφησι Ἀγγέλους, ſaith Andr: Caſareenſis, ſo many overſeers for ſo many Churches, ſo many ſingular perſons to rule, one in each of them. Thus called, as the officers and miniſters of Chriſt (aſcending, as it were, and deſcending on Jacobs ladder between God and them) in ruling them, delivering God's meſſages to them, and alſo returning their meſſages, or prayers to God. Thus in a Saxon MS. Biſcopaſ ſynoon ȝoðeſ bydelaſ, Biſhops are Gods bydels, i.e. meſſengers or officers. See S^r Hen: Spelman's Gloſſary in the word Bedellus. This title was given to the chief prieſt, in the Old Teſtament, particularly in Malachi, For he is the Angel, or meſſenger of the Lord of hoſts, whoſe lips therefore were to preſerve knowledge, and from thence, as from the oracle, the people were to require the law, to receive knowledge and direction for their duty. Theſe Angels are by ancient writers known & affirmed to be Biſhops, one in every of thoſe ſeas, (and not only ſo, but Metropolitans, to whom the Biſhops of the adjacent cities were ſubordinate, ſee note b.) And this courſe of government is here owned and approved by Chriſt himſelf by his ſending thoſe meſſages to thoſe Angels in theſe Churches, and by his holding the ſtarres, which reſemble them, in his right hand, v. 10. & ch. 2. 1. whilſt he viſits or walks in the midſt of the Candleſticks or Churches. As for M. Brightman's only argument to the contrary, becauſe there is mention of many Biſhops or Elders of Epheſus, Act. 20. 17, 28. That is eaſily anſwered, that the Biſhops of Aſia were the men underſtood in that place, who met Paul at Miletus, but that they are Epiſcopi Epheſi, Biſhops of Epheſus, is a direct falſification of his, there being no ſuch phraſe uſed in that place. And for that one objection which by ſome

is drawn againſt their being ſingle perſons, becauſe c. 2. 24. after ſpeaking to the Angel of Thyatira it is ſaid, ὑμῖν δὲ λοιποῖς τοῖς ἐν Θυατείροις, but to you and the reſt that are in Thyatira, as if the Angel before, were the [ὑμᾶς you] here, The anſwer will be eaſie, if it be obſerved, that in the antient Greek MSS. particularly that at S. James's, the δὲ is left out, and the words read, ὑμῖν δὲ λέγω τοῖς λοιποῖς ἐν Θυατείροις, To you the reſt, or, To the reſt of you that are in Thyatira. and who have not known the depths, as they call them, but thoſe depths of Satan, &c. Where the [ὑμῖν τοῖς λοιποῖς, you the reſt, or the reſt of you] is ſet in oppoſition to the Gnoſtick complying party among them, before mentioned, and belongs not to the Angel or Biſhop, but as one, and the prime of that pure, conſtant party. I need add no more for anſwer to this ſo ſlight an objection. Theſe Angels are here deſcribed by the hieroglyphick of ſtars, in token of their office to illuminate and ſend out influences to rule the faithful under them, as the Sun and the reſt of the ſtars do this inferiour world, and the Churches where they preſide, are called λυχνίαι ſockets for lamps, or candleſticks, as being the places, where theſe ſtars, as ſo many lamps or torches, doe ſhine, where they are ſet or faſtned, to give light to all that come into the room. Now becauſe theſe Angels are ſo conſiderable parts in the Churches, therefore it is that the meſſages which are ſent to the whole congregation of Chriſtian profeſſors under them, are here addreſſed particularly to the Angels, c. 2. 1. And ſo in the reſt, where though the Angels were ſingle perſons, yet what is ſaid to them, is not ſaid onely to their perſons, but to the univerſality of the people under them, whoſe non-proficiency, or remiſſion of degrees of Chriſtian virtue, eſpecially their falling off from the conſtancy and courage of their profeſſion, do deſerve (and are accordingly threatned with) the removal of that Chriſtian knowledge, that grace, thoſe privileges of a Church, which had been allowed them, c. 2. 5. which is not ſo properly appliable, as a puniſhment of the Biſhop, as of the people under him. And therefore in the Paraphraſe I have generally changed the ſingular into the plural number, by that means to leave it indifferently to the Biſhop, of each Church, and the people under him, and yet farther to the other Churches, ſubordinate to each of the Metropoles here named. (Of the word Ἄγγελος ſee more note on Act. 12. d.)

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. II.

1. To the Biſhop, and, with him, the Church of Epheſus deliver this meſſage. Thus ſaith Chriſt, (deſcribed c. 1. 13. and 16.) ſuſtaining and honouring with his right hand the ſeven Governors or Biſhops of the ſeven Churches, and coming now to viſit and examine, and (according to deſert) to puniſh, or reward the members of theſe Churches, and to admoniſh them timely, what may be mended in them;

1. Unto the Angel of the Church of Epheſus write, Theſe things ſaith he that holdeth the ſeven Starres in his right hand, who walketh in the midſt of the ſeven golden Candleſticks;]

2. I obſerve and approve your labour, and great induſtry in the Goſpell, and your moſt conſtant patience and perſeverance in the faith, your no kind of complyance with the vitious men that creep in among you, Ye have put the falſe teachers to the teſt, examined their doctrine and miſſion (ſee note on Joh. 20. b.) and found them to be counterfeits,

a.

2. I know thy workes, and thy labour, and thy patience, and how thou canſt not bear them which are evill, and thou haſt tryed them which [a] ſay they are Apoſtles and are not, and haſt found them lyers;]

3. And you have formerly undergone many preſſures, and perſecutions, and held out againſt all aſſaults of terror or difficulty, and for the profeſſion of Chriſtianity have endured very ſore and ſharp afflictions, and were not then diſheartned in your courſe by perſecutions in the way.

3. And haſt born, and haſt patience, and for my names ſake haſt [*] laboured, and haſt not fainted.]

[*] undergone hard labour or, toyled κεκοπίακες

b.

4. But one charge or accuſation (ſee Mat. 5. 23.) I have againſt you of this Church, that that vehement, pure, Chriſtian love, (caſting out all fear of danger) which at firſt was in you, and evidenced it ſelf by your confeſſion of the faith with courage, and without fear, you ſince have ſomewhat remitted, and are not altogether ſo fervent, and intenſe, and valiant, as at the firſt you were.

4. Nevertheleſſe † I have ſomewhat againſt thee, becauſe thou haſt left thy first love.]

† I have againſt thee that thou haſt remitted ἔχω κατὰ σοῦ, ὅτι

5. Call to mind therefore that degree of Chriſtian zeal and courage, which was in you at the firſt, and being ſenſible of the decay, return to it again, and act as Chriſtianly and valiantly in all things, as at firſt you did, Or elſe I will ſuddenly puniſh you by removing the light of the Goſpell from you, by leaving no Church among you.

5. Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and doe the firſt workes, or elſe I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candleſtick out of its place, except thou repent.]

c.

6. Yet one thing is to be ſaid in your commendation, that the temptations of the Gnoſticks being of two ſorts, the baites of luſts, as well as the terrors of worldly ſufferings, though you have been wrought on by the latter of theſe, yet for the former you are free, you deteſt thoſe abominable villanies of luſt, which come from the Nicolaitans, and are gotten into other Churches, v. 15. and 20.

6. But this thou haſt, that thou hateſt the deeds of the [c] Nicolaitans, which I alſo hate.]

7. Let this warning of mine in this viſion be laid to heart by the Chriſtians of Epheſus, and all that are under that metropolis, for it is of neer concernence to all; And as it brings terrors to all who ſhall be involved in the ſin mentioned, ſo every one that ſhall hold out, and overcome the temptemptations, he shall have deliverance here, and hereafter eternall life bestowed upon him, which is the meaning of eating of the tree of life Gen. 2. 22. and may be encouragement and reward sufficient to those that shall lay down their lives for Christ, and so here is fitly mention'd to those, who would not confesse Christ in time of persecution.

8. And unto the Angel of the [d] Church in Smyrna, write, These things saith the first and the last, which was dead and is alive;]

8. Another message delivered to the Bishop of Smyrna another metropolis of Asia, in these words, Thus saith Christ, the eternall God, that was so despised and contemned by men, who was put to death, but rose from the dead (see c. 1. 18.) and so fit to encourage you in your patience, and sure to reward you, whatsoever it cost you, though it be the losse of life and all. d.

9. I know thy workes, and tribulation, and poverty, but thou art rich, and I know the * blasphemy of them, that * say they are Jewes, and are not, but are the Synagogue of Satan.]

* contumely, blasphemie

9. Your works have been very pious, and Christian, your diligence remarkable, and great persecution and poverty you have suffered (but this very thing tends to the encreasing of your wealth treasured up for you, and your contentednesse is at the present all riches) and you have been tempted by the contumelies, and reproches and railings cast upon you by the Gnosticks, who are a sort of men that take upon them to be Jewes, to avoid persecutions from them, but indeed are not, live not according to the law, Gal. 6. 13. that professe to dive into the secrets and mysteries of the old Testament, (for the understanding of which they call themselves Gnosticks) and from thence to fetch great secrets, which are all nothing but hellish abominations, and their practises consequent to them meerly diabolicall, accusing, calumniating, and persecuting the Orthodox Christians. And therefore if they are of any society, or Synagogue, any religion, 'tis not that of Moses (from God,) but of the devils institution. These I know have reproached and railed at you, and ye have suffered much from them. e.

† art ready to, * tempted

10. Fear none of those things which thou † shalt suffer: behold, the devill shall cast [f] some of you into prison, that ye may be * tried, and ye shall have tribulation ten dayes: be thou faithfull unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.]

10. Take courage against all possible dangers, remembring me, as I have represented my self to you, v. 8. And now I tell you before hand, that your constancy to the faith must in reason be expected to raise you up enemies, both at this present the Jewish zelots for the Synagogue v. 9. (incensed against you by the Gnosticks) and afterwards the Roman officers, asserters of the diabolicall Idol-worship against Christianity. And these latter shall apprehend and imprison some of you, being permitted by God to doe so, on purpose for the farther tryall of your constancy: And this persecution, which shal come upon you, when the Jews are destroyed (in the time of Marcus Aurelius and Verus, under which Polycarpe the Bishop of this Church shall suffer death) shall then last for a little while; And all this shall prove a foundation of greater glory to you, and help them to the reward and crown of Martyrdome, which suffer in it, and that is all the hurt which your constancy shall bring you. f.

11. He that hath an eare, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the Churches, [He that overcometh shall not be * hurt of the second death.]

11. They that hold out to the end, that persevere in despight of all these temptations, shall continue a prosperous flourishing Church, shall not have their Candlestick removed from them, as all they shall, that by the sharpnesse of persecutions are scandalized and fall off from Christ (see note on c. 20. d.)

12. And to the Angel of the Church in [g] Pergamos write, [These things saith he who hath the sharp sword with two edges,]

12. This is the message of Christ to you, who looketh upon you, as a judge, and seeth somewhat in you, which shall be punished most severely if you repent and reform not speedily. g.

13. I know thy workes, and where thou dwellest, even where satans [h] seat is, and thou holdest fast my name, and hast not denyed my faith, even in those dayes, wherein [i] Antipas was my faithfull Martyr, who was slain among you, where satan dwelleth.]

13. I cannot but commend your Christian behaviour and constancy, and that the greater, being considered with the circumstances of the place of your abode, in the midst of such temptations to the contrary, and of the times approaching, wherein Antipas for his fidelity and courage in preaching the Gospell, will be (I foresee) cruelly martyr'd, and where the instant malices of the adversary might possibly have terrified you. h. i.

14. But I have a few things against thee, because thou hast there them that hold the doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balac to cast a * stumbling block before the children of Israel, to eat things sacrificed unto idols, and to commit fornication.]

* scandal, or snare

14. But yet for all this courage, great faults there are among you, though the whole Church be not guilty of them, viz. the doctrines and practises of the Gnosticks are gotten in among you, which are but a transcript as it were, of that famous counsell of Balaam to Balac, which brought that curse and ruine upon the Israelites, when nothing else could doe it, consisting in joyning and complying with the Idolaters (see note b.) and committing all abominable uncleanesse (see Jude, e.)

15. So hast thou also them that hold the doctrine of the Nicolaitans, which thing I hate.]

15. In like manner there is gotten in among you, and permitted, or not punisht by your Bishops, that unclean doctrine and practise of the Nicolaitans (see note c.) which being most odious to me, ought most sharply to have been punisht by them.

16. Repent, or else I will come unto thee quickly, and fight against them with the sword of my mouth.]

16. And if this lenity be not speedily mended, I will visit and destroy you suddenly by judgements parallel to the sword, that fell on those Israelites, that were corrupted by Balaams counsell, Num. 25. 5.

17. He that hath an eare, let him heare what the Spirit saith unto the Churches, To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the [k] hidden Manna; and I will give him a [l] white stone, and † in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it.]

17. And for all those that keep themselves pure and spotlesse from these temptations, this compliance, and uncleanesse, let them know that the joyes and comforts that come in to them by the practise of the contrary Christian virtues of courage and purity, are, though invisible, yet far greater then those, which these carnall Gospellers enjoy, 1 Cor. 2. 9. and beside this portion of inward blisse (adherent to the practise of duty at the present, k. l.

present) prepared for them by God, and shower'd down like Manna upon their soules, they shall over and above (as victors have a ticket given them by the judges, to receive the reward that belongs to them, the value or quality whereof, and their names, is written in that ticket) have a token, or ticket given them, with the name of Christ written on it, signifying the Christian reward of grace and glory, but that such, as is not to be conceived what or how valuable it is, but by the enjoying of it.

m. 18. Christ, that appeared to thee so gloriously c. 1. 15. in token of the judicature, which he means to exercise, the rewards and punishments which he hath in his dispensing.

19. I take notice of your Christian actions, and courage in confessing of Christ (see note b.) and your charity or liberality to the poore heathen, and your constancy against all terrors, and all these Christian actions daily improving, and growing greater, and more abundant in you.

19. I know thy workes and charity, and * service and faith, and thy patience, and † thy workes, and the last to be more then the first.]

† or thy last works more then the first, for the King's MS. reads τὰ ἔργα σου τὰ ἔσχατα

n. 20. Yet one quarrel I have against you, that you permit that heresie of the Gnosticks that take upon them to understand mysteries beyond all others, to delude some members of your Church, and infuse their false doctrines into them, and among others, those forementioned v. 14. of filthinesse, and communicating in Idol-worships.

20. Notwithstanding I have a few things against thee, because thou sufferest that woman * Jezebel, * which calleth her self a prophetesse, to teach, and to seduce my servants to commit fornication, and to eat things sacrificed unto, Idols.]

* or, which calling her self a prophetesse doth teach & deceive, for the Kgs MS reads ἡ λέγουσα ἑαυτὴν προφῆτιν, καὶ διδάσκει καὶ πλανᾷ

21. And these filthy hereticks have not made use of the warning by me given them to repent, but still goe on in their impieties.

21. And I gave her space to repent of her fornications, and she repented not.]

22. And therefore you may expect, that the judgements that shall suddenly fall upon them, and all that joyn with them, shall be very heavy, if not prevented by their speedy reformation.

22. Behold, † I will cast her into a bed, and them that commit adultery with her, into great tribulation, except they repent of their deeds.]

† I cast her into prison, for the King's MS. reads βάλλω αὐτὴν εἰς φυλακὴν

23. And all that are either leaders or followers in this impiety, shall be destroyed, to be an example to all the Christian Churches in the rest of Asia, that these doctrines and practises may be avoided by them, upon sight of my severe visitation upon these, which may assure you all, (you Churches of Asia) that according as you behave your selves, so you may expect to be rewarded by me.

23. And I will kill her children with death, and all the Churches shall know that I am he, which searcheth the reins and hearts, and I will give unto every one of you according to your works.]

24, 25. But to the rest of you, those of Thyatira which are not thus guilty, which have not given ear to these secret depths of Gnostick villany, To you, this acknowlegement and commendation is due, that you are such, that God requires nothing more of you, but perseverance, that you hold out untouch't and untainted, till this judgement comes upon those wicked, that are now among you, and till I come to reward your fidelity and constancy.

24. But unto * you, I say, and to the rest in Thyatira, as many as have not this doctrine, and which have not known the depths of Satan, as they speak, I will put upon you none other burthen,

25. But which ye have already, hold fast † till I come.

* you I say the rest, for the King's MS. reads ὑμῖν δὲ λέγω λοιποῖς

† until the time when I shal come, ἄχρις οὗ ἂν ἥξω

26, 27, 28. And they that thus persevere in the performance of all Christian duties, pure and spotlesse from all these abominable heretical mixtures, they that hold out against all persecutions and temptations, firm and spotlesse, shall, when the days of persecution are over, be made use of to propagate the Gospel to the Nations, convert the Gentile Idolaters to the faith, and become Bishops of other Churches. And this they shall do successfully and efficaciously over the Eastern Nations.

o. 26. And he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto * the end, to him will I give power over the Nations,

27. (And he shall rule them with a rod of iron, * and as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers) † even as I received of my Father,

Notes on Chap. II.

2. Θέλοντας εἶναι Ἀποστόλους — Who these Pseud-Apostles were, that this Church of Ephesus had tried, and found liars, may perhaps be reasonably affirmed out of the stories of those times. Gaius in Eusebius l. 3. c. 28. sets down the story of Cerinthus the Leader of an heresie, that he pretended Revelations, written ὡς διὰ Ἀποστόλου μεγάλου, by some great Apostle, and related τερατολογίας prodigious narrations, ὡς δι' Ἀγγέλων αὐτῷ δεδειγμένων, as shewed him by Angels, and then delivered his doctrines of a temporal kingdom of Christ after the resurrection, and that men should in Jerusalem live again, and δουλεύσειν ἡδοναῖς καὶ ἐπιθυμίαις, serve lusts and pleasures, and spend the space of a thousand years τοῖς γάμοις ἑορτάζοντας, as in a nuptial festivity. The same doth Dionysius Alexandrinus in his second book περὶ ἐπαγγελιῶν set down, speaking of Cerinthus and his followers and their doctrine, βίβλον ὑπὸ τοῦ τὴν χιλιονταετηρίδα τῆς τοῦ Χριστοῦ βασιλείας, that Christ's kingdome should be an earthly one, and (agreeable to his phansie who was φιλοσώματος καὶ σάρκινος παντάπασι, a very carnal man and lover of the body) that it should consist in the satisfying of the paunch, and lust, ἐν τούτοις, τοῖς πόσεσι, καὶ βρώσεσι, καὶ γάμοις, in meats, drinks, and marriages, and to that purpose (that there might be the more plenty of these) ἑορταῖς, καὶ θυσίαις, καὶ ἱερείων σφαγαῖς, in feasts, and sacrifices, and killing of beasts, or victims: And Irenæus l. 1. goes farther, mentioning some ἀποῤῥήτους τινὰς μυθικὰς ἐκδιδάξεις, doctrines of filthinesse not fit to be named, which he taught his disciples. And this, it seems, in Asia, and 'tis very probable in Ephesus it self, of which we now speak. For that John after his return from banishment lived there, we finde affirmed by Clemens in his narration of him him transcribed by Euſebius, Eccl. Hiſt. l.3 c.xxj'. And that he going into a bath on a time, and finding Cerinthus to be there, leaped back, and went out, not enduring to be under the ſame roof with him, for fear, as he ſaid, that it ſhould fall, when ſuch an enemy of Chriſtianity as Cerinthus was in it, is the affirmation of Irenæus, l. 3. out of a tradition of Polycarp, ſee Euſeb. l. 3. c. xx'. And two circumſtances more to our preſent purpoſe will be obſervable in that author, firſt, that the Nicolaitans here mentioned to be hated by this Church, v. 6. did riſe immediately after Cerinthus, and his followers, (μετ' ἐκεῖνον δῆλα, ſaith Euſebius) and are therefore ſet down immediately after them in the courſe of his hiſtory, c. xx'. 3^dly, that Dionyſius Alexandrinus comes to take him in, in his diſcourſe on occaſion of this very book, the Revelation, περὶ ἧς Ἰωάννου ἀποκαλύψεως εἰπὼν τινα ὡς ἐκ τῆς διηνεκοῦς ὑποθέσεως ἐπεξῆλθον, ſaith * Euſebius, having expounded ſome parts of the Revelation out of an antient tradition. Whether this were the place of the Revelation, which he ſo expounded, I cannot affirm, but of this I am ſure, that he and his followers pretending to have received their Revelations from ſome prime Apoſtle, and affirming the prodigies, he ſpake of, to be ſhew'd him by Angels, may well be ſaid to ſay they are Apoſtles (i. e. to have commiſſion from heaven for their doctrines) when aſſuredly they were not ſuch; And that the Church of Epheſus was not deceived by him, but found out and rejected his errors, appears by S. John avoiding him in that place, as one that was ſo known an enemy of the truth, that he ſpeaks to all that were with him, φεύγωμεν &c. Let us not come near this vile perſon, which is an interpretation of the ὁ Νῦν Καϊνοὶ χαλεῖς] here in this verſe, their not enduring theſe vile carnal Goſpellers, but ſeparating from them.

b. The phraſe ἀφῆκας τὴν πρώτην ἀγάπην σου] is to be rendred, thou haſt remitted, or abated thy firſt love] for ſo ἀφίημι ſignifies (being applied to things of this nature) remiſſion of degrees of any thing, as that is contrary to intenſion of them, Maſter Brightman's phanſie on the word is very obſervable (and from thence it will be eaſie to judge of the ſolidity of the grounds, on which he proceeds in his interpretations) * Every one of the Churches, ſaith he, hath ſuch a name given it, as will declare its whole condition, as it were by marks written in the forehead. Thus, ſaith he, ἀφῆκας thou haſt remitted] doth ſufficiently teach, what the † Spirit conſidered in this city, viz. that 'twas Epheſus, as it were ἄφεσις Apheſis, omiſſion &c. from whence he preſently gathers that by Epheſus is meant the whole Primitive Church till Conſtantine's days. Thus pitifully ſlight are the marks, and characters by which he paſſeth his judgement, and on which he founds his interpretations. For beſides that Epheſus is the name of a city, and Church known in the Scripture, and doth as punctually ſignifie that, and nothing but that, as London ſignifies London, (and it may be as reaſonable to ſay that the Epiſtle of Paul to the Epheſians had a particular aſpect on the whole Church till Conſtantine, as that this part of S. Johns Epiſtle to the Angel of the Church of Epheſus belongs to it) the alluſion of ephetas, (for that is the word, ἄφεσιν) to Epheſus, is as remote in ſound, as one could well imagine, but then in ſignification much more, ἄφεσις ſignifying deſire, or appetite, but leaves remiſſion or looſing. Now for the other part of this phraſe [τὴν ἀγάπην] 'tis here not the love, or care of the Biſhop toward the flock, as Maſter Brightman would have it, but the great love toward Chriſt, which firſt was in them (not their firſt love, as that ſignifies the object of it, Chriſt, for the leaving or utter forſaking of him, were not reconcileable with the other commendations, which are here given of them, particularly the [ὑπομονὴν ἔχεις, thou haſt patience] at the preſent, thou perſevereſt ſtill in the Chriſtian faith) but it is their firſt zeal, and fervency of love toward Chriſt (ſee Matt. 24. 12.) which it ſeems was in proceſſe of time much remitted in the Chriſtians of that Church. This love when it is perfect, caſteth out fear, he that hath it, will make no ſcruple to dy, or undergo any danger for Chriſt. And thus had this Church formerly behaved themſelves toward Chriſt, κεκοπίακας καὶ οὐκ ἐκλάμπες v. 3. they had endured, and paſt through difficulties, and not fainted. But now it ſeems they were fallen into a great and dangerous remiſſeneſſe in this particular, Of which therefore if they repent not, they are threatned with removal of their Candleſtick. What this remiſſeneſſe was, may perhaps be gueſt by what we ſee prophecied of by Chriſt, Matt. 24. 12. and by what we finde affirmed of the Gnoſticks (and among them of a famous leader Baſilides) who, we know by S. Paul's Epiſtles, had crept at that time into the Churches, particularly into that of Epheſus. Now of their many doctrines and opinions, this one is by Euſebius diſtinctly mentioned l. 4. c. ζ'. ἀδιαφορεῖν εἰδωλόθυτα ἀπογδοεύτους τε ἐξομνύεσθαι ἀπεφαίνοντο ἐν καιρῷ διωγμοῦ, that it was an indifferent thing, and no ſin to eat things offered to Idols, and confidently to abjure the faith in times of perſecution. This doctrine of the Gnoſticks had, it ſeems, gotten into other Churches, for to it the Apoſtle diſtinctly ſpeaks (at leaſt as far as belongs to the firſt part of it, which generally was attended with the other, the eating of Idol-ſacrifices being deſigned by them to avoid the perſecution of the Pagans, as well as the other of renouncing the faith, was to avoid the perſecution of the Jews) 1 Cor. 8. 1. and thereupon it is that he ſpeaks of γνῶσις knowledge ſo much, v. 1, 2. 7. 10, 11. and oppoſes to it ἀγάπη, charity or love v. 1. this love of Chriſt, the thing which now we ſpeak of, and bid them to take heed, how they uſe their ἐξουσία, the Chriſtian liberty, upon which they grounded the indifferency of doing thus. And upon this ground, and in this ſenſe of loving the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, it is, I ſuppoſe, that 1 Cor. 16. 21. he pronounces anathema in the higheſt degree againſt him that loves not our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, viz. him that renounces him in time of temptation, For as for want of inward love, not expreſt in ſome ſuch ſcandalous act, that cannot come under the Churches cenſure, nor be fit matter for an anathema. And ſo Phil. 3. 18. he mentions them under the title of the enemies of the croſſe of Chriſt (mentioned alſo by Polycarp in his Epiſtle to them, p. 33.) i. e. thoſe that were not at all for the ſuffering of perſecution for the faith, (the other part of that doctrine of theirs) whoſe end, ſaith he, is deſtruction, their God their belly, (by which they are again deſcribed described Ro. 16. 18.) minding earthly things, (and it ſeems, nothing elſe) and therefore would not loſe any of them, for the profeſſion of Chriſt. And in many paſſages in the Epiſtle to the Epheſians, it appears, by his fortifying them againſt the deceits of theſe Gnoſticks, that they were a creeping into that Church alſo. And particularly c. 5. where not onely the prohibition of all the ἀισχρότης, αἰσχρότητες, and the μὴ ἀνήκοντα, all that abominable filthineſſe, was by the Apoſtle ſet down on purpoſe, in oppoſition to the doctrine and practiſe of the Gnoſticks, v. 3, 4, 5, 6. (as appears by the μηδεὶς ἀπατάτω κενοῖς λόγοις, let no man deceive you with vain words, perſwading you, as the Gnoſticks did, that this was part of Chriſtian liberty, and but an indifferent thing alſo) but particularly his cloſe of ſalutation to all thoſe that love the Lord Jeſus ἐν ἀφθαρσίᾳ, ſo as not to be corrupted by any of the baits and ſeductions of thoſe evil times, in oppoſition, as I ſuppoſe, to the Gnoſticks in two particulars, both in the ἀφθαρσία, incorruption or purity, contrary to their filthy doctrines and practiſes called φθορὰ corruptions, and in that fervent ſincere love of Chriſt, which they wanted, being, as he ſaith, lovers of luſts, more than lovers of God, 2 Tim. 3. 4. And ſo again in his commanding them to walk in love, c. 5. v. 2. which he expreſſes by the example of Chriſt's love, which made him ſacrifice his life for us, by that means ſhewing what love it was, that needed ſtirring up in them, even that which the Gnoſticks profeſt to have none of, and which here, through their infuſions, the Epheſians are ſaid much to have remitted, viz. that ſincere love to Chriſt (ἀγάπη ἀνυπόκριτος, love without hypocriſie, commended to the Romans, c. 12. 9. in reflexion on the Gnoſticks alſo among them, as many other paſſages in the latter part of that Epiſtle, c. 13. 1. in reſpect of their doctrines of liberty, and v. 13. of their luxury and uncleanneſſe) which would make them that have it perfectly, to lay down, i. e. venture their lives for Chriſt, and put off all fear of perſecution. According to which it is that S. John in his firſt Epiſtle, defining that perfect love to Chriſt, which is required of us, ſaith, that it conſiſts in having παῤῥησία ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ κρίσεως, confidence, and courage to confeſſe Chriſt in the day of Judgement, i. e. when by ſo doing, we come to be accuſed before, or condemned by perſecuters to death it ſelf, and that again it caſts out fear, v. 18. and that this is neceſſary to that confeſſing of Chriſt, v. 15. of which the ſame thing is there affirmed (viz. that he that doth ſo, abideth in God, and God in him) which is affirmed of continuing in love, v. 16. which place, as it was meant by the Apoſtle directly againſt this doctrine of the Gnoſticks, concerning the lawfulneſſe and indifferentneſſe of not ſuffering for Chriſt, and abjuring him in caſe of perſecution, and is ſo made uſe of by Tertullian againſt theſe very men, adv. Gnoſt: c. 12. and de fuga in perſecutione c. 9. ſo was it by that Apoſtle directly deſigned to theſe Aſiaticks, who were his care or charge (τὰς ἐντόθε, i. e. in Aſia, διοίκησιν ἐκκλησίας, ſaith Euſebius l. 3. c. κγ'. and that he died in this Epheſus, the principal part of this his charge, ſee the * Epiſtle of Polycrates then Biſhop there) that Epiſtle of his being addreſt as a defenſative againſt the Gnoſticks, that were creeping in among them.

And ſo was S. Peters alſo to the ſame Aſiaticks, who from the point of uncleanneſſe, and contemning of ſuperiours, which were two parts of the Gnoſticks character, 1 Pet. 2. 12, 13. proceeds to this of ſuffering for Chriſt v. 19. &c. and c. 3. 15. 17. and c. 4. 16. the diſliking of which, and not thinking themſelves obliged to it, was another part, and ſo 2 Pet. 2. where he deſcribes theſe very hereticks, ψευδοδιδάσκαλοι falſe teachers, bringing in villanous baſe hereſies, viz. 3. and which he foretells them ἔσονται ſhould come among them, he ſaith they are ἀγοράσαντα αὐτοὺς δεσπότην ἀρνούμενοι, ſuch as deny and renounce the Lord that bought them, i. e. deny Chriſt in time of perſecution, counting that an indifferent thing, and thinking themſelves Chriſtians for all this, (for otherwiſe they would have been cenſured by the Apoſtles as more than falſe teachers, perfect Apoſtates, and not hereticks only) and making it one of their δόγματα or doctrines of liberty, which they laboured to bring into the Church. The ſame is ſaid of them again, Jude 4. Παρεισέδυσαν &c. ἀσεβεῖς τὴν τοῦ θεοῦ χάριν μετατιθέντες εἰς ἀσέλγειαν there are certain men crept in ungodly men, turning the grace of God into laſcivionſneſſe, which is clearly ſpoken of the Gnoſticks, and their followers, τὸν ἀρνούμενοι &c. that deny and renounce our onely Maſter, and Lord Jeſus Chriſt. The very ſame is noted of theſe Gnoſticks in the Epiſtle to the Galatians, c. 6. 12. who would make them to be circumciſed, onely, ἵνα μὴ τῷ σταυρῷ τοῦ Χριστοῦ διώκωνται, that they might not be perſecuted for the croſſe of Chriſt, i. e. by the Jews. And accordingly this doctrine and practiſe of the Gnoſticks was ſo taken up by the other following hereticks of thoſe firſt times, that Euſebius ſpeaking of ſome of the confuters of Montanus, and the οἱ κατὰ Φρύγας the hereticks about Phrygia, and ſetting down the words of a principal one of them, he ſaith firſt, that he had a combat with ſome of them in that very Church of Galatia, and then among other things he obſerves of them, that when all other Chriſtians were perſecuted either by Jewes or heathens, not one of them either ὑπὸ Ἰουδαίων ἐδιώχθη or ὑπὸ ἐθνῶν ἀπεκτάσθη, was perſecuted by the Jewes, or killed by the Heathens. Which was a ſpecial intimation of this δόγμα of compliance among theſe hereticks, and all that ſprang from them. To the ſame pertains again that of the Hebrews, c. 10. 25. who forſook the aſſemblies, and that ſure for fear of perſecutions, and there they are ſaid ὑποστείλασθαι, to draw back (in oppoſition to the juſt mans living by faith) v. 38. and ſo have need of ὑπομονὴ patience, perſeverance, v. 36. and are exhorted to take heed of apoſtaſie, c. 3. 12. By all this it is clear, what is meant by the Epheſians remitting their firſt love, that is, receiving ſome infuſions of this Gnoſtick doctrine, which conſiſted in an oppoſition to Chriſt's doctrine of confeſſing the truth, eſpecially before perſecuters of it, (and is expreſt by δειλία and ἀνανδρία cowardiſe, and unfaithfulneſſe, Rev. 21. 8. attended there with all the filthy practiſes of the Gnoſticks) in a παῤῥησία, or courageous eſpouſing of his cauſe, which courage having formerly been in this Church, was now remitted, not only through ſome weakneſſe, but, it ſeems, by imbibing this doctrine, which made it an ἀδιάφορον, or indifferent thing, even to forſwear Chriſt, rather than die for him, and yet did these conceive themselves to continue Christians for all this, and so indeed were, so farre as beleiving in Christ, but they were not so farre advanced, as to that greater pitch of love, that expresst it self in confessing him, when that doctrine was persecuted among men. To this I conceive S. Paul referres, when in the qualification of the ἐπισκόπου, Tit. 2. 2. he adds not only ὑγιαίνοντας τῇ πίστει healthy or sound in the faith, in opposition to heretical doctrines of those times, but also τῇ ἀγάπῃ and ὑπομονῇ, in love and patience, in opposition to the practises of these Gnosticks, who did not love Christ so well, as to persevere in confessing him, or to suffer any thing for him. What is thus observed of the Gnosticks doctrine, and infusions against confessing in time of persecution, is by * Epiphanius affirmed also of one Elxai in the 6t of Trajan's reign, who, saith he, affirmed it to be no sin to abjure the faith in time of persecution, so it were retained in the heart. From these, saith he, came the Helkesaitæ in after-times mention'd not only by Epiphanius, but also by Eusebius, Hist: l. 6. c. λη'. out of Origen upon Psal. 82. who sets it down for one of their doctrines, ὅτι τὸ ἀρνεῖσθαι † ἀδιάφορόν ἐστι, καὶ ὁμοίως τοῖς στόμασι ἀρνεῖσθαι τὸ ἀναγκαῖον, τῇ δὲ καρδίᾳ ὑγιαίνειν, that it is an indifferent thing to deny Christ, that he that thinks aright, may in time of distresse deny with the tongue, so he doe not with the heart. The same is also by Tertullian, in Scorpiaco, affirmed of Prodicus, and the Adamites, Non esse palam confitendum Christum, nec pro eo subeundum martyrium, that Christ must not be openly confest, nor martyrdome suffered for him.

* hær. 19. 53.

† These words may be more probably read thus, καὶ ὁμολογήσας—and having confest with his mouth he shall deny in time of distresse

This Church of Ephesus, though infected with one doctrine of the Gnosticks (see note b.) was not, it seems, in any considerable manner defiled with their other carnal infusion, against which S. Paul had fortified them, Ephes. 5. 3. 11, 12. and this is here expresst by the Spirits testimony of them, that they hate the deeds of the Nicolaitans. Who these Nicolaitans were, may appear by Eusebius Eccl: Hist: l. 3. c. 29. out of Clemens Alex: l. 3. Strom: thus, Nicolas the deacon mention'd in the Acts, having a beautifull wife, was by the Apostles (after Christ's ascension) reproached, and upbraided that he was jealous of her, whereupon he brought out his wife before all men, and gave any that would, leave to marry her, saying, that thus was agreeable to that saying, ὅτι οὕτω χρὴ τῷ σαρκὶ δοῦναι, that men ought to abuse the flesh. The same is affirmed by Irenæus l. 2. c. 27. Others which followed him, and laid hold of this action, and speech of his ἁπλῶς καὶ ἀβασανίστως, simply and without examination of the meaning of it, ἀναιδῶς ἐκμεμαθήκασιν, saith Clemens, commit all kind of filthinesse upon this score, without any kind of shame. This speech used by Nicolas, and so abused by his followers, is by Eusebius said to be the saying of Matthias, Δεῖ τὴν μὲν σάρκα κατατρίβειν καὶ ἀποχρᾶσθαι, that we must fight with the flesh and abuse it, καὶ μηδὲν αὐτῇ παρὰ ἁπλῶς ἐπιδιδόναι, and not allowing it any thing for pleasure, ψυχὴν δὲ αὔξειν διὰ πίστεως καὶ γνώσεως, encrease the soul by faith and Christian knowledge. And this, saith he, was Nicolas's meaning in the use of those words; and his bringing forth his wife, of whom he was said to be jealous, was, saith he, ἀπαθείας παράστασιν, a disdaining of all that carnal pleasure, or desire, ἢ ἐγκράτειαν τῶν ἡδονῶν, a containing from those pleasures that are so desired by men. An argument of the truth of which, saith he, was this, that he never used any other woman but his wife, and having children by her, they all remained perpetual virgins. Which relation of his concerning the person of Nicolas, be it true or no, 'tis yet clear that his followers, which are by Eusebius said τὴν αἵρεσιν αὐτῶν μιμήσασθαι, to enter on his heresie, and here are called Νικολαΐται, Nicolaitans, were guilty of all abominable, shameless uncleanness, and called that the abusing of the flesh, and so made a Christian duty of the most abominable sin, and put off all shame, and reverence in the acting of it.

c. Νικολαϊτῶν ἔργα

The strangeness of M. Brightman's interpretations will here again appear, so farre from being the speaking of God by him (as he pretends) that it is manifest that any thing that any mans phansie could represent to him (or incline him to wish, that it were the meaning of a part of this prophecie) might as commodiously be affixt to it, as that to which 'tis here applied. For first, saith he, it must be observed, that Smyrna is northward from Ephesus, and Pergamus from Smyrna, and thence he concludes that this order similem Ecclesiæ progressum proculdubio monstrat, doth without all doubt shew the like progresse of the Church, still farther from the sun, the fountain of light, i. e. from the first purity, to greater darknesse, till at last it comes to Pergamus, the utmost Northern point, and then turns back again toward the South. What the progresse of the Church hath been from greater to lesser purity, need not be disputed, but that any such degeneration was noted by the situation of Smyrna towards Ephesus is so farre from being [proculdubio, farre from all doubt] that 'tis certainly a phansie of the writers own brain, without all ground imaginable in this vision, which doth not at all take notice of this situation, or descend in the least degree to such minute considerations. After this, his second observation is, that Smyrna signifies myrrhe, and that sweet, and gratefull to God, which being so contrary to the former observation of degeneration to greater impurity, noted thereby, it may well be expected, that the artifice of accommodating it to his purpose must be very strange; And so it is, for, saith he, * though in the outward shew that Church was more deformed than the other, wanting the splendor and ornament of the due policy or Church-government, in which respect the Northern situation agrees to it, yet the ardent love of the godly, who valiantly contended for the truth in that state of deformity, raised up to God a most sweet savour. Thus easie is it for a licentious phansie to transform any thing into any thing, even into the most contrary shape, to make the sweet myrrhe denote the most ungratefull, corrupt state of the Church, because, forsooth, there were some in it sweet and gratefull. But I demand, Were those pious defenders of the truth denoted by Smyrna, or not? If they were, then was it most unjust to affirm that the degeneration from the primitive purity was noted by it. If they were not, then is it a grosse deceit to render this reason of this denomination; The same directly, as if he should say, that that the Church of that age which he referres to, was impure and corrupt, and that was expresly signified by the name, which signifies the greatest purity, and acceptableneſſe to God.

c. Λέγοντες Ἰουδαίους εἶναι ἑαυτοὺς καὶ οὐκ εἰσὶ, ἀλλὰ συναγωγὴ τοῦ Σατανᾶ Thoſe that here are said to say that they are Jewes, when they are indeed the ſynagogue of Satan, might probably enough be thought the followers of Helxai in Epiphanius her: 19. of whom he ſaith that he was a Jew by birth, and of Jewiſh opinions, and joyn'd himſelf to the hereticks of that party, but did not live according to the law. But becauſe this Helxai was of a later beginning, than the matter and perſons, ſpoken of in this prophecie ſeem to be, and becauſe ſuch men as he, when they did ariſe, (I mean, hereticks of all ſorts, in thoſe times) did joyn together in that great hereſie of the Gnoſticks, we muſt not faſten this part of this viſion upon any ſuch inconſiderable perſon as Helxai, but reſolve that the men here ſpoken of are directly the Gnoſticks, who, that they might not be perſecuted by the Jewes, made men circumciſe themſelves, which was directly the pretending that they were as good Jewes as any, circumciſion being a mark of the proſelytes of juſtice, and ſuppoſing the obſervation of the whole law (of theſe ſee Gal 6. 12. and note b. on this chapter) but were not really obſervers of the Moſaical law, Gal. 6. 3. ἀλλ' οἱ περιτεμνόμενοι αὐτοὶ νόμον φυλάσσουσι, for they doe not themſelves keep the law (perhaps were not themſelves circumciſed, for the ἀλλ' may belong to the whole complexum περιτεμνόμενοι νόμον φυλάσσουσι, and not to φυλάσσουσι onely, thus, they that make others to be circumciſed, are not circumciſed themſelves, doe not themſelves keep the law) but onely doe εὐπροσωπῆσαι, as he there ſaith, make a fair appearance, make advantage to themſelves, to avoid the fury of the Jewiſh zealots, by cauſing others to be circumciſed. And of theſe it is that Ignatius ſpeaks Ep: ad Philadelph: when he warns them not to learn Judaiſme ἀπὸ ἀκροβυστίας, of thoſe that are not circumciſed. Now why theſe that thus pretend to be Jewes, are here called the ſynagogue of Satan, is clear, viz: becauſe their hereſie was made up of all filthineſſe, and abominable carnalitꝫ, which is intimated in many places of the Scripture, by ἀσελγείαις, ἀσελγείαις, πονηρίαις, κακίαις, ἀθέμιτες εἰδωλολατρίαις, πλεονεξίαις, &c. all words to denote theſe defiled practiſes of theirs; and ſet down diſtinctly by Epiphanius, and others, but are too unſavoury to be here deſcribed. How commodiouſly theſe are by M. Brightman affirmed to be the Arians, pretending to be the pureſt Chriſtians, when they are not, (repreſenting the pureſt Chriſtians by the Jewes, which were their greateſt enemies, and perſecutors) I ſhall not here endevour to examine.

f. Μέλλοντα πάσχειν ἐξ ἐμοῦ τοῖς φυλακίοις

This perſecution here foretold, ſeems to have fallen out in the time of the joynt reign of Marcus Aurelius Verus, commonly called Philoſophus, and Lucius Verus his brother, aſſumed by him into the Empire, anno 161. who reigned neer twenty years. In his time (as it appears by Euſebius l. 4. c. ult. and the Epiſtle of the Church of Smyrna there) μέχρι τῆς Ἀσίας ἀνεθρύπτοντο διωγμοὶ, very great perſecutions diſturbed Aſia. Of this perſecution 'tis remarkeable that it fell very heavy on this Church of Smyrna, and that Polycarpus was martyred in it, being till that time (at the age of 86.) Biſhop of this Church, which therefore wrote a full narration of it to the other Churches, in that famous Epiſtle of theirs recorded by Euſebius, and ſet out lately at London by the Archbiſhop of Armagh. Before him many others were martyred διὰ παντοδαπῶν κολάσεων καὶ βασάνων, with all kind of puniſhments and tortures, ſet down to the life in that Epiſtle. But of Polycarpus the ſtory is moſt large, and may there be viewed, out of which three things only I ſhall mention, in order to the explicating of this place, 1. That he himſelf received a viſion a little before it, and ſaw in his ſleep his pillow, whereon he lay, of a ſuddain ſet on fire, and conſumed, and aſſoon as he waked, told thoſe, which were near him, that he ſhould διὰ πυρὸς ζωλῶ μιδαλῶξαι, be burnt for Chriſt, which ſignifies this martyrdome of this Angel of the Church of Smyrna (this ὁ τῆς Ἀσίας διδάσκαλος, ὁ πατὴρ Χριστιανῶν, as the perſecutors called him, the doctor of Aſia, the father of the Chriſtians) to have been ſo conſiderable a paſſage of the divine œconomy, that it was thought fit to be matter of a viſion to him, and ſo might alſo well be to S. John at this time; And not only this in a dream, but, as he was a going to the ſtake, a voice was heard by many by-ſtanders, coming from heaven, Ἴσχυε Πολύκαρπε, καὶ ἀνδρίζου, Polycarpus be ſtrong and valiant. The ſecond thing is, that this death of his was the quenching of thoſe flames, the ending of that Emperors perſecution againſt the Chriſtians, who ὥσπερ ἐπισφράγισιν διὰ τῆς μαρτυρίας αὐτοῦ καλύψαντος τὸ διωγμὸν, ſaith the Epiſtle, he did as 'twere ſeal up by his martyrdome, and ſo give a concluſion to the perſecution, which, I ſuppoſe, is the meaning of the time of ten daies here ſet down for the affliction, ἡμερῶν δέκα ἕξει θλῖψιν noting ſome determinate (not very long) time in that Princes reign, wherein it ſhould laſt, and then be quieted again. The 3d thing is, that not only upon Polycarpus, but upon many others (particularly on Germanicus) great perſwaſions were uſed by the heathens to make them renounce their faith and ſave their lives, which is the meaning of the [ἵνα πειρασθῆτε, that you may be tempted,] and although ſome (as Quintus a Phrygian) were overcome with theſe temptations, ἢ ψυχὴ μαλακισθεῖσα &c. yet great multitudes continued conſtant, and faithfull unto death, and ſo were rewarded with this crown of life, i.e. the honour of martyrdome firſt, and then the bliſſe.

ἵνα πειρασθῆτε

That by Pergamus is here meant the Chriſtian Church from Gratian, An: Chr: CCCLXXX. to the year MCCC. is the phanſie of M. Brightman, ſomewhat about the proportion of the reſt of his interpretations. For, for this his only ground of affirming is, that Smyrna was diſtant from Epheſus but 320 furlongs, but Pergamus from Smyrna a greater ſpace, about 540 furlongs. But to ſee how phanſie rules this interpreter, and not any rule of proportion. For ſuppoſing that theſe diſtances of theſe cities had any myſterious ſignification in them (whereas they are not ſo much as taken notice of in the viſions) yet when the 320 furlongs had been ſet to denote no longer ſpace then from Conſtantine to Gratian, i. e. not above ſixty years, What appearance, or pretence of reaſon can there be, that the addition of two hundred and twenty furlongs to that number, which wants a third part to be double to the former, ſhould improve that

g. Πέργαμος

ſixty

sixty into nine hundred and twenty years, which is almost sixteen times as much as that former. But more wonderful it is, that having proceeded by this rule of proportion, wherein five hundred and fourty furlongs, i.e. about sixty eight English miles should signifie the space of nine hundred years, yet afterwards the eighty English miles, whereby Thyatira was distant from Pergamus, should signifie but two hundred and twenty years, the unproportionableness of which being discerned by him, was sure the reason that he there chose to set down that space in English miles, whereas p.37. the former had been set down by furlongs, the eighth part of a mile, that so the greater number of those in one place, than of miles in the other, might amuse the Reader, and keep him from taking notice of the unproportionableness.

h. Θρόνος τοῦ Σατανᾶ

This throne of Satan surely signifies the power of Satan, exercised in their idolatrous worships, and sacrifices. Thus, saith Surius, there was a Temple of Diana at Pergamus at this time. And in the Greek μηνολόγιον, where Antipas's Martyrdome is commemorated, though there be not mention of this Temple, yet there is of the Idel-worshippers and their sacrifices, of the Devils (δαίμονες σεβόμενοι παρ' αὐτοῖς) that were worshipt among them, and did then acknowledge themselves οἰκεῖν ἐν τῷ τόπῳ, to inhabit, and reside in that place, and receive τὰς προσαγομένας θυσίας, the sacrifices that were brought them, and, in a word, of the ἡ τῶν Ἑλλήνων παλαιὰ θρησκεία, the old religion of the Grecians that was amongst them, with which Christianity began now to be competitor. To all this Metaphrastes adds the great barbarity, and profest injustice of that place, whose Citizens, saith he, took themselves to be just, and valiant, and good, (interpreted it a special piece of virtue) if they did but accuse a Christian, or bring him to his Martyrdome. By other Authors it appears that Æsculapius had a Temple there, and Andreas Cæsareensis saith of it, κατάπλεων ὅλον ὑπὸ τῶν Ἀσίας πάσης, that it was fuller of Idols than all Asia beside.

i. Ἀντίπας

The story of Antipas's sufferings in the reign of Domitian, is set down compleatly by the Menology April 11. That he was contemporary with the Apostles, ordained Bishop of the (Asiatick) * perhaps it should be ἐκκλησίας, for so after it follows, ἀπάρχων τῆς κατὰ Πέργαμον ἐκκλησίας Ἀρχιερεύς, Church about Pergamus, ἀπὸ Πέργαμον * τῆς Ἀσίας ἀπέχοντος σταδίους), that in his very old age, ἐποίμανεν, he fed, and ruled the flock in all godliness, and was therefore apprehended by the Idolaters, the Devils that were worshipt among them appearing to them, and telling them, that they could not dwell there, nor receive the sacrifices which were brought them, ἀλλὰ ὑπελάμβανεν ὑπὸ τοῦ Ἀντίπα, but that they were driven away by Antipas. Hereupon he was carried before the Prefect, who endeavoured to perswade him ὅτι τὰ πρεσβύτερα πιστότερα ἦν, that the old religion of the Gentiles was more venerable, that Christianity was but ὀλίγου ἀρξαμένη, newly sprang, received by few, and so not so venerable, as the Gracian worship. To which he opposed the story of Cain, and in him the Antiquity of impiety, which yet sure, said he, was not fit for godly men to set before them for an example; Whereby the Prafect being enraged, put him into a brazen bull, τῷ κατὰ πᾶσαν βολὴ πυρωθέντι χαλκευτηρίῳ, wherein praising the mercy and power of God, and giving him thanks ὑπὲρ ὧν ἠξιώθη δι' αὐτὸν παθεῖν, for what he was thought worthy to suffer for him &c. he was there scalded to death, and to him this inscription is set in a distich.

Ταῦρε παλαίης ταλαεργὸς Ἀντίπα, Ὃς τε φλογίζειν ἔσχες, οὐ καιτίζειν, Thou art, O Antipas, set to wrestle with a bull, which could scald, but was not able to gore thee. As for M. Brightman's wanton phansie of this name * Antipas, that it doth denote that the Martyrs of that age, to which he refers that part of the vision, should be Antipapæ, or Antipopes, It is too vain to be seriously repeated, or considered.

* Vocatur Antipas non fictio sed vero nomine, quod nomen tot pene literis & syllabis Martyres hujus temporis declarat fore Antipapas. E.33.

k. Μάννα κεκρυμμένον

Manna, that bread that came down from heaven, among the Israelites was so called from מנה præparavit, ἕτοιμον ἄρτον ἐσθίειν, bread ready to eat, sent down to them from heaven, in the phrase of the Book of Wisdome. By this may fitly be denoted all the inward comfort and refreshment, and sustenance of souls, which God affords Christians in this life, the things, which God hath prepared for them that love him, 1 Cor. 2. 9. and particularly the inward joy that ariseth from the practise of Christian virtues, which carry with them a blessednesse in this life, especially of confessing and suffering for Christ, and that is here said to be bestowed upon the Conqueror, i.e. on him that holds out, falls not away to eating of the Idol-feasts, which they that did, and by that means promised themselves advantage and safety, are said by Eusebius (speaking of those times) to have failed of those very advantages they looked for, being put to death by the persecuters, under pretence of some other cause, as guilty of homicide, &c. and so to have perished without all comfort or hope, of which the faithful Confessors were so full. A notable testimony we have of this in Eusebius l. 5. c. 1. Ἐνταῦθα μεγάλη τις ἡ οἰκονομία τοῦ θεοῦ ἐγίνετο &c. there was a strange disposal of divine providence observable at that time (speaking of Polycarp's Martyrdome) For they that, when they were apprehended, denyed Christ, were yet imprisoned as Christians, and there kept as murtherers and abominable persons, and so were doubly miserable above others, whose afflictions were alleviated, saith he, by the joy of suffering for Christ, by the hope of Gods promises, by their love to Christ, and the Spirit of the Father; which, all together, make up the Manna here spoken of. And this is fitly here called κεκρυμμένον hidden or secret, because it is enjoyed in the heart of the Christian onely.

l. ψῆφος λευκὴ

Ψῆφος signifies properly calculus, a stone, such as they used in popular Judicatures or Elections, the custome being to give their votes in either of these, by such stones. These were either white or black, the white was a token of absolution, or approbation, the black of condemnation or rejection. Agreeably hereunto, as there were Judges in the Agones; so there were calculi too, by which the Victors reward was assigned to him, a white stone noting it, and the Victors name with the value of the prize written on it. That these are here referred to, appears by the phrase, νικῶντι δώσω, to him that overcometh, will I give, noting that reward, which the βραβευταὶ did adjudge to them whom they approved of, viz. to the δίκαιοι, or νικῶντες appro-

approved, and conquerours, as it is in the Oracle

Ἀγγὸς γὰρ Χειστὸς τύπτις τὰ δίκαια βεβαίωσι
Καὶ δοκίμους στέφει. Christ will be sure to give them their due rewards, and will crown those that are approved.

Ονομα καινὸν

And this reward is here said to be a new name, i. e. the name of Christ on this white stone, noting the reward of perseverance in Christianity, to belong to him, of whom 'tis here said, that 'tis an honour and dignity that no man can judge the advantages of. but he that hath received it, as amongst us, he that draws in a Lotterie hath in the paper (answerable to the ψῆφος here) which he drawes the name of the prize, which belongs to him, and that he so drawes, that no man but himself knows what it is. Thus c. 19. 12. speaking of Christs victory over his enemies by bringing some to Christianity, and destroying others, it is first said, that he hath many crowns upon his head, each of those being a testimony of a victory over some kingdome, and then to the same purpose it follows, he hath a name, that no man knows but himself, i. e. such a ψῆφος, or white stone, or counter, on which his name is written, by which he is to receive his reward, which according to this custome here, may be looked on, and seen by himself, but by no body else, without his permission, And what that reward was, is after set down in that place, v. 16. (under the title of his name) to be King of Kings, &c. i. e. for the Princes of the world to be converted to Christianity.

ὃ οὐδεὶς οἶδεν, εἰ μὴ ὁ λαμβάνων

Διαδήματα πολλά

m. Θυάτειρα

That Thyatira is the name of a City then in being really, appears from Act. 16. 14. As for M. Brightman's phansie that the word is θυγατερα a young, or new-born daughter, and so notes the growing piety of the Church from the year one thousand three hundred, to one thousand five hundred and twenty, which saith he, as a young child, growes, till it comes to perfection, this may go in the number of his profound inventions, of which he would perswade the Readers, that they are the dictates of the holy Ghost, which was somewhat necessary to be pretended, there being so little shew of sense or reason in them.

n. Ἰεζαβὲλ

The heresie of the Gnosticks is here described by Jezabel, and the destruction thereof here set down v. 22. It began in Simon Magus, see Euseb. l. 2. c. α'. He, saith he, seeing Philip's miracles and pretending faith in Christ, so farre as to obtain baptisme from him, set up μιαρωτάτην αἵρεσιν, a most polluted abominable heresie. Then c. κγ'. he did many magical miracles by help of the Devil's working in him, and was counted a God in Rome in Claudius's time, and was generally worshipt by the Samaritans, and by some few ἐν ἄλλοις ἔθνεσι in other nations (whether Judaa or Galilee, or in other places where the Jewes were dispersed) ὡς πρῶτον θεὸν as a chief, or first, or prime God. This was the meaning of δύναμις θεοῦ (as the antient MSS. have it, see Act. 8. 10.) ἡ καλουμένη μεγάλη the power of God, called the great power, i. e. the supreme divine power (see 2 Thess. 2. 4.) To him was joined a famous whore of Tyre, and she was styled his πρώτη ἔννοια, his first conception; Now those that followed this Sect of his, saith he, ἀσεβεσι καὶ διὰ παθῶν βιβεντίοις Χειστιανῶν φιλοσοφίαν ὑποκινίζουσι &c. pretending the Christian Religion, so famous for temperance and purity of life, thinking to keep free from idolatry, which by receiving Christianity, they had forsaken, by the treachery of his heresie were brought to it again, καταπίπτοντες δὴ χαμαὶ καὶ σέβονται αὐτῷ τε τῷ Σίμωνι, καὶ τὴν αὐτῷ Ἑλένην, δυσμάσι τε καὶ δυσεσι καὶ μυστηρίοις τέτοις ἐπιχειροῦντες, falling down before images, and pictures of Simon and Helena, and doing them worship with incense and sacrifices, &c. As for the ἀπόῤῥητότερα the more secret and mysterious practises of these men, they are such, saith he, ὧν τὸ πρῶτον ἀκούσαντα ἐκπλαγήσεσθε, that he that first hears them will be amazed, or, as they themselves speak (συμβεβηκέναι) strucken into astonishment, the things which are practised among them being so full (δεινῶν, ὡς ἀληθῶς, καὶ φρικτῶν ἐκφύσεως καὶ μανίας) of true horror, and extasie and madnesse, ὡς μὴ μόνον μὴ δύνατα εἶναι παραδοθῆναι χαρτῷ, ἀλλ' οὐδὲ χείλεσιν αὐτὸ μόνον δι' ἀσεβείας αἰσχρηγίας καὶ ἀῤῥητοποιίας ἀνδρῶν σώφρονι λαληθῆναι, that not onely they cannot be delivered in writing, but even that they cannot be spoken by any sober men for the excesse of filthinesse, and actions not to be uttered (see Eph. 5. 12.) for, as he concludes ὅ, τι ποτὲ ἂν ὄνομάσθείη παρὰ ἀνθρώποις ἀκρῷ μιαρότητος, τέτο πᾶν ὑπερνικῶσιν ἢ τῶνδε μυσαροταπλάστοις ἢ ἀθλίαις, καὶ πανοῖον ὡς ἀληθῶς κακῶν σεσωρευμέναις γυναιξὶ καταπλάττουσι, Whatsoever can be thought on as more abominable than all uncleannesse, that is much exceeded & overcome by this detestable heresie of men which deceive and defile miserable women, laden with all kindes of sins. Which is the very phrase by which they are expresst 2 Tim. 3. 6. Of these again we have the same Author speaking in Adrian's time, l. 4. c. ε'. ζ'. that the Devil in stead of persecutions, used other engines against Christianity or the Church, πανοῦργοι καὶ γόητες ἀνθρωποι, wicked men and sorcerers, ὀλεθρίοις ὀργάνοις ψυχῶν, διακόνοις τε ἀπωλείας, the instruments of destroying souls, and ministers of corruption or perdition, who, being γόητες and ἀπατηλοὶ sorcerers and deceivers, ὑποδύντες ἑαυτοὺς ὑμῖν τὰ δόγματος εὐσεβείας, and being called Christians, and so conceived to have entertained, and to teach those doctrines, ἕτερα παρὰ ταῦτα ἀπῶν ἀλισκομένους εἰς βυθὸν ἀπωλείας ἄγουσι, lead those Christians that are insnared by them into the abysse or depth of perdition, and withal deterre all that have not received the faith from embracing it, by seeing what such men, that are called Christians, practise. A next successor of this Simon, or that took up his heresie and improved it, was Menander, of whom Eusebius relates the story, l. 3. c. κε'. as we have elsewhere set it down, and his conclusion is, that 'twas the Devils design διὰ τούτων γόητων καὶ χειρωνάξων σοφιστῶν ὑποδυομένων, τὸ μέγα θεοσεβείας μυστήριον δὴ μαχίᾳ σοφίσματι διαβαλεῖν, διαφθεῖραι δὲ καὶ αὐτῶν τὴν περὶ ψυχῆς ἀθανασίας, καὶ νεκρῶν ἀναστάσεως ἐκκλησιαστικὰ δόγματα, by these sorcerers, pretending to be Christians, to defame the mystery of Godlinesse, and so root out the Christian doctrines of the Church, of the immortality of the soul, and resurrection of the dead. After these came into the Church also Cerinthus (see Euseb. l. 3. c. κε.) as great a pretender to authority, revelations by Angels, working of miracles, and withal as great an instrument to Satan, in advancing of lusts and idol-worships, as any. Adde unto these the Nicolaitans laitans, formerly described at large note c. (see Eusebius l. 3. c. 28.) and then Saturninus and Basilides, which divided Menander's heresie, or improved his beginnings between them, and set up, one in Syria, and the other in Ægypt, σχολῶν αἱρέσεων διδασκαλία schools of impious heresies (see Eusebius l. 4. c. 6.) and contemporary to them Carpocrates (see Euseb. l. 4. c. 7.) the father of another sort of the Gnosticks, who surpassed all the former, bringing into publick Simon's sorcerias, and professing, by way of acknowledg'd doctrine, the practise of all uncleannesses, as necessary to all that would arrive to the perfection of their μυσαγωγία, or religion, and that there was no other way to escape the κοσμικοὺς ἄρχοντας, earthy rulers, as they called them, but by paying them their dues by this διὰ πάντων ἀδεῖν doing such things as are not to be spoken. And these, saith he, the Devil used for ministers, when persecution was at an end, to deceive and seduce some, ἐξ εὐθείας τινὰς εἰς ἀπώλειαν ἀνδραποδίζεσθαι and miserably to captivate or emancipate them to perdition, and to give the Gentiles, that beleived not, πολλὰν κατ' αὐτῶν βλασφημίας πρόφασιν much matter of reproach against the word of God, the fame of these being spread every where to the reproach of Christians. These particulars set down by Eusebius thus by way of story, but very much more by Irenæus, Epiphanius and Tertullian, that have written against these hereticks, ex proposito, may suffice to give light to the interpretation of this part of the vision. As for the destruction of these, though in one place Eusebius say, that some of the spawn and followers of them remained until his time (and though it be clear by Tertullian's books against the Gnosticks, that some of these hereticks continued some space in the Church) yet in another place he saith that they were suddenly, and remarkably extinguished, and brought to nothing, that is, very much brought down by the hand of God upon them. Now this heresie of the Gnosticks having not any one acknowledged author, whose name it owns, but being a colluvies of all the heresies then abroad, made up of Simon Magus, Menander, Basilides, Carpocrates, Cerinthus, and the rest, is described in this Book by several names of the most odious persons in the Old Testament, which arrogated much to themselves. Thus before 'tis called the doctrine διδαχὴ Βαλαάμ of Balaam, as also by S. Peter, and S. Jude, and now here described by Jezabel, i.e. a proud, imperious, painted woman, persecuter of the Prophet Eliah, very zealous for Idolatry, guilty of the blood of Naboth, and so full of all abominable wickedness, (which is a fit character of their doctrine, and practises) and this person moreover supposed to arrogate to her self (that which Jezabel did not) the honour and title of a Prophetesse, i. e. pretending to divinity and revelation from God, a deep mysterious understanding of Scripture, and the βάθη τοῦ Θεοῦ depths of God, 1 Cor. 2. 10. beyond all others, and from thence grounding the particular matters of this heresie (though they were indeed but the βάθη Σατανᾶ, depths of Satan v. 24.) and calling it γνῶσις knowledge, as pretending all the followers of this heresie, to be prime special Christians of great perfection, for to such onely is that title applied by Clemens Alexand. 'Tis true indeed that Epiphanius (and out of him others) referres this title of Jezabel to those women hereticks which followed Montanus, and took upon them to be Prophetesses, about Commodus's reign, Priscilla, Maximilla, and Quintilla, under the pretence of Revelations spreading many monstrous heresies (of Montanus's being the Paraclete) which, saith he, were in this Church of Thyatira, not long after S. John's time. But because the Text referres to the known doctrine, and particularly the uncleanesse of the Gnosticks, and because the heresie of the Montanists was not a licentious heresie, but rather of too much strictnesse, and thereby seduced Tertullian to it, and lastly, because Helena that went along with Simon Magus, was a woman more capable of this title, therefore I cannot adhere to that interpretation. But without defining (that which is somewhat obscure) what City this of Thyatira was (one of that name being placed by Strabo in Mysia, another by Stephanus in Lydia, another by Pliny in Ionia, who also mentions a whole Island of that name) I shall rather interpret the heresie (which is here said to be permitted in that Church) of that known, unclean sink of men, the Gnosticks (described v. 14. in the same manner as here) that so over-run Asia, then leave it to any more uncertain subject to be applied to.

What is here meant by τὸ τέλος the end, may appear not onely by what hath been oft said of it, that it notes the end of the Jewes Commonwealth, (see Mat. 24. note c. d.) but by the parallel phrase that here goes before, ἄχρις οὗ ἂν ἥξω, until the time wherein I shall come. For that the coming of Christ notes that notable destruction of his enemies, the Jewish crucifiers of Christ, and persecuters of Christians, hath been often shew'd, (see Mat. 24. b.) By comparing of these two phrases together, the sense of this whole passage will be discoverable. To those in this Church of Thyatira, and the other cities under this Metropolis, which had not fallen off to the Gnostick heresie, he gives no other counsel for the present, but this time come of destroying the Jewish persecuters, and Judaizing Gnosticks, but that they continue as they are, do as they do, hold fast what they have already, ver. 25. And he that shall do so, i. e. continue thus constant against all temptations of either sort, the offer of immunity from persecutions, on one side, and the carnalities on the other, and so overcome, and keep Christ's works, keep fast to the Faith, till that long expected period, here is an honourable promise made to him, as the reward of this his constancy and perseverance; When that end comes, and Gnosticks, and Jews be destroyed, and so peace and purity restored to the Church, then these constant Christians shall be employed by Christ to propagate the Gospel to those who have not yet received it; and this is exprest by Christs giving him power over the Nations, even as he received of, or from his Father. For 1. it must be observed, that those words in the former part of v. 27. taken out of the second Psalm, must be read in a parenthesis, and so the end of v. 26. and the latter part of v. 27. will connect together, thus, To him will I give power over the Nations, even as I received, i. e. as I received from my Father. What this signifies, is apparent from John 20. 21. As my Father sent me,

ὁ. τὸ τέλος

ἄχρις οὗ ἂν ἥξω

Ἐξουσίαν ἐπὶ τῶν ἐθνῶν

κἀγὼ εἴληφα παρὰ τοῦ Πατρός μου me, ſo ſend I you. The ſame commiſſion that Chriſt had from his father, he gives to his twelve Apoſtles, i. e. authority to govern the Church after him. This authority is here the ἐξουσία power, And as the Apoſtles had this power for their time, and ſome others derivatively from them, and thoſe that ſo derived it, may yet be ſaid truly, though not immediately to have received it from Chriſt, ſo here they that are made Biſhops in the Church after the Apoſtles, receive this power from Chriſt, and he is truly and properly ſaid to give it them; And as the Apoſtles power & commiſſion was firſt to plant, then to govern Churches, ſo here the power that is promiſed theſe perſevering Chriſtians of this Church, is to preach the Goſpel, and propagate it farther, then it was yet received, and having converted, then to govern Churches, and theſe being now made up, not (as before) of Jewes diſperſed, and their Proſelytes, but of Gentile Idolaters, that ſhould now flock in to the Faith of Chriſt, the converting them, and (having planted Churches) ruling, as Biſhops, among them, is that which is here ſtyled ἐξουσία ἐπὶ τῶν ἐθνῶν, Power over the Gentiles. And then to theſe are accommodated thoſe words out of the ſecond Pſalm, And he ſhall rule them (ſo the Septuagint reads, [ποιμανεῖ rule] from the Hebrew תרעם, from רעה pavit, though now the Hebrew copies have תרועם ſhall break from רוע, fregit) ſhall rule them with a rod of iron, as the Potters veſſels are broken. Thoſe words were firſt to be verified of Chriſt himſelf, in ſubduing the Gentiles to the Faith, and then as his Power given him by his Father, is by him communicated to others, ſo this prophecie is applyable to others alſo. Where, as the rod of iron ſignifying no more than a ſword or ſcepter, the enſign of power, and the ruling them wᵗʰ that, ſignifies the governing them, and that (ποιμαίνειν) ruling them as a Paſtor, or Shepheard, ſo the Kingdome of Chriſt being a ſpiritual Kingdome, and the Scepter conſequently a ſpiritual Scepter, there will no more be intelligible by this ruling the Nations with a rod of iron, than the Paſtoral, Spiritual, or Eccleſiaſtical power over the Gentile converts; Thus is the phraſe uſed c. 12. 5. of the Church eſtabliſhed at Rome, of which it is there foretold that it ſhall be very powerful, and efficacious in converting many to the Faith, μέλλει ποιμαίνειν πάντα ἔθνη, it ſhall rule all the Nations, (in a larger manner, than here is ſaid of Thyatira, where the [πάντα all] is omitted) i. e. propagate the Faith very far. And becauſe this converſion of them to the faith conſiſts in their repentance, and forſaking of their Gentile ſins, and rendring future obedience to the faith of Chriſt, and becauſe repentance is in Scripture expreſt figuratively by breaking and ſhivering of the heart, Pſ. 51. 17. which we ordinarily ſtyle contrition, and becauſe that contrition, if it be ſincere, excludes all turning again to the forſaken ſins, and that cannot better be expreſt than by the breaking of a pot, or earthen veſſel, which when 'tis broken, can by no art be made whole again, as pots of ſilver, or other metal may by being melted again, therefore this coming in of Converts to the Faith, is rhetorically deſcribed, both in the Pſalm and here, by breaking men as a Potters veſſels are broken. All which being thus far cleared to be the meaning of theſe two verſes 26. & 27. that they that were then (at the writing of this Epiſtle) but members of the Church of Thyatira, ſhould after, prove eminent propagators of the Goſpel, and Biſhops of their Gentile-converts, there will be little doubt but the 28. verſe [And I will give to him the morning ſtar] (i. e. to him that hath the power given him, v. 27.) is thus to be interpreted alſo. The morning ſtar ἀστὴρ πρωϊνὸς is the Greek for the Hebrew כוכב חבקר the ſtar of the morning, and it is ſometimes called φωσφόρος the ſtar that brings light, uſhers in the Sun, 2 Pet. 1. 19. ſometimes ὁ ἀστὴρ ὁ λαμπρὸς καὶ ὀρθρινός, Rev. 22. 16. the bright and morning ſtar, and ſometimes ἀνατολὴ, the Eaſt, or day-ſpring, Lu. 1. 78. And though every of theſe in all thoſe places ſignifie Chriſt, in reſpect of his light and luſtre, yet it is certain that in other reſpects other things may be repreſented by it, ſo in Iſaiah the King of Babylon, is called Lucifer, Sun of the morning, in reſpect of his power or ſplender, above other Kings, And ſo 'tis poſſible it may here note ſome eminent Prince, or Nation, that the Church of Thyatira, i. e. the conſtant Orthodox pure Chriſtians in that Church, ſhould propagate the faith to, when the heretical Gnoſtick profeſſors there were finally deſtroyed. That that is the meaning of Chriſts [δώσω αὐτῷ, I will give unto him] may appear by what hath been ſaid of the phraſe of Gods giving unto Chriſt, Joh. 6. note d. giving unto him for an inheritance, or poſſeſſion, from Pſ. 2. 8 which being applied and communicated here by Chriſt to men, as it is there by God to Chriſt, will denote the converſion of them to the Faith, by the preaching of thoſe men, commiſſion'd by Chriſt. Thus the phraſe [I will give] is uſed c. 3. 9. I will give them of the Synagogue, i. e. as followeth, I will make them that they ſhall come and worſhip before thy feet, i. e. they ſhall be ſubdued unto thee. And ſeeing this phraſe is here alſo taken out of that ſecond Pſalm, as the former of Ruling them with the rod of iron, &c.] it is not improbable that from thence it may be explained. There it is ſaid to Chriſt, I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the utmoſt parts of the Earth for thy poſſeſſion, the former part whereof, is here v. 26. giving him power over the Nations, and then why may not this be parallel to the latter part? The utmoſt parts of earth, are the extreme points, Eaſt and Weſt, and the morning-ſtar may properly ſignifie one of theſe, the Eaſt in reſpect of the point, wherein it is wont to ariſe, and uſher in the Sun, and ſo is ſtyled ἀνατολὴ Lu. 1. the Eaſt, or day-ſpring, And then their converting the Gentiles of the Eaſtern Nations, to Chriſtianity, propagating the Faith over the Eaſt, much farther, after thoſe times of perſecution were over, may very probably be the meaning of this verſe.

CHAP. III.

Paraphraſe.

1. And unto the Angel of the Church in [a] Sardis, write; [Theſe things, ſaith he, that hath the ſeven Spirits of God, and the ſeven ſtars: I know thy works, that thou haſt a name that thou liveſt, and art dead.]

1. Thus ſaith Chriſt, who hath at his command thoſe ſeven Angels of God mentioned c. 1. 4. and hath authority over all the Biſhops or Governours of the Churches, and the congregations under them, to puniſh or reward them, I know your actions, and judge by them, and not by your pretenſions, and therefore do paſſe this ſentence upon you, that although you profeſſe to be Chriſtians, yet you renounce the faith when any perſecution approacheth. a.

2. Be watchful, and * ſtrengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die; for I have not found thy works † perfect before God.]

2. And ſome that have not as yet fain, are yet ready to do ſo, if they be not ſpeedily fortified, wherefore a great care muſt be taken of thoſe, that they be upheld. For though there be faith in this Church, yet there wants that love, which muſt conſummate this faith, and this that perfect love, that caſts out fear, that will make men confeſſe Chriſt in time of greateſt hazard, this, I ſay, is wanting among you.

3. Remember therefore how thou haſt received and heard, and hold faſt and repent. If therefore thou ſhalt not watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou ſhalt not know what houre I will come upon thee.]

3. Remember therefore the pure Chriſtian doctrine, which requires confeſſion with the mouth, as well as faith, and be ſtrong and conſtant, and make amends for your former failings. And if by continued negligence you thus fall again, expect that my judgements on you ſhall be ſudden, and unpreventable.

4. Thou haſt a few names even in Sardis, which have not defiled their garments, and they ſhall walk with me in white, for they are worthy.]

4. Some few names i. e. perſons (Act. 1. 15.) there are in this Church, which have not failed in this kind, have held out conſtant againſt all terrors, and confeſſed, and ſuffered for my name, and theſe ſhall not fail of the reward of Martyrs, they ſhall be clothed in ſhining garments, i. e. glorioufly or royally, and this as a reward of their Chriſtian conſtancy, for they have behaved themſelves as they ought.

5. He that overcometh, the ſame ſhall be clothed in white raiment, and I will not blot out his name out of the [b] book of life, but I will confeſſe his name before my Father, and before his Angels.]

5. He that holds out againſt all temptations, and confeſſes Chriſt before men, ſhall be rewarded with the richeſt Martyrs reward, and though he be ſlain here, be ſhall be ſure to gain life by loſing it, I will make good my promiſe to this Confeſſor of mine, in confeſſing and owning him before my Father, and his Angels at the day of Judgement. b.

6. He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit ſaith unto the Churches.

7. And to the Angel of the Church in Philadelphia write, Theſe things, * ſaith [he that is holy, he that is true, he that hath the key of David, he that openeth, and no man ſhutteth; and ſhutteth, and no man openeth:]

7. Chriſt, that is pure, and faithful to us, and that loveth, and owneth, and rewardeth thoſe, that continue pure and faithful, undefiled, and conſtant to the profeſſing of him, that hath as a Steward all power and authority put into his hand over the houſe of God, and ſo whatſoever he doth, ſhall ſtand againſt all controll.

Notes on Chap. III.

a. Σάρδεις

That Sardis is the firſt reformed Church, in the Antitype, that of Germany, begun at Wittemberg by Luther, An. Dom. 1517. is the affirmation of M. Brightman, but without any other proof, but either that Sardis is more ſomberly than Thyatira, and ſo, according to his phanſie, muſt have more of the life of truth in it, Or becauſe there is no mention here of Balaam and Jezebel (which he had reſolved muſt ſignifie the doctrines of Chriſtian Rome) the abſence of which muſt ſignifie to him a breaking off from the Roman communion, Or that ſhe had a name to be living, but was dead, which, ſaith he, muſt referre to the doctrine of conſubſtantiation among the Lutherans, an argument that they were hugely amiſſe, and ſpiritually dead after that reformation. But alas how farre are theſe from

from being markt in the forehead, or the writing an Epiſtle to Germany by name, which in his Epiſtle he promiſed to ſhew us? This were a ſtrange rate of interpreting of dreams, which no Oneirocritick would allow of, but a much ſtranger of explaining of prophecies. The ſame courſe hath he taken in the other two remaining Churches, Philadelphia muſt needs be the Helvetian, Swediſh, Genevan, French, Dutch, Scotch reformed Churches, but no reaſon for it again, but that the city of Philadelphia was yet farther ſouth than Sardis, and ſo muſt needs ſignifie ſome encreaſe of reformation. And 2^dly, that the name of Jezebel was not in it. And 3^dly, that the word Philadelphia ſignifying brotherly love, cannot be applied to any, but this pattern of all piety (to which the Author had ſo much kindneſſe) the Church of Helvetia, and Geneva &c. And the reformed Church of England muſt be the Church of Laodicea, not from any denotation in the name, or characters in the forehead (which he promiſed to all in his Epiſtle, and attempted to ſhew in the former of them) but onely becauſe Epiſcopacy was here retained, and ſo was a mixture of cold with that of heat in the purity of the doctrine, and conſequently is the lukewarm Church which is here found fault with. How eaſily any favourer of Epiſcopal Government might apply this reaſon to any reformed Church that hath caſt out Biſhops, and ſay that they were warm in reſpect of Primitive purity of doctrine, but cold, in reſpect of a government which is contrary to the Primitive, and conſequently that Geneva it ſelf were Laodicea, is obvious to every man. And yet after this manner doe his groundleſſe looſe interpretations proceed, which in each of theſe ſeven Churches I have pointed at, to give the Reader a δεῖξις, or taſt of the interpretations of this man, whoſe licentious phanſie, and love of change hath aſſiſted him to make them, and whoſe authority among many, and the opinion of the Apoſtolicalneſs of his writings hath holpen him to ſeduce, and blind ſo many. Having given the Reader this view of ſo many ſeverals, I ſhall not hereafter give my ſelf that ſcope, but in the enſuing prophecies leave him to be judged of by any, who ſhall be at leiſure to conſult him.

b. This book wherein names are ſaid to be written, and from thence blotted out ſometimes, is here uſed by analogie with regiſters in cities, containing the names of all citizens, and from which rebels, and deſertors were blotted out. Cenſores populi avitates, ſoboles, familias, cenſento, Let the Cenſors ſet down or regiſter all mens ages, children, families, ſaith Tully de Leg: 3. Theſe were at Athens called λῆξιαρχικὰ γραμματεῖα; See ch. 13 8. and ch. 20. 12. where this book of life is diſtinguiſht from the books, which were the records of what was done, (ſuch as are mention'd Eſth: 6. 1, 2.) out of which it ſeems the records are brought, by which the wicked are judged κατὰ τὰ ἔργα according to their wicked works, which are there recorded, from which certainly it is, that any man's name is blotted out of this book of life, or is not found written in it. And ſo S. Chryſoſtome, and the ancients underſtand this book of life, to be that, in which according to their qualifications, and demeanours in their lives, and eſpecially at their hour of death, men are ſaid to be written or blotted out, (ſee Lu. 10. 20. and note on Phil. 4. 3.)

c. The word μάρτυς a witneſs] is in this book, and ſince in the ordinary uſe of the Church, ſet to ſignifie one that for the teſtifying the truth of God, laies down his life, And he that doth thus, as he is πιστὸς faithful to God, who hath employed him, ſo is he ἀληθὴς true (in the ſenſe that on the Goſpels we have oft given of that word) one that deſerves to be beleived, and both theſe words, πιστὸς and ἀληθὴς, faithful and true, are the juſt rendring of the Hebrew אָמֵן which is here expreſt by Amen, a word which comes from the root אָמַן, which in Hiphil ſignifies credidit, beleiving, but in the noun, fidus, fidelis, verus, and fide dignus, faithful, or worthy of beleif. This title then of Amen, or μάρτυς ὁ πιστὸς καὶ ἀληθὴς, faithful and true witneſs, is here beſtowed on Chriſt, who to teſtifie the meſſage or doctrine (which he brought) to come from heaven, layd down his life. And therefore the Church writers, which have ſorted the martyrs of the Church into ſeveral ranks or forms, and given them diſtinct titles accordingly, to Stephen that of πρωτομάρτυς, the firſt martyr of the Church, to the reſt of the Apoſtles, Biſhops, and Eccleſiaſtical perſons, that of ἱερομάρτυρες ſacred martyrs, to the great or noble men that of μεγαλομάρτυρες noble martyrs, to the virgins and women that of καλλιμάρτυρες fair martyrs, to the common people of ἁγιομάρτυρες holy martyrs have reſerv'd unto Chriſt the title of ὁ μέγας μάρτυς, the great witneſſe, or Martyr.

d. All that is here ſaid of this Church of Laodicea ſeemeth very intelligible by applying to them that one part of the doctrine of the Gnoſticks, that ſeems to have gotten in among them (though not thoſe other carnal villanies) viz: that it was ἀδιάφορον an indifferent thing, perfectly lawfull to renounce Chriſt in time of perſecution. This is clearly the lukewarmneſs here, which is a middle indifferent temper between being Chriſtians, and no Chriſtians, and in ſtead of that, God commends to them πεπυρωμένον χρυσὸν refined gold, fetcht out of the fire, i. e. directly the crown of martyrdome (contrary to that mixture, and allay of droſſe that is now in them) and the white, or ſhining garments, the enſigne and character of the Martyrs every where in this book. And for their ſaying that they are rich &c. and not knowing that they are wretched &c. this is again the mark of thoſe Gnoſticks, which had ſuch great ungrounded opinions of their own perfections. A phyſical diſcourſe on this place may be ſeen in Valeſius Sac: Phil: c. 90.

Paraphrase.

a. 1. In this chapter, being the begining of another vision, is first represented the calling, and admission of John into heaven (by way of vision, (as we read of S. Paul, that he was snatcht into the third heaven, 2 Cor. 12. 2.) to receive revelations of some things, which should shortly come to passe, And the manner of calling him was by a shrill voice, imitating the sound of a trumpet, (by which assemblies are wont to be called) but that it was articulate.

1. After this * I [a] looked, and behold a dore was opened in heaven: and the first voice which I heard, was as it were a trumpet, talking with me, which said, Come up hither, and I will shew thee things which must be hereafter.]

* I saw

b. 2. And accordingly, saith he, I was, (in an extasie or vision) presently transported thither, and there was represented to me a throne erected for judicature, and God the Father sitting on it (see Ezech. 1. 26.) like the Bishop of Jerusalem in councel.

2. And immediatly I was in the spirit: and behold a throne was set in heaven, and one [b] sat on the throne.]

3. And he sate as in majesty, and the appearance of him, or, the colours, wherein he was represented to me, were, like the colour of a Jasper and Sardine stone, the former having its name in the Hebrew (Exod. 28. 19.) from the firmnesse and hardnesse of it, as being unmalleable, thereby to signifie God's omnipotence, The second (Exod. 28. 17.) from the rednesse or fierinesse of it, to signifie him terrible in his judgments, as a flaming fire, Heb. 12. 29. But withall there was a rainbow round about the throne, which was Gen. 8. 13. a token of God's covenant with man, and is used Ezech. 1. to describe a glorious appearance of God, (the appearance of the likenesse of the glory of the Lord v. 28.) and so again here ch. 10. 1. and the colour of it was like an Emerald, i. e. of a most pleasant greennesse, fitly signifying the Evangelical covenant of mercy, mixing, in all God's judgments, most mercifull preservations to the faithfull in the midst of his punishing the obdurate, ch. 7. 2. &c.

3. And he that sat, was † to look upon, like a Jasper and a Sardine stone; and there was a rainbow round about the throne, in sight like unto an Emerald.]

† in countenance ὁράσει

c. d. 4. And on each side of this throne were other chairs, four and twenty in number, as of so many Bishops, sitting with the Bishop of Jerusalem in the Councel, and accordingly arrayed in white garments, and mitres on their heads.

4. And [c] round about the throne were four and twenty * seats, and upon the seats I saw [d] four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white rayment, and they had on their heads crowns of gold.]

* thrones θρόνοι

5. And as the law was by God once delivered in a terrible c. manner, by the ministerie of Angels, so it now seemed to be produced as terribly, to threaten, and give in evidence against sinners: And seven Angels, like seven deacons in the Church, stood waiting on this judicature, (see note on ch. 1. b.)

5. And out of the throne proceeded lightnings, and thundrings, and voices; and there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the [c] seven spirits of God.]

f. g. 6. And before this tribunal of God's were brought all the people of the Jewes, expressed by a sea, or multitude of waters (waters signifying people in this prophecie, c. 17. 15.) and all their thoughts and actions laid visible and discernible before this Judge, their own consciences as a crystal-glasse, reflecting, and acknowledging the accusations that are brought against them: And at every corner of this judgment-seat were the four ensignes of the standards of Israel, meaning thereby four Apostles, that were present at the Councel at Jerusalem, Act. 15. and that had most especially reference to the Jewes (which were the people on whom this judicature was to passe) and these had many eyes before and behind, (see note l.) i. e. the gifts of prophecie, and also of interpreting the scriptures of the Old Testament, the first looking forward, the other backward.

6. And before the throne there was a sea of glasse like unto crystal: and [f] in the midst of the throne, and round about the throne were [g] four † beasts full of eyes, before and behind.]

† living creatures ζῶα

h. 7. And the four ensignes were, as they were in Ezechiel, c. 1. the images of a lyon, and an oxe, and a man, and an eagle, which may, by way of hieroglyphick, (fit enough for a vision) all of them put together set out that title of God, [slow to anger, and swift to mercy] and so represent him as he is in his dealing with these Jewes, whom he was now about to judge, having warned them by the Prophets, by Christ, by the Apostles; and (the converted Jewes in Asia) by the Epistle to the Churches, ch. 1. 2, 3. before he proceeds to judgment against them, and when he doth so, wonderfully delivering the penitent beleivers out of that destruction.

7. And [h] the first * beast was like a lyon, and the second † beast like a calf, and the third * beast had a face as a man, and the fourth † beast was like a flying eagle.]

* living creature, † living cr: * living cr: † living cr:

i. 8. And the bearers of these four standards had each of them six wings, like Seraphim's, Isa. 6. 2. (with two of them covering the face, with two the feet, or secret parts, and with two flying, noting the humility, chastity, love or zeal in Gods service, that was remarkeable in these, in opposition to the contrary in those, which should now be judged, especially the Gnostick Judaizers) and were full of eyes, as before, v. 6. behind and before, in respect of their understanding of the prophecies and types of the Old Testament, and their gifts of prophecie given them by God, and they labour incessantly for the advancement of God's glory, and the kingdome of Christ, and evidencing to unbeleivers their approaching ruine, and to beleivers God's fidelity, in making good his promise to them, in delivering them, and destroying their enemies.

8. And the four * beasts had each of them six wings [i] † about him, and they were full of eyes within, and they rest not day and night, saying, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God * almighty, which was, and is, and is to come.]

* living creatures † being full of eyes round about and within * the ruler of all things ὁ παντοκράτωρ

9, 10, 11. And while they did so, the Bishops of the Christian Church in Judæa did adoration to God, acknowledging his fidelity & infinite power, from whom they have receiv'd all, and therefore are in all reason to employ all to his service, and to depend, and trust on him in the midst of all dangers, as on a faithfull creatour 1 Pet. 4. 19. (see Act. 4. 24. 30.)

9. And when † those beasts give glory, and honour, and thanks to him that sat on the throne, who liveth for ever and ever,

† the living creatures shall give δώσουσι τὰ ζῶα

10. The four and twenty Elders fell down before him that sat on the throne, and worship him that liveth for ever and ever, and cast their crowns before the throne, saying,

11. Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory, and honour, and power, for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created.]

The

a. εἶδον

The word εἶδον here is not to be taken in the ordinary notion of seeing, looking, or beholding, but in that (so solemn among the Prophets) of the Hebrew חזה from whence their prophecies are called חזון vision, and each prophet חוזה a Seer; and so 'tis generally taken in this book and is best explained by ἐγενόμην ἐν πνεύματι, I was in the Spirit ch. 1. 10. This joyned here with μετὰ ταῦτα] denotes either a distant matter, or a distant vision from the former, and having no accusative case after, to restrain it, it is a general title belonging to the whole passage after it, as farre as that vision goes; For it hath formerly been said, that these visions were delivered at several times (see the Præmonition) At what distance, or space one from another, or in what order distinctly they were received, it is uncertain, save only that they were not before Claudius, nor after Domitian. But for the completion, there is no necessity, that that should begin at the end of the completion of the former, i.e. that the destruction of the Jewes here represented in this vision, should not commence till after the judgment threatned, ch. 2. 3. to the Churches. (as it might be conceived to doe, if the whole Book were but one continued vision) It being very possible that that which should first come to passe, might by God be chosen to be matter of a second vision, nay that the same thing might be severally represented by God, and so made the matter of several visions.

b. ὁ καθήμενος τὸν τῷ θρόνῳ

Who this person is, which is here, in vision, brought in, sitting upon the throne, will be best understood by those that sit upon the four and twenty thrones round about him, ver. 4. That God the Father coming to judgment, and his saints as assessors about him, are meant by the representation, these is no doubt; The whole question is, who they are, which are here used to represent and signifie these. And it might be thought to be the head of the Sanhedrim at Jerusalem, or some other Consistory, which thus sat in councel, the head in the midst in a chair, or throne, and the members, chief Priests, Elders, and Doctors of the law, on each side of him, in so many chairs also; But the number of the assessors here will not then agree to it, there being then seventy persons in the Sanhedrim, and twenty three in the lesser Consistories, and though perhaps the Elders in the Sanhedrim made up that number of twenty four, yet there were chief Priests, and Doctors of the law, which sat in the Sanhedrim as well as they. But if we apply it to the Christian Church, which hath much of likenesse with (and seems to have been copied out from) that pattern of the Jewish Sanhedrim, but differs from it in some lesse weighty, inconsiderable circumstances, such is the number of assessors) then it will accord very well. And the first constitution of this Church being at Jerusalem, and that place being neerly concerned in the judicature, which is here represented, and James, the first Bishop there, being by them put to death, and that a special ingredient in their destruction (saith Josephus and Eusebius) that place will in all probability be the scene of this representation, and the Christian Bishop thereof will be he, that here sitteth upon the throne or Bishop's chair; This Bishop sitting in councel, (as Act. 15. we know, he was) and with him the Apostles (those that were at Jerusalem) and the Bishops of all Judea; The Bishop of Jerusalem, as of the Metropolis of all Judea, sitting in the middle chair, or seat, or throne, that of the greatest dignity which belonged to James, and thereupon the determination of the Councel was delivered by him, Act. 15. 19.

c. Καθήμενος τῷ θρόνῳ

The meaning of κυκλόθεν τῷ θρόνῳ, round about the throne will probably be discerned by the ancient manner of sitting in Councel or Consistory among the Jewes first, and afterward among Christians; A representation we have of it, Dan. 7. 9. (from which place this here seems to be taken, as many other things in this, out of that prophecie) I beheld till the seats, or thrones were pitched, (not thrown down, as we read, but) pitched, or set, donec throni positi sunt, saith the vulgar, and ἕως οἱ θρόνοι ἐτέθησαν, say the Seventy, and Theodotion, and the Chaldee word is the same, that is used by the Chaldee Paraphrase, Jer. 1. 15. for the setting of thrones, where the Hebrew hath ישתו and the Seventy, καὶ θήσουσιν, they shall set every one his throne; And then it follows, and the antient of daies did sit, placing him in the midst of the other thrones, as the father or head of the Consistory, and the judgment was set, v. 10. i.e. the whole Sanhedrim, the rest of the Elders &c. seated on those thrones, round about. Or on each side of the head, or Prince of the Consistory, and the books were opened, preparative to the judicature. So in like manner in the Christian Church, where the Bishop and his Presbyters in any lesser city, and the Metropolitane and his Bishops in the Metropolis, are thus placed, The Presbyters, or the Bishops sitting at the East end of the Church in the form of a semicircle, and the Bishop, or Metropolitane in a chair or throne of some eminence in the midst of the Presbyters or Bishops seats, with those on each side of him, and then the Deacons attending or waiting on them. So in Ignatius's Epistle to the Magnesians we find, Μᾶλλον τῷ ἀξιοφιλοτίμῳ ἐπισκόπῳ ὑμῶν, καὶ πνευματικῷ στεφάνῳ τῷ πρεσβυτερίῳ (as the Laurentian copie now rightly reads it not Στεφάνῳ πρεσβύτῃ, as the printed copies were wont to have it) with your most reverend Bishop, and the spiritual crown of the Presbyterie; noting the Presbyters sitting on each side of the Bishop, in the fashion of a crown, not of a full circle, for a crown was not so antiently, but a large semicircle with two ends, by which 'twas put over and tyed about the head, and accordingly the constellation in heaven so called, is not a whole or complete circle. And thus in the Apostol: Constit: l. 2. we have Ἐκκλησίας στέφανος, the crown of the Church, i. e. the Bishops and Presbyters in Consistory. And indeed this manner of sitting in an half-circle was but the same with their accubitus, or lying at meat in an half-round, called Sigma, from the old fashion of that letter, C. where the most honourable place was that in the middle, as some learned men have collected from 1 Sam. 20. 25. The King sate upon his seat, as at other times, even upon his seat by the wall. Where supposing the form of sitting to be semicircular, the seat by the wall will be necessarily the middle of the circle. And thus in the Apost: Constit: l. 2. Καθέσθω μέσος ὁ τῆς ἐκκλησίας πρόεδρος, παρ' ἑκάτερα δὲ αὐτοῦ καθιζέσθω τὸ πρεσβυτέριον,

Let the Biſhops ſeat, or throne be placed in the midſt, and on each ſide of him let the Presbyterie ſit, καὶ οἱ διάκονοι περιεστάτωσαν, and let the Deacons ſtand by. And ſo Greg: Nazianzen a Biſhop in his dream deſcribes himſelf ſitting in the midſt, and his Presbyters in chairs on each hand of him And in Theodoret Eccl: Hiſt: l. 5. c. 3. ὁ μέσος θρόνος the middle ſeat is the Biſhops chair, and the way propounded to compoſe the difference between Paulinus and Miletius is, to ſet the Goſpel in that middle ſeat, and the καθίσαι ἑκατέρωθεν to ſit on each ſide. And the Author of the Eccleſiaſtick Hierarchie c. 3. ὁ μὲν Ἱεράρχης ἐν μέσῳ τῷ θείῳ συναξεῖῳ καθίζεται, The Biſhop is placed in the midſt not of the Altar, but of that part of the Church, which was called συναξεῖον, Which what it is will beſt appear by the † Scholiaſt on Nazianzen's firſt σκίλδι: Σηκὸς καὶ τέμενος, ſaith he, Ζημαίνει τὸ ἱερὸν ὅλον, ὁ δὲ ναὸς συναξεῖον, ἐν ᾧ ἡμῖν ἡ θεία τῶν μυστηρίων τράπεζα, The word σηκὸς and τέμενος ſignifie the whole Church, but the word ναὸς the nave ſignifies the συναξεῖον in which the divine table of the myſteries, or communion table is placed, by which it appears, both that the συναξεῖον is the whole ſpace within the ſept, and not onely the Altar or Table therein, and alſo that the Biſhops being ſeated in the midſt of the συναξεῖον] is the taking his place at the upper end of the Church within the ſept, with the Presbyters on each ſide of him, Which is alſo the way of interpreting and underſtanding all that is ſaid in the ancient Writers, and Liturgies, of encompaſſing the συναξεῖον, that is of the Biſhop and Presbyters, ſitting in a ſemicircle at the upper end of the Chancel. Which is alſo the reaſon, why in Ignatius (Ep: ad Epheſ:) being ὑπὸ τῷ συναξείῳ, within the συναξεῖον, ſignifies living obediently to the Biſhop and his Conſiſtory in all things, and aſſembling with them in the publick ſervice of God in the Church.

d. Having ſeen what was meant by him that ſitteth on the higheſt or middle throne, God, in the thing ſignified, but the Biſhop of Jeruſalem in the repreſentation, It will preſently follow that the πρεσβυτέροι Elders on the thrones round about him, are thoſe which ſate in Councel with this Biſhop, in the ſame manner, as Act. 15. we find the πρεσβύτεροι Elders mentioned. That thoſe πρεσβύτεροι Elders ſignified the Biſhops of Judaa (not the Presbyters, as we now call them, of that one city) hath been ſaid, note on Act. 11. b. For indeed it no way appears, that at that time there were any ſuch Presbyters, (as ſoon after, and now we have) any middle order between the ſingular Biſhop in each Church, and the Deacons attending on him, And beſide it is ſaid of every of theſe, that he had on his head a golden crown, parallel to that of Joſuah the high prieſt, Zach. 6. 11. i. e. a golden mitre, ſuch as the high Prieſt had under the law, call'd indifferently a crown, and a mitre, which cannot belong to inferior Presbyters, but doth fitly repreſent the power of rulers, i. e. Biſhops in the Church, without attributing any thing of regality to them. And therefore in all probability they muſt ſignifie here the Archbiſhop of Jeruſalem, the Metropolis of all Judaa, and all the Biſhops of that Province, ſitting in Councel with him. Otherwiſe, the manner of ſitting, being the ſame o fthe Presbyters of each city (where there were ſuch) about their Biſhop, and of the Biſhops of the Province about their Metropolitane (ſee note c.) it might as properly be applied to Presbyters, as to Biſhops; Now for the number of twenty four, that, I ſuppoſe, was exactly the number of the Biſhops of Judaa at that time, all, beſide the Metropolitan Biſhop of Jeruſalem, (anſwerable to the number of the heads of the courſes of the Prieſts, 1 Chron. 24. who ſeem, as ſuch, to have been taken into the Sanhedrim) though the records of thoſe times being obſcure, afford no demonſtration of this circumſtance.

The ſeven ſpirits of God] here, are the miniſtring ſpirits, or Angels (ſee note on c. 1. b.) that attend and wait upon God as apparitors, or ſerjeants, or officers to attend the judicature, to cite and bring maleſactors before it, and are repreſented here by the ſeven Deacons in the Church of Jeruſalem, attending on the Biſhop, Act. 6. but thoſe like lamps of fire burning, in reſpect of the glory and brightneſſe wherein Angels are wont to appeare. e. Ἑπτὰ πνεύματα

That which is here ſaid of the placing of the living creatures, ἐν μέσῳ τοῦ θρόνου, and κύκλῳ τοῦ θρόνου, in the middle of the throne, and round about the throne] may, I ſuppoſe, be thus moſt commodiouſly explained, that ἐν μέσῳ τοῦ θρόνου in the midſt of the throne] ſhall ſignifie at the former part, that which is moſt viſible to the company; So to be ſet ἐν μέσῳ in the midſt, Act. 4. 7. is in a conſpicuous place all one with before them] Act. 12. 30. and being called forth] Act. 24. 2. and in like manner to ſtand up in the midſt, Act. 1. 15. is, ſo as he may be ſeen, and heard beſt by all that are preſent; And then κύκλῳ about] which muſt needs be oppoſite to that, will ſignifie behind, or at the hinder part, and ſo κυκλόθεν about, will ſtraight appear to be all one with ὄπισθεν at the back, or behind, (ſee note i) Which being granted, the ἐν μέσῳ in the midſt] will neceſſarily denote the two formoſt points of the chair, or throne, where two of the living creatures are placed, and κύκλῳ about] the two hindmoſt, and ſo all the four living creatures will be diſpoſed of, at each corner one. Others, I ſee, have conceived the two, which are here ſaid to be ἐν μέσῳ in the middle of the throne] to have been placed one before, and the other behind (and conſequently the two that are κύκλῳ about] to be one on each ſide) but this cannot well be imagin'd without incommodating the judge, before whom he ſtands, unleſſe one be placed upon the ſteps of aſcent to the throne, and ſo below the ſpace on which the throne was ſet, Which cannot probably be yeilded, becauſe the throne and this place where this living creature would be placed, would not then make up one ſpace, as it ſeems to doe, ch. 5. 6. where the lamb is ſaid to be in the midſt of the throne, and of the four living creatures, ſuppoſing all theſe to make up but one ſpace. But howſoever this be, this placing of the living creatures ſo near the throne, doth by the way make it appear, that this repreſentation here referres not (as might be thought) to the encamping of Iſrael about the ark, Num. 2. becauſe here the four living creatures are ſet cloſe to the throne, and (as appears ch. 5. 6.) nearer than the four and twenty Elders, whereas the ſtandards in Numbers are appointed to be pitched farre off, c. 2. 2. the f. ἐν μέσῳ τοῦ θρόνου

τῶν τέσσαρα. Who theſe four living creatures were in this repreſentation, may in proportion, and analogie with what hath been ſaid, be conjectured alſo. And to that purpoſe it may be obſerved, that they are both here, v. 9. and 10. and c. 5. 6. ſet betwixt him that ſat upon the throne, and the four and twenty Elders, which may probably conclude them to be four Apoſtles, who will be acknowledged to be ſuperiour to the Biſhops of Judea, and may alſo in ſome ſenſe be conceived inferiour, in that Councel of Jeruſalem, to James, advanced to be Biſhop, i.e. ſupreme ruler there, (at leaſt to be there in another capacity, then he was, as tranſcendent perſons, accordingly ſtanding about the throne, and not as regular members of the aſſembly.) For thus ſaith Clemens, Hypotypoſ: l. 5. Peter, James, and John choſe James the brother of the Lord Biſhop of Jeruſalem (where Ruffinus reads, Epiſcopus Apoſtolorum, Biſhop of the Apoſtles) and though they three were ὑπὸ τοῦ κυρίου προτετιμημένοι by Chriſt preferred, and more honoured then all the reſt of the twelve, yet did they not contend one with another for this dignity, but unanimouſly conferred it on James the Juſt, who is therefore in Scripture oft called an Apoſtle (ſee note on Gal: 2. 2.) Now that Apoſtles are meant by theſe living creatures, and alſo who thoſe four Apoſtles were, may appear by comparing this councell or judicature here repreſented, with the Councell of Jeruſalem, Act. 15. There it is certain that the Biſhop James preſided, v. 13. together with the Elders or Biſhops of Judea, v. 6. and then beſides, and before theſe Elders are mentioned Ἀπόστολοι the Apoſtles, v. 2. 4. 6. and Peter is one of them v. 6. and (though not there named) John alſo, Gal: 2. 9. (his brother James, that was wont to be there, being before this put to death, Act. 12. 2.) And ſo there are two of them, and why may not Paul and Barnabas (ſeparated before that time to Apoſtolacy c. 13. 2.) certainly preſent in this Councell, be the other two? That any other Apoſtle was then there, doth not appear, and 'tis evident that theſe four were, and from them, and the Elders joyntly, are theſe decrees ſent to the Churches of Syria, and Cilicia, v. 23. The learned H. Grotius, I perceive, hath fallen very neer upon this conjecture, onely he hath placed James the brother of the Lord (i.e. the Biſhop himſelf, which cannot be imagined) in ſtead of John, and Matthew in ſtead of Barnabas, upon no other reaſon, but becauſe Matthew is found to have continued long in Judea. But referring the matter, as the repreſentation here doth, to a Councell at Jeruſalem, it will be moſt fit to pitch on thoſe four, who were (in that one Scripture-Councell) there preſent. And if it be objected that Paul and Barnabas were ſent thither from Antioch at this time, and therefore may not ſeem ſo properly to belong to that place, to that I anſwer, 1. That thoſe two being by the holy Ghoſt's appointment ſeparated to be Apoſtles, they were not affixt to any Dioceſe, or Province (as ordinary Biſhops were) but had an unlimited juriſdiction, like other Apoſtles, and conſequently had as much to doe at Jeruſalem, to which, as at Antioch, from which they were ſent. Secondly, that Jeruſalem being the place, from whence the Goſpel firſt went out, and began to be preached, and the faith being from thence ſent out to all other Churches, it was very reaſonable, that all other Churches, at that time eſpecially, whilſt the Apoſtles reſided there, ſhould look upon that, as the chief mother city of all Chriſtians, And in that reſpect, although Antioch was the Metropolis of Syria, and that which had the third place of all the world that was under the Roman power (ἡ μητρόπολις ἐστὶ τῆς Συρίας, τρίτον ἀξιώματος τῆς ὑπὸ Ῥωμαίοις οἰκουμένης ἔχουσα τόπον, ſaith Joſephus de bell: Jud. l. γ'. c. γ'.) yet it may truly be ſaid of Jeruſalem at that time, that it was the Metropolis of that Metropolis, and accordingly 'tis the affirmation of Agrippa, in Philo, concerning Jeruſalem, Μητρόπολις ἡ οὐ μιᾶς χώρας Ἰουδαίας, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν πλείστων, διὰ τὰς ἀποικίας ἃς ἐπεμψεν οἰκήτορας μὲ ὁμόρους Αἰγύπτου, Φοινίκης, Συρίας τῆς τε ἄλλης, καὶ Κοίλης διεσπαρμένας, οἷς δὲ καὶ τὰς πόρρω διωκισμένας, Παμφυλίας, Κιλικίας &c. It is the Metropolis not only of one Province or Region, Judea, but alſo of moſt others, becauſe of the Colonies which it ſent out, to Ægypt, Phœnicia, Syria, and Cœloſyria, and to ſome farther removed, Pamphylia, Cilicia &c. Which being ſuppoſed, and this queſtion being ſent from Antioch, the Metropolis of Syria, there is no reaſon, but they that brought it, being themſelves not Meſſengers, but ſolemnly Apoſtles equal to any others, (though they came later in) and being as able to ſpeak from their own knowledge to the point in hand, as any, and ſo ſpeaking at large, Act. 15. 12. ſhould be reckoned together with thoſe other two Apoſtles, that before were there, and conſidered in the ſame capacity with them, And then ſuppoſing, as I now doe, that this repreſentation here is copied out from that Councel of Jeruſalem, which alone is mention'd in the ſtory of the Scripture, there will be ſmall doubt, but theſe are two of the living creatures here mentioned.

h. Τετραπρόσωπα Of theſe four likeneſſes here, 'tis firſt obſervable from the Rabbins, Aben Ezra &c. on Num. 2. that they were thoſe that made the four Standards of Iſrael, viz. the likeneſſe of a Lyon, in the Campe of Judah, of a Man in the Campe of Reuben, of an Oxe in the Camp of Ephraim, of an Eagle in the Camp of Dan, and accordingly חַיּוֹתֶיךָ rendred by the Septuagint τὰ ζῶά σου, thy living creatures Pſ. 68. 10. are ſaid to be thoſe enſignes or ſtandards in their Camps, but by us rendred [thy congregations] ſee A. Maſius on Joſhua c. 6. 9. Secondly it is evident that theſe four reſemblances are the ſame that are ſet down Ezech: 1. 10. All the difference is that here is μόσχος a calf, which is not there, but (as in Numbers before) an oxe in ſtead of it. But that will be eaſily ſalved. For in the Septuagint ταῦρος, βοῦς, μόσχος, bull, oxe, calf, ſignifie the ſame thing, See S^t. Auguſtine Queſt: l. 2. qu. 25. vitulos appellant Ægyptii grandes boves, ut nos Pœni pullos gallinas cujuſlibet ætatis. The Ægyptians call great oxen calves, &c. So πῶλος is uſed for an horſe or mare, which literally notes, a foale, and puella, a little wench, for a woman great with childe, Faſt: 2. and Horat: Od: l. 3. od. 22. and many the like. In that place of Ezechiel 'tis certain, that the Cherubims, or Angels, that attend on God, are ſignified, And ſo here, ſuppoſing him that ſits on the throne, to be God, theſe in the midſt and round about the throne, muſt needs be the Μόσχος the Angels alſo. But becauſe God is here repreſented in this viſion by the Biſhop of Jeruſalem ſitting in councell, with the four and twenty Elders, or Biſhops of Judæa on ſo many Chaires, or ſeats, on each ſide of him, this reſemblance in proportion muſt be held, for theſe four living creatures alſo, to ſignifie as was ſaid, thoſe four Apoſtles in this honourable relation, as the ſtandard-bearers of the Chriſtian Iſrael, they that thus travailed to plant, and defend, and contend for the Chriſtian faith over all Judæa, and in other cities, where the Jews were, and, as long as they would endure to hear it, not departing to the Gentiles, but being ſo rejected by them and perſecuted, they are now fit to be next to God about this throne, for the judging of the Jewes. And that which ſome learned Jewes have obſerved to be the meaning of thoſe hieroglyphickes (thoſe four likeneſſes on the ſtandards) all together, will here be applicable; There is little ſenſe in that of Aben-ezra, that the man was in Ruben's ſtandard, becauſe he found Mandrakes, &c. or in that of the Talmudiſts, that there are foure proud creatures in the world, the Lyon among wilde beaſts, &c. All which are vaine and ridiculous. And the account which Photius gives of this matter, Epiſt. 157. is little better. The moſt ſenſible explication of the hieroglyphick given by them is, that by the ſlowneſs of the Oxe, the anger of the Lyon, the ſwiftneſs of the Eagle, and the humanity, mercy, kindneſs of the Man is meant the repreſentation of God, as he was at firſt towards the fathers in the wilderneſs, and to their poſterity ever after, and even now, when he comes to execute vengeance on them, moſt remarkably, [ſlow to anger and ſwift to mercy,] The ſame in effect, which is attributed to God by Joel, when he is conſidered in this very buſineſſe of puniſhing this people, in the great and terrible day of the Lord, Joel 2. 13. the ſubject of this enſuing viſion. As for the truth of that which is thus ſuppoſed to be repreſented by it (viz. the great patience and μακροθυμία of God, expreſt in the inflicting of theſe his judgements on the obdurate Jewes, and the wonderfull mercy in delivering the penitent believers) I ſhall onely tranſcribe one paſſage from Euſebius, being his obſervation (after the ſetting down of the ſtory) to this very purpoſe Ταῦτα δ' ἂν εἴη δίκαιον ἐπιθεῖναι, ἃ γένοιτ' ἂν παρατείνειν φιλανθρωπίας τῆς παραγαθυνούσης &c. It is but juſtice to adde the mention of that which will ſet before mens eyes the great mercy of the all-gracious providence of God, which forty yeares after their crucifying of Chriſt deferred the deſtroying of them, in which time, ſaith he, many Chriſtians, Apoſtles, and others (James the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, &c.) being then alive and among them, ἦσαν ὥσπερ ὀχυρώματον περίμετρον τῷ τόπῳ, were as a ſtrong hedge or wall to the place, and the θεία ἐπισκοπὴ ſaith he, God's viſitation, did yet endure with much patience (μακροθυμοῦσα the very word compounded of the two things ſignified by the Oxe and Lyon, the ſlowneſs or μακρότης of the Oxe, and the θύμος of the Lyon) οἱ ἄχρι πολλοῦ δυνηθῶσιν, ἐφ' οἷς ἐδρῶσιν, μεταγνόντες, συγγνώμης καὶ σωτηρίας τυχεῖν, if ſo be at length repenting of what they had done they might ſo obtain pardon and deliverance; where as the pardon and deliverance are the thing figured by the mercy of the Man, ſo are the [ἐὰν ἄχρι πολλοῦ, if ſo be at length] anſwerable to the (Eagle-like) ſwiftneſs to it; whenſoever they repent, he inſtantly pardons. As for any more particular application of theſe four likeneſſes to the perſons of thoſe four Apoſtles, Peter, John, Paul, and Barnabas, as that Peter ſhould be the Lyon, both in reſpect of his fervour and fiery zeal, generally obſerved in him (notwithſtanding his fall) and in reſpect of his primacy, πρῶτος Σίμων firſt Simon in the Goſpell, John the Eagle, in reſpect of his high ſpeculations about the divinity of Chriſt, in his Goſpell, Paul the Oxe in reſpect of his labour more abundant then they all, and Barnabas the Man, in reſpect of his title of humanity, by which his name is interpreted, ſonne of conſolation, I ſhall not any farther inſiſt on them, becauſe they are but conjecturall.

In this verſe (which hath in it ſome difficulty of conſtruction) it is firſt evident, that the phraſe [full of eyes] belongs to the living creatures, and not to the wings, for ſo the Greek γέμοντα full] concludes, which agreeth with ζῶα creatures, but cannot with πτέρυγας wings, and ſo before it had been v. 6. τέσσαρα ζῶα γέμοντα ὀφθαλμοὺς four living creatures full of eyes; and ſo it appears by the uſe of the wings, to cover the face and ſecret parts, and to flie, Which cannot be applied to the circuit or ambience. Next, if the Greek be conſulted, it will be alſo as clear, that the [κυκλόθεν καὶ ἔσωθεν round about, and within] are not ſo to be divided, as in our ordinary tranſlation they are, the former joyned with the ſix wings (ſix wings round about them) and the latter to the eyes (full of eyes within) but are both together to be joyned with the [full of eyes] κυκλόθεν καὶ ἔσωθεν γέμοντα ὀφθαλμοὺς about and within full of eyes; What is meant by κυκλόθεν and ἔσωθεν round about and within] may be reſolved by ver. 6. where the ſame thing is expreſt by other words, there it is full of eyes ἔμπροσθεν καὶ ὄπισθεν, before and behind, here round about, and within. The way of reconciling theſe diſtant phraſes, is, I conceive, by conſidering the two parts of a ſuperficies, the convex, or ambient part, i. e. the circumference, and the concave or inner part; Theſe two we know oppoſed one to the other, and are fitly expreſt by either of theſe two pairs, the outer or ambient by κυκλόθεν round about, the inner or concave, by ἔσωθεν within, and ſo again (being here applied to living creatures with their faces toward us) the ambient ſuperficies by ὄπισθεν behind, or the back parts, and the inner ſuperficies by ἔμπροσθεν before, the back parts of ſuch creatures, being moſt properly the convex, and the foreparts (eſpecially when they have wings, and thoſe wings make a kind of half circle) being the concave ſuperficies. And ſo by this account as ἔμπροσθεν before] ver. 6. and ἔσωθεν within] here, are all one, ſo muſt κυκλόθεν about] here, and ὄπισθεν behind, or on the back] there, be all one alſo. And accordingly it may be obſerved that ch. 5. 1. ἔσωθεν within] is oppoſed to ὄπισθεν the back parts, as here to κυκλόθεν about, which makes it conſequent that ὄπισθεν the back part] and κυκλόθεν about] ſhould be all one, as now we ſet them. What is denoted by theſe two ſorts of eyes, as they are applied to the Apoſtles, may perhaps be thus beſt reſolved, the eyes before, are an expreſſion of their foreſight, or prophetick Spirit, the eyes behind thoſe that look back to the Old Teſtament, and by the faculty of interpreting the prophecies and types, are furniſhed with a great means of conviction to the Jewes to whom they were to preach, in ſhewing them Chriſt in Moſes and the Prophets own'd by them. The not obſerving the meaning of ἔσωθεν within] as it is here all one with before] ver. 6. hath made others gueſſe, that their inward gifts may be meant by that, and the outward expreſſions and exerciſes of them by κυκλόθεν round about. But that notion cannot be applied to [before, and behind] ver. 6. and therefore cannot reaſonably be thought to have place here. Moſes had foretold, that a Prophet ſhould be raiſed up, i. e. the Meſſias, and they that heard not him, ſhould be cut off. and this the Apoſtles underſtood to be the preſent caſe of the Jewes, ſaw this by their eyes behind them, and ſo by the many other paſſages in the Prophets to this ſame purpoſe; And beſides they had many revelations now to this matter, and thoſe are their eyes before, and accordingly whereſoever they come, they warn all of this approaching deſtruction.

* mighty Angel

2. And I ſaw a * ſtrong Angel proclaiming with a loud voice, Who is worthy to open the book, and to looſe the ſeals thereof?] 2. And I ſaw one of the Angels, of ſpecial dignity among them, making proclamation with a loud voice, in theſe words, Who is able to unlooſe the ſeals of this book, and ſo to open it, to reveal to us what is contained in it?

3. And no man in heaven, nor in earth, nor under the earth, was able to open the book, neither to look thereon.] 3. And, it ſeems, no creature in the world was able to doe it, for upon this proclamation to all, none pretended to it.

† lamented greatly in Anno mundi

4. And I † wept much, becauſe no man was found worthy to open and to read the book, neither to look thereon.] 4. And my deſire to know cauſed me to be much concerned and grieved at this, and ſo to make my complaint thereof.

5. And one of the Elders ſaith unto me, Weep not, behold the Lyon of the tribe of Judah, the root of David, hath prevailed to open the book, and to looſe the ſeven ſeals thereof.] 5. And one of the Elders ch. 4. 4. that was in one of the thrones, one of them that ſate with God in judgement, comforted me, and told me that Chriſt, known by thoſe two titles of the Lyon of the tribe of Judah, Gen. 49. 9. and the root of Jeſſe, Iſa. 11. 1. having, by his voluntary ſuffering of death, received this reward from his Father, to have all power given to him at his reſurrection, and ſo, from a ſlaughtered Lamb, being turned into a roaring devouring Lyon, had this privilege among others beſtowed on him by his Father, to reveal, yea and to execute the decrees contained in theſe volumes.

* living creatures † ſent into all the land

6. And I beheld, and lo, in the midſt of the throne, and of the four * beaſts, and in the midſt of the Elders, ſtood a lamb, as it had been ſlain, having ſeven horns and ſeven eyes, which are the ſeven ſpirits of God, † ſent forth into all the earth.] 6. This was farther exemplified to me, for I looked and ſaw, what I had not ſeen before, a Lamb bloody, with wounds viſible in him, as one that had been butchered, Chriſt crucified and riſen from the dead, and ſo indued both with power to ſubdue his enemies (fitly expreſt by this ſtyle of horns, ſee Lu. 1. 11. and ſo uſed here ch. 17. 3.) and with all knowledge and wiſdome to order it fitly, having inſtruments to execute his will, preſent, and ready preſt at his ſervice, and alſo officers (Angels ch. 4. 5. & Zach. 4. 10) to viſit, and give him account of all that was done in Judæa and elſwhere, the perſecutions which the Jewes brought upon the Chriſtians.

7. And he came and took the book out of the right hand of him that ſate upon the throne.] 7. And this Lamb, Chriſt, came & took the book out of God's hand, i. e. received power from God, as the reward of his ſufferings, to reveal, and make known, and then to execute on that people thoſe heavy judgments, contained in thoſe rolls.

* living creatures

8. And when he had taken the book, the four * beaſts, and four and twenty Elders fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them harps and golden vials full of odours, which are the * prayers of ſaints.] 8. And when this power was given to him, this being the inſtating him in that royal authority next to God himſelf (i. e. ſetting him on the throne of judgment, called ſitting at God's right hand, or reigning till he brought all his enemies under his feet) the four living creatures, by which the four Apoſtles were repreſented, ch 4 6. and the Elders that (ch. 4. 4.) ſat on the four and twenty thrones about the Judge, gave all acknowledgments of ſupreme power to Chriſt, and every one praiſed and magnified God in theſe approaching judgments of his, and preſented to him, beſide their own lauds, the thankſgivings of all the believers then living, who had been perſecuted, and denied the liberty of their Chriſtian profeſſion and aſſemblies (2 Theſſ. 2. 1.) by the malice of the Jewes, but now by their approaching deſtruction were likely to be reſcued from their preſſures to a flouriſhing condition of quiet for ſome ſpace. c.

9. And they ſung a new ſong, ſaying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the ſeals thereof, for thou waſt ſlain, and haſt redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every † kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation, 9, 10. And in their names, and their own, they ſang praiſes to him, acknowledging this dignity and regal power to be moſt worthily inſtated on him, as a reward of his ſufferings, by which he overcame Satan, and redeemed all faithfull beleivers, leivers, not onely out of the power of ſin and hell, but alſo of their perſecutors on earth, bringing them to quiet halcyonian daies, giving them tranquillity, and liberty to aſſemble freely to his ſervice, as a choice peculiar people of his (ſee note on ch.1. d.) and accordingly concluding that this royal benefit they ſhould now enjoy, through this act of vengeance (on Chriſt's, and the Chriſtians enemies, the obdurate Jewes) which was here undertaken by him, ver. 6.

11. And I looked, and behold all the Angels of heaven in infinite multitudes attending on God, joyned with the Apoſtles and Biſhops in giving praiſes unto him.

11. And I beheld, and I heard the voice of many Angels round about the throne and the * beaſts and the Elders, and the number of them was ten thouſand times ten thouſand, and thouſands of thouſands,] * living creatures

12. And all ſaid with a loud voice, All power &c. are moſt worthily attributed to Chriſt as a reward of his crucifixion, All this dignity to himſelf and advantages to beleivers are a juſt reward of his ſufferings, by which he hath dearly bought them.

12. Saying with a loud voice, Worthy is the Lamb that was ſlain, to receive power, and riches, and wiſdome, and ſtrength, and honour, and glory, and bleſſing.]

13. And all other creatures in the world made the ſame acknowledgment (noting thoſe judgments that ſhould now fall on the Jewes (as they were moſt juſt, ſo alſo) to be moſt ſeaſonable, and infinitely advantageous to his people, who ſhould be reſcued by that means.)

13. And every creature, which is in heaven, and on the earth and under the earth, and ſuch as are in the ſea, and all that are in them, heard I ſaying, Bleſſing, honour, glory and power be unto him that ſitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever.]

14. And a general adoration was paid unto Chriſt as unto God himſelf, noting this puniſhment of the Jewes to be a juſt act of divine revenge on their crucifying of Chriſt, who being by his divine power raiſed from the dead, by the ſame deſtroyeth them, and preſerveth his perſecuted diſciples.

14. And the four * beaſts ſaid, Amen. And the four and twenty Elders fell down, and worſhipped him that liveth forever.] † living creatures

Notes on Chap. V.

a. Ἐπὶ τὴν δεξιὰν

That ἐπὶ τ δεξιὰν] ſignifies not [upon] but [in the right hand of God] may appear by v.7. where it is ſaid to be taken ἐκ τ δεξιᾶς, out of his hand, which ſuppoſeth it formerly to be in it. And though this be not the ordinary notation of the Greek ἐπὶ, (and therefore I ſee it is conceived by ſome, that the book was here brought, and layd by him, ἐπὶ τ δεξιὰν, on his right hand) yet the promiſcuous uſe of prepoſitions in theſe books, (anſwerable to the Hebrews, whoſe prepoſitions are uſed more looſly, and largely) will give a full anſwer to this. Now this is no nice conſideration, but that which is of uſe to explain that which follows, of the Lambs taking the book out of the hand of God the Father. For this book containing in it the decrees of vengeance and judgment upon the enemies of God, the crucifiers of Chriſt and perſecutors of the Chriſtian faith, and Profeſſors, and this power being by the reſurrection of Chriſt ſeated, and inſtated on Chriſt, as a reward of his ſufferings, and conſequently the execution of theſe decrees of God put into the hand of the Son, whoſe coming and kingdome it is thence ſo often called, and this power being not again delivered up into the Fathers hands till the end of the world, all this is here fitly, and fully expreſt by the Lambs taking the book out of the right hand of God the father, (and would not ſo commodiouſly be repreſented, if the book had layn by him, and had not been in his hand) and by his looſing the ſeals, and opening the book, i.e. bringing forth thoſe judgments of God, which lay folded up in his decrees, but were now to be remarkeably executed by Chriſt.

Λαβὼν τὸ βιβλίον ἐκ τ δεξιᾶς

b. γεγραμμένον ἔσωθεν καὶ ὄπισθεν

It may here be thought probable of this book, which is ſaid to be γεγραμμένον ἔσωθεν καὶ ὄπισθεν ἐσφραγισμένον] that by putting a comma after ἔσωθεν within] it ſhould thus be rendred, written within, and ſealed upon the back, and ſo that the ſeven ſeals were all on the outſide of the book. But beſides that the ordinary punctation, putting the comma after ὄπισθεν on the back] reſiſts this, there be many other circumſtances clear the other to be the meaning, that the book, or roll was written within and on the back ſide, by within] meaning the inner concave ſuperficies of the roll, and by the back ſide] the convex, which is outermoſt in rolling up, (ſee ch. 4. note i.) As 1. that in the proceſſe, it appears that the opening of every ſingle ſeal brings forth ſome repreſentation, which could not be, if all the ſeals were on the back ſide, for then they muſt all be open'd, before any part of the book could be diſcovered, and therefore it muſt be ſuppoſed, that the main book, or roll had ſeven rolls in it, and each of them ſealed. 2*dly*, The phraſe in this place referres to the like in Ezekiel, c.2.10. where a long ſucceſſion of calamities is repreſented by a roll written within and without, i.e. a roll written within throughout, and on the back ſide a great way down, yet leaving enough in the lower part of the back ſide to wrap up all that was written, and keep it from being ſeen, And ſo for ſealing alſo. And that is perfectly appliable to the phraſe here written within, and on the back ſide] but ſo, as there ſhould be void ſpace left, to cover all, and to ſeal up all. 3*dly*, Becauſe the word ὄπισθεν on the back ſide] here, being all one with without] in Ezekiel, and ſo fitly denoting not the out ſide of the roll, when it was made up, or that part of the outſide, which appeared then, but the back ſide of the roll written on a good way, when the inſide or foreſide was all written on, This is fitly appliable to the matter here foretold, at the opening of theſe ſeals, a long ſeries of calamities, which ſhould fall upon this people, (juſt as in Ezekiel it was) for that is the reaſon why a roll at any time is written on the back ſide, viz: becauſe the inſide (which alone is wont to be writ on) will not contain all that belongs to it. Scriptus & à tergo] being the expreſſion for a very long roll, or book, that it is written on the back ſide alſo.

c. Θυμιάματα αἱ προσευχαὶ τ ἁγίων

Who the Saints] are whoſe prayers are here mention'd, as odours, may appear v.10. where of them

them it is said, that they shall reign on the earth, i. e. that the effect of the execution of these judgments of God on the enemies of Christianity, noted by the Lambs opening the book (note a) should be this, that the Christians should thereby have a peaceable being upon earth, to assemble and serve Christ, (see c. 1. note d.) By this it is evident, that the Saints] here, are the Christian people upon earth, and not the Saints which reign in heaven. And this also is agreeable to the notion of odours, by which their prayers are expresst, For those referre to the incense, that the Priests were wont to offer in the Sanctuary, whilest the people pray'd without, Lu. 1. 10. and their prayers supposed to go up with that incense to heaven. By this it also appears that the four living creatures, and four and twenty Elders, which have here the vials in their hands, as also the harps, the one to denote the prayers, the other the praises of the Christians, are the Apostles and Bishops of Judea, (as in the laying of the scene appeared, c. 4. note d. and g.) whose office it was to present the prayers and praises of the Christians to God, and so by all these together, the Christian, persecuted Church of Judea, (and by consent with them, all other Christians over the world) are represented here, as those that had now their prayers heard, and those by the destruction of their persecuters, turned into praises.

CHAP. VI.

Paraphrase.

1. AND I saw when the Lamb opened * one of the seals, and I heard † as it were the noise of thunder, one of the four beasts saying, Come and see,]

1. And as the Lamb, i. e. Christ, opened the first seal, which closed the first roll, I looked, and the first of those four living creatures called aloud to me, or in such a kind of voice, as is wont to come out of thunder, when a voice is heard from heaven (see note on Act. 9. 6.) saying, Come and see, or, Here is a more full relation, and prediction of those things, which Christ had foretold concerning the Jews, Mat. 24. (set down here in this chapter in grosse, and more particularly as they have their execution, in the following chapters.)

2. And I saw, and behold a white horse, and he that sate on him had a bow, and a crown was given unto him, and he went forth conquering, and to conquer.]

2. And as I looke, me thought, I saw a white horse, and one sitting thereon, i. e. an Angel representing Jesus Christ (see c 19. 11.) now in another posture then that in which he had been, c. 5. 6. There he was a Lamb slain, now he is a King riding in pomp, (the white horse noting his glory) but this a spiritual King, the horse that he rides on, being mystically the Gospel, in respect of the purity and gloriousnesse, or divinity of its doctrine; And this horse-man, or Prince, the Lord Christ, had a bow in his hand, i. e. menaces and terrors held out against his enemies, before they be really inflicted on them, as the bow is first held in the hand, then the arrow prepared upon the string, before it be shot out at them; and he had a crown given to him, as to one now instated, and installed in his royal office, and his businesse at the present was, that which was primarily proper to the white horse, the Gospel, to be the power of God to salvation to them that beleive, to convert the Jews to the faith, and so to conquer, and melt his crucifiers, and then for the future (as the Gospel is, by consequence, the savour of death unto death) to bring down, or destroy the obdurate, (these two being generally the ways of Christ's conquering in this book) and as the Jews, so after, the Romans, by converting some, and destroying others, conquering and breaking the infidelity of some, and then bringing down and destroying the impenitent.

3. And when he had opened the second seal, I heard the second * beast say, Come and see.]

3. And when he had opened the second seal, which had the second roll under it, the second of the living creatures called to me to come, and behold what was represented there.

4. And there went out another horse that was red, and power was given to him that sate thereon, to take peace from the † earth, and that they [a] should kill one another, and there was given unto him a great sword.]

4. And I looked & saw another horse red, or of blood-colour, and an Angel (as minister of God's judgements) sate upon him, and of him it was told me, that he had power given him to embroyl the land of Judæa (see c. 7. 1. 9.) with war, thereby to pour out a great deal of blood, and to that purpose, me thought he had a sword put into his hand, a presignification of the slaughters that should be committed by the Jews one upon another, see Mat. 24. 7. a.

5. And when he had opened the third seal, I heard the third * beast say, Come and see. And I beheld, and lo a black horse, and he that sate on him had a pair of balances in his hand.]

5. And when he opened the third seal, which had the third roll under it, the third of the living creatures called to me, to come and see what was in that roll, and it was a third horse, black and foul to look on, and by that was signified a sore famine (which discolours the skin of men, and makes them look black, and sad, and dismall) and to signifie this, he that was on this horses back, the Angel that was executioner of this judgement, had a ballance in his hand, to weigh corn, (as 'tis usual in time of scarcity, or approaching famine, when bread is distributed out to every one by weight, no more than is thought necessary to life.)

6. And I heard a voice in the midst of the four † beasts, say, * A [b] measure of wheat for a peny, and three measures of barley for a peny, and † see thou hurt not the oyl and the wine.]

6. And from the midst of the four living creatures, there proceeded a voice, as the prediction of some prophet, saying, the scarcity of corn is such, that the price of a mans days-labour will buy no more, than is wont to be thought sufficient for a mans food for a day, and if he eat that all himself, there is nothing left to provide for wife and children, much lesse for cloaths for all of them, and so in proportion the price of barley; such scarcity there is of the necessaries of life for men and cattel, whereas of oyl and wine, (of which there is no necessity, the first might wholly be spared, and is of no use in such times of extreme dearth, and the want of the other might competently be supplyed by water) there was store enough, the scarcity was to fall heavy upon the necessaries of life, but not on the superfluities, which is an expression of the heavinesse, not lightnesse, or supportablenesse of it. b.

7. And upon the opening of the fourth ſeal, wherewith the fourth roll was ſealed up, the fourth living creature called to me to come and ſee the repreſentation contained in it.

7. And when he had opened the fourth ſeal, I heard the voice of the fourth * beaſt ſay, Come and ſee.]

* living creature

c. d. 8. And it was a pale horſe, and a rider thereon, ſignifying great death or mortality, whether by extraordinary ways of death, the ſword, and famine, or by that ordinary known way of peſtilence, following (as ordinarily it doth) upon thoſe two and ſweeping away many. And theſe three horſes, in the three laſt rolls, i.e. ſword, famine, and death, or peſtilence, (all named together in this matter, Mat. 24. 7.) ſhould deſtroy the fourth part of the land of Judæa, men and beaſts, or elſe ſhould make ſuch a vaſtation, that the wild beaſts ſhould encreaſe, and bee too ſtrong for the inhabitants there. (And all this but a fore-runner of the far greater deſtructions, that ſhould afterwards be wrought among them at the ſiege of Titus.)

8. And I looked, and behold, a pale horſe, and his name that ſate on him was ‹ Death, and † hell followed with him, and power was given [d] unto them * over the fourth part of the earth, to kill with the ſword, and with hunger, and with death, and † with the beaſts of the earth.]

e. 9, 10. And upon the opening of the fifth ſeal, I ſaw in the lower part of the Sanctuary, beneath the altar of incenſe, the ſouls of the Martyrs, (ſee c. 7. 9. 14.) theirs, like that of Abel, called to Chriſt as a righteous and faithful Judge, for judgement upon thoſe wicked men, who were guilty of all the blood of all the prophets (Mat. 23. 35.) even as far as to Chriſt himſelf, and his Apoſtles, and other Chriſtians afterwards, whom they perſecuted alſo, and cauſed many to be put to death, Luke 21. 12.

9. And when he had opened the fifth ſeal, I ſaw * * under the altar the ſouls of them that were ſlain for the word of God, and for the teſtimony which † they held.

11. And this crying of their blood for inſtant juſtice was at the preſent anſwered with giving them white robes, acknowledgements of their conſtancy, and perſeverance in ſuffering, and conſequently a preſent ſtate of bliſſeful reward, this revenge of their blood being for a while, for ſome few years deferred, till all the blood-guiltineſſe of theſe Jews ſhould be filled up, all the other Martyrs ſlain, James the Biſhop of Jeruſalem &c. and then ſhould the vengeance come on theſe impenitent obdurate perſecuters, ſee c. 7. 9, 10, &c.

11. And white robes were given unto every one of them, and it was ſaid unto them, that they ſhould reſt yet for a little ſeaſon, until their fellow-ſervants alſo, and their brethren, which ſhould be killed as they were, ſhould be fulfilled.]

f. g. 12. And at the opening of the ſixt ſeal, in that roll, there was a repreſentation of Eclipſes of Sun and Moon, &c. figuratively to expreſſe great deſtructions, Ezek. 32. 7. Iſ. 13. 10. Joel 2. 10. & 31. & c. 3. 15.

12. And I beheld, when he had opened the ſixt ſeal, and lo there was a [f] great earthquake, [g] and the Sun became black as ſackcloth of hair, and the Moon became as blood;]

13. Notes on Chap. VI.

a. Ἀποκάλυψις ἑπτάξυλος

The great inteſtine broils, among the Jewes, thoſe eſpecially of the Seditious, and the Zelots are at large ſet down by Joſephus l. 4. and l. 5. de Bell: Jud: ſo great, ſaith he, that Veſpaſian on purpoſe deferred the ſiege of Jeruſalem, that they might more eaſily be deſtroyed by their own, than by the Roman's ſwords, ſee Lu. 21. 10. Thus about the twelfth of Nero, when Florus crucified (beſide great multitudes of the ordinary ſort) μυρίους ὅσους τῶν Ἰουδαίων πεπραμένων, ſaith Euſebius out of Joſephus, many myriads of the moſt honourable among the Jewes, there was, ſaith he, firſt in Caſarea, then in all Syria, ſuch a diſorder, and δεινὸν πόλεμον, terrible tumult of thoſe that dwelt in the countrey, againſt thoſe that inhabited the cities, invading and laying them waſt in a moſt hoſtile hoſtile manner, that one might ſee whole cities full of unburied carcaſſes, old men & children thrown dead together, women ſhamelesly uncovered, καὶ ὅλην τὴν ἐπαρχίαν μεστὴν ἀδιηγήτων συμφορῶν, the whole Province full of inexpreſſible calamities, And the obſervation is once for all, Eccl: Hiſt: l.2.c 6. that στάσεις καὶ πόλεμοι καὶ κατ' ἀλλήλων μάχαιραι, ſeditions, and warres, and miſchievous projects one upon the neck of another, never left the city, and all Judæa, till at laſt the ſiege came upon them. And at that very time, when it came, three factions there were on foot among them, under three commanders, Eleazar, John, and Simon, And though Tacitus ſay that the approach of their enemy gave them peace one with another, yet Joſephus, that was an eye-witneſſe, relates it much otherwiſe, only that the three factions εἰς δύο μερὰς ἔστησαν, were divided into two, by the oppreſſion of the third, John upon the day of unleavened bread ſending ſome into the Temple, under pretenſe of ſacrificing, which kill'd Eleazar and butcher'd his party, and ſeiſed upon the Temple, where before Eleazar and his zelots had fortified themſelves. And however, though the ſeditious joyn'd a while to repell the enemy, yet they ſoon returned to their former feuds, and one faction fighting againſt the other, the weight, and ſmart of both fell upon the communalty, who were plunder'd by each of them. More of theſe civil combuſtions, and the fearfull effects of them, we read of, moſt notably in the time of the ſiege, when the ſcarcity began to pinch the beſieged, then the στάσεις broke into all houſes, tormented the poſſeſſors to bring out their proviſion. When mothers, † ſaith he, ſnatcht victuals out of their babes mouthes, in came the ſeditious, and ſnatcht it out of theirs, and catching up the children, which held faſt the bits in their mouthes, and would not let them goe, they daſht them againſt the ground. Thoſe that, to prevent them, eat up what they had, before they could come to them, they uſed with moſt horrid cruelties, ὡς ἀδικούμενοι, taking themſelves to be injured by them, who thus robb'd them of their prey: And thoſe that were ready to die through the famine, they would yet ſearch more ſtrictly, μὴ ὑπὸ κόλπου ἔχων ξύλου κρύπτοιτο ἢ δανάλιον, leſt they ſhould have ſome food in their boſome, and only make as if they were famiſht, when they were not, and then δεινὰ βασάνων εἴδη πρὸς εὑρεσιν ἐφεύρον τροφῆς, horrible waies of torment did they uſe to find out food. And ſo true is that, which is here ſaid, of their killing one another, that, ſaith he, πολλοὶ τῶν ἐρρωμένων ζώντας διήλασαν διὰ πλέω τῶν τεθνηκότων, they would run through thoſe that lay alive (but ready to faint) before them, to trie their weapons, And the horridneſſes of theſe practiſes of theirs upon one another was ſuch, ſaith he, that if the Romans had delayed the work, the earth would have ſwallowed them up, or fire and brimſtone would have fallen from heaven on them, as on Sodome. And though the whole faction of the Zelots were kill'd by Titus in the Temple (a part of which they fortified and defended) yet ſtill after that, even to Adrian's time, we find mention of their frequent tumults, and butcherings of one another. But the particulars which are here in this place intimated, and the ſame *Mat.*24.6,7. ſeem to be earlier than theſe, as being both here and there ſet before the famines, and peſtilences, and earthquakes, all which, as they are both there, and here mentioned, are but ἀρχαὶ ὠδίνων the beginnings of their enſuing calamities, the ſignes and forerunners of them. And many ſuch ſlaughters there then were in the latter end of Claudius, and throughout Nero's reign, cauſed by ſeditions, and tumults, from time to time ſucceeding one another, and famines in like manner conſequent to their ſeditious commotions; and ſo, as it is uncertain, ſo it matters not much, in what point of time theſe here are placed, Only for the preventing of miſtakes, we may proceed thus farre in defining of this time; that the famine here mention'd cannot be that foretold by Agabus, nor conſequently can the ſlaughters here mentiond be any preceding that, if what is here ſaid be by way of prophecie, For that famine foretold by Agabus came to paſſe in the ſecond year of Claudius, which was before S. John's baniſhment can be imagin'd to be; For that S. John was at Jeruſalem about the ſixt of Claudius appears by Paul's finding him there, Gal. 2. 9. at his coming up with Barnabas from Antioch to the Councel there, And that Claudius did not baniſh the Jewes from Rome, Πρωσάτους ἰλλυδος till after this, appears Act. 18. where upon that occaſion, Aquila was but newly come from Rome, v.2. at the time of Paul's being come from Athens to Corinth, And there muſt be ſome competent time intervening betwixt the Councel and this; For after he ſeparated from Barnabas, his buſineſſe was in Syria, Cilicia, Derbe, Lyſtra, Phrygia, Galatia, Myſia, Troas, Philippi, Amphipolis, Apollonia, Theſſalonica, Beræa, and Athens; This baniſhment of the Jewes from Rome, Oroſius l. 7. c 6. relates out of Joſephus to have been about this ninth of Claudius. And that Claudius did any act againſt Chriſtians, before they were involved in that expulſion among the Jewes, we have no ground, or reaſon to affirm; But on the contrary Suetonius is clear, Claud: c.25. that he baniſhed the Jewes that followed Chriſt. Which makes it reaſonable to aſſent to the judgment of Chronologers, that in this ninth of Claudius, John was baniſht from Epheſus to Patmos, All parts of the Roman dominions doing the ſame that was done at Rome. However, that John was not ſent into Patmos before that famine, doth thus appear irrefragably, No manner of perſecution fell upon the Chriſtians from the Roman Emperor or Proconſul, or Procurator, before they were ſtirred up by the Jewes, the fountains of all the perſecutions, ſaith Tertullian cont: Gnoſt: And the Jewes ſtirred not up the Gentiles, untill by the Apoſtles turning away from them to the Gentiles, they were incenſed, and provoked, *Act.*13.46. And that was after the death of Herod Agrippa, which was in the fourth of Claudius; And therefore ſuppoſing the exile of S. John to Patmos to have been toward this end of Claudius's reigne, It is conſequent that to that time alſo, and not before, theſe mutual ſlaughters muſt belong, And of this ſort Joſephus mentions very bloody ones, when the Sicarii raged in the time of Felix, Ant: l.20. c.5. And at the end of that chapter, he adds πολὺ ἀπομάνους τῶν ἱερέων ὑπὸ ἀπορίας τροφῶν, that many of the Prieſts were in diſtreſſe, and died for want, though becauſe that famine ſeems to have been on the Prieſts only by the oppreſſion of the high Prieſts, it is not certain that that is it, which is here mention'd, but some other about that time, not particularly mentioned by him. And these slaughters wrought by these seditious persons, as they are properly parallel to the ἀρχαὶ ὠδίνων *the beginnings of pangs Mat.*24. so are they to the second horse in this vision, And presently after, the state of Judea is so related by Josephus c.ζ'. as their condition may well be represented in this vision v.8. where the power is given to them to kill upon the fourth part of the land with sword, and hunger, and death, the Jewes never desisting from sedition, μάχης δὲ ἢ πολέμου ἔξοδον until they kindled and accended a warre. And this will be a fit season also, in which to place the crying of the souls beneath the Altar, which must be somewhat before the murther of S. James the Bishop of Jerusalem, set down after the death of Festus, (and before Albinus entred the province, c. ι'.) and said to have raised great grief and indignation in all that had any sense of justice, ὅσοι ἐδόκουν ἐπιεικεῖς ἢ κατ' ἢ πόλιν εἶναι, καὶ περὶ τοὺς νόμους ἀκριβῶς, βαρέως ἤνεγκαν ἐπὶ τούτῳ, all that were most just in the city, and exact concerning the laws, took it very ill, saith he.

b. Χοῖνιξ Chœnix is not any set measure, but hath often varied in several times, saith Waserus. Ant: Mens: l.2.c.3. and doth ordinarily signifie that proportion of wheat, which will be sufficient for one mans food for a day, So Δηνάριον is, it seems by the Gospel, *Mat.*20.2. the wages of a daies labour. And then the meaning of A chœnix for a peny] is that a man's daies-labour shall but bring him in as much bread as he daily wanteth, All other necessaries for him, and even bread for his whole family being wanting, for the chœnix was but the proportion for one person. This signifies the beginning of a famine, the dearnesse of corn, as will be discerned, if it be compared with the difference that is among us between the day-wages of a labourer, and the quantity of bread which is necessary for him, Two pence in bread being thought largely sufficient for a single man's food, when yet his ordinary wages is five, or six times as much, by which may be guest the meaning of a chœnix of wheat for a denarie, viz: two peny-worth of bread (perhaps lesse) sold for a shilling, or every thing six times as dear as ordinary, And so this whole verse, and the rider of the black horse, with the ballance in his hand, is an emblem of dearth beginning, though not yet rioting, upon them, and so is most proper to be applied to the famines in Judea, foretold by Christ, Mat. 24. 7. which yet were, none of them, comparable with those horrible straights of famine, which befell them afterward in the siege, &c. see note a.

c. Θάνατος καὶ ὁ ἅδης ἐδόθη αὐτοῖς By death here, and Hades (or ἀφανισμὸς destruction) along with it, the pestilence is most probably signified, which follows the famines immediately, Mat. 24. 7. and so here in the end of this 8th ver. (sword, famine, death.) Death sure is pestilence, and that some particular pestilence, soon after the famines forementioned. Yet will it not be amisse to observe, how properly this word (which signifies mortality in general, without defining the way of it) may be also set to denote some other of those prodigious slaughters, which after fell upon the Jewes, which could not be contained under either the sword, or famine before mentioned. Of this sort there were many, that especially of the three myriads, i.e. thirty thousand, which in a tumult, at the feast of the Passeover, were thrust, and trod to death by themselves, as they ran tumultuously out of the gates of the Temple, ὑπὸ τὰς ἐξόδους τοῦ ἱεροῦ βίᾳ ζωσθέντες, καὶ ἀλλήλους συμπατήσαντες, saith Eusebius l.2. c.23'.

d. Αὐτοῖς The αὐτοῖς them] here in the plural, seems to signifie the three last horses and their riders, and so to denote sword, and famine, and pestilence, the same that was mentioned by Christ, Mat. 24. 7. as the beginnings of their sorrow, or pangs of a farre heavier travail, which after followed, And so no doubt there was a completion of it, in such a degree, as is here spoken of, i.e. ἐπὶ τὸ τέταρτον τῆς γῆς upon the fourth part of the land, whether that signifie to the destroying one tetrarchy or fourth part of the nation, (as it is certain it fell very heavy upon Galilee) or whether to the destroying very many in several parts of the nation, so that not all, but only a fourth part of the nation were thus visited by these destructions; This latter will seem the most probable, if it be applied peculiarly to that point of time which is parallel to the beginnings of sorrow, *Mat.*24. And then the [ὑπὸ τῶν θηρίων by the beasts] if that be the right reading, will signifie the prevailing of the beasts of the field, as a token and effect of a vastation in those places, where the sword, and famine, and pestilence, had made such havock, i.e. in that fourth part of the land. But the King's MS. reads not ὑπὸ τῶν θηρίων by the beasts, but τὸ τέταρτον τῶν θηρίων, the fourth part of beasts, answerable to the fourth part of the earth] precedent, and then the meaning will be, that this destruction fell upon the cattel, as well as men, as either in warre, or famine, or pestilence it is wont to doe. This hath thus farre been said on supposition, that what is described here, belongs to the beginnings of sorrows, and not the bitter pangs themselves; As for those, they were farre more sharp, and wasting, and infinitely above this proportion. The story is full of them. At the Passeover (to shew the just judgments of God in avenging on them the death of his Son, at that very time wherein they crucified him) no lesse than three hundred thousand, which came up to that feast out of all Judea, were shut up in Jerusalem, as in a prison, in that close siege of the Romans, which made the famine so soon to rage most furiously, & this whole number being but a small proportion to the infinite multitude more of those which were in the city before, (for by Cestius's computation of the two hundred fifty five thousand, and six hundred sacrifices offered at one Passover, at the rate of ten persons to one sacrifice, the number will bee neer ten times as great as this now named, besides the unclean that were excluded the sacrifice) were all, one and other, destroyed either by the famine, or by the seditious and turbulent among themselves, killing the rich οὓς ἐπιφανεῖς δολοφονίας under pretense they would betray the city, or by the pestilence, or by the enemy (when they were taken † foraging for food, and crucified, great multitudes of them before the city) or at last taken captive by the besiegers. So that of those that fell by the famine and sword, λιμῷ καὶ ξίφει, in Josephus de Captiv: l 6. c. 44. (as here ὑπὸ λιμοῦ καὶ ὑπὸ λοιμοῦ) he there casts up the summe to an hundred and ten myriads, myriads, i. e. eleven hundred thousand. And for † See Euseb. l. 3. c. 5. the rest of the † σεισμοὶ and λῃσταὶ, the seditious robbers and thieves, as they were by their own accused and appeached, they were all put to death by Fronto a Roman, after the taking the city, and of those that were still left, those which were tallest & handsomest, they were reserved for the triumph; Then of the rest that were above seventeen years old many were sent prisoners to the works in Ægypt, and many sent into the provinces to be destroyed in the theatres, Σιδήρῳ καὶ θηρίοις, saith he, by sword, and by wild beasts, And for all those that were under seventeen years old, they were sold for slaves, And of these alone, saith he, the number was above nine myriads, i. e. ninety thousand.

c. Θυσιαστήριον here, and ch. 8. 3. must signifie the Θυσιαστήριον altar of incense (called θυσιαστήριον τῆς θυμιάσεως, Lu. 1. 11. but properly θυμιατήριον) not of burnt-sacrifice, the whole place here represented from ch. 4. being the sanctuary within the veile, where this altar of incense stood, that other of the burnt-sacrifice standing without in the court (see note on Mat. 23. h.) and so 'tis clear by the mention of Τοὺς ὑπὸ τὸ θυσιαστήριον incense, c. 8. 3. And therefore ὑποκάτω τοῦ θυσιαστηρίου] must not be rendred under the altar (as they that conceive it the altar of burnt-sacrifice, conceive also that the souls of the martyrs doe here lie at the foot of the altar, where the blood, which is the life of living creatures, is wont to be poured out) but in the lower part of the sanctuary, beneath the altar of incense. Of this word see more in note on ch. 11. a. As for the Ψυχὰς τῶν ἐσφαγμένων souls of those that were slain] by that phrase is signified their blood, (as the soul and the life is all one, and the blood is the life, Gen. 9. 4.) and the blood of the slain] is the effusion of their blood, (as the blood of Abel) the sin of murthering them, The same is after expreſt by Ἐσφαγμένοι ἐσφαγμένοι, those that were slain, for of them in the masculine gender, and not of the ψυχαὶ in the feminine it is said, ἔκραζον λέγοντες, they cried saying, how long &c. All which signifies no more but the sin of slaying the Christians, and the vengeance that in justice from God, and by the promise of Christ, was due to it; And the whole passage seems to allude to 2 Esdr. 4. 35. where the souls of the righteous ask in their chambers, saying, How long &c. and the answer is, (as here) By measure hath he measured the times &c. and he doth not stirre them, till the said measure be fulfilled, and c. 15. 8. Behold the innocent and righteous blood crieth unto me, and the souls of the just complain continually, and therefore saith the Lord, I will surely avenge &c. And so here the great persecutions, and slaughters of the Christians wrought by the Jewes, added to their crucifying of Christ provoked God's vengeance on them, which should shortly be powred out in fury, they still going on to slay more, James the Bishop of Jerusalem (known by the name of the Just) and others, whose slaughters, by their own confession, brought down that fatal destruction upon them.

f. Σεισμοὶ Of the great earthquakes (in divers places, saith S. Luke) which were both in Asia and at Rome, see Eusebius in Chronico in the time of Nero, and Baronius, An: Chr: 68. Neronis 12. and so also of the Eclipse of the Sun; And of a starre or comet like a sword, that stood over the city, and continued a year, and of a great light, that shined about the altar, and the Temple, at nine of the night, upon the feast of unleavened bread, for half an hour together, and of meteors that were seen through all the region, and of an apparition in the clouds of chariots, and troops of armed men, encompassing the city, and many the like, see Eusebius Eccl: Hist: l. 3. c. 8. who calls them ἀναγνῶ καὶ φαντασιώδη μυρίαν ἰδεῖν τερατείαν, and τὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ κηρύγματα, prodigies manifestly foresignifying the approaching desolation, and sermons as it were of God himself, which is the meaning of the Σημεῖον, the signe of the son of man appearing in heaven, Mat. 24. 30. And among these meteors, the falling starres that are here described, v. 13, would go for no great rarity. But Arethas mentions some of the ancients, who interpret this earthquake here tropologically of Vespasian's siege of Jerusalem, and so it may well be understood, and by analogie all the rest also. See note g.

That the blackness of the Sun, and bloodiness of the Moon, and the falling of stars from heaven upon the ground, have a literal interpretation, of which they are capable, so as to note prodigies in the heavens, Eclipses, and Meteors, &c. there is no doubt. But yet here they are sure brought to signifie something else, For if these words be compared with Mat. 24. 29. to which they are perfectly parallel, it will appear that they are not a setting down the prodigies before the siege of Jerusalem, but that (that being set down v. 15.) the darkning of the Sun &c. is μετὰ after that tribulation, or pressure, All the question is, whether these here be only a general representation of slaughters and blood-shedding, which (because, when they are excessive, they may cause clouds and meteors in the aire) are by some thought to be so expreſt ordinarily in the prophets, or whether they may not signifie the falling of these judgements upon the civil and Ecclesiastical state, represented by Sun and Moon, and the whole multitude of that people signified by the stars of heaven; And the latter of these seems the more probable (see note on Mat. 24. n.) for thus in the prophets of the Old Testament it is ordinary, as when we read, for the iniquity of the people, is the land darkned, and the like, i. e. the glory and lustre of it destroyed, An eminent example, directly parallel to this, we have Isa. 34. 4. All the host of heaven shall be dissolved, and the heavens shall be rolled together as a scroll, and all their host shall fall down as the leaf falleth off from the Vine, and the falling figge from the figge-tree; And my sword shall be bathed in heaven. And all this but a representation of God's judgements upon Idumea, as in the next words it followeth, and so the host of heaven, Dan. 8. 10. is set to denote the Jewes, which being supposed, the starres that here fall, will be the common people, or multitude of that whole Nation, all expreſt distributively in the words that follow, v. 15. the Kings and great ones, and the rich, and Commanders of thousands, and the mighty, and every servant, and free man, see note on Chap. 8. c. g. Ἥλιος μέλας

That this prophecy belongs to the Jewes, hath been cleared by other evidences, and accordingly βασιλεῖς τῆς γῆς] must be translated the Kings of the Land] and signifie in this place, those that had, or assumed to themselves the greatest author- h. Βασιλεῖς τῆς γῆς rity among them, and not in any ſtricter ſenſe Kings, or Heads of the people. For that notion is not appliable to any that were at Jeruſalem at this point of time, to which this viſion refers, (ſee note i.) and proportionably muſt the μεγιστᾶνες great men denote the principal that were then in the city? And then the χιλίαρχοι are the commanders or officers in their armies the leaders of the ſeveral factions, as will appear note i. (being elſewhere uſed for Roman officers of their militia.) And then the rich men, the bond-man, and the free-man, make up all that were in Jeruſalem at this time expreſt, as 'tis the faſhion of the Scripture, by the ſeveral ſorts of them.

i. This hiding themſelves in dennes, or caves, is an expreſſion of a great fear and conſternation, and the thing that was foretold by S. Luke c. 21. 26. Men deſpairing for fear, and for the expectation of the things that were a coming on that people, and this there immediately attending the Gentiles treading down of Jeruſalem, v. 24. This makes it not ſo fit to apply it to their flying to the mountains, which was before the ſiege, or to thoſe fears that were produced by the prodigies, the forerunners of the deſtruction, ſuch as the φωνὴ ἀῤῥὰς, the promiſcuous noiſe or voice, μεταβαίνωμεν ἐντεῦθεν, Let us remove thence, which was generally thought to ſignifie the departure of God from the Temple, adytis arísque relictis, for this ſtill was before the deſtruction; But the paſſage, to which this moſt punctually relates, is that in the very time of deſtroying the city by Titus. For when the Temple was burnt, and the Prieſts hanged up, and upon an affront offered to Titus, (refuſing to relieve, or take quarter from him) the ſouldiers were permitted to plunder, and fire all. The σικάριοι or ſeditious go to the βασιλικὰ ἀνάκτορα or Palace, where many had laid up their wealth, drive out the Romans thence, kill eight thouſand of them, four thouſand Jewes, that had gotten thither for ſhelter, plundred the place, and the whole lower city, and then εἰς τὴν ἄνω πόλιν ἀνεχώρουν, retired to the upper city, Sion, the beſt fortified place, and there planted themſelves. For the taking of this, Titus was fain to uſe engines of battery, and to that end to caſt up works; And having done ſo, aſſoon as ever a piece of the wall was beaten down, of a ſudden a ſtrange fright and conſternation took them, ſome crying out that the whole wall on the Weſt was demoliſhed, others that the Romans were entred, others that they ſaw them in the Towres, and ſuch a change followed in the mindes of all their leaders, or πρέσβεις parallel to the βασιλεῖς, and δυνατοὶ, and χιλίαρχοι, Kings, and mighty men, and commanders here, that they, that were juſt now in the greateſt pride, and rage, and contempt of their enemies, and by the deceits of falſe prophets ſuborned by them, endevoured to make all confident, that they ſhould have ſucceſſe, now trembled, and quaked, and ſought which way to fly; upon which, Joſephus obſerves ἡ τοῦ θεοῦ δύναμις ἐπὶ τοὺς ἀνοσίους, the power of God upon impious men. For, ſaith he, the Tyrants of their own accords coming down out of their towres, τῆς ἀσφαλείας ἐκόμενοι ἑαυτοὺς, quitted their garriſons, which otherwiſe no force could have been able to take. And a multitude of them endevouring to get away, but being not able to doe ſo, run into caves under ground, and into the fouleſt vaults, and ſo the Romans took the towres, and burnt the houſes, kill'd a multitude in the ſtreets, without any the leaſt oppoſition. And ſo the city was taken, this being the laſt act of that bloody tragedy. As here this hiding in the caves] appears to be, attended immediatly with theſe words, For the great day of his wrath is come, and who ſhall be able to ſtand? anſwerable to the Romans ſetting up their enſigns on thoſe towres, at this point of time, and celebrating their victory, with ſhouts and ſinging, as Joſephus ſaith; Adding, that when Titus came, and ſaw theſe towres thus madly forſaken by the Jewes, he wondred exceedingly, and left them ſtanding, for a monument of his ſtrange ſucceſſe, when he demoliſhed all other walls of the city. After this the Romans making a narrow ſearch in all the noiſome vaults and caverns, they kill'd whom they found there. And John one of the Generals of the ſeditious, being almoſt famiſht in a vault, begg'd quarter, and was taken out, and kept in priſon, and ſo Simon, ſon of Gioras, the other of their Generals, having gotten into an inner vault, after ſome days, his victuals failing, came out of the vault in his white ſtole, and purple garment, and yeilded himſelf to a Roman ſouldier, that was left there. And him Titus reſerved to be carried in triumph to Rome, with him. And for the reſt of, the σικάριοι and σικάριοι, ſeditious, and robbers ſo call'd from their ſhort ſwords, (i. e. the remainders of the two factions, the Zelots being before murthered by the former of them, in the Temple) they were appeached by one another, and brought out, and either kill'd by the Romans, or kept to adorn the triumph, or ſent as ſlaves into Ægypt, or in the ſeveral provinces ſet to fight with wilde beaſts on the theatres. So exactly true is it, which is here ſaid, that as the Kings, and great ones, ſo πᾶς δοῦλος καὶ πᾶς ἐλεύθερος, every ſervant, and every free man did thus hide themſelves in the caves, as the final completion of this deſtruction. And if the πέτραι ἢ ὀρέων, the ſtones of the mountains] have any farther peculiarity of ſignification, it may fitly be interpreted of the walls of the Temple, where Joſephus ſaith the Prieſts hid themſelves at the time of the firing of the Temple by the Roman ſouldiers, from whence five days after they came out, being forced by hunger, and were brought to Titus, and put to death. To which purpoſe it is commonly known, that as the Temple is called the mountain, or hill of the Lord, ſo πέτραι ſtones may fitly ſignifie walls, that are made of ſtone, and ſo may probably ſignifie Mat. 27. 51. the walls of the Temple, rather than the Tomb-ſtones. And if ſo, then their hiding themſelves in the walls of the Temple, as Joſephus relates, will be literally expreſt by this phraſe πέτραι ὀρέων, the ſtones of the mountains, Or if not, yet prophetically and myſtically, it may thus be ſignified, As that which follows, [their crying to the Mountains to fall upon them] is a prophetical expreſſion, to ſignifie the ſadneſſe and direfulneſſe of their preſent condition.

succeed now the particular executions of them, and therein the first thing that was represented to me, was, Christ's peculiar care for the preserving of the true penitent beleivers of them out of the common destruction, who are therefore first to be markt (as the houses of the Israelites in Ægypt; that the plague may passe over them) and so secured before the vengeance break out upon them in common. This is here thus expresst in vision, I saw, saith he, four Angels that had power to bring punishments, famine, &c. (foretold c. 6.) upon Judæa, but making stay before they would do it, not permitting any of these mischiefs as yet to break out upon them.

2. And I saw another Angel ascending from the East, having the seal of the living God: and he cryed with a loud voice to the four Angels, to whom it was given to † hurt the earth and the sea,

† injure
* shall seal

2, 3, 4. And whilst this was a doing, I saw another Angel, coming on a message from Christ (intituled the East, or rising Sun, see note on Lu. 1. r. & Rev. 16. f.) c.

3. Saying, Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, till we * have [c] sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads.

4. And I heard the number of them which were sealed, and there were sealed an [d] hundred and fourty and four thousand, of all the tribes of the children of Israel.] d.

with a writing sealed, (an ordinance, or commission from God) in his hand, that they proceed not to any such act of mischief, till the beleivers, or orthodox, pure, steddy Christians be sealed, i. e. put into a safe condition, that they partake not in that destruction. And these that are thus sealed, and so preserved, though they are a very small despicable number, in respect of the far greater number of those that were destroyed, onely a remnant, as Noah's family of the old world, or Lot's of Sodome (see Lu. 17. 27. 29. and note on Mat. 24. i.) are yet fourteen myriads and four thousand, i. e. a great number, (not precisely so many, or just 12000 and no more, of every tribe;) and these were by God's appointment to be secured, before the judgements were to break out upon that people.

5. Of the tribe of Judah were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Reuben were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Gad were sealed twelve thousand.

6. Of the tribe of Aser were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Nephthali were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Manasses were sealed twelve thousand.

7. Of the tribe of Simeon were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Levi were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Issachar were sealed twelve thousand.

8. Of the tribe of Zabulon were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Joseph were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Benjamin were sealed twelve thousand.

9. After this, I beheld, and lo a great multitude, which no man could number, of † all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands,]

† every nation, and tribes πάσης ἐθνῶν καὶ φυλῶν

9. After this immediately I saw all the orthodox, pure, constant Christians, whether Jewes or Gentiles, every where dispersed, of all nations, that had continued thus long under persecution of the Jewes, see v. 14. looking up with faith, and constancy to Christ, attending this vengeance of God on the unbeleiving Jewes, and owned, and acknowledged, and rewarded by God, as those that had stuck to the faith, and persevered constantly, Mat. 24. 13. though they had not resisted unto blood, Heb. 12. 4.

10. And cryed with a loud voice, saying, * Salvation to our God, which sitteth upon the throne, and to the Lamb.]

* Salvation

10. And these praised God for his deliverance (as the Martyrs called for vengeance c. 6. 9.) acknowledging all their delivery to be imputable, as a most remarkable act of mercy, to God the Father, and to Christ on whom they have beleived.

11. And all the Angels stood round about the throne, and about the elders, and the four * beasts, and fell before the throne on their faces, and worshipped God,

* living creatures

11, 12. And a multitude of Angels stood waiting on God, and encompassing the Bishops of Judæa, (which were, together with the Apostles, to be gone out of the Countrey at this time, and so to partake of this delivery) and they joined with them in this rejoicing, and blessing of God.

12. Saying, Amen. Blessing, and glory, and wisdome, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, and might, be unto our God for ever and ever, Amen.

13. And

13. And mee thought, one of the Biſhops askt me, who I thought thoſe were (or whence) that were in the white garments of unſpotted innocence, v. 9.

13. And one of the Elders anſwered, saying unto me, What are theſe that are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they?]

14. And I told him I knew not, deſiring him to tell me; and he told me, saying, Theſe are the Confeſſors (though not Martyrs) v. 9. that ventured their lives for Chriſt in the confeſſing him conſtantly.

14. And I ſaid unto him, Sir, thou knoweſt: And he ſaid unto me, Theſe are they which came out of great tribulation, and have waſhed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.]

16. They ſhall hunger no more, neither thirſt any more, neither ſhall the Sun light on them, nor any * heat] * ſcorching καύσων

17. But live peaceably in Chriſt's fold (ſee Pſal. 23. 1.) and having ſown in tears, they ſhall now reap in joy the fruits of their patience, and perſeverance, (ſee Iſ. 25. 8.) a peaceable time of ſerving God. (Such as the Chriſtians had in the days of Veſpaſian, and Titus, after the deſtruction of the Jewes.)

Notes on Chap. VII.

a. ἡ γῆ

That ἡ γῆ the earth, or land] ſignifies not the whole world, but particularly the land of Paleſtine in many places of the New Teſtament, according to the notion of הארץ among the Hebrews, ſee note on Mat. 5. b. and ſo in like manner the four corners of the land, Ezech. 7. 2. Thus ſaith the Lord God unto the land of Iſrael, An end, The end is come upon the four corners of the land. And ſo ſure 'tis very generally, almoſt conſtantly, taken in this book, and accordingly is to be rendred the land, and not the earth, as in the fift commandement, and in the Prophets generally, the Hebrew is wont to be rendred; and in the latter part of this verſe, where 'tis ſet oppoſite to, or diſtinct from the ſea, &c. it may poſſibly ſignifie Judæa, or that part of Paleſtine.

b. θάλασσα

If θάλασσα the ſea] here be taken for any part of Paleſtine diſtinct from Judæa, it may then ſeem to ſignifie that part of the countrey, which was neer the ſea, or lake of Geneſareth (ſee note on Lu. 8. c.) as Capernaum ἡ ἐπὶ θαλάσσης, by the ſea ſide, Mat. 4. 13. in the borders of Zabulon and Nephthali, ὁδὸν θαλάσσης by the ſea ſide, v. 15. This ſea was the ſea of Tiberias, Joh. 6. 1. & 23. & c. 21. 1. the city Tiberias being by Herod built in the prime part of Galilee, ſaith Joſephus, Ant: l. 18. 3. And ſo under this title of θάλασσα ſea Galilee may be deſcribed, of which there was a Tetrarch under the Romans, and that different from the Procurator, or ἡγεμὼν Governour of Judæa, Lu. 3. 1. as here ἡ γῆ, and θάλασσα the land, and the ſea, are ſet, differing one from the other (ſee note on Lu. 21. c.) And then for the πᾶν δένδρον every tree] which is added, that alſo may ſignifie that countrey, wherein the trees did principally grow, and that may be the tetrarchy of Abyla, or Ἀβυλινὴ χώρα the Abylene region, Lu. 3. 1. for that, ſaith Joſephus, and the region about that, which made up Lyſanias's tetrarchy, was ſituate in Libanus, which is ſo famous in ſcripture for trees. See Joſephus Ant: l. 18. c. 4. But the truth is, all theſe together, land, and ſea, and trees] may perhaps ſignifie no more but the whole people of the Jewes, without any nicer conſideration of different countreys in it.

This ſealing in the forehead] is the ſame that is mentioned in the prophet Ezechiel c. 9. 4. ת, as it is thought, either for תורה the law, or for תשובה repentance (and ſo Theodotion renders the Hebrew תָּו there, not σημεῖον a ſigne, but ταῦ the letter Tau] noting the promiſe of deliverance, that is aſcertain'd to ſuch penitents, or obedient ſervants of God, when all others are deſtroyed, (for that this is the uſe, and meaning of ſealing, ſee note on Epheſ. 4. g.) And that this was moſt remarkeable among the Jewes at this time, appears, not only by the frequent mention of the Σωζόμενοι thoſe that eſcape, and σωτηρία, deliverance or ſalvation, often ſhewed to belong to this matter, and again by the plain prediction of Chriſt, [one ſhall be taken and another left] and many the like, but by that paſſage in ſtory (mentioned on Mat. 24. 26.) how Gallus having ſat down, and beſieged Jeruſalem, neglected many opportunities of taking it, and in the very next month raiſed the ſiege, recalled the army again, by which means the Chriſtians that were in the city, remembring Chriſt's words, [When you ſee Jeruſalem encompaſt with armies, then let them that are in Judæa flie to the mountains] (and perhaps admoniſhed by the voice [μεταβαίνωμεν ἐντεῦθεν, Let us go hence] thus underſtood) immediately removed out of the city, and indeed out of Judæa, and went to Pella (ſee Euſeb: Hiſt: Eccl: l. 3. κ. ε'.) and were diſperſed ſome in Europe, others in Aſia (ſee note on Ioh. 7. d.) and at Titus's beſieging the city, there was not one Chriſtian left in it. See Ioſephus de Bell: Iud: l. 2. c. 22. &c. and note on Mat. 24. g.

c. Σφραγισθῆναι ἐπὶ τῶν μετώπων

This number of an hundred forty and four thouſand, or the proportioning it ſo equally between twelve Tribes, muſt not neceſſarily be taken in a literal ſenſe, that there were juſt ſo many Chriſtians in Judæa, that went out, and were delivered at the time of the approach of thoſe judgments, or thoſe ſo equally divided by Tribes, but (as in prophecies 'tis ordinary) a certain number for an uncertain, and an obſcure repreſentation made; And perhaps all that is to be underſtood by, or concluded from this number, is no more

d. μυριάδες χιλιάδες

but

but the demonſtration of the truth of what Chriſt had ſaid, in anſwer to the queſtion [εἰ ὀλίγοι ἐισὶν οἱ σωζόμενοι; whether the number of the Jewes, which ſhould eſcape, were, in proportion to the others, a ſmall or great number?] For there his adviſe to them of entring in at the ſtraight gate, and ſo alſo the Prophet's frequent mention of the [κατάλειμμα the remnant] that ſhould eſcape, doth demonſtrate, that of the Jewes there ſhould not be found many in proportion, which ſhould be delivered from this wrath to come, by eſcaping out of that wicked generation; For though Chriſt after his own aſcent left his Apoſtles to preach over all the cities of Judaa (to reſcue them, yet, if it were poſſible) before this vengeance ſhould break out upon them, yet it ſeems by his own prediction Lu. 18.8. that after all this, there ſhould be found but little faith, i.e. few beleivers ἐν τῇ γῇ in the land of Judaa at the time of the Son of man's coming in judgment upon this people; Few of that nation would ſincerely repent and come in and adhere to him. There were indeed many of that nation which received the faith, three thouſand converted at one ſermon of S. Peter's, Act. 2.41. and καθ' ἡμέραν, (as 'tis there ſaid ver. 47.) every day there was a proportionable addition of them, and ſo the Biſhop of Jeruſalem tells Paul, Act. 21. 20. that there were many myriads of beleiving Jewes there, And Euſebius, mentioning Juſtus the third Biſhop of Jeruſalem, ſaith that he was one of μυριοι ὅσοι ἐκ ἐθνῶν the ſo many myriads of Jewes that beleived in Chriſt at that time, l. 3. c. 35. (and accordingly the number which is here ſaid to be ſealed, comes to above fourteen myriads, which is no ſmall number) But yet of all theſe it muſt be obſerved, 1. That many of the beleivers, being alſo zealous for the law, Act. 21. 20. fell out with the Apoſtles and Chriſtianity it ſelf, when it came in competition with the Moſaical obſervances, and fell off to the Jewiſh and Gnoſtick part, when the perſecutions fell upon the orthodox Chriſtians, and accordingly were after deſtroyed with the unbeleivers at this coming of Chriſt. Secondly, theſe many were yet few comparatively, or in proportion to the farre greater number, which held out obdurate, or elſe, as temporary profeſſors, fell off again in time of perſecution for the faith. And this will appear to be very fitly expreſt here by this number of an hundred forty and four thouſand. For, for the multitude of that people we may make ſome gueſſe at it, by the account which Ceſtius brought Nero. He, when he had that preſenture, being willing to give Nero an advertiſement of the ſtrength of that nation (becauſe Nero ſo contemn'd it) labour'd to make uſe of the high prieſt's Arithmetick to that purpoſe, and he did it thus, At the feaſt of the Paſſeover, they numbred the ſacrifices that were brought to Jeruſalem at that time, and found them to be two hundred fifty five thouſand and ſix hundred. Now of thoſe Paſchal ſacrifices it muſt be remembred, that each of them was eaten by a ſociety, conſiſting perhaps of twenty, but at leaſt of ten perſons. At the proportion of ten to a ſacrifice the number of thoſe that did partake of the ſacrifices muſt be two thouſand five hundred fifty ſix thouſand. 2dly, it muſt be remembred alſo, that none had to doe in thoſe ſacrifices, but thoſe which were pure, and clean at that time, and therefore beſide this number of theſe that did partake of them, it muſt be reſolved, that there was a very great number more which did not partake, all the leproſe, all the women that were under any pollution, all the men to whom any thing in like manner had befaln in the night, all that were under any infection, &c. theſe were excluded from that former number, and in the account muſt be added to it, and then 'twill appear what a ſmall number this was of one hundred forty four thouſand out of all Judea, in proportion to the whole people at that time, not above a thirtieth part at the higheſt valuation imaginable, perhaps a yet farre more diſproportionable number. Here if it be demanded, why the tribe of Dan is not numbred among the tribes, and Levi is, the anſwer for Levi will be clear, that though that tribe had no part in the diviſion of the land, and ſo could not be numbred there, yet in Chriſt their portion was as good as any, and therefore were not here to be omitted; As for the tribe of Dan, it may be, becauſe long before that time that tribe was either deſtroyed or brought very low, ſay the Jewes, and ſo indeed it appears, that it was not numbred among the reſt of the Tribes, in 1 Chron. 2. or the following Chapters.

Σωτηρία ſalvation] is the word which moſt properly ſignifies this deliverance of them that are ſaid to be ſealed, i.e. of the penitent Jewes, or ſincere orthodox Chriſtians, σωζόμενοι the ſaved, or κατάλειμμα the remnant, (ſee Rom. 11. 26. & note on Rom. 13. b.) and then the meaning of Σωτηρία τῷ θεῷ ſalvation to God] will be obvious, the imputing this deliverance to God, acknowledging it his ſpecial act, giving him all the praiſe, and honour of it.

containing the ſeveral previous judgments that were to fall on the unbeleiving Jewes, and the prodigies foregoing, and predictions of utter deſtruction that ſhould fall upon them, Follows now the ſeventh roll and ſeal, and on the opening of that there was a repreſentation of the ſervice in the Temple at the time of offering incenſe, For firſt I perceived an univerſal ſilence for half an hour, i.e. the people praying by themſelves ſilently in the court (as they are wont to doe, while the high prieſt is offering in the ſanctuary.)

2. And I ſaw the ſeven Angels which ſtood before God, and to them were given ſeven [a] trumpets.]

2. And the ſeven Angels or officers 2.

that waited on God, chap. 1. 4. like ſo many prieſts in the Temple, ſounded their trumpets.

3. And another Angel came and ſtood at the altar, having a [a] golden cenſer, and there was given unto him much incenſe, that he ſhould [b] offer it with the prayers of all ſaints, upon the golden altar which was before the throne.

3, 4. And another Angel, as the high prieſt, offered up the incenſe, with which 2.

the people's prayers are supposed to ascend to God.

4. And the smoak of the incense, which came with the prayers of the saints, ascended up before God out of the Angels hand.]

By this signifying the prayers of all faithfull people, persecuted by these obdurate Jewes, to have come to God's ears, and to have found admission there.

b. 5. And as an effect or consequent of that, i. e. of that persecution, and their prayers for deliverance

5. And the Angel took the censer, and filled it * with fire from the altar, and cast it † into the earth: and there were [b] voices, and thundrings, and lightnings, and an earthquake.]

(not for this vengeance) it is, that the Angel fills his censer with fire from the altar of burnt-offerings, i. e. with the wrath of God (so oft expresst in the Prophets by fire) and that wrath, consuming, (such as the fire that consumed the burnt sacrifice totally) and cast it upon all Judæa; and the effects of that were voices, and thunders, (i.e. noise of thunders) and lightnings, and earthquake, i. e. great heavie suddain wasting judgments upon that people, represented here in general, but particularly set down in the consequents of the sounding the seven trumpets.

every one, and were ready to blow, and did so, one after another, each of which hath a several signification in it.

c. d. 7. And when the first sounded, I saw falling upon Judæa hayl and fire mingled with blood, and they were wasted it in a bloody manner,

7. The first Angel sounded, and there * followed hayl and [c] fire mingled with blood, and they were cast upon the † earth, * and the third part of trees was burnt up, and all [d] green grasse was burnt up.]

And the obedient meek pious Christians that would not joyn with them in their seditious practises, were terribly plunder'd and wasted by them, And this fell heavily upon the tetrarchate of Abylene (see note b. on chap. 7.) as well as upon Judæa.

* was ἐγένετο

* the King's MS. reads καὶ τὸ τρίτον τῶν δένδρων καὶ πᾶς χόρτος χλωρὸς κατεκάη, and the third part of the trees and all green grasse was burnt up.

c. e. 8. And upon the second Angels sounding there was another representation of a great multitude of the same or like seditious persons, rising in Galilee, and the suppressing of them cost a great deal of blood, consumed a great multitude of Galilæans.

9. And the third part of the creatures which were in the sea, and had life, died, and the third part of the ships were destroyed.]

c. 10,11. And upon the sounding of the third, an eminent person taking upon him to be a Captain among them, & drawing many after him, raised a sedition in the lesser cities and towns of Galilee, see note e. And this sedition was a bitter pernicious one to those that joyned in it, brought a force from the Romans, slew a great multitude more in those parts of Galilee.

10. And the third Angel sounded, and there fell a great starre from heaven, [c] burning, as it were a lamp, and it fell upon the third part of the rivers, and upon the fountains of waters.

f. 11. And the name of the starre is called [f] wormwood, and the third part of the waters became wormwood, and many men died of the waters, because they were made bitter.]

g. 12. And upon the sounding of the fourth, I saw the representation of a great judgment falling upon the holy city, a siege and attempt on Jerusalem it self.

12. And the fourth Angel sounded, and the third part of the [g] sunne was smitten, and the third part of the moon, and the third part of the starres, so as the third part of them was darkned, and the day † shone not for a third part of it, and the night likewise.]

† appeared not the third part of it μὴ φαίνῃ τὸ τρίτον αὐτῆς

h. 13. And a Prophet denouncing three horrible woes against the whole nation, which should particularly be set down in the three representations, which should not be long before they sounded; the first of them belonging to the forerunners immediately before the last siege and destruction of Jerusalem, the second to that siege it self, the third to the sad events following it.

Notes on Chap. VIII.

2. Σιγὴ ὡς ἡμίωρον

The manner of offering of incense is here described by way of vision, the High Priest offering it upon the θυμιατήριον within the Temple, the Priests shouting and blowing with the Trumpet, and the people mean while praying without by themselves, every one silently in the court; which prayers of theirs are supposed to go up to God with the incense, v.4. (a description of this see note on Luke 1. 10. d.) These prayers of the people are here first set down by the phrase [σιγὴ ἐν οὐρανῷ, silence in heaven for half an houre] the Temple being sometime expresst by heaven, sometime by the host of heaven, i. e. the Sun, Moon, and Starres (see v. 12.) and the silence there being the private prayer of the people in the court, Lu. 1. 10. and the time of half an houre, being the space that those prayers used to continue, while the Priest continued within at the altar in the Temple, and after which, he used to come out, and pronounce the blessing on the people, and dismisse them, but till then they stayed and prayed. see Lu. 1. v. 21. And if beside this primary and literal, any secondary mystical sense of this phrase [silence in heaven about half an houre] need to be observed, it may not unfitly be this, that it denote a short amazement in the faithful, persevering Christians, joyned with an awful reverence of the Divine Majesty, and compassion of their native country, upon the apprehension

ὡσεὶ ὥρας ἡμίσεως

henſion of the calamities now to be inflicted. Theſe might juſtly provoke a ſadneſſe, and an amazement. But then the conſideration of God's glory, ariſing out of this his juſtice upon the impenitent, and alſo of the merciful deliverance of the faithful, not only from this miſery, but even by means of this miſery, (the deſtruction of the perſecuters being the releaſe of the perſecuted) theſe make the amazement and compaſſion not to remain long, and ſo the ſilence to be for a ſhort ſpace. But this by the way, as a deſcant, not an interpretation. Then next, the trumpetting of the Prieſts, the ſonnes of Aaron, Eccles. 50. 16. is here expreſt by the ſeven Trumpets given to the ſeven Angels v. 2. then the High Prieſt's offering the incenſe is deſcribed by the other Angel having the golden Cenſer &c. v. 3. And all this repreſentation was here fitly ſet in the viſion, to ſignifie the prayers of the true faithful Chriſtians, and their acceptance with God, to which is conſequent their deliverance, while all other the impenitent unbeleivers have this vengeance poured down upon them, nay, as an effect of the hearing theſe prayers of the godly (though they prayed not for judgements on the reſt) is the very vengeance on the wicked, who perſecute the godly, (as when Abel's blood is ſaid to cry to heaven for vengeance againſt Cain) for ſo every where moſt bitterly did the Jewes perſecute the Chriſtians, ſee note on c. 2. b. and Gal. 6. 12.

Τοῦτ' ἔστιν ἀλληγορία

Ἄλλως δὲ ἀλλοῖα.

b. That φωναὶ and βρονταὶ voices and thunders are all one (from the equivocalneſſe of the Hebrew word, which ſignifies both) hath been often ſaid, and ſo here, by theſe two words there is no more meant, than either of them would have imported, thunder, to which lightning, and earthquake are fitly joined, to ſignifie in general the judgements of God, and vengeance on this people, which are more ſpecially deſcribed, and repreſented under the ſounding of the ſeven trumpets, that follow, and the productions of each of them. And though the σεισμὸς or earthquake here mentioned, may fitly ſignifie the commotions and ſtirres which are prefigured by the three firſt Angels, (ſee note c.) yet this verſe here, belonging equally to all that follows, and not peculiarly to thoſe three, will more fitly be interpreted in a general notion comprehenſive of all, that is after more particularly deſcribed, (and ſo the earthquake will ſignifie a ſhaking, preparative to a fall and deſolation) than, by any ſuch propriety of the earthquake, be thus confined.

Φωναὶ ἤγουν βρονταὶ ἤγουν σεισμοί

c. What is ſignified by the ſoundings of the three firſt Angels here, will be gueſt by the πῦρ fire, obſervable in each of them here, πῦρ μεμιγμένον ἐν αἵματι fire join'd with the hail precedent, (and then blood ſuperadded to both of them) A mountain burning with fire, v. 8. and a ſtarre burning, as it were a lamp, v. 10. Now there is nothing more fitly reſembled by fire, than ſedition, or rebellion is; All kind of contention being indeed a fire, and ordinarily ſtyled καῦσις a combuſtion, but the greater it is, as rebellion is of all others the greateſt, the better it deſerves that title; and this, becauſe as a little fire ſets a whole houſe, a whole kingdome, a whole world on fire, Ja. 3. 5, 6. and beginning from very ſmall ſparks, aſcends quickly into a very great flame, ſo ſedition began by one, ſecretly ſteals on, and encreaſes, draws whole multitudes unto it, and then, as fire alſo, devoures and deſtroyes, where-ever it comes, layes all waſte before it. Now it is obſervable in the Iewiſh records of thoſe times, how full the hiſtory is of two ſorts of moſt violent diſturbers, Σικάριοι, and Ζηλῶται, the Seditious and the Zelots. And though the fire here might properly enough belong to either of theſe, yet it is very fit to make a diſtinction between them in the predictions here, as we know there is in the hiſtories of them. The ſicarii, or ſeditious ſtirred up rebellion againſt the Romans, pretending and deſigning to caſt off that yoke of their Conquerors, under the conduct of the ψευδόχριστοι, falſe Chriſts, which undertook to redeem Iſrael out of their ſlavery. But the Ζηλῶται Zelots exerciſed tyranny, and all manner of cruelty upon their own countrey-men; The latter of theſe were immediately before the ſiege, and in time of the ſiege, and are deſcribed by the Locuſts moſt fitly, c. 9. 3. But the former, the ſeditious, which raiſed thoſe ſtirres and tumults, which cauſed the Romans to ſend armies to the ſubduing of them, and ſo were the foundation of that bloody waſting warre, and by ſeveral degrees promoted it, are the ſubject of this part of the viſion, upon the ſounding of the four firſt Angels. Of this ſort was the Ægyptian Impoſtor mentioned Act. 21. 38. and more largely by Ioſephus (Ant: l. 20. c. 6. and de bell: Iud: l. 2. c. 12. and out of him by Euſebius l. 2. c. 21.) who led after him to mount Olivet thirty thouſand men, meaning from thence to force his paſſage into Ieruſalem, and ſeiſe upon the Roman guards, and poſſeſs himſelf of the city, but was prevented, and diſcomfited by Felix about the end of Claudius's reign. But this is ſomewhat too early to be referr'd to here. That which ſeems moſt probable is, That theſe firſt trumpets in this chapter contain the ſpace of time from the coming of Albinus to his Prefecture, and the Iewes ſufferings under him, then under Geſſius Florus his ſucceſſor, as alſo the ſpoiling of Galilee by Seſtius Gallus Prefect of Syria, to which fitly follows the ſiege, and attempt of Gallus on Ieruſalem, the importance of the ſounding of the fourth trumpet. Under Albinus and Florus, the Iewes were much grieved, and provoked, and brake out into ſeditions, ſee Ioſeph: Antiq: l. 20. c. 9. and de bell: Iud: l. 2. c. 13. and ſo forward. Upon this the warre began in the ſecond year of Florus's procuratorſhip, in the twelfth of Nero, ſaith Ioſephus, ant. l. 20. in the laſt chapter. This Florus having exerciſed much cruelty on the Iewes in Caſarea, on occaſion of a ſedition there (de bell: Iud: l. 2. c. 25.) cometh with an army to Ieruſalem, kills a great many, takes and ſcourges many of the beſt, and nobleſt of the Jewes, and hangs them up. They of Ieruſalem ſend their complaints to the Governour of Syria, Seſtius Gallus, he ſends Politian to ſee how it fared with them, Politian meets King Agrippa coming from Alexandria, enters Ieruſalem with him, ſees and returns an account to Seſtius Gallus, upon which they hope for relief from him, but in vain. King Agrippa makes an Oration to quiet them, and perſwade them patience, ſubjection to the Romans, and obedience to Florus, till the Emperour ſhould ſend another in his ſtead; Upon this Oration, they break out violently againſt the King, reproach him, and drive him out of the city, About the ſame time they ſeiſe upon the fort called Maſſada, kill the Romans, and put in a garriſon of their own, And Eleazar ſon of Annas the high Prieſt rejects the Emperor's ſacrifices, and refuſeth to offer them according as was wont, The chief men, and all that loved peace, betook themſelves to the upper city, the forces of the ſeditious ſeiſed on the lower, and the Temple, from thence brake in upon the upper, burnt the high Prieſt's houſe, and King Agrippa's palace, took the towre call'd Antonia, kill'd all the garriſon of ſouldiers there, At the ſame time there is a great ſlaughter of Jewes in Caſarea, and the Jewes over all Syria riſe up againſt the people of the countrey, and great ſlaughters are committed on both ſides, Joſ. l. 2. de bell: Ind: c. 13. &c. This occaſions Seſtius his coming with a great army into Paleſtine, and after the deſtroying of ſome towns of the Jewes, he beſieges Ieruſalem, at the feaſt of tabernacles, this ſiege of Ieruſalem being the cloſe of what befell the Iewes, by reaſon of the ſedition, may moſt fitly be reſolved on to be the interpretation of the ſmiting the third part of Ἐπλήγη τὸ τρίτον τῆ ἡλίου· the Sun, Moon, and ſtarres, ſo as to darken them, and diminiſh the luſtre both of day and night, which are all but phraſes to ſignifie a preſſure, and a ſad condition which befell Ieruſalem. But becauſe the city was not to be taken by this ſiege, but by the ſpecial providence of God, Seſtius againſt all reaſon, Θαλογώτατα, ſaith Joſephus, raiſed this ſiege, by that means to give opportunity to the beleivers, to obey Chriſts directions, Lu. 20 21. and to fly out of Judea to the mountains, and withall to make the judgement far * more terrible on the * ſee note on c. 9 a. reſt, (by the famine that after followed) then it would have been, if it had at this time been taken (as eaſily it might have been) therefore follows in this point of time, moſt fitly, the Angels flying through the midſt of heaven, v. 13. and crying, Wo, wo, wo to the inhabitants of Judea, by reaſon of the other voices of the trumpets of the three Angels which are ready to ſound. Upon which, ſaith Joſephus, before the coming of the fatal final ſiege, πολλοὶ τ ἐπιφανῶν Ἰουδαίων ὥσπερ βαπιζομένης νεὼς ἀπενήχοντο τ πόλεως, many of the eminenter Iewes, as from a ſhip ready to ſink, ſwoom out of the city. Thus ſaith Euſebius l. 3. c. 5. that there was an Oracle, or prophecy delivered to the Μὴμαι the good men, or Chriſtians, that they ſhould go out of the city before the warre ſhould rage, and go to Pella, and ſo Epiphanius de pond: & menſ: that before the city ſhould be taken by the Romans, θεοχρηματίσθης ὑπ' ἀγγέλου πόλιν εἰ μαθοῦσαι all the beleivers were warn'd by an angel (as here it is an angel flying) to go out of the city, which was now ready to be utterly deſtroyed.

d. What is here diſtinctly meant by the [green graſſe, χορτὸς χλωρὸς] can be but conjectured, and χλωρὸς χόρτος that perhaps will be beſt done by comparing it with Ezek. 20. 47. where God's judgements are deſcribed by a fire, (as here) falling, and devouring every green tree, and every dry; what is the meaning of this, appears c. 21. 3. I will cut off from thee the righteous, and the wicked, where the righteous are evidently deſcribed by the green, as the wicked by the dry tree, Thus Lu. 23. 31. it proverbially ſignifies, If they do theſe things in a green tree, what ſhall be done in a dry? If the righteous ſcape ſo hardly, where ſhall the ungodly and ſinners appear? And the elegance and ſignificancy lying not in that of the tree, but of the greenneſs, that doth as fitly hold in the graſs, as the tree, And thus it is clearly uſed, c. 9. 4. where the graſſe and green thing and tree, are oppoſed to thoſe that *have not the ſeal of God in their forehead*s, and ſo are the righteous oppoſed to the impenitent, and particularly the Chriſtians in Judea, on whom the violence of theſe tumults and ſeditions fell heavily, as thoſe which were hated by the Iewes, and which would not take up arms with them, and join in their ſeditious practiſes.

c. That the tumults and rebellions of the ſeditious, are here repreſented by theſe three firſt Angels, is more manifeſt, than what thoſe ſeditions particularly were, which are denoted by each of them; Our Saviour ſaith of theſe times, that many ſhould ariſe, and deceive many, and the event hath confirmed it; At every turn, ſome or other aroſe and undertook to lead them out, and nothing is to be met with in the ſtories of theſe times, but the raiſing of ſeditions among the Iewes, and the coming of the Romans to ſuppreſſe them. And therefore it is not needful to diſtribute theſe ſeveral repreſentations of the three firſt trumpets, and apply them ſeverally, but to underſtand them in groſſe of this matter. Yet ſuppoſing (what hath been ſhew'd, note b. on c. 7.) that the ſea here (noting the ſea, or lake of Tiberias) may ſignifie Galilee. It will be commodious enough to underſtand this of that ſedition raiſed in Galilee, which Veſpaſian was by Nero ſent to quell about the year of Chriſt 69. in the twelfth of Nero; At which time ſaith Baronius out of Joſephus, he ſubdued the Galileans, Gentem fortiſſimam, totius Paleſtinæ potentiſſimam & munitiſſimam, the moſt valiant, powerful, and beſt fortified countrey of all Paleſtine, which action of his being ſo conſiderable and remarkable for the ſlaughter of above an hundred thouſand, and the carrying above fourty thouſand Iewes captive, may fitly be here repreſented under the third part of the ſea becoming τρίτον τ θαλάσσης Κατέγραψε τὸ θαλάσσιον blood, and the dying of the third part of the creatures, i. e. Iewes, in the ſea, i. e. of Galilee, and the third part of the ſhips, i. e. of the cities, which πλοῖα are to a countrey, as ſhips to a ſea, the places wherein men live, and traffick, and wherein they are fortified againſt enemies, as by ſhips againſt the violence of the ſea. And this ſlaughter falling upon the whole region of Galilee, and not only on the cities thereof, may probably be meant by the viſion that follows the ſounding of the third Angel alſo, the ſtarre that burnt, and fell upon the rivers and fountains, which are to the ſea, as towns and villages to the cities, and of which a third part became wormwood, v. 11. And if it be neceſſary to define who it was, who is deſcribed by the great ſtarre from heaven, burning as it were Ἀστὴρ μέγας a lamp, it may fitly be affirmed to be Joſephus the ſon of Mattathias, the leader of thoſe of Iotapata, but this not perſonally, but he, and his forces together, who made a very valiant reſiſtance to Veſpaſian's army, but by doing ſo, brought great ſlaughters upon them, as is particularly and exactly ſet down by Joſephus, l. 3. de bell: Ind:

f. Ἄψινθος Wormwood is in Scripture ſometimes uſed to expreſſe that which infecteth others, infuſing its bitterneſſe into them, and ſo it may ſignifie any impoſtor that ſeduceth, and draws others after him, as any of thoſe ſeditious Captains did to their deſtruction. Sometimes it is uſed to ſignifie any bitter effect, any heavy calamity. And ſo here it may ſignifie alſo, theſe tumults of the ſeditious bringing great ſlaughters on Judaa, as appears by Joſephus's ſtory, de Bell: Jud: l. 2. & 3.

g. Πᾶσα συλλήψις ἀστρική That the Temple is deſcribed and expreſſed generally in the ſcripture by an hoſt, hath been formerly ſhewed, note on 1 Tim. 1. d. That this hoſt is in viſions or prophetical dark repreſentations fitly expreſt by the Sun, Moon, and ſtarres, will be eaſily conſented to, when we but remember that thoſe are called the hoſt of heaven, and that the Temple is commonly a repreſentation of heaven, and ſometimes repreſented by it (ſee v. 1.) and accordingly the Chriſtian Church is called the Kingdome of heaven oft-times in the Goſpel; Then that the particulars of Sun, Moon, and ſtarres are ſeverally mention'd, rather than the heaven the aggregate body, is by that ordinary manner of ſpeaking among the Hebrews, which expreſſe the whole by enumeration of the ſeveral parts of it (ſee note on 2 Pet. 3. d.) And ſo here it may poſſibly denote the ſervice of the Temple, which was performed by night, (ye that by night ſtand in the courts of God, ſaith the Pſalmiſt, the watches being then kept) as well as by day, which is here alſo mention'd, by ἡ νὺξ the night, as well as ἡμέρα the day; which could not ſeverally have been mention'd, had not the Sun for the day, and the Moon and ſtarres for the night been accordingly mentioned alſo. And if this be it, then when 'tis ſaid, that the third part of theſe was ſmitten, the meaning muſt be, that an heavy diſtreſſe now fell upon the Temple, and the ſervice of God there was ſhrewdly diſturbed by this ſiege, but not (at this part of the viſion) wholly deſtroyed; But beſides this, there is another interpretation, of which the words are more clearly capable, ſo as the Sun ſignifie the Temple, the Moon the city, and the ſtarres all the people, againſt which here the woes are denounced v. 13. according to the words in Joſephus, Woe, woe to the city, and the people, and the Temple (ſee note h.) And this ſeems the more probable interpretation.

h. Ἀετὸς ἐν μεσουρανήματι ἐκέκραγεν, οὐαὶ, οὐαὶ, οὐαὶ Concerning this Angel flying in the midſt of heaven, and crying with a loud voice, οὐαὶ, οὐαὶ, οὐαὶ τοῖς κατοικοῦσιν ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, Woe, woe, woe to the dwellers in the land. The ſtory is remarkable in Joſephus (and out of him in Euſebius l. 3. c. 8.) which he ſets down as a prodigy, preſaging that deſtruction of the Iewes; There was, ſaith he, one Jeſus, ſonne of Ananias, a countrey man of mean birth, four years before the warre againſt the Jews, at a time when all was in deep peace, and tranquillity, who coming up to the feaſt of tabernacles, according to the cuſtome, began on a ſudden to cry out, and ſay, φωνὴ ἀπ' ἀνατολῆς &c. a voice from the Eaſt, a voice from the Weſt, a voice from the four winds, a voice againſt Ieruſalem and the Temple, a voice againſt bridegrooms and brides, a voice againſt all the people. Thus he went about all the narrow lanes, crying night and day, and being apprehended and ſcourged, he ſtill continued the ſame language under the blowes without any other word; And they on this ſuppoſing (as it was) δαιμονιῶδες εἶναι τὸ κίνημα τοῦτο, that it was ſome divine motion, brought him to the Roman Prefect, and by his appointment being with whips wounded, and his fleſh torn to the bones, he neither intreated, nor ſhed teare, but to every blow, in a moſt lamentable mournful note, cryed out, αἰ, αἰ, Ἱεροσολύμοις, Wo, woe to Ieruſalem. This he continued to do till the time of the ſiege, ſeven years together, and at laſt to his ordinary note of Wo to the city, the people, the temple, adding, Wo alſo to me, a ſtone from the battlements fell down and kill'd him. To this I ſhall add no more, but that ἐπὶ γῆς the land] here being the land of Judaa, the phraſe κατοικοῦντες γῆν inhabitants of the land] is as truly agreeable to the Iewes, as οὐαὶ, and αἰ are all one alſo. 'Tis onely farther obſervable, that theſe prophetick woes are here ſaid to be three, and thoſe inflicted, and brought upon the people, by that which is repreſented by the voices of the trumpets of the three Angels ſtill behind, the firſt mentioned as paſt, c. 9. 12. the ſecond and third c. 11. 14. ſee note on c. 11. c. And ſo what is here repreſented in this part of the viſion, is but the ſetting down of this prophecy, which Jeſus the ſon of Ananias ſhould deliver concerning the judgements, and not the judgements themſelves, which follow in the ſucceeding chapters. And ſo 'tis more perfectly parallel to that paſſage out of Joſephus and Euſebius, which was a σημεῖον, or prodigie, to fore-ſignifie that deſtruction, and not the deſtruction it ſelf.

CHAP. IX.

Paraphraſe.

* the ſtarre that was fallen from heaven on the land † well of the abyſſe ὀρύγματος τῆς ἀβύσσου * chimney κάμινος

1. AND the firſt Angel ſounded, and I ſaw * a [a] ſtarre fall from heaven unto the earth, and to him was given the key of the † bottomleſſe pit.]

1. And upon the ſounding of the fift trumpet, I ſaw him a.

[a] that was before, (c. 8. 10.) the leader of the ſeditious, or ſome other that ſucceeded in his place, and he became a ring-leader of moſt bellish villanies, which under the title of Zelots, did all the miſchief imaginable.

2. And he opened the bomeleſſe pit, and there aroſe a ſmoke out of the pit, as the ſmoke of a great * furnace, and the Sun and the aire were darkned, by reaſon of the ſmoke of the pit.]

2. And they marched up to Jeruſalem, and ſeiſed upon the temple there, kill'd the high Prieſts, and the reſt of the Prieſts, and plunder'd the city.

† into the land εἰς τὴν γῆν * ſcorpions have power of the land ἔχουσιν ἐξουσίαν οἱ σκορπίοι τῆς γῆς

3. And there came out of the ſmoke Locuſts † upon the earth, and unto them was given power, as the * Scorpions of the earth have power.]

3. And theſe became as Locuſts, great waſters and devourers, and were in other reſpects peculiarly like Locuſts, which having no King, goe out by bands, Prov. 30. 27. and ſuch were theſe, a company of giddy wilde people, in great numbers, haraſſing and devouring all.

b. 4. But by God's providence diſpoſing for the good of his ſervants, ſo it was, that this judgement of the Zelots fell not upon the Chriſtians, (ſee note on c. 8. d.) but onely upon the Jews themſelves (that were as contrary to Chriſtianity as any) onely becauſe they were not of the faction of thoſe Zelots.

4. And it is was [b] † commanded them, that they ſhould not hurt the graſſe of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree: but onely thoſe men which have not the ſeal of God in their foreheads. † ſaid.

c. 5. And the judgement that fell upon the Jewes by theſe men, was not ſo much as [c] down right killing (though that alſo befel Annas and the Prieſts, ſee note a.) as plundering, and pillaging and undoing them, and tearing their neceſſary food from the beſt citizens of Jeruſalem, and thus continuing for five moneths ſpace, till Titus came to beſiege the city, by which means the ſiege became much the more cruell, and intolerable when it came, and ſo this was moſt fitly compared to ſcorpions, as the whipping with them is the moſt cruel and terrible infliction, much more cruell then any other ſcourge, 1 King. 12. 11.

5. And to them it was given that they ſhould not kill them, but that they ſhould be [c] tormented five moneths, and their torment was as the torment of a Scorpion, when he ſtriketh a man.]

d. 6. This brought a great famin and want on the greateſt and richeſt men, and that is farre more miſerable then death it ſelf (ſee note on c. 6. a.)

6. And in thoſe dayes ſhall [d] men ſeek death, and ſhall not find it, and ſhall deſire to dye, and death ſhall flee from them.]

7. And theſe devouring waſters, the Zelots, were in appearance like warriers, and pretended themſelves to be redeemers of the people, and counter-conquerours of the Romans (which is meant by their Crownes like unto gold, falſe Princes, falſe Patriots) and they took upon them to be Saviours and Benefactors, ſaith Joſephus, would look like men, kind and friendly, when they wrought all this ruine to their brethren.

7. And the ſhapes of the locuſts were like unto horſes prepared to battell and on their heads * were as it were crownes of gold, and their faces were as the faces of men.] * as it were crowns, like unto gold ὡς στέφανοι ὅμοιοι χρυσῷ

8. And all this while theſe that thus devoured, and preyed upon all they came neer, and ſo were moſt terrible to thoſe that could not reſiſt, were moſt baſe cowardly perſons, theſe great plunderers, far from having any manlyneſs or valour in them.

8. And they had hair as the hair of women, and their teeth were as the teeth of lyons.]

9. And they were hard-hearted compaſſionleſs people, and in great troops like graſſe-hoppers or locuſts they flew about, and made all places reſound with their noyſe, and at the newes of them, Joel. 2. 5.

9. And they had breaſt-plates as it were breaſt-plates of iron, and the ſound of their wings was as the ſound of chariots of many horſes running to battell.

10. And as ſcorpions wound and ſting with their tails, ſo they coming in with faire pretences of Saviours and Benefactors, when they depart, plunder and carry all along with them, and ſo they continue till the time of Titus ſiege v. 5. juſt five moneths ſpace.

10. And they had tails like unto ſcorpions, and there were ſtings in their tails: and their power was to hurt men five moneths.]

11. And though they diſclaim having any King over them but God, and upon that ſcore pretend to riſe up againſt the Romans, and though like locuſts v. 3. they goe out by bands having no King to conduct them, yet their cruelty, and unmercifulneſſe in deſtroying, owes them to have a King, who rules among them, and puts them upon all this villany, Satan that delights in nothing but deſtroying.

11. And they had a King over them, which is the Angel of the bottomleſs pit, whoſe name in the Hebrew tongue is Abaddon, but in the Greek tongue hath his name Apollyon.]

12. And this is the firſt of thoſe woes, or peſts foretold c. 8. 13. And though this were a competent judgement on that nation, there are yet two more approaching them.

12. † One woe is paſt, and behold there come two woes more * hereafter. † The firſt woe. See Mat. 28. 1. * after theſe μετὰ ταῦτα

13. And upon the ſounding of the ſixt trumpet of the ſixt Angel, I heard a voyce from the altar of incenſe, where the prayers of the Saints or conſtant Chriſtians are ſaid to be offered up, c. 8. 3. noting that the prayers of the exil'd Chriſtians (that to avoid this deſtruction were departed to Pella, and many other places out of the land, and prayed for liberty to return to their country again) were come up before God, and in mercy to them, the ſiege of Jeruſalem, that now followes, was haſtned.

13. And the ſixt Angel ſounded, and I heard a voice from the foure hornes of the golden altar, which is before God,]

e. 14. And me thought that voyce ſaid to this ſixt Angel, that he ſhould take off that reſtraint cauſed by the preſent affaires at Rome, and by the great changes there, which detained Veſpaſian from ſetting upon Jeruſalem according to his purpoſe.

14. Saying to the ſixt Angel which had the trumpet, Looſe the foure Angels which are bound † in the great river [e] Euphrates. † at

15. And ſo they were let looſe from that reſtraint, i. e. permitted by the condition of affaires to march into Judæa, for which they were before ready, but had by the providence of God interpoſing ſome hindrances, as he thought fit, been kept for this point of time, to a day (as we ſay) which God hath determined, as moſt agreeable to all his purpoſes of ſaving ſome, and deſtroying the reſt.

15. And the foure Angels were looſed, which were prepared for an houre and a day and a moneth and a year, for to ſlay the third part of men.]

16. And me thought their armies of horſemen were preſently muſtered, and the number of them found to be infinite, and unimaginable, the Syrians, Arabians, Itureans &c. in vaſt numbers aſſociating themſelves unto them.

16. And the number of the army of the horſe-men were two hundred thouſand thouſand, and I heard the number of them.

f. 17. And theſe troops of horſe or horſemen, were repreſented to me, with breaſtplates ſhining

17. And thus I ſaw the horſes in the viſion, and them that ſate on them, having [f] breaſtplates * of fire, and of Jacinth, and brimſtone, and the heads of the horſes were as the heads of lyons, and out of their mouths iſſued fire and ſmoke and brimſtone.] * fiery, and blew, and like brimſtone, πυρίνους, καὶ ὑακινθίνους, καὶ θειώδεις like

like flaming fire, and their aſpect moſt terrible, like that of Lyons gaping, and flaming fire iſſuing out of their mouthes. Or elſe the front of this army noted by their breaſtplates, and heads, were very formidable.

18. By theſe three was the third part of men killed, by the fire, and by the ſmoak, and by the brimſtone, which iſſued out of their mouths.]

18. And a multitude of the Jewes were killed by them in their paſſage through the country.

19. For their power is in their mouth and in their tails: for their tails were like unto ſerpents, and had heads, and with them they doe hurt.]

19. And the rear of this army was as terrible as the front, came after waſting and deſtroying, as the front had done v. 18. And ſo the whole army was like that kind of ſerpent which hath an head in the taile, and wounds as dangerouſly with that, as with the other.

20. And the reſt of the men which were not killed by theſe plagues, yet repented not of the workes of their hands, that they ſhould not worſhip devills, and idols of gold, and ſilver, and braſſe, and ſtone and of wood, which neither can ſee, nor hear, nor walk:]

20. And though many of the inhabitants were deſtroyed by this meanes, yet were not they that eſcaped, nor the Gnoſticks among them, that had affociated with the Jewes againſt the Chriſtians (and were many of them now deſtroyed with them) reformed by all this; they yet repented not of their Idol-worſhip, which they took for an indifferent thing, but rather grew worſe and worſe,

21. Neither repented they of their murthers, nor of their ſorceries, nor of their fornication, nor of their theefts.]

21. And went on impenitently in all their bloodineſſe that they had been guilty of upon the Chriſtians, their ſorceries, (ſee note on Gal. 5. d.) yea and their abominable uncleannelſes and rapines, they were no whit the better for all that had yet befall'n them.

Notes on Chap. IX.

a. Ἀστὴρ πεσὼν

For the underſtanding of this enſuing chapter, and the interpretation of the other parts of this viſion upon the ſounding of theſe other Angels, It will be uſefull to take the riſe from the ἀστὴρ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ πεπτωκὼς, the ſtarre which had faln from heaven, for ſo πεπτωκὼς ſignifies in the prater, not preſent tenſe. This in all reaſon muſt relate to ch. 8. v. 10. where we read ἔπεσεν ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἀστὴρ μέγας, There fell from heaven a great ſtarre; Who that was, was defined moſt probably ch. 8. note e. viz.: the army of the σικαρίοι or ſeditious, under Ioſeph the ſon of Mattathias, that defended themſelves againſt Veſpaſian in the city Iotapata. For from theſe ſprang the Ζηλωταὶ Zelots, ſo much ſpoken of in Ioſephus, the forerunners, and haſtners of the woes foretold in the end of the laſt chapter, and which made the latter ſiege ſo extremely miſerable, and are now the ſubject of the viſions of this chapter. For it is briefly obſervable out of Ioſephus, that (as Galilee had the firſt, and principal of Chriſt's miracles afforded them, ſo) that region was to have their firſt part in the deſtruction; This was done in a moſt ſad manner by Veſpaſian in the 12th of Nero, (ſee ch. 8. note e.) and finiſht at the taking of Iotapata. At which time they that eſcaped the Romans ſword, ran in vaſt numbers to Ieruſalem, and being gotten into the city, helped to devour the proviſion laid in for the maintenance of the city, and not only ſo, but plunder'd them in a moſt horrible manner. Theſe coming under the pretenſe of great zeal to the law of God, and cuſtoms of their country, were called Zelots, and theſe betook themſelves into the Temple, as a place beſt fortified, and the high prieſt Annas ſtirring up the people againſt them, great ſlaughters were committed on both ſides, The Zelots called the Edumaans to their aid, Annas commands the gates to be ſhut againſt them, They getting in in a tempeſtuous night, joyn with the Zelots, and both of them together kill a great multitude, Annas himſelf, and the reſt of the Prieſts, and caſt their bodies out in the ſtreet, without burial, And at length the Edumaans diſliking, and deteſting the cruelty of the Zelots, returned to their own countrey, The Zelots they continue to make havock, pillage, and deſtroy, ſet guards, that none might go out of the city, and ſo beſiege and ſhut them up before the enemy comes, and in fine, are the ſoreſt enemies to the city of Ieruſalem that they ever felt, and cauſed the ſiege that attended to be then much more cruel, the famine more ſharp, and the deſtruction more terrible, than it could have been, if Seſtius Gallus had continued the ſiege, and taken them. And to make the condition yet more unhappy, whilſt theſe Zelots raged ſo within the city, the Sicarii were as unruly without, and ſo as it was moſt unſafe to remain within, becauſe of the Zelots, ſo in caſe they made any ſhift to get out of it, they fell into the hands of the cut-throats, under John, who deſiring to ſet himſelf up for a King, ſpoil'd and ſlaughter'd all, and at laſt was by the Zelots advanced, and ſet over them.

That ἐρρέθη it was ſaid] is a proper word to ſignifie a command of God's, appears by Mat. 5. where the precepts of the Decalogue are ſet down in this phraſe ἐρρέθη τοῖς ἀρχαίοις, it was ſaid to them of old. Now all the wiſe and gracious acts of God's providence, in protecting his ſervants, and reſtraining the malice of their enemies, is moſt properly thus expreſt, his will being of the ſame force to produce the effect, as his commands ought to be, And accordingly that is here meant, that by God's wiſe diſpoſal ſo it was, that in the judgments that fell upon Ieruſalem by the Zelots, the Chriſtians ſuffered not, For upon Seſtius Gallus's raiſing his ſiege we know the Chriſtians went out of Ieruſalem, and fled to Pella, (ſee note on ch. 8. c.) and ſo when the Zelots came to Ieruſalem, immediately before the ſiege by Titus, the Chriſtians were gone out of their way, and all their violence fell on the unbelieving Jewes, which accordingly continued there. And theſe are expreſt by the phraſe οἱ μὴ ἔχοντες τὴν σφραγῖδα τοῦ θεοῦ, as many as had not the ſeal of God on their foreheads (ſee ch. 7. c.) as the Chriſtians by χορτὸς and πᾶν χλωρὸν, and δένδρον, the graſs, and every green thing, and every tree, (ſee note on ch. 8. d.)

b. Ἐρρέθη αὐτοῖς

c. λιμὸς

The famine, which the plundering of the Zelots was to produce, is here very fitly expreſt by βασανίζειν, being tortured, as that is oppoſite to ἀποκτείνειν killing, becauſe famine, as the torture, is a lingring racking death, doth not dispatch men easily or quickly, as the sword doth, but (as it were breaking one limb after another) tearing of the flesh from the bones, consuming and emaciating them. And indeed of the time of the siege, it is literally affirmed by Eusebius, out of Josephus, that these Zelots or seditious Jewes in Jerusalem, tearing every man's victuals from him, δεινὰς βασάνων ὁδοὺς ἐπενόουν περὶ ἐφευρέσεως τροφῆς, l. 3. c. 6. invented cruel ways of torture to finde out food, when it was concealed from them by the possessors, or on conceit that it was concealed, where indeed it was not. And he mentions some of their inventions of torment, Ὀξείοις ἐμπηγνύντες πῆξις ἀδύτοις τὰ αἰδοῖον τοῦ πύρος, ῥάβδοις ἢ ὀξείαις ἀναπείροντες τὰς ἕδρας &c. A most horrible cruelty not fit to be translated, and, saith he, τὰ φρικτὰ καὶ ἀκοαῖς, 'twas terrible even to hear, what some men suffered, to make them confesse but one loaf of bread, when they had no more, perhaps not that. These he ordinarily styles there οἱ βασανισταὶ, the tormentors, and so that makes this representation here the more proper, and fit to expresse this matter of their plundering.

d. Τελευτὴν θανάτου. That which is here said, that men shall seek death, and shall not finde it, is a most proper expression of a lingring, tormenting death, and so of a famine, (which is most eminently such) and of such vastations and plunderings, which leave men life, but nothing to support, or sustain it; and such was the effect of the cruelty of these Zelots at this time. The very thing here said, is after in the time of the siege, set down by way of story, or relation of the fact by Eusebius, l. 3. c. 6. out of Josephus. That when the στασιασταὶ, or seditions were so lavish of their swords, that they would kill men, runne them through, only δοκιμὴν πῆρα τοῦ σιδήρου, to try their swords, or to keep them in ure, yet τοῦ ἰκαλδονίας χρῆναι σφίσι δεξιὰν καὶ ξίφος, τῷ λιμῷ πλέιστον ὑφηφανοῦντες, when any being ready to famish, desired them to lend them their hand and their sword, to put them out of their pain, they through arrogance and scorn of their miseries rejected their beseechings, and left them to the famine to use them more cruelly.

e. Εὐφράτης. What is here meant by Euphrates, is somewhat uncertain, It may signifie literally that known river, for it is said by Josephus l. 5. c. 6. that the Syrian Legions of the Roman army lay as far as Euphrates, and Philo in his Embassy, mentions στρατόπεδα περὶ Εὐφράτην the armies reaching to Euphrates. But in the style of these visions, it may also signifie somewhat else. For the River Euphrates, we know, is that which runnes through Babylon, and so that great river is fitly set to denote that city, as we ordinarily finde Tyber to be used for Rome, the Sea, for Galilee the Region which it belongs to, and many the like. Now that Babylon in these visions signifies Rome heathen, will be hereafter shewn, note on c. 18. 2. And so ἐπὶ Εὐφράτην may signifie (not in, but) at, or about Rome, which being the Seat of the Empire, the great changes and affairs concerning the Empire are fitly expresst by this phrase, and so we shall see Euphrates used c. 16. 12. for the city of Rome. Next it must be remembred, that the Angels being the Officers and Ministers of God, to execute his will, to inflict punishments, &c. the Roman commanders under Vespasian, that were such instruments in destroying Jerusalem, are accordingly call'd his Angels, And so frequently this destruction of Jerusalem, is expresst by Christ's coming with his Angels, visiting with or by these officers or instruments of his, And of these, it seems, there were four principal ones, or else this certain number is used for an uncertain, as the fourth and third part of the land are not to be thought that proportion exactly measured or numbered. Lastly, the binding of these Angels must signifie the detaining, or stopping of them from doing that work, And so the plain meaning of this verse will be, that upon occasion of the affairs of the Roman Empire, the Roman armies were stopt a while from their purpose of besieging Jerusalem, And thus it is evident in the story. When the Zelots, after Vespasians subduing of Galilee, fled riotously into Jerusalem, and wrought those mischiefs there, (set down in the former part of this Chapter) And Vespasian seeing the Jewes by their civil broiles destroy one another, he made no great haste to set about the siege, till some multitudes that fled out of Jerusalem came, and besought him, that he would in meer pity come, and take them, and rescue them from this scourge of Scorpions, the Zelots; Vespasian upon this prepared to go up against Jerusalem, with all his forces. But (which is the thing here foretold) hearing of the death of the Emperor, deferr'd this expedition, saith Josephus de bell: Jud: l. 5. c. 1. expecting to see how the Empire would be disposed of. And not only so, but Mutianus President of Syria, and a chief Promoter of Vespasian to the Empire, went out from Syria with a great body of horse and foot, into Italy, and came to Rome with them the next day after Vitellius was conquered and slain, see Josephus de bell: l. 4. c. μα', Titus also and Agrippa were sent to Rome, saith Baronius, Anno Ch: 70. in fine, And * so Tacitus as well as Josephus saith that Titus was sent by Vespasian from Syria to Rome, to congratulate Galba's promotion to the Empire, and receive directions about Judæa, but hearing of his death as he went, returned to Syria. And in brief, the changes being so great, and many after the death of Nero, and no settlement in the Empire, (Galba, Otho, Vitellius coming all to the Empire and parting with it again in so short time) it is Josephus's observation, that the Roman armies remained in suspence what to do, (that is the meaning of δεδεμένοι, bound here) and neglected their affairs in Judæa, thinking it unseasonable to attempt other nations, when there were such disquiets at home, Jos: de bell: l. 4. c. γιδ'. But within a while, Vitellius being kill'd, and his party overcome, Vespasian is chosen Emperor, being then at Alexandria in Ægypt, And the Empire being soon confirmed on him, he immediately betakes himself to the finishing his businesse in Judæa, having seasonably concluded his affairs in Ægypt, and so sends his son Titus with select forces to besiege Jerusalem, which is here meant by the loosing of the four Angels that were bound, i. e. detained by that former occasion. Upon which here follows immediately (as it did in the history) the marching of the Army toward Jerusalem.

What

f. What is here ſaid of the breſt-plates, or armour, and the ſeveral colours of it, may be thought to be interpretable literally, in reſpect of the ſeveral nations, of which this army conſiſted, diſtinguiſht purpoſely by the colour of their armour, for ſuch wales of differencing the ſoldiers are ordinary, and uſeful in armies; Or it may poſſibly denote no more, than that they were of ſteel, which is obſerved to caſt divers colours; But yet thirdly, theſe three colours may be ſet (as in prophetick ſtyle it is ordinary) only to deſcribe a terrible appearance, For ſuch is beſt, and moſt commonly repreſented by a flaming conſuming fire (as when God in his judgments is ſo called, Heb. 12.29. And his Angels as executioners of his wrath are called a flaming fire, Heb. 1. 7.) and ſuch doe theſe three colours make up, the lower part being of the colour of amber, c. 1.15. and here πύρινος, fire-colour, the next part of the flame, blew, and the uppermoſt of all, pale, or of the colour of brimſtone. (ſee note on c. 1. f.) And ſo in the greateſt flames 'tis ordinary to be ſeen, And then it is agreeable to the Hebrew ſtyle, to expreſſe one thing by the enumeration of the ſeverals that make it up (ſee 2 Pet. 3.d) the flaming fire by theſe three parts of it. And ſo this may be the meaning of the whole phraſe, this army, the captains whereof are called Angels v.14. came in a moſt dreadful, formidable appearance, like a flaming conſuming fire. And to the ſame purpoſe all the following expreſſions may be expounded, their heads were like the heads of lyons,] Which ſure ſignifies no more, but they looked very terribly, as we know lyons heads are the moſt frightful part of that dreadful beaſt, eſpecially when they gape, to which the next part of the deſcription may relate. Out of their mouthes cometh out fire, and ſmoak, and brimſtone,] i. e. flaming-fire again, for the ſmoak here is all one with the blew above (the colour of ſmoak) as the fire and brimſtone are again repeated here. As a lyon gaping or yawning from his prey, and the blood of it about his mouth, looks very diſmally, the bloodineſſe and fierceneſſe of his countenance is, as if a flaming fire, or fire and ſmoak and brimſtone came out of his mouth. 'Tis not impoſſible indeed that by the likeneſſe of fire and ſmoak and brimſtone coming out of their mouthes might be ſignified fire-balls, or granado's, or ſuch like inſtruments of firing cities, then in uſe, and ſo ſaith Valerius Flaccus of Titus, beſieging Ieruſalem, Spargentémque faces, & in omni turre furentem, that he threw fire-brands, or balls into the city and ſet the towres on fire, But this part of the viſion being the ſetting down the march of the army, not yet ſet down before the city, or diſplaying their fire-balls, the phraſes will not ſo probably be applyable to that, and ſo may perhaps ſignifie no more than the terribleneſs of their appearance, as they paſt, And then to that alſo may belong all that follows, As 1. that by theſe three plagues ver. 18. the third part of men were killed] i. e. by this fire and ſmoak and brimſtone going out of their mouths, i. e. by this formidable, diſmall army, as by a flaming fire, conſiſting of thoſe three parts, a great multitude of the Iewes were ſlain in their paſſage through the countrey, And ſo again v. 19. Their power is in their mouth, and in their tayles] For though it is poſſible again, that by the mouth and the tayle] may be meant the horſe-men, and for expedition ſake, a foot-man took up behind every one of them (to which will alſo be appliable that which follows, that their tayles had heads, and with them they doe hurt, i. e. theſe foot-men ſet down from the horſes were able to fight alſo. and indeed were the moſt miſchievous) yet it is very reaſonable to expound that alſo more groſsly, that this army cannot better be expreſt than by a perſonous killing ſerpent, that particularly call'd amphisbæna, which hath an head at each end, and ſo can equally wound by either; Which being applied to the whole army, and not to each horſe-man in it, will denote the two parts of the army, a front and a rear, the former before deſcribed v. 17, 18. very terrible in their march, and making great ſlaughters; and then both of them together v. 19. that their tayle is as formidable, as their head, their rear as their front, and in reſpect of both together they are like that ſerpent, which hath another head in the tayle, and can doe as much hurt with that, as with the other. What is the particular notation of each of theſe phraſes, may be ſomewhat uncertain, whether either of theſe, or whether yet ſome other rather; but for the main, or all together there is little doubt, but they make up a deſcription of the terribleneſs of that army in their march toward Ieruſalem, and the great ſlaughters on the Iewes by the way thither, and that is all that is neceſſary to be known for the underſtanding the viſion.

CHAP. X.

Paraphraſe.

1. And I ſaw another mighty Angel come down from heaven, clothed with a cloud, and a rainebow was upon his head, and his face was as it were the ſunne, and his feet as pillars of fire.]

1. Upon the multiplying of theſe ſinnes c. 9 21. and impenitent continuing in all their provocations, it was juſt with God to proceed, as now he appeared to me in the viſion to doe; For me thought, I ſaw, another Angel of ſpeciall dignity, (ſuch as ch. 5. 2. and ch. 18. 21. deſigned and uſed for eminent imployments) coming down in a cloud from heaven (as Angels are wont to doe on Gods meſſages) having a rainbow on his head, either to denote a glorious appearance, as Ezech. 1. 28. or perhaps moreover (ſee c. 4. 3.) Gods covenant of mercy and deliverance, made with all his faithfull ſervants, who were now to receive benefit by what ſhould fall out (ſee c. 9. 13.) but his lookes or countenance were moſt terrible, and his feet, denoting his wayes, and preſent deſigned actions, were moſt ſad and deſtructive, the fire noting deſtruction, and the pillars the fixtneſſe of the decree, the immutableneſſe of it.

2. And he had in his hand a little book open, and he ſet his right foot upon the ſea, and his left foot upon the * earth,]

2. And he had in his hand a roll opened, and ſo ready to be read, wherein was contained a ſentence againſt the whole nation of the Iewes, (ſee note on c. 7. 6.) a decree come out from God of utter deſtruction, and this was the completion of that prophecy, wherein 'twas ſaid, that Chriſt ſhould make his enemies his footſtool, i. e. ſubdue and bring them down, and that here expreſt by this Angels ſetting both his feet on them.

* land ſea

3. And this Angel roared terribly, as a Lyon doth roar after his prey, when he is in ſight of it, and upon that, as upon a call, the ſeven thunders uttered their voices, i. e. me thought I heard ſeven, i. e. many, claps of thunder, and voices coming out of them, by which the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by Titus was ſhortly repreſented.

a. 3. And cryed with a loud voyce, as when a lyon roareth: and when he had cryed, [a] ſeven thunders uttered their voyces.]

4. And as I had before written what I had ſeen and heard, ſo now I was about to doe, to ſet down what was ſaid by thoſe voices, but I was commanded that I ſhould not doe ſo, but on the other ſide that I ſhould ſhut and ſeal them up, ſignifying them to be too terrible to be revealed, (the ears of every one that heard them would tingle) and therefore fitter to be ſealed and cloſed up in ſilence, then to be recorded or ſet down, (ſuch was this deſtruction by Titus.)

4. And when the ſeven thunders had uttered their voyces, I was about to write: and I heard a voyce from heaven, ſaying unto me, Seal up thoſe things, which the ſeven thunders uttered, and write them not.]

5. And the Angel ver. 1. lift up his hand to heaven, as a ceremony of ſwearing, Gen. 14. 22. Deut. 32. 40. (proportionably to that which is ſaid of God, concerning the provoking Iſraelites, that he ſware in his wrath, they ſhould not enter into his reſt, (i. e. that they ſhould die in the wilderneſſe, and not enter into Canaan) or concerning the delivering his people out of Antiochus's hands, Dan. 12. 7.)

5. And the Angel, which I ſaw ſtand upon the ſea, and upon the † earth, lifted up his hand to heaven,] † land γῆς

6,7. And with an oath by God the creator of all the world, he pronounced the ſentence, that time or delay ſhould no more be, i. e. that this execution of God's decree ſhould be no longer deferred, but the deſtruction, ſo long threatned, which when it came, it ſhould be a total utter deſtruction, ſhould now immediately light upon this people. A very great part of it now by Titus, And within a very little while, upon the ſounding of the ſeventh Angel it ſhould be perfected, and ſo all thoſe prophecies be fulfilled, whereby it had been foretold both by the old prophets, and ſince, by the prophets under the New Teſtament, to whom it had been made known by God, though when, or at what point of time, it had never been revealed to any, Mat. 24. 36. Act. 1. 7. and ſo was kept as a myſterie.

b. 6. And ſware by him that liveth for ever and ever, who created heaven, and the things that therein are, and the earth, and the things that therein are, and the ſea, and the things which are therein, that there ſhould be * [b] time no longer; * delay

7. But in the daies of the voice of the ſeventh Angel, when he ſhall † begin to ſound, the myſterie of God ſhould be finiſhed, as he hath declared to his ſervants the prophets.] † be ready to ſound μέλλῃ σαλπίζειν

8. And that voice that ſpake to me from heaven, ver. 4. again ſpake to me, and commanded me to goe to that Angel v. 2. and beſeech him to give me the book or roll (wherein that ſentence was written.)

8. And the voice, which I heard from heaven, ſpake unto me again, and ſaid, Go and take the little book which is open in the hand of the Angel, which * ſtandeth upon the ſea, and upon the † earth.] * ſtood ἑστῶτος † land γῆς

9. And I went and beſought him for it, & he gave it me, and bid me eat it, ſee Ezech. 3. 1. telling me that though it would taſt a little pleaſant in my mouth, Ezech. 3. 3. yet when 'twas in the ſtomach 'twould be very bitter, i. e. that though in reſpect of the reſcue and deliverance, that would befall the godly by the deſtruction of theſe enemies of theirs, and by conſideration of the great juſtice of God upon theſe that ſo well deſerved it, I ſhould, while I conſidered that alone, fully approve, and be well pleaſed with this ſentence againſt the Jewes; Yet when I began to ſee, and conſider it in the terribleneſs of it, and in the utter vaſtation of a glorious Temple, where God had ſo long been pleaſed to dwell, and of a people which God had taken and owned peculiarly for himſelf, it would be a moſt horrible, and amazing thing to me.

9. And I went unto the Angel, and ſaid unto him, Give me the little book. And he ſaid unto me, Take it and eat it up, and it ſhall make thy belly bitter, but it ſhall be in thy mouth ſweet as honey.]

10. And I took the roll and devoured it, i. e. conſidered & meditated upon it, on both parts of it, the deſtructions to the Jewes, as well as the deliverances and advantages to Chriſtians, the terribleneſſe of the utter deſtruction, as well as the merits of the Jewes that brought it on them, and though the one pleaſed me exceedingly, yet, as honey, that is ſweet to the taſt, when 'tis eaten, is very uneaſie to the ſtomach, ſo the other part, that of the deſtructions of my country-men the Jewes, was matter of horrible grief to me.

10. And I took the little book out of the Angels hand, and ate it up, and it was in my mouth ſweet as honey: and aſſoon as I had eaten it, my belly was bitter.]

c. 11. And when I thought with my ſelf, ſure now there is an end of the viſion concerning the Jewes, there is no more to be ſeen or prophecied of, the Angel ſaid unto me, that beyond this deſtruction of the Temple and Jeruſalem, and Judæa under Titus, to which theſe laſt parts of the viſion belonged, there was yet more matter of prophecie belonging to this people, what ſhould yet farther betide them from the Romans (after this deſtruction) by enſuing Emperours, Adrian eſpecially, and other Kings and people, that ſhould aſſiſt him in rooting out this nation.

11. And he ſaid unto me, Thou muſt prophecie again * before ' many peoples, and nations, and tongues, and † kings.] * of the people † many kings

2. Ἐπὶ τῆς θαλάσσης] Ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς

What is meant by the ἑπτὰ βρονταὶ ſeven thunders] here, muſt be obſerved, for the clearing the whole matter. That thunders are the fitteſt expreſſions, or emblems of great blows, or judgments, is obvious to every man, and ſo that the number of ſeven, being a compleat number, is fitly affixt, when any fatal, ſignal blow is to be inflicted; And ſo theſe ſeven thunders here ſending forth their voices] ſignifie the deſtruction, to which ſuch preparation was made in the former viſions, the deſtruction of Ieruſalem under Titus. This ſo ſad, and terrible, that it was not to be committed to writing ver. 4. And this utterly irreparable, never to be made up again, which was the importance of the Angels oath, ver. 5, 6. Only ſome addition there might be made to it, and that ſhould ſoon be done, the utter deſtruction ſhould be compleated in Adrian's time, call'd the daies of the voice of the ſeventh seventh trumpet, ver. 7. And that is the third and last woe, c. 11. 14. And that, when it came, v. 15. ſet down in a parallel phraſe to this of the ſeven thunders, viz. ἐγένοντο φωναὶ μεγάλαι ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ. there were great voices in heaven. For φωναὶ and βρονταὶ voices and thunders every where appear to be all one in theſe books, (ſee note on ch. 11. c.) and the addition of great] will have a force in it, and denote that there under Adrian to be the completing of the deſtruction. That ſo great things as theſe two, the deſtruction under Titus, and the full meaſure under Adrian, ſhould be ſo briefly ſet down in theſe viſions, as by theſe two phraſes, the ſeven thunders uttering their voices, and there were great voices or thunders in heaven] will not ſeem ſtrange if 1. it be obſerved that the few words [ſeven thunders and great voices] have great force in them, as great as any circumlocution of words could expreſs, and ſo we know the one ſingle γέγονε, It was] c. 16. 17. is the deſcription of the deſtruction of heathen Rome, and accordingly the Latine word Fuit, it hath been, or 'tis gone] is as full an expreſſion of an utter deſtruction of Troy, or any the moſt famous city, or people, as can be; and 2^dly, if it be remembred, what pomp had been formerly uſed in the foregoing Chapters to expreſs it as approaching, which made it unneceſſary to deſcribe it again more largely when it came to paſſe.

Ἡμέραι εἰσὶ τῆς φωνῆς τοῦ ἑβδόμου

b. The word χρόνος ſignifying time, ſignifies delay alſo, and accordingly thus the verb χρονίζω, (rendred by Heſychius, διατρίβω, to ſtay), is uſed by the Apoſtle, Heb. 10. 37. Ὁ ἐρχόμενος ὁ χρονίσει, he that comes will not delay, in the very notion, that here [οὐκέτι ἔσται χρόνος ἔτι] there ſhall be no longer a day, Gods judgments ſhall ſpeedily be executed, and this moſt agreeably to the expreſſion in Habakkuk c. 2. 3. It will ſurely come, οὐ μὴ χρονίσῃ, it will not tarry, or delay any longer. So Eccluſ. 7. 16. of wrath, i. e. the judgements of God, ὁ χρονίων, it will make no long delay, and c. 12. 15. ὁ χρονίων, he will not tarry. And ſo in Demoſthenes the word is uſed, χρόνος ἐμποιῶν τοῖς πράγμασι, to cauſe delay to affairs.

c. What ἐπὶ λαοῖς] here ſignifies, may be thus collected. The word λαὸς people] is frequently taken for the Jewes, and then here in the plural (ſee Act. 4. 25. and note on Rev. 11. f.) it will do the ſame, or elſe farther, it may ſignifie this people in all their diſperſions, in Africk and Ægypt and Greece, &c. where the judgements of God ſhould finde them out, as many as continued obdurate, according to that of Chriſt's prediction, that whereſoever the carcaſſe was, the Roman Eagles ſhould congregate, and aſſemble unto them. Then for ἐπὶ that muſt rather be render'd of, or concerning, (according to the looſer uſe of the Hebrew עַל, anſwerable to it) then before. And then προφητεύσει ἐπὶ λαοῖς] is an eaſie and ordinary phraſe, to denote the matter of the prophecy, and not the auditors of it, as when Ezech. 32. 2. 'tis ſaid, take up a lamentation עַל פַּרְעֹה, it is not before, but concerning Pharaoh. Then for the πολλοῖς many, that in the ordinary tranſlation is joyned with people, in the Greek 'tis the laſt word of the verſe, adjoyned to βασιλεῦσι Kings, and ſo muſt in reaſon be joyned in the rendring. Then for the reſt that follow, ἔθνεσι καὶ γλώσσαις καὶ βασιλεῦσι πολλοῖς nations and languages] thoſe words moſt fitly ſignifie the heathen world of diſtinct languages one from another, and all from the Jewes, and agreeably the βασιλεῦσι πολλοῖς many Kings] will ſignifie their Princes, or (conſidering them together in an army) their Commanders, or Rulers over them. And the joyning of theſe with the λαοῖς, the people of the Jewes, in the enſuing prophecy, will then ſignifie their fighting, and deſtroying the Jewes, and ſo it will moſt exactly belong to the time of Adrian the Emperor of Rome, and his Commanders, (all ſuch being called βασιλεῖς Kings, ſee c. 6. note h.) Marcius Turbo, and Ruſus, &c. together with the Auxiliaries, that came in to him from the Parthians, and many other nations. All which together are the ſubject of his next prophecy, c. 11. which is yet wanting to complete the deſtruction of the Jewes, and therefore 'tis ſaid Δεῖ σε πάλιν, Thou muſt prophecy again, or ſee another viſion, and this will be the ſubject of it, the dealing of the Jewes, and the farther deſtruction that befell them in Adrian's time. By what hath here been ſaid, will appear alſo, what is meant by the people and kindred, or tribes, and tongues, and nations, c. 11. 9. the two former λαοὶ and φυλαὶ, people and tribes, denoting the Jewes, and the tongues and nations] denoting the Gentiles, viz. the people of Jeruſalem, as now they were, made up of Jewes and Gentiles, neither of which ſhould ſhew any reverence to the Chriſtians, or expreſſe any kindneſſe to them, whilſt thoſe ſeditious people under Barchochebah, were in power, but on the contrary uſe them contumeliouſly, and triumph over them, v. 10. And ſo I ſuppoſe φυλαὶ καὶ γλῶσσαι καὶ ἔθνη tribes, and tongues, and nations, c. 14. 7. may denote the Jewes and Gentiles, i. e. in that place, the Saints, or Chriſtians whereſoever inhabiting.

CHAP. XI.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND there was given me a reed like unto a rod, and the Angel ſtood, ſaying, Riſe, and meaſure the Temple of God, and the [a] Altar, and them that worſhip therein.]

1. After the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by Titus, c. 10. 2.

the moſt memorable paſſage concerning this matter of the Jews, (and ſo the fitteſt matter of a farther viſion) being that which fell on that people under the Emperor Adrian, the next viſion here ſeems to belong to that. And by way of preparation to the repreſenting of it, here is firſt ſet down Adrian's re-building of Jeruſalem, and ſetting up the heathen worſhip there. To this purpoſe, ſaith he, Me thought I had a meaſuring rod, or pole, or perch, given me, (as in Ezechiel c. 40.) and a command from the Angel to mete the Temple of God, i. e. firſt the Sanctuary, or Holy, and in it the Holy of Holies, and then the Court, where the altar of burnt-offerings ſtood, and where the people worſhipt and prayed to God, called the court of the Iſraelites. (This meaſuring is the incloſing or ſetting thus much of the Temple apart in memory of the former conſecration, not to be profaned or medled with, i. e. built upon by the Emperor Adrian, who now deſigned to erect a new city there, calling it (by his own name Ælius) Ælia.)

2. But

1. But I was appointed to leave or cast out, i. e. not thus to measure or inclose the court of the Gentiles, called the outer court, (see note on Eph. 2. a.) noting that the Roman Emperour should take that in, and build upon it and about it a new city, not only for Jews, but Gentiles to live in; And so that Jerusalem, formerly called the faithful and holy city, should now, being thus re-built, be called by another name, and profaned with Idol-worship, a Temple being erected to Jupiter upon mount Sion, and so continue for the same proportion of time, (i. e. three years and an half) that it had in Daniels prophecy been profaned by Antiochus, Dan. 7. 25.

2. But the court which is without the Temple † leave out, and measure it not: for it is given unto the * Gentiles, and the holy city shall they tread under foot fourty and two moneths.]

† cast out ἐκβαλὲ
* nations ἔθνεσιν

b. 3. And all this time there being two Christian Bishops of Jerusalem, one of the Jewish, t'other of the Gentile or stranger Christians there, and these being raised up by God like prophets to forewarn men of their sinnes, and danger, shall like prophets set themselves against the sinnes both of the Jewes and Gentiles, labour to convert them all to Christianity, to bring them to the reformation of their wicked lives, to the purging out of all the abominable sins (mentioned c. 9. 20, 21.) unreformed among them, and this the Angel told me they should do all that space of three years and an half (mentioned v. 2.) and do it (as prophets are wont, when they prophecy judgments on unreformed sinners) in sackcloth (see Mat. 3. d.) denoting the yet farther evil effects, that would be consequent to their still holding out impenitent against the Faith.

3. And I will give power unto my [b] two witnesses, and they shall prophecy a thousand two hundred and threescore days, clothed in sackcloth.]

4. These two Bishops of the Christian Churches there, together with the congregations belonging to them, were now to be looked on, as the advancers and restorers of piety, after that general depravation, and infidelity in that place, and are therefore compared the Bishops to Zorobabel and Joshua, Zach. 4. 3. described there by the emblems of the two Olive-trees, and the two Churches to the two Candlesticks (see c. 1. 20.) standing before the God of the land, v. 14. i. e. serving Christ continually at a time of such universal corruption among all others.

4. These are the two Olive-trees, and the two Candlesticks, standing before the God of the † earth.]

† land; γῆς

5. And to these two are appliable two passages of story belonging to Elias, as first bringing down fire from heaven (noting what shall befall their enemies v. 13.)

5. And if any man will hurt them, fire proceedeth out of their mouth, and devoureth their enemies: and if any man will hurt them, he must in this manner be killed.]

6. And secondly, having that power of prayer as to shut up heaven that it should not rain, for the same space that Elias did, i. e. three years and half v. 3. (see Jam 5. 17.) And two passages more referring to Moses, as 1. the power to turn the water into blood through all Ægypt, and 2. to bring plagues upon them, Noting by both these, that they were a kind of Moses and Elias, designed by God, one to bring the Jews to obedience, as Moses, the other to destroy Idolatry, as Elias, the first the work of the Bishop of the Jewish congregations, the second of the Bishop of the Gentiles.

6. These have power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy, and have power * over waters to turn them to blood, and to smite the earth with all plagues as often as they will.]

* on the waters ἐπὶ τῶν ὑδάτων

c. 7. And when they have spent a good time in discharging their office thus, in endevouring to reduce both Jews and Gentiles, and bring them into the Church, An eminent instrument of the devils, Barchochebah, in Adrian's time will gather a multitude of unbeleiving Jews unto him, and as a wild beast ravine and devour, kill and plunder all that will not joyn with him against the Romans, and so (as histories affirm of him) handle the Christians cruelly, and hostilely, because they would not doe so, and unless they would deny Christ.

7. And when they shall have finished their testimony, the beast, that ascendeth out of the bottomelesse pit, shall make [c] war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them.]

8. And upon this pretence kill them, and cast out their carcasses in the streets without burial, and this still in Jerusalem (that no Prophet might be slain any where else) which cannot better be compared, then to Sodome, for abominable sins of the Gnosticks, to Ægypt, (see note c. on ch 14.) for oppressing God's people, i. e. the Christians, nor expresst by any character, then that which brought all their punishments upon them, their crucifying of Christ, and dealing in like manner with Christians:

8. And their dead bodies shall lie in the streets of the great City, which spiritually is called Sodome, and Ægypt, where also our Lord was crucified:]

9. And thus shall it be, the Christians shall be thus slain, and cast out into the streets, without any compassion or reverence, either from the Jews or heathens inhabiting at Jerusalem, (see note on ch. 10. c.) as long as that seditious company prevail there.

9. And they of the people, and † kindred, and tongues, and nations, shall see their dead bodies three days and an half, and shall not suffer their dead bodies to be put in * graves.

† tribes φυλῶν
* tombs, monuments μνήματα

10. And this should be matter of rejoycing and congratulating to the Jews one with another, as upon the destruction of their greatest enemies (as Elias was counted an enemy to Ahab, whom he would have reformed)

10. And they that dwell † upon the earth, shall rejoyce over them, and make merry, and shall send gifts one to another, because these two Prophets tormented them that dwelt on the earth.]

† on the land ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς

11. But after some time their cause should come to be heard before God, their injuries to be avenged, the Christians of these congregations should begin to flourish again, as in a kind of resurrection from the dead, by the power and mercy of God, and all that saw this, and the manner of doing it, (Christians rescued by the Idolatrous heathen Romans) could not but acknowledge it a great work of Gods, and worship God for it.

11. And after three days and an half the Spirit of life from God entred into them; and they stood upon their feet, and great fear fell upon them which saw them.]

12. And they were taken up as it were to heaven, out of this

12. And they heard a great voice from heaven, saying unto them, Come up hither. And they ascended up to heaven in a cloud, and their enemies beheld them.

bloody bloody seditious broil, that lay so heavy upon them, i. e. restored to a great and notable tranquillity, to Halcionian days of peace and Christian profession.

13. And the same houre was there a great earthquake, and the tenth part of the City fell, and in the earthquake were slain of men seven thousand, and the [d] remnant were affrighted, and gave glory to the God of heaven.

13. And as they were thus rescued and relieved, so the other d. inhabitants of that place, that joyned in that sedition, or complyed with them against the Christians, v. 10. were destroyed by the Romans, a great part of that new city, and the inhabitants thereof; and upon this the rest turned Christians, seeing the prophecies of the two witnesses fulfilled upon those, that would not beleive or obey them.

14. The [e] second woe is past, and behold, the third woe cometh quickly.]

14. And so this calamity lighting on the Jewes in Adrian's time was in a manner as bloody as that other under Titus, and though it came some time after the former, yet was not long deferred. That under Titus was the 2d woe, described from c. 9. 12, 15. to the end of chap. 10. and this under Adrian, the 3d, set down from the beginning of this chapter, and caused by the sedition of Barchochebah, v. 7. e.

15. And the seventh Angel sounded, and there were great voices in heaven, saying, [f] The kingdomes of this world are become the kingdomes of our Lord, and his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever.]

15. And this summarily repeated by the sounding of the seventh Angel, who was to conclude this whole tragedie. For as he sounded, thunders were immediately heard, i. e. pouring in of the Roman armies upon them, mention'd v. 13. and an immense multitude of Jewes, almost six hundred thousand of them, slain, saith Dio, others affirm as many more from the beginning of this warre. And as this was done on the seditious Jewes, so by this means the Christians, especially of the Gentiles, came to flourish there more than ever, and that whole city became in a manner Gentile-Christian, Marcus a Gentile being the one Bishop, under which both Jew and Gentile-Christians were united, and thus the Church of Jerusalem entred upon her flourishing condition, and the faith of Christ got the upper hand, so as it never should be destroyed utterly again. f.

16. And the four and twenty Elders, which sat before God on their seats, fell upon their faces, and worshipped God,]

16. And the four and twenty Bishops of Judæa ch. 4. 2. acknowledged this a great mercy of God, which tended wonderfully to the prosperity of the whole Church of Judæa under them,

17. Saying, We give thee thanks, O Lord God * Almighty, which † art, and wast, and art to come: because thou hast * taken to thee thy great power and hast reigned:]

17. Saying Blessed be God for this infinite mercy of his, wherein he hath magnified his fidelity to the Christians, and used the Gentile-Romans, as his instruments, to set up his Christian Church in Judæa.

* ruler of all things, παντοκράτωρ

* received εἴληφας
† have been angry, and thy wrath came ὠργίσθησαν, καὶ ἦλθεν, see note on c. 6. 17.

18. And the [g] nations † were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldst give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great: and shouldst destroy them which * destroy the [h] earth.]

18. Now is fulfilled that prophecie of Psal. 2. The Jewish nation have behaved themselves most stubbornly against Christ, and cruelly against Christians, and thy judgments are come upon them, and though the avenging of the blood of the Martyr-Christians have a while been deferred, til these other sufferings under Barchochebah were added to them, ch. 6. 11. yet now the time is fully come for all the vengeance to be powred out, the Jewes and Gnosticks to be destroyed, and all the orthodox pure constant Christians to have dates of tranquillity, and peaceable profession of the Gospel, and liberty of assemblies. g. h.

19. And the Temple of God was opend in heaven, and there was seen in his temple the ark of his † testament, and there were lightnings, and voices, and thundrings, and an earthquake, and great hail.]

19. And this as an effect of God's covenant of mercy made with beleivers, and which will never fail to be performed to all Christians, that will in time of distresses and persecutions wait and depend constantly, and that fall not off by any temptations from him. And there were lightnings, and voices, and thunders, and great hail, (which words in all probability belong to the next vision (and chapter) and so are connected by Andreas Cæsareensis, and his exscriber Arethas, and by them is noted, that there is a farther vision behind, and that consisting of thundrings, and lightnings, and earthquakes, i. e. menaces of judgments from heaven against those that had their hearts hardned, and stubborn against Christ, of which the hail was an emblem, c. 8. 7. And who these were, that were now next to come on the scene, will follow in the next Chapter.)

Notes on Chap. XI.

a. Θυσιαστήριον

The word θυσιαστήριον doth in some places signifie the Altar of incense, see c. 6. e. In other places there is no question but it signifies the altar of burnt-offering, but that again sometimes not strictly the Altar, but the court where the altar is placed. So ch. 14. 18. & 16. 7. it cannot be rendred Altar, because there is mention of one going forth, and another speaking out of it, it must therefore signifie the court, or place of sacrificing, wherein the Altar is, so saith the Glossary, Θυσιαστήριον sacrarium, altarium, and in Philoxenus, sacrarium, Ἡμῶν θυσιαστήριον, and in that sense, saith Ignatius, ὁ ἐκτὸς ὢν θυσιαστηρίου, ὅτουτέστιν τῆς ἀληθοῦς τοῦ Θεοῦ, he that is out of the Altar, i. e. the Church, &c. And agreeably in this place, by that which follows [and those that worship in it] (which belongs not to the Temple before, but is immediately annext to θυσιαστήριον) it cannot reasonably denote the Altar, but the place wherein men were, which worshipped, and that here most probably is (not the Sanctuary, where the Altar of incense was, but) ἡ ἔσωθεν αὐλὴ τοῦ ναοῦ, the inward court of the Temple (opposed to ἡ ἔξωθεν αὐλὴ, outer court, that of the Gentiles here) that, where the Congregation or people worshipped: See note on Mat. 23. h.

b. Μάρτυρες δύο

Who the two Witnesses are, is the main difficulty of this chapter, and the matter here spoken of yeilding some directions to pitch on the time, of which this vision treats, As 1. the farther judgments falling on Jerusalem, after the destruction by Titus. And 2dly, those after the rebuilding the

the city, and planting it with Gentiles, as well as Jewes, ver. 1, 2. which muſt needs belong to the time of Adrian; It may be reaſonable to forſake all other conjectures, and pitch upon that which the learned Hugo Grotius hath reſolved on, of making the two Churches, which were at this time at Jeruſalem, one of the Jewiſh, the other of Gentile Chriſtians, the two Witneſſes here ſpoken of; or more diſtinctly, I conceive, the two Biſhops of (and together with them) thoſe two Congregations. That there were two ſuch plantations in the ſame city, in many places, before the Jewes and Gentiles grew into one, appears by divers evidences; In Antioch as one Church was planted, and governed by Peter, the Apoſtle of the Circumciſion, ſo another by Paul the Apoſtle of the Gentiles, and that is expreſt in the Epiſtle of the Counſel of Jeruſalem, by [οἱ κατ' Ἀντιόχειαν &c. ἀδελφοὶ οἱ ἐξ ἐθνῶν, the brethren, i. e. the Church at Antioch, thoſe, or that of the Gentiles] and in the one, Evodius ſucceeded Biſhop, in the other Ignatius: So in Epheſus, and Aſia, John was founder of the Churches of the Jewes, and Paul of the Gentiles, and while John continued over the former, Timothy was by Paul made Biſhop at Epheſus over the latter: So at Rome, Peter was Biſhop of the Jewiſh congregation, and Clemens his Deacon, Paul of the Gentile part, and Linus his Deacon; and after them Clemens ſucceeds in one chair, and Linus in the other, and after him Cletus or Anacletus, and after him both joyn together under Clemens: And thus it is to be ſuppoſed at Jeruſalem, eſpecially after the deſtruction by Titus, when there were many Gentiles there, which may occaſion the multitude of Biſhops that Euſebius obſerves to have been there in few years, till they joyned both under Marcus a Gentile Biſhop in Adrian's time, (ſee ver. 15.) And this was in ſome degree neceſſary, not only becauſe there was ſome diſtance kept betwixt the Jewiſh and Gentile Chriſtians, (which at Rome, Paul endevoured to make up, Rom. 14. &c.) but in reſpect of the ſeveral languages, which they were of neceſſity to uſe in their aſſemblies, and farther in reſpect of the ſeveral cuſtomes for a good while continued among them. Now that all that is ſaid of theſe two Witneſſes, doth perfectly agree to theſe two Biſhops, and their congregations of Chriſtians, will appear in the Paraphraſe, and to that belong directly the deſcriptions here beſtowed on them, One, like Moſes over the Jewes, labouring to bring all that people out of their Ægyptian blindneſſe, and bondage to ſin, their unchriſtian impenitence, and the other, like Elias, preaching down idolatry, bringing the Heathens to Chriſtianity. And then to theſe are fitly adjoyned (in the chorus, as it were) the 24 Elders, ver. 16. i. e. the Biſhops of all Judea, that belonged to the Biſhops of Jeruſalem, (as leſſer cities to a Metropolis, ch 4. 4.) and had their part in the benefit of this deſtruction that fell on Barchochebah, and the ſeditious Jewes.

c. That Barchochebah raiſed a ſedition againſt the Romans is known in ſtory, and that he call'd himſelf by that name, as ſon of a ſtarre, but was after more truly call'd the ſon of a lie, i. e. of an idol, which is a lie, and that idol, a falſe God, i. e. the Devil, or elſe more generally the ſon of a lie, i. e. an impoſtor, coming from the father of lies, ſtirr'd up, and agitated by him, and ſo here aſcending out of the abyſſe. The only thing here farther affirm'd of him is, that he warres againſt the two Witneſſes, i. e. againſt all the Chriſtians in Jeruſalem and Judea, uſing them cruelly & bloodily, if they would not joyn with him againſt the Romans, and if they would not deny Chriſt. Theſe two things are diſtinctly affirmed, the firſt by Euſebius in his Chronicon, Chochebah, ſaith he, leader of a faction of the Iewes, kill'd with all cruelty the Chriſtians, that would not help him againſt the Romans. The 2d by Juſtin Martyr, Apol. 2. Βαρχοχέβας ὁ τῆς Ἰουδαίων ἀποστάσεως ἀρχηγέτης, κελεύων μόνους εἰς τιμωρίας ἄνεσθαι, εἰ μὴ ἀρνοῖντο Ἰησοῦν & κείσεσθαι, καὶ βλασφημοῦντας, ἄλλα ἀνήκεστα, Barchochebas the leader of the defection of the Iewes commanded the Chriſtians, and none elſe, to be led to cruel torments, if they would not deny Chriſt, and blaſpheme him.

d. That the remnant here, i. e. all the Iewes in Jeruſalem, that were not now deſtroyed, did convert and beleive in Chriſt, appears by that which is ordinarily known in ſtory, that Adrian at this time by edict baniſht all the Iewes out of it, i. e. all that remained ſuch, or were not converted to Chriſtianity, and ſet up the picture of a Swine at the gates, to keep any of them from thoughts of entring again, and even to baniſh their eyes from thence, mean while the Chriſtians freely returning thither from their diſperſions, and inhabiting quietly there, Chriſtianis tantùm permiſſa civitas, ſaith Oroſius, the city was permitted to Chriſtians only, (ſee note on Lu. 21. c.) i. e. no Iewes were there permitted, that received not Chriſtianity.

e. Some miſtake there may poſſibly be in this place by conceiving theſe words [Ἡ οὐαὶ ἡ δευτέρα ἀπῆλθεν, the ſecond woe is paſt] to denote the deſcription of that ſecond woe to end in this place, and conſequently that [behold the third woe cometh quickly] ſhould ſignifie that the coming of that third woe ſhould now next be ſet down. But this is a miſtake, that would be apt to diſturb and perplex the viſion, For of the three woes denounced ch. 8. 13. 'tis plain that the firſt is ſet down, from ch. 9. 1, to v. 12. and there concludes, the firſt woe is paſt, Then after that, ſaith the viſion, Ἔρχονται ἔτι δύο οὐαί, there come two woes more, Theſe two are coupled together, and not ſet down ſo ſeverally, as this firſt was from thoſe two, (thoſe latter two agreeing one with the other in this, that they were both executed by the Romans, whereas the firſt was by the Zelots among themſelves) and ſo deſcribed ſomewhat undiſcernibly, yet ſo that the ſecond may be found to end ch. 10. 10. upon which 'tis ſaid, that he muſt prophecie again, v. 11. i. e. that there was not yet an end of that ſad matter, but that the third woe was ſtill behind, and that ſet down from the beginning of this 11th chap. to ver. 14. where that third, (and ſo both theſe δύο ἐστὶ the ſecond and third named together, ch. 9. 12.) being at an end, in reference to both of them, this verſe muſt be underſtood, that as the ſecond had been fulfill'd, ch. 10. 10. ſo within a ſmall time after, no longer then from Titus to Adrian, the third was executed alſo, only by way of recapitulation, the ſame thing is again ſet down, v. 15. very briefly in the ſounding of the Seventh trumpet, (as had been foretold it ſhould, ch. 10. 6, 7.) upon which come out the great voices, i. e. thunders (for voices and thunders, thunders, φωναὶ), and βρονταὶ, are all one, see note on Act. 9. b.) signifying that destruction, (see note on ch. 10. a.) And this third woe being thus added to the two former, the effect, and result of all the three woes is, the setting up of Christianity in Judaea. And that is signified by the acclamations, the Kingdome is the Lords &c. Which speech is said to be delivered by the thunders, as being a most natural consequent of that destruction. And then a new vision of a new matter begins at the beginning of the twelfth chapter.

f. What is here meant by this acclamation [the Kingdoms of this world are become the Kingdoms of our Lord &c.] may best be understood by these degrees. 1. That becoming the Lords] signifies conversion to Christianity, and that is evident by the addition of καὶ τοῦ Χριστοῦ αὐτοῦ and his Christs.] 2dly, That the Kingdoms of the world] signifies not here the whole world, and all the Kingdoms of that, but as (when it is said the world hateth you, and, I pray not for the world, and very often in the same style) the world signifies unbelievers, and βασιλεῖαι τοῦ κόσμου the whole societies and multitudes of them. And this being by the context applied to Jerusalem and Judaea, the plain meaning of the whole phrase must be, that the inhabitants of Jerusalem and Judaea were now generally converted to the faith of Christ, As in the story it was known to be in Adrian's time, after the defeating of Barchochebah, the unbeleiving Jewes being finally banisht thence, and the city inhabited by Christians of that and other nations indifferently, see Euseb: Eccl: hist: l. 4. c. 5. As for that which follows in the acclamation, καὶ βασιλεύσει εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων, and he shall reign for ever and ever] that is capable of a twofold interpretation, either more generally, that the Christian faith, and Church shall continue forever, (the gates of hades never prevailing against it) and support it self from being utterly destroyed, against all opposition; and this here fit to be pronounced of the Church in general upon occasion of this good successe of it in Jerusalem, and Judaea, where it had been so long persecuted, but now had gotten the victory, Or 2dly, applying it particularly to this Church, the meaning may be, that Christ should have faithfull servants in Judaea, and continue to have so to all eternity; which hath yet been made good through all changes and vicissitudes, under the Pagan, and Christian Emperors first, and since under Saracens and Turkes.

g. The word ἔθνος or ἔθνη doth not only belong to other nations in opposition to the Jewes (the Ethnicks or heathens, as we call them, though when the word ἐθνικοὶ is used, that is the particular notion of it) but also to Palaestine, either all together (as οἱ ἀπὸ τοῦ ἔθνους, in Orig: cont: Celsum l. 4. are the Jewes in contradistinction to others) or to the several parts of it divided now into Tetrarchies. Judaea one ἔθνος, and Galilee, another, &c. and so saith Josephus of Galilee, that it was the valianteſt ἔθνος nation of Palaestine, the powerfullest and best fortified, when he speaks of Vespasian's overcoming it. And so in the Gospels, ἔθνος ἐπὶ ἔθνος nation against nation, Mat. 24. 7. Mar. 13. 8. Lu. 21. 10. & Joh. 11. 48, 51, 52. & c. 18. 35. and in many other places; (and agreeably the Tetrarch of any one of these was called ἐθνάρχης, and in Latine Authors, Ethnarcha. Of which see Baronius ad An: Chr: 2. August: 49.) And not only in the singular number, but also in the plural, συνοχὴ ἐθνῶν Lu. 21. 25. the distresse of nations, i. e. of the several parts of Palaestine, noted by [ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, on the land] which belongs to that peculiarly (see note on ch. 7. a.) and to the inhabitants thereof, the Jewes, and not to the heathens in the rest of the world, For so that text referres, speaking of their distresse, and great consternation (see note on Rev. 6. f.) συνοχὴ and ἀπορία, and their deanimation for fear and expectation of what would come upon the οἰκουμένη world, that is that whole people (see Lu. 2. 1.) So Act. 4. 25. out of the Psalmist, the ἔθνη καὶ λαοὶ, nations and people, that murmured against Christ, are sure the people of the Jewes, and are expresst v. 26. by βασιλεῖς τῆς γῆς καὶ ἄρχοντες, the Kings of the Land and the rulers, by the Kings meaning Herod (who had the rule of them under the Romans) Pontius Pilate &c. and by the ἄρχοντες the rulers, or chief men among the Jewes, which v. 27. is expresly set down, Herod and Pontius Pilate with the nations and people of Israel, οὐν ἔθνεσι καὶ λαοῖς Ἰσραὴλ, and this is a place directly parallel to that which we have now in hand, both referring to that of Psal. 2. and so this also must be taken in that sense. See note on Mat. 24. e.

h. That φθείρειν and διαφθείρειν signifie to corrupt, in that sense that wicked men (διαφθειρόμενοι τῇ τῶν φθορῶν being themselves corrupted, and have their very understanding perverted by custome of unnatural sins) doe corrupt others, see note on 2 Pet. 1. b. and on 2 Pet. 2. a. and that γῆ signifies the land and people of the Jewes, see note on ch. 7. a. And so the Gnosticks, that infused their filthy doctrines and corrupt practises into the Jewish beleivers, may probably here be called the διαφθείροντες τὴν γῆν, they that corrupt the land, which are here to be destroyed, and so were most notably, saith Eusebius.

1. Another vision is here set down, and either the heaven or the ayre made the scene, whereon 'tis represented, thus. And me thought I saw a woman, signifying the Church of Christ thereby, and that woman, that Church shining most illustriously with those graces, which Christ the Sun of righteousnesse had bestowed upon it, and thereby much outshining the Jewish state of imperfection before Christ came, which was now also destroyed, and this Church founded in the twelve Apostles, which, as teachers thereof, are best compared to starres, ch. 1. 20. and those as so many gemmes in the crown of the Church, i.e. principal persons in the constituting this kingdome of Christ.

And as ſoon as a church was planted here, it was in the infancy endangered to be devoured by the Dragon, the devil aſſiſted by the Roman power the perſecuting Emperour Nero, about the tenth year of his reign, had it not been wonderfully preſerved by God.

But upon this the devil was hugely inraged to ſee his ſubtilty (the tail of this ſerpent v. 4.) the falſe doctrines and infuſions of theſe hereticks thus miſcarry, and therefore in that rage of his, knowing that if he did not beſtir himſelf mightily, Chriſtianity prevailing in the purity and ſincerity of it, would utterly be his ruine, and that ſuddenly, He ſet afoot the perſecution againſt the whole Chriſtian church by Nero's edicts in a ſharp manner.

But theſe afflictions and calamities which the devil deſigned the Chriſtians, were diverted by the ſeditions raiſed by the Jewes againſt the Romans, by which means it came to paſſe, that all the malice which was by Satan deſigned againſt the Chriſtians, fell actually upon the Jewes, under Veſpaſian and Titus, and ſo at that time the perſecution of the Chriſtians was neceſſarily cooled, and fell upon the Jews their greateſt enemies.

And this was a great vexation to Satan, to ſee Chriſtianity thrive the better by this means, and therefore he ſet to his former deſign again, that of ſetting the Emperors upon perſecuting the Chriſtians, viz. the pure Orthodox of them that ſtood out conſtant in confeſſion of Chriſt, and would not, for acquiring ſafety, join with the Jews, or Gnoſticks, and comply with them. And this perſecution now deſigned by Satan, is that which fell out under Domitian, the ſubject of the next viſion, c. 13.

Notes on Chap. XII.

2. Ὅλαις ἔχουσα

What notion is here to be affixt to the Sun and Moon, may thus moſt probably be reſolved, The Sun, being the Spring and fulneſs of light, communicating to all, but needing not to receive light from any, may fitly repreſent the Chriſtian religion, as that contains the doctrines of perfect purity, not only external, but of the heart, and is an addition of perfection to all the laws, that had formerly been given to men. And then the moon being a fainter light, and proverbially noted for mutability, it may well ſignifie the imperfect, and accordingly mutable œconomy of the Moſaical law. That the Moon is under this womans feet, may ſignifie that the Church, noted by this woman, clothed with the Sun, i. e. the Chriſtian Church, had now caſt off that yoke of the Moſaical obſervances; Others have applied it to the uſe that Chriſtian religion makes of the Law and Prophets, as a footſtool to reſt upon in ſome degree, But the phraſe under the feet rather implies that of bringing low, deſtroying, than making uſe of it, As when the enemies are put under the feet, or made the footſtool, it notes them to be ſubdued. And ſo the Moſaical œconomy was at this time, ſolemnly laid aſide by the Chriſtians, and the Nation and Temple deſtroyed in the former viſions.

ὑπὸ τοὺς πόδας αὐτῆς

b. ὁ Ὄφις αὐτῆς

Supposing the great red Dragon v. 3. to ſignifie the devil, (ſee note d.) the only queſtion is, what is here meant by ἡ οὐρὰ αὐτοῦ his tail; To this purpoſe it muſt be obſerved, that the ſerpents power of hurting lies principally in his head, and therefore as it is of them obſerved, that they do all they can to preſerve their head, as that wherein they are moſt neerly concern'd, ſo the puniſhment that by God is threatned Satan in the ſhape of a ſerpent, Gen. 3. 15. is, that the ſeed of the woman ſhall bruiſe his head, i. e. ſhall over-power, and maſter him. And accordingly here the Roman Imperial power, by means of which the devil is able to kill and perſecute Chriſtians, is expreſt by the heads of the Dragon v. 3. And then the tail being moſt diſtant from the head, and here mentioned diſtinctly from the ſeven heads, and that which here follows of drawing the ſtarres, i. e. corrupting the Chriſtians, attributed diſtinctly to the tail, as that which ſucceeds ch. 13. 1. to the heads, It will follow, that the tail of the ſerpent, ſhall moſt reaſonably have a peculiar notion, and ſignifie his policy, and ſubtlety, which is the engine, by which he works, before he proceeds to uſe his power, or when his power, or force cannot prevail; And of this ſort the Inſtruments ordinarily are Magicians and Sorcerers, and falſe Prophets, that by deceits ſeduce, and corrupt men, And none more eminently deſerved this title, than Simon, and his followers, 1. in reſpect of the prodigies that he made ſhew of, 2dly, by his doctrine of compliances, which offer'd all men ways of eſcaping perſecutions, whether from the Jews or Gentiles, by determining it lawfull to deny Chriſt, and offer ſacrifices to idols, 3dly, by gratifying all their carnal deſires, and giving them liberty for all uncleanneſſe; From whence it is, that Cyril of Jeruſalem calls Simon by this title, ſo proper to this place, ὁ πρῶτος καὶ πρώϊος Δράκων, the prime Dragon of wickedneſs, or wicked Dragon. And ſo this is moſt proper to this part of the Eccleſiaſtick ſtory of thoſe firſt times, that aſſoon as the wheat was any where ſown, the enemy ſowed his darnel alſo, where ever Chriſtianity was planted, the Gnoſticks infuſions follow'd, to ſpoil and deſtroy it, and ſo it was at Rome, and that peculiarly, at this point of time, here noted in this viſion, before the Emperial edicts for the perſecuting of the Chriſtians came out. For theſe, we know, followed the deſtruction of Simon, (ſee note b.) and are the ſubject of the next Chapter.

c. Τετάρτου τοῦ χρόνου

The time of the womans flying into the wilderneſs, i. e. of the baniſhing of the Chriſtians from Rome, is known in ſtory to have been in the tenth of Nero, at which time having fired the city, he imputed it unto the Christians; That he did it himself is affirmed clearly by Suetonius, in Ner: c. 38. quasi offensus deformitate veterum ædificiorum, & angustiis flexuris que vicorum, incendit urbem & incendium ex turre Mœcenatianâ prospectans, latus flamma, ut aiebat, pulchritudine, ἄλωσιν Ilii in illo suo scenico habitu decantavit. Not liking the unbeautifulness of the antient buildings, nor the narrowness and turnings of the streets, he set the city on fire, and there burnt all that was sacred and precious in the city, and looking on the fire from a towre, and delighted, as he said, with the beauty of the flame sang in his scenical habit the taking of Troy. Thus again we find in Xiphilin out of Dio. But for this the Christians were accused by him, and cruelly punished, saith Tacitus Annal. l. 15. and that writer being an hater of the Christians, is pleased to think them guilty, and falsly affirms, that some of them confest the fact, whilst not only in the general reputation of all men that then lived, of other writers that wrote of those times, but by the confession of Tacitus himself, Nero was acknowledged the author of it, who meant to have the honour of building a new city, and calling it by his own name by this means. However, the Persecution of the Christians began by this pretence, was by Nero's edicts the next year improved and advanced to so high a pitch, that Christianity was quite interdicted the Roman Empire, So saith Sulpitius Severus. Neque ullâ re Nero efficiebat quin ab eo jussum incendium putaretur, igitur vertit invidiam in Christianos, actæque in innoxios crudelissimæ quæstiones, quin & novæ mortes excogitatæ——Hoc initio in Christianos sæviri cœptum, post etiam datis legibus religio vetabatur, palámque edictis propositis Christianum esse non licebat. Nero could by no means perswade men but that the city was burnt by his command, Whereupon he diverted the envy of it on the Christians, and appointed cruel torments for the examining them, and invented new kinds of death. On this beginning the persecution brake out against the Christians, and after it the religion was prohibited by Laws, and publick edicts made that no man might be a Christian. And this is it which is here meant by the womans flying into the wilderness, and accordingly is by Tertullian called the first persecution, Because though the Christians as such suffer'd before in Claudius's time, yet that was not by any Imperial edict, but only by tumults, when the heathen people were incited by the malicious Jews; For as we read Act. 18. the Proconsul Gallio would be no Judge in such matters, but drave the Jews from the Judgment seat. And this was toward the latter end of Claudius, after Claudius had commanded all Jews to depart from Rome; In which banishment of the Jews some Christians might suffer occasionally and S. John be banisht into Patmos, but there was as yet no edict against them as Christians, at the least none for the putting them to death, as the plea of S. Paul before Felix, and Festus, his appeal to Cæsar, (which was at the beginning of Nero) make it plain, And accordingly we find, that when Saint Paul came to Rome, Act. 28. he preached there μετὰ πάσης παῤῥησίας ἀκωλύτως, with all boldness or publickness, and was not forbidden, And at the writing of his Epistle to the Romans, their faith, saith he, was famous in all the world, Rom. 1. and he had oft desired to come to them, Ro. 15. 22. and that for many years, v. 23. And all this in Claudius's time, before his going to Rome, which argues also that this woman was not yet fled, i. e. banisht into the wilderness. And therefore of Nero it is Tertullian's phrase, that he first dedicated persecution, & Primum Neronem in hanc sectam ferociisse, Nero was the first Emperor that persecuted Christian Religion.

The Hebrews call Satan הנחש הקדמוני the old serpent, so again c. 20. 2. and the casting him out at this time, is the prospering of the Christian faith, consequent to this discomfiture of Simon Magus, and the manifestation of the power of Christ. So saith Arnobius l. 2. Non distulerunt res patrias linquere, & veritati coalescere Christianæ, viderunt enim currum Simonis &c. They delayed not to leave all their worldly possessions, and to cleave to Christianity, which was now under interdict, For they saw Simons chariot and fiery horse dispelled by the breath of Saint Peter's mouth, &c. And as by this means the heathens were converted to the faith by seeing the power of Peter, so were the Gnosticks discomfited, seeing their Leader Simon destroyed.

d. Ὁμὸς ἀρχαῖος

The accusation that Satan brings against sincere Christians, appears by his dealing with Job c. 1. 9. 11. to be to this effect, that they are hypocrites, and will only serve God, as long as he protects and defends them; This it hereby appears that Satan looks on, as the charge of all others most for his turn to bring against men, and therfore that wch he most desires to have truly said of them. Now the chief doctrine of the sect of the Gnosticks, the followers of this Simon, (who is called the first-born of Satan) was this, that in time of persecution it is lawful to deny and forswear Christ (which was the very thing that the devil laid to Job's charge) and consequently all that were by him seduced into that doctrine, Satan might justly accuse before God day and night, as really guilty of that accusation. But when the doctrine of the Gnosticks, and the professors of it were now cast out of the Church, then this is here truly said, that the accuser of the brethren, i. e. of Christians, is cast out, i. e. Satan can no longer with any justice accuse the Christian Church, or, if he do, he is found to be a false accuser.

e. ὁ κατηγορῶν αὐτῶν

The solemn notation of Judæa by ἡ γῆ the land, hath often been taken notice of, and is very pertinent to this place, the seditions that were raised there about this time of Nero's reign, diverting the malice designed against the Christians, And the same continued all the time of Galba, Otho, Vitellius, Vespasian, and Titus, and in all this space the Romans being wholly taken up about the Jews, the heathen Emperors did nothing against the Christians, till Domitian comes, who is the subject of the vision in the next Chapter.

2. And the beaſt which I ſaw was like unto a leopard, and his feet were as the feet of a bear, and his mouth as the mouth of a lyon, and the dragon gave him his power, and his ſeat, and great authority.

2. And this Idolatrous heathen worſhip, thus aſſiſted by the power of the Empire, began to be very cruel, and cannot ſufficiently be expreſt by one cruel beaſt, but having variety of all kinds of Gods in it, from which 'tis repreſented by a ſpeckled leopard, it exerciſes all the cruelty both of bear and lyon, as was manifeſt by their perſecutions of Chriſtians. And to the ſuſtaining of this beaſt (the Idolatrous heathen worſhip) the Devil (that laboured to deſtroy Chriſtianity, ch. 12. 3.) contributed all his power and skill, did all that he could to hold it up, by prodigies, and by all other means.

3. And I ſaw one of his [b] heads as it were wounded to death, and his deadly wound was healed, and † all the world wondred after the beaſt.]

of the ſeven hills of Rome, the moſt ſtately of all the reſt, and ſo call'd the Capitol from a Latine word ſignifying Head, were burnt down by lightning, and eſteemed to be ſmitten by God from heaven, and ſo Idolatry conceived to have received a fatal blow, yet that was ſoon rebuilt by Domitian the Emperour of Rome, and that gave a great confirmation to Idolatry, among all that lived in the Roman dominions, and took notice of it. See note k.

4. And they worſhipped the Dragon, which gave power unto the beaſt, and they worſhipped the beaſt, ſaying, Who is like unto the beaſt, who is able to make warre with him?]

4. And they worſhipt the Devil, who had thus upheld the heathen religion when the Jewiſh was deſtroyed, reſolving from hence, that the God of Iſrael was not able to contend with their Devils, nor his religion able to maintain it ſelf againſt their Idol-worſhip.

5. And there was given unto him a mouth ſpeaking great things, and [c] blaſphemies, and power was given unto him to [d] continue forty and two moneths.]

5. And hereupon the heathen idol- c. d.

worſhip and worſhippers began to deſpiſe all others, and to ſcoffe at the God of Iſrael (and the heathen Emperours to call themſelves Gods, for ſo Domitian did) upon the deſtruction of the Temple at Jeruſalem, concluding thence that that God of Iſrael was not the true God. And ſoon after this, Domitian began a perſecution againſt the Chriſtians, as thoſe which oppoſed the heathen worſhips, and continued it about three years and a half, untill his death.

6. And he opened his mouth in blaſphemy againſt God, to blaſpheme his name and his tabernacle, and them that dwelt in heaven.]

6. And this ſame Domitian was very bitter againſt God, the Church, and all Chriſtians, in all this being a factor for the beaſt or idol-worſhip.

7. And it was given unto him to make warre with the Saints and to overcome them: and power was given him over * all kindreds, and tongues, and nations.]

8. And all the Chriſtian profeſſors within the compaſſe c.

of the Roman dominions were put to ſore trials, and of them very many were wrought upon by this means, viz: the carnal temporizing Gnoſticks, which had not a mind to be martyrs and confeſſors for Chriſt, but rather choſe to comply with idolatry, than to ſuffer for Chriſt.

9. If any man have an ear, let him hear.

perſecution of his againſt the Chriſtians was ſo ſharp and unreſiſtible, that (which f.

is the thing that all Chriſtians are concerned to take notice of) there was nothing left to the perſecuted, but the exerciſe of their patience and faith, the one in bearing without reſiſtance what befalls them, the other in truſting God with their condition, and never revolting from him, or attempting to relieve themſelves by ſecular armes, for as thoſe are unlawfull for ſubjects to make uſe of, againſt the lawfull power, under which they are, though never ſo ſharp or injurious to them, ſo would it prove, if were uſed, but a means to bring more miſery upon them.

11. And I beheld [g] another beaſt coming up out of the earth, and he had [h] two horns like † a lamb, and he ſpake as a dragon.]

11. The next part g. h.

of this viſion was the repreſenting a ſecond beaſt, by which is meant the magick and auguries and oracles of the heathen Prieſts, which appeared to me to aſcend out of the earth, or from under ground, as the Oracles were woot to be delivered. And this beaſt had two horns, theſe men had two powers, by which they made themſelves fit to be conſidered, doing of miracles, and divination, wherein they had ſome reſemblance of Chriſt the Lamb, but made uſe of theſe to all diabolical ends of cruelty, and delivered their Oracles, as the Devil was wont to doe, in dubious forms.

12. And all this was made uſe of to advance idol-worſhip, which before had loſt ſome reputation in the burning of the Capitol, ver. 3.

13. And he doth great wonders, ſo that he maketh [i] fire come down from heaven on the earth in the ſight of men.]

14. And by theſe, and the like prodigies, ſhewed in ſeveral parts of the Empire, they endevoured to ſet up the ſame idol-worſhip among them, which was at Rome.

k. 14. And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth, by the means of thoſe miracles which he had power to doe in the ſight of the beaſt, ſaying to them that dwell on the earth, that they ſhould [k] make an image to the beaſt, which had the wound by a ſword, and did live.]

l. 15. And theſe heathen Augures and prieſts ſet up Oracles in new places, and by reſponſes from them ingaged the Emperour, and his officers in the Provinces to perſecute and make bloody Edicts againſt the Chriſtians,

15. And he had power to give [l] * life unto the image of the beaſt, that the image of the beaſt ſhould both ſpeak, and cauſe that as many as would not worſhip the image of the beaſt ſhould be killed;] * breath πνεῦμα

m. 16. And by that means Edicts came out, for all men in the whole Empire, to enter into, and joyn in their heathen worſhips;

And therewith baniſhment, or interdicting of all privileges, and advantages of life, to all that doe not thus joyn publickly with them, and to that end enter into their religion by ſome of thoſe waies uſual among them, by having the mark of the God, or the name, or ſome numeral letters, that ſignifie his name, branded on them.

17. And that [m] no man might buy or ſell, ſave he that had the mark, or the [n] name of the beaſt, or the number of his name.

o. 18. And for the laſt of theſe, it was repreſented in the viſion to be three letters, which ſignifie ſix hundred ſixty ſix, the foretelling of which ought to be lookt on, as an act of infinite wiſdome in Chriſt, that ſent this prophecie, and conſequently to be attended to as ſuch, Or elſe the finding this out, will be matter of wiſdome, a work of ſagacity in any, and yet poſſible, when the time comes, to be obſerved, for the way of numbring here mentioned is that which is of ordinary uſe among men.

18. Here is [o] wiſdome. Let him that hath underſtanding, count the number of the beaſt, for it is the number of a man, and his number is ſix hundred threeſcore and ſix.

Notes on Chap. XIII.

a. Ὄνομα βλασφημίας

Ὄνομα βλασφημίας name of blaſphemy] literally ſignifies ſuch a title, that cannot be aſſumed, or owned without blaſphemy. Now blaſphemy is committed two waies, either by ſpeaking contumeliouſly of the true God, or giving divine honour to any elſe, which is alſo the taking that honour, which is due to him alone, and beſtowing it upon others, and ſo as contrary to his being acknowledged the one God, as the uſing him reproachfully is to his being God. And therefore it is that Paul and Barnabas having divine honours attributed to them at Lyſtra, they rent their clothes, Act. 14. 14. in the ſame manner, as was uſual among them, when any man was heard to blaſpheme, ſignifying thereby, that ſacrificing to any creature is direct blaſphemy againſt the Creator. Now what this title of blaſphemy] was, which is here referred to, is ſpecified by S. Jerome qu: 11. ad Algas: Æterna cùm dicitur quæ temporalis eſt, nomen eſt blaſphemiæ, The city Rome was called the Eternal city, which to be attributed to any thing which had a beginning and ſhall certainly have an end, is a name of blaſphemy. But beſide this, (and what Athenæus ſaies of it, l. 1. where he enſtyles it ὑπερκοσμίαν Ῥώμην, Rome the Cœleſtial, or heavenly city) it appears by many antient Roman coynes (ſet down by Goltzius in theſauro) that Rome was called a Goddeſſe, there being many ſuch inſcriptions Ῥώμη Θεὰ, Rome a Goddeſſe. Accordingly the people of Smyrna built a Temple to it, ſaith Tacitus hiſt: l. 3. and other Provinces uſed the like flattery, erected Temples, appointed Prieſts to the Goddeſſe Rome, and at laſt Adrian raiſed a ſtately Temple, and called it Templum Romæ & Auguſtorum, the Temple of Rome, and of the Emperors (i.e. dedicated to them, as to Gods) ſaith Dio in Adriano. And accordingly this idolatry, or blaſphemy is taxed by Prudentius,

——Colitur nam ſanguine & ipſa
More Deæ, Nomenq; loci ceu numen adorant,

Rome is worſhipt by ſacrifice, after the manner of a Goddeſſe, and they adore the Name of the city, as a deity. And to this it is agreeable that many other copies read, ὀνόματα βλασφημίας names of blaſphemy in the plural, more ſuch blaſphemous titles, beſide that of Urbs Æterna, the Eternal city, that one of Θεὰ Goddeſſe, and the erecting Temples to it, containing all imaginable blaſphemies in it.

b. Μία τῶν κεφαλῶν Κεφαλὴ

What is here meant by μία τῶν Κεφαλῶν, One of the heads] will be judged 1. by the notion of head, 2. of μία one. The head is the uppermoſt part of a man, and ſo proverbially ſignifies any thing that is moſt eminent or conſpicuous, and ſo here ver. 1. the ſeven heads are moſt probably the ſeven hills, on which Rome was built, Then for μία, that (for want of degrees of compariſon in the Hebrew language) is by an Hebraiſme oft taken for πρώτη the firſt, as Mat. 28. 1. μία Σαββάτων, (not one, but) the firſt of the week. Both theſe concurre to apply this phraſe μία τῶν Κεφαλῶν. to the Capitol at Rome, to which it belongs ſo properly, and characteriſtically. For 1. the word Capitol] certainly comes from Caput, an head, and Livy renders the reaſon for it, that a mans head being found in that place where that was after built, (Caput Toli, the head of Tolus, ſaith Arnobius) the Oracle anſwered, Eo loco, caput, ſummámque imperii fore, that the head and top of the Empire ſhould be there:

2dly, In

2ᵈˡʸ, In this place was the Temple of Jupiter, called therefore Jupiter Capitolinus, and he being the first or chief of the Gods, the place where his Temple ſtood, may well be the principal of the heads of this city. Now that this head is here ſaid ἐσφαγμένην εἰς θάνατον, ſlaughter'd or ſmitten to death, this clearly belongs to the burning of the Capitol. Which fell out twice about theſe times, 1. it was ſet a fire by thoſe that accompanied Sabinus and Domitian thither, and who were there beſieged by Vitellius's ſouldiers, a little before the death of Vitellius, Whoſe ſucceſſor Veſpaſian being returned out of Judæa, and having committed the warre againſt the Jews to his ſon Titus, in the very next year (at which time the Temple at Jeruſalem was burnt) re-built the Capitol moſt ſumptuouſly, and reſtored Iupiter's Temple in it; Which as it was a kind of recovery of Rome from a mortal diſeaſe (expreſt by a coin of Veſpaſian's, inſcribed Roma reſurges, Rome thou ſhalt riſe again) ſo, it was looked on, as a great expreſſion of the wrath of God againſt the Jews, that at that time not onely their Temple was burnt, but that other of Jupiter at Rome permitted to be re-built, and at Jeruſalem heathen ſacrifices offer'd in the Temple of God by the Roman ſouldiers, and all Gods Prieſts fetcht out of their caves or hiding places, and killed by Titus's command. Of this re-edifying the Capitol, ſee Tacitus hiſt: l. 4. And to this the words here would commodiouſly enough be appliable. But beſides this, there was a ſecond wounding of this firſt head, another burning of the Capitol, in Titus's reign, which was by lightning, and ſo eſteemed to be ſent from heaven. And this is more proper to this point of time, to which this viſion belongs, and being done as from heaven, might from thence be more fitly objected to Idolatry, as a deadly wound to that worſhip of Jupiter. And this was ſo ſumptuouſly repaired by Domitian (whoſe time is the ſubject of the viſion in this chapter) that Martial makes Jupiter indebted to him for it,

Pro Capitolinis quid enim tibi ſolvere templis
Quid pro Tarpeia fronde honore poteſt?

What can Jupiter pay thee for his Temple in the Capitol? And on this 'tis ſaid that the whole earth wondred after the beaſt. Where by ὅλη ἡ γῆ, the whole earth or land] the Roman Territories are moſt probably meant (ſee note k.) which are to Rome, as all Paleſtine (ſo often call'd by that ſtyle, the Land) to Jeruſalem; And the ἐθαύμασεν ὀπίσω αὐτοῦ wondring behind, or after the beaſt] ſignifies their great veneration (wrought in them by this means) to the Idol-worſhip, which is farther expreſt by their worſhipping the Dragon, i. e. the devil, v. 2. called the old ſerpent, c. 12. 9. and the Devil and Satan, a Dragon being but a flying ſerpent, by which the Devil hath always been repreſented. Who being here lookt on, as the maintainer of the heathen worſhip, he is adored and applauded greatly, and that farther expreſt by their ſaying, Who is like unto the beaſt, who can fight with him? i. e. No man, or God, is able to oppoſe this Idol-worſhip, profeſt in the Capitol, or reſiſt the power by which it is upheld.

c. One ſpecial teſtimony of the heathens blaſphemy againſt God upon occaſion of the Romans victories over the Jews, is that of Cicero pro Flacco, ſpeaking of the Jews, Illa gens, quàm chara diis immortalibus eſſet, docuit, quòd eſt victa, quòd elocata, quòd ſervit, that nation hath taught us how dear they are to the immortal Gods by their being conquered and ſubjected by the Romans to a King of their ſending thither. This hath been thought fit by a learned man to be brought to the illuſtrating of this place, though indeed it belong to it only by way of accommodation, as a proof, how apt the Romans proſperity and conqueſts over Judæa, were to make them blaſpheme God, not that this ſpeech can belong to the point of time now ſpoken of, being delivered long before by Cicero. Dionyſius Alexandrinus in Euſebius l. 7. c. 10. applies it to Valerian 255. years after Chriſt, who (by the inſtigation of the chief of the Magicians in Ægypt, commanding him τοὺς καθαροὺς ἄνδρας καὶ ὁσίους κτείνειν καὶ διώκειν, to kill and perſecute the pure and holy men, ὡς κωλύσας &c. as thoſe that hindred their inchantments) became a great enemy of the Church. The like is again related of Diocletian, that upon a reſponſe of Apollo from Delphi, that the juſt upon earth hindred him from ſpeaking truth, he fell on perſecuting the Chriſtians, ſee Euſebius de vitâ Conſt: l. 2. c. 49. 50. But that which is more pertinent to the times, whereof, I conceive, the viſion ſpeaks, is Domitian's ſtyling himſelf Dominus & Deus noſter, and forbidding nè ſcripto quidem ac ſermone cujuſquam appellaretur aliter, that any whether in words or writing ſhould call him otherwiſe, and appointing his ſtatues of gold and ſilver to be ſet up in the Capitol, and his profeſſing his contempt of thunder and lightning, See Suetonius in his life, c. 13.

That which is read in ſome copies πεῖναι πόλεμον μῆνας τεσσαράκοντα δύο, to wage war fourty two moneths, i. e. three years and an half] is in other the beſt and antienteſt copies (without πόλεμον) πεῖν μῆνας &c. and then that is to ſpend or ſtay ſo many moneths. Thus the King's MS. hath it, and ſo in Euſebius Eccl: Hiſt: l. 7. c. 10. Dionyſius Alexandrinus citing this place reads it, ἐξουσία καὶ μῆνας (or as another reading of Euſebius hath it, μῆνας) τεσσαράκοντα δύο, power was given him fourty two moneths. And then to ſtay ſo many moneths] is to live ſo long, which was punctually true of Domitian, who began his perſecution in the thirteenth, and dyed in the ſixteenth year of his reign. And ſo this is directly anſwerable to the ſpace, wherein Antiochus had vexed the Jews, Dan. 7. 24. (ſee Euſebius Eccl. Hiſt. l. 3. c. 13.) and ſo is fit to be expreſt in the ſame form of words, as we ſee it is.

That the words here ſhould not be read thus [the Lamb ſlain from the beginning of the world] (though it be perfectly true that Chriſt was in the deſignation and decree of God ſo ſlain from the beginning) but thus, οὗ ὀνόματα γέγραπται ἀπὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου, [whoſe names were not written from the foundation of the world, (i. e. were never written) in the book of life of the Lamb that was ſlain] may ſufficiently appear by comparing this expreſſion here with c. 17. 8. where the words are [whoſe names are not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world.] Now ſome difference there is betwixt [the book of life of the Lamb ſlain] here, and [the book of life] in that place. There [the book of life] ſignifies the regiſter of all the good Chriſtians on earth, ſuch as at that time, when their names are ſaid to be written in it, are true beleivers; but [the book of life of the Lamb that was ſlain] ſignifies peculiarly the regiſter or catalogue of Confeſſors. Such as already have, or are now about to venture their lives for the confeſſion of Chriſt, to take up his croſſe and follow him, and ſo are conformable to this image of Chriſt, this of the Paſchal lamb (by which he was antiently repreſented) the ſacrificed crucified Saviour. And ſo theſe men of the land, i. e. the Jews here that worſhip the beaſt, the Gnoſticks, that to avoid perſecution, goe to their Idol-feaſts or ſacrifices, are juſtly thus deſcribed, they whoſe names, from the foundation of the world, have not been written in this book of life of the ſlain lamb, or, in the ſlain lamb's book of life.

f. Αἰχμαλωσίαν συνάγει] is to gather together a captivity, i. e. a number of Captives, as he that undertakes to bring them back out of their Captivity, to be their Captain, and lead them againſt their Conquerour that hath taken them, as ζωάγειν εἰς πόλεμον to gather to warre, c. 16. 14. 16. and 20. 8. and as the word [gathering] is particularly applied to Captives, and ſo uſed by the Pſalmiſt, Gather us, O Lord, from among the people, &c. Pſal. 106. 47. having in the former verſe mentioned τοὺς αἰχμαλωτεύσαντας, thoſe that had carried them captive, which concludes the ἡμᾶς us there, to be the αἰχμαλωσίαν Captivity here (in like manner as περιτομὴ circumciſion is the Jews, which were circumciſed, and many the like) juſt as the קבצנו or ἐπισυναγωγὴ gather together is all one with the συνάγει gathering. This is after farther expreſt by killing with the ſword, i. e. making violent reſiſtance, and oppoſition againſt the perſecuting Emperors, which for a Chriſtian to do, is quite contrary to the faith and patience of the Saints, which conſiſts in ſuffering, not in reſiſting, in having their names written in the ſlain lambs book of life (ſee note d.) not in the military liſt of thoſe, that will fight againſt their lawful Superiours, rather then ſuffer under them. Now as God hath in the fift Commandement of the Decalogue, commanded obedience, and (in the Pſalmiſt, and in the Sermon on the mount) meekneſſe, with the promiſe of temporal bleſſings, ſo here doth he deterre from reſiſtance or rebellion, even againſt perſecuting Emperors, by denouncing of temporal judgments of an higher nature, than thoſe which by that means any man deſireth or attempteth to avoid. He that goeth about to deliver thoſe conquer'd Captives out of the Emperors hands, out of his oppreſſions or perſecutions, ſhall do them no good, but ſhall himſelf be juſtly puniſht by him, by the righteous judgment of God, who loves not thus to be aſſiſted (any more than Chriſt by S. Peter's ſword) againſt his enemies, but denounces (as there in the Goſpel, ſo here) periſhing by the ſword againſt him, that thus uſeth the ſword againſt a lawful Superiour, though acting wickedly againſt Chriſt, or Chriſtianity. And ſo the onely Chriſtian weapons againſt perſecuting Princes are demonſtrated to be Patience and Faith, enduring meekly what comes from them, and referring our cauſe to God onely. And by theſe means (ſo neceſſary for every Chriſtian to obſerve, v. 9.) hath Chriſtianity ever flouriſhed, and by none other.

What this ἄλλο θηρίον] other or ſecond beaſt ſignified in this viſion, is determinable by the conſequents (v. 13, 14.) thus far, that it muſt denote ſome one or more Sorcerers, or Magicians, to whom it is peculiar to do the great wonders, to make fire come down from heaven, v. 13. to deceive by means of thoſe miracles, which he hath power to doe before the beaſt. Of this therefore ſo ſignally ſet down there can be no place of queſtion, nor conſequently that theſe ſorcerers were heathens, being by the devil made uſe of to ſupport, and advance heatheniſme and idolatry. This appears 1. by his ſpeaking like the Dragon, i. e. the devil (ſee note b.) 2^dly, by his exerciſing all the power of the firſt beaſt before him, i. e. aſſiſting of the heathen worſhip, v. 1. whoſe deadly wound was cured, i. e. which was newly reſtored to a flouriſhing condition again by Domitian's re-edifying of the Capitol, (ſee note b.) 3^dly, by his commanding to make an image to the beaſt, v. 4. (which muſt be again the advancing of heathen worſhip) and ſo the giving breath to the image, as ſhall anon appear. It is therefore moſt reaſonable to interpret this ſecond beaſt of Apollonius Tyaneus, that did ſuch feats at this point of time, and was the perſon, whoſe life is ſo ſolemnly written by Philoſtratus, and his miracles by Hierocles, compared with, and preferred before Chriſts, that he cannot be lookt on as a perſon too mean to be thus repreſented in this viſion. But this not ſo, as to confine it to his perſon, (for Chriſt himſelf is oft not the perſon of Chriſt, but he, and his followers, the Chriſtians together) but to comprehend alſo, the Magicians, Sorcerers, Augurs, heathen Prieſts ἱερομάντεις that divined by the entrails of beaſts, flying of birds, the whole ſort and profeſſion of theſe. For that it belongs not to Simon Magus, and his followers, Menander and Baſilides, &c. (though they were all Sorcerers) appears, 1. becauſe Simon was worſhipt in time of Claudius, and though in Nero's reign he came a ſecond time to Rome, yet 1. he was then worſted, and deſtroyed by the Apoſtles S. Peter and S. Paul, and the Chriſtian religion advanced by that means, not heatheniſme, as here it is, and 2^dly, the contexture of theſe viſions, and other characters in the former part of this chapter determine this of the ſecond beaſt to Domitian's, and not to Nero's time; and for Menander, and Baſilides, &c. they kept and taught in Paleſtine, Ægypt, and Syria, whereas this ſecond beaſt muſt have a larger influence, and that particularly on heathen Rome, and the heathen worſhip there, denoted by the firſt beaſt, whoſe deadly wound had been cured. And for the confirming of this interpretation, it is to be obſerved (what is moſt evident) that this ſecond beaſt, and the falſe prophet c. 19, 20. had the ſame deſigne; For as here the ſecond beaſt doth his miracles before the firſt, v. 12. and commands to make an image to the beaſt v. 14. and cauſeth them to take the mark of the beaſt upon them, v. 16. ſo there the falſe prophet had done his ſignes before the beaſt, by which he had deceived thoſe that received the mark of the beaſt, and worſhipt his image, And that there the falſe prophet ſignifies the heathen diviners, that foretold out of the Oracles of the Sibyls &c. will appear c. 16. 13, 14. (note g.) This being thus evinced that this whole ſort of deceivers

h. Κέρατα] horns in the scripture most commonly signifie power or strength, because the horns of beasts being their weapons, their power of defending themselves, or hurting others, doth most properly consist in them, see note on Lu. 1.n. And though it be here [the horns of a lamb] which is no strong or formidable beast, yet still the horns of the lamb, or sheep, are the only strength, which that creature hath, and horns, cannot properly signifie any thing else, but strength; As for the whole phrase here, Κέρατα δύο ὅμοια ἀρνίῳ, two horns like unto (a or) the lamb, it must be interpreted by analogie with what we read, ch. 5.6. There Christ having been slain, and risen again, and instal'd in his regal power, is represented by a lamb having seven horns, which are the denotation of his several branches of power, usefull to him for the subduing his enemies; And so here of this second beast it is said, that it hath two horns like the lamb, i. e. this lamb before described ch. 5. in like manner, as the beasts speaking ὡς Δράκων as the Dragon, referres to the Dragon v. 2. 4. And though the demonstrative article [ὁ] be not prefixt, yet that is so ordinarily left out in all Writers, when it must be retained in the sense, that no objection can be drawn thence. This then being thus farre clear, It remains only to enquire what acts of power are here meant by the two horns; And 1. it must be resolved, that they are two such, as are like two of Christ's, for that is concluded from the ὅμοια ἀρνίῳ. like the lamb. Of which number as the power of miracles, and of prophecie are certainly two. so there is great reason here from the context to resolve these to be the two that are here meant. For it being already cleared, that κέρατα horns signifie powers, two powers are here named distinctly in the following verses, 1. The power of working signes ver. 14. 2dly, Of giving breath to the image of the beast, ver. 15. For that is the denotation ἐδόθη αὐτῷ in those two (and very ordinary in other) places, It was given to him, i. e. Power was given to him, or he had power (see Lu. 1. note p.) Now the [σημεῖα signes] doth acknowledgedly denote miracles, and so it is specified v. 13. He doth great signes, so that he makes fire come down from heaven &c. and so that is the first horn of this second beast, the magicians and sorcerers power of working some prodigies, like unto those that Christ the lamb (himself. and in his Apostles, afterwards) had wrought, resembling them, but not truly such, false, deceitfull miracles. And for the power of giving breath to the image of the beast, that is expresst in the next words to be the enabling the image of the beast to speak, which clearly denotes the receiving responses from the devil, or the devils giving of Oracles, foretelling things to come, which is another imitation of what the Lamb or Christ had done, who left the power of prophecie in his Church after his ascension, as he saith of the Paraclete, he shall shew you things to come, and as S. Paul saith Ephes. 4. 11. that for the founding and confirming a Church, Christ gave some Apostles, some Prophets &c.

The first of these horns or powers being shew'd to be the power of miracles wrought by the Magicians through the power of the devil, contains under it all the deceitful wonders wrought by sorcerers in those times, and the strangest of all these, that were by any of them pretended to, was this of making fire descend from heaven, in imitation of Elias, as Jannes and Jambres did by their magick some miracles after Moses. And this is particularly related by Philostratus of Apollonius Tyaneus l. 5. c. 5. that he called down fire from heaven, And this is a signal evidence, that these sorcerers were this second beast. i.

The designe of these sorcerers to advance heathenisme by that means, and to oppose Christianity, and the successfulnesse of their attempt, so farre as to incense the Emperors against the Christians, and to engage them to favour, and encourage heathenisme, or idolatry, is sufficiently known in story. and appears by that book of Hierocles, (to which we have Eusebius answer, though the book it self be not extant) wherein he compares Christ and Apollonius, the Evangelists the writers of Christ's story and Philostratus the writer of Apollonius's life, and preferres Apollonius and Philostratus very much before the other. And this is the meaning of v. 12. he did all the power of the first beast before him, i. e. he confirmed men in the beleif and practise of all the heathen worship which was then afoot, and as it follows makes all the inhabitants of the land, i. e. the generality of the Roman Empire, to worship the first beast, whose wound had been cured, i. e. to continue those heathen worships of Jupiter Capitolinus, and the like, which seemed to have been shaken by the burning, but were setled again by the re-edifying of the Capitol. And not only so, but, as here 'tis added, he saith to the inhabitants of the land, i. e. commands them ποιῆσαι εἰκόνα τῷ θηρίῳ ὃς ἔχει τὴν πληγὴν τῆς μαχαίρας, καὶ ἔζησεν, to make an image to the beast, which hath the stroke of the sword and lived; That that beast, which hath the stroke of the sword, and yet lived, is the beast, v. 1. one of whose heads was wounded to death, and the πληγὴ θανάτου mortal wound (all one here with πληγὴ τῆς μαχαίρας stroke of the sword) was cured, is manifest, and that hath been cleared to denote the heathen worship, as it then stood at Rome, the prime part of which was the worship of Jupiter Capitolinus; The only difficulty then is, what is the εἰκὼν image of this beast; And first, it may signifie the inventing and introducing of some other heathen worships or temples, besides those, yet agreeable, and like unto those which they had already, And to that sense may be applied what we read of Domitian, his adding of new deities, and erecting Flavia templa, Flavios Sacerdotes, of which saith Martial l. 8. Epigr. So.

Sic nova dum condis, renovas Auguste priora, Debentur quæ sunt, quæque fuere tibi.

Whilst he builds new temples, and re-edified the former, both were to be acknowledged due to him, what now are, and what were before. But there is one objection against this interpretation, viz.: that as this second beast (Sorcery, or the Magicians) is said at the beginning of the verse to decive those that dwell on the land, so this beast saith to the inhabitants of the land ποιῆσαι εἰκόνα, that they should make the image, And there is no reason to think, think, that κατοικοῦντες ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς the inhabitants of the land] ſhould denote Domitian the Emperor. What ἡ γῆ ſignifies we have oft explain'd, not the earth, but the land, i. e. the whole region, or dominion, And that to be defined by the context. While the diſcourſe was about the Jewes, there it ſignified conſtantly Judæa, and the reſt of the tetrarchies, all Paleſtine, and now in this chapter (ſee note b.) the diſcourſe is about the Romans, it muſt by analogie ſignifie the whole Roman Empire, as οἰκουμένη, the world, which ſometimes ſignifies Paleſtine, elſwhere ſignifies the Roman Empire (ſee note on Mat. 24. e.) And conſequently οἱ κατοικοῦντες ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς the inhabitants on the land will ſignifie ver. 7. and here the Princes and people of the other regions, within the compaſſe of the Roman Dominion; and then moſt probably the meaning of the verſe will be, that by the deceits of theſe Magicians, Apollonius &c. (who, as Philoſtratus makes it evident, went about all the regions, and did their wonders and drew men after them) the people of all thoſe countries were perſwaded to admit the like worſhips (and build the like Temples) to thoſe in the Capitol at Rome, which may be meant by θαυμάζειν ὀπίσω to wonder after the beaſt (ſee note b.) i. e. to receive univerſally the worſhip of Jupiter, and to build Temples to him. As for the conceit, that Achilles's ghoſt, which Apollonius in Philoſtratus is ſaid to have raiſed, ſhould be the image of the beaſt here, or that the image of Apollonius himſelf, which his ſcholars appointed to be worſhipt, ſhould be it, there are many inconveniences, which lie againſt either of thoſe interpretations. This which we have ſet down is the moſt ſimple, and agreeable to the context.

That πνεῦμα ſignifies breath, not life, is ſufficiently known, and conſequently [to give breath] muſt be to enable to ſpeak, as it here follows. And to give this to the image of the beaſt (in the notion of that foremention'd, note k.) muſt ſignifie to deviſe arts, by which Oracles were now given, or the Devils raiſed to give Reſponſes in thoſe other places, where theſe Roman worſhips had been received. That the Oracles at Cuma, at Dodona, at Delphos, in all Bœotia, and in moſt other places were become dumb before this time, is acknowledged by all heathen writers, and Plutarch's diſcourſes of that ſubject are very conſiderable to ſhew the influence that the Chriſtian faith had on this, and how Idol-worſhip loſt much of its reputation by this means. Theſe Augurs then and heathen Prieſts, as they did undertake to divine by looking into entrails of ſacrifices and by many other waies, ſo did they contrive the delivering of Oracles in new places, as in Pontus, by Æſculapius, and the like, as may be ſeen in Lucian's Pſeudomantis. This practiſe continued publick, as long as the Emperors continued Pagan, and afterwards more privately, But about the time, to which this viſion belongs, i. e. in the reigne of Domitian (as alſo of Trajan and Adrian) upon the great defection of Oracles, the devil in theſe his agents was moſt active to repair the loſſe by ſetting up new Impoſtures in this kind, And this as a branch, or effect of that Prophetick power ſignified by the ſecond horn (of this ſecond beaſt) like unto the lamb v. 11. and to this muſt be applied that in the end of that verſe, ſubjoyned immediately to the mention of the two horns, ἐλάλει ὡς Δράκων, the ſecond beaſt ſpake (i. e. theſe Augurs prophecied, or delivered Oracles) as the Dragon, 1. wickedly and cruelly, for the advancing of Satan's kingdome, as when by this means they ſtirred up the Emperour, and his officers againſt the Chriſtians, See Lucian in Pſeudomant: concerning Alexander the Magician, And ſo ſaith Baronius An: 272. 5. 20. the Gentile prieſts did out of the Oracles of the Sibyls incenſe the Emperours againſt the Chriſtians. 2dly, Cunningly, doubtfully, giving their Reſponſes in obſcure forms, veyling their predictions in equivocal ſpeeches, as the devil, that knows ſome futures, and gueſſeth at others, is wiſely and politickly wont to doe. The former of theſe ſeems chiefly to be meant by ὡς Δράκων as the Dragon, becauſe in this v. 15. after the Image of the beaſt ſpeaking] is immediately added, [and cauſe that as many as would not worſhip the image of the beaſt ſhould be kill'd.]

The giving χαράγματα marks in the right hand or forehead] was ordinary in Syria and the neighbour countreys, not as a brand or στίγμα (as it is among others, by way of puniſhment, ſee Gal. 6. 17.) but as a note of ſervants, or to diſcriminate the ſervants of one Maſter from another. Theſe marks were either in their right hands (or armes, or wriſts, as χεὶρ oft ſignifies, and not only the hand, which is ἀκρόχειρ, ſee Mar. 7. note a.) or in their foreheads στίγματα δὲ τῶν στρατιωτῶν ἐν τῇ χειρὶν, ſaith Julian, marks of ſouldiers are in their hands or wriſts, and Lucian de dea Syr: hath στίζεσθαι εἰς καρπούς to be marked on the wriſts. So that to cauſe all to receive this mark, is to force all to the receiving theſe Idol-worſhips, and the way of forcing them is ſpecified ver. 17. ἵνα μή τις δύνηται ἀγοράσαι ἢ πωλῆσαι that no man might buy or ſell, that would not, i. e. incenſing the Emperour, and his officers in the provinces to make interdicts againſt Chriſtian aſſemblies, and to proceed ſeverely and capitally againſt all that uſed any, but theſe heathen Idol-worſhips. This whole paſſage ſeems to allude to the tyranny of Ptolemæus Philopator upon the Jewes in the 3d of the Maccabees, Περιθεὶς δημοσίᾳ καὶ τοῖς ἔθνεσι διαδοῦναι φόνον, καὶ ὅπως τοῖς ἐπ' ἀνελεῖ πύργῳ συλλεγεῖσιν ἐξαίφνης ἐπιστὰς, μηδένα τῶν μὲν δυνήσων εἰς τὰ ἱερὰ αὐτῶν εἰσιέναι, πάντας δὲ τοὺς Ἰουδαίους εἰς λατρείαν καὶ εἰνιλείαν διαθεσθαι ἀχθηναιτέτους τε ἀπογραφομένους χαράγματι καὶ διὰ πυρὸς εἰς τὸ σῶμα ἐπιθέσθαι Διονύσου κισσοφύλλου — He made an edict to bring diſgrace upon the nation, and upon a towre joyning to the court, he erected a pillar, and engraved on it, that no man ſhould enter, but thoſe who ſacrificed after the heathen manner to their Gods, and that all the Jewes ſhould be forced to be enrolled & put in a ſervile condition, and that thoſe that were enrolled ſhould be markt alſo with fire upon their body with Bacchus's Enſigne, an Ivie-leafe. Which paſſage ſeems to be taken notice of by the Author of the Ἐυμολοχίδου μίμα, who ſpeaks of Ptolemæus Philopator marking men διὰ τὰ φύλλα κισσοῦ, with Ivie-leaves. All which we ſee ſignifies the marking them out as ſervants with the enſigne of their heathen God Bacchus, as here with the mark of the beaſt, i. e. of Idol-worſhip.

Beſide

n. Beſide the mark of the beaſt, here is mention'd Ὄνομα θηρὸς Ἀριθμὸς ὀνόματος αὐτοῦ the name of the beaſt, and the number of the name, which are in like manner to be received on their wriſts, or foreheads, as the mark was; For ſo the conſtruction carries it, He cauſeth all ἵνα δώσῃ αὐτοῖς, that he may give them a mark v.16. And that no man ſhould buy or ſell, ſave he that had the mark, or the name, or the number of the name.
Ἔχων χάραγμα Where, as their having a mark given them is all one with receiving, and having it, ſo the having the name, and number of the name of the beaſt, muſt be all one with their receiving it. And then this will ſignifie no more than the ſeveral waies, whereby ſervants, or worſhippers of the heathen Idols were initiated, or received, and diſcriminated from others, 1. by a mark, or enſigne of that God, whoſe worſhip it was; an Ivie-leaf, for Bacchus, (from whence they were call'd thyrſigeri, and κιττοφόροι) and the like, 2dly, By the name of the God engrav'd on them, as Φοῖβος, Διόνυσος, Apollo, Bacchus, &c. and therefore c. 14. v.11. we have χάραγμα τοῦ ὀνόματος αὐτοῦ, which muſt there beſt be rendred, the engraving of his name, 3dly, By numeral letters, which make up the ſame ſumme, that the name of the God makes, which is but a myſtical, or cabaliſtical way of having the name underſtood by them that uſe it, but not eaſily underſtood by any man elſe; Of theſe Servius on Virgil makes frequent mention, And Martianus Capella mentions XN as the myſtical name of the Sun, i.e. the number of the name. Having gone thus farre, it is now obſervable that theſe four phraſes [worſhipping the image of the beaſt] v.15. [having the mark of the beaſt,] [having the name of the beaſt,] [having the number of the name of the beaſt] are all here uſed in the ſame matter, (as things commanded under ſevere interdicts, either capital puniſhment, ἵνα ἀποκτανθῶσιν, that they may be kill'd, that doe it not, or expulſion from humane ſociety, that they may not buy or ſell, but be diſcommuned) and perhaps thus differently expreſt to ſet down the ſeveral degrees of complying with heatheniſme, that the perſecutions brought Chriſtians to, known and mention'd by the antients, i.e. the ſeveral ſpecies of the Lapſi, 1. Apoſtatæ Apoſtates, that openly renounced the Chriſtian religion, 2. Sacrificati, they that ſacrificed to Idol-gods, 3. Thurificati, they that burnt incenſe to them, 4. Libellatici, they that received tickets to acknowledge that they had done ſo, though they had not, which being in reſpect of the ſcandal of it, and by way of interpretation all one with having ſacrificed, may properly be expreſt by receiving the number of the beaſts name, which is in effect all one with receiving his name or mark.

o. What [ὧδε ἡ Σοφία ἐστίν, here is wiſdome] ſigni-Ὧδε ἡ Σοφία ἐστὶν fies, is ſomewhat uncertain, It may referre to God; Herein is his wiſdome ſhew'd, that as the heathen Prieſts veil the names of their Gods in ſecret numbers, ſo God hath here ſet down in cypher the name of that heathen God, whoſe worſhip is by theſe Edicts preſcribed. And then that which follows [ὁ ἔχων νοῦν ψηφισάτω, let him that hath underſtanding count, or reckon] will be no more, than, Let him that knows what belongs to myſtical expreſſions of names by numbers, take notice of this number now given him, and he ſhall find how it fits the event. But it is alſo poſſible, that the phraſe [here is wiſdome] may referre only to man, 'Tis an act of ſpecial wiſdome to doe it, and then to that ſenſe will be agreeable, what follows, Let him that hath underſtanding caſt the account; where again the wiſdome, and underſtanding may either ſignifie skill, and ſagacity to find out the meaning of this myſterie, or elſe prudence to manage it wiſely, that it ſhall bring no danger upon him, It being that which was not fit publickly to be diſcovered, but if any man had the skill to diſcern it, he would, if he were wiſe, reckon it to himſelf, and ſay nothing, not diſcover that openly, which might bring danger or perſecution along with it. To this purpoſe 'tis obſervable, that in the firſt ages of the Church (which was moſt likely to have underſtood, and given us light in it) they made no conjectures about it, and 'tis Irenæus's ſaying, that if in his time it were fit publickly to be declared, δι' ἐκείνου ἂν ἐῤῥέθη τοῦ μὴ φθάσαντος ἑωρακότος, ἀλλ' οὐδὲ πολλῷ χρόνῳ ἑωρᾶσθη, ἀλλὰ σχεδὸν ἐπὶ τῆς ἡμετέρας γενεᾶς, πρὸς τῷ τέλει τῆς Δομετιανοῦ ἀρχῆς, It would have been declared by him that ſaw the Revelation, for that was but a little while agoe, almoſt in our age, about the end of Domitian's reigne. Intimating, that the reaſon of S. John's not diſcovering it, was ſomewhat proper to thoſe times, i.e. ſurely, becauſe ſome body that lived in his time, or was ſuddenly to come, was concerned in it; It will now, at this diſtance of ſo many hundred years, be more difficult for us to find it out, and leſſe advantagious to afflict our minds in the ſearch of it. That conceit of Irenæus, that the number is to be found out by the Greek account of letters, hath been taken for the rule, by which the work muſt be wrought, and ſo the Greek Alphabet hath had all the applications made to it, to expound this riddle, Whereas 1. theſe kind of Arithmetical myſteries were not ordinary among the Greeks of that age, And 2dly, the Greeks had antiently another way of numbring, beſide that of the letters of the Alphabet in their order, viz: by ſix letters only taken out of the Alphabet, which did comprehend all numbers, And who knows whether that be not the way of numbring, by which the operation is to be wrought? And 3dly, it is much more probable, that S. John had reſpect to the Hebrew cuſtome, of finding out myſteries in the number of letters, that being very uſual among the Rabbines of that age, under the name of Ghematraiia, which was a myſterious and abſtruſe art, and, in their account, a ſpecial depth of wiſdome among them. Whatever this number is, 'tis ſomewhat, which as a note of diſcrimination, is impoſed v.16. on all men of that time and place, whereof that viſion treats, and which ſome had upon them v. 17. was received by ſome ch. 14. 11. and not received by others ch. 20. 4. All this, and much more might be ſaid, to demonſtrate it unreaſonable to take any pains in finding out the preciſe name, whereof this of 666 is the numeral expreſſion; The ſenſe of the verſe, and the whole paſſage is clear without it, that the heathen Prieſts and Augurs, and ſorcerers, ſhould incenſe the Emperor againſt the Chriſtians in all the Provinces, and cauſe them to make Edicts of great ſeverity againſt all, that did not ſome way comply with their heathen worſhips, And I ſhall not trouble the Reader with any (as more ſcrupulous, ſo) uncertain enquiries.

CHAP.

Paraphraſt. CHAP. XIV.

a. 1. Here is another viſion, or another branch of the former. And me thought I ſaw the Lamb, i.e. Chriſt on mount Sion, in the Chriſtian Church, and with him all thoſe conſtant pure Chriſtian Jewes, ch.7. openly and conſtantly profeſſing the truth.

1. AND[1] a looked, and lo, a lamb ſtood on the mount Sion, and with him an hundred fourty and four thouſand, having his fathers name written in their foreheads.]

2. And again me thought I heard a voice from heaven, as the voice of many waters, &c. i. e. the Goſpel preached aloud among the Gentiles, and a multitude of Gentile Chriſtians (ſee ch. 7. 9.) a rejoicing together.

2. And I heard a voice from heaven, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder; and I heard the voice of harpers, harping with their harps.]

3. And theſe, me thought, were ſinging of praiſe to God (ſitting, as he was before repreſented ch. 4. 2. after the manner of the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, with the four Apoſtles, and the four and twenty Biſhops of Judæa in councel with him) and this ſong being a thankſgiving to God through Chriſt (and ſo call'd a new ſong) for vouchſafing them to be perſecuted, and ſuffer for his name (ſee Act. 5. 41. none could joyn with them in it, but the hundred and forty and four thouſand, i.e. thoſe pure Jew-Chriſtians, that had kept themſelves conſtant, and ſpotleſſe from the pollutions of the world, like them.

3. And they ſung as it were a new ſong before the throne, and before the four * beaſts, and the Elders, and no man could learn that ſong, but the hundred and fourty and four thouſand which were redeemed from the † earth.]

* living creatures, ζῶα
† land γῆς

4. Theſe are they which had kept pure from all the heretical Gnoſtick corruptions of uncleanneſſe, &c. (ſee note on ch. 2. n.) and that held out conſtant againſt all terrors of perſecutions, and ſo were reſcued from the ſins of that wicked age, the pure primitive Chriſtians,

4. Theſe are they which were not defiled with women, for they are virgins: theſe are they which follow the Lamb, whitherſoever he goeth: theſe were redeemed from among men, * being the firſt fruits unto God, and to the Lamb.]

* a firſt-fruit, ἀπαρχὴ

5. That never fell off to any falſe Idolatrous, or heretical practiſe, but ſerved God blameleſſe.

5. And in their mouth was found no guile: for they are without fault before the throne of God.

b. 6. And me thought I ſaw another Angel, none of thoſe before mentioned, flying or haſtning about the world, carrying good newes with him, happy tydings for the time to come, to all nations, Jewes and Gentiles, viz: to the Chriſtians of all.

6. And I ſaw another Angel flie in the midſt of heaven, having the [b] everlaſting † Goſpel, to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people,]

† good news to publiſh, εὐαγγέλιον εὐαγγελίσαι

7. And thereupon admoniſhing all now to ſtand out firmly and conſtantly, to adhere to the true God, and the Chriſtian faith, in oppoſition to the heathen idolatry, which ſhould now ſhortly be deſtroyed.

7. Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worſhip him that made heaven and earth, and the ſea, and the fountains of waters.]

c. 8. And as ver. 7. it was foretold that Idolatry ſhould ſuddenly be deſtroyed, ſo preſently another Angel, me thought, brought newes that 'twas done, that that whole impure city of Rome heathen, (under the title of Babylon (ſee note on ch. 18. a.) that old heathen, idolatrous city, that had lain ſo heavy upon the people of God, a numerous populous city, and in each of theſe reſpects fitly expreſſing this) was, i. e. ſhould ſpeedily be deſtroyed, for advancing the heathen worſhip, and perſecuting all that would not joyn in it.

8. And there followed another Angel, ſaying, [c] * Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, becauſe ſhe made all nations drink of the † wine of the wrath of her fornications.]

* She is fallen, ſhe is fallen, Babylon the city, the great † bitter of myrrhate wine, οἶνον τοῦ θυμοῦ

9. And me thought, a third Angel followed, on purpoſe to confirm all weak ſeducible perſecuted Chriſtians, and to fortifie them in their patience and conſtancy under the preſent, or yet remaining perſecutions (ver. 13.) and this he did by denouncing the judgments that the inconſtant ſhould fall under, the direfull ruine which attended all Apoſtatizing, complying Chriſtians, that (after the manner of the Gnoſtick compliers) for fear of perſecutions, had or ſhould forſake the Chriſtian purity, and joyn in the worſhips or practiſes of heathen Rome; denouncing poſitively, that whoſoever ſhould doe ſo, (ſee note on chap. 13. m. n.)

9. And the third Angel followed them, ſaying with a loud voice, If any man worſhip the beaſt and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, and in his hand,]

d. 10. He ſhould have his portion with heathen Rome, in the bitter puniſhments, or effects of God's wrath, ſuch as fell upon Sodome and Gomorrha, Chriſt being the Judge, and the Angels the Executioners of it.

10. The ſame ſhall drink of [d] the * wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation, and he ſhall be tormented with fire and brimſtone in the preſence of the holy Angels, and in the preſence of the Lamb.]

* bitter wine of God, mixt, unmixt in the cup of his wrath,

11. Even utter deſtruction to all that ſhall have been guilty of this in any degree (ſee ch. 13. note n.) and doe not timely repent of it.

11. And the ſmoke of their torment aſcendeth up for ever and ever: and they have no reſt day nor night, who worſhip the beaſt and his image, and whoſoever receiveth the † mark of his name.]

† engraving χαράγμα ſee note on ch. 13 a.

12. And herein ſhall the ſincerity of mens hearts appear, and be made manifeſt by the bloody perſecutions now approaching, ver. 13. if they ſhall venture any perſecutions from the heathens, rather than thus fall off, and deny Chriſt, if, whatever the hazard be, they ſhall adhere cloſe to the precepts of Chriſtian conſtancy, and the purity of Chriſtian practiſe, and neither really, nor ſeemingly comply with the perſecutors.

12. Here is the patience of the Saints: here are they that keep the commandements of God, and the faith of Jeſus.]

13. And

13. And I heard a voice from heaven, saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead † which die in the Lord * from henceforth, yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours, and their works doe follow * them.]

† that are in the Lord, which die within a while, ἀπ' ἄρτι

* with them μετ' αὐτῶν

13. And to that purpose there came a voice from heaven, saying, That there should now come a great trial indeed, (viz: in the times of Diocletian that cruel tyrant) and the persecutions should lie so heavie on the Christians within a while, that they should be happy, that were well dead, who were come to enjoy their reward of peace and blisse, and are not left on earth for such combats and storms as these. e.

14. And I looked, & behold a white cloud, and upon the cloud one sat like unto the Son of man, having on his head [f] a golden crown, and in his hand a sharp sicle:

15. And another Angel came out of the Temple, crying with a loud voice to him that sate on the cloud, Thrust in thy sicle and reap, for the time is come for thee to reap, for the harvest of the earth † is ripe.]

† is dried, ἐξηράνθη

14, 15. And presently upon this vision of those sharp persecutions (which generally were means to call down Gods judgments on the persecutors) me thought, I saw a bright shining cloud, and one like Christ upon it, in a regal attire, with a sicle in his hand (all this noting the judgments, and excision of heathen Rome, which in respect of their cruelty against the Christians and their other heathen sins was now, as a field of corn, ready for harvest) And another Angel called to him, and bad him proceed immediatly to this excision, their sins being come to maturity, and having fitted them for destruction. f.

16. And he that sate on the cloud, thrust in his sicle on the earth, and the earth was reaped.]

16. And he did accordingly, and this vengeance befell heathen Rome.

17. And another Angel came out of the Temple which is in heaven, he also having a sharp sicle.]

17. And another Angel or officer of Christ's vengeance, was sent out by him on the same arrant, and me thought he came from God in heaven, as out of the sanctuary, the place where incense is offered (an effect of the prayers of the Saints again) with a sharp sicle in his hand, an embleme of excision.

18. And another Angel came out from the altar, which had power over [g] fire, and cried with a loud cry to him that had the sharp sicle, saying, Thrust in thy sharp sicle, and gather the clusters of the vine of the earth, for her grapes are fully ripe.]

18. And another Angel came from the the altar of burnt-offerings, by which the wicked are represented, having the execution of God's wrath upon the wicked intrusted to him, and he cried aloud to him that had the sharp sicle, and bid him set about this work as if it were a time of vintage, cutting down the clusters of grapes of the vine of the land, i.e. destroying this idolatrous cruel city and people, as having filled up the measure of their iniquities, and being now full ripe for slaughter. g.

19. And the Angel thrust in his sicle into the earth, and gathered the vine of the earth, and cast it into the great winepresse of the wrath of God.]

19. And accordingly 'twas done, these obdurate sinners ripe for judgment, were terribly destroyed, cut down, and cast like ripe grapes into a winepresse, the wrath of God falling sadly upon them.

20. And the winepresse was trodden without the city, and blood came out of the winepresse, even unto the horse-bridles, by the space of a [h] thousand and six hundred furlongs.]

20. And this extended not only to the city of Rome, but to other parts of the Empire, wherein Christianity had been persecuted, and a most bloody slaughter there was among them. h.

Notes on Chap. XIV.

a. Εἶδον ἄλλ. ἄγγελ.

The sum of this insuing vision, and the propriety of it to this part of the story, is here fit to be set down as preparative to the interpretation of it. And it is this; The state of heathen Rome being set down in the former chapter, as it was in Domitians time, that time of persecuting of Christianity, and reviving of heathenisme (that had lost a little of its lustre) here is now a general view given of all that is more largely set down in the 16, 17, 18. chapters, i.e. of all from Domitian to Constantine, or the prediction in grosse, of what is there particularly executed. Just as the sixt chapter was the representation of the several degrees by which the Jews Polity came to its dissolution, and the premising in short, what was afterwards to be acted on the Jews in the following chapters. And as there the total destruction of the Jewish state is chiefly insisted on, from v.12. to the end, so here in this, the period of the Roman idolatrous power, and the destruction thereof by an immense effusion of blood is described, from v.14. to the end. But preparatory to that, a description of the pure, constant, Primitive Christians, in the first five verses. An angel declaring happy tidings to the whole Christian Church for the time to come, and requiring them to walk in a religious fear, and to give glory to God, because he would now appear and judge their persecuters v.6,7. Then another Angel foretelling the destruction of heathen Rome, v.8. and another, the bitter punishments and utter ruine of apostatizing, complying Christians v.9,10,11. then a declaration from heaven, that most sore persecutions should fall upon the Church immediatly before this happy change, so that they should be happy who were well dead, and were come to enjoy their reward, and not left to undergo so sore a trial, v.13. And this to point at the time of persecution under Diocletian, Maximian Herculius, Maximian Armentarius, Maximinus, Maxentius, Licinius, which was long and most sharp.

b. Εὐαγγέλιον

That the word Εὐαγγέλιον signifies good news, and by a figure only is appropriated to the Gospel, (as being most eminently such) is sufficiently known. And therefore here in all probability it must be taken in the native sense, and denote simply good tidings. And what they are, appears ver. 7. where the words of this good news are [The day of Gods judgments are come] the former words [fear God and give him praise], being the preface to it.

it. Which though they are a ſad proclamation of judgment, & ill news to the impenitent, yet they are a ſpecial piece of good news to the pious, conſtant confeſſors, that fear God, and confeſſe and give him praiſe, i. e. couragiouſly confeſſe him, whatſoever the danger be, (for ſo δοξάζειν θεὸν to praiſe God, ſignifies 1 *Pet.*4.16.) Now for the addition of [Αἰώνιον] to [Εὐαγγέλιον] that ſure muſt ſignifie this good news to be ſuch, as not only the preſent, but future ages were concern'd in. Thus was this (here mention'd) the freeing of the Chriſtian Church from publick Univerſal perſecution of the heathen power, which was to be afforded at the time pointed at in this viſion, i. e. at the fall of Babylon, v. 8. For after that the heathen perſecution was taken off by Conſtantine, there never came any ſuch an univerſal perſecution, but that in one place or other Chriſtians have had the benefit and liberty of aſſemblies. And though it cannot abſolutely be affirmed, that there can never come ſuch univerſal perſecution, yet in that this flouriſhing eſtate hath continued the thouſand years, c.20.11. it may well carry the name of Εὐαγγέλιον αἰώνιον, the everlaſting good news, in proportion to what we read of the puniſhment of the heathen perſecutors, whoſe ſmoke is ſaid to endure for ever and ever, Rev. 19. 3. That the devil ſhall be let looſe again, after this everlaſting good news, is affirmed c. 20.7. But then not Babylon (whoſe deſtruction here is the ſubject of this good news) but Gog and Magog ſhall encompaſſe the camp of the Saints, and the beloved city c.20.9. And though Gog and Magog in the Ottoman family hath overran that part of the Church, yet in other places, to which the Roman power did never extend, that loſſe is repaired by the acceſſion of Chriſtian Princes that reign in Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Poland, Ruſſia, &c. ſo that ſtill it may be εὐαγγέλιον αἰώνιον, in the largeſt ſenſe, as good news concerning all future time, as when Daniel prophecies that the Saints of the moſt high ſhall poſſeſſe the kingdome for ever and ever, c.7.18.

c. That by Babylon, heathen Rome is ſignified in theſe viſions, ſhall be ſhew'd at large, note on c. 18.2. Here only it will be obſervable, 1. why it is called the city, the great, (for ſo ἡ πόλις ἡ μεγάλη, is beſt rendred) viz. 1. in reſpect of her dominion, ſee c.17.18. that great city which reigneth over the Kings of the earth, and accordingly it was generally known by that title of Urbs Dominatrix, Regno ſuperba, Sanctorum debellatrix, &c. the Imperial city, Proud of her Dominion, the ſubduer and deſtroyer of the Saints, So in Cicero 'tis Lux orbis terrarum, the light of the world, Regina & Domina in Julius Frontinus, the Queen and Ruler of the world, Secondly, for the large circuit of the city, to which purpoſe this teſtimony of Athenæus is worth obſerving, li.1. Ἐπλείπει δ' ἂν γε ἐγὼ ἡμέρα μία ὑζαριθμήσων τὰς ἐν τῇ Ῥωμαίων ἀγορᾷ πόλεις Ῥώμη ἀριθμουμένας πόλις· ἀλλὰ πᾶσι, ἃς ἔχει τὸ ἐνταῦθα ἀριθμεῖσθαι, διὰ τὸ πᾶσθαι. If I ſhould reckon the cities that are numbred in Rome, that heaven-city of the Romans, not only one day would fail me, but as many days as make up a year, the number of them is ſo great. 2dly, Why this title of Babylon is here adapted to it, viz. to keep a ſpecial decorum, obſervable in theſe viſions, in repreſenting the Chriſtian Church by the antient Jewiſh, This is obſervable in many leſſer particulars, but moſt eminently in this deſcription of her Perſecutors. There were three moſt remarkable calamities that fell upon the ſeed of Iſrael, The bondage in Ægypt, the Capivity in Babylon, the Perſecution of Antiochus, And the like is prophecied in this book to befall Chriſtians, 1. Miſeries by Jewiſh perſecution, and therefore Jeruſalem is called Ægypt, *Rev.*11.8. The ſecond by Roman Idolatry, which is therefore called Babylon here, and c. 17. and c. 18. And the third, when the Devil is let looſe, by Gog and Magog, *Rev.*20.8. which are moſt perfectly parallel to Antiochus, (ſee the Paraphraſe there.) And there is little reaſon of doubting but theſe alluſions were intended, and there is great decorum and method therein. wch ought to be carefully attended.

That χολὴ and θυμὸς are all one, that they both promiſcuouſly ſignifie thoſe intoxicating, poiſoning mixtures, which were put into wine, hath been ſhew'd, in note on *Mat.*27.f. And agreeably to that notion, Οἴνῳ θυμοῦ] is applied in this chapter, to ſignifie two things, abominable ſin, and intolerable puniſhment, The former of them in the 8th verſe is joyned with πορνείας fornication, and 'tis the ſame in effect, which it would be, if the words had been [οἴνῳ ἠσμυρνισμένῳ τῆς πορνείας] a myrrhate (bitter, poiſonous) cup of fornication. Then, for puniſhment 'tis here uſed ver. 10. being ſpoken of God, οἴνῳ τῷ θυμῷ τοῦ θεοῦ, not as if θυμὸς ſignified wrath, (any more than the ſame word could ſignifie ſo, v. 8. where 'tis applied to fornication) but again as θυμὸς and χολὴ are all one, and as they ſignifie all thoſe poiſonous bitter mixtures put into wine, and ſo οἴνῳ τῷ θυμῷ τῆς ὀργῆς] is God's myrrhate cup of puniſhments, which he there threatens to pour out on them, expreſſed again in that that follows, κεκερασμένου ἀκράτου, mixt, unmixt, Ἄκρατος being the word to ſignifie wine, not mingled with water, merum, ſtrong wine, or red wine (as חמר, which is rendred ἄκρατος, unmixt, *Pſal.*75.9. ſignifies) and κεκερασμένος mixt with theſe inebriating ſpices, meant by θυμὸς, which the Septuagint in that place of the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 75. 9. expreſſe by πλήρης κεράσματος, full of mixture, and then both theſe put thus together, are very proper to expreſſe the cup of malediction (ſee note on Mat. 27. f.) and conſequently the curſes and fierce puniſhments of God. Thus c.16.19. οἴνῳ θυμοῦ τῆς ὀργῆς αὐτοῦ, the bitter wine of his wrath, not the wine of the anger of his wrath.

The word ἀπάρτι, (be it ſo read, or ἀπ' ἄρτι in two words) ſignifies, ſaith Enthymius, within a ſhort time, not long after, quickly, ſee note on *Mat.*23.39. and Mat. 26. 64. In both which (as here) the antient Latine reads amodo, within a while. This verſe belongs to that which went immediatly before, v. 12. ὧδε ὑπομονὴ τῶν ἁγίων ἐστίν, here is the patience of the Saints, to ſignifie a time of perſecution (ſee c. 13. 10.) And to that nothing can be more proper, than this, that they are to be accounted happieſt, that die ſooneſt, that within a while are taken out of this life, from having their part in the evil to come, Iſ. 57.1. So Eccl. 4. upon mention of the oppreſſors and ſtrength on their ſide, and the no comforter, v. 1. it follows, wherefore I praiſed the dead which are already dead, &c. v.2. And to this belongs the anſwer of the Spirit in the words following, they ſhall have

d. Οἴνῳ θυμοῦ

e. Ἀπάρτι

Ὑπομονὴ τῶν ἁγίων

Κόπος have rest from their κόπους i. e. from those persecutions which attend them here, (see note on Heb. 3. c. 3.) and which only death can give them an end of.

f. Στέφανος χρύσος golden crown That the Στέφανος χρύσος golden crown is an ensigne of Regal power, is sufficiently known, and little doubt but here it is so, denoting that, which in the New Testament is oft expresst by the style of the kingdome of God, or Christ, the destroying, and subduing of his enemies, it being the special part of the Kings office, debellare superbos, to subdue all that hold out against him. And as by the golden crown this regal office of Christ is here expresst, so by the δρέπανον ὀξὺ, sharp sickle, the approach of that exercise of it, the sickle referring to the ripe harvest, when the reapers come armed to cut down the corn, and sharpnesse denoting the preparednes of this instrument for that work, and withal the swiftnes and universality of the excision, cutting the whole field down together. And the destruction of the Romans, (i. e. of the heathen part of that people) is here fitly represented by it. So in the Gospel, in the parable of the wheat and darnel, the harvest was the time of the excision of the Jews, So Jer. 51. 33. Yet a little while and the time of her harvest shall come, i. e. of judgments, and excision, before expresst, by [It is time to thresh her] to which reaping is preparative. And whereas in this chapter there are two sickles, one to cut down the corn, another the clusters of grapes, both these sorts of harvests are to be seen, Joel 3. 13. and both for judgments on a people, Put ye in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe, Come get ye down, for the press is full, the fats overflow, for wickednes is great. And the reason of the phrase is clear, because Gods judgments being attendants, and rewards of the sins of men, when the measure of their sins is fill'd up, they are then like to a field of ripe corn in time of harvest, fit to be reapt, ready for Gods vengeance to fall on them, or again to bunches or clusters of grapes, ready for the wine-press. And so here at the point of time, represented in this part of the vision (the time of Diocletian) the sins of heathen Rome were fully ripe, ready for the vengeance of God, when their rage had continued a sharp persecution for ten years, without intermission, and pillars were erected to Diocletian, as trophies that he had abolished Christianity, and enlarged Paganisme, see Baronius An. Dom. 304. § 8.

The Θυσιαστήριον Altar here being that whereon the beasts were offered, and those beasts to be burnt with fire, and that fire being a denotation of the wrath and vengeance of God against the wicked, this Angel coming from the altar, and having power over fire, is consequently a minister, or executioner of Gods wrath upon the wicked impenitents, who are those beasts to be sacrificed to God, to be destroyed before him. g. Ἔξωθεν τῆς πόλεως

That the thousand six hundred furlongs here do refer to the bounds, or extent of Judea, is the opinion of the Learned H. Grotius, and his proof for it is, because S. Jerome which had lived in those parts, and examined it very accurately, affirms that Judea was in length an hundred and sixty miles, which accounting every mile to contain ten Greek stadia, or furlongs, amounts to 1600 furlongs, But if it be first adverted that the wine-presse is here said to be trodden without the city, and the blood to have extended to this space of 1600 furlongs, 2^dly, that Jerusalem was in the midst of the countrey, and consequently that from thence to the utmost bounds of it, the space will be but half so much as is the longitude of all Judea, this conjecture will not be so agreeable to this place. And therefore it will be more proper, and accordant to the context, which speaks not of Judea, but of Rome, to apply it to the adjacent Regions about Rome, to represent the bloodines of the warres, and many battails, that should in the times of Maximinus, Licinius, and Maxentius, ly so very heavily upon those countries, which were parts of the Roman Empire, that they cannot be better expresst, than by the blood coming to the horse-bridles, a vast effusion of blood among the Romans. h. CHAP. XV.

Paraphrase.

* was filled up, or, finished ἐτελέσθη

1. AND I saw another signe in heaven, great and marvellous, seven Angels having the seven last plagues, for in them * is filled up the wrath of God.]

1. And I had another vision concerning the judgments of God upon heathen Rome, and me thought I saw seven Angels with seven plagues, all which were to come one after another, and between them to divide the tragedy, and act all Gods vengeance upon them.

2. And I saw as it were a sea of glasse mingled with fire, and them that had gotten the victory over the beast, and over his image, and over his mark, and over the number of his name, stand on the sea of glasse, having the harps of God.]

2. And me thought I saw a great multitude of pure zealous Christians (the multitude noted by the sea, their purity by glasse, and their zeal by fire) that had not yeilded to the heathen terrors, in any the least degree, but continuing constant in their purity, and stedfast confession of faith. And they had in their hands harps, such as were wont to be used in the Temple in Gods service, called the musical instruments of God, 1 Chron. 16. 42.

† ruler of all things, παντοκράτωρ

3. And they sung the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying, Great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God † Almighty, just and true are thy ways, O King of Saints.]

3. And they sung to Christ the same song (or another after that pattern) that Moses had done upon the victory and deliverance out of Ægypt, when the Ægyptians were overwhelmed in the sea, noting their acknowledgment of God's goodnesse and mercy to them, who now, they saw, would punish and destroy the persecuting heathen Emperors. And they magnified the mighty and wonderful works of God, his overruling power and fidelity, in making good his promises to the Christians his servants.

4. Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorifie thy name? for thou only art holy, for all nations shall come and worship before thee, for thy judgments are made manifest.]

4. And said, Now shall all the men in the world be obliged to fear and dread thee, and withal to magnifie thy name. This is thine only work, O Lord, for the nations of the the world, the Gentiles, the Roman Empire, ſhall at length convert to Chriſtianity upon the ſight of thy revenges upon them who had crucified Chriſt, both Jews and Romans.

a. 5. And then me thought I ſaw the Holy of Holies opened, thoſe great myſteries, which had long lain hid, revealed, i.e. the decrees of God concerning the Romans now ready to come forth.

5. And after that I looked, and behold, the a * Temple of the Tabernacle of the teſtimony in heaven was opened.] * holy place

6. And the ſumme of them was contained in ſeven plagues, or puniſhments, upon the Roman Empire, brought out by as many angels in ſhining glorious habits, each reſembling the high Prieſt, c.1.13. (ſee note on Lu.12.b.) coming out of the oracle, v.5. ſent by God from his throne in heaven, to execute theſe judgments upon them.

6. And the ſeven Angels came out of the † Temple, having the ſeven plagues, clothed in pure and white linnen, and having their breaſts girded with golden girdles.] † holy place v.v.5.

7. And one of the four living creatures (attending and encompaſſing Gods throne, by which four Apoſtles were underſtood, c.4.6. and thoſe there having power to foretell things to come) was therefore repreſented to give to theſe ſeven angels (executioners of God's wrath) ſeven vials full of the wrath of the eternal God, i.e. to give them commiſſion for the pouring out of God's wrath upon heathen Rome.

7. And one of the four * beaſts gave unto the ſeven Angels ſeven golden vials, full of the wrath of God, who liveth for ever and ever.] * living creatures ζώων

8. And the place where this viſion ſeemed to be, i.e. the Sanctuary in heaven, v.5. was filled with ſmoke, as an expreſſion, and conſequent of this fire of God's wrath, and vengeance, which was like to prove ſo heavy, that the very repreſentation of it was unſupportable, no body could endure to come into the Sanctuary, whilſt that was repreſenting, Noting that it would fall very terribly on all them that ſhould come within the reach of it.

8. And the Temple was filled with ſmoke from the glory of God, and from his power, and no man was able to enter into the Temple, till the ſeven plagues of the ſeven Angels † were fulfilled. † ſhould be finiſhed, τελεσθῶσιν

a. ὁ ναὸς τ. σκηνῆς τ. μαρτυρίου

What is here literally meant by ὁ ναὸς τ. σκηνῆς τ. μαρτυρίου, ordinarly rendred the Temple of the tabernacle of the teſtimony, may thus be collected. The tabernacle of the teſtimony, clearly ſignifies that tabernacle among the Iſraelites in Moſes's time before the building of the Temple, called אהל מועד the tabernacle of meeting, *Exod.*27.21. and elſwhere the tabernacle of the teſtimony, Act. 7.44. becauſe God was there pleaſed to exhibite himſelf, and give teſtimony of his preſence, Act. 27.22. In that there were two regions, the firſt called the Sanctuary, the ſecond דביר or Oracle, the Holy of Holies, and this is here and v.6. called ναὸς, and ſo again c.16.1. and 17. not as that ſignifies the whole Temple, but a part of the Tabernacle, viz: the Holy place, or Holy of Holies. What ναὸς elſwhere ſignifies, ſee note on Act. 19.e. and *Rev.*14.c. out of the Scholiaſt on Nazianzen συλλ: α'. who diſtinguiſhes ναὸς in the Chriſtian Church from ναὸς and τέμενος, the two latter, ſaith he, ſignifie ἱερὸν ὅλον the whole Temple or Church, but the former the place where the Communion table ſtands, which being divided from the reſt of the Quire, is to that, as the Holy of Holies to the Sanctuary. And in this ſenſe of ναὸς it is that Pſal. 82.2. the vulgar Latine, and from thence the Engliſh in our Liturgie read Temple, where the Hebrew have דביר and from thence our Bibles read Oracle. From this place God promiſes to ſpeak to Moſes of all things which he would give him in commaund to the people of Iſrael, Exod. 25.23. And accordingly this opening of this holy place, or this Holy of Holies in this tabernacle of the Teſtimony, is a repreſentation of God's revealing his will as from the Oracle concerning heathen Rome, and ſo ſtraight the ſeven Angels came out from thence, habited like the high Prieſt (who alone was permitted to go into the Holy of Holies in the Temple) and as executioners of this decree have the ſeven plagues, or blows, or judgments v.6. i.e. come ready to act a complete deſtruction, ſuch as was before meant by the ἑπτὰ βρονταὶ ſeven thunders in the viſion about the Jewes ch.10. note a. CHAP. XVI.

1. And the ſeven Angels, the executioners of God's wrath ch.15.6. being thus come abroad, me thought, I heard a proclamation coming out of the Holy of Holies (the place of Gods exhibiting himſelf) addreſt unto them, and appointing them to go, and pour out thoſe vials, i.e. thoſe judgments of God upon the Roman Empire, (ſee note on ch.13.k.)

3. And the ſecond Angel did likewiſe, and there fell great ſlaughters upon the city of Rome, by the cruelty of the Emperours, and on occaſion of ſedition &c. and very great multitudes died thereby, (ſee note a.)

3. And the ſecond Angel poured out his vial upon the ſea, and it became as the blood of a dead man, and every living ſoul died in the ſea.]

4. And the third Angel did likewiſe, and me thought his vial fell on the other cities and provinces of the Empire, and a great deal of warre follow'd (note a.) and a multitude were ſlain there alſo.

4. And the third Angel poured out his vial upon the rivers, and fountains of waters, and they became blood.]

5. And

5. And I heard the Angel of the waters ſay, Thou art righteous, O Lord, which art and waſt, [b] and * ſhalt be, becauſe thou haſt judged † thus.

5,6,7. And this Angel that pour'd out the vial upon the waters v.4. God's judgments on thoſe other cities and provinces, did it as a juſt judgment on them; for the blood of Chriſtians that had been ſhed by them, and as an act of pity and relief to the perſecuted, whoſe perſecutions ended by this means. And ſo 'twas acknowledged by the ſouls of thoſe, that had been ſlain by them, (ſee note on ch. 6. c.) b.

2. ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν, καὶ ἐπὶ τοὺς ποταμοὺς καὶ τὰς πηγὰς

What is here meant by ἡ γῆ, and ἡ θάλασσα, and οἱ ποταμοὶ καὶ πηγαὶ, the earth or land, and the ſea, and the rivers and fountains of waters, v. 2, 3, 4. may appear by v. 1. where the Angels are appointed to pour out their vials upon the earth, or land. That in all reaſon ſignifies the Roman Empire, the thing repreſented in theſe viſions, as before it ſignified the nation and people of the Jewes (chap. 7. note b.) And there is no reaſon to affix any nice critical notation to either of theſe ſingle, that the land v. 2. ſhould ſignifie ſeverally, and ſo the ſea v. 3. and the rivers v. 4. but to take all together for that which was meant by the land v. 1. for ſo the ſeries here requires, where the Angels, that were commanded to pour out their vials on the earth, pour them out upon theſe three, evidently noting theſe three to be the diſtribution of that one and ſo all one with it. So ch. 14 7. God is deſcribed as the Creator of the heaven and earth, and ſea, and fountains of waters, where all thoſe latter three are ſet to denote that, which is elſwhere ordinarily called the earth and no more, in oppoſition to heaven, i. e. this inferior, terreſtrial globe, and all in it. To this may be added, that when the judgments are repreſented to fall upon Judæa, ſome are ſaid to fall on the land, others on the ſea, others on the trees, c. 7. not neceſſarily ſignifying ſuch a ſeparation of the judgments, ſome on this, ſome on that part, but the whole nation together, on which all thoſe judgments fell, and this indeed agreeable to what we read of the judgments that fell on Ægypt, where though ſome of them were cauſed by the ſignes, that Moſes wrought upon the land, Exod. 8. 16. others by ſmiting of the waters, ſtreams, rivers and ponds, and all their gathering together of waters, Exod. 7. 19. and ſo again ch. 8. 5. yet 'tis manifeſt that the judgments thus produced by every of theſe, (each ſmiting of his rod there being proportionable to the pouring out of a vial here) fell indifferently on the whole land, and not one judgment on one part, another on another. And ſo ſure is it to be underſtood in this place, Many judgments were to be poured out upon the Roman Empire, and by all of them together, the whole heathen part of it deſtroyed. This conſideration makes it unneceſſary farther to enquire into the productions of the ſeveral vials, what each of them diſtinctly ſignified, it being ſufficient that each of them notes ſome kind of deſtruction, and the number of ἑπτὰ φιάλας ſeven being a perfect number, the ſeven Angels, and their ſeven vials, and their ſeven effuſions ſignifie utter deſtruction, and not neceſſarily any more, unleſſe it be this, that it was not all at once, but by ſeveral degrees, and ſeveral ſorts of judgments, thoſe that ordinarily bring deſtructions upon provoking people, that have filled up the meaſure of their iniquities, λοιμὸς, λιμὸς, πόλεμος, infectious diſeaſes, famines and warres, and that theſe in a very remarkable manner fell upon the Roman Empire about theſe times, appears as by all hiſtories Eccleſiaſtical, and profane, ſo eſpecially by S. Auſtin in his firſt books de civ: Dei, written on purpoſe to defend Chriſtian religion from that charge, which was laid upon it, that it brought down all judgments upon the Empire, Which being falſe, as it was urged by the heathens to the prejudice of Chriſtianity, viz: that the judgments came for that ſin of permitting Chriſtianity in the Empire, and contempt of their Idol-worſhips, ſo was it moſt true, that for the heathens ſtanding out and perſecuting the Chriſtian faith, moſt heavy waſting judgments were come upon them. Of the three firſt vials it may be yet farther noted that they may have a peculiar aſpect on the plagues of Ægypt, the firſt, that of the Ἕλκος κακὸν καὶ πονηρὸν, the evil, and grievous boyl, i. e. infectious, and very painful, will be anſwerable to the boil breaking out upon man and beaſt through all the land, Exod. 9. 9. and ſignifie ſome infectious diſeaſe, plague, and peſtilence, which we know breaks out in boils; So likewiſe the ſecond and the third, the ſea becoming as blood ver. 3. and the rivers and fountains becoming as blood v. 4. are anſwerable to Moſes's ſtretching out his hand and ſmiting upon the waters of Ægypt, their ſtreams and their rivers and their ponds, and all their pools or collections of water, upon which they became blood, Exod. 7. 19, 20. Now for theſe three the hiſtories of thoſe times are very remarkeable, viz: for the great peſtilences, and horrible effuſions of blood. That which Herodian tells us of Commodus's reign, will ſufficiently qualifie that for the time of the pouring out of theſe three vials, At that time, ſaith he, l. 1. a very great peſtilence reigned over all Italy, but eſpecially in the city of Rome (and Dio tells us, that there died above two thouſand a day in the city) and a vaſt number both of beaſts and men periſhed thereby. And ſo this may be commodiouſly the pouring out the vial upon the earth, belonging not only to the city of Rome, but to all Italy, as ἡ γῆ the land, was wont to ſignifie not only Jeruſalem, but all Judæa, Hereupon the Emperor was perſwaded to remove to Laurentum ſo call'd from the grove of bay-trees there, the ſmell whereof the Phyſitians thought uſefull againſt the plague. And in like manner they preſcribed ſweet unguents, and odours to anoint their ears and noſes, to keep out, or overcome the peſtilential vapour. But nevertheleſſe, ſaith he, the diſeaſe daily increaſed, and ſwept away a multi- Αἷμα tude of men and beaſts. As for the blood that was then ſpilt, the ſame author gives us a large ſtory; Cleander, ſaith he, a ſervant of the Emperours bought out of Phrygia, and grown up with him from his youth, and advanced to greateſt offices in court and army, aſpired to the Empire; To that purpoſe bought up a vaſt quantity of corn (which cauſed a great famine alſo at Rome) thinking thereby in time of need to oblige the citizens and ſouldiers, and to gain them all to his party. But the event was contrary, for the famine raging, and the cauſe of it being viſible, all the citizens run out of the city to the Emperour, requiring this Engroſſer to be put to death; Cleander by his power keeping them from the Emperour (whoſe voluptuouſneſs made this eaſie for him to doe) ſends out the Emperour's forces armed and hors't againſt them, which made an huge ſlaughter among them, and in driving them into the city gates, by their horſes and ſwords, ſaith he, meeting with foot-men unarm'd, they kill'd a great part of the people. Which when they that were in the city underſtood, they got to the top of the houſes, and with ſtones, and tiles threw at the ſouldiers, and by this means put them to flight, and in the purſuit beating them off from their horſes, killed great multitudes of them, and this continued very cruelly for ſome time, And the appeaſing of this coſt a great deal more blood, the Emperour cauſing Cleander to be put to death, and his ſons after him, and then a great many more, ſaith he, not daring to confide in any body. To which that author immediatly adds the many prodigies which followed at that time, and the burning down of the Temple of peace, which beſide that it was the treaſury of a great part of the wealth of the city, and was accompanied with the burning of a great deal more of the buildings of the city, and among them of the Temple of Veſta, the fire continuing for many daies, till rain from heaven put it out, (which made them impute the whole matter to the anger of the Gods) beſides all this, I ſay, it was by all then lookt on as a preſage of great warres, which, ſaith he, accordingly followed; And ſo in this one paſſage of ſtory in that author we have the interpretation of theſe three vials. As great a plague as ever hath been read of, to be ſutable to the firſt, and a great deal of killing both in the ſedition, and by the cruelty of the Emperour, and by the fire, and by the warres that followed, (wherein the whole region, and not only the city of Rome was Θάλασσα Ρίζαις ὑ πηγαὶ concerned) anſwerable to the two latter, the ſea, i.e. the multitude of the city, and the rivers and ſprings of waters, the other provinces and cities become blood. But beſide theſe under Commodus, there was ſtore of the like judgments in the following Emperours times, untill Conſtantine, A very great peſtilence under Gallus, another under Gallienus, both deſcribed by Zozimus, Another at the end of Decius, on occaſion of which S. Cyprian wrote his book of mortality. And in Maximinus's time, ſaith Euſebius, whilſt he and his armies were ſore diſtreſſed by a warre with the Armenians, the reſt of the inhabitants of the cities, were grievouſly devoured with famine and peſtilence, infinite numbers dying in the cities, more in the countreys and villages, ἐν αἷ πάλαι τῶν ἀγροικῶν πολυάνδρει ἀπῳκεῖτο, and the numbers of husbandmen which had formerly been very great, were, almoſt all of them, ſwept away by famin & peſtilence, ſaith Euſebius Eccl: hiſt: l. 9. c. 8. And for wars, and effuſion of blood, and ſlaughters, the hiſtories are all along full of them, and need not be here recited.

Thus 'tis often to be obſerved in Euſebius's ſtory, particularly at the end of the great ſlaughters, and famine, and plague in Maximinus's time, l. 9. c. 8. And this being ſuch, coming from heaven, not from any lower cauſe, may the more probably belong to this place, where the Sun is ſaid to have power given it Ἥλιῳ ἐδόθη enough ſaid to ſcorch them, or to ſet them on fire (ſo καυματίζειν ſignifies) who were burnt by fire from heaven. But it is not improbable, that the Suns ſcorching of men denoted ordinarily by καῦμα] may ſignifie that ſcorching and drying up the fruits of the earth from whence a dearth proceeds, and ſo be here ſet to expreſſe a famin, ſo 'tis ſaid of the ſeed on the ſtony ground, that as ſoon as it ſprang up, ἐκαυματίσθη it was ſcorched, and, as it follows, ἐξηράνθη withered away. And many ſuch dearths there were in the ſtories of thoſe times, A moſt eminent one in Maximinus's time, mentioned by Euſebius l. 9. c. 8. Some, ſaith he, for the leaſt bit of victuals, parting with that which was moſt precious to them, One meaſure of corn ſold for two thouſand five hundred Attick's, ſome χρῷ βραχῷ in a little time ſelling all their poſſeſſions to buy bread. Others eating graſſe, and therewith poiſonous herbs, Noble women going out of the city to the countrey to beg bread. Others ſtaggering and falling down in the ſtreets, and howling out for one bit of bread, and able to ſpeak no word but that they were famiſht. And at length the dogs raving for hunger, and falling upon the men, in their own defence they fell on killing and eating dogs. As ſad a deſcription of raging famine as hath been read of, ſave in time of ſieges. Another famine there was in Commodus's time (mentioned from Herodian note a.) which put the whole city into a ſedition, but that not comparable to this, and cauſed by Cleander's inſatiate covetouſneſſe, and ambition, more than the ſcorching of the Sun. That which here follows, as the effect of this famine, that they blaſphemed the name of God] may moſt probably be, the heathens railing at the Chriſtians, as the cauſe of all their evils, for ſo the antients obſerve of them, that whenever plague or famine befell them, preſently they cryed out, Chriſtiani ad Leones, Let the Chriſtians be put to death, as the authors of their miſeries. An eminent place we have to this purpoſe in Arnobius l. 10. where naming the very judgments, which are here expreſt by the foregoing vials, peſtilences, wars and dearths, or famines, he ſaith of the heathens, that when theſe befell them, they preſently cryed out, that ſince Chriſtians began to be in the world, terrarum Orbem periiſſe, the whole world was deſtroyed, and all mankind afflicted with all ſorts of evils, and S. Cyprian in that known place ad Demetrian: That many wars break out, that plagues and famines, that the earth is kept long without any rain, nobis imputari, 'tis by the heathens imputed to us Chriſtians.

d. What θρόνος θηρίου the throne, or ſeat of the beaſt] ſignifies, may thus be gathered; θηρίον the beaſt ſignifies Idol-worſhip c. 13. 1. and as the throne of that may ſignifie the place, where it reſides, ſo it may ſignifie alſo that which ſuſtains and ſupports it, a ſeat being that which ſuſtains and holds up from falling, that which reſts upon it. This was the power of the Roman Empire, the ſtrength and dignity thereof, to which ſo great a part of the world was ſubjected, and which it made uſe of to maintain the Idol-worſhip againſt Chriſtianity. And ſo the throne of the beaſt is expounded in the next words by βασιλεία the Kingdome or Empire of Rome. Now that which is here ſaid to befall the Empire by the pouring out of the fifth vial is that it was ἐσκοτωμένη darkned, i. e. loſt much of its ſplendor, which before it enjoyed, which belongs clearly to the incurſions of the Barbarians, Perſians, Goths, Almains, &c. about theſe times which are here deſcribed, as every where appears in ſtory. As for the πόνος pain that here follows, it is the great grief, and anxiety, that it coſt them to contend, and ſecure themſelves from theſe Barbarians, who being ſo contemptible in the eyes of the Romans, it was matter of great indignation to them, to be thus infeſted by them, as Ægypt by flies and lice. And whereas v. 11. ἕλκη boils are joyned with πόνοι pains, I ſuppoſe thoſe boyls may again refer to that plague of Ægypt, (as the darkning of the Kingdome plainly doth) and denote the effects of the Barbarians incurſions. As the boyls Ex. 9. 9. were produced by ſcattering aſhes of the furnace toward heaven, to which the inrodes of thoſe Barbarians in reſpect of their multitudes, might fitly be reſembled. And then their blaſpheming the God of heaven, is their railing at Chriſt and Chriſtianity, as that which in the heathens opinion brought all theſe evils upon them. See Salvian de provid: and note c.

That it is agreeable to the calling of Rome Babylon, (ſee note on c. 18. a.) to ſet Euphrates the River that belongs to Babylon, to ſignifie Tyber, that belongs to Rome, hath been formerly ſhew'd, c. 9. note e. And that it ſo ſignifies here, there is little doubt. From hence it follows, that the drying up of Euphrates, being an alluſion to the hiſtory of Cyrus, prophetically ſet down Jer. 50. 38. [and drought is upon her waters, and they ſhall be dried up] and c. 51. where is mention of [the drying up her ſea, and making her ſprings dry, v. 36.] it muſt in reaſon be interpreted thereby. There in the taking of Babylon, Cyrus turned away the river Euphrates, and entred the city through the channel thereof. And ſo the drying of the river being the preparative to the taking the city, and the making that weak and acceſſible, which otherwiſe was impregnable, this phraſe of drying up the water of Euphrates, is thought commodious to be made uſe of, to expreſſe the weakning of the ſtrength of Rome, and making it conquerable, or, as it here follows, that the way of the Kings might be prepared. To prepare a way, we know is to remove difficulties, and obſtructions, to level and plain a paſſage, and that in the prophets expreſt by exalting valleys, and bringing hils low, and plaining the rough places. And when rivers, or waters are in the way, then the drying them up, is preparing the way, making them paſſable. And ſo the fitting the city of Rome for conqueſt, by Conſtantine and his ſons, (who are here called Kings from the riſing of the Sun, ſee note f.) is the full interpretation of drying up Euphrates, that the way of the Kings might be prepared. Of this the hiſtory is clear in Euſebius Eccl: hiſt: l. 9. c. 9. (and ſo in Zozimus alſo) that Maxentius having faſtned himſelf in Rome (out of which he went not himſelf, having no confidence in the love and fidelity of the people) he fortified every place and region and city, with armies for guards, and had a thouſand Troops of ſouldiers to ly in ambuſh in every part of Italy, and the reſt of his dominions where the enemy was likely to come; Theſe ſure

were the obſtructions or difficulties in Conſtantines way to Rome, which are here to be dryed up, or removed, and accordingly it follows in the hiſtory, that Conſtantine being aſſiſted by God ſet upon his firſt, and ſecond, and third army, and overcome them all; and poſſeſſing himſelf of the greateſt part of Italy, came cloſe up to Rome. And ſo 'tis viſible, what this drying up the river, by which their way was prepared] ſignifies, the ſubduing thoſe armies in Italy, ſo that now nothing withheld his paſſage from Rome; which is here looked on as a very great thing, proportionable to Cyrus's turning the River Euphrates, and entring Babylon through the channel of it. But there was yet one difficulty more to be conquer'd, before Conſtantine could enter Rome. For his onely deſigne being to deliver the Romans from the tyranny of Maxentius, and not to do any hurt, but rather bring relief to the inhabitants of the city, there was now no way to reconcile this difficulty, whilſt Maxentius remained fortified in the city. And therefore in God's wonderful providence it was ſo diſpoſed, that Maxentius and all his party came out of Rome, but in ſtead of joining battail with Conſtantine, fled from him immediately, and having formerly built a treacherous bridge over Tyber, on deſign to draw Conſtantines army over it, and ſo by the falling of the bridge to drown them, Maxentius himſelf, and his forces, are forced that way, and drown'd in the pit which they had prepared for others, and himſelf and his life-guard were the firſt that thus periſhed. This ſo ſignal a deſtruction Euſebius thinks fit to compare to the Iſraelites victory over Pharaoh in the Red ſea, and ſaith it was according to the prediction of the divine oracles, in all probability referring to this viſion here. The concluſion of it was, that this being done, Conſtantine came Conqueror to Rome, where without any oppoſition, he was received by young and old, Senators and Nobles, and all the people of Rome, with cheerful countenances, and joyous acclamations, as the preſerver and benefactor of them all, and commanding the ſign of the croſſe to be ſet on the right hand of his ſtatue, he affixt theſe words in Latine. Hoc ſalutari ſigno, veraci fortitudinis indicio civitatem noſtram jugo Tyranni ereptam liberavi, Et S. P. Q. R. liberatum priſco ſplendori & claritati reſtitui. By this ſalviſick ſign, the true expreſſion of fortitude I have freed our city, and delivered it from the tyrants yoke, and have reſtored the Senate and people of Rome to their antient ſplendor and brightneſs. And in like manner the Senate dedicated to him a triumphant bow, Liberatori urbis, fundatori quietis, to the deliverer of the city, and founder of their peace, as may be ſeen in Euſebius, Socrates, and Sozomen and others. And ſo this was a farther completion of this prophecie, and a laſt part of the drying up Euphrates, (parallel to that of the drying up of the Red ſea before the Iſraelites) and preparing Conſtantine's peaceable entrance into the city.

f. What ἀπ' Ἀνατολῶν ἡλίου, from the riſing of the Sun] ſignifies, may be reſolved by theſe two conſiderations, 1. that the Kings or Magi that came to worſhip Chriſt, ſoon after his birth, whilſt Herod deſigned the killing of him, are ſaid to come ἀπ' ἀνατολῶν from the riſing of the Sun, Mat. 2. 1. And agreeably to that, Conſtantine and his ſons, which had given up their names to the Chriſtian faith, and were promoters of it, whilſt Maxentius perſecuted it, may be thus in Prophetick ſtyle, fitly deſcribed by the Kings from the riſing of the Sun. Secondly, Chriſt himſelf is called Ἀνατολὴ the riſing Sun (ſee note on Lu. 1. c.) and ſo ſeems to be called here c. 7. 2. where the Angel aſcending from the Eaſt] is one ſent immediately by Chriſt; and then βασιλεῖς ἀπ' ἀνατολῶν Kings from the riſing of the Sun] may be a very fit phraſe to expreſſe Chriſtian Kings. And it is to be obſerved, that Βασιλεῖς Kings in this Book, is not confined to the Emperors, or ſupreme Governours, but is more looſely uſed for Commanders, all in authority (ſee note g. and c. 11. note f.) and ſo may in the plural be applicable to Conſtantine, and his ſons, and the Chriſtian Commanders under him. Βασιλεῖς ἀπ' ἀνατολῶν

g. What is here meant by πνεύματα ἀκάθαρτα unclean ſpirits] may in part be reſolved by Euſebius in the ſtory of Maxentius Eccl: hiſt: l. 9. c. 9. where the firſt thing that he ſaith of him, is, that he relied on Magical arts in this whole matter, and thereupon kept himſelf up cloſe in Rome, and would not go out of it. So again de vit: Conſtant: l. 1. c. 30. At laſt he fell to magick and ſorcery, ſometimes cut up women great with child, ſometimes ript up the bowels of tender infants, ſometimes killed lions, all to divine thereby; He often uſed wicked adjurations to raiſe up devils, ſaith he, by whoſe help he might avert the violence of the war from him, hoping that they would help him to the victory. Now theſe impure ſpirits are here ſaid to be three, but the King's MS. wants that word τρία three. If we read it without [three] then it is already explain'd, that he made uſe of Magick and Augury. But if the word three] be retained, then either may it ſignifie that he betook himſelf wholly to theſe arts, (the number of three, as of ſeven, having oft no other importance in it, but to ſignifie a great deal) or elſe peculiarly theſe three ſorts, 1. Augury, or divination by entrails, 2dly, Calling up of devils, (both particularly mention'd by Euſebius) and 3dly, the uſe of the Sibyllin Oracles, which the Roman ſorcerers and diviners generally dealt in, and Maxentius made uſe of, ſee Zozymus l. 2. Of theſe it is farther ſaid, that they were ὡς βάτραχοι as frogs, referring to thoſe creatures brought forth upon Ægypt by the Magicians at Pharaohs command, Exod. 8. 7. Of which, as it is known that they are impure creatures, breeding and dwelling in the mire, and ſo theſe impure ſpirits, or arts are fitly compared to them. ſo it is alſo obſervable, how uſeleſſe, and unprofitable they are, they croak, but do nothing elſe, and ſo they fitly reſemble theſe Magical arts, which made a great noiſe, but never brought him the leaſt advantage, but rather haſten'd his ruine, by relying on them. Then theſe frogs are ſaid to come out of the mouth of the Dragon, and the beaſt, and the falſe prophet] which again, if the word [three] be not retained, will conclude theſe Magical arts, which he made uſe of, to proceed promiſcuouſly from theſe three, but if the word [τρία three] be retained, than it will be proper to confine the reſponſes of the devils, when they were raiſed by him, to the firſt of the three, thoſe that came out of the mouth of the Dragon, for that is every where the devils title in this Book, (see note on c.12.d. and 13. b.) and the devils being (as was said) raised by Maxentius to direct and assist him, the first of these frogs is said to have come out of the devils mouth immediately. Secondly, the art of divining by entrails, and to that purpose killing of women and children, as well as beasts, being directly a piece of heathenisme, confined to their Augurs and Priests, the second of these frogs is said to have come out of the mouth of the Beast, i. e. Idoll-worship, so called c.13.1. the Priests being the mouth thereof. Thirdly, the heathen Prophets undertaking to fetch grounds of their prædictions most frequently from the Books of the Sibyls, such fragments thereof, as were remaining among them, the third frog is said to come out of the mouth of the false prophet, i. e. of the College of diviners, which thus by study in those Oracles, undertook to foretell things to come. And of all these it is said, that they did signes, either by foretelling sometimes things that came to passe, which gave them authority among men, or else by shewing some deceitful wonders. And that they went out, ἐπὶ, upon, or to the Kings of the whole world, i. e. to Maxentius the Emperour, and his Commanders under him, call'd Βασιλεῖς Kings in the plural, (see note f.) and incited them to the war of the great day of God, i. e. to fight with Constantine that instrument of Gods to bring in Christianity into the Empire.

h. Ἁρμαγεδών

What Armageddon, which is here said to be an Hebrew word signifies, or of what composition it is, is a matter of some question. The Learned H. Grotius conceives it to be הר מגדון the mount of meeting, to note the place and battel where the armies met, viz. on Constantine's side 90000 foot and 8000 horse, of Germans, Galls, and Britains, on Maxentius's side 170000 foot, & 18000 horse, of Romans, Italians, &c. in Zozimus, and that this is here said in reference not to the valley of Megiddo, where Josias was slain, but to the waters of Megiddo, Judg. 5. 9. where the Canaanites were slain by Barac, which appears the more probable, because the Hebrew הר is in Greek rendred Ἀρ, as Ἀρραεισὶν in Eusebius Præp: for הר גריזים mount Gerizim. But another composition of the word may be yet more probable, viz. that of Drusius, that it be made up of הרמא and גדון, the excision or destruction of their armies, as גר in Hebrew, or their fortunes, (all their former good successes) as גר in Chaldee signifies. And so the clear meaning of the verse is this, that the evil spirits, v.14. the Magicians and Augurs, &c. gathered them together, (so 'tis said v.14. συναγαγεῖν αὐτὸς, and to them in the plural neuter, belongs the συνήγαγεν in the singular) caused them to fight this great battel with Constantine, which was the utter destruction of that great army of the heathens, and so a very heavy judgment or excision, the effect of the vial of the sixt Angel. This victory of Constantine over Maxentius was so signal, and considerable, that, as Onufrius tells us, Fast: l. 2. the Indictions (that known way of computing of times among the Romans) were taken from thence, ab eâque die primam Indictionem inchoari, saith Baronius, and from that day the first Indiction began, ut liberatam à Maxentiii tyrannide urbem & Ecclesiam indicaret, that it might proclaim and commemorate the freeing of the City and Church from Maxentius's tyranny. By which it may appear, how memorable a passage this was, and how fit to be the matter of this Vision. See Abr: Bucholcers Chronology Ann: Chr. 312.

Paraphrase.

CHAP. XVII.

1. And another vision I saw to the same purpose. One of those executioners of God's wrath came unto me, saying,

1. AND there came one of the seven Angels, which had the seven vials, and talked with me, saying unto me, Come hither, I will shew unto thee the judgment of the great whore, that sitteth upon many waters,]

I will shew thee the vengeance that is ready to befall the Imperial dignity of Rome, fitly entituled the great whore, (great in it self, and whore for their impieties against God, their worship of many heathen Gods directly owning that title, as an harlot is she, that takes in many others in stead of the one husband) sitting, i. e. ruling over many waters, i. e. much people, having many nations under her dominion.

2. From the power and authority whereof many other kingdomes (see c.13.14.)

2. With whom the Kings of the earth have committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication.]

have been confirmed and fortified in their idolatrous courses, and had their false worship propagated to them, the whole Roman Empire running mad after her vile heathen practises.

2. 3. And in this vision me thought I was in a desert, (fit to

3. So he carried me away in the Spirit into the wilderness: and I saw a [a] woman sit upon a scarlet coloured beast, full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads, and [b] ten horns.]

b. represent the desolation, that was to be expresst in that vision) and there I saw what he had promised me, v.1. a woman that great whore mentioned there, the Imperial power of Rome heathen, seated on an Emperor in a scarlet robe, a great blasphemer against the true God, and advancer of idolatry, and he had seven heads, (the city of Rome built on seven hils) and ten horns, i. e. so many other Kings that ruled over divers countries, and were confederate with the Roman Emperor.

4. And this Roman power was in great prosperity, much

4. And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet colour, and [a] decked with gold, and precious stone, and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand, full of abominations, and filthiness of her fornication.]

iumptuousnesse was bestowed upon their idol-worship, and all manner of abominable filthinesse was committed therein.

5. And

† or whoredomes, μυστήριον, to Aretheus and the antient Latin.

5. And upon her forehead was a name written, [c] Mysterie, Babylon the great, the mother of † harlots, and abominations of the earth.]

5. Which being so frequent & acknowledged in their secreter devotions, are best described by the word Mysterie, which was the word which the Greeks used for their uncleanest meetings, and by Babylon (see note on c. 14. c. and c. 18. 2.) which of old was famous for these, and so destroyed. From hence came all the idolatry of the other cities, see v. 2.

c.

6. And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the Saints, and with the blood of the Martyrs of Jesus, and when I saw her, I wondred with great admiration.]

6. And beside her idolatries and uncleanesse, she was represented as a great persecuter of Christians, (see c. 1. d.) at this sight of a woman thus represented, in all glory, and then drunk with blood, and vomiting it out, I was much astonished.

7. And the Angel said unto me, Wherefore didst thou marvel? I will tell thee the mysterie of the woman, and of the beast that carrieth her, which hath the seven heads and ten horns.]

7. And the angel that shewed it me, v. 1. told me the interpretation of it, viz. that it was designed by God to represent the Roman heathen power, the seven hills on which it was built, and the ten Kings confederate with it.

8. The beast that thou sawest, was, and is not, and shall ascend out of the bottomelesse pit, and go into perdition, and they that dwell on the earth shall wonder, (whose names were not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world) when they behold the beast, [d] which was, and is not, * and yet is.]

8. And the scarlet beast v. 3. on whom this power is seated, and which blasphemeth and defieth the God of heaven, i. e. the person of the Emperor, in whom this power is vested, at the time to which this part of the vision refers, (see note 2.) is one which was in power, but at this point of time, i. e. after Vespasian's return out of Judæa, was out of it, but shall come to it again, sent, as it were, out of hell, to persecute the Christians. And when he, i. e. Domitian, shall have delivered up the Empire again to Vespasian, upon his return out of Judæa, and for some years become a private man again; this shall be matter of great admiration and astonishment to all that are not Christians, wheresoever they are, seeing by this means, that the persecutor of Christians is gone out of power (and when he comes in again, shall not continue long, but himself be cruelly butcher'd, v. 8. and 11.) and Vespasian a favourer of the Christians, but destroyer of the Jews, is come in again, even while Domitian was alive, which made it the more strange.

* although it be contrary to † sense viz.

9. And here is the † mind which hath wisdome, The seven heads, are seven mountains, on which the woman sitteth.]

9. This is the meaning of the riddle, The seven heads are the seven hills, which are so famously known in Rome.

* they are viz.

10. And * there are seven Kings, five are fallen, and one is, and the other is not yet come, and when he cometh, he must continue a short space.]

10. And beside they denote the seven Kings or Emperors thereof, (that have had any thing to doe with the Christians) which are here to be numbred from the time of the beginning of these visions, till this of the writing of them: Of them five are dead, all of violent deaths, poisoned, or killed by themselves, or others, viz. Claudius, Nero, Galba, Otho, Vitellius, one then reigned, viz. Vespasian, and a seventh was not yet come to the Kingdome, viz. Titus, who when he should come to it, should reign but two years and two moneths.

11. And the beast that was, and is not, even he is the eighth, and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition.]

11. And Domitian described v. 8. as he that was, and is not, i. e. one that in Vespasian's time, while he was busie in other parts, exercised all power at Rome, and was called Emperor, is the eighth, i. e. comes to the Empire after those seven, being the son of one of them, to wit of Vespasian (in whose time also he held the government of Rome) and this a wretched accursed person, a cruel bloody persecutor of the Christians, and shall be punisht accordingly.

12. And the ten horns which thou sawest are ten Kings, which have received no kingdome as yet, but receive power as Kings one houre with the beast.]

12. As for the ten Kings of the barbarous nations, noted by the ten horns, v. 3. those which (though after, v. 16. they shared the Roman Empire, yet) as yet had not done so, had no Kingdome as yet within the Roman Territory, they for a small time complyed with the Roman power.

13. These have one mind, and shall give their strength and power unto the beast.]

13. And did as the Emperor did, persecuted the Christians in their Territories.

14. These shall make [e] war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them: for he is Lord of Lords, and King of Kings, and they that are with him are called and chosen and faithful.]

14. And having done so, they shall ere long be subdued to the Christian faith, according to God's promise that Christ should be King of King's, &c. i. e. that Kings and Potentates should be subdued unto him, and (according to the reasonableneſſe of it) that the Christian faith consisting of nothing, but patience and perseverance under persecutions, without any resisting, or rebelling against the persecutors, should at length approve it self to Kings and Potentates, and prevail upon them, to embrace the faith of Christ.

15. And he saith unto me, The waters which thou sawest, where the whore sitteth, are peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues.]

16. And the ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast, these shall hate the whore, and shall [f] make her desolate, and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire.]

15, 16. And he saith unto me, The waters, i. e. the people of several nations, that were under the Roman Emperor so lately, And the ten Kings of those nations that had no power or kingdome, within the Roman Territories, v. 12. shall invade the Roman Empire, and at length spoil the City of all the bravery, and deprive them of many of their former dominions, and set the City (a third part of it c. 16. 19.) on fire, (see Procop. Vand. l. 1.)

all those nations should first confederate with the Romans, and also that they should now break off, and execute God's vengeance upon them.

Notes on Chap. XVII.

a. Κοκκινον θηρίον

That the beaſt here muſt ſignifie the Idolatrous heathen worſhip, may be thought, by comparing this verſe with c.13.1. There the beaſt, whereby that is acknowledged to be repreſented, is ſaid to have ſeven heads, and ten horns, and upon the heads the name of blaſphemy, And ſo here, much to the ſame purpoſe, the beaſt is full of names of blaſphemy, having ſeven heads and ten horns. But it muſt be obſerved 1. that there are more beaſts than one, mention'd in theſe viſions, and not all ſignifying the ſame, but viſibly divers things, and that difference obſervable from other circumſtances. As 1. here is the addition of κοκκινον ſcarlet-coloured, which refers to the colour of the Imperial robe, which was ſuch, ſaith Pliny Nat: hiſt: l. 22.2. And ſo that inclines it to ſignifie the Emperor in this place, and though θηρίον a beaſt may ſeem a mean title, to repreſent ſo great a perſon, yet when it is conſidered, that rage and cruelty, and all manner of uncleanneſſe, may be found in an heathen Idolatrous Emperour, all theſe being ſo fit to be repreſented by a θηρίον, or wild beaſt, ſuch an Emperour as this, may well own that title. Secondly, here is a woman ſitting upon that beaſt, which makes it differ again from that repreſentation c.13. And this woman appears to bee the whore in the firſt verſe of this chapter, for being there told by the Angel, that he ſhall ſee the judgment of the great whore, it follows immediately, he carried me, and I ſaw a woman &c. Now that this woman or great whore is the Imperial power of heathen Rome, appears by her ſitting upon many waters, ſitting there, noting rule and dominion (as the many waters is great multitudes of people) and ſo by the Kings of the earth committing fornication with her, v. 2. Agreeable to which it is, that the Beaſt whereon ſhe ſits, ſhould be the perſon of the Emperour, in whom that power was veſted, or ſeated, as we ſay, which is farther expreſt v. 7. by the beaſts carrying the woman, the Greek word βαστάζειν there, being that which belongs to carrying of burthens, &c. on ſhoulders, and that we know, is figuratively applied to power or government, Iſ.9.6. the government ſhall be upon his ſhoulders. And ſo likewiſe by verſe 18. it is as evident, that the woman is that great Imperial City which reigneth over the Kings of the earth. As for the ὀνόματα βλασφημίας the names of blaſphemy, they are moſt ſignally appliable to Domitian, who called himſelf Lord God (ſee c.13.note c,) and oppoſed the true God, and ſet up many falſe idol gods, in defiance of him, which is the moſt real blaſphemy, and is ſo ſtyled by the Author of the book of Maccabees. And to conclude, that this beaſt here is a perſon, and an Emperour (and not the heathen worſhip ch. 13. 1.) it is evident by v.11. where, of the Kings mention'd v. 10. this beaſt is ſaid to be the eighth, and by the addition of [he that was and is not] it is as clear, that it was Domitian at the time, when he had delivered up the Empire to his Father Veſpaſian at his return from Judea, being ſhortly to return to it again. Which with the reſt of the deſcription of him v.8. is appliable to no other, but to him, ſee note d.

That theſe ten horns, or Kings, were thoſe barbarous nations that lay on the North of the Euxin ſea, and of Dannbius, and the Rhene, (which were the ordinary bounds of the Roman Empire on that ſide) the number of them will ſufficiently evince, Procopius reckons them up to that number of ten, Oſtrogothi, Viſigothi, Vandali, Gepidæ, Longobardi, Heruli, Burgundions, Huns, Franks, Saxons. Of theſe it is ſaid v. 12. that they were ten Kings οἵτινες βασιλείαν οὔπω ἔλαβον, which had not yet received the kingdome. This cannot be underſtood, that they had as yet (in that point of time, to which the viſion belonged) no dominions of their own, for they are called Μίαν βασιλεῖς ten Kings, and it is evident in ſtory, that thoſe barbarous Nations had their ſeveral Kings in that time. The meaning then muſt be, that they had as yet no Dominion within the Roman Territorie, (but only made ſudden incurſions into it) their receiving the Kingdome, being when they ſhared the Empire among them. So the Fathers in the time of perſecution interpreted it, Romani imperii abſceſſio in decem reges diſperſa, ſaith Tertullian, the departure of the Roman Empire diſperſed into ten Kings, & decem regibus, in quos dividetur, quod nunc regnat imperium, ſaith Irenæus, the ten Kings into which the Empire, which now reigns, ſhall be divided, And then, before they came to this having a kingdome, dominion in the Roman Territories, it is ſaid of them, that as Kings they receive power with the beaſt, i. e. join, and comply, and act with the beaſt, aſſiſt heathen Rome in perſecuting the Chriſtians, (but that only μίαν ὥραν one houre, a ſmall ſhort while) which is farther expreſt by having one mind, and giving their ſtrength and power to the beaſt. What point of time it was, when this was done, being but μίαν ὥραν for a ſhort ſpace, is the onely matter of difficulty. And here 1. it is clear, that this time here pointed to is before they took kingdomes within the Roman Territorie, both by the βασιλείαν οὔπω, they had not yet received the kingdome; and becauſe when they did ſo, they did make deſolate and eat her fleſh, v.16. and therefore the vulgar Latines reading [poſt beſtiam] after the beaſt, (as if it were μετὰ θηρίον, not μετὰ θηρία) muſt needs be an error. 2dly, It muſt be before the Emperours became Chriſtian, for θηρίον the beaſt ſignifying the Roman Idolatry, not ſimply, but having power and perſecuting Chriſtians, their giving that power to the beaſt, ſuppoſes it to be, while it is the beaſt, i. e. heathen and perſecuting. 3dly, It muſt be before theſe barbarous nations had received the faith, for after, they would not join with the beaſt, and that is an argument again, that it was before they got poſſeſſion of any piece of the Roman man dominion. for it is manifeſt in ſtory, that a great part of theſe nations were Chriſtians, though Arians, before that. For the firſt of them that came on the South of Iſter, (which is Danubius, when it toucheth upon Illyricum) were thoſe, who in the time of Valens, obtained of him to come into Thracia, and to dwell on that ſide of Iſter, and to defend that limit of the Empire againſt the other Goths, that were Pagans; ſee Theodor. l. 4. c. ult. Sozom: l. 6. c. 37. Paulus Diaconus hiſt: Miſcel: l. 12. c. 14. and Ammian: Marcel: And from theſe Arian Goths, ſwarmed afterwards thoſe, which invaded Italy, Africk, Spain. As for the ſhort incurſions, which the Goths made into Aſia, or the Franks into Gallia, in the time of Gallienus, and of Claudius, wherein the Chriſtians ſuffered much by them, (and the ſpace would fit μίαν ὥραν well) that cannot be it neither, becauſe then they did not give their ſtrength and power to the beaſt. 4^thly, then, that which is the moſt probable is this, That the Chriſtian religion was propagated among thoſe barbarous people, and was not publickly perſecuted by them, whiles the Roman Emperours from time to time did moſt bloodily purſue it. That it was ſpread among them, that one place in Tertullian adv: Jud: c. 8. may ſuffice. Et Britannorum inacceſſa loca Romanis, Chriſto vero ſubdita, & Sarmatarum, & Dacorum, & Germanorum, & Scytharum & abditarum multarum Gentium &c. The places which the Romans had not come to, were ſubdued to Chriſt, the Britains, the Sarmatians, the Dacians, the Scythians, the Germans, and many ſecret Nations. Which words do plainly point at thoſe very nations which afterwards overrun the Empire. And there are not related any perſecutions in thoſe parts, which would not have been altogether omitted in Eccleſiaſtical hiſtory, if there had been any publick authoritative perſecution there. And it is obſervable here in England, from the days of King Lucius until the reign of Diocletian, (when Alban the Proto-martyr of England ſuffered) the Chriſtians continued in peace and quietneſſe, ſee Bede Eccl: hiſt: l. 1. c. 4. Hereupon it may be collected that Diocletian being a violent and furious perſecuter, that extended his perſecutions to all parts of his Empire, at leaſt in the two laſt years of his reign, a vigorous and active Prince, that enlarged the limits of the Empire, particularly to thoſe Northern parts, Dacia reſtitutâ porrectis uſque ad Danubii caput Germania Rhetiaque limitibus, having recovered Dacia, and reacht out the limits of Germany, and Rhetia, as far as the head of Danubius, as it is ſaid of him in the Panegyrick ad Dioclet: & Maximian: (and more particularly Pomponius Latus in that ſhort hiſtory which he gives of Diocletian, ſpeaks to the very point of time, Diocletianus rebus toto Oriente compoſitis, Europam repetiit, ubi jam Scytha, Sarmatæ, Alani, & Baſterna jugum ſubiverant, una cum Carpis, Cattis, & Quadis, &c. Diocletian having compoſed affairs over all the Eaſt, returned to Europe, where the Scythians, Sarmatians, Alans, and Baſternians, together with the Carpi, Catti, and Quadi, and others had already undergone, and ſubmitted to his yoke; ſo that at the time when he triumphed for the Perſian victory, theſe Northern people were brought under ſome yoke. which was in the eighteen h year of his Empire, ſee Euſeb: in Chronic: and then in the ſame year he, and Maximian contrived and decreed the general perſecution over the whole Empire, which before that time was but in ſome parts, ſee Euſeb: l 8. c. 1. & 9.) From theſe conſiderations, I ſay, it may be collected, that this was a time in which the Pagan bordering Princes might be ſtirred up in compliance with ſuch Emperors, to perſecute poor Chriſtians within their Territories, and yet that perſecution laſt but a very ſhort time, partly, becauſe the condition of that ſort of people is, to be reſtleſſe, and always attempting ſomewhat upon their neighbours, that did thus awe them, being impatient of any yoke and partly, becauſe Diocletian reſigned the Empire about two years after. That we cannot attain unto a full knowledge of the proceedings of that time, the reaſon of Baronius is good, becauſe no writer of that time (who did ſet down by way of Hiſtory the actions of Diocletian) is extant, the work of Claudius Euſthenius his Secretary, who did write the actions of him, and his three collegues, being periſhed. In this obſcurity of the time we can but gueſſe, but this conjecture is probable, and ſuits well with μίαν ὥραν the ſhort ſpace, and all other circumſtances of the context.

The word μυσηεῖον ſignifies a ſecrecy, It is alſo an unclean word ſet by Achilles Statius to ſignifie the nakedneſſe of a woman, Among the Gentiles it was uſed to denote their ſecreteſt Idol-worſhips, their τελετὰς and ἐποπτείας, which being for the moſt part very unclean and abominable, as in their Eleuſinia ſacra, &c. they were generally ſtyled μυστήρια, and divided into μεγάλα and μικρὰ, their greater and leſſer myſteries. Theſe, ſaith Tertullian, the Gnoſticks imitated, and had in their worſhips curtains drawn, and ſilence ſtrictly kept to vail, and keep ſecret what they did. Hence is it, that this word is here thought fit to expreſſe the Idolatry and heathen worſhip of this city, which had generally this of uncleanneſſe joined with it. c. Μυσηεῖον

That Domitian had and exercifed all power at Rome in his Father Veſpaſian's time, whilſt he was employed abroad in Syria &c. appears by Tacitus, who ſaith of him diſtinctly, Domitianum Cæſarem conſalutatum, &c. that Domitian was ſaluted by the name of Cæſar, Hiſt. l. 3. in fine, and nomen ſedémque Cæſaris Domitianus acceperat, Domitian had received the name and throne of Cæſar, l. 4. in initio, and by all other writers of thoſe times; At the return of Veſpaſian he was diveſted of his power, and ſo though he had been Emperor; and ſtill continued alive at that point of time, to which this part of the viſion refers, yet 'tis true of him, οὐκ ἔστι he is not, by which it may be gueſt at what time theſe viſions were written, at leaſt to what time this viſion refers, viz. to the time of Veſpaſian, after his return out of Syria, the war being left unto Titus. And this diſtinctly appears v. 10. by the enumeration of the eight Emperours there, of which Claudius being the firſt, Nero 2^d, Galba 3^d, Otho 4^th, Vitellius 5^t, it is there ſaid, five are fallen, and one is, i. e. is now alive at this point of the viſion, viz. Veſpaſian, and Titus the ſeventh is not yet come, and after his ſhort reign, then v. 11. follows this ſucceſſor of his, Domitian, deſcribed, as here, by the title of [he which was, and is d. Θεὸν ἐτι ἦν, καὶ οὐκ ἔστι, καὶ παρεῖναι δεῖ not;

Ἐκ τῶν ἑπτά not, and is the eighth] (for ſo he was) and is ἐκ τῶν ἑπτά, of, or, from the ſeven, i. e. the ſon, or off-ſpring of one of them, viz. of Veſpaſian. This perſon being a great perſecutor of Chriſtians, God's judgments were remarkably to fall upon him, which is the meaning of ὑπάγει εἰς ἀπώλειαν, he goeth to perdition, v. 11. For he was butcher'd by his own ſervants, and Apollonius Tyanæus the great Magician, is ſaid to have cryed out at Epheſus many miles off, at the minute when he was kill'd, ſtrike the Tyrant, ſtrike the Tyrant, and to have told them, Beleive it, the Emperour is kill'd this very moment, which the Devil, it ſeems, (whether from this and the like prophecies of God here, or by his ſpeedy conveyance of what he ſaw, I cannot affirm) by his familiarity with that Magician, enabled him thus to declare.

c. Πολεμήσουσι μετὰ τοῦ ἀρνίου Warring with the Lamb] ſignifies oppoſing and perſecuting Chriſtianity, not as if there were ſet battels between them and Chriſtians, but ſuch as are ſuppoſeable againſt thoſe, whoſe principle was to ſuffer, not to reſiſt the perſecuting Emperors, (under whom they were) For this is the condition of the Lamb here to endure, to be ſlaughter'd, but not to fight again. This is here ſaid of theſe ten Kings (confederate with the Romans) that they ſhould thus war, i. e. be uſed as ſouldiers to execute the Romans bloodineſſe upon Chriſtians, and this is true of the Goths and others, while they were confederate with heathen Rome; though ſoon after, they themſelves came over to Chriſtianity, (though moſt to Arianiſme) no doubt much forwarded therein, by ſeeing the patience, and conſtancy of Chriſtian Martyrs, who have no other way to overcome their enemies, and ſo in that only reſpect are ſaid to conquer them here, i. e. to bring them to Chriſtianity, and ſubject them to Chriſt's kingdome. For of Alaricus 'tis clear that he was then a Chriſtian, and ſent Embaſſies to Honorius by Biſhops, (ſee Sozomen l. 9. c. 8.) and that Attalus was baptized by Sigeſarius a Gothiſh Biſhop, and by that was the dearer to Alaricus, and all the Goths, c. 9. And that in reverence to S. Peter, Alaricus gave mercy to all thoſe that fled to his Temple for Sanctuary, and reſtored all that was taken out of the Church (by a Gothiſh ſouldier, who aſtoniſht with the richneſſe of the ſight, told Alaricus of it) and at the putting all in their places, ſung an hymne to God, Barbarians and Romans together, ſaith Oroſius l. 7. c. 20. 39. and ſo 'tis clear of the greateſt part of the army.

Ἡγεμονεύειν πολέμου πέρᾶν f. The Goths and Vandals overrunning Italy and Rome it ſelf, (Alaricus the Goth, and Genſericus the Vandal Kings, and divers others, πολλῶν ἡγεμονευόντων πολέμων, many Kings making inſurrections, ſaith Sozomen) is famouſly known in ſtory, ſee Socrat. l. 7. c. 10. Sozom. l. 9. c. 6. Of the ſpoils alſo that were made by them Hiſtorians are plentiful, eſpecially Procopius; Of Alaricus and his, that they left nothing behind them, either of private or publick treaſure, the Commander giving order to his ſouldiers, ſaith Sozomen l. 6. 9. ἐᾶσαι τῶν Ῥωμαίων πλοῦτον ἁρπάζειν, to plunder all the wealth of the city, and ὡς ἂν δύνωνται πλεῖστα καὶ οἴκοι λαμβάνειν, as neer as was poſſible, to ſpoil every houſe; Of Genſericus, that he brought by ſea to Carthage, a vaſt deal of gold and ſilver, And that he rob'd the Temple of Jupiter Capitolinus, or Olympius. So Socrates of Alaricus, that they took the city and rifled it, and τὰ πολλὰ τῶν θαυμασίων ἐκείνων διαμόνων κατέκαυσαν, burnt many of thoſe admirable ſpectacles. So alſo that they conquer'd many Provinces of the Romans, and poſſeſt them as their own, as Dacia, Pannonia, Thrace, Illyricum, France, Spain, Africk, Italy and Dalmatia, which is here called the eating of the fleſh of the whore. As for their burning of the city, (though that ſignifie not their burning it all down to the ground, but onely πολλὰς τῶν πόλεως οἰκοδομὰς many buildings of the city, and in Socrates, the many admirable ſpectacles there) that is known to bee done by Totylas at the firſt entring the city, though Belliſarius was a means, that 'twas not all burnt down, ſee Procopius Goth. 4. and Sozomen l. 9. c. 6. This being done in the time of Honorius the Emperour, and Innocentius Biſhop of Rome, and ſo in time of Chriſtianity, may be thought not to belong to heathen Rome; But then 'tis obſervable, 1. that by the providence of God not onely Honorius himſelf was out of the city, but that Innocentius (after the firſt taking of it, before the ſecond) was like Lot out of Sodom (ſaith Oroſius l. 7. c. 39.) removed out of that city to Ravenna, where the Emperor was, on occaſion of an Embaſſy mention'd by Sozomen l. 9. c. 7. and by Zozimus. 2dly, that there were at that time, very many profeſſors of Gentiliſme there, in the Senate, not only in the city, as may appear by that paſſage in Sozomen, that at the firſt ſiege, ἀναγκαῖον ἐδόκει τοῖς Ἑλληνίζουσι τῆς συγκλήτου βουλῆ τῷ Καπιτωλίῳ, καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις ναοῖς The Gentiles of the Senate, or thoſe of the heathen profeſſion there, thought it neceſſary to worſhip and ſacrifice in the Capitol and other heathen Temples (which 'tis clear were then among them) ſome Thuſcian Magi being ſent for by Attalus the ὕπαρχος or Governour of the city, who promiſed by thunder and lightning, to drive away the Barbarians. And another paſſage there is in Sozomen c. 9. that upon the miſcarriage of Attalus, (his loſing that dignity of Emperour, of which he was ſo ambitious, that he would not be content to be a partner with Honorius) ἐδυσφόρουν Ἑλλῆνες τε &c. the Gentile Idolaters, that were in the city, and thoſe of the Arian party, were extremely troubled, the Gentiles gueſſing by Attalus's inclination and former courſe, (being but now lately become Chriſtian, ſince from being ὕπαρχος Governour of Rome, he was now joined with Alaricus and chriſtned by a Gothiſh Biſhop) εἰς τὸ φανερὸν ἑλληνίζειν ἀυθὶς ἠρῶντο, did verily beleive, that he would profeſſedly favour, and ſet up Gentiliſme, καὶ τοὺς πατρίους ἀποδίδοναι ναοὺς καὶ ἑορτὰς καὶ θυσίας, and reſtore the antient temples, and feaſts & ſacrifices; And indeed 'tis clear by the paſſages of the ſtory, that though the heathens in Rome were the men that called Alaricus to their aſſiſtance, to take the patronage of them, yet by God's turning of things it fell out, that they beyond all others found the vengeance of his coming to light heavily upon them. Nay, 'tis Oroſius's obſervation, that God permitted Alaricus to enter the city, that he might bring contumely and reproach upon the Idolaters or Heathens there, and give the triumph and victory to Chriſtian religion over Gentiliſme, now conquer'd and laid proſtrate; and that many Gentiles, or Pagans, aſtoniſht with what they ſaw thus brought brought to passe, quite contrary to their expectation, turned Christians, by this means, l. 7. c. 39. Thirdly, it was the common complaint of the Gentiles at that time, that the reception of Christianity had provoked the Gods to send these vastations upon them, the direct contrary of which is at large shewed by Salvian de providentia, viz. that the Christians were the only preservers of the world, and indeed it is clear by the story, that had it not been for them, Rome had been quite destroyed; For, saith Sozomen, Alaricus when he took it, commanded his souldiers to rifle the city &c. but αὐδοι τῇ παρὰ τ̃ Ἀποστόλων Πέτρου, ἄσυλον τὸ περιέξαι τ̃ ἀεὶ τ̃ αὐτῇ παρὰ ἁπάντων, μεγάλῳ τινὶ, καὶ πολὺν χῶρον ἐκέχυτο, through reverence to S. Peter, he commanded that the Church built about his Tomb, which takes up a great circuit and could hold a great multitude, should be a Sanctuary to all that would make use of it, (And Isidore adds, that of those that were by the souldiers found out of the Churches, as many as named the name of Christ, or the Christian Saints, were constantly spared by the souldiers, and that thus many thousands did escape) by which means the Christians were generally delivered and saved from the general destruction, (and also with them some Gentiles, saith S. Augustine de Civ: Dei l. 11. c. 1. which fled with the Christians to the monuments of the Martyrs, and the Basilica of the Apostles) and so were the σωζόμενοι, or escapers here too, as before among the Jewes at the destruction of Jerusalem. And, as he saith, τοῦτο γέγονεν &c. this was the cause that Rome was not quite destroyed, those that were saved there in that Sanctuary (διασωθέντες, saith he) being many, who afterward rebuilt the city, c. 9. And Sozomen c. 10. hath a famous story to this purpose of a young souldier, that having taken a very handsome Christian woman, and being by her constancy kept from defiling her, carryed her to the Basilica, that so she might be safe from all others, and kept pure for her own husband, And S. Jerome on the other side tells of some Christians, which thinking by dissembling or concealing their religion, to save themselves, were miserably used, but at last being discerned to be Christians, were released and carryed safe to the Basilica, see Jerom: Ep: 16. ad Princip: & Ep: 8. in the former mentioning this of Marcella and Principia, in the latter of Proba, Juliana, and Demetrias. But then fourthly, (which is most to be considered) even the sins of Rome Christian at this time, were so great, as most justly to bring these judgments upon them, those Gentile sins of all manner of unnatural villany, being most frequent among them, which were with as much reason now to expect the fury of God's wrath to be poured out on such vile impure Christians, as before we found the judgments that fell on the impenitent Jews, to have lighted on the Gnostick Christians of that people, and that age. To this purpose, 1. 'tis Sozomen's affirmation, that 'twas then the judgment of prudent men, that this that befel Rome, was from the wrath of God (ὑπὸ θεοσεβείας πάντα συμβαίνειν τοῖς Ῥωμαίοις καὶ πολὺ ὧν εἰς τὸν ὑπὸ πολλῆς βακχείας καὶ ἀκολασίας εἰς ἄνδρας καὶ ξένους ἁμαρτόν) as a punishment of what they had done upon themselves and strangers, through sloth and incontinence (which sure refers to the sins of Sodome, pride of the flesh, pampering, and idleness, and the effects of that, all unnatural lusts both on themselves and strangers, (as the Sodomites on the Angels that came among them, and therefore Orosius said of Innocentius, that he was rescued as Lot out of Sodome) though the Translator there make it to be but injustice and oppression of the poor, mistaking them for the ξένοι strangers there. 2*dly*, 'Tis the joint affirmation of Socrates and Sozomen, that a Monk of Italy coming in haste to Rome, to intercede, and perswade Alaricus to spare the city, he answered him, ὡς οὐχ ἑκὼν ἐπὶ τοῦτο ἔλθοι, that he did not voluntarily set upon this enterprise (just as Titus profest of Jerusalem) ἀλλὰ τις συνεχῶς ἐνοχλῶν αὐτῷ βιάζοιτο, καὶ ἐπιτάττοι τ̃ Ῥώμῃ πορθεῖν, but that some body continually importuned and enforced him, commanding him that he should destroy Rome, which at last he did. These are the words in Sozomen, and in Socrates to the same sense, οὐκ ἐγὼ ἐθελοντὴς τὸ ἔργον πεφόρμαι, ἀλλά τις καθ' ἡσυχίαν ἐνοχλεῖ μοι βιαιότερόν τε λέγων, ἄπιθι, πολιόρκει Ῥωμαίων πόρδονον πόλιν, I go not a voluntier about this businesse, but some body is very troublesome to me, tormenting me, and saying, Go, and destroy the city of Rome, which as it is the clearing of those words here v. 17. God put into their hearts, &c. so it signifies the great sins of this place, which thus brought God's judgments upon them. 3*dly*, 'Tis the plain acknowledgement of Salvian every where throughout his books de Providentia, that the impieties of Christians were so great, and particularly those abominable commissions and customary practises of all unnatural uncleannesses, (which have been constantly the destroying not only of the Canaanites &c. but of the Jews and the Christians) that it was God's will they should thus be punished by the Barbarians, who though they were very weak and slothful, not fit for war at all, in comparison of the Romans, yet were, saith he, more chast and pure then they, and so were appointed by God to be scourges of them. See l. 7. And again, that the Barbarians being Christians, though Arians, were much more tolerable then these, which though not all Arians, were many very abominable livers.

The strangeness of this judgment on that city, and the immediate hand of God in it, will appear (beside what hath been said of some body molesting, and forcing Alaricus to it note i) by these three things, 1. by the suddenness of the taking of it, so suddenly, that when word was brought to Honorius to Ravenna, that Rome was destroyed, he thought they had meant a cock called by that name Roma, as Prosper hath it in Chronico, and this is referred to in the vision, c. 18. 10. For in one day thy judgment cometh, and v. 19. for in one houre she is become desolate. 2*dly*, That they made such speed in rifling it, that when one would think three years had been little enough to obey Alaricus's command, in searching out, and taking away all the treasure of the city, all Historians agree, that they were but three days about it, onely Marcellinus saith, that the sixt day after Alaricus entred, he went out again. 3*dly*, That Alaricus having thus taken, and rifled, and possest the city, should neither stay in it, and keep it, nor go on with his army against the Emperour, but absolutely retire, so soon after so strange a successe; as if God that had ſent him on this meſſage, or ſervice on purpoſe, and never ſuffered him to be quiet till he had done it, as ſoon as the work was done, for which he ſent him, had immediately recalled him, and not permitted him to goe one ſtep farther, and ſo only uſed him as a means to deliver up the city to the Chriſtians, the Idolaters being generally deſtroyed out of it by this means, and the Chriſtians as generally preſerved.

g. Θεὸς ὤκνει τὸν πόλεμον

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XVIII.

1. And another repreſentation I received of the deſolation that was to befall heathen Rome by Alaricus &c. and of the conſequents of it, For me thought I ſaw a mighty Angel come down from heaven in a moſt glorious manner, or with power to diſabuſe the world, and ſhew them what they ſaw not before, viz: how falſe it was that was ſaid of that city, that it was eternal.

1. AND after theſe things I ſaw * another Angel come down from heaven, having great power, and the earth was lightned with his glory.]

* an Angel, ἄγγελον

2. And he cried aloud, that all might hear, ſaying, That great heathen city, ſo like Babylon of old, for greatneſſe, populouſneſs, heathenism, luxury, oppreſſing the people of God, is now deſtroyed, faln from that eternity it dreamt of, and is now overrun with Barbarians (ſo ſcorn'd before and hated by them) i. e. Gothes and Vandals &c. as with Satyrs and Owles, Zim and Ohim &c.

2. And he cried mightily with a ſtrong voice, ſaying, * Babylon the great is faln, is faln, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul ſpirit, and a cage of every unclean and hatefull bird.]

3. And this is a moſt juſt puniſhment of her foul Idolatries, which ſhe hath infuſed into other Nations, as farre as her power extended, and of her great pride, and luxury, the expences laid out on which, were the inriching of the Merchants of other Nations, which brought in fewel to the feeding, materials to the ſupporting of it.

3. For all nations have drank of † the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the Kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich * through the abundance of her delicacies.]

† the bitter wine, ſee note on c. 14. c.

* by the power of her pride, ἐκ τῆς δυνάμεως τῆς ὕβρεως αὐτῆς, ſee note on 1 Tim. 5. c.

4. And another voice, me thought, I heard, warning all Chriſtians to come out of her, i.e. firſt to abſtain ſtrictly from all communicating with her ſins (contrary to what the looſer ſort of Chriſtians did) And 2dly, to depart out of the city (as the Emperor Honorius, and the Biſhop Innocentius did, to Ravenna, at the time of Alaricus's ſiege) And 3dly, to flie to the Baſilica or Chriſtian Church, at the time of plundering or deſtroying Rome (as the Chriſtians did) as the only way of reſcuing them from the deſtruction.

4. And I heard another voice from heaven, ſaying, Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her ſins, and that ye receive not of her plagues.]

5. For the voice or crie of her ſinnes is come to heaven, and now the vengeance is come upon her.

5. For her ſins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembred her iniquities.]

6. Now ſhe ſhall be payed for all her provocations, and as ſhe hath meted to others (the Chriſtians perſecuted by her) ſo ſhall it be by the Goths &c. meted to her with advantage; ſhe hath mixt a poyſonous cup, a mixture of wine and myrrhe, in ſeducing ſome, and perſecuting others, and now ſhe ſhall have twice as much bitterneſs provided for her.

6. Reward her even as ſhe rewarded you, and double unto her double according to her works, in the cup which ſhe hath † filled, fill to her double.]

† mingled, mingle ἐκέρασεν, κεράσατε

7. For all her pride, & luxury, and haughtineſs, and blaſphemy in calling her ſelf Eternal, and pronouncing that ſhe ſhould never be ſubdued (ſee Iſa. 47. 7, 8.) now ſhe ſhall ſee ſhe is mortal, and ſubject to be overcome as well as others.

7. * How much ſhe hath glorified her ſelf and † lived deliciouſly, ſo much torment and ſorrow give her, for ſhe ſaith in her heart, I ſit a Queen, am no widow, and ſhall ſee no ſorrow.]

* In as much as ὅσα

† behaved her ſelf proudly, ſee v. 3.

8. For as a puniſhment of her pride & huge opinion of her ſelf, that ſhe ſhould reign for ever, on a ſuddain all together ſhall an huge vaſtation come upon her, a plague, and a ſlaughter, and a famine, and a burning of the city, a third part of it, ch. 16. 19. & 17. 16. (ſee note on ch. 17. c.) and all this a viſible judgment of God upon her, in whoſe hands are all the creatures, ready preſs'd for his ſervice, to execute his vengeance on his enemies.

8. Therefore ſhall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine, and [b] ſhe ſhall be * utterly burnt with fire; † for ſtrong is the Lord God who judgeth her.]

* burnt, κατακαήσεται

† for it is the ſtrong, ὅτι ἰσχυρὸς

9. When this comes to paſſe, then ſhall thoſe of the ten kingdomes, which have continued under her obedience, and joyned with her in her Idolatries and luxuries (ſee 1 Tim. 5. c.) lament and mourn for her, but not be able to aſſiſt her.

9. And the Kings of the earth, who have committed fornication, * and lived deliciouſly with her, ſhall bewail her, and lament for her, when they ſhall ſee the ſmoke of her burning,] * with her, and dealt proudly, μετ' αὐτῆς, καὶ στρηνιάσαντες v. 3.

10. But on the contrary forſake, and be afraid of bringing her any relief, the deſtruction coming, ſo ſuddainly, and irreſiſtibly (ſee note on ch. 17. c.) upon her.

10. Standing afarre off for fear of her torment, ſaying, Alas, alas, the great city Babylon, that mighty city, for in one hour is thy judgment come.]

11. And ſome looſe this will be to the merchants, v. 3. who will have many commodities lying on their hands, without any vent, no body being ſo rich, and ſo vainly luxurious, as theſe that are now deſtroyed.

2. Βαβυλὼν

That the title of Babylon here is beſtowed on Rome in the viſion of her deſtruction is reſolved by S. Auguſtine de Civ: Dei l. 18. c. 2. Ipſa Babylonia quaſi prima Roma, Roma quaſi ſecunda Babylonia eſt, Babylon was as a firſt Rome, and Rome is as a ſecond Babylon; and ſo by Tertullian adv: Mar: l. 3. c. 13. Babylonia apud Joannem, Romana urbis figura eſt, perinde magna & regno ſuperba, & ſanctorum Dei debellatricis, Babylon in S. John is the figure of Rome, as being, like that, a great city, proud of its dominion, and a deſtroyer of the ſaints of God; and the ſame words are again repeated l. 3. adv: Jud: So 1 Pet. 5. 13. the Συνεκλεκτὴ ἐν Βαβυλῶνι, the fellow-choſen, or fellow Church at Babylon] is by the Scholiaſt affirmed to denote the Church of Rome, διὰ τὸ ἔνδοξον, becauſe of the ſplendor of it, ſaith he, And ſo generally the antients underſtood it, and Oroſius hath ſet down the parallel betwixt them in many particulars l. 2. 2. And this being premiſed, will be a key to the whole Chapter, for Babylon is the note of an heathen, unclean, abominable city, and ſo belongs only to ſo much of Rome, as was then capable of that title, ſaith S. Jerome ad Algas. qu. 11. and Ep: 17. ad Marcellam, and not to the Chriſtian part of it. not to the Emperour Honorius, who was then a Chriſtian, and at Ravenna ſafe at that time from the invaders, nor again to Innocentius the Biſhop, who was by the ordering of God's providence, betwixt the firſt and ſecond ſiege, reſcued (like Lot out of Sodome, or the Chriſtians out of Jeruſalem) out of the city to Ravenna alſo, nor generally to the Chriſtians, who were at laſt ſaved by flying to the Baſilicæ, and many carryed thither by the very ſouldiers that they might be ſafe (ſee note on c. 17. c.) who conſequently ſurvived to reſtore and re-edifie the city, a more Chriſtian city than it had been before; But to the heathen part of the city, and that polluted profaner ſort of Chriſtians, who (as was ſaid note on c. 17. c.) called this judgment (theſe enemies as their patrons) on the city, and by the admirable diſpoſition of Gods overruling hand of Providence, were themſelves the only men that ſuffered under it. So that the ſum of this fall of Babylon, is the deſtruction of the wicked and heathen, and preſerving of the pure and Chriſtian Rome, and ſo in effect the bringing that city and Empire to Chriſtianity. This being here ſet down obſcurely in prophetick ſtyle, by way of viſion, was but darkly underſtood before the coming of it, yet ſo far expected by Chriſtians, that the heathens did take notice of this their expectation, and looked upon them, as men that had an evil eye upon that city and Empire, and mutter'd ruine to it. Thus in Lucian's Philopat: (or whoſe ſoever that dialogue is, if it were not his) the Chriſtians, character'd (though not named) by the mention of the Trinity in the beginning of the dialogue, and deſcribed by that ſcoffer, as a ſottiſh fanatick people, are brought in (as at that time, when Trajan (under the title of αὐτοκράτωρ Emperor toward the end) was warring in the Eaſt againſt the Perſians) and ſet down as thoſe that wiſhed all ill to the city, i.e. Rome, and conſequently to that army in Aſia, by their diſcourſe of the news of the times, betraying their wiſhes and expectations, that it might be defeated by the Perſians. Thus, ſaith he, in the perſon of Critias of theſe ὀπισθοφότης καὶ κεφαλοκλινεῖς, ſtooping, pallid people, that when they ſaw him, they came cheerfully toward him, ſuppoſing that he brought τινὰ λυγρὰν ἀγγελίαν, ſome ſad news or other, ἐφαίνοντο γὰρ ὅτι ὡς τὰ κήδεα ἐυχόμενοι, καὶ ἥκιστα ἐπὶ τοῖς λυγεροῖς, they ſeemed to be men that prayed for all that was ill, and rejoyced in ſad events; and their firſt queſtion, ſaith he, was, πῶς τὰ τῆς πόλεως καὶ τὰ τῆδε κόσμου, how the affairs of the city and the world went, (i. e. of Rome, and the Roman Empire, as that is called οἰκουμένη, the world in the Scripture; or elſe the affairs of the world, meaning the Roman enterpriſe againſt the Perſians) and being anſwer'd by him, that all was well, they nodded, ſaith hee, with their browes preſently, and replyed, οὐκ ἔστιν, δυσχεῖ γὰρ ἡ πόλις, 'Tis not ſo, but the city is in ill condition, and afterwards, ὡς μεταλαγῶσι τὰ πράγματα, ἀταξίαι τε καὶ πόλεμοι χαλεποὶ τὴν πόλιν καταλάβοιεν, τὰ φαλίσματα ἄπλοα τῶν ἐναντίων γενέσθαι, that there ſhould be a change, that diſorders and troubles ſhould ſeiſe upon the city, their Armies ſhould be worſted by the enemies; adding that they had faſted ten days, καὶ ὅτι τὰς πανύχους ὑμνῳδίας ἐπαγρυπνοῦντες, and watching all nights, and ſpending the time in ſinging hymns, had dreams theſe things, which may obſcurely refer to theſe viſions which John ſaw on the κυριακὴ, Lord's day, i. e. probably on the annual day of Chriſt's reſurrection, which followed a time of faſting and praying, the Chriſtian Lent, which, as appears by the ſtory of the firſt times, was uncertainly obſerved in reſpect of the number of days, by ſome more, by ſome fewer then ten days. Or if this be but a conjecture, yet the time of ſeeing viſions, being in Scripture oft ſet down, after, or in a time of faſting, (as Act. 10. 10. of S. Peter, and v. 30. of Cornelius) 'tis agreeable to the character of Chriſtians, whom he deſired to deſcribe in that dialogue, thus to ſet it. And then he adviſes them τὰς ἀλλοκότους ταύτας φαντασίας, καὶ τὰ πονηρὰ βουλεύματα &c. μήπω δῆτα ὑμᾶς οἱ κρεμασθῶσι βάλοι, διὰ τὸ τῇ παιδιᾷ ἐπαΐειν, καὶ λόγους καβδάλους ὀπτεύειν, to leave off thoſe ſtrange fancies, and wicked conſultations, and divinations (which may well refer, in his dark manner of ſpeaking, to this book of revelation) leſt God, ſaith he, deſtroy you for curſing your countrey, and ſpreading ſuch falſe reports, when (ſaith he) the Perſians are ſubdued by the Roman forces; And ſo he gives them over as doaters, and means not to heed what they ſay, with a τὰς δὲ λῆρον ἔασον, and ὦ φέριστε Ἱππόκλειδη. That this opinion he conceived of Chriſtians, and their ill affection to the Roman Empire, and city, and their aboding ill concerning them, was the effect of ſome ſparkles of this prophecy, flown abroad among the Gentiles very early, even in Trajan's time, is more then probable out of theſe paſſages thus ſet down. To which it will not be amiſſe farther to add, that the Jews in their paraphraſes on the Old Teſtament, taking Rome under the prophetick title of Edom (which is very agreeable to the ſtyle of Babylon here) do frequently foretell the deſtruction of it, And thereupon they that ſet out the later Venice Edition of the Bible, leave out many paſſages of the Chaldee paraphraſe, and the Rabbines, looking thus directly againſt Rome, which are extant in the former Venice Bibles, and in what hath been printed at Paris by Stephanus. As when Obad: 1. Kimchi ſaith, What the prophets ſay of the deſtruction of Edom in the latter days, they ſay of Rome, They leave out the words [of Rome] and when 'tis there added, For when Rome ſhall be deſtroyed, there ſhall be redemption of Iſrael, thoſe words are quite omitted. So in the laſt verſe of Obadiah, the fenced great city of Eſau, and that fenced city is Rome, that latter part is left out again. So the Chaldee paraphraſe on Lam. 4. 21, 22. for [thou daughter of Edom] hath [thou Rome in the land of Italy] but thoſe words are left out in that Edition, See M. Taylor's Proeme to the tranſlation of the Jeruſalem Targum. The like interpretations of Rome for Edom, and the deſtruction thereof, may be ſeen in the Jeruſalem Targum, Gen. 15. 12. where theſe words, Terror tenebricoſus magnus

Κυριακὴ

nus cadens ſuper eum, are thus myſtically rendred, Terror is eſt Babel, tenebricoſus hic eſt Media, magnus hic eſt Gracia, cadens iſte eſt Idumæa (i. Romanum imperium) Illud eſt imperium quartum, quod cadere debet, neque reſurget in ſæcula ſæculorum. And ſo again on Levit. 26. 44. after Babel, Media, Greece, they name again regnum Idumæa, meaning, no doubt, the Roman Empire thereby, adding, in diebus Gog, wch that it belongs to the Romans that deſtroyed Jeruſalem, and, ſay they, ſhould after be deſtroyed by the Meſſias, ſee that Paraphraſe on Numb. 11.26. in theſe words, In fine extremo dierum Gog & Magog, exercitus eorum Hieroſolymam aſcendent, & manibus Regis Meſſiæ illi cadent, They ſhall be deſtroyed by the hands of Meſſiah the King. And of the Jews 'tis clear, that there hath been a tradition among them, that in the laſt days there ſhould come a great enemy, which they call אר מילוס Armilus which in Hebrew is Romulus lightly changed by the tranſpoſition but of one letter (ſee note on Joh. 11.b.) and that he ſhould be deſtroyed by the Meſſias, which may well be (as all the reſt) but the miſtakings of this prophecy here delivered, and from hand to hand conveyed among the Jews to their poſterity, who looking on the Romans as their deſtroyers, thence perſwaded themſelves that their Meſſias (whom they ſtill expect) ſhould deſtroy them.

b. Κατακαυθήσ. [ſhall be utterly burnt] may ſeem to have ſome difficulty in it, and be objected againſt our interpretation of this viſion, becauſe it is known that the deſolation, and firing by Alaricus, Genſericus, and Totylas, was not an utter deſolation or firing of the whole city, but of a part thereof. And to this the anſwer is inſufficient, that κατακαίειν is conflagrare, to be ſet on light fire, and doth not neceſſarily import that fires conſuming of all, that might be conſumed, becauſe other expreſſions here follow in this matter, which cannot be ſo anſwered, as v.21. where the ſtone like a mill-ſtone is caſt into the ſea, which ſeems to ſignifie a totall deſtruction, and it is added, Thus with violence ſhall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and ſhall be found no longer, καὶ οὐ μὴ εὑρεθῇ ἔτι; And ſo again v.22,23. The voice of harpers &c. and the ſound of a mill-ſtone, ſhall be found no more in thee, And the light of a candle ſhall ſhine no more in thee, &c. To all which, the anſwer muſt be, by obſerving that all theſe three expreſſions are phraſes taken out of the prophecies of the Old Teſtament, and are in all reaſon to ſignifie here, as there they ſhall appear to have ſignified, i.e. onely as prophetical ſchemes of expreſſing a ſubduing, or victory, and no more. Thus the burning here is an alluſion to Dan. 7.11, His body deſtroyed, and given to the burning flame, which yet ſignified no more then the tranſlating of the Monarchy from the Seleucida to the Romans. And proportionably here the ſubduing this heathen city to the faith of Chriſt, which was the effect of this blow, that befell Rome. So the throwing the great ſtone into the ſea, v. 21. alludes to Jer. 51. 63. Thou ſhalt caſt a ſtone into the midſt of Euphrates, and ſay, Thus ſhall Babylon fall, and ſhall not riſe &c. And yet Babylon long continued a great city, though the dominion of it was tranſlated from the Chaldæans to the Medes. And for the voice of the harpers &c. v.23. it alludes to Jer. 25.10. I will take from them the voice of mirth, and the voice of gladneſſe, the voice of the Bridegroom, and the voice of the Bride, the ſound of the mill-ſtones, and the light of candle. And yet Judæa, of which that is ſpoken, ſtill had people inhabiting it. And ſo theſe expreſſions, thus interpreted, as in the Paraphraſe they have been, are perfectly agreeable to the ſenſe, which muſt needs belong to them in theſe other places, where they are uſed by the Prophets.

Σώματα, ſaith Julius Pollux, ſignifies, when it is taken ſimply by itſelf, without any additament, thoſe that are not bond-ſlaves but free-men, which ſell or hire themſelves for money, Σώματα ἁπλῶς οἱ ἀν δῶλα σώματα, &c. And this, becauſe free-men have power over their own bodies, whereas ſlaves have nothing but ſouls. As for the ψυχαὶ ἀνθρώπων, ſouls of men, the phraſe is taken out of Ezechiel, c.17.13. who ſpeaking of Tyre, a city of Merchants, ſaith that they traffick בנפש אדם ſuper animâ hominis, for the ſoul of man, which S. Hierome renders mancipia, ſlaves, and ſo the latter Greeks call ſlaves ψυχάρια, little ſouls, and ſo Gen. 12. 5. the ſouls which they had gotten in Haran, may be their bond-ſervants, becauſe, as was ſaid, ſlaves have ſouls though nothing elſe, in their own power. c. Σώματα. ψυχαὶ ἀνθρώπων.

Who are [thy Merchants] here, may be thought uncertain, becauſe the word [thy] either may refer to forain nations, who trade with thee, or elſe may be thy traders or traffickers] the chapmen in Rome. In this latter ſenſe ſome learned men have choſen to take it, that the Roman luxury was ſo great, that tradeſmen that dealt in ſelling of commodities, lived there like Princes. But if we compare this place with what is ſaid of Tyrus, Ezech. 27. the former will appear to be the ſenſe of it; for there v. 12. Tarſhiſh was thy Merchant, and v.13. Javan &c. were thy Merchants, and ſo the meaning is clearly this, that the Merchants of other nations that traffick't with Rome, had ſuch vent for their commodities there at any rate, that they grew very rich by it. d. CHAP. XIX.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND after theſe things I heard a great voice of much people in heaven, ſaying, Allelujah, Salvation, and glory, and honour, and power unto the Lord our God.]

1. Another viſion I received much to the ſame purpoſe with the former; but differing in this, that the former looked eſpecially on the city of Rome, and the luxury and pride of the inhabitants thereof, but this looked eſpecially on the heathen religion there deſtroyed, and exchanged for the Chriſtian, but that not all at once, but by ſeveral ſteps and degrees. And firſt, me thought, I heard a multitude of Chriſtian people, (employed like the Saints and Angels in heaven) ſinging of Allelujahs, praiſes and thankſgivings to God, as to him who had wrought great mercies for them.

2. Magnifying his fidelity to themſelvs, & his juſt vengeance on the Idolatrous perſecutors, that had debauched ſo many to their courſes, and ſhed ſo much blood of Chriſtians.

2. For true and righteous are his judgments, for he hath judged the great whore, which did corrupt the earth with her fornication, and hath avenged the blood of his ſervants at her hand.]

3. And again triumphing in this act of Gods that this was like to be a fatal irreparable blow to the Roman Idolatry.

3. And * again they ſaid, Allelujah, and her ſmoke † aroſe up for ever and ever.] * the ſecond time δεύτερον † aſcendeth ἀναβαίνει

4. And the Biſhops or repreſentatives or governours of the Chriſtian Church in Judæa, ch. 4 4. and proportionably to them, all other Biſhops, and the four Apoſtles, formerly mention'd as the planters of the Chriſtian faith in Judæa, ch. 4. 6. and two of them now in Rome alſo, Peter, and Paul, gave their acclamations to thoſe Hallelujahs.

4. And the four and twenty Elders, and the four * beaſts fell down, and worſhipped God that ſate on the throne, ſaying, Amen, Allelujah.] * living creatures ζῶα

5. And all Chriſtians in the world, of what quality ſoever, were admoniſhed of their duty and obligation to doe ſo too.

5. And a voice came out of the throne, ſaying, Praiſe our God, all ye his ſervants, and ye that fear him both ſmall and great.]

6. And that admonition was preſently anſwer'd with the acclamation of all the nations, (i. e. Chriſtian people in them) over all the world, thundring out Allelujahs to God, for this illuſtrious enlargement of the kingdome of Chriſt, the converſion of that Imperial city to Chriſtianity;

6. And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thundrings, ſaying, Allelujah, for the Lord God † omnipotent reigneth.] † the ruler of all, ὁ παντοκράτωρ

7, 8 Which is, as it were, the marriage of Chriſt to a lovely ſpouſe his Church, (and ſo matter of rejoicing to all that hear of it, Joh. 3. 29.) which ſhould now be adorned as the Prieſt entring into the ſanctuary under the Law, to note the liberty and the privileges which ſhould be beſtowed on the Church, by the Emperour Conſtantine.

7. Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honour to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made her ſelf ready.]

8. And to her was granted that ſhe ſhould be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white: for the fine linen is [a] the * righteouſneſs of ſaints.] * ordinances of the holies.

9. And an Angel bid me take notice of this, as of the bleſſedſt happieſt change that ever was wrought in the world, and happy he that ſhould be a ſpectator of it, Of which yet I might be as confident it would come, as if I ſaw it, God having firmly decreed, and made promiſe of it.

9. And he ſaith unto me, Write, Bleſſed are they which are called unto the marriage-ſupper of the Lamb. And he ſaith unto me, Theſe are the true ſayings of God.]

10. And the joy of this news ſo tranſported me, that as Abraham for the joy of the good news, Gen. 17. 17. fell on his face &c. ſo I could not but fall down to acknowledge my ſenſe of ſo bleſſed a news and meſſenger: But when I did ſo, he bid me forbear, For, ſaith he, I am no more honourably employ'd by Chriſt than thou art, I am now a meſſenger to make known this prophecie to thee of the converſion of Emperors &c. to the Goſpel, and thou and ſuch as thou, Apoſtles of Chriſt, are Embaſſadours of as honourable and bleſſed news as this, Let God have the praiſe of all, for to be an Apoſtle of Chriſt, a witneſſe and publiſher of his reſurrection &c. is to be a Prophet ſent and indued with the Spirit of God, and ſo as valuable as that office, which now I am executing, of foretelling things to come.

10. And I fell at his feet to worſhip him, and he ſaid unto me, See thou doe it not; I am thy fellow-ſervant, and of thy brethren, that have the teſtimony of Jeſus, worſhip God, for the teſtimony of Jeſus is the Spirit of prophecie.]

11. And me thought I ſaw Chriſt coming from heaven in a pompous manner, riding or ſitting upon the white horſe (as he did c. 6. 2.) i.e. in the preaching of the Goſpel, and according to his promiſe, and his juſt judgments againſt his enemies, proceeding againſt them, i. e. againſt the Emperour Maxentius (ſee ch. 16. 12, 14.)

11. And I ſaw heaven open'd, and behold a white horſe, and he that ſate upon him was called faithfull and true, and in righteouſneſſe he doth judge and make warre.]

12. And me thought his eyes were like fire, ſearching to the ſecrets of the heart (noting him to judge and diſcern who are fit to be deſtroyed, who not) and he had many crowns on his head, tokens and teſtimonies of as many victories over enemies, whom he had overcome either by their yeilding, i. e. converſion, or falling before him, i. e. deſtruction, and as a token of thoſe victories, he hath a note or ticket by which to receive his reward, which no body ſees but himſelf, (ſee ch. 2. 17. and note i) i. e. he is acknowledged victorious.

12. His eyes were as a flame of fire, and on his head were many crowns, and he had a name written that no man knew but he himſelf:]

13. And he was in a royal purple garment, noting that regal power, to which he was inſtalled as a reward of his crucifixion, Iſa. 63. 1, 2. Phil. 2. 9. now to belong to him moſt illuſtriouſly, and his name in which he was repreſented, was that known title of Chriſt, [The word of God,] noting that which is now done to be an effect of divine power, wrought by his word, without any viſible working of ordinary means toward it.

13. And he was clothed in a veſture dipt in blood, and his name is called, The word of God.]

14. And the Angels the miniſters of his vengeance attended him in a glorious and ſplendid manner.

14. And the armies which were in heaven followed him upon white horſes, clothed in fine linen, white and clean.]

15. And out of his mouth proceeded that terrible ſharp part of the Goſpel, his threats againſt his enemies, and thoſe now to be executed on the heathen, whom he ſhall now ſubdue by his power, becauſe they will not be converted, in which reſpect he is now preparing for them the bitterest poyſonous potion that ever was drank by any.

15. Notes on Chap. XIX.

3. δικαιώματα τῶν ἁγίων

Some difficulty there is in this phraſe [τὰ δικαιώματα τῶν ἁγίων] which is ordinarily rendred the righteouſneſs of the ſaints. For the word [δικαιώματα] is not thus uſed in theſe books, (ſee note on Rom. 8. b.) but for the Ordinances of the Moſaical Law. And then ἅγια being the very word which is uſed to denote the Sanctuary, Heb. 8. 2. ἁγίων λειτουργὸς, the miniſter of the ſanctuary, and ἅγια the ſanctuary ch. 92. and elſwhere, and τῶν ἁγίων being the neuter, as well as the maſculine gender, and by conſequence capable of being accommodated to this ſenſe, It is improbable, that δικαιώματα ἁγίων] ſhould denote the ordinances of the ſanctuary, the Levitical laws, or cuſtomes, among which this was one, that the Prieſt, when he went into the ſanctuary, ſhould wear that veſture of fine linen, pure, and white, Thus Levit. 16. 'tis appointed, Thus ſhall Aaron come into the holy place, v. 3. He ſhall put on the holy linen coat, and he ſhall have the linen breeches upon his fleſh, and ſhall be girded with a linen girdle, and with the linen mitre ſhall he be attired, theſe are holy garments, &c. i.e. the garments, which he is to uſe, when he goes into the ſanctuary, which being appointed him by this law of God to Moſes, may fitly be called δικαιώματα τῶν ἁγίων the Ordinances of the holies. And if it be ſo, then it will moſt fitly be applied to this ſpouſe of Chriſt, the Chriſtian Church (to which Chriſt was ready ſo ſolemnly to be married ver. 7. in reſpect of the publick profeſſion of the Chriſtian religion by the Emperor Conſtantine and his Courtiers) that it ſhould now be clothed after the manner of the Prieſt, when he went into the ſanctuary, to note the great liberty, and immunities, and privileges, now beſtow'd on the Church by the Emperour. This we have formerly ſeen expreſt by our being Kings, and Prieſts unto God, (chap. 1. note c) Prieſts in reſpect of liberty of aſſemblies, and executing the office of Biſhops &c. in the Church, Which being ſo eminently beſtow'd on the Church by Conſtantine, above all that ever had been in the Church before, may here in like manner be moſt fitly expreſt by being clothed in the holy garments, which denoted the Prieſts going into the Sanctuary.

The mention of the ἱμάτιον and μηρὸς, veſture, and thigh, are here put together, to denote the robe Imperial by the former, and the ſword, which is girded on the thigh, by the latter, as enſignes of ſupreme power, and authority, eſpecially when on them both, on the Robe and the hilt of the ſword, as the enſigne of that office, is written that moſt honourable title, KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS, thereby noting him to be ſuperiour to all power, and force in the world, triumphantly victorious over all. b. Paraphrase.

1. And I saw another representation, by which I discerned what should succeed the conversion of heathen Rome to Christianity, viz. a tranquillity and flourishing estate of Christianity for some time, though not forever. And first, me thought, I saw an angel coming from heaven, a token of very good news at this time, and elsewhere (as sometimes of judgments from God) with the key of hell, and a great chain in his hand (to signifie what follows v. 2. that Satan should now be shut up and chained.)

2. And he laid hold on the Dragon, that old Serpent, which is the Devil and Satan, and bound him a thousand years.]

3. And he secured him there by all ways of security[x], binding, locking, sealing him up, that he might not deceive and corrupt the world to idolatry, as till then he had done, but permit the Christian profession to flourish till these thousand years were at end, and after that he should get loose again for some time, and make some havock in the Christian world.

Christian assemblies and judicatures, and such a general profession of Christianity, in opposition to the idolatries of the heathens, those in the Capitol at Rome, and the like unto them, in other places of the Roman Empire (see note on c. 13. b.) as if all that had died for Christ, and held out constantly against all the heathen persecutions, had now been admitted to live and reign with Christ, i. e. to live quiet, flourishing, Christian lives here, for that space of a thousand years v. 5.

4. And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them, and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witnesse of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they [a] lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years.]

a.

5. As for the old Idolaters or Gnosticks, there was nothing like them now to be seen, nor should be till the end of this space of a thousand years. This is it that is proverbially described by the first resurrection, i. e. a flourishing condition of the Church under the Messias.

And blessed and holy, i. e. safe (separate from all danger) are all they that are really in the number of those that partake effectually of these benefits, who as they are rescued from those destructions which the Roman tyranny threatned them with, which is the interpretation of the second death, so they shall now have the blessing of free undisturbed assemblies for all this space, see c. 1. note d.

7. But after this space the sins of Christians provoking God to it, this restraint being taken off from Satan, he shall fall a disturbing the Christian profession again. 9. And accordingly, me thought, they did, they went in great numbers, and besieged and took Constantinople, that city so precious in God's eyes for the continuance of the pure Christian profession in it, and known among the Grecians by the name of new Sion, and in the chief Church there, called the Church of Sophia, they set up the worship of Mahomet, (just two hundred years ago) And those that did so, are in their posterity to be destroyed, (and though it be not yet done, 'tis to be expected in God's good time, when Christians that are thus punished for their sins, shall reform, and amend their lives.)

9. And they went upon the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the Saints about, and the beloved city; and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them.]

10. And the devil, me thought, that wrought in them, that stirred them up, was remanded, and returned again into his prison, and this Empire of his was again destroyed, as the idol-worship of the heathens, and the Magicians, Sorcerers, Augurs, and heathen Priests before had been.

10. And the Devil that deceived them, was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night forever and ever.]

11. And after this, in another part of this vision I saw, me thought, a throne set up in great splendor and glory, and Christ in Majesty sitting thereon, very terrible, and a new condition of all things in the world was now to be expected. (And so that which was the design of all these visions, (sent in an Epistle to the seven Churches to teach them constancy in pressures) is still here clearly made good, that that though Christianity be persecuted, and for the sins of the vicious professors thereof, permitted oft to be brought very low, yet God will send relief to them that are faithful, rescue the constant walker, and destroy the destroyer, and finally, cast out Satan out of his possessions. And then, as here, come to judge the world in that last eternal doom.)

12. And all that ever died were called out of their graves before him, and as for the judging every one, the rolls or records of all their actions were produced, and withall another book brought forth, called the book of life, (see note on Rev. 3. b.) wherein every ones name is entred, that ever undertook Gods service, and blotted out again, if they were fallen off from him, and according to their works, so were their names continued in that book of life, if they continued faithful unto death, but not otherwise.

13. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it, and death and † hell delivered up the dead which were in them, and they were judged every man according to their works.]

13. And all that were buried in the sea, i. e. perished by water, and all that were dead and laid in graves, and all that any other way were dead, came out of their graves, their bodies were re-united to their souls, and every one was judged according to his works.

14. And death and * hell were cast into the lake of fire, this is the second death.]

14. And then death it self was destroyed eternally, an everlasting being now succeeding in the place of this frail mortal one. And this is it that is proverbially called the second death, wherein this whole world hath its period and consummation.

15. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life, was cast into the lake of fire.]

15. And whosoever had not his name found written and continued in (not blotted out of) the book of life v. 12. whosoever died not constant in the faith, he was cast out into eternal fire.

Notes on Chap. XX.

2. Βασιλ. μ. Μιλλιναριοι μετὰ Χριστ.

The meaning of the [thousand years living and reigning with Christ of those that were beheaded, &c.] may perhaps be sufficiently cleared and understood, by observing these three things, 1. that here is no mention of any new reign of Christ on earth, but only of them that were beheaded, and of them which had not worshipt &c. living and reigning with Christ. The doctrine of the Millenaries supposes the former, that Christ must come down on earth, and have a new kingdome here in this world. But this those mens [living and reigning with Christ] doth not suppose, but rather the contrary, that the kingdome of Christ here spoken of, is that, which he had before, and which is every where called his kingdome, and that now only those that had been killed, and banisht out of it before, were admitted into a participation of that kingdome, μετὰ τῦ Χριστῦ with Christ; Now what this living and reigning of the beheaded &c. (then beginning) was, may appear by considering what is meant 1. by the beheaded, and others here named, then 2dly, by their living and reigning. The beheaded] are they that resisted unto blood in their combats against the heathen idolatry, and practises, the constant servants of Christ, that persevered so till death, & that in opposition to the beast and his image, to that which was practised in Rome, to Jupiter Capitolinus, and the transcripts or it, in other places (see note on c. 13. g. and r.) and so all those phrases conclude the subject of the proposition to be the pure, constant, persevering Christians. One thing onely is to be observed of these, that by them are not signified the same particular persons, or individual members of the Church, that had formerly been slain, any more than the same individual persons of the rest of the dead, v. 5. (i. e. of the Apostatizing unchristian livers) can be thought to have lived again after the end of the thousand years, when they are said to be revived, and so Satan to be let loose a little while; but rather on the one side, as on the other, a succession of such, as they were, the Church of Christ being to be considered as a transient body, such as a river &c. which always runs in a succession of parts, one following the other in a perpetual motion and mutation; In which respect I suppose it is said of the Church, that the gates of hades shall never prevail against it, i. e. that it shall never be destroyed, which of any particular persons, or the Church of all the Christians of any one age, cannot so fitly be affirmed, but onely of the Church in the perpetual succession of Christians. And then for these mens living and reigning, first, it must be observed, that 'tis not here said, that they revived, or were raised, as the Millenaries pretensions suppose, but only that they lived and reigned, which two being opposite to dying, and being subject to others, will denote a peaceable, prosperous, flourishing estate of the Orthodox professors, in stead of their former sad, and persecuted condition. For that is the meaning of living, as may appear by the title [ὁ ζῶν living] given to Christ c 1.18. in opposition to ἐγενόμην νεκρὸς, I was dead, his illustrious, in stead of his despised condition, and so of reigning, as of being Kings (see note on c. 1. d.) and of being Kings and reigning upon the earth, c. 5. 10. And all this together will be one way of evidencing the truth of this interpretation. Secondly, the meaning of the phrase will appear by comparing it with that other phrase, by which the same thing is expresst v. 1, 2, 3. binding of Satan, and casting him into the abysse, shutting and sealing him up, that he should deceive the nations no more, i. e. clearly the restraining of Satan's malice, and shorning of his power, in persecuting & corrupting the Christian Church, by consent with which, their living and reigning] must needs signifie, their persevering and enjoying quiet. Thirdly, by their having, and sitting on thrones, and judgments being given unto them, which literally signifies the quiet possession of judicatures and censures in the Church, that discipline by which purity is preserved, and which is never enjoyed quietly in the Church, but by the coun-countenance and favour of Princes which therefore is to be reſolved the meaning of their reigning (as moſt remarkably they began to doe in Conſtantini's time, ſee ch. 19. 8. who ſet up Eccleſiaſtical judicatures in his Empire) as it is of their ſitting on thrones, whereas the letting Satan looſe is the caſting off theſe cords from them, And this is the clear meaning of the firſt reſurrection, ſee note c. b. It follows here, that the λοιποὶ τῶν νεκρῶν, the reſt of the dead revived not till the thouſand years were done. Who the reſt of the dead are, is manifeſt, not all beſide the Martyrs, as the Millennaries pretend, but all but thoſe formerly named, v. 4. i.e. all that worſhipt the beaſt, or his image, or received his mark in their foreheads, or hands, i.e. all the Idolaters and Apoſtates, and remainders of Gnoſtick Chriſtians, and all that complied with either, which are called λοιποὶ νεκρῶν, the reſt of the dead moſt fitly, For firſt it hath been manifeſt, ch. 19. 18, 21. that there were others ſlain, beſide thoſe that were beheaded for the conſtancy of their confeſſion of Chriſt; nay ſecondly, at this part of the viſion 'tis clear, that as the conſtant profeſſors were not all ſlain, but only ſome of them beheaded, and others preſerved, (and ſo beſide the beheaded, here are enumerated, thoſe that had not worſhipt the beaſt, nor his image, nor received his mark upon their foreheads, or hands) ſo the Idolaters, Apoſtates and Gnoſtick Chriſtians, &c. had their univerſal ſlaughters, ch. 19. 2, 3. 20. 21. and therefore theſe may well be οἱ λοιποὶ τῶν νεκρῶν, the reſt of the dead here, it being punctually ſaid of them, ch. 19. 21. καὶ οἱ λοιποὶ ἀπεκτάνθησαν, the reſt were ſlain. And then that they revived not till the thouſand years finiſhed] muſt needs ſignifie, that the Church was now for that ſpace, freed from ſuch heathen perſecutors, and purified from ſuch avow'd mixtures of thoſe vile unchriſtian practiſes, which is but the negative part, annext to the poſitive præceding.

Λοιποὶ τῶν νεκρῶν

c. What is meant by the firſt reſurrection here, may be diſcerned by comparing it with the ſecond reſurrection in the ordinary notion of it. That ſignifies the reſurrection to eternal life: Proportionably this muſt ſignifie a reviving, a reſtoring to life, though not to that eternal. Here it is figuratively uſed to expreſſe the flouriſhing condition of the Chriſtian Church for that thouſand years wherein the Chriſtian profeſſors in oppoſition to idolatrous heathens, and Gnoſtick Chriſtians live ſafely and happily in the enjoying the aſſemblies, which is, ſaith he, as if the primitive Martyrs were fetcht out of their graves to live again here in tranquillity upon the earth. Where only it is to be noted, that the reſurrection here is of the Church, not of the particular perſons (the beheaded, &c.) thus to be underſtood, that the Church that was perſecuted and ſuppreſt and ſlain, as it were, and again corrupted, and vitiated in its members, now roſe from the dead, revived again.

Ἀνάστασις ἡ πρώτη

d. This phraſe [the ſecond death] is four times uſed in this book, ch. 2. 11. and here ch. 20. 6. then v. 14. then c. 21. 8. It ſeems to be taken from the Jewes, who uſe it proverbially for final, utter, irreverſible deſtruction. So in the Jeruſalem Targum, Deut. 33. 6. Let Reuben live, and let him not die the ſecond death, by which the wicked die in the world to come. Where, whatſoever be ſignified among them by [the world to come] (the age of the Meſſias in whatſoever Jewiſh notion of it) it ſeems to denote ſuch a death, from which there is no releaſe. And according to this notion of it, as it reflects fitly on the firſt death (which is a deſtruction, but ſuch as is reparable by a reviving, or reſurrection, but this paſt hopes, and excluſive of that) ſo will all the ſeveral places, wherein 'tis uſed, be clearly interpreted, ch. 2. 11. he that overcomes ſhall not be hurt by the ſecond death, i.e. if this Church ſhall hold out conſtant, it ſhall not be cut off, i.e. though it ſhall meet with great perſecutions, ver. 10. and death it ſelf, yet that utter exciſion would no way better be prevented, than by this of conſtancy and perſeverance in ſuffering of all. So here, ſpeaking of the flouriſhing condition of the Chriſtian Church, reviving after all its perſecutions, and corruptions to a ſtate of tranquillity and purity, On theſe, ſaith he, the ſecond death hath no power, i.e. they have not incurr'd, that utter exciſion (having their part in the firſt reſurrection) but they ſhall be prieſts to Chriſt and God and reigne, &c. i.e. have a flouriſhing time of Chriſtian profeſſion for that ſpace of a thouſand years. So in the 14th ver. where death and hades are caſt into the lake of fire, i.e. death and the ſtate of mortality utterly deſtroyed (O death, I will be thy death) it is added [this is the ſecond death] i.e. mortality is utterly deſtroyed, there ſhall now be no more death, the life ſhall be eternal, ſo c. 21. 8. the lake that burneth with fire and brimſtone (the utter irreverſible deſtruction, ſuch as fell on Sodome, called αἰώνιον πῦρ eternal fire, utterly conſumptive) is called the ſecond death, into which they are ſaid to goe, that are never to appear in the Church again. And though in theſe different matters ſome difference there muſt needs be in the ſignifications, yet in all of them the notion of utter deſtruction, final, irreparable exciſion, may very properly be retained, and applied to each of them.

e. When theſe thouſand years of the peaceable Chriſtian profeſſion ſhould begin, and when determine is a thing of ſome doubt, And the cauſe of the doubt, is the ſeveral points of time, wherein the deſtruction of heatheniſme in the Roman Empire may be placed. For as in every ſo great a change, there are ſeveral ſtages, or degrees of motion, ſo was it here; Conſtantine's receiving the faith, and concluding of the perſecutions, and by decree proclaiming liberty of Chriſtianity, may moſt properly be ſtyled the binding of Satan, the dragon that ſought to devour the child, as ſoon as it was born, and then the beginning of the thouſand years will fall about An. Dom. 311. at which time the converſion of heathen Rome to Chriſtianity is ſet down, and celebrated by Prudentius, l. 1. cont: Symmachum, Beginning thus, Cum princeps Gemini his victor cade tyranni &c. To the ſame purpoſe ſee Euſebius Eccl: hiſt: l. 19. c. 1. But then, after that the Emperors were Chriſtian, heatheniſme ſtill continued in Rome and in the Empire, in ſome degree (ſee note on ch. 17. f.) till by the coming of the Goths, and Vandals, and Hunnes under Alaricus, Genſericus, and Attilas, the city and Empire of Rome was, all the heathen part of it, deſtroyed, and Chriſtianity fully victorious over it. And if this be the beginning of the binding of Satan, tan, and casting him into the abysse, then the thousand years must have another date about the year of Christ 450. or 455. the city having been taken by Alaricus, and the Goths, Anno Chr. 410. and by Genserico, and the Vandals, An. 455. but the warre between Theodosius and Genserico beginning An: 441. and the great fight between the Romans under the Emperor Marcian, and the Hunnes under Attilas (in which one hundred sixty two thousand were killed) being An: Chr. 451. The greatest slaughter that hath ever been read of, as it is described by Jornandes, a little river being by the blood of the slain, raised, saith he, into a torrent. Agreeable to this double beginning, may be assigned a double end to these thousand years. For if the letting loose of Satan here, were at the rising of the Ottoman family, and bringing Asia and Greece to Mahomedisme, that will be about the year 1310. and so about a thousand years from Constantine's edict; But if 'twere at the Turks taking of Constantinople (mentioned here ver. 9.) and turning the Temple of Sophia to Mahomedane worship, about the year 1450. then will that be about a thousand years from the sacking of Rome by Genserico. But the former of these interpretations is most fit for the place, that from Constantine's edict to the planting of Mahomedisme in Greece by Ottoman, For the taking of Constantinople is mentioned after this letting loose of Satan, and therefore is not it self in any reason to be defined that point of time, wherein he was let loose, but rather that other wherein Mahomedisme began to prosper, For then the Christian religion fell under heavy persecutions again, which is contrary to the Martyrs living and reigning (as it hath been explained to signifie note a. & c. 1. c.) which was to last for the whole thousand years; and did so in the former account, but wants seven-score years of it in the latter. I can foresee but one objection against this beginning of the thousand years from Constantine, and that is the practises of Julian against the Christians, which soon follow'd Constantine's favour to them, which may consequently be thought unreconcileable with the truth of this prediction thus interpreted, the peace of the Church, and cessation from persecution for that space. But to this the answer will be easie, that Julian, although himself an Apostate, was yet for some time so farre from attempting to persecute the Christian religion, that he chose rather to dissemble his own, and to make as if he were a Christian, and to that purpose Epiphania festo templum Christianorum ingressus est, solennier numine invocato, he went to the Christians Church at their Christmas festivities, and solemnly joyn'd in the service, saith Ammianus Marcellinus. After, when he came to put off the disguise, and to appear, as he was, an enemy of the Christians, yet this he did more by subtilty than violence, as all writers both prosane, and Ecclesiastical acknowledge, All that Ammianus mentions of his cruelty, is that he permitted not the schools of Grammar or Rhetorick to be open for them. Inter quæ erat inclemens quòd docere vetuit Magistros Rhetoricos & Grammaticos Christianos, ne transirent à numinum cultu, One of his faults was his cruelty to the Christians, that he forbad the Masters to teach them, for fear they should forsake the worship of the Gods, li. 25. to which the Christian writers adde, that he admitted them not into the army, nor offices, nor to honors. Militiæ cingulum non dari nisi immolantibus jubet, procurationem provinciarum jurisque dicendi Christianis statuit non debere committi, utpote quibus etiam lex propria gladio uti vetuisset, He would not allow the military girdle to be given to any that did not sacrifice, permitted not the government of the provinces, or making of laws to be committed to the Christians, objecting that their own law forbad them to use the sword. Ruffin. Eccl: hist: l. 1. c. 32. To the same purpose 'tis thought it was that he promoted the building of the Temple of the Jewes at Jerusalem, but God permitted not that to prosper, but as Ammianus l. 23. confesseth, metuendi globi flammarum prope fundamenta crebris insultibus crumpentes facere locum exustis aliquoties operantibus inaccessum, hocque modo elemento obstinatius repellente, cessavit inceptum, Great flames oft broke out neer the foundations and burnt the workmen, and kept them off, and so the fire obstinately resisting, the attempt was given over. And Ruffinus's observation is very pertinent to this whole matter l. 1, c. 32. Proficiebat quotidie in hujusmodi legibus exquirendis, quibus etsi quid versutum vel callidum, tamen quod minus videretur crudele, decerneret, He daily sought out new laws, wherein though he shew'd great subtilty of invention and cunning against the Christians, yet he abstain'd from all that might have any shew of cruelty. And though S. Jerome, Theodoret and others affirm of him that at his expedition against the Persians he vowed to offer up to his Gods the blood of the Christians, in case he returned conquerour, yet we know that God so disposed, that he was wounded, and died in that expedition, and that in the prime of his strength at one and thirty years old, and as Orosius saith, Deus impia consilia impii morte dissolvit, God brought the wicked counsels to nought by the death of this wicked man. And accordingly Athanasius is said to have foretold of him, in these words, comforting the Christians, who feared a persecution, Nolite ô filii conturbari, nubecula est & citò pertransit, Be not troubled, it is a little cloud and passeth away quickly, Ruffin: l. 1. c. 34. and a Christian being asked by Libanius, Julian's instructer, what the carpenter's son was a doing, answered that he was making a coffin for Julian, Which befell him so soon after, that S. Jerome on Habakkuk c. 3. relates a speech of a witty heathen on occasion of Julian's death; How, said he, doe the Christians say of their God that he is patient and long-suffering, whereas by this Emperour's death it appears, that he could not deferre his indignation ne modico quidem spacio, for the least space, Nihil iracundius, nihil hoc furore præsentius, said he, There could not be greater, and more sudden anger and fury exprest. And although Athanasius himself was by him designed to the sharpest part of persecution, yet God was pleased to avert it from him, as Ruffinus relates the story l. 1. c. 34. And when at last upon occasion of the removal of the body of the martyr Babylas, he commanded the Christians to be seised on, and punisht, the story mentions none but only Theodorus, a young man, that suffered by it, who sang all the while under the tormenter, and complained when his his puniſhment was at end, that he was a looſer by his releaſe. See Ruffinus, and Socrates, and Theodoret. By all which appears the power and fidelity of God in making good this promiſe of his to the Chriſtian Church, and reſtraining this Apoſtates malice from diſquieting the Church, and ſo is a very great and convincing argument for the truth of this interpretation, rather than an objection againſt it. Having ſaid thus much for the interpreting of theſe thouſand years in a way which is very remote from the conceits of the Millenaries, I muſt expect this objection and ſuggeſtion of theirs againſt it, 1. that the Chiliaſts opinion, and interpretation of this place was received univerſally in the firſt ages of the Church, and 2dly, that it was delivered down from the Apoſtles, and that Juſtin Martyr hath affirmed the former of all Orthodox men in his time, and Irenæus produced teſtimonies of the latter. For the teſtimonie of Juſtin Martyr, it is true that he hath theſe words of this matter, ἐγὼ δὲ καὶ ἄλλοι πολλοὶ πάντα φρονοῦμεν, but I and many others are of this opinion, and again, ἐγὼ δὲ καὶ εἴ τινές εἰσιν ὀρθογνώμονες καὶ πάντα Χριστιανοὶ, I and as many Chriſtians as are orthodox in all things. From hence indeed it is rightly concluded, that Juſtin was himſelf of this opinion, and ſome, nay, if we beleive him, many others with him, But that either this was the uncontradicted doctrine of the Church in his age, or that Juſtin ſaith it was ſo, is falſly collected from hence. For 1. they are the plain words of Juſtin p. 306. b. Πολλοὺς γὰρ ἄν καὶ τοῦτο παθόντας καὶ δυσεβεῖς ὅτων Χριστιανῶν γνώμης τοῦτο μὴ γνωρίζειν ἐσήμανά σοι, I have ſignified to you that many do not acknowledge this doctrine (of Chriſt's reigning here a thouſand years) and thoſe, Chriſtians of pure and pious opinion and judgment, And that either the [ἄν] ſhould againſt conſent of all copies, be turn'd into [ὰ] or that the [μὴ not] ſhould be left out, were a bold Criticiſme, and of very ill example to the evacuating the force of all teſtimonies, (making mens words mutable into the direct contradictory) and beſide would render it a very perplext period. Secondly, it appears by Trypho, that he thought Juſtin had equivocated in telling him he beleived it, upon this ground, becauſe other Chriſtians were not of this opinion, Hereupon he ſaith to Juſtin, εἰπέμοι ἀληθῶς, tell me truly whether you are ſincerely of that opinion, ἢ ἵνα δόξῃς θεοσεβεῖν, and Juſtin anſwers, that he would not ſay it, if he had not thought it, and thereupon repeats his having told him, that he and many others were of that opinion, and promiſes to write a book of this diſputation, and confeſſe it to others as well as him, and adds that he means not to follow men and their doctrines, but God, which argues his acknowledgment that the opinion was not uncontradicted by men, nor generally conſented to by Chriſtians. Thirdly, thoſe words which ſeem moſt to the contrary, [ἐγὼ δὲ καὶ εἴ τινές εἰσιν ὀρθογνώμονες καὶ πάντα Χριστιανοὶ, but I, and as many as are Orthodox in all things] will not come home to the proving any more than this, that he was of this opinion, and ſome others in all things conſenting with him. For it being ſuppoſed that he was of that opinion, it cannot be expected of him that he ſhould affirm any, that held it not, to be of right opinion in all things. Fourthly, it appears that he ſpeaks of three ſorts of men, the firſt that denyed both the reſurrection, and the thouſand years, and thoſe he calls λεγόμενοι Χριστιανοὶ, ἄθεοι, κοσμικὰς, διφυεῖς, nominal Chriſtians, Atheiſts, impious heretical leaders, the ſecond that acknowledged the reſurrection, and denied the Millennium, and thoſe are contained under Chriſtians of pure and pious opinions, the third that held and maintained both, as himſelf, and many others, and (if there were, or) as many as were Orthodox in all things, i. e. that in his opinion were ſuch. As for Irenæus, 'tis true, he ſets down the doctrine of the Chiliaſts, for a tradition, but withal renders an account of his doing ſo, Presbyteri qui Johannem viderunt meminerunt audiſſe ſe ab eo, & hac Papias Johannis auditor Polycarpi contubernalis, vetus homo, teſtata reliquit, The Elders that ſaw John, remember that they heard this of him, and Papias S. Johns auditor, that dwelt with Polycarp, an antient man, left theſe things teſtified, By which it appears that this teſtimonie of Irenæus amounts but to little more than the aſſertion of Papias, who hath not been a perſon of any reverend authoritie in the Church of God; And indeed upon the ſame grounds Irenæus takes up another opinion, and mentions it as a tradition too, (which is ſure farre enough from being tradition, or true) that Chriſt lived till betwixt 40 and 50 years old, For which he voucheth Scripture, and the authority of omnes Seniores, all the Elders, qui in Aſia apud Johannem diſcipulum Domini convenerunt, that were in Aſia with John, who, ſaith he, witneſſe that John delivered this to them, and farther, that they that ſaw the other Apoſtles, heard the ſame of them, and bear witneſſe of ſuch a relation. Whatſoever can be built on ſuch an authority, may as competently be refuted by the authority and reaſons of Dionyſius Alexandrinus, that lived not much above an hundred years after S. John, and oppoſed himſelf directly againſt it, and though ſome others were otherwiſe minded, yet was this doctrine of the Chiliaſts condemned by the Church, and ſince that time, all accounted hereticks, that maintained it.

Dial: cum Tryph: p. 307.

What is meant by Gog and Magog, muſt firſt be fetcht from the prophecy of Ezechiel c. 38. 39. where by both theſe together, Antiochus the great enemy, and deſtroyer of the Jews, is ſignified, as having the dominion of Syria, and Aſia both; ſee the Learned Hugo Grotius on Ezechiel. Anſwerable to this is it that Gog ſhould here ſignifie the Lydian Aſia, or Lydia, and the neighbouring regions, the Princes whereof are called Gyga, which is lightly deduced from hence; And ſo in the collection of the Sibyllin oracles, Lydia and Pamphylia are expreſt to be the interpretation of Gog. And by this the Ottoman family is fitly deſcribed, not onely in reſpect of their malice and miſchief wrought on the people of God, which makes the reſemblance betwixt them, and Antiochus complete (ſee c. 14. note c.) but becauſe they firſt ſhew'd themſelves in Lydia, and ſo peculiarly may be called Gog. By Magog] Syria is meant, or indeed in a greater latitude, Scythia, as S. Jerome affirms from the Jews, on Ezech. And ſo ſaith Joſephus Μαγωγας Σκύθας τὰ ἀπὸν προσαγορευομένους, The people of Magog are called by them Scythians, By theſe two together the Ottoman family

Paraphrase.

1. AND I saw a [a] new heaven, and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away, and * there was no more sea.]

1. And for a clearer representation of that flourishing estate of the Christian Church for a thousand years, c. 20. (to which was annext, as in a parenthesis, in a few verses, the rise, and succesle, and destruction of Mahomedisme, at the end of the third verse, and from v. 7. to v. 11. and to that again the day of the last doom, from v. 11. to the end of the chapter) there was farther represented to me a most eminent illustrious change, a kinde of new world; all the idolatry, &c. that was before, being done away. a.

2. And I saw visibly, me thought, another Jerusalem coming down to be here upon the earth, set out in a very beautiful glorious manner, such as brides appear in (see c. 19. 17.) i. e. the Christian Church in as much solemnity of serving and worshipping God, as in the Jewish Temple at Jerusalem had been, and that was upon Constantine's receiving the faith, and setting out his edict for Christian religion, see c. 20 4. b.

And God owned this great change [all become new] (as the return from captivity is called a new thing, Isa. 43. 19.) as an act of his special providence, and bid me take notice of it, as a thing of prime eminent importance and concernment, and as a decree of his that it should certainly come to passe.

And there ſhall in no wiſe enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatſoever worketh abomination, † and maketh a lie, but they which are written in the Lambs book of life.] 27. And this ſhall generally be done by all that have any reſolution of living purely and godly, and only they ſhall be kept our, which are immerſt in all filthineſs, and abominable, unnatural, vicious practiſes, and in all kind of unjuſt dealings, (for ſuch cannot by the laws of baptiſme be received, and ſuch will not deſire to undergoe Chriſt's diſcipline.)

a. Οὐρανὸν καινὸν καὶ γῆν καινήν

That heaven and earth ſignifie no more than the world, hath been ſhewed in note on 2 Pet. 3. b. and conſequently a new heaven and a new earth, in ſtead of the old, which is put away, muſt ſignifie no more than a new world: And this in the prophetick ſtyle is moſt proper to denote a flouriſhing ſtate and condition of the Church, as there in S. Peter the new heaven and new earth wherein dwelleth righteouſneſſe, is a pure Chriſtian Church planted by Chriſt, in ſtead of the old Judaical mode; but this here with ſome difference, noting the flouriſhing condition of it, in oppoſition to the former perſecutions it was under, the change conſiſting in that. And this from Iſai. 65. 17. where [creating new heavens and new earth] is ſending the Jewes a joyfull deliverance, and that a very permanent one, ch. 66. 22.

b. Ἱερουσαλὴμ καινὴ

The true meaning of [the new Jeruſalem] mention'd here, ver. 2. and again with the addition of holy, and the glory of God upon it, ver. 11. will be a key to the interpreting this chapter. That it ſignifies not the ſtate of glorified ſaints in heaven, appears by its deſcending from heaven in both places, (and that, according to the uſe of that phraſe, ch 10. 1. & 18. 1. as an expreſſion of ſome eminent benefit, and bleſſing in the Church) And ſo it muſt needs be here on earth, and being here ſet down, with the glory of God upon it, it will ſignifie the pure Chriſtian Church, joyning Chriſtian practiſe with the profeſſion thereof, and that in a flouriſhing condition, expreſt by the new heaven and new earth (ſee note a.) In this ſenſe we have

c. Ἄνω Ἱερουσαλὴμ the ſupernal Jeruſalem, Gal. 4. 26. the new Jeruſalem, Rev. 3. 12. where to the conſtant profeſſor is promiſed that God will write upon him the name of God, and the name of the city of God, the new Jeruſalem, which there ſignifies the pure Catholick Chriſtian Church. To which purpoſe it is obſervable, that Euſebius in the ſetting forth the flouriſhing of the Chriſtian Church in Conſtantine's time, particularly the building of a magnificent Temple to Chriſt at the place of his ſepulture in Jeruſalem, ſaith of it that it was καινὴ ἐξ ἀνα Ἱερουσαλὴμ εἰς ἀεὶ μάρτυς (I ſhould think it ſhould be ἱερὰ) λόγοι μυεία δι' ἐτῶν πολλῶν & παλαίζοντες ἀνυμνῶσι, the new Jeruſalem, concerning which the holy ſcriptures prophecying by divine Spirit doe ſing many things, l. 3. de vit: Conſt: c. 32. Where there is little doubt, but this book, and place of this prophetick Revelation, is referred to by him, wherein this new Jeruſalem is ſo magnificently ſet out; And though his application of it to the building of that Temple at Jeruſalem (both there, and before, ἡ νέα καθιερωθεῖσα Ἱερουσαλὴμ ἀντιπροσωπεύουσα τῇ παλαιᾷ βουλήσει) be ſomewhat too much reſtrain'd, yet the time of Conſtantine, is perfectly agreeable to the notion, which we have given of it; and the flouriſhing condition of Chriſtianity, not only at Jeruſalem (of which the building that Temple was an inſtance) but over the whole habitable world (the full importance of it) is not any way excluded by this ſtricter accommodation of his, but is rather evidenced by theſe paſſages, to have been the interpretation affixt to this prophecie, in thoſe times wherein he wrote. The only difficulty remaining will be, whether this viſion being here placed after that other of chap. 20. concerning the thouſand years, and the Turks invaſions of the Church, It be here ſet to ſignifie any new change after that, founded in the deſtruction of the Mahometanes, ch. 20. 9, 10. or whether it may not more probably be a repetition of the ſame thing more largely which is there ſet down, ch. 20. 4. 6. And this latter may ſafely be pitcht upon, notwithſtanding the placing of it after; For that which hath been obſerved of Joſeph concerning the King's dreams, Gen. 41. 32. that the two dreams being to one purpoſe v. 25. 'twas doubled, to ſhew 'twas eſtabliſhed by God, ſo it hath been ordinary with the Prophets in the Old Teſtament, and oft exemplified here, that two viſions ſhould belong to the ſame matter. And this here very pertinent to the one deſigne of all theſe viſions, to fortifie the ſeven Churches of Aſia, by foretelling largely the flouriſhing condition to which God ſhould at laſt advance the Chriſtian Church, which being but briefly pointed at in the former chapter (and that with a mixture of the contrary) and only the ſpace of it for the thouſand years particularly and punctually inſiſted on, 'twas here fit to be more largely and Rhetorically ſet down, being a thing of ſo great importance, That this is the meaning of the new Jeruſalem, may farther appear by an eminent monument, in the prophecie of old Tobit before his death, ch. 14. 6,7. where the third great period prophecied of by him, is expreſt by the building up Jeruſalem glorioufly (of the former ſee note on Mat. 24. c. and the Pramon:) the beginning of which is the converſion of the Gentile world, and their burying their idols, ver. 6. (which was the ſumme of theſe former viſions, ch. 18.) and then follows, all nations praiſing the Lord, all people confeſſing God, and the Lord's exalting his people, And all thoſe that love the Lord our God in truth and juſtice ſhall rejoice, ſhewing mercy to our brethren, a ſtate of flouriſhing piety, magnifying, bleſſing, praiſing God, and of charity, and mercy to all men, which is the ſumme of this enſuing viſion, and (as that there, ſo here) the concluſion of all.

c. Ἰδὺ ἡ Σκηνὴ τοῦ Θεοῦ

The meaning of this phraſe [Ἰδὺ ἡ Σκηνὴ τοῦ Θεοῦ μετὰ τῶν ἀνθρώπων behold the tabernacle of God with men] will eaſily appear by remembring the affinity of the Σκηνὴ tabernacle, and the Schechinah, appearance or preſence of God, called here ver. 11. δόξα glory, and oft elſwhere; God is wont to be ſaid in ſcripture to be preſent, where his Angels appear, accordingly the pictures of the Cherubims in the tabernacle, and after in the Temple, were notes of his peculiar preſence there. And ſo both the Jewiſh Temple, and Chriſtian Church having the promiſe of God's peculiar preſence, is fitly ſtyled his Tabernacle here and ch. 13. 6. and elſwhere his houſe, both in the ſame ſenſe, a tabernacle being but a movable houſe. And then Behold the tabernacle of God with men] is no more but an interpretation of that which was repreſented in this viſion, viz: that hereby was noted the Church of Chriſt, whoſe title is Emmanuel, God with us, or God with men, God incarnate, And the ἰδὺ behold] is a determination of it to what went immediatly before, thus, The bride adorned for the husband] is the Chriſtian Church (ſee ver. 9.) and then the promiſe that follows [he will dwell with them &c.] is his marrying, and endowing, and living, and dwelling with this ſpouſe, i. e. continuing his favour, and love, and protection to the Church, as long as that continues faithful to him, performs the duties of a wife, obedience and fidelity to the husband. And then conſequent to that mercy, and protection is the ceſſation of perſecutions that follows, καὶ ἐξαλείψει πᾶν δάκρυον, and he ſhall wipe every tear from their eyes, &c. remove all cauſe of ſorrow from the Chriſtians.

d. Δειλοὶ

The δειλοὶ cowardly] here, which are ſet in the front of all theſe ſins, denote the renouncers of Chriſt in time of perſecution, ſet oppoſite to perſevering Chriſtians, v. 7. and here clearly ſignifie the Gnoſticks, or ſuch as they were, whoſe poſition it was, that 'twas an indifferent, and ſo a lawful thing to forſwear Chriſt in time of perſecution, and to ſacrifice to idols (here alſo noted by idolatry.) They are farther expreſt by ἄπιστοι unfaithful, that fall off from Chriſt, and more eſpecially by ἐβδελυγμένοι deteſted, and πόρνοι fornicators, and φαρμακοῖς ſorcerers, &c. ſee note on ch. 2. b. & ch. 9. c. & 1 Joh. 4. a. So Tertullian interprets it in Scorp: contra Gnoſt: c. 12. Inter reprobos, imò ante omnes, timidis, inquit, particula in ſtagno ignis, Ap: 21. among the reprobates, yea before all them, the cowardly have their portion in the lake of fire.

That the City is the Church is moſt evident in this viſion, being before called the holy City, the new Jeruſalem ver. 2. Now the wall is that which encompaſſeth the city, keeps all out, which are not thought fit to be admitted, and guards and ſecures the city; And to this the Chriſtian doctrine is perfectly anſwerable, none are to be admitted or continued there, which doe not acknowledge that, and ſo this likewiſe defends and fortifies the Church from the invaſion of hereticks, And he that teacheth any other doctrine, let him be Anathema. As for the μέγα καὶ ὑψηλὸν, greatneſſe and highneſſe of this wall, that ſignifies the excellence and even divinity of this doctrine, admirable precepts, divine and heavenly promiſes. And as this is a defenſative to the city, ſo the foundations thereof are the ſeveral preachings of the Apoſtles in all their travails, which being the ſame in all places, this one wall is ſaid to have twelve foundations ver. 13. and on them the names of the twelve Apoſtles of the Lamb, to ſignifie thoſe doctrines that are not thus founded on their preaching, either by word of mouth, or by writing deduced from them, not to be fit for reception in the Church.

e. Τεῖχος

Μέγα ὑψηλὸν

That μέτρον ἀνθρώπου, the meaſure of a man, referres here to the ſtature of a man, appears moſt probable by the addition of ὅ ἐστιν ἀγγέλου, that is of an Angel, For as here the perſon ſeen in the viſion was an Angel, ver. 9. ſo Ezech. 40. 3. where there is mention of this meaſuring reed it was ſhewed him by a man whoſe appearance was like the appearance of braſſe, i. e. a man in a glorious appearance, ſuch as Angels uſed to appear in. And then the μέτρον or meaſure muſt referre not to the cubit, immediately precedent, but to the κάλαμος or reed ver. 15. noting that reed by which he had meaſured the city to be about ſix foot long, and ſo the meaſure or ſtature of a man or Angel in humane ſhape, as now he appeared unto him. That the reed or pole was of this ſize, i. e. ſix foot long, may be concluded from Ezech. 40. 5. There, as here, was a man with a meaſuring reed, ver. 3. and that reed was ſix cubits long, but that cubit not, as 'tis ordinarily counted, a foot and a half, but as it is taken by the meaſure of that bone which gives the denomination, Πῆχυς διάστημα ἀπὸ τοῦ ὠλεκράνου μέχρι τῆς χειρὸς, a cubit is the diſtance from the elbow to the wriſt, as Ariſtotle and the Anatomiſts determine, which is in well proportion'd bodies, the ſixt part of a man's ſtature. And that this was the acceptation of πῆχυς, as among the Grecians, ſo among the Hebrews, appears by the account of Joſephus de Bell: Jud: l. 6. c. 17. where having made the wall to contain ninety turrets, each of them twenty cubits long, and the ſpace betwixt each to be two hundred cubits, (which muſt conclude the circuit of the wall to be 19800 cubits) he adds, Τῆς πόλεως δὲ ὁ πᾶς κύκλος σταδίων ὢν τριάκοντα τριῶν, the whole compaſſe of the city was thirty three furlongs; Which concludes the allotment of ſix hundred cubits to every furlong, And that we know among the Greeks contained ſix hundred foot, So that the cubit is no more than a foot, or the ſixth part of a man's ſtature. That all this meaſuring of the city is myſtically to be underſtood, and not literally, there is no doubt, But what the myſterie is will not be obvious to determine, This may perhaps be it, that the conſidering or pondering, i. e. meaſuring of the Church, the duration, the extent, the flouriſhing of it, here deſcribed, as alſo of the walls thereof, the Chriſtian faith, is the work, delight, deſire of Angels, one of the number of thoſe things, which the Angels deſire to look into, 1 *Pet.*1.12. *Eph.*3.10. 1 *Tim.*3,19.

CHAP. XXII.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND he ſhewed me a [a] pure river of water of life, clear as cryſtal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb.] 1. And in the ſame viſion I farther ſaw, a.

by the Angels ſhewing me, or pointing to it, a font, or baptiſtery, to which they that were admitted, were bound to undertake all purity of living, and the power of admitting to that was intruſted to the Governours of the Church, by Chriſt communicated to them.

2. In the midſt of the [b] ſtreet * of it and on either ſide the [c] river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yeilded her fruit every moneth, and [d] the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations.] 2. And I ſaw alſo a place for Chriſtian aſſemblies, And betwixt that and the font was the tree of life planted, noting theſe two to be great obligations, and advancers of piety in mens hearts, ſuch as ſhould bring forth all manner of fruits of holineſſe at all ſeaſons. And the viſible outward profeſſion, and form of piety in the Church (perhaps diſcipline, and government, and ceremonies inſtituted in it) were to be of great uſe as to attract others and bring them into the Church, ſo to keep men in a good healthy ſtate of ſoul, or reduce and reſtore them, that are fallen from it. b. c. d.

* thereof, and of the river, on this ſide & on that, was the Tree of Life bearing twelve fruits, yeilding

3. And † there [e] ſhall be no more curſe, but the throne of God and of the Lamb ſhall be in it, and his ſervants ſhall ſerve him.] 3. And for notorious ſinners, ſuch to whom the centures of the Church belong, they ſhall not be permitted to continue in it, For the Chriſtian judicatures ſhall never ceaſe, or be turned out of it, for the ſpace of the thouſand years, (as many other governments have failed) and all Chriſtians will ſubmit to it. e.

† any accurſed thing ſhall be there no longer,

4. And they ſhall ſee his face, and his name ſhall be in their foreheads.] 4. And ſuch as doe ſo, ſhall have the favour of God, and ſhall be accounted true Chriſtian ſervants of his.

5. And there ſhall be no night there and they need no candle, neither light of the ſun, for the Lord God giveth them light, and they ſhall reign for ever & ever.] 5. And in this Church of Chriſt there ſhall be no more ſadneſſe or darkneſſe, no want of refreſhment or comfort, God ſhall be all in all unto them, and they ſhall never fail to enjoy this felicity of cheertull Chriſtian living, this freedome of ſerving God, &c. expreſt by being Kings, ſee note on ch.1. d. and by reigning with Chriſt, ch.20.4.

6. And he ſaid unto me, theſe ſayings are faithfull and true. And the Lord God of the holy prophets ſent his Angel to ſhew unto his ſervants the things that muſt * ſhortly be done.] 6. And the Angel then began to conclude and fold up his diſcourſe to me, and to ſumme up what I had ſeen in this viſion, telling me, That all this as ſtrange and glorious as it was, ſhould certainly come to paſſe, and that that God which inſpired and gave commiſſions to all the prophets had now ſent an Angel to make this revelation, by way of viſion, of thoſe things that were ſpeedily to commence, and one after another to come to paſſe.

* ſuddenly or ſwiftly

7. Behold, I come quickly: Bleſſed is he that keepeth the ſayings of the prophecie of this book.] 7. And this conſideration of the ſpeedineſs of the completion of theſe prophecies, that of the proſperity of the Church under the Chriſtian Emperors and Kings within 250 years, but of thoſe that concerned the deſtruction of the Jews and Gnoſticks, the preſent enemies and perſecutors of Chriſtians, every where call'd the coming of Chriſt, (ſee note on Mat. 24. b.) now immediately approaching, is of ſo important conſideration to every one, who now lives in the Chriſtian Church, that as 'tis the only way to felicity for a man to guide his actions by the contents of this prophecy, ſo 'twill go very ill with him that doth not.

8. And I John ſaw theſe things, and heard them. And when I had heard and ſeen, I fell down to worſhip before the feet of the Angel, which ſhewed me theſe things.] 8. And I that write all this book of viſions, by way of Epiſtle to the ſeven Churches of Aſia, am that very perſon that ſaw and heard all that is here ſet down: And when I did ſee them and hear them, I was ſo tranſported with the joyfulneſſe of the matter of them, that I did in expreſſion of a true ſenſe of that benefit, perform a moſt humble obeyſance to him, that had been the meſſenger to convey it to me, ſee ch. 19. 10.

9. Then ſaith he unto me, See thou doe it not, for I am thy fellow-ſervant, and of thy brethren the prophets, and of them which keep the ſayings of this book: Worſhip God.] 9. But he would not permit me, ſaying, I am but a fellow-ſervant of thine, and but equal to the other prophets, which are thy brethren, (thou thy ſelf being ſuch an one by being an Apoſtle, (ſee ch. 19. 10) and they that live Chriſtianly, and perſevere in the faith of Chriſt againſt all temptations, according to the deſigne of this book, are abſolutely ſuch as I am, the ſervants of God alſo. Let God have the thanks and praiſe of all that ſhall be done, and of all that is now revealed to thee.

10. And he ſaith unto me, Seal not the ſayings of the prophecies of this book, for the time is at hand.] 10. And then, me thought, Chriſt himſelf ſaid thus unto me, Seal not, ſhut not up this prophecie (as ſealing is oppoſed to leaving open and legible, Iſa. 29.11.) Lay it not up as a thing that only future ages are concern'd in: For the time of the completion of a great part of it is ſo immediately at hand, that 'tis fit the prophecie ſhould be open, for all to ſee and to obſerve the completions of it.

11. And now the bad and good ſhall ſhall come to receive their ſentence, there remain not now any more ſeaſons of working changes on any, but he that is now an impenitent perſecutor of Chriſtianity, an impenitent carnal Gnoſtick, is like ſuddenly to be taken and dealt with accordingly, And on the other ſide, he that hath held out conſtant for all thoſe terrors and perſecutions, and deceits of carnal ſins, is ſuddenly to receive the fruits and reward of it.

11. He that is * unjuſt, let him be unjuſt ſtill; and he which † is filthy, let him be filthy ſtill; and he that is righteous, let him * be righteous ſtill; and he that is holy, let him be holy ſtill.]

12. And behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work ſhall be.]

13. I am the eternal God, that have deſcended ſo low to the very death of the croſſe, and having been my ſelf tempted, am ſure not to leave you in calamities, I am able to perform my promiſe, and ſhall not by any means be hindred from it.

13. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the firſt and the laſt.]

14. Thrice happy are they that receive the faith of Chriſt and live according to thoſe rules of piety mentioned, ver. 2. and live quietly, and Chriſtianly in the Church.

14. Bleſſed are they that † doe his commandements, that they may have * right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.]

Out of which all profane wicked perſons are to be ejected, ſuch are the Gnoſticks, which cannot be better compared than to dogs for biting and tearing the orthodox conſtant Chriſtians, and are over and above ſorcerers profeſt, and guilty of all filthy pollutions, bloodily minded, guilty of Idol-worſhip and hypocritical treacherous perſons (ſee ch. 21. 8.) and ſo are but falſe equivocal members of Chriſt's Church, and ſhall have no part of the benefit of Chriſtians.

15. For without are dogs, and ſorcerers, and whoremongers, and murtherers, and Idolaters, and whoſoever loveth and maketh a lie.]

16. I Jeſus have ſent unto thee my Angel, with all theſe viſions concerning the ſeven Churches, and all other paſſages concerning the univerſal Church of God. I am he that am known by the Prophets by theſe ſeveral titles, The root of Jeſſe, The ſon of David, (and therefore can bring down the mightieſt Kings as David did) The ſtarre that uſhers in the day, all lightſomeneſs, and cheerfulneſs into the world, (ſee ch. 2. note o.)

And the Spirit of God that dwells in the Church of Chriſt, and adorn and ſets it out, fits it as a bride for Chriſt, And the Church, the Bride it ſelf, calls to every man to conſider his own ſafety, ſo farre as to make haſt to come into the number of theſe faithfull ſervants of Chriſt. And let every one that heareth theſe viſions ſay the ſame, ſeeing the important advantages of it, and dangers of the contrary, And whoſoever will, may have a cheerfull admiſſion to it, and to that refreſhing aſſiſtance of grace, and pardon of ſin, that is reacht out there.

17. And the Spirit and the Bride ſay, Come. And let him that heareth, ſay, Come. And let him that is athirſt come, and whoſoever will, let him take the water of life freely.]

18. As for all thoſe to whom this prophecie ſhall come, I conjure them all that they change not a title of it, and withall that they look upon it, as the laſt authoritative prophecie, that is likely to come from heaven, to be a rule of faith to the Church. What is here ſaid, is decreed and ſetled immutable; No man ſhall be able to avert it, and whoſoever ſhall go about to infuſe any other expectations into men, then what are agreeable to theſe viſions, God ſhall bring on him the judgments that are here denounced againſt God's greateſt enemies.

19. And ſo in like manner, whoſoever ſhall derogate any thing from the authority of this prophecie, or take out any part of it, or occaſion men's not receiving the admonition of Chriſt, here contained, in every part thereof, God ſhall caſt him off, throw him out of the Church, account him uncapable of all the bleſſings, which are here promiſed to the faithfull Chriſtians.

19. And if any man ſhall take away from the words of the book of this prophecie, God ſhall take his part out of the * book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book.

20. He which teſtifieth theſe things, ſaith, Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even ſo, come Lord Jeſus.]

21. I am now to conclude this Epiſtle to the ſeven Churches, in the ſolemn form of Apoſtolical ſalutation, The grace, mercy, and goodneſs of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with you all. Amen.

21. The Grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with you all. Amen.]

Notes on Chap. XXII.

a. The five firſt verſes of this chapter belong to the buſineſſe of the former chapter, the deſcription of the Chriſtian Church in its flouriſhing condition, and ought not to have been divided from it. And this firſt verſe hath a neerer connexion with that which immediatly præceded, There in the beginning of it, is mention of entrance into the Church, and who they were, that ſhould not be admitted to it, Now this entrance we know was by baptiſme, and that is ſure expreſt here by the ποταμὸν ὕδατος ζωῆς the pure river of water of life, The place wherein they baptized, was fitſt any great pool of water (typified, Ezech. 47. 5. by waters to ſwim in) where they might go in, as Philip with the Eunuch, and be put under water, from whence it is ordinarily by the antients call'd κολυμβήθρα

βίζρα a pool; In the times here referred to, i. e. under Conſtantine, the Font was in the Court before the Church, Fountain water running always into it. This Fountain water is in the New Teſtament called ζῶν ὕδωρ living water, and here by analogie water of life, but that with the addition of a myſtical ſenſe (as when Ezech. 47. 9 it is ſaid, that every thing that moveth, whereſoever the waters come, ſhall live, or when Chriſt ſpeaks of ὕδωρ ἁλλόμενον εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον, water leaping or ſpringing to eternal life) becauſe Baptiſme as an initiation into the Church, is an entrance into a Chriſtian and eternal life. And the water in the Baptiſtery or Font, maintained from the ſpring is called here ποταμὸς, river, a word by which any running water is called, and ſo that Ezech. 47. 5. And this river καθαρὸς pure, becauſe Baptiſme is a fœderal ſacramental undertaking of all purity of living, forſaking all ſin, and engaging of the ſoul to purity, and in the ſame reſpect it is alſo ſaid to be λαμπρὸς ὡς κρύσταλλος, clear as Cryſtal, being an obligation to all purity in the baptized. Now that this pure river is ſaid to proceed not as Ezech. 47.1. from under the threſhold of the houſe, but out of the throne of God and the Lamb] hath ſome more difficulty in it, which, I conceive may thus be reſolved. The throne is a notation of power and jndicature, as when God is introduced in the viſion, c. 4.1. ſitting on a throne; And ſo the throne of the Lamb, is that power which is by Chriſt enſtated on the Governours of the Church, of which the power of baptizing being one ſpecial part, this river by which Baptiſme is expreſt, is fitly ſaid to proceed out of the throne. To which purpoſe it muſt be obſerved, that the power of baptizing, though communicated to inferiour Prieſts and Deacons, was at firſt in the Apoſtles, and from them deſcended to the Biſhops, and never permitted to any, but by appointment from the Biſhop. So ſaith Ignatius οὐκ ἔξον ἐστὶ χωρὶς τοῦ Ἐπισκόπου ὔτε βαπτίζειν &c. in Ep: ad Smyrn: 'Tis not lawful to baptize without the Biſhop, and Tertullian de Bapt: dandi baptiſmum jus habet ſummus Sacerdos, qui eſt Epiſcopus, dein Presbyteri & Diaconi, non tamen ſine Epiſcopi authoritate. The chief Prieſt who is called the Biſhop, hath the power of giving baptiſme, after him, the Presbyters and Deacons, but not without the authority of the Biſhop. And S. Cyprian makes two parts of the power of the keys, (that ruling power, as of the œconomus, intruſted to the Governours of the Church, the ſucceſſors of the Apoſtles) the one to admit as by the key in baptiſme, the other by abſolution; And that moſt probably is the meaning of this place, where the baptiſmal water is in the viſion ſaid to proceed from the throne of God, and of the Lamb.

b. What πλατεία the ſtreet denotes, in this viſion may be eaſily reſolved by obſerving that the ſtreets or broad places of a city are places of concourſe and reſort, and ſo συναγωγαὶ and ῥυμαὶ, aſſemblies, & ſtreets, are uſed together in the ſame ſenſe Mat. 6. 5. Accordingly the ſtreet or broad place here will be fit to denote the place of aſſembly in the Church, or City of God, where the prayers are offered up, and the ſacrifice of the Church in the Euchariſt, and where inſtruction is reacht out to them.

That the tree of life here mentioned (in ſtead of the very many trees in Ezechiel ch. 47. 7.) looks back to Paradiſe, where that tree was ſet, Gen. 2. 9. doth ſeem moſt probable, and well accords alſo with the river here joyn'd with it, as there v. 10. a river went out of Eden to water the garden. And therefore what is here meant by it in the prophetick notion, may be beſt learnt from the allegorical interpretations, which the antient writers affix to it in the Old Teſtament, for thoſe will be moſt agreeable to the prophetick ſtyle, which we know is made up of figures. Now of the tree of life ſaith Philo, it ſignified θεοσέβειαν piety, or worſhip of God, And ſo Clemens Alexandrinus, that the tree of knowledge was ἐὰν μεταποιῶμεν, if we tranſgreſſe, i. e. it ſignified ſin, of which whoſoever taſted, ſhould dy, but the tree of life denoted piety, of which he that eat, ſhould live eternally. Other deſcants there are on it here, that it ſhould ſignifie the croſſe of Chriſt, or the enlivening grace of God, but this is the moſt agreeable to the context, and the other circumſtances thereof. But it muſt here be enquired what is the meaning of the phraſe ἐν μέσῳ πλατείας αὐτῆς τοῦ ποταμοῦ, ἐντεῦθεν καὶ ἐκεῖθεν] which we render, in the midſt of the ſtreet of it, and on either ſide the river, but the words bear not that, and a great inconvenience there muſt be in ſo rendring them, for the tree of life, which appears to be, in Paradiſe and here, but one, and not many, as in Ezechiel, nor ſet on the bank of the river, as there, muſt yet be ſuppoſed to be on both ſides of the river, which is impoſſible. The beſt, and moſt literal rendring will be this, ἐν μέσῳ τῆ πλατείᾳ καὶ τοῦ ποταμοῦ, in the midſt of the ſtreet and the river, ἐκεῖθεν καὶ ἐκεῖθεν, (or as the King's MS. reads καὶ ἐναῦθεν) on this ſide, and on that ſide, i. e. not as in Ezechiel, the many trees on the one ſide, and on the other ſide of the river, but ſo, as may be applicable to the one tree, and to the ſtreet, and river here named, one of them on one ſide, t'other on the other ſide of the tree. That this is the meaning of the phraſe may appear not onely by the commodiouſneſſe of this ſenſe, and the abſurdities conſequent to the other rendring, but alſo by comparing it with another paſſage in this writer, Joh: 19. 18. where it is ſaid they crucified Chriſt, καὶ μετ' αὐτοῦ ἄλλους δύο, ἐντεῦθεν καὶ ἐντεῦθεν, μέσον δὲ τὸν Ἰησοῦν, and with him two others, on this ſide and on that ſide, and Jeſus in the midſt (A phraſe very neer to this, ἐν μέσῳ here being all one with μέσον there) There Jeſus is in the midſt of the two theeves, i. e. between them, and that expreſt by the ἐντεῦθεν καὶ ἐντεῦθεν, as here; That muſt ſignifie there one of them on this ſide of him, and the other on that, and therefore it muſt in all reaſon be ſo here alſo, the ſtreet on one ſide, and the river on the other ſide, and the tree of life in the midſt, or betwixt them. This being thus far clear, for the literal underſtanding of it, and ſo the repreſentation not abſolutely the ſame with that in Ezechiel, but lightly varied from it, in ſome few circumſtances, The myſtical or prophetical meaning of it will be clear alſo, that betwixt the place of aſſembling on one ſide, and the font or baptiſtery on the other ſide, ſtood piety in the midſt, Baptiſme being on purpoſe deſigned to initiate, and engage us to piety, and by Gods grace to enable us to perform it, and the ſervice of God in the aſſembly, the prayers and the Sacrament ment of the Lords Supper, and Christian instruction designed so too, for the confirming our vows of new life, and to instruct us farther in our duty, and to bring down more grace for the performance of it. What is added of the δώδεκα καρπούς, (not twelve manner of fruits, but) twelve fruits, taken from Ezechiel also c. 47. 12. and is not to be applied to any set number of several virtues, as some would have it, but to the constant continual production of them, not at a few, but at all seasons, for so the year being the measure of all time, bearing fruit as oft as there be months in the year, must needs signifie the continual, constant, fruitfulnesse of it. And this was much for the honour of the tree, few trees bearing above once a year, few in the winter, but this every month in the year. And so the fitter to denote Christian piety, to which our Baptisme ergageth us, and our living in the Church confirms that ergagement on us, and both to continue to serve God in holinesse and righteousnesse all the days of our lives.

d. ξύλου

The leaves of a tree, that beareth fruit, are of use to guard and preserve the fruit; and besides, they are many of them medicinal, and so both in Ezechiel, and here, they are said to be εἰς θεραπείαν, for healing or medicine; That which is most probably here meant by these leaves of this tree of life, is the outward visiblenesse, and exemplarinesse of piety, which accompanies the fruits of it. This in single persons is only the shining of their light before men, which is of great use to attract others (even the ἔθνη, if that signifie the Gentiles, unbelievers here) to Christianity, who see their good works, whereas the scandalous sins of Christians, are apt to alien, and deter others from that profession. But in a Church these leaves may signifie more also, the publick and frequent assembling for the service and worship of God, and the Canons and exercise of strict discipline &c. And that these latter, of the discipline, and censures of the Church, are meant by these leaves, may be collected not only by the usefulnesse of them to the preserving works of piety in a Church. (as leaves are for preserving the fruit) and 2dly, by the propriety of them in order to curing of the diseases of mens souls, the reforming of lapst sinners, which may here be expresst by εἰς θεραπείαν for healing, but also by that which follows presently upon it. v. 3. which most signally belongs to this matter of censures (see note e.)

e. Ἀνάθεμα

That ἀνάθεμα, a curse or execration] is ordinarily taken for the person, to whom that Censure or second sort of excommunication belongs, appears by the use of it in other places of the New Testament. Thus Rom. 9. 3. ηὐχόμην ἀνάθεμα εἶναι, I could wish to be a curse, i. e. accursed from Christ, separate or excommunicate from the body of Christ the Church. So 1 Cor. 16. 22. If any man love not let him be anathema, and Gal. 1. 8. If I or an angel shall teach any other doctrine, let him be anathema, In all these places the word Curse is clearly put for an excommunicate, or accursed person, put under the censures or execration of the Church, and accordingly here in any reason πᾶν κατάθεμα every curse] must signifie every wicked person fit for the Censures of the Church, And then the οὐκ ἔσται ἔτι shall be no longer] must signifie the exercise of such discipline in the Church, in excluding all such wicked persons out of it, and so to the mention of Baptisme, by the river, v. 1, 2. and of the Christian assemblies, by the streets v. 2. adds the use of excommunication in the Christian Church, for which we know Ecclesiastick Judicatories were erected in Constantine's time, and so continued under the favour of Christian Emperors, and Princes; By which appears also what is meant by the throne of God, and the Lamb in this verse, viz. Christian Judicatories for the excommunicating of scandalous offenders, wherein the power exercised by the Bishops is acknowledged to be the power of God or Christ, and this throne here the same with that v. 1. the power of Baptizing, and of Excommunicating, of admitting and excluding from the Church, being branches of the same authority, by Christ communicated to the Apostles.

This form of speech here used to conclude this Book, is 1. a Symbolical and prophetical form of expressing the certainty and immutability of this prophesie; and 2dly, an expression of the absolutenesse and perfection of it in order to publick use, that it should be the one prophesie given to the Christian Church, which should bring divine authority along with it sent with a commission from heaven; and not only proceeding from a publick spirit, but sent out with a publick charge, that (as Josephus saith contra Appion. l. 1. that after the time of Artaxerxes, though many excellent things were written, yet they brought not divine authority with them, nor consequently were so received or believed, because there was not then a certain succession of Prophets, and * no body durst add, or detract, or change any thing in the old canon, after so long a time, so) though there might be some Prophets after S. John, (as Justin Martyr tells us, that the gift of prophesie remained in the Church till his time, yet this book should be the last, and so the close & seal of all publick prophecie, & that therefore no new doctrine was now farther to be expected by the Christian Church; and whosoever taught any as a rule of faith and life, and pretended Revelation for it, should fall under the censure denounced against false Prophets, Deut. 13. and under S. Paul's anathema, Gal. 1. 8, 9. That this should be only an ἐξορκισμὸς, or adjuration of the Scribe, as in the end of Irenæus in some copies there is an adjuration not to add or diminish (and as 'tis said in Aristeas, that after the translation of the Septuagint, Demetrius perswaded the Jews to add an imprecation on any that should charge, or add, or transpose, or take away any word from it) was the conjecture of a learned man, M. Lively, and as it may very well be received, so need it not prejudge these other importances of it before mentioned.
